In the reign of king Henry VI. it came to William Booth; whoſe grandſon John died in 1531, leaving a ſon Henry, then 10 years old. By the inquiſition after his death, he is ſtated to have poſſeſſed lands at Knight-thorpe, alias Bothe-thorpe [5].

In 1564, there were 6 families in Bothe-thorpe.

By the above-mentioned Henry Booth Knight-thorpe was ſold to Francis earl of Huntingdon; whoſe ſon Henry earl of Huntingdon paſſed it to Samuel Aylmer (ſon of Dr. John Aylmer biſhop of London); who inherited from his father the advowſon of the neighbouring church of Hathern.

Biſhop Aylmer, as has been ſtated under Hathern, purchaſed ſeveral conſiderable eſtates[6] not long before his death; one in particular which coſt him £.16,000; and by his laſt will, dated April 22, 1594, not ſix weeks before his death, deſired his burial to be in ſome convenient place in the cathedral of St. Paul, on the North ſide, with ſome decent monument to be erected for him, and his figure ſet up, in imitation of that of John Colet, ſometime dean of the ſaid church, ſtanding on the South ſide. He gave by the ſaid will £300. to be paid in ſix years into the chamber of London, for the better maintaining of conſtant ſermons at Paul's Croſs; which ſum his eldeſt ſon Samuel was to pay out of the rents of Mugden Hall: and £100. more depoſited with him by the counteſs of Shrewſbury for the ſame purpoſe: willing and adviſing that in thoſe ſermons there ſhould be ſome remembrance made of ſuch benefactors. To his wife he bequeathed £20. per annum, until ſuch time as ſhe ſhould become poſſeſſor of certain houſes in London. He gave to his ſecond ſon Theophilus archdeacon of London £100. owing from Mr. Newce, being the remainder of the portion which his ſaid ſon was by agreement to have with Mary, the ſaid Newce's daughter; the biſhop acknowledging he had received £100. already of the ſaid portion. He gave legacies to his two grandchildren, a ſon and a daughter of the ſaid Theophilus; and to little John and Judith, ſon and daughter of Squire that married his daughter; and to the children of Judith Lynche, another of his daughters that married Mr. Lynche, gentleman. He gave the manor of Muckleton, alias Mugden Hall, with all his lands in Eſſex beſides, to his eldeſt ſon Samuel. Certain lands in Wetheringſet, late the lady Stafford's and ſir Edward Stafford's, he gave to his ſon Theophilus, or the money lent upon the ſame. All his lands in Riveſby in Lincolnſhire he gave to his ſon John, who, as it ſeems, married, and lived there. His ſon Samuel to take out of his library what Philoſophy books he pleaſed. The reſt to be divided between three of his ſons, Theophilus, Zachary, and another, who, as it ſeems, ſtudied Divinity. He bequeathed to the poor of London £100.; to the poor of Fulham £40.; to the poor of Hadham £5. His executors were his ſons Samuel and Theophilus, Dr. Richard Vaughan his couſin, and Mr. Lynche his ſon in law. For the overſeer of his will he appointed Dr. Foorth. The probate is dated Nov. 28, 1594.

Samuel Aylmer, the owner of Knight-thorpe, reſided at Claydon Hall in Suffolk, and was high-ſheriff of that county in 1625. He was bred to the law; in which, by certain Note-books of his which Mr. Strype had ſeen, he ſeemed to be ſtudious. He married two wives: firſt, Dorothy, daughter of Edward Haſtings, eſq. of Leiceſter Abbey, by whom he had no iſſue; the ſecond was Anne, the eldeſt daughter of Edward lord Brabazon, of Tamer's Court near Dublin in Ireland, who was the ſon of ſir William Brabazon, lord chief juſtice of Ireland three times between 1543 and 1549, in which year he died in the tents of Ulſter, and was buried in Trinity Church in Dublin, and his heart carried into England to be buried there [7].

Mr. Aylmer aliened his property at Knight-thorpe and Hathern to Henry Skipwith[8], eſq.; and, dying June 12, 1635, was buried in the chancel of Claydon church, where the following inſcription remains round the ledge of a flat ſtone:

"Hic jacet Samuell Aylemer armiger, Johannis quondam Lond. Epiſcop. filius natu maximus; hujus manerii dominus, qui obiit duodecimo die Januarii, anno Domini milleſimo ſexcenteſimo triceſimo quinto."

In 1641, Knight-thorpe was the inheritance of Simon Rugeley (ſon and heir of Richard Rugeley, eſq. lord of the manor of Hawkſyard, in the pariſh of Armitage, co. Stafford) who had it (with the rectory of Hathern) in frank-marriage with Jane daughter and heir of Mr. Henry Skipwith.

Mr. Rugeley was in the commiſſion of the peace, and for ſome time a very active magiſtrate in this diſtrict. He was afterwards a colonel and brave officer of the Parliamentarians, againſt king Charles I, in the civil wars. He ſigned the warrant, Dec. 22, 1643, for demoliſhing Stafford caſtle. In April 1644, he relieved Tonge caſtle in Shropſhire; and took Eccleſhall in Staffordſhire, after a ſiege of ſeven weeks. Mr. Rugeley had only one ſon, who died young; and, notwithſtanding his bravery and enterprizing ſpirit, appears rather to have ſpent than increaſed his patrimony and fortune, and to have begun the downfall of a once flouriſhing and reſpectable family; for he firſt mortgaged, and afterwards ſold Hawkſyard, to ſir Richard Skeffington, bart. [9]

In 1649, he ſold Knight-thorpe to Robert Wilſon [10], eſq. then of the Middle Temple, and afterward of Merton in Surrey; after whoſe death, his relict Joanna, having Knight-thorpe for her dower, brought it about 1664 by a ſecond marriage (as her jointure) to William Walters, eſq. of Condall in the county of York.

On the death of Mrs. Walters in 1673, this lordſhip deſcended to her eldeſt ſon, William Wilſon, eſq. who died here in 1681; as did John his brother in 1681.

The next owner of Knight-thorpe was Robert Wilſon, eſq. of Didlington, co. Norfolk, nephew of the two laſt mentioned gentlemen; who died unmarried in 1769, aged 78.

In the ſame family it continued in 1779, when an act was paſſed for dividing, allotting, and incloſing, in the lordſhips or liberties of Knight-thorpe and Thorpe Acre, certain open fields, meadows, paſtures, and commonable places, within the ſame ring fence, containing together about 450 acres [11]; in which act John Wilſon, eſq. is deſcribed as lord of the manor of Knight-thorpe; ſir William Gordon, knight of the Bath, as lord of the manor of Thorpe Acre [12]; the maſter, fellows, and ſcholars of Emmanuel College in Cambridge, as patrons of the rectory and pariſh church of Loughborough; and James Bickham, D. D. archdeacon of Leiceſter, as rector, and entitled to all the great and ſmall tithes and other payments in Knight-thorpe; and ſir William Gordon, as impropriator, entitled to all the great and ſmall tithes and payments ariſing in Thorpe Acre liberty; and the ſaid John Wilſon and ſir William Gordon, as owners and proprietors, in different proportions, of the whole of the land of which the ſaid fields conſiſt, and of the right of common over the ſame; and as owners and proprietors of all the houſes, yards, gardens, orchards, homeſteads, and other antient incloſures, in Knight-thorpe and Thorpe Acre reſpectively. One ſeventh was allotted to the rector of Loughborough, in lieu of all tithes and payments from the open fields, and one tenth in lieu of old incloſures; and a like ſeventh and tenth part to ſir William Gordon, as impropriator, out of the parts in which he had a right to tithes. The reſidue, in due proportions, to the ſaid John Wilſon and ſir William Gordon, or the perſons who at the time of making the allotments might be reſpectively entitled.

---

[1] See vol. I. p. 768. [2] See under Garendon, p. 791. [3] Pat. 10 Edw. III. pars 2. m. 2.

[4] Eſch. 14 Edw. III. N° 24. Leic. [5] Inq. 22 Hen. VIII.; and ſee before, under Hathern, p. 843.

[6] "God bleſſed him with a great eſtate; the main whereof he left unto Samuel Aylmer his eldeſt ſon; and amongſt his younger ſons (all well provided for) Dr. Aylmer, rector of Haddam in Hartfordſhire, one of the moſt learned and reverend Divines in his generation." Fuller's Worthies, Norfolk, p. 249.

[7] Strype's Life of Biſhop Aylmer, p. 175. See a pedigree of the Aylmer family, p. 908. [8] MS. Chetwynd.

[9] Shaw's Staffordſhire, vol. I p. *212. [10] See p. 907; and a more ample pedigree of the Wilſon family, vol. III. p. 514.

[11] As Thorpe Acre contains 240 acres, correct the number of acres ſtated in p. 769.

[12] Sir William Gordon held it in right of his lady, who (as relict of Samuel Phillipps, eſq. ſee p. 802.) was tenant for life.

Mr. Taylor, the lord of the manor of Knight-thorpe, and who owned moſt of the lordſhip, has ſold nearly the whole of his property there in ſmall parcels; part of it about ſeven years back to inn-keepers and tradeſpeople at Loughborough; and the remaining part was ſold laſt year. The old hall, which has been in part pulled down, and the gardens deſtroyed, were ſold, with 100 acres of land, to a woodman of the name of Mills, for about £7000.; and the manor, with a ſmaller portion of land, were ſold to Edward Dawſon, eſq. of Long Whatton.

Dr. John Yarburgh[1], a celebrated chemiſt, was born at Knight-thorpe, March 29, 1643.

Pedigree of WILSON, of KNIGHT-THORPE. (From the Viſitation of 1682.)

Arms: Or, a wolf rampant Argent; in chief a fleur de lis of the laſt between two bezants; Plate CXXI. fig. 31.

Rowland Wilſon[2], citizen and draper of London, fined for alderman of the ſaid city; died about 1638. = Catharine, daughter of Richard Rudd, citizen and haberdaſher of London; after married to John Highlord, alderman of London; died about 1647.

Catharine, dau. of Edward Aſhe, of London, merchant; firſt wife; married 1649. = 1. Robert Wilſon, of Merton, Surrey, purchaſed Knight-thorpe; died Nov. 11, 1660, æt. 35 = Johanna, dau. of John Parker, of London, merchant; ſecond wife; remarried to William Walters, of Condall, by whom ſhe had iſſue (ſee vol. III. p. 514.). She died Nov. 1673; buried at Loughborough.

2. Richard Wilſon, of North Wheatley, co. Notts. = . .

- 1. Richard.
- 2. Suſannah.

3. Thomas, merchant of London; and of Keythorpe (of whoſe iſſue ſee vol. III. p. 514); died Jan. 15, 1699, aged 63.

1. Anne, died unmarried.
2. Catharine, wife of Tho. Auſtin, of Hoxton, near London, eſq.
3. Mary, wife of ſir Joſ. Aſhe, of Tottenham, Middleſex, bart.
4. Martha, firſt marr. to ſir Edw. Cropley, ſon of ſir John Cropley, of Clerkenwell, Middl.; after to ſir Edw. Bowyer, of Camberwell, Surrey, knt.

1. Robert Wilſon, of Merton, Surrey, died unmarried Dec. 10, 1701, aged 51.

2. Edward Wilſon, of Colveſton, in Norfolk (of whoſe iſſue ſee vol. III. p. 514.); died April 3, 1708, aged 55. = Judith[3] Wilſon, of Bungay; died Nov. 22, 1745, æt. 82.

3. William Wilſon, of Knight-thorpe, died in July 1681, æt. 23, ſ. p.; firſt huſband. = Rebeckah, dau. of Robert Weſtbrooke, of Collingham, Notts, gent.; died Oct. 21, 1716, æt. 62. = William Woolley[4], of Derby, eſq. a Spaniſh merchant; ſecond huſband; buried May 4, 1718.

Two ſons, living 1716.

4. John Wilſon, of Knight-thorpe, died May 21, 1718, æt. 59, ſ. p.

---

[1] "Dr. Yarburgh, who ſettled at Newark on Trent, was a great favourer or encourager of a chalybeate ſpaw at Guilethwait, or Gillfort, in Derbyſhire, firſt diſcovered by Mr. George Weſtby of that place, who had alſo ſtudied phyſic. While they lived, they gave it encouragement, and provided all neceſſary convenience for ſtrangers that reſorted to it; nor was the water behind-hand with them, in producing very great and ſurpriſing cures. But, after their death, the farm wherein it lies, belonging to the duke of Norfolk, fell into other hands, who uſed ſtrangers ſo roughly, that the place, in a few years, was deſerted by all its gueſts." Dr. Short, on the Mineral Waters of Derbyſhire, Lincolnſhire, and Yorkſhire, 1734, p. 269.

[2] In the Viſitation this name is Robert; but it ſhould be Rowland. See vol. III. p. 514.

[3] On a marble monument againſt the North wall of Merton church, Surrey:

"Near this place lyeth the body of Judith the wife of Edward Wilſon, of Didlington, in Norfolk, eſq. who was the ſecond ſon of Robert Wilſon, eſq. formerly an inhabitant of this pariſh.
She died the twenty-ſecond day of November 1745, in the 82d year of her age."

[4] Author of a conciſe "Hiſtory of Derbyſhire;" which, by the friendſhip of the late Samuel Pegge, eſq. I poſſeſs in MS; and in an introductory letter to which, addreſſed "to Mr. George Rogers, merchant, at Mile-end," Mr. Woolley thus deſcribes his motives for undertaking it: "Having been by our late war with Spain, whereby I was a great loſer (about £2000.), deprived of that trade and buſineſs wherein I was brought up, and which I had followed many years at home and abroad, I retired into the country, being the native one of my parents and family for many generations, and wherein I had been educated in my youth; and, having much time on my hands, I fell to reading and ſtudy, eſpecially Antiquities and Chorography, to which my travels had much inclined me. Amongſt other writings of that kind, there fell into my hands Collections of ſeveral materials fit for the compoſing an Hiſtorical Deſcription of Derbyſhire, gathered by my late worthy relation, Samuel Sanders, eſq. of Little Ireton, and into which he had made a ſmall entrance (and great pity it is that he lived not to complete it; for I knew not any one more capacitated for ſuch a work than he was). Out of thoſe papers I compoſed the following ſheets, with ſome other Collections of my own and others of the ſame kind. And finding, amongſt the many Deſcriptions of Counties in England, there is none of this yet extant, though there is more room for it than for many others, as well for its many wonders of Nature and Art, as other matters that are uſually brought into ſuch a work; I have been induced to make this public; not for any great opinion I have of it, but in hopes that ſome more able pen may be ſtirred up by emulation or otherwiſe to make a more perfect one. And now, my old friend, I muſt beg your acceptance of this my work, which I dedicate to you as a token of that value I have for your friendſhip, which you know was begun mutually between us, now about 40 years ago, at ſchool, when we were fitting for our mercantile employment, and was cultivated in Spain, in that then beſt part of Andeluſia, Port St. Mary, where we both paſſed the flower of our age: and I do ſtill often call to mind thoſe many pleaſant and, to me, profitable hours I have paſſed in your moſt agreeable converſation on the banks of Guadalele; and do find ſtill the ſame ſatisfaction therein as oft as we meet. And I have no reaſon to think otherwiſe than that you alſo have had, and ſtill continue to have for mine, though leſs deſerving. Were I to chooſe a patron according to juſtice, to whom ſhould a Hiſtory of Derbyſhire of right belong but to his Grace the Duke of Devonſhire? whoſe family for ſo many generations have been at the head of it (though her Majeſty for the preſent has thought fit to place the lord-lieutenancy in another); and whoſe noble palaces of Chatſworth and Hardwicke are the chief glories of it; and who ſtill is lord high ſteward of the corporation of Derby. Beſides, my family obligations deſerve all the acknowledgements I can make; for that my anceſtry have long enjoyed ſome of their beſt circumſtances under his Grace; and my own perſonal obligations to his Grace and his moſt noble father call for the higheſt tokens of gratitude from me; but I am conſcious the work is too meanly performed that I ſhould preſume to lay it at his Grace's feet. And now your modeſty muſt give me leave to declare to the world, that I am proud of my patron Mr. Rogers; and that I eſteem the ſhare I have in your friendſhip one of the greateſt felicities of my life; who are a perſon of that ſedate and candid temper, ſteady virtue, ſolid judgement, univerſal benignity, and abſolute diſintereſtedneſs, that I know none to exceed you."

Pedigree of AYLMER, of KNIGHT-THORPE; and of CLAYDON, SUFFOLK.

Judith Bures, of Bures St. Mary's, Suffolk, first wife. = John Aylmer, born about 1521; younger brother to sir Robert Aylmer, of Aylmer-hall, in the parish of Tilsley, Norfolk; tutor to lady Jane Grey[1] of Bradgate 1551; archdeacon of Stow 1553; of Lincoln 1562; D. D. 1573; biſhop of London 1576; died 1594; and buried in St. Paul's cathedral. = ... second wife.

Dorothy Haſtings, dau. of Edward Haſtings, eſq. of Leiceſter Abbey, first wife, died ſ. p. = 1. Samuel Aylmer, eſq of Claydon-hall, Suffolk, high-ſheriff of that county in 1625; died Jan. 12, 1635. = Anne, eldeſt dau. of Edward lord Brabazon[2], of Tamer's Court, near Dublin, ſecond wife.

2. Theophilus Aylmer, D. D. rector of Much and Little Hadham, Herts, 1589; archdeacon of London 1591; rector of St. Magnus, London Bridge, 1591; married Mary, dau. of William Newce, of Much Hadham; a learned divine and excellent preacher; died in January 1625.

3. Sir John Aylmer, of Rigby, or Riveſby, co. Lincoln, knt. married Suſan, dau. and heir of . . . Sampſon, of Suffolk.

4. Zachary[3] Aylmer, official to his brother the archdeacon.

5. Nathanael.

6. Tobel[4] Aylmer, of Writtle, Eſſex, gent. = Mary, dau. of John Sammes, of Toppingho-hall in Hatfield Peverell, Eſſex.

7. Edmund, died July 29, 1627.

1. Judith, married William Lynche, of Kent, eſq.

2. Elizabeth. = Sir John Foliot, of Pirton, co. Worceſter.

Aylmer Foliot. = ...

Aylmer Foliot, of Yardley, co. Worceſter.

. . . . = Adam Squire, D.D. maſter of Baliol College, Oxford, had a diſpenſation to hold the vicarage of Culmore[5] in the dioceſe of Sarum; archdeacon of Middleſex, and prebendary of Tottenhale 1577; died 1588.

1. John Aylmer. = Lucretia, dau. of ſir Henry Clovyle, of Weſt Haningfield, Eſſex.

2. Edward Aylmer.

3. Anthony Aylmer. = ...

Elizabeth.

Alice.

Brabazon Aylmer, eſq. of Mugdon-hall, in Ulting, Eſſex, in the commiſſion of the peace for the county. = Mary, dau. of John Gideford, of Toppingho-hall, Eſſex, eſq.

Brabazon Aylmer, an eminent bookſeller; publiſhed in 1701 Mr. Strype's Life of his great-grandfather.

1. John Aylmer, rector of Bletſo and Melchborn, co. Bedford.

2. Tobel Aylmer, of London, gent.[6] = Margaret, dau. of John Coſinghurſt, of Leatherhead, Surrey.

Mary, married to John Acton, ſon of John Acton, the king's goldſmith.

1. Mary.

2. Margaret.

John Squire, vicar of Shoreditch 1612; ſequeſtered 1642; died at Richmond, where he kept a private ſchool, 1653. = ...

Judith.

Judith, baptized Nov. 7, 1618; buried Aug. 24, 1629.

John, bapt. Jan. 14, 1620-1; married Mary Lynche, by whom he had one daughter; was rector of Barnes in Surrey 1660; and died June 9, 1662, aged 42[7].

Theophilus, bapt. Aug. 17, and died Aug. 19, 1622.

Margaret, bapt. Aug. 24, 1622.

Judith, bapt. Oct. 13, 1624.

1. Samuel Aylmer, died young.
2. John, died young.
3. Anthony Aylmer. = Catharine, dau. of Robert Beale, of Hillingdon, Middleſex, ſon and heir of ſir Thomas Beale, of Whittlebar, co. Northampton, knight.

1. Brabazon Aylmer, a bencher of the Middle Temple, and ſeveral years clerk of the peace for the county of Eſſex; died Aug. 25, 1754, ſ. p. = ... dau. of Robert Brage, of Hatfield Peverell, eſq.

2. Robert Aylmer, M. A. of Bene't College, Cambridge, vicar of Camberwell, Surrey, 1727; died 1769.

3. Anthony Aylmer, died young.

4. Thomas Aylmer, died young.

1. Anne. = John Godebold, eſq. of Terling-hall, Eſſex.

2. Lucretia, died unmarried.

1. John Godebold, eſq. married in 1734-5. = Mary, dau. of George Paſchal, of Derby.

2. Anne.
3. . . . .
4. Mary,
5. Charles,
6. Anthony,
7. Jane, } died young, or ſingle.
8. Rich. Godebold, M. A. of Clare Hall, Cambridge, rector of All Saints, Sudbury, 1733.

1. Anne.
2. John,
3. George, } died young.
4. Another John.
5. Jane.

---

[1] "When he was but a child, going toward ſchool, Henry Grey duke of Suffolk having ſome diſcourſe with, took ſo much liking unto him, that after he had been bred ſome years in the Univerſity of Cambridge, he made him his chaplain, and committed his daughter the lady Jane Grey to his tuition." Fuller, Worthies, Norfolk, p. 248.

[2] He was the ſon of ſir William Brabazon, lord chief juſtice of Ireland.

[3] Of the attachment of this Zachary to his brother Edmund, ſee a remarkable inſtance in Strype's Life of the Biſhop, p. 185. They were both buried at Shoreditch church.

[4] To-bel, God is good. Archbiſhop Whitgift was his god-father; and this name was given in memory of the child's mother being thrown out of a coach, not long before his birth, and eſcaping unhurt. Mr. Le Neve gives the epitaph of "the Hon. Lieutenant Colonel Whitgift Aylmer, who, after he had lived in this Iſland 41 years, 2 months, and 10 days, departed this life July 20, 1701, being Sunday;" and of "Madam Joyce, his widow, who died Sept. 19, 1702, aged 52."

[5] In 1587 this Squire's conduct was ſo infamous, that he is repreſented by biſhop Aylmer as an acolaſtus and a dilapidator rerum eccleſiaſticarum. Both his livings were at that time under ſequeſtration; one of them (perhaps Hathern) to Mr. Francis Haſtings and Mr. Purefoy; the other to Samuel Aylmer and Mr. Kemp, an utter barriſter of the Temple.

[6] Viſitation of London, by ſir Henry St. George, Clarenceux, 1636.

[7] See his epitaph, at Barnes, Lyſons, vol. I. p. 17.

BURLEY, or BURLEIGH, is ſituated on a delightful eminence, a little to the left of the road from Loughborough to Aſhby de la Zouch, which runs on the ſide of Charnwood foreſt.

In an act of reſumption in 1485, proviſion is made that it ſhall not be prejudicial to John Lee, for the office of keeping of the park of Burley, in the county of Leiceſter, unto him granted by the king's letters patents; nor in any wiſe to trench any wages, fees, or profits, to the ſame office granted by reaſon of the ſaid letters patent[1].

In 1564, one family reſided in Burley Park.

In 1656, Burley-hall is thus deſcribed in a particular then offering it for ſale:

A fair capital manſion-houſe, newly built of ſtone; in the low ſtory ſeven rooms, in the ſecond ſtory four rooms and three cloſets; in the third ſtory . . . rooms and . . . . cloſets; ſpacious court-yard, a large ſlated barn and brick walls of eight bays and good ſtables; the length thereof, with chambers over them, waſh-houſe, brew-houſe, and other neceſſary rooms thereto belonging, a dove-cote, and one other dwelling-houſe diſtant from the other, newly built of ſtone, and one barn of two bays; all coſt building £2,600.

The ſeveral nurſeries, ſprings, a plantation round the ſaid houſe, are an ornament to it.

	£.	s.	d.
The great ground towards Loughborough, divided into four parts, 70 acres, per annum,	61	0	0
The Barn cloſe, butting on Thorpfield North, 25 acres,	17	0	0
The great ground joining to the Barn cloſe, now divided in four parts, and is 65 acres,	52	0	0
The Brickhill cloſe is eight acres,	6	0	0
The Wilderneſs four acres,	3	0	0
The lower great ground, butting on the Foreſt-lane, divided in two parts, 58 acres,	41	0	0
The meadow called the Launds, or Long meadow, divided into three parts, and is 25 acres,	16	0	0
The Colt cloſe, not meaſured, in Patrick's uſe,	4	0	0
The Cloſe Brooks, Plow's part is	8	0	0
The four grubbed grounds in Brooks's, Dalby's, and Heath's uſe is	15	0	0
The ſix acres of meadow in Loughborough meadow, £6.
The Wood ground, divided in two parts, 75 acres, is	26	0	0
	249	0	0
Several grounds in Loughborough park, adjoining to Burley Park (ſee p. 854)	201	4	0
Loughborough meadow	6	0	0
	456	4	0
Nineteen years purchaſe demanded	8007	16	0
Burley-houſe coſt building	2600	0	0
Timber, wood, poles, and other wood, on the premiſſes, — —	500	0	0
	11707	16	0

Sir William Jeſſon, knight, (whoſe wife Jane, daughter of Matthew Babington, of Rothley, eſq. died in 1668) was at that time ſtyled "of Burley Park."

Henry Tate[2], eſq. of Burley Hall, was high ſheriff of the county in 1711; and in 1722, polled from Burley as a freeholder (as did James Stapley).

He died Dec. 3, 1722, and Lucy his widow on the 17th of June following[3]. Their only child,

William Tate, eſq. was but for a few weeks owner of Burley-hall. He died on the 30th of December, 1722, without iſſue; and was ſucceeded by his firſt couſin

Mary (daughter of Anthony Tate, eſq. his father's brother). This lady was afterwards married to Edward Butler[4], LL.D. preſident of Magdalen college, Oxford; and burgeſs in parliament for that Univerſity 1737 and 1741. She died July 15, 1730; and her huſband Oct. 29, 1745; as appears by the following epitaphs on the Eaſt wall of the chapel of Magdalen college[5]:

1. Arms: Or, on a chief dancetté Azure, three covered cups of the firſt, Butler; impaling, Per feſs Or and Gules, a pale counterchanged, three Corniſh choughs proper, beaked and legged Gules, Tate; Plate CXXIII. fig. 4. p. 918. Over all, on an eſcutcheon of pretence, the arms of Tate.

"H. S. E.
Maria Butler,
Edvardi Butler, LL. D. hujuſque Collegiis Præſidis
uxor,
& conjugalis & ſocialis vitæ exemplar pulcherrimum.
Superſtitem reliquit filiam unicam, eximiis animi corporiſque dotibus
ſui ſimillimam.
Obiit 15° die Julii, anno ætatis 40, Salutis 1730.
In deſideratiſſimæ conjugis memoriam
hoc marmor P.
maritus mœſtiſſimus."

2. Arms, as on the laſt.

"Juxta dilectiſſimam uxorem conduntur reliquiæ viri admodum colendi
Edvardi Butler, L. C. D. hujus Collegii per annos XXIII Præſidis,
Univerſitatis Oxon per quadriennium
Vice-cancellarii, ab eâdem deinde ad Senatum Britannicum iterum delegati Burgenſis:
quæ illum ad obeunda munia Natura tam feliciter effinxerat, ut nec urbano ſimplicitas nec literato elegantia deeſſet,
ut officiorum neque magnitudine gravatus neque varietate diſtractus unquam videretur;
in rebus quibuſcunque ſe gerendis applicuiſſet non ita cautus ut celeritas, non ita promptus ut induſtria deſideraretur.
Ingentia ſuos in Magdalenenſes merita teſtatur ædium inſtaurandarum egregiè ſuſceptum opus, quod liberalitate privatâ morienſque largiter promovit, monumento quovis ſepulchrali honorificentius extiturum, & perennius.
De patriâ
quantùm meruerit vir probatiſſimus
Comitia loquantur Britannica, quibus nunquam non interfuit,
Eccleſiæ, libertatis Anglicæ, legumque acer uſque vindex & indefeſſus:
inde firmam ſatis corporis valetudinem
ſenſim labefactavit, ſalutis publicæ ſtudioſior quam ſuæ;
quippe cum nondum eſſet ſexagenarius immaturo, ſi quis alius, fato occubuit
Octobris 29°, anno X'ti 1745."

Dr. Butler had iſſue Mary, who was firſt married to Philip Herbert, eſq. of Kingſey, co. Oxford; M. P. for the city of Oxford, who died in 1749; and was buried at Thame in Oxfordſhire, where the following epitaph was placed by his relict:

"In memory of Philip Herbert, eſq.
of Kingſey near this place,
member of parliament for the city of Oxford.
He was a diſintereſted lover of his

---

[1] Rot. Parl. 1 Hen. VII. vol. IV. p. 378.

[2] Q. Whether ſon of John Tate, eſq. who was called to the degree of a ſerjeant at law (with Ambroſe Phillipps, eſq. and others) April 23, 1686.

[3] See their epitaphs, p. 903.

[4] Son of Robert Butler, of London, gent.; matriculated at Magdalen college, Oct. 13, 1703, at the age of 16; B. A. 1706; M. A. 1709; D. C. L. June 22, 1722.

[5] Hiſtory of the Colleges in the Univerſity of Oxford, publiſhed by the Rev. John Gutch, p. 340.

country, without any affection for popularity;
and was beloved by all,
not becauſe he ſought it, but becauſe he deſerved it.
He was a moſt tender and indulgent huſband,
a ſincere and ſteady friend.
He died July 22, 1749, in the 32d year of his age.
He married Mary, only daughter and ſole heireſs of Edward Butler, LL. D. who was preſident of Magdalen College, Oxford, and member of Parliament for that Univerſity.
His diſconſolate widow,
in teſtimony of her gratitude and affection,
and in juſtice to ſo deſerving a character,
cauſed this monument to be erected."

Over the inſcription are the arms of Herbert; and an eſcutcheon of pretence, with the arms of Butler and Tate quartered.

Mrs. Herbert married, ſecondly, Benjamin Tate, eſq. who died at Burley-hall, Jan. 13, 1790; and was buried at Mitcham in Surrey; where a white tablet in the North aile has the arms of Tate; with an eſcocheon of pretence, Quarterly, 1. and 4. Butler; 2. and 3. Tate; fig. 5; and this inſcription:

"Underneath lie the remains of
Benjamin Tate, eſq. who died January 13, 1790.
To the memory of the beſt of huſbands and beſt of friends, ſhe for whom ſhe joined thoſe tender names dedicated this marble."

Mrs. Mary Tate died in Groſvenor Place, May 24, 1798, poſſeſſed of the eſtate at Burley; which, under her will, deſcended to George Tate, eſq. eldeſt ſon of Benjamin Tate by his firſt wife; and he is now poſſeſſed thereof. By her death alſo a jointure of £1000. a year devolved to Philip lord viſcount Wenman and his aunt Mrs. Herbert. She was buried with her ſecond huſband in Mitcham church, Surrey; and is thus noticed on a mural tablet on a North pillar of the nave:

Arms: In a lozenge, the arms of Tate; with, on an eſcocheon, Quarterly, Butler and Tate.

"H. S. E.
MARIA TATE, vidua BENJ. TATE, armigeri, filia & hæres EDWARDI BUTLER, LL. D.
Collegii Beatæ Mariæ Magdalenæ
apud Oxonienſes Præſidis, & ad Senatum Britannicum ab Academiâ delegati Burgenſis: Quæ ob ſinceram erga Deum pietatem, ob ſingularem morum ſuavitatem,
et liberalitatem in egenos effuſiſſimam,
longo licet confecta morbo, omnibus tamen deſideratiſſima
obiit 24to die menſis Maii 1798, æt. 69."

Mr. Tate had by his firſt wife three ſons and four daughters; of whom, Henry, the eldeſt, died young.

The ſecond ſon, George Tate, eſq. of Langdown, in the pariſh of Dibdin, near Southampton, was in the army; and is now a widower, with one daughter.

The third ſon, Benjamin, is fellow of Magdalen college, Oxford; M. A. 1776; B. D. 1784.

Two of Mr. Tate's daughters are thus noticed on tablets of white marble in Mitcham church:

1. "In memory of Miſs Sophia Tate[1], who died April the 1ſt, MDCCLXXX.
very ſincerely regretted by all who knew her."

2. "In memory of Martha Tate, who died December the 6th, 1795,
very ſincerely regretted by all who knew her."

At bottom, in a lozenge, the arms of Tate.

William Tate, eſq. (brother to Benjamin, and father of William Tate, M. A. of Magdalen college, Oxford) died in 1781; and is thus recorded in Mitcham church-yard:

Arms: Tate; impaling, Vert, three eagles diſplayed in feſs Or, Wynne.

"In memory of William Tate, eſq.
late of this pariſh, who departed this life
September 2, 1781, aged 74 years.
Alſo Elizabeth, wife of the above William Tate, eſq.
who died Oct. 20, 1789, aged 83 years."

Within the church are two eſcocheons of the arms of Tate, impaling Wynne; on one of them this creſt, An arm embowed and couped parted per pale Gules and Or; holding in the hand proper, a pine branch of the ſecond; fig. 6.

Burley-hall (of which a view is given in vol. III. Plate XXVI. p. 135.) conſiſts of three ſtories; and in the front next the town has a handſome pediment. An avenue of fine old trees lead up to the houſe; and, together with a number of others, nearly hide it. Near this houſe the new canal runs ten miles acroſs the Foreſt to Coleorton; and the neighbouring country is beautiful indeed. An evening walk towards it from Loughborough is delightfully pleaſant. A number of views of the town, with its large and rich tower, preſent themſelves. The Foreſt is of itſelf a grand and agreeable object; and furniſhes a noble background to all the proſpects where it can be ſeen as ſuch.

LOUGHBOROUGH OLD PARKS.

Cloſe adjoining to The Park-field near Loughborough, on the farther ſide thereof next the Foreſt, lie Loughborough-park and Loughborough Out-woods, the ſame being a park long ſince diſparked. Part thereof, being on a hilly ground, and covered with wood, affords a delightful proſpect towards the town; whilſt other parts are converted into tillage and paſturage, for the uſe and benefit of the proprietors. This Park land contains by eſtimation 1000 acres, there being 11 farm-houſes thereon; woods 150 acres.

Another Park thereto adjoining, called from the keeper's name Norton-park, was imparked by Henry earl of Huntingdon in the reign of queen Elizabeth; and diſparked about the year 1630.

Through theſe grounds runs a rivulet called The Wood-brook down to the town of Loughborough, and through the ſame, formerly well repleniſhed with trout and cray-fiſh. At the town's ſide it ſupplies a water-mill, called The Malt-mill; and, paſſing the ſame, through the lordſhip, runs into the Soar.

In 1564, one family reſided in Loughborough Park; and in 1656, the Park is thus deſcribed:

The meſſuage called Poert gate-houſe, barn, and other convenient buildings, ſeven cloſes, 58 acres, is	30	4	0
Three cloſes more there, in Oſborne's uſe, 51 acres, is, per annum,	21	0	0
Seven cloſes more there, late in Everat's uſe, 126 acres,	66	0	0
Three cloſes more there, late in widow Stable's poſſeſſion, 60 acres,	32	0	0
Two cloſes more there, late in Edw. Randle's uſe, 58 acres,	24	0	0
Four cloſes more there, late in George Wilſon's uſe, 57 acres,	28	0	0
	201	4	0

John Olderſhaw[2], eſq. of Loughborough Parks, was in the commiſſion of the peace for this county in the reigns of king William III. and queen Anne.

William Buſby, eſq. of Loughborough[3], who married Catharine daughter of ſir Henry Beaumont, bart. of Stoughton Grange, died March 23, 1726-7, poſſeſſed of the following property in Loughborough Parks.

A hall houſe, ſtables, and other good conveniencies, with an incloſed farm, conſiſting of 13 cloſes, in the occupation of Thomas Bilſon,	124	0	0
A new-built houſe, with barns, ſtables, and other conveniencies, and an incloſed farm, conſiſting of 10 cloſes, in the occupation of Edward Bilſon,	90	0	0

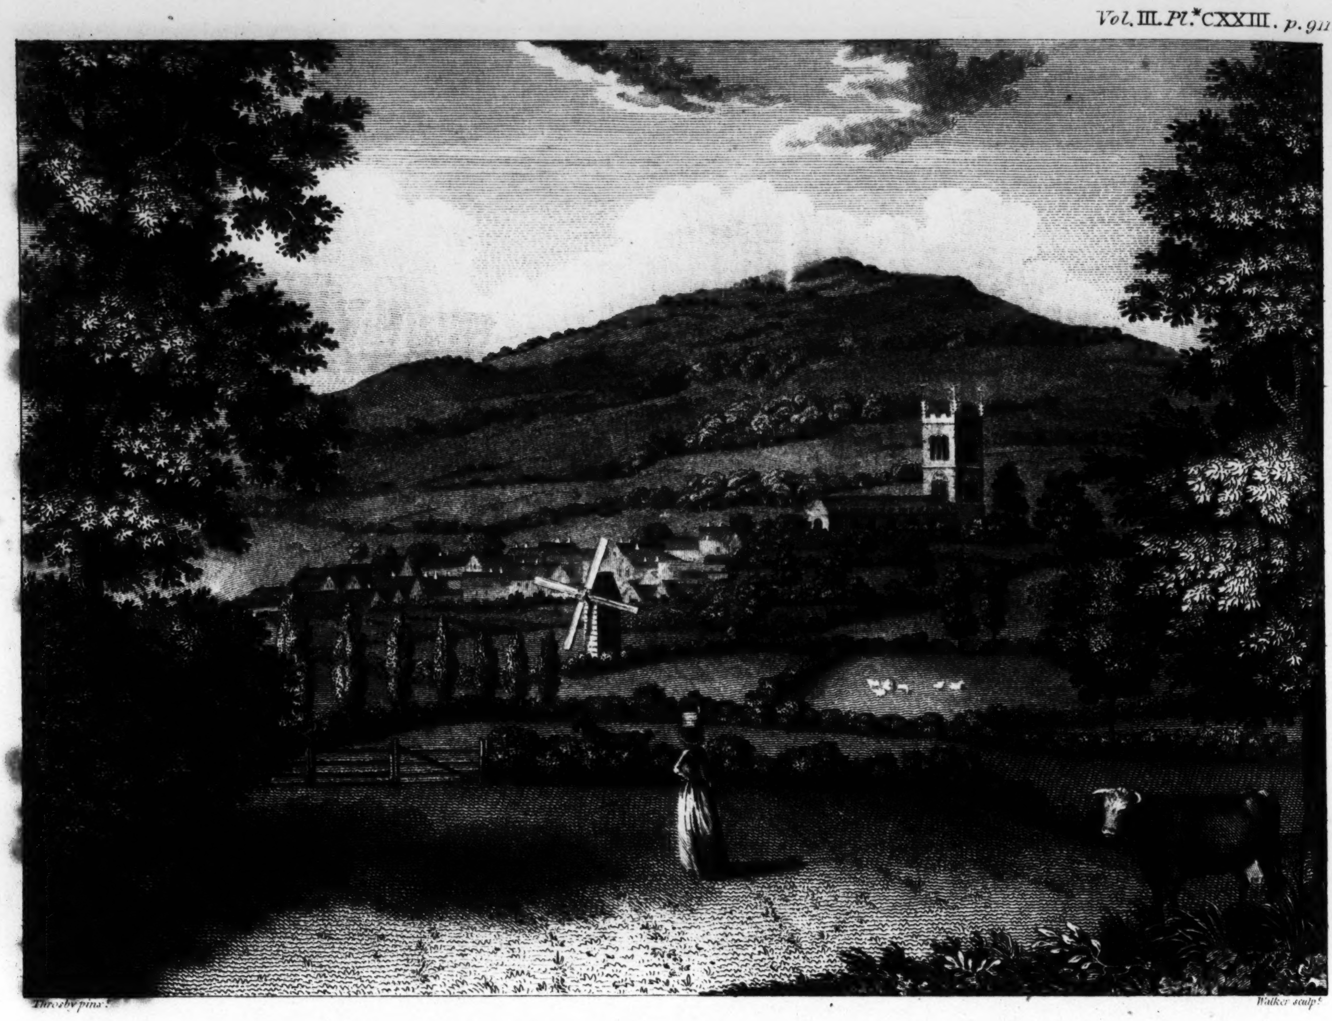
---

[1] She died at Briſtol of a decline.

[2] See the pedigree of Olderſhaw, under Kegworth, p. *859.

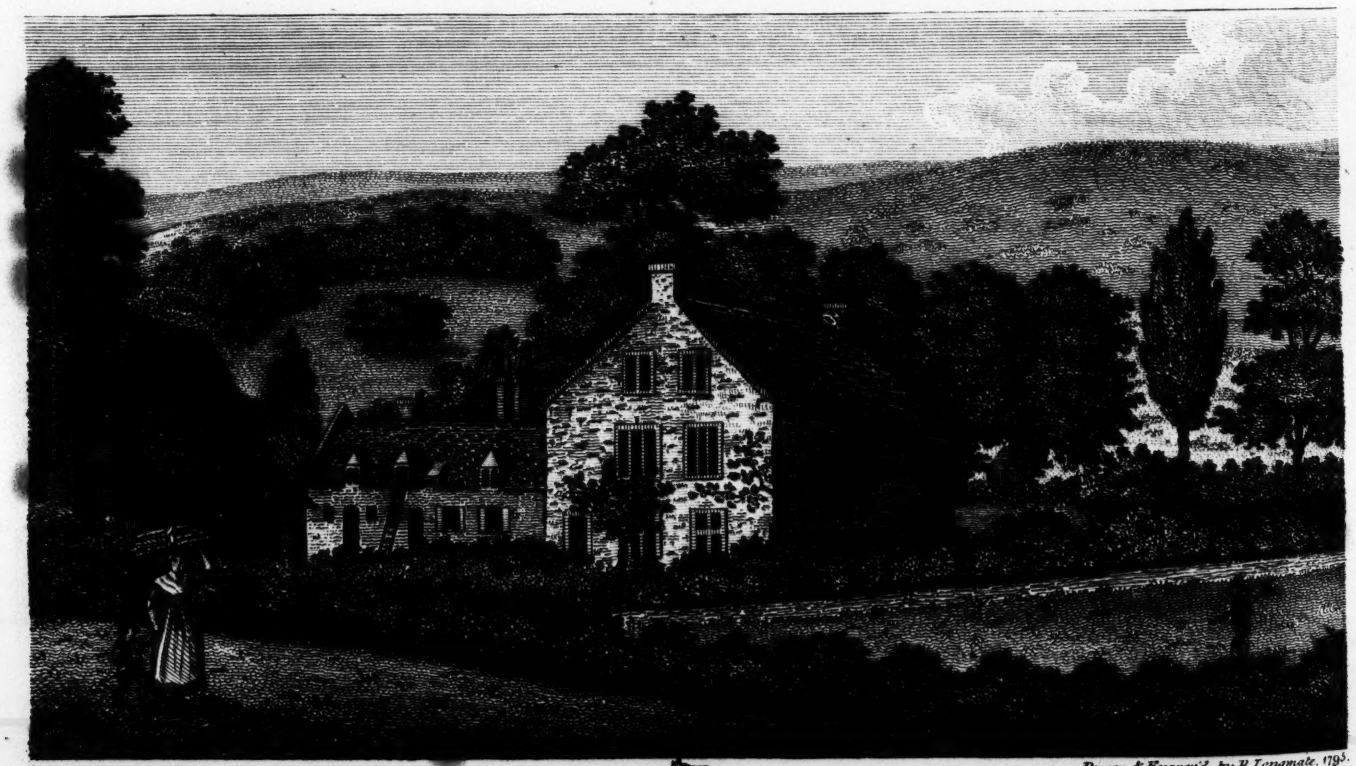
[3] Of whom ſee under Stoughton, vol. II. p. 861; and his epitaph under Loughborough, p. 903.

A new



Throsby pinx.t Walker sculp.t

LOUGHBOROUGH.



Drawn & Engrav'd. by B. Longmate. 1793.

To HENRY WHATTON ESQ. This View of the old Mansion, in LOUGHBOROUGH PARKS, is incribed by his obliged humble Servant
J. Nichols.

A new brick houſe, three rooms on a floor, with all conveniences neceſſary for a farmer, and an incloſed farm, conſiſting of 13 cloſes, containing by eſtimation 104 acres in the occupation of Iſaac Leak,	90	0	0
A houſe and incloſed farm, containing by eſtimation 70 acres, in the occupation of William Price,	30	0	0
A houſe, ſtables, and good conveniencies, and an incloſed farm, conſiſting of 4 cloſes, in the occupation of John Glover,	27	10	0
	361	10	0

The landlord pays levies for the whole eſtate; and Bilſon's two farms, and Leak's, are levied together at £118. per annum, and Glover's at £10.

The year's tax for Bilſon's two farms and Leak's, at 2*ſ.* in the pound, is £6. 5*ſ.* 8*d.*

And Glover's is, 13*ſ.* 4*d.*

A rent charge paid out of Glover's farm to the feoffees of Loughborough	6	0	0
Lime and muck for his farm, per ann.	1	10	0
Leake has 60 loads of muck, and ſix loads of lime, allowed per annum, which comes to about	5	8	0
Muck and lime for Bilſon's larger farm about £6. per annum,	6	0	0
Ditto for the leſs farm at Curtup.
Deductions,	18	18	0

Of the above property of Mr. Buſby, the firſt article paſſed to Mr. Watkinſon of Loughborough; by whoſe daughter it was brought in marriage to Henry Whatton, eſq. attorney at law, the preſent owner; whoſe pleaſant abode is here given in Plate *CXXIII.; and a pedigree of his family in p. 912.

The ſecond and third articles paſſed alſo to Mr. Watkinſon; from whom they were purchaſed by the late Samuel Phillipps, eſq. of Garendon; and are now the property of Thomas March-Phillipps, eſq.

A curious gold ring, having round it ſmall figures of the Virgin and Child, and of St. Michael, with the motto, "Amen et fermer," was found about 21 years ago in a garden near Loughborough; and is now in the poſſeſſion of my friend Mr. Adams, who for many years has been a reſpectable bookſeller in that town. It is engraved in Pl. CXXIII. fig. 6, p. 918.

WOOD-THORPE.

This village belonged to Hugh Deſpenſer earl of Winton; and was granted by king Edward III. July 20, 1336, to Henry lord Beaumont and Alice his wife [1]. It is pleaſantly ſituated on a gravelly ſoil, or rather an elevated ground, about a mile and a quarter from Loughborough, and conſiſts of eight farm-houſes and two cottages. The land is rich and valuable; principally a light mixed ſoil, much adapted to the feeding of cattle and ſheep, as well as good corn-land.

In 1340, it was found that Henry de Beaumont earl of Boghan, deceaſed, held the hamlet of Woodthorpe, being then accounted a member of the manor of Loughborough [2].

In 1427, it was found that Elizabeth wife of Henry Beaumont died ſeiſed of the hamlet of Woodthorpe, which was then accounted a member of Beaumanor [3].

In 1564, 14 families reſided in Woodthorpe.

The following is a note of Mr. Aylmer's land in Thorpefield meadow, in the occupation of Nicholas Booth, by the demiſe of Nicholas Neale, 1607.

Skelthorpe arable fields.

Imprimis, two roods on Bonnet-hill.

The Park field.

Imprimis, one rood jutting upon Burbage meadow cloſe.

Item, two half rood leys at Pepper-lane end.

Item, three half acres at the Aſhes.

Item, two roods at the Swetinge tree jutting on Cawdwell's cloſe.

Item, two roods on the ſame furlong.

One acre at the Carte-gappe.

One acre at Thorpe fulwin.

One rood at Cawdwell's marlpit.

Two roods at Willow pits.

One acre called Cuddacre.

Two roods at the Oaks.

Two roods at the Watering hedge.

The field toward Quarne.

One acre in the breach.

One acre at the Swynelands.

One acre being a headland, and the fellow jutting on Quarne furlong.

One acre on Wynſall leys.

One half acre and two roods at Fynnys oak.

One acre at Clothouſe.

One rood pykeland jutting on Newe-cloſe.

One acre in Horſeleys.

Meadow.

One acre of meadow at Soredoles.

One acre at Redmere.

Two roods at Thackholme leys.

Item, one cloſe in Woodthorpe town, containing one acre.

Arable, &c. 15 acres at 2*ſ.* an acre per annum, 30*ſ.*	£.4	3	4
Meadow, two acres and a half at 13*ſ.* 4*d.* an acre per annum, 33*ſ.* 4*d.*
The cloſe, one acre, per annum, 20*ſ.*

18 acres leaſed to Nicholas Booth for 12 years yet to come, rent 20*ſ.*

In 1662, the lordſhip of Woodthorpe was incloſed; and at that period the hamlet had 8 houſes on the South ſide, and 4 houſes and 4 cottages on the North ſide. William Herrick, eſq. is deſcribed as then the lord of the manor and the principal land-owner; whoſe immediate deſcendant now owns the whole lordſhip, except about 20 acres.

In 1722, ſix freeholders polled from Woodthorpe; in 1775 we find but two names, William Boſs and Edward Reynolds.

Henry Boſs, a reſpectable yeoman, lived on his own eſtate at Woodthorpe and Quorne; his anceſtors having reſided at the former place, in a good old houſe, from the time of James I. He married to his firſt wife Olive [4], daughter of Edward Farnham, eſq. of Quorndon, by Iſabella his wife, but had no iſſue by her. By his ſecond wife, Grace Fiſher [5], he left two daughters, and a ſon William; who left a ſon Henry, now reſident at Ruſhden in Northamptonſhire; who ſold the property at Woodthorpe in 1792 to the Herrick family, to which it originally belonged, and for which a chief rent of 3*ſ.* 4*d.* a year was paid.

Some land, late the property of Mr. Boſs, was ſold a ſhort time ſince for £100. an acre.

The inhabitants of this hamlet ſupport their own poor; and choſe their own officers and conſtables, which are annually ſworn in at the Beaumanor court.

The turnpike-road from Loughborough to Leiceſter goes through the lordſhip; and divides it from Skelthorpe, or Shelthorpe, in which there is only one modern houſe, called Needleſs Inn, belonging to Mr. Herrick; who owns the lordſhip, except about 20 acres.

A round wall in Skelthorpe is traditionally, but without much authority, ſaid to have been part of a chapel. It is on the right hand ſide of the road going to Loughborough, about a mile from that town.

---

[1] Pat. 10 Edw. III. pars 2. m. 2.

[2] Eſch. 14 Edw. III. N° 24. Leic.

[3] Eſch. 6 Hen. VI. n. 49.

[4] Mrs. Olive Farnham, daughter of Edward Farnham and his wife Iſabella Veſtue, is omitted in the pedigree, printed in the former part of this volume, under Quorn, p. 103.

[5] Henry Boſs died in 1729, aged 75; Grace Boſs his wife died in 1771, aged 85. See before, under Loughborough, p. 905.

Pedigree

PEDIGREE of WHATTON, of LOUGHBOROUGH OLD PARKS.

Arms: 1. and 4. Argent, on a bend Sable, between ſix croſs croſslets Gules, three bezants Or; 2. and 3. Azure, three hedge-hogs Or, Heriz. Plate *CXXIII.

Robertus de Watune, de Whatton, com. Nott. temp. Willielmi I.

Dom. Willielmus de Watuna.

Robert de Watton. = Beatrix [1]. Walter de Wathon. = ...

Ælina daughter and heir. = William Heriz, ſ. p. Richard. = ... Robert.

William de Whatton = ...

Richard de Whatton, knt. [2] = Agnes. Roger de Whatton, called of Skerington, 2d huſband. = Joan, daughter of Oliver de Lovetot. = Robert, 1ſt huſband. Morin. = Henry.

Robert de Whatton. = . . . Roger, 3 Ed. II. John. Richard. Richard de Whatton. = Agnes daughter of John le Palmer, 8 Edw. III. Richard. = ...

John de Whatton, 41 Ed. III. 9 Hen. IV. = Margery. John de Whatton. = Alice. Henry de Whatton. = Margaret, dau. of Hugh Saunsfaile. Adam. Benedict.

Robert de Whatton [3], vel Skipwith, 10 Hen. IV. = Alice 4 Hen. II. William Bagot, knt. = Margaret ſiſter and heir of Robert.

Richard de Whatton, knt. 31 Edw. III. = ...

John de Whatton, knight, of Leiceſterſhire, 12 Hen. IV. = ... Robert de Whatton. = ...

Robertus de Whatton [4], eſq. 9 Hen. V. = ... Alice. Margaret Whatton. = Robert Farnham, of Quorndon.

John de Whatton, eſq. 11 Edw. IV. = ...

Robert de Whatton, eſq. born 14 Edw. IV. of Long Whatton. = . . . 1. Jeffery de Whatton, ar', b. 16 Edw. IV. = ... 2. William. 3. Ambroſe.

Robert Whatton, 21 Hen. VII. = ... 1. George Whatton = ... 2. Jeffery Whatton, 23 Henry VIII. = ...

Elizabeth. = Will. Eyre, of Belton.

Robert Whatton, 1534 [5]. = Margaret dau. of George Abney, of Willeſley, co. Derby. William Whatton, born at Newtown Linford. = ... Thomas Whatton, born at Newtown Linford. = ...

George Whatton, of Long Whatton. = ... dau. of —— Stanley, of Sutton, co. Nottingham. Robert Whatton, of Stamford, co. Lincoln. = Mary, dau. of . . . Henſon, of Stamford, D.D. John Whatton, born at Newtown Linford, co. Leic. = Sence Penbury, dau. of . . . Penbury, of Loſeby, co. Leic. William Whatton [6]; died at Humberſton.

Robert Whatton. = Anne dau. of John Cole, of Stamford. Alice Whatton. = Rob. Wilſhoir, of Harborough. William Whatton, eſq. of Newtown Linford. = Anne dau. of Tildeſley Monk, of Whitwick. John Whatton [7], of the Newark, near Leiceſter, eſquire of the body to king Charles I. = Catharine dau. of Thomas Babington, eſq. of Temple Rothley.

Robert. Alice.

William Whatton, of Newtown Linford. = Lucy dau. of Thomas Babington, eſq. of Temple Rothley. Mary Whatton. = William Rolleſton. Sir John Whatton, knt.

William Whatton; ſettled in the city of London. = ... dau. of . . . . Thomas Whatton. John Whatton. Matthew Whatton. Babington Whatton. = ... Tildeſley Whatton.

Lucy Whatton. William Whatton. Babington Whatton. Sence Whatton. Mary Whatton. = . . . Abell. Eliz. Whatton. = . . . Hunt. Henry Whatton, B. A. of Trinity Coll. Camb. 1683. = Mary. Catharine Whatton.

Henry Whatton. = . . . Blunt, of Nott. William Whatton. = . . . John, d. an inf. Sam. d. an inf. Cath. d. an inf.

Henry Whatton, born at Nottingh. marr. 1746. = Cath. James, of Mansfield. Eliz. Whatton, d. an infant. Will. Whatton, clerk. Anne Whatton. = ...

Elizabeth Whatton. Henry Whatton [8], born at Mansfield; an attorney in Loughborough, 1803. = Elizabeth, dau. and heireſs of John Wilkinſon, gent. William Whatton. James Whatton.

Henry-Watkinſon Whatton, born 18 December, 1782. John-Watkinſon Whatton, born 22 Aug. 1785. William Whatton, born Aug. 3, 1787; died that month. Robert Whatton, born July 20, 1788; d. Jan. following. William-Robert Whatton, born Feb. 17, 1790. George Whatton, born June 4, 1795.

---

[1] Regiſter of Lenton Abbey, fol. 51.

[2] Marrying a kinſwoman of William de Heriz, he quartered three hedge-hogs; as did, about that time, Pierpont, who married Sarah the ſiſter of ſir John Heriz.

[3] When Robert de Whatton changed his name to Skipwith, 10 Hen. IV. it is ſaid he went and reſided at Cotes, co. Leiceſter; but Camden ſays, the family of Skipwith originally came there out of Yorkſhire.

[4] In Long Whatton church, on a broken blue flat-ſtone, upon a braſs plate, is this inſcription: "Pray for the ſoule of Robert de Whatton, arm', which deceſſed the v day of March, anno Dom. 1452; on whoſe ſoule Jhu have mercy: Amen." Arms: ſix croſs croſslets quartered with three hedge-hogs.

[5] In Long Whatton church, on a large white alabaſter ſtone, is this inſcription: "Here lyeth the bodyes of Robert Whatton, gent. and Margaret his wyffe; whych Robert deceaſed the 10 of Sept. and ſhe deceaſed the 16 Sept. 1577.

Arms: Argent, on a bend Sable, between ſix croſs croſslets Gules, three bezants. The arms at Whatton were made out, with much difficulty, by ſir Charles Townley, knt. king at arms, and given by him to Mr. Whatton.

[6] He deviſed his eſtates to charitable uſes; which were afterwards, under a decree in Chancery, ſold; and part of the money was given by the king to the Leiceſter Infirmary.

[7] Mr. Whatton thinks the three bears in the arms in the church of St. Martin Leiceſter ought to have been three hedge-hogs; and he has the greater reaſon for it, as he has got his father's ſeal, which are the ſame arms quartered as in note 4.

[8] In the South-eaſt corner of the veſtry-room in Loughborough church, Henry Whatton, of that pariſh, gent. with licence of the biſhop, hath lately made a vault, or burying-place, with liberty for the time being to erect monuments, and lay down ſtones with inſcriptions; over which vault are placed two large Swithland ſtones, on one of which are the arms of Whatton, with the inſcriptions as in p. 901.—The above Henry Whatton married Elizabeth the daughter and heir of John Watkinſon, deceaſed. This Whatton is deſcended from the antient family of the Whattons, of Whatton, co. Nott. In the time of Henry IV. Robert de Whatton changed his name to Skipwith, and reſided at Coates. About the ſame time John de Whatton, knt. and his brother Robert, grandſons of Henry de Whatton, came to and reſided at Whatton, co. Leic.; and, as near as I have been able to comprehend, I have ſet out a pedigree of that family. H. WHATTON.

EMINENT NATIVES, or INHABITANTS.

William de Loughborough was a canon of Croxton. Mr. Peck copied of his writing, from a book belonging to Croxton abbey, theſe lines:

"De Louthtburg frater Willielmus, ego tibi, Mater, Supplico, Sponſa Dei, Virgo, memento me.
Sit Domini celis ipſi tutela fidelis,
Et ſibi ſolamen Divinus Spiritus. Amen."

Either this William de Loughborough, or another of the ſame name, was archdeacon of Lewes, June 22, 1359[1].

Nicholas Hall, a native of Newcaſtle, was admitted of Emanuel College, Cambridge; where he regularly took his degrees in Arts, March 22, 1641. Mr. Hall, together with Mr. Wright and Mr. Holbeche of the ſame college, were declared by the Houſe of Commons to be ſuperannuated fellows, and ſo to have no vote themſelves in the election of fellows[2]. This appears done in order to exclude Mr. Hodges from a fellowſhip, who had been elected by their votes. On the 29th of the ſame month, they were all voted Non Socii, on the ſtatute de morâ Sociorum, notwithſtanding any diſpenſation; and the maſter and fellows were required to fill their places by a new election at the ſame time[3]. John Worthington was then voted fellow, in oppoſition (no doubt) to Mr. Hodges before-mentioned, and was after maſter of Jeſus College. Aug. 8 after, it was moved, that, to the Bill about this college, the word ſuſpenſion ſhould be added, and Mr. Holbeche, Harris, and Hall inſerted, and the order to extend to ſuperannuated perſons for the time to come; all which was aſſented to. June 10, 1643, Mr. Hall was ſent for, as a delinquent, for not obeying the orders of the Houſe of March 29, 1642, which declared him Non Socius[4]. From this account, and what appears elſewhere, it ſeems the College did not think fit to conform to thoſe orders; as Mr. Wright had alſo the rectory of Thurcaſton, and Mr. Hall that of Loughborough (both in the College gift), from which he was very ſoon after ſequeſtered. "I was aſſured," ſays Mr. Walker[5], that he was a worthy man, and of a very good family, being (as the gentleman thinks who ſent me the account of his ſequeſtration) by the death of his brother a baronet." After his ejectment, Mr. Hall retired into the North; and in 1649, being then ſtyled "B. D. of Ellemar hall in the county of Durham," he occurs as maſter of St. Mary's Hoſpital at Newcaſtle; and ſigned a leaſe there in 1657[6].

John Cleiveland[7], a noted Loyaliſt and popular Poet in the reign of king Charles I, was eldeſt ſon of the Rev. Thomas Cleiveland, M. A.; and baptized June 20, 1613, at Loughborough, where his father was then aſſiſtant to Mr. Brown the rector; but, being preſented to the vicarage of Hinckley[8] in 1621, John Cleiveland was educated at the free-ſchool of that town, under the celebrated Richard Vines[9], a man of genius and learning, then maſter of that ſchool, and eſteemed the Luther of the Preſbyterians, among whom he was as much eſteemed as his ſcholar was among the Cavaliers. In his fifteenth year young Cleiveland was admitted of Chriſt's College, Cambridge[10], Sept. 4, 1627; and took the degree of B. A. in 1631. He was thence tranſplanted to the ſiſter foundation of St. John's college in the ſame univerſity, of which he was elected fellow on the 27th of March, 1634, and proceeded to the degree of Maſter of Arts in 1635. Of this ſociety he continued many years a principal ornament, being one of the tutors, and highly reſpected by his pupils, ſome of whom afterwards attained to eminence[11]. By the ſtatutes of that college he ſhould have taken holy orders within ſix years after his being elected fellow: but he was admitted on the law line[12], (as the phraſe there is) and afterwards on that of phyſic[13], which excuſed him from complying with this obligation, though it does not appear that he made either law or phyſic his profeſſion; for, remaining at college, he became the rhetoric reader there, and was uſually employed by the ſociety in compoſing their ſpeeches[14] and epiſtles to eminent perſons (of which ſpecimens may be ſeen in his works), being in high repute, at that time, for the purity and terſeneſs of his Latin ſtyle. He alſo became celebrated for his occaſional poems in Engliſh, and at the breaking-out of the civil wars is ſaid to have been the firſt champion[15] that appeared in verſe for the royal cauſe; which he alſo ſupported by all his perſonal influence; particularly by exerting his intereſt in the town of Cambridge[16], to prevent Oliver Cromwell (then an obſcure candidate, but ſtrongly ſupported by the Puritan party) from being elected one of its members[17]. Cromwell's ſtronger genius in this, as in every other purſuit, prevailing, Cleiveland is ſaid to have ſhown great diſcernment by predicting, at ſo early a period, the fatal conſequences that long after enſued to the cauſe of Royalty[18].

The Parliament party carrying all before them in the Eaſtern counties, Cleiveland retired to the royal army, and with it to the king's head-quarters at Oxford[19], where he was much admired and careſſed for his ſatirical poems on the oppoſite faction, eſpecially for his ſatire on the Scottiſh Covenanters, intitled "The Rebel Scot[1]." In his abſence he was deprived of his fellowſhip Feb. 13, 1644[2], by the earl of Mancheſter, who, under the authority of an ordinance of Parliament, for regulating and reforming the Univerſity of Cambridge, ejected ſuch fellows of colleges, &c. as refuſed to take the ſolemn league and covenant.

---

[1] Reg. Joh. de Shepey, epiſc. Roffen. fol. 295. a.
[2] Journals of the Houſe of Commons, vol. II. p. 492.
[3] Ibid. p. 504.
[4] Ibid, vol. III. p. 124.
[5] Sufferings of the Clergy, p. 269.
[6] Brand's Hiſtory of that town, vol. I. p. 84.

[7] So he and his family ſpelt their name themſelves.

[8] Under which pariſh an account of the father and of the reſt of his family will be given.

[9] David Lloyd, in his Memoirs, tells us, that Cleiveland owed "the heaving of his natural fancy, by choiceſt elegancies in Greek and Latin, more elegantly Engliſhed (an exerciſe he improved much by), to Mr. Vines, there ſchool-maſter." Of this learned perſon, who was afterwards one of the Aſſembly of Divines, the reader will find a particular account in vol. II. p. 454, under Blaſton, his native village; and ſee alſo the Hiſtory of Hinckley.

[10] Entry of his admiſſion in Chriſt's Church, Cambridge.

[11] One of theſe, John Lake, D. D. ſometime fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge, had, "before he was complete thirteen years of age, been committed there to the tuition of the famous Mr. Cleiveland, for whoſe memory he always retained a great reverence;" and under whoſe inſtructions he ſo far profited, that he became ſucceſſively vicar of Leeds, and biſhop of Man, Briſtol, and Chicheſter. "He and his friend Dr. [Samuel] Drake, vicar of Pontefract," who had been fellow of St. John's College, and borne arms in the garriſon at Newark, collected their tutor's compoſitions into one volume, which they intitled "Clievelandi Vindiciæ, or Clieveland's genuine Poems, Orations, Epiſtles, &c. purged from the many falſe and ſpurious ones which had uſurped his Name, and from innumerable Errors and Corruptions in the true Copies, &c. publiſhed according to the Author's own copies; Lond. 1677," 8vo: prefixing to it his Life and Parentalia, and a Dedication (ſigned with the initials of their names, J. L. and S. D.) to Francis Turner, D. D. then maſter of St. John's College, but afterwards ſucceſſively biſhop of Rocheſter and Ely, who is believed to have been a pupil of Cleiveland's alſo.

[12] November 2, 1640. Regiſter of St. John's.

[13] January 31, 1642. Ibid. In St. John's college, "he lived about nine years, the delight and ornament of the Society." To the ſervice he did it "the library oweth much of its learning, the chapel much of its pious decency, and the college much of its renown." Life by Biſhop Lake, &c. prefixed to his Poems, 1677, 8vo.

[14] One of theſe was ſpoken before the king (Charles I.) and his ſon the prince of Wales, at St. John's college in Cambridge; with which the king was ſo well pleaſed, that after it was over, his Majeſty "called for him, and (with great expreſſions of kindneſs) gave him his hand to kiſs, and commanded a copy to be ſent after him to Huntingdon, whither he was haſtening that night." This, according to Winſtanley, was in 1642. But a MS. dates it in 1641.

[15] Wood's Athen. Oxon. 2d edit. vol. II. p. 274.

[16] Oliver Cromwell was the only member for the Univerſity 27 May, 1652. Lord Henry Cromwell was ſo, 3 Sept. 1654.

[17] Life by Biſhop Lake, &c. ubi ſupra.

[18] For this fact we are indebted to the authors of his Life, prefixed to his works, in 1677; who, having obſerved that "no man had more ſagacious prognoſticks," tell us, that after the election was over, Cleiveland ſaid, with much paſſionate zeal, "that ſingle vote had ruined both Church and Kingdom." Whence it ſhould ſeem, that Cromwell gained this ſeat in parliament by the majority of one vote only. The ſame writers mention another inſtance of his being "Vates in the whole import of the word, both poet and prophet." When the king withdrew from Oxford, and ſurrendered himſelf to the Scots' army, "upon ſome private intelligence three days before the king reached them, Cleiveland foreſaw the pieces of ſilver paying upon the banks of Tweed, and that they were the price of his ſovereign's blood, and predicted the tragical events."

[19] Life by Biſhop Lake.

"Maſter Cleveland of Cambridge, the contriver of that bold and licentious pamphlet, called, The Character of the Perfect Diurnall, is brought up to London, to anſwer for his libelling. You will ſhortly read a Character upon the Character[3]."

From Oxford Cleiveland was appointed to be judge advocate in the garriſon at Newark, under ſir Richard Willis the governor, and has been commended for his ſkilful and upright conduct in this difficult office[4], where he alſo diſtinguiſhed his pen occaſionally, by returning ſmart anſwers to the ſummons, and other addreſſes to the garriſon[5]. Newark, after holding out the laſt of all the royal fortreſſes, was at length, in 1646, by the expreſs command of the king (then a priſoner in the Scots' army), ſurrendered upon terms[6], which left Cleiveland in poſſeſſion of his liberty[7], but deſtitute of all means of ſupport, excepting what he derived from the hoſpitality and generoſity of his brother loyaliſts, among whom he lived up and down ſome years, obſcure and unnoticed by the ruling party, till in November, 1655, he was ſeized at Norwich, as "a perſon of great abilities," adverſe and dangerous to the reigning government[8]; and being ſent to Yarmouth, he was there impriſoned for ſome time, till he ſent a petition to the lord protector, wherein the addreſs of the writer hath been much admired, who, while he honeſtly avows his principles, has recourſe to ſuch moving topics, as might ſooth his oppreſſor, and procure his enlargement[9]: in which he was not diſappointed, [1] Cleiveland had been before at Oxford in the year 1637, and was then incorporated maſter of arts, with ſeveral other Cambridge men. Wood's Athen. Oxon. Faſti, 1637. But now his ſarcaſtic attacks on the oppoſite party would make him exceedingly popular there, eſpecially the ſatire above-mentioned. Of which we have the following proof: while he was now at Oxford he had his portrait painted by Fuller (a three-quarter's length, now in poſſeſſion of his great-nephew the biſhop of Dromore), wherein he is drawn holding a paper, inſcribed "The Rebel Scot." In the "Select Collection of Miſcellany Poems, 1781," ſeveral of Cleiveland's poems are reprinted; and particularly this ſatire, which ſee in that Collection, vol. VII. p. 10.

[2] From the Regiſters of St. John's College, which correct the erroneous date in Walker's Sufferings, &c.

[3] The London Poſt, N° 23, Feb. 11, 1644-5.

[4] "His next ſtage was the garriſon of Newark, where he was judge advocate until the ſurrender: and by an excellent temperature of both, was a juſt and prudent judge for the king, and a faithful advocate for the country." Life by biſhop Lake, &c. ubi ſupra. The biſhop of Dromore has in his poſſeſſion an authentic copy of the commiſſion (ſigned by king Charles I. with his own hand), dated at "our court at Newarke," 12th October, 1645, by which ſir Richard Willis the governor, and other commiſſioners therein mentioned, are impowered to puniſh all offences committed by the ſoldiers, and to determine all differences between them and the countrymen by martial law.—A particular reaſon for fixing Cleiveland in the garriſon at Newark, may be produced from a periodical publication of the oppoſite party, intitled, "The Kingdomes Weekly Intelligencer," No. 101. p. 811. for Tueſday, 27 May, 1645. "But to ſpeak ſomething of our friend Cleiveland, that grand malignant of Cambridge, we heare that he is now at Newarke, where he hath the title of advocate put upon him. His office and employment is, to gather all the Colledge rents within the power of the king's forces in thoſe parts, which he diſtributes to ſuch as are turned out of their fellowſhips at Cambridge for their malignancie. If the royal party be thus careful to ſupplie their friends, ſure it is neceſſary to take ſome courſe to relieve thoſe who are turned out of their houſes and livings for adhering to the Parliament." Communicated to Mr. Nichols by the late Rev. William Cole, from a collection of old pamphlets during the great rebellion between 1639 and 1660, and ſorted by Mr. Carte, in ſir John Hinde Cotton's library at Madingley, near Cambridge.

[5] See his works, edit. 1677, p. 119, &c. and edit. 1687, p. 92, &c.

[6] Mr. Aubrey tells us, upon drawing up certain articles for the Royaliſts at this place, he would needs add this ſhort concluſion, "and we annex our lives as a label to our truſt."

[7] On the occaſion of this ſurrender, the Critical Review, in its account of Granger's Biographical Hiſtory, has given us a remarkable ſtory, which is thus introduced: "Mr. Granger ſays, that Cleaveland never was in holy orders; Lloyd tells us, that he was fellow of St. John's, and that he was turned out of his fellowſhip. Be that as it will, his famous ſatire againſt the Scotch rendered him extremely obnoxious to that nation, and he happened to be taken priſoner by a party of their troops in the North, commanded by David Leſley, afterwards lord Newark. Being diſcovered by the papers he had about him, the officers who took him, gave him an aſſurance of the gallows, and Cleaveland received the news with that magnanimity and pride, which is the concomitant of great ſelf-conſequence; for he conſoled himſelf with the thoughts of dying a martyr in the cauſe of his ſovereign, and having his name tranſmitted to poſterity with peculiar encomiums in the annals of Loyalty. He was introduced, with ſome other priſoners, to Leſley, who could neither read nor write, and who awarded to each his proper fate, by hanging, whipping, or impriſoning. When it came to be Cleaveland's turn, he preſented himſelf at the bar with a conſcious dignity, and his enemies did not fail to aggravate his offences, producing at the ſame time a bundle of verſes. 'Is this all, ſaid the General, ye have to charge him with; for ſhame! for ſhame! let the poor fellow go about his buſineſs, and ſell his ballads.' This contemptuous ſlight affected Cleaveland ſo much, that he is ſaid to have drowned the remembrance of it in ſtrong liquors, which haſtened his death. It appears, however, by Thurloe's papers, that Cleaveland was a perſon of note amongſt the Royaliſts, and that he had a place of ſome conſequence in their army."—As this article was attributed to a countryman of Leſley's (the late Mr. Guthrie), ſhall we ſuppoſe that he took this method to be revenged on the author of the "Rebel Scot?"—It is ſtrange, however, that, quoting Thurloe, he ſhould not have obſerved that Cleiveland was nine years after the ſurrender of Newark poſſeſſed of ſo much health and vigour, as to alarm the adverſe government: being at laſt cut off by an epidemical diſeaſe, after he had a dozen years ſurvived this pretended ſuicide of himſelf by ſtrong liquors.

[8] The heads of his examination are preſerved in Thurloe's State Papers, 1742, fol. vol. IV. p. 185.

[9] This, Lloyd ſeems to hint, was a ſingular inſtance, and therefore the greater compliment paid to the petitioner. His words are (ſpeaking of the petition) "the only thing that ever I heard wrought upon him, that had been too hard for all ſwords." The reader will, probably, not be diſpleaſed to ſee a compoſition of ſo delicate a nature, yet ſo ſucceſsful in its effect. Wood ſays, "it was written in ſuch towering language, and ſo much gallant reaſon, that, upon the peruſal of it, Cromwell was ſo much melted down with it, that he forthwith ordered his releaſe."

"May it pleaſe your Highneſs;

"Rulers, within the circle of their government, have a claim to that which is ſaid of the Deity, 'They have their centre every where, and their circumference no where.' It is in this confidence that I addreſs to your Highneſs, knowing that no place in the nation is ſo remote, as not to ſhare in the ubiquity of your care; no priſon ſo cloſe, as to ſhut me up from partaking of your influence. My lord, it is my miſfortune, that after ten years retirement from being engaged in the differences of the ſtate, having wound up myſelf in private receſs, and my comportment to the public ſo inoffenſive, that in all this time neither fears nor jealouſies have ſcrupled at my actions: being about three months ſince at Norwich, I was fetched by a guard before the commiſſioners, and ſent priſoner to Yarmouth; and if it be not a new offence to make an enquiry wherein I offended (for hitherto my fault was kept as cloſe as my perſon), I am induced to believe, that, next to my adherence to the royal party, the cauſe of my confinement is the narrowneſs of my eſtate; for none ſtand committed whoſe eſtate can bail them. I only am the priſoner, who have no acres to be my hoſtage. Now if my poverty be criminal (with reverence be it ſpoken), I implead your Highneſs, whoſe victorious arms have reduced me to it, as acceſſory to my guilt. Let it ſuffice, my Lord, that the calamity of the war hath made us poor; do not puniſh us for it! Who ever did penance for being raviſhed? Is it not enough that we are ſtript ſo bare, but it muſt be made in order to a ſeverer laſh? muſt our ſores be engraven with our wounds? muſt we firſt be made cripples, then beaten with our own crutches? Poverty, if it be a fault, 'tis its own puniſhment; who pays more for it, pays uſe upon uſe. I beſeech your Highneſs put ſome bounds to the overthrow, and do not purſue the chace to the other world. Can your thunder be leveled ſo low as our groveling condition? Can your towering ſpirit, which hath quarried upon kingdoms, make a ſtoop at us, who are the rubbiſh of theſe ruins? Methinks I hear your former atchievements interceding with you, not to ſully your glories with trampling upon the proſtrate, nor clog the wheel of your chariot with ſo degenerous a triumph. The moſt renowned heroes have ever with ſuch tenderneſs cheriſhed their captives, that their ſwords did but appointed, for the protector generouſly ſet him at liberty, diſdaining to remember on the throne the oppoſition he had received in his canvas for parliament as a private burgeſs. Cleiveland thence retired to London, where he is ſaid to have found a generous Mæcenas [1], and being much admired among all perſons of his own party, became member of a club of wits and loyaliſts, which Butler, the author of Hudibras, alſo frequented [2]. Cleiveland then lived in chambers at Gray's Inn (of which Butler is ſaid to have been a member), and being ſeized with an epidemic intermitting fever, died there on Thurſday morning, April 29, 1658. His friends paid the laſt honours to his remains by a ſplendid funeral: for his body was removed to Hunſdon-houſe, and thence carried for interment, on Saturday, May 1, to the pariſh church of St. Michael Royal, on College Hill, London [3], followed by a numerous attendance of perſons eminent for their loyalty or learning: to whom his funeral ſermon was preached by his intimate friend Dr. John Pearſon, afterwards biſhop of Cheſter, author of the learned expoſition of the Creed [4].

In Gataker's "Diſcours Apologetical, 1654," 4to. our poet is mentioned under the appellation of "one Cleavland, a man to me, either by ſight or hearſay, to rime or pen, utterly unknown, further than his friend Lilie (in his Merlin 1654) gives me notice of him, in ſome ſatyrical libel (it ſeems) is pleaſed to term the late aſſembly of Weſtminſter (as he, who himſelf ſtyles it Synod of Preſbyterians, as if it conſiſted of none but ſuch, relates) a flea-bitten ſynod, an aſſembly brewed of clerks, like Royſton crows, or friars of both orders, black and grey." I have not been able to meet with Lilly's Merlin for 1654; but in a ſubſequent work [5], Lilly ſays, "I had in 1652 and 1653, and 1654, much contention with Mr. Gatacre of Redriff; a man endued with all kinds of learning, and the ableſt man of the whole ſynod of Divines in the Oriental tongues."

In a copy of Fuller's Worthies, is the following MS note by Oldys on Cleiveland's Mixt Aſſembly: "See William Lilly's Merlin for 1654, in which he ſets it flying moſt extenſively abroad; whereupon Tho. Gataker, one of that Aſſembly of Divines, in his Diſcours Apogetical, 4to, 1654, has made ſome animadverſion both on Lilly and Cleiveland the author of the Satire."

In 1662 was publiſhed, "A Poem on the Fall of the South ſide of St. Paul's cathedral. To which is added, A Satyre againſt the Fanatick Boutefeus of theſe Times; and a Memoriall offered up at the Tomb of the incomparable Mr. John Cleaveland [6]. By T. P." In this memorial due honour is paid to the Rebel Scot, the Ruperti ſmus, and ſeveral other poems of Cleiveland. On thoſe to the memory of Edward King, the writer ſays,

> "Though to King's learned duſt ſtrict Fate allow'd
> Nor tomb nor trophy, but a watery ſhrowd;
> Yet here his urn is fix'd, which ſhall outvie > Vain Cleopatra's marble pageantry."

Cleiveland has had the fate of thoſe poets, who, "paying their court to temporary prejudices, have been at one time too much praiſed, and at another too much neglected [7]." Both his ſubjects, and his manner of writing, made his poems extremely popular among his contemporaries, but entirely forgotten and diſregarded ſince. For his manner, he excelled among that claſs of writers, ſo much admired in the laſt century, whom our great critic [8] has aptly termed "Metaphyſical Poets," who abound with witty rather than juſt thoughts, with far-fetched conceits and learned alluſions, that only amuſe for a moment, utterly neglecting that beautiful ſimplicity and propriety, which will intereſt and pleaſe through every age. For his ſubjects he generally choſe the party diſputes of the day, which now are no longer underſtood or regarded. Contemporary with Milton, he was in his time exceedingly preferred before him; and Milton's own nephew, Edward Phillips, in his Theatrum Poetarum, or Compleat Collection of the Poets, 1675, 12mo, has the following article: "John Cleaveland, a notable high-ſoaring witty loyaliſt of Cambridge, whoſe verſes in the time of the civil war begun to be in great requeſt, both for their wit and zeal to the king's cauſe, for which indeed he appeared the firſt, if not only, eminent champion in verſe againſt the Preſbyterian party; but moſt eſpecially againſt the Kirk and Scotch Covenant, which he proſecuted with ſuch a ſatirical fury, that the whole nation fares the worſe for it, lying under a moſt grievous poetical cenſure. In fine, ſo great a man hath Cleaveland been in the eſtimation of the generality, in regard his conceits were out of the common road and wittily far-fetched, that grave men, in outward appearance, have not ſpared, in my hearing, to affirm him the beſt of Engliſh poets, and let them think ſo ſtill, whoever pleaſe, provided it be but cut out work for their courteſies. Thoſe that fell by their prowеſs, ſprung by their favour, as if they had ſtruck them down only to make them rebound the higher. I hope your Highneſs, as you are the rival of their fame, will be no leſs of their virtues. The nobleſt trophy that you can erect to your honour is to raiſe the afflicted. And ſince you have ſubdued all oppoſition, it now remains, that you attack yourſelf, and with acts of mildneſs vanquiſh your victory. It is not long ſince, my Lord, that you knocked off the ſhackles from moſt of our party, and, by a grand releaſe, did ſpread your clemency as far as your territories. Let not new proſcriptions interrupt your jubilee. Let not that your lenity be ſlandered as the ambuſh of your further rigour. For the ſervice of his Majeſty (if it be objected) I am ſo far from excuſing it, that I am ready to alledge it in my vindication. I cannot conceit that my fidelity to my Prince ſhould taint me in your opinion: I ſhould rather expect it ſhould recommend me to your favour: had we not been faithful to our King, we could not have given ourſelves to be ſo to your Highneſs; you had then truſted us gratis, whereas now we have our former loyalty to vouch us. You ſee, my Lord, how much I preſume upon the greatneſs of your ſpirit, that dare prevent my indictment with ſo frank a confeſſion, eſpecially in this which I may ſo ſafely deny that it is almoſt arrogancy in me to own it; for the truth is, I was not qualified enough to ſerve him; all I could do, was to bear a part in his ſufferings, and give myſelf to be cruſhed with his fall. Thus my charge is doubled; my obedience to my Sovereign, and what is the reſult of that, my want of fortune. Now whatever reflection I have upon the former, I am a true penitent for the latter. My Lord, you ſee my crimes; as to my defence, you bear it about you. I ſhall plead nothing in my juſtification, but your Highneſs's clemency; which, as it is the conſtant inmate of a valiant breaſt, if you graciouſly be pleaſed to extend it to your ſuppliant, in taking me out of this withering durance, your Highneſs will find that mercy will eſtabliſh you more than power; though all the days of your life were as pregnant with victories as your twice auſpicious third of September. Your Highneſs's humble and ſubmiſſive petitioner, J. CLEIVELAND."

---

[1] This generous "Mæcenas," we may venture to conjecture, was his towſman, the good old counſellor Oneby.

[2] Butler was a great admirer of Cleiveland's wit; and has copied many of his images and thoughts into the celebrated poem above-mentioned. The late learned and ingenious Dr. Farmer had in his poſſeſſion a copy of Cleiveland's poems, in which he had marked many paſſages that have been imitated in Hudibras. By that judicious critic a far more compleat commentary of that mock-heroic poem could have been eaſily given than the world has yet ſeen.

[3] The "church of St. Michael Royal, commonly called College Hill (becauſe Whitington College ſtood there,)" was about that time the receptacle of the laſt remains of ſeveral eminent Loyaliſts, as we are informed by A. Wood, in the paſſage referred to. It was deſtroyed in the fire 1666.

[4] "Dr. John Pearſon, his good friend, preached his funeral ſermon; who rendered this reaſon why he cautiouſly declined all commending of the party deceaſed, becauſe ſuch prayſing of him would not be adequate to any expectation in that audience; ſeeing ſome, who knew him not, would think it far above him; while thoſe who knew him, muſt know it far below him." Lloyd's Memoirs, p. 618; Fuller's Worthies, p. 135.

[5] Hiſtory of his Life and Times, p. 82, 2d edit. 1715.

[6] Soon after his death, Wood ſays, (Faſti, vol. I. p. 274.) were publiſhed ſeveral elegies on him, particularly that intituled, "Upon the moſt ingenious and incomparable Muſophiliſt of his Time, Mr. John Cleaveland; a living Memorial of his moſt devotional Brother and cordial Mourner." Printed at London on the broad ſide of a ſheet of paper 1658. This elegy was written by Phil-Cleaveland; i. e. by a lover of Cleiveland (not by a brother Philip, as Wood erroneouſly ſuppoſed, for he had no brother of that name). It ſhould have been Philo-Cleiveland; but the printer probably dropped the letter o. Wood alſo mentions "An Elegy upon the Death of the moſt excellent Poet, Mr. John Cleaveland," written by Francis Vaux, a ſervitor of Queen's College, Oxford, and author of "A Poem in Praiſe of Topography," which was printed in May 1685.

[7] Dr. Johnſon's Life of Cowley.

[8] Ibid.

made no article of faith." But Cleiveland is now ſunk into oblivion, while Milton's fame is univerſally diffuſed. Yet Milton's works could, with difficulty, gain admiſſion to the preſs, at the time when it was pouring forth thoſe of Cleiveland in innumerable impreſſions. But behold the difference! The preſs now continually teems with re-publications of the Paradiſe Loſt, &c. whereas the laſt edition of Cleiveland's works was in 8vo. 1687. This is the laſt and moſt compleat edition of his works (for, if there is any of later date, it is only this with the title-page re-printed). This edition, 1687, is made up of the following ſeparate publications. The firſt part from "Cleiveland's Vindiciæ," containing only genuine pieces collected by J. L. and S. D. as is deſcribed in note 11, p. 913; the ſecond part from "J. Cleveland revived: Poems, Orations, and Epiſtles, and other of his genuine incomparable Pieces; with ſome other exquiſite Remains of the moſt eminent Wits of both Univerſities, that were his Contemporaries. The ſecond edition [1], &c. Lond. 1660, 12mo; with a curious preface, ſigned E. Williamſon, Newark, Nov. 21, 1658, in which he ſpeaks of "the intimacy he had with Mr. Cleaveland before and ſince theſe civil wars," and of that Poet's "ever-to-be-honoured friend of Gray's Inn," who was probably the Mæcenas mentioned by Wood. To theſe is added a third piece, being the Hiſtory of Wat Tyler's Inſurrection, under the quaint title of "The Ruſtick Rampant," &c. In the ſecond part of this edition, 1687, the notice is ſuppreſſed, that occurred in the original title-page and preface, that this part contained "other Remains of eminent Wits," &c. which is indeed the caſe with moſt of the poems in it, only a few of them being of Cleiveland's own writing. For the verſes in p. 186 were by Tho. Weaver. All that occur between pages 200 and 265, are from R. Fletcher's Ex Otio Negotium [2], &c., being poems printed 1656, 8vo; and the following are from the "Poems of John Hall, 1646," 12mo. viz. thoſe here printed in pages 297, 298. 302. 309. 315. 334. 353. 358. 375. 377. The Elegy, in p. 310, is by Jaſper Mayne. The Song, in p. 336, has been attributed to ſir J. Denham; and ſome of the reſt belong to other writers. But, to ſhow how popular Clieveland was among his contemporaries, we ſhall here enumerate ſeveral of his editions, which were printed with more or fewer of his pieces; in 1647 [3], 1651, 1653, 1654 twice, 1658, 1659, 1660, 1661, 1662, 1665, 1667, 1668, and then in 1677, (which laſt date, Wood ſays, he has ſeen miſprinted 1617; but the writer of this account has now before him two copies of this edition, containing ſome variations, yet both rightly dated 1677); laſtly, in 1687, 8vo.

Dr. Fuller gives him the character of "a general artiſt, pure Latiniſt, exquiſite orator, and excellent poet. His ſtile was maſculine, his epiſtles pregnant with metaphors; his lofty fancy ſeemed to ſtride from the top of one mountain to another, thereby making to itſelf a conſtant level of continued elevation. All his poems are incomparable, ſo that to praiſe one were to detract from the reſt." A copious ſpecimen of them was printed, by the Compiler of this Memoir, in the ſeventh volume of "A Select Collection of Miſcellany Poems, 1781."

A portrait of him, painted by Fuller, during Cleiveland's attendance on the king at Oxford, is now in the poſſeſſion of my good friend the Rev. Dr. Thomas Percy, lord biſhop of Dromore; by whoſe permiſſion an engraving of our common relation accompanies this Hiſtory, Plate CXXIII. In this picture he is repreſented holding a paper, on which is inſcribed the title of his celebrated poem; which, after all, is ſaid not to be meant for a ſatire on the Scottiſh nation in general, but chiefly on that part of it then engaged in rebellion againſt king Charles I. as the writer expreſſly excepts the valiant and loyal bands then enliſted under Montroſe and Crawford, &c.

The late Rev. Mr. Cole of Milton, who had ſeen a great part of the preceding memoir, ſays, in a letter to the writer of it, "Mr. Granger and you agree in his being no clergyman; ſo I have nothing more to ſay on that ſubject: but from his having a common place or ſort of ſhort ſermon, or expoſition, preached or pronounced in the College chapel [4], and his old print [5] dreſſing him in a clerical habit, I was apt to conclude that he was in holy orders; though I am aware that it is not unuſual for laymen ſometimes to perform theſe ſcholaſtic exerciſes, as well as that clergymen in thoſe times of rebellion and confuſion were often obliged to lay aſide their gown, and get their bread in other profeſſions as they could. Your dates are all accurate. There are ſome notices of him in Thurloe's "State Papers," vol. IV. p. 184. It is there remarked, that he was "a perſon of great abilities, and ſo able to do the greater diſſervice." Mr. Echard hath obſerved, that "he was the firſt poetic champion for the king."

Another worthy friend [6] adds, "Your obſervation concerning Cleiveland's Petition to Cromwell is exceeding judicious. I honour him for that petition. It is a fine image of his ſoul. There is a nobleneſs of ſentiment, and a dignity in the avowal of his principles in it, that would have done credit to Majeſty itſelf. And at the ſame time a dexterity of "addreſs" as you remark, and a blameleſs fineſſe in the adopting of arguments proper for his purpoſe, that tyranny, the moſt ſteeled, could not fail to be ſoothed and conciliated.—"The Rebel Scot" ſeems to be the utmoſt effort of Cleiveland's genius. And it is truly characteriſtic of it. His forte was ſatire. Nature had endued him with a maſculine ſtrength of thought; and the villainy of the times, co-operating with his own integrity and loyalty, made him direct that vigour of ſentiment to the ſtigmatizing of the hypocrites of the age; and the more forcibly to diſburthen the forcibleneſs of his ideas, he laboured, in all the throes of an imagination on the full ſtretch, after a ſtyle that may not be improperly termed the gigantic, to expreſs them in.—I greatly admire your print of Cleiveland. There is an abundant diſplay of the vis poetica in the exterior at leaſt. I admire too your diſtich that encircles his head. His diſtich on "The Rebel Scot [7]" deſerves it richly; and, indeed, every eulogy in the ſatiric line. For nothing, ſurely, every entered into the head of man, more happy, or more juſtly ſevere, on that traiterous crew, the Covenanters of the North of thoſe days, than the celebrated couplet,

> Had Cain been Scot, God would have chang'd his doom;
> Not forc'd him wander, but confin'd him home."

Luke Milbourn, a native of Loughborough; obtained the degree of M. A. in Emanuel College, Cambridge. His firſt ſettlement was at Lynn in Norfolk, whether as ſchool-maſter or curate is uncertain. He was ordained by the biſhop of Ely in the time of the civil wars, preached at Hunniley, and had a retreat at Kenelworth Caſtle from the inſolence of the ſoldiers, by whom he had ſuffered almoſt to the loſs of his life. He was ſeveral times threatened with impriſonment, and was had before the General, for ſpeaking his thoughts freely concerning their dealing with the King, which he heartily abhorred, and was more deeply concerned at his death than many that freely drank his health; for he kept an annual faſt upon the day as long as he lived. When things were a little quiet, he was called to Wroxhal, in the room of Mr. Ephraim Huit, who went to America. Here God ſo bleſſed his miniſtry, that he did much good, and was generally beloved. Obſerving this, he would not by any means be drawn from hence, though he had the offer of ſome good livings, and though he had ſo poor an allowance here, that he was often told he did not do well by his family, which grew numerous. His anſwer was, "When he could not ſubſiſt where he was, he would remove, but not before." And it pleaſed God ſo to bleſs his little, that his children appeared as well, and were as well brought up, as thoſe of any country miniſters. He could not be ſatisfied to take the engagement; and when it was impoſed, was contriving a retreat; but God ſo ordered it, that he was overlooked. However, he took the Covenant, and from thence afterwards drew a conſiderable argument for his Nonconformity. When he was turned out by the Act of Uniformity, he owed nothing to any man; which (all things conſidered) was amazing. An aged clergyman, who was acquainted with him, ſays, "He might have kept in by a little conformity, at leaſt till a metropolitan viſitation, as his predeceſſors Mr. Huit and Mr. Cook did; for Wroxhal is exempt from epiſcopal juriſdiction, and hath no legal maintenance but £6. 13s. 4*d. per annum*, though the lord (ſir R. Burgoin) and his tenants uſed to make it up £40.; but Mr. Milbourn would not comply in the leaſt." He retired with his family to Coventry, where he was many ways moleſted. He was not ſuffered to teach a ſchool, nor allowed to board young gentlemen that went to the free-ſchool there. He was baniſhed from home by the Five Mile Act, and in that exile finiſhed his courſe in 1667, aged 45. In the above letter it is ſaid, "He removed to Newington Green, where his ingenious wife taught ſchool, which was their only viſible maintenance, and there he died." He was buried in St. Michael's church-yard [Coventry], though Mr. Freak the miniſter offered to lay him in the chancel gratis, ſaying, he would have him buried like himſelf. The famous Luke Milbourn, of London, was his ſon; whom he excelled, if not in learning, yet very much (as the above clergyman expreſſes himſelf) "in more amiable qualities, viz. integrity, humility, peaceableneſs, and ſelf-denial; for which, and the exemplarineſs of his life, he was highly eſteemed by religious people in this pariſh and neighbourhood[1]."

---

[1] The firſt edition was in 1659, 12mo.

[2] See the "Select Collection of Miſcellany Poems, 1781," vol. VII. p. 376. Other inſtances of poems falſely aſcribed to Cleiveland are pointed out in p. 49 of the ſame volume.

[3] Yet this is not the firſt, being ſtyled Optima & noviſſima editio. It is a thin quarto, intituled, "The Character of a London Diurnal, with ſeveral ſelect Poems by the ſame Author. Printed in the yeare 1647." I have not met with any earlier edition.

[4] Every M. A. or fellow at leaſt, at St. John's, in orders or out, muſt read a common-place lecture in chapel in his turn, or pay 40*s*.

[5] There are two other old portraits of our poet, one with a band, the other a buſt crowned with laurel.

[6] The late Rev. Mr. Kynaſton, then fellow of Brazen Noſe college, Oxford.

[7] It was tranſlated into Latin by Thomas Gawen, of New College, Oxford, prebendary of Wincheſter, and rector of Exton, in the county of Hants, who afterwards turned Papiſt.

Of Luke Cranwell, M. A. a native of Loughborough, who was ejected, as a Nonconformiſt, from the vicarage of St. Peter's at Derby in 1652, and afterwards practiſed phyſic at Kegworth, where he died Nov. 11, 1683, ſee before, p. 857.

William Cross, of Pembroke College, Oxford, was well known and generally reſpected in Leiceſterſhire, Nottinghamſhire, and Derbyſhire. He was born at Frinkford in Oxfordſhire, and ordained by the Preſbytery at Nottingham. He was called to Attenborough in Nottinghamſhire, and afterwards removed to Belton in the ſame county, where the Act of Uniformity found him. After his ejectment, he lived at Loughborough, where he preached when the law allowed him. He was a good practical preacher, and exemplary in his converſation; and died, paſtor of a numerous congregation in Derby, in 1698. The ſeventh Sermon in the Collection of Farewell Sermons of the Country Miniſters, upon 1 Sam. xxx. 6. is his[2].

George Bright, a native of Epſom in Surrey, was fellow of Emmanuel College; B. D. there 1664; rector of Loughborough 1669; and D. D. 16... In a dedication to Theophilus earl of Huntingdon, prefixed to "A Treatiſe on Prayer, with ſeveral uſeful occaſional Obſervations and ſome larger Digreſſions concerning the judicial Obſervation of the Lord's Day, the external Worſhip of God, 1678," 8vo, he apologizes for his "little leiſure, and very broken health;" and acknowleges "the great bounty of his Lordſhip's illuſtrious predeceſſors to the Church and Univerſity, to Religion and Learning, who were pleaſed to beſtow the patronage of this rectory (Loughborough), and three others of plentiful revenue, upon the happy place of my many years thoughts." In 1684 he collated and publiſhed the firſt volume, in folio, of Dr. John Lightfoot's Works, containing all thoſe Engliſh Books which had been put out in the Author's life-time. Mr. Strype publiſhed the ſecond volume, with a Preface and Appendix to Dr. Bright's Life of Lightfoot, which was larger than the Life itſelf[3]. He was afterwards chaplain to Mary princeſs of Orange; dean of St. Aſaph Sept. 28, 1689; and, in 1695, publiſhed "Six Sermons, preached before the late incomparable Princeſs Queen Mary, at Whitehall; with ſeveral Additions, and large Annotations, to the Diſcourſe of Juſtification by Faith. This volume is inſcribed in a conſolatory Dedication to the King, to whom Dr. Bright was then chaplain. He died in July 1697; and was buried on the ſide of the high-altar of the church. See his epitaph, p. 902. By his laſt will he gave meadow land in the pariſh of Loughborough, uſually valued at £10. a year, for the reading of morning-prayers on the week days.

William Woty, an ingenious Engliſh Poet, died at Loughborough, March 15, 1791. He was bred to the law; but, entering into the family of Waſhington earl Ferrers, as ſecretary and adviſer in his law tranſactions, remained with that nobleman till his deceaſe; who, previous to that period, had made a proviſion of £150. a year for him, out of an eſtate in Leiceſterſhire. Mr. Woty's publications were, 1. "Shrubs of Parnaſſus, containing a Variety of Poetical Eſſays, Moral and Comic. By James Copywell, 1760," 12mo; of which a ſpecimen is given in Gent. Mag. vol. XXX. pp. 146. 334. 2. "The Muſes' Advice, addreſſed to the Poets of the Age, 1761," 4to. 3. "The Bloſſoms of Helicon, 1763," 12mo. 4. "The Poetical Calendar, 1763," 12 vols. 12mo, in conjunction with Mr. Fawkes. 5. "The Poetical Works of William Woty, 1770," 2 vols. 12mo. 6. "The Female Advocate, 1770," 4to. 7. "Church Langton, 1773," 4to; deſcribing the famous plantations of Mr. Hanbury[4], and the magnificent inſtitutions which were intended to have been founded and ſupported by their produce." 8. "The Eſtate Orators, 1774," 4to; 9. "Particular Providence, a Poetical Eſſay, 1775," 4to; and ſome ſubſequent miſcellaneous pieces. Among the beſt of his productions the ſong of "My temples with cluſters of grapes," &c. is to be claſſed; the merit of which is almoſt univerſally known. Mr. Woty was a true bon vivant; and, by a too great indulgence of his paſſion for conviviality and ſociety, unfortunately injured his conſtitution. He never took clerical orders, as had been reported.

Joseph Webster[5] (who was born at Thorpe Acre, the reſidence of his maternal grandmother) is now the pariſh clerk of Loughborough, and alſo principal clerk to the commiſſioners of taxes for the hundred of Weſt Goſcote; which offices he has reſpectably filled for ſeveral years; and to his kind attention I am indebted for much uſeful information.

A few tributary lines are here due to the memory of another Joseph Webster, ſon of the former; a youth of exquiſite natural talents, refined by good education. He was born April 13, 1774; and, at the uſual period of life, was articled to a ſurgeon of eminence, with every fair promiſe of becoming himſelf an ornament to that reſpectable profeſſion; but, unfortunately, in a very few months, he was afflicted with an abſceſs in the loins, probably from the Pſoas muſcle; which continued till worn-out nature could no longer reſiſt the ſhock. Diſabled by bodily infirmity from purſuing even the moſt moderate exerciſe, and unavoidably confined to the houſe, he ſought refuge in an elegant amuſement, for which he ſeemed peculiarly formed; and, from copying trifling prints, ſoon acquired a facility of accompliſhing much higher productions, till at length there was ſcarcely any thing which his pen or his pencil could not match. His own hand-writing was remarkably neat; and he with great readineſs imitated any other. Landſcapes, animals, vegetables, heraldry, ſeals, maps, portraits, and even hiſtorical pictures, were multiplied by him for daily amuſement. His patient perſeverance can only be conceived by thoſe who have ſeen his performances. He copied very early Prior's large map of the county of Leiceſter with the utmoſt preciſion; and made alſo a beautiful tranſcript of that wonderful and almoſt unknown tract of country, Charnwood Foreſt. Three charming prints of Mr. Peters he had repeatedly copied; the reſurrection of a pious family from their tomb at the laſt day; an angel carrying the ſpirit of a child to Paradiſe; and the ſpirit of a child arrived in the preſence of the Almighty. Several portraits of eminent perſons (Dr. Johnſon, Dr. Farmer, Mr. Tyrwhitt, Mr. Malone, Profeſſor Harwood, Mr. and Mrs. Staveley, the Rev. John Alleyne, rector of Loughborough, &c. &c.) are the counterparts of the pictures from which they were taken; except that in moſt of them the likeneſs is preſerved, and, as is natural to drawings, the delicacy increaſed. He had the art of reducing large portraits to a wonderful nicety; and had juſt begun to attempt the taking of original miniatures, of which ſome few remain, particularly one of himſelf, in which infirmity and placid reſignation are well depicted; and from which the engraving in Plate CXXIII. is here given. The "Death of General Wolfe," a print not more generally known than admired, has from the pencil of young Webſter even additional charms. He had begun a groupe of figures, in a manner which he thought would be his chef-d'œuvre, from the large print which deſcribes the melancholy parting of the late King of France from his family. His hand was arreſted by Death in the proſecution of this bold deſign, juſt when he had completed the monarch's head; but the drawing remains, a valuable fragment of his ſkill. He had obtained alſo the prints of the glorious naval victory on the firſt of June, and the death of Major Pearſon; which he fondly pleaſed himſelf with the idea of imitating. But he was releaſed from the miſery of an incurable illneſs, lamented by all who knew him; in which number, beſides his immediate relations and the writer of this heartfelt tribute, he had the honeſt pride of reckoning ſome names of high rank in Literature, and of high ſtation in Church and State.

---

[1] Nonconformiſts' Memorial, vol. II. p. 492.

[2] Ibid. p. 278.

[3] Wood, Athen. Oxon. vol. II. p. 860.

[4] Of whom, and of his plantations, ſee under Church Langton, vol. II. p. 685.

[5] A writer of the ſame name in the Gentleman's Diary for 1767, a couſin of Mr. Webſter's, is now reſident in London.

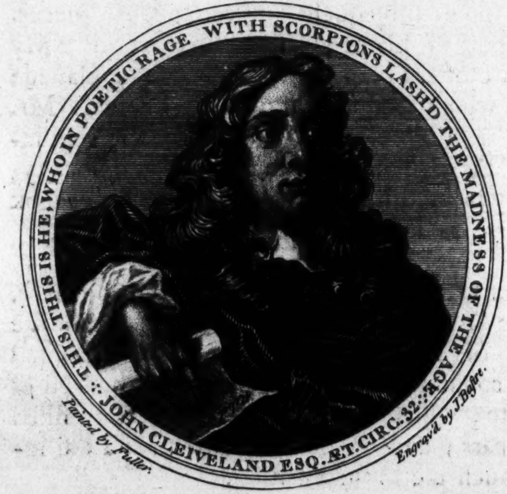
The Rev. JOHN ALLEYNE, ſon of an attorney of Loughborough, B.D. and fellow of Univerſity College, Oxford, was preſented by his college in 1780 to the rectory of North Cerney in Glouceſterſhire; where he died, after one day's illneſs, Nov. 1, 1792. From the communication below, I learn that he was for ſome time ſteward of Magdalen College[1]. From the library of this gentleman, which was purchaſed, in 1793 by Mr. Adams, I purchaſed Mr. Peck's copy of Burton, as noticed in vol. II. p. 203; where, by a miſtake, ſome dates and circumſtances have been aſſigned to Mr. Alleyne, which are ſet right in the note below by a very reſpectable member of the Univerſity of Oxford[2].

---

[1] His mother died at Loughborough, Dec. 29, 1792.

[2] "Having lately had an opportunity of looking into the Hiſtory and Antiquities of the County of Leiceſter, I beg leave to point out a miſtake in the account (vol. II. p. 203) of the Rev. Mr. Alleyne; of whoſe library a ſale catalogue is regiſtered in p. 841 of the Gentleman's Magazine for October 1795. Every word in note 3. from 'matriculated' incluſive to the end of it is inapplicable to Mr. Alleyne; but is, I believe, exactly true, if applied to the Rev. Robert Bryne, A. M. whoſe papers, on his deceaſe, fell into the hands of Mr. Alleyne; a letter from whom is now before me, dated May 18, 1776, ſtating, 'that our poor friend Bryne died on Tueſday laſt,' May 14. From the Catalogue of Graduates it appears that Mr. Bryne took the degree of M. A. on June 7, 1751; and that Mr. Alleyne did the ſame on June 6, 1755. The latter, though a fellow of Univerſity College, was ſteward of Magdalen College, where he reſided till he gave up that office. The former was born in Somerſetſhire, and brought up under the celebrated Thomas Hare, M. A. maſter of the ſchool of Crewkerne. MAGDALENENSIS."

Fig. 1. p. 920.

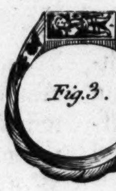


THIS, THIS IS HE, WHO IN POETIC RAGE WITH SCORPIONS LASH'D THE MADNESS OF THE AGE.
JOHN CLEIVELAND ESQ. ÆT. CIRC. 32.
Painted by Fuller.
Engrav'd by J. Basire.

The Original is now in the Poſseſsion of Dr. Percy Bp. of Dromore.

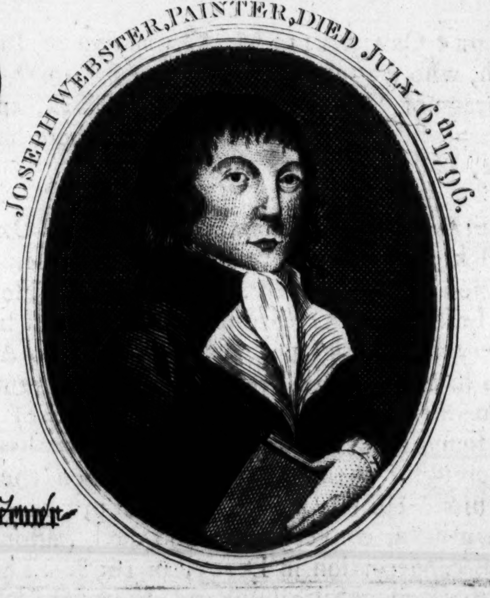
Pl. CXXIII.

Fig. 3.

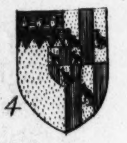


p. 918.

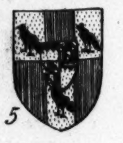
Fig. 2. p. 918.



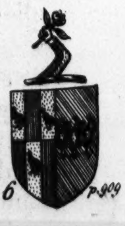
JOSEPH WEBSTER, PAINTER, DIED JULY 6th 1796.



4



5



6

p. 909

OSGATHORPE,

OSGATHORPE,

antiently called Angodeſthorp and Oſgadtorp, a ſmall village, pleaſantly ſituated in a healthful ſpot, 7 miles Weſt from Loughborough, and 5 miles Eaſt-north-eaſt from Aſhby de la Zouch. It conſiſts in general chiefly of a rich ſoil, ſome part of a mixture, but chiefly of a clay, and variegated with hills and valleys. Part of the land abounds with lime-ſtone. In the eccleſiaſtical diviſion of the county it is in the deanry of Akeley.

One ploughland in Oſgathorpe, which in the time of king Edward had been valued at twelve-pence, was worth four ſhillings at the general ſurvey, when it was held by Ardulf under Henry de Ferieres. In the demeſne he had one plough; and three villans, with five bordars, had another plough [1].

This place was granted by Hugh Lupus earl of Cheſter to Robert de Waſtneys, ſon of Hardulph, to whom alſo Bertram de Verdon confirmed all thoſe lands he held here of Nigell de Morvile [2].

The family of Waſtneys, or de Gaſtenoie, were of Norman extraction, and formerly poſſeſſed great eſtates in this county and Staffordſhire. Thomaſin, the heir-general, was married about the beginning of the reign of king Richard II. to ſir Nicholas de Greiſley, of Drakelow, knt. (as will appear under Norton), and brought this manor to her huſband; in whoſe poſterity it long continued [3].

William Dayloſe gave eight yard-lands here to the Knights Hoſpitallers [4].

On the aid granted in 1235, we find, in the Teſta de Nevill, “De 12ma pte militis, quam Wills de Waſteneys tenet in Haſegotetorp, 2s. 6d.”

In the Itinerary of 1280, Oſgathorpe, Whitwick, Thringſton, and Swanington, anſwered collectively as one vill.

In 1293, it was found that John de Waſteneys held one quarter of a knight’s fee in Oſgathorpe, of Richard de Harecourt, deceaſed; that it was worth 100*s.* a year; and that John de Harecourt was the eldeſt ſon of the ſaid Richard [5].

In 1309, “Inter Willielmum de Waſtneys & Johannam uxorem ejus, querentes, & Johannem de Laleford, deforcientem, manerii Oſgateſthorp, & advocationis capelle, Leic’; manerii Breſingburgh, & advocationis medietatis eccleſie de Carleſby, Linc’, jus Johannis; quia omnia Willielmo & Johanne in tallis, reman’ heredibus Willielmi [6].”

In 1346, John Talbot, Simon Preſtwould, and the abbot and convent of Garendon, held lands here of the honour of Lancaſter; as did the Knights Hoſpitallers of the fee of Huntingdon and Cheſter: And in that year, Thomas de Waſtneyes (on the aid then granted for knighting Edward of Woodſtock, the king’s eldeſt ſon) was aſſeſſed 2*s.* 6*d.* for a ſixteenth part of one knight’s fee in Oſgathorpe [7]; and the prior of the hoſpital of St. John of Jeruſalem in England (on the ſame occaſion) was aſſeſſed 12*d.* for a fortieth part of one knight’s fee in Oſgathorpe, with parcel of the fee of Cheſter and Huntingdon.

In a book of fifteenths and tenths granted by the laity in 1416, Thringſton and Oſgathorpe were rated at £2. 12*s.*; and in the ſubſidy of 1445, at the ſame ſum; but an abatement was then made of 12*s.*

May 16, 1462, king Edward IV. granted divers lands in Oſgathorpe (late parcel of the poſſeſſions of John Beaumont, eſq.) to Richard Haſtings, eſq. and his heirs male [8].

In 1464, John Beaumont, eſq. attainted of high-treaſon, was ſeiſed of the manor of Oſgathorpe [9].

In 1538, —— Beaumont died ſeiſed of one meſſuage in Oſgathorpe; which he held of the prior of St. John of Jeruſalem in England, but by what ſervice was not known [10].

Lands and tenements here, late parcel of the poſſeſſions of Gracedieu priory, were granted in 1533 to ſir Humphrey Foſter, knt. in fee [11]. The ſame priory had alſo other poſſeſſions in this townſhip.

In 1548, ſir George Greſeley died ſeiſed of the manor of Oſgathorpe [12].

In 1564, there were 12 families in Oſgathorpe.

June 8, 1598, it was found that —— Beaumont, eſq. died ſeiſed of one tenement and two acres of land in Oſgathorpe; alſo of divers meſſuages in Oſgathorpe and Belton; and that they were held of the queen in capite by the ſervice of a quarter of one knight’s fee [13].

Oct. 4, 1600, it was found that Francis Whiſtones died ſeiſed of a free-rent of 20*s.* ariſing out of divers lands and tenements in Iſley Walton and Oſgathorpe [14].

March 26, 1609, it was found that ſir Henry Beaumont, knt. died ſeiſed of certain lands and tenements in Oſgathorpe [15].

The freeholders here in 1630 were, James Marſhall, Thomas Parſons, and William Robbins.

In 1655, there was collected in Oſgathorpe, Worthington, Newbold, and part of the Moor, for the relief of the poor Proteſtants in Piedmont, the ſum of £1. 7*s.* 8*d.*

In 1722, 21 freeholders polled from Oſgathorpe; but in 1775 only 13 names occur.

The lordſhip contains upwards of 800 acres; and in 1785, an act was paſſed for dividing, within this lordſhip or liberty, ſeveral open fields and ſome common and waſte land, containing about 200 acres, and a great number of incloſures held in ſeveralty; in which Francis earl of Huntingdon is deſcribed as patron of the rectory; the Rev. Theophilus Henry Haſtings, clerk, as rector, and entitled to certain glebe lands in the ſaid open fields, to a right of common or waſte land, to all the great and ſmall tithes ariſing from all the lands intended to be divided and incloſed, and to all the great and ſmall tithes of all the yards, gardens, orchards, homeſteads, and old incloſed lands, in the ſaid lordſhip or liberty of Oſgathorpe; and ſir William Gordon, knight of the Bath, Edward Dawſon, of Long Whatton, eſq. Joſeph Boultbee, eſq. Elizabeth Bainbrigge, ſpinſter, the Rev. John Alleyne, and Thomas Beer, clerks, Iſaac Dawſon, gent. Elizabeth Henſhaw, widow, and others, as entitled to all the reſidue of the lands in the ſaid fields, common and waſte land, and to the right of common upon all the ſaid lands, and to all the ſaid incloſures. An allotment is directed to be made to the lord or lady of the manor, in lieu of manerial rights and right of ſoil; and an equivalent to the rector for his glebe and right of common; with a farther allotment of a ſeventh of the open field and the proportion of a tenth of old incloſures, in full of all tithes and payments, except mortuaries, Eaſter offerings, ſurplice-fees, and tithes of ſuch old incloſures as ſhall not be compenſated for.

The preſent lord of the manor, 1802, is the Rev. Philip Story, of Lockington; though a claim to it, I am informed, is made by the hon. Richard-Auguſtus Butler-Danvers, in right of his firſt wife, only daughter of the late ſir John Danvers, bart.

---

[1] “Ardulfus tenet de H[enrico de Ferieres] 1 carucatam terræ in Oſgadtorp. In dominico habet dimidiam carucæ; & 3 villani, cum 5 bordariis, habent 1 carucam. Valuit 12 denarios; modò 5 ſolidos.” Domeſday, fol. 233. b. 1.

[2] MS. Chetwynd.

[3] Inq. 2 Edw. VI.

[4] MS. in Officio Armorum.

[5] Eſch. 21 Edw. I. No. 46. Leic.

[6] Plac. 3 Edw. II. Vide penes Firm. diverſorum Com’ temp’ Regis Edw. II. lig. 1. n. 28.

[7] Rot. Aux. 20 Edw. III.

[8] Pat. 2 Edw. IV. pars 1. m. 23.

[9] Eſch. 4 Edw. IV. N° 47. Leic.

[10] Eſch. 30 Hen. VIII.

[11] Bailiffs Accompts in the Augmentation office 31 Hen. VIII.

[12] Inq. 2 Edw. VI.

[13] Eſch. 40 Eliz.

[14] Eſch. 42 Eliz.

[15] Eſch. 4 Jac.

	£.	s.	d.
Money raiſed for the poor within the year ending at Eaſter 1776, —	70	10	0
Expended in county rates, &c.	0	0	6
—— —— on the poor, —	69	5	8
Rent of workhouſe and habitations,	2	9	6
Expended in litigations, —	0	0	0
Money raiſed for 1783, —	77	17	8
—————— 1784, —	77	3	0
—————— 1785, —	80	8	9
Medium of theſe three years,	78	9	9
——— of county expences,	3	13	8
——— of expences not relating to the poor; repairs of the church, roads, &c.	4	4	9
——— of nett annual expences,	70	11	4
——— of attending on magiſtrates,	0	16	10
——— of entertainments at meetings,	0	6	8
——— of law expences, —	0	1	2
——— of ſetting the poor to work,	0	0	0

The return made to the houſe of commons in 1786, in anſwer to an enquiry reſpecting the charitable donations in this pariſh, may be ſeen in vol. I. p. 70.

On Tueſday the 5th of April, 1791, Mrs. Darby, wife of John Darby, farmer, of Oſgathorpe, about eleven of the clock, having hung the pot over the fire for dinner, went up ſtairs, and hanged herſelf on the top of a half-headed bed. The coroner's inqueſt brought in a verdict of lunacy.

By the return to parliament in 1801, Oſgathorpe contained 64 inhabitant houſes (4 uninhabited); 74 families; 166 males, 152 females: total 318; of whom 70 were chiefly employed in agriculture, in trade, manufactures, or handicraft.

The HOSPITAL and FREESCHOOL.

Thomas Harley, eſq. erected a ſchool in this town in his life-time; and, by his laſt will, in 1670, inveſted in truſtees ſo much money as would purchaſe £100. a year in lands, for the maintenance of a ſchoolmaſter and ſix clergymens' widows.

On a ſtone over the ſchool-door is this inſcription:

"Quo moribus boniſque literis in fœliciora provehatur indoles, hanc ſcholam liberam quadraginta libris per annum donatam; nec non hoſpitalium contiguum ſexaginta libris per annum ſex pauperes clericorum viduas ad alendum, THOMAS HARLEY, gener' extruxit.
ſcholam vivus fundavit; moriens viduarum inopiæ conſuluit, utrique haud parum benignus.
In cujus charitatis memoriam lapidem hunc affixit excultum Johannes Bainbrigge, armiger, unicæ ejus filiæ maritus, A. D. MDCCXVI."

Over the door of the ſchool the arms of Harley, Or, a bend cottized Sable. Creſt, a lion's head [1].

At the time the ſchool was projected by Mr. Harley, it was intended to have added an exhibition of £8. a year in one of the univerſities; but Mrs. Harley proving afterwards pregnant, Mr. Harley had thoughts of putting the whole ſcheme aſide. On the perſuaſion, however, of his lady, he afterwards went on with the ſchool, which he endowed with lands at Whitwick, Dunnington on the Heath, and Ibſtock, to the amount of £100. a year, ſince improved by good management to rather more than £150.

The ſchool-maſter's ſalary is advanced accordingly from £40. to ſomething more than £70.; and the penſion of the 6 widows from £10. each to £25. 2*s*. 4*d*.

The ſchool is capable of receiving 50 boys; and from the foundation to the preſent time nearly 500 boys have been here educated, who probably would otherwiſe have been brought up in total ignorance.

Cornelius Smedley, clerk, who died maſter of this ſchool in 1715, was ſucceeded by the Rev. Charles Clerke; and he by Hugh Platt. The Rev. William Beer, rector of Long Whatton, was afterwards ſchool-maſter ſeveral years, till (in September 1793) he removed to Hathern. He was ſucceeded for one year by Mr. Hughes; and he by the preſent maſter, Mr. John Branſon.

The preſent truſtees are, Mr. Serjeant Bond; Rev. Philip Story, rector of Walton; John Langherſt Story, eſq. Walton; John Noone, eſq. Burton; Rev. Theophilus Haſtings, rector of Eaſt and Weſt Leke, co. Nottingham, and alſo of Belton; and the Rev. William Beer.

A view of the Hoſpital is given in Plate CXXIV.

The Rev. Mr. Alſopp, of Tollerton, left £160. for a houſe to be added for one additional widow, under the ſame regulations as thoſe of Mr. Harley: but this legacy was ſo long dormant, that, when recovered by a ſuit at law, the money amounted (after building a houſe) to £251.; which was lent upon note; and the intereſt (£10. a year) regularly paid till Michaelmas 1784; from which time nothing has been received; the ſon of the perſon to whom it was lent dying inſolvent. As it was the father's debt, the truſtees thought it not right to accept a compoſition; and the matter is now in diſpute [2].

Margaret Mead, by her laſt will, in 1705, left a rent-charge in land of £16. a year, for reading prayers on Fridays; to be diſpoſed of in bread on Fridays and Sundays; and for yearly apprenticing a boy (alternately) from Oſgathorpe, Belton, and Thringſton [3].

The CHURCH (ſee Plate CXXIV.)

dedicated to St. Mary, conſiſts of a ſmall tower, in which are two bells, ſuſpended under two arches; a nave and chancel, all of one pace.

The church, though ſmall, looks neat (though the pews are old) from being kept extremely clean.

On the South ſide of the chancel is a piſcina.

On the ſcreen which ſeparates the nave from the chancel are the king's arms, lately done by Boultbee; and on the Eaſt wall of the chancel are the arms and creſt of Haſtings earl of Huntingdon.

In the Matriculus of 1220, Oſgathorpe is deſcribed to be then in the pariſh of Whitwick, and having a chapel that was ſerved by a chaplain reſident. William the chaplain was at that period inducted parſon there; and, in right of his vicarage, received all tithes, oblations, and profits, as well of wheat as of other things ariſing from eight virgates of land; except the chief mortuary (principale teſtamentum), which, cum corporibus, belonged to the mother church [4].

A penſion of 20*s*. formerly payable out of the chapelry of Oſgathorpe, to the prior of Holland (otherwiſe Croyland), continued to be paid when it was converted into a rectory.

In 1344, the entry is, "Oſgarthorp ſolebat eſſe nunc verò eccleſia parochialis, & non taxatur [5]."

In 1552, the commiſſioners reported that the church contained,

"In primis, one challice.
It̃m, tow veſtmentes, one of ſay, and one of ſarſnet.
It̃m, on cope of bawdekyn.
It̃m, tow amyſſeys of white cloth.
It̃m, one ſurples.
It̃m, one croſſe of latyn.
It̃m, tow belles."

In 1650, the rectory was returned worth £30; and the incumbent as "ſufficient."

"I Cadwallader Vaughan doe hereby promiſe that ſoe long as I ſhall continue to be parſon of Oſgathorp, as often as I ſhall there officiate, I will read the Communion Service in the chancell att the Communion-table, as well before as after ſermon, att all ſuch times as the Rubrick requires it to be read, as well when there is noe Communion as when there is, and unleſs the contrary be injoyned by act of parliament hereafter to be made. Witneſs my hand this ſixteenth day of September, 1679. CADW. VAUGHAN [6]."

The preſent value in the king's books is £7.

The certified value is £67. 14*s*.; but it is now worth about £120. a year.

The epiſcopal procurations are, 1*s*. 3*d*.

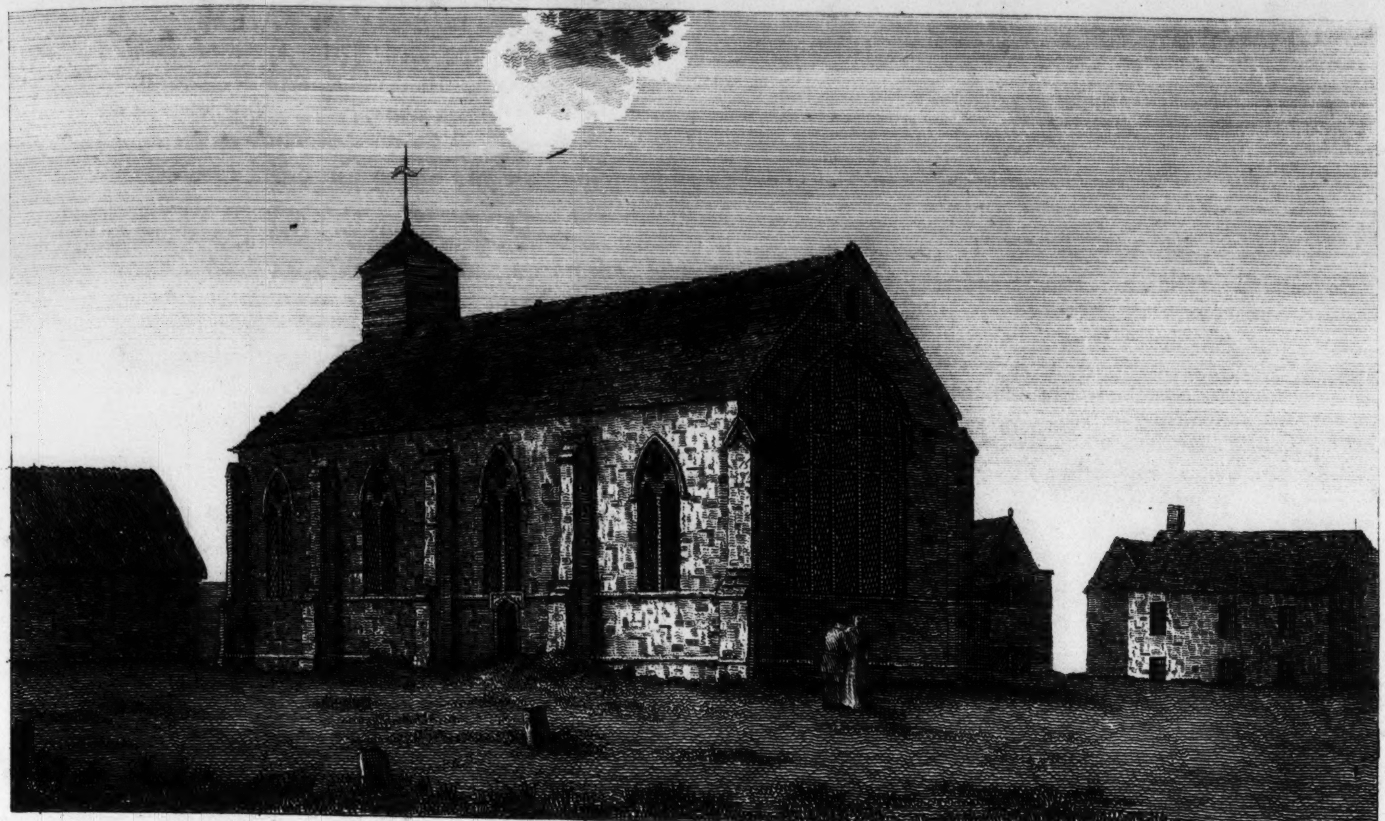
---

[1] See Plate CXXIV. fig. A.
[2] See vol. I. p. 70.
[3] A braſs plate is fixed in the church, the ſame as the one already noticed under Belton, p. 649.
[4] See vol. I. p. cviii.
[5] Ibid. p. lxv.
[6] Tranſcribed from the original by Mr. Carte.

RECTORS.

OSGATHORPE, S.E.

Vol. III. Pl. CXXIV. p. 920.



Malcolm 1798

THE HOSPITAL.

Fig. A.

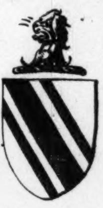


Fig. C.

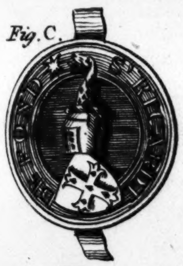

Fig. E.

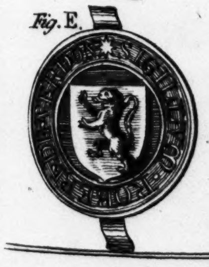

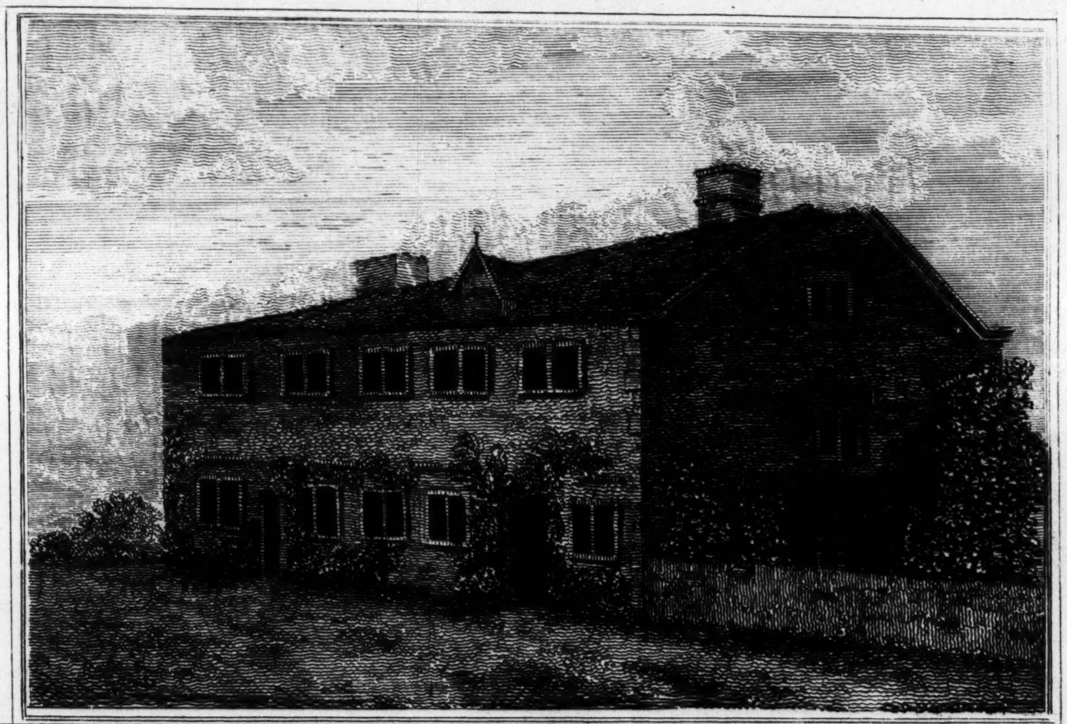

Fig. B.

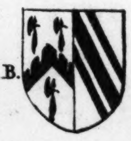

Fig. D.

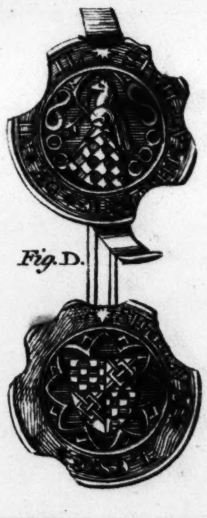
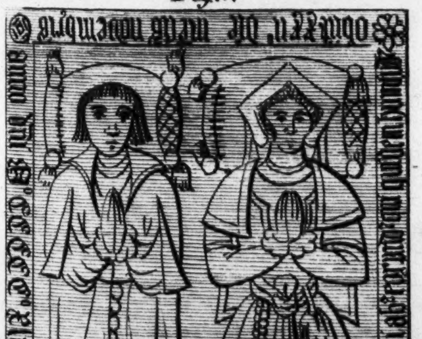


Monuments at ROTHLEY.

Fig. 1.



hic jacent humfrid Babington

Fig. 5.

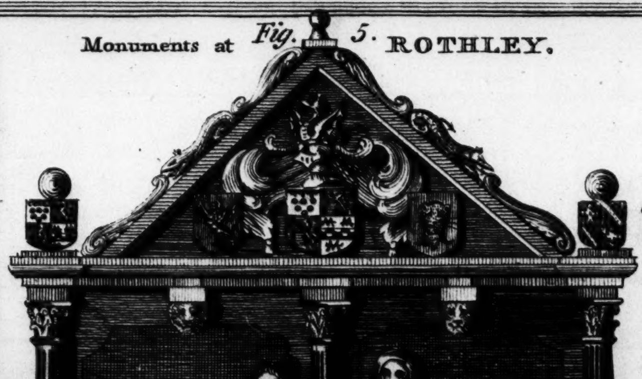


Fig. 4.

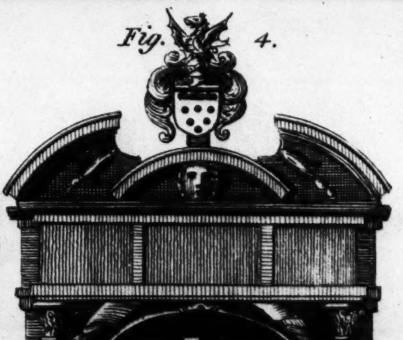

Fig. 2. Fig. 3.

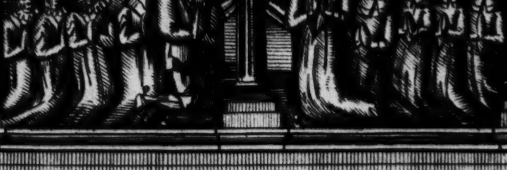
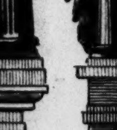
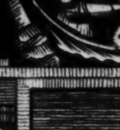


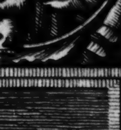
Longmate del. et sc.



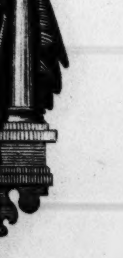
6



7



8



9

RECTORS.	PATRONS.
William the chaplain preſented to Angodeſthorpe in 1224.	William de Waſteneys.
Johannes de Belton, 1244.
Thomas de Kirkeby, 1265.
Richard de Stanton, 1274.
Eccleſia de Holegathorpe eſt de parochiâ de Whitwyk[1], 1344.
John Barſalem, 1534.
John Roſs[2], M. A. rector about 1640.	Henry fifth earl of Huntingdon.
Cadwallader Vaughan, Sept. 26, 1679; died Dec. 27, 1728.	Theophilus, ſeventh earl of Huntingdon.
Samuel Holbrook, 1730; died Nov. 12, 1748.	Theophilus, ninth earl of Huntingdon.
Edward Ellis[3], B. A. April 1, 1749; reſigned 1764.	Francis, tenth earl of Huntingdon.
Theophilus Henry Haſtings[4], M.A. July 4, 1764; reſigned 1796.
George Holcombe, March 8, 1796.	Francis earl of Moira.

MONUMENTAL INSCRIPTIONS.

In the chancel.

On the South ſide is a monument of black marble, with the arms of Harley, Or, a bend cottized Sable; (Plate CXXIV. fig. A.) and the following inſcription:

"M. S.
Near to this place lieth the body of THOMAS HARLEY, of Oſgathorpe, gentleman, a juſt, charitable, and good man, a loyal ſubject, and a ſound Chriſtian, according to the profeſſion of the Church of England; to the doctrine and diſcipline whereof he was always religiouſly conformable.
The ſaid Thomas Harley empowered
Francis Harley and John Smith, both of Oſgathorpe, as truſtees to that purpoſe, to found and erect a free-ſchool and almſhouſe in Oſgathorpe aforeſaid, at the charge of the ſaid Thomas Harley. To which foundations the ſaid Thomas Harley gave theſe endowments following:
viz. £40. per ann. for ever to the free-ſchool, and £60. per ann. for ever to the ſaid almſhouſe for the maintenance of ſix miniſters widows therein.
He departed this life moſt piouſly
17th of January, 1670.
To the memory of the aforeſaid Mr. Thomas Harley, his ſaid truſtees erected this monument, that poſterity may have the benefit of his good example."

On a white mural tablet on the North wall:

"In a vault beneath lie the remains of Sarah,
the wife of Thomas Beer, clerk, ſecond daughter of Daniel and Rachel Roulſton, of Barton Fields, in the pariſh of Barton Blount, and county of Derby.
She fell aſleep October the 12th, A. D. 1778,
in the 34th year of her age.
Alſo with her is depoſited the body of Roulſton Beer, only child of the above Thomas and Sarah Beer. He was born on the 7th day of October, A. D. 1778;
and his ſpan of life did not exceed 11 hours.
She was the good Samaritan."

On an upright ſlate againſt the Eaſt wall:

"In memory of the Rev. Mr. Charles Clerke[5], who, with abilities, learning, and integrity, that might have done honour to himſelf as well as ſervice to the world,
lived and died in the obſcurity
of a country retirement.
So much do exterior accidents contribute to raiſe or depreſs
the fortunes of particular men.
He died Sept. the 16th, MDCCXXXV[6], aged XLIV years."

On a flat ſlab of white marble are the following arms and inſcription:

Argent, chevron embattled between three battle-axes Sable, Bainbrigge; impaling Harley; fig. B.

"Here lieth the body of Mary Bainbrigge, relict of John Bainbrigge, of Lockington,
in the county of Leiceſter, eſq.
by whom ſhe had three ſons and three daughters.
She was the only daughter and heireſs of Thomas Harley, of Oſgathorpe, gentleman, the pious founder of the ſchool and hoſpital.
She died the 4th of June, A. D. 1724, ætatis 56."

Within the altar-rails:

1. "Cadwalladerus Cadwalladeri Vaughan, hujuſce eccleſiæ rectoris,
& Annæ uxoris, filius natu ſecundus; obſequio nulli.
Obiit 4 id. Jan. A. D. 1699, æt. 13."

2. "Here lieth the body of Cornelius Smedley, clerk, and maſter of the free-ſchool, who departed this life the 19th of March, A. D. 1715,
in the 67th year of his age."

3. "Here lieth the body of Cadwallader Vaughan, rector of this pariſh 49 years.
He married Anna, the daughter of John Wightman, of Peckleton, gent.
by whom he had ſix ſons and four daughters.
Ob. 27 Dec. A. D. 1728, ætat. ſuæ 83.
In the ſame grave lieth his ſon David."

On three ſmall ſtones in the chancel floor:

1. "Here lieth the body of Francis, the firſt ſon of Francis Harley, gent. by Dorcas his wife, who departed this life the 9th day of Auguſt, 1680, aged 4 months.

2. "Here lieth the body of Thomas Harley, their ſecond ſon.
He departed this life the 18th day of March, 1682, aged 1 year and 2 months.

3. "Here lieth the body of Francis Harley, their third ſon, who departed this life
the 30th day of September, 1685, aged 5 months."

---

[1] See p. 920, where in col. 1. l. penult. read "ſolebat eſſe capellos."

[2] Mr. Roſs, by the intereſt of ſome friends, was ſaved from a formal ſequeſtration; but was miſerably harraſſed for many years, and often forced to abſcond. He was a man of good life and learning. Walker, p. 422.

[3] Mr. Ellis was a native of Enfield in Middleſex; and brought up and educated by the Huntingdon family, firſt at Weſtminſter ſchool, and afterward at Emmanuel college, Cambridge; B. A. there 1734. He was preſented, about 1738, by Theophilus earl of Huntingdon, to the rectory of Markfield, co. Leiceſter; about 1750, by the late Francis earl of Huntingdon, to the rectory of Oſgathorpe; about 1765, by the laſt-mentioned earl, to the vicarage of Ledſham in Yorkſhire, which he held ſix years; and, in June 1770, by the ſame noble patron, on the death of Granville Wheeler, D. D. (who had married lady Katharine Haſtings, his lordſhip's aunt) to the valuable rectory of Leke in Nottinghamſhire, now worth, it is ſuppoſed, full £600. a year, which he held upwards of 24 years; and where he died, of a ſtroke of the palſy, in his 84th year, March 17, 1795. This worthy man's whole life was ſpent in doing good. He expended little upon himſelf, but gave away almoſt his whole income in charity. He poſſeſſed a very extenſive knowledge, and was a ſcholar far above the common ſtandard. He has left behind him an epiſtolary correſpondence which would reflect honour on any literary publication. Though brought up to the church, he was an excellent phyſician, having made phyſick his ſtudy for many years; by which he relieved ſome hundreds of poor, in his advice and medicines, yearly, as he never took any gratuity on that account from any one. His pious and exemplary life, his extenſive charity and goodneſs of heart, will be long remembered in the neighbourhood where he lived. See his epitaph, p. 922. The Rev. Mr. Prior, vicar of Aſhby de la Zouch, and John Herrick, eſq. of Beaumanor, were his executors.

[4] Rector alſo of Belton 1763—1795. See ſome particulars of him in p. 647.

[5] See the epitaph on his wife, who died in 1745, æt. 49, under Belton, p. 647. She was daughter of Matthew Toone; of which family a pedigree is given in p. 650. Two of their daughters (Mary and Elizabeth) died young. The third, Catharine, (married to Hugh Platt, gent.) ſurvived her huſband, and was living in 1780; ſee p. 647.

[6] This ſeems to have been originally MDCCXXXVII; and to have been altered to MDCCXXXV.

On another flat ſtone:

"Mrs. Elizabeth Holbrooke, 1737.
Here alſo lieth the body of the Rev. Mr. Samuel Holbrooke, rector of Oſgathorpe, who died the 12th of November, 1748, aged 60."

On an upright ſlate:

"To the memory of Sarah Villiers, who died March 21, 1758, aged 69 years."

In the nave, on flat ſtones:

1. "Margaret, only daughter of John Marſhall, gent.
married, firſt, to Edward Palmer, attorney;
ſince to Charnell Mead, eſq.
died June 24, 1707."

2. "Here lieth interred the body of Mary, relict of the Rev. William Robinſon, late of Newark, in the county of Nottingham.
She died the 3d of July, 1748, aged 55 years."

In the church-yard.

On three altar-tombs, nearly periſhed:

1. "Here lieth the body of Francis Harley, gent.
who departed this life the 19th day of October, 1715,
aged 76.
He had, by Dorcas his wife, three ſons, who died young; and three daughters, Mary, Sarah, and Elizabeth, now living."

2. "Here lies the body of Dorcas Harley, wife of Francis Harley, gent.
who departed this life the 14th of September, 1718,
aged 70."

3. "Under this ſtone lieth Elizabeth, one of the daughters of Henry Peach, of Derby, gent.
and Sarah his wife,
who departed this life the fifteenth of February, 1732, aged 9 years and 5 months.
Here alſo lies the body of Sarah Peach, mother of the above-ſaid Elizabeth, who departed this life the 8th day of April, 1737,
aged 53 years.
She was one of the daughters of Francis Harley,
of this town, gentleman.
Here alſo lieth the body of Sarah Peach, ſecond daughter of the aboveſaid Henry Peach, who died June 5, 1738, aged 25 years.
Here alſo lieth the body of Henry Peach, of Derby, gent. who departed this life the 23d of February, 1752,
in the 70th year of his age."

On a ſtone againſt the North wall of the church:

"To the memory of Suſanna, relict of Giles Rainsford, clerk, A.B. (and Ann their daughter).
She was a native of the province of Virginia in America;
and, after a reſidence of 42 years at this place,
ſhe died the 30th of November, 1779, aged 82 years."

On a ſtone againſt the South wall:

"Elizabeth, relict of John Brailsford, late rector of Kirby, co. Nottingham, died July 31, 1775, in her 75th year.
Her daughter Rachel, "after a life moſt exemplary for filial and ſocial duties," died January 3, 1790, aged 58."

On upright ſtones:

"Thomas Clarke and Sarah his wife.
He died March 26, 1725-6;
ſhe died April 14, 1717,
each aged 88."

"Here lieth the body of William Boultbee, gent.
who died Oct. 3, 1757, aged 9[illegible].
And near this place lie the bodies of Ruth his wife, who died Aug. 12, 1738, aged 73; and Ann their daughter, who died Sept. 22, 1755, aged 49."

{ Thomas Boultbee, late of Stordon Grange, gent.
died July 10, 1785, aged 61.
Jane Boultbee, died April 2, 1789, aged 57.
Robert Tatnell, died May 8, 1777, aged 58.
Sarah Tatnell, died April 18, 1790, aged 74.
Timothy Churchill, died Dec. 14, 1738, aged 66.
Elizabeth Churchill, died Dec. 21, 1741, aged 76.
James Churchill, died Sept. 7, 1770, aged 64.
Sarah, relict of Samuel Johnſon and daughter of
Timothy Churchill, died Dec. 2, 1771, aged 70.
Thomas Everard, died Nov. 19, 1794, aged 69.
Hannah Everard, died Dec. 1, 1793, aged 58.

On a handſome monument on the North ſide of the chancel in Weſt Leke church, co. Notts:

"Beneath are interred the remains of
the Reverend Edward Ellis[1], chaplain to the late right honourable Francis earl of Huntingdon, and 24 years rector of this pariſh.
A man of ſound judgement, extenſive knowledge,
and inflexible integrity;
naturally humane, and unaffectedly munificent.
His ear was ever open to the voice of diſtreſs;
his hand ever ſtretched out to its relief.
His character was truly apoſtolick,
in reſpect to the purity of his life,
the piety of his ſentiments,
and the general practice of charity and benevolence.
He quitted this life,
in ſure and certain hope of a better,
the 16th of March, 1795,
aged 83.
Mrs. Elizabeth Evans, of Burton, in the county of Lincoln,
cauſed this monument to be erected as a tribute of reſpect juſtly due to the memory of exalted Virtue."

---

[1] He was buried by the ſide of his old friend Robert Hemington, eſq. (ſon of lieutenant-colonel Hemington of the firſt regiment of foot-guards), who was elected from Weſtminſter-ſchool to Chriſt Church, Oxford, in 1730; M. A. there 1746; and, after declining the maſterſhip of Weſtminſter-ſchool, was tutor to the late earl of Huntingdon, and lived at Donington Park till within a few years of his death, which happened Dec. 30, 1774. He was buried at Weſt Leke, where his graveſtone is thus inſcribed:

"Robert Hemington, M. A.
ſon of lieutenant colonel Hemington of the firſt regiment of foot-guards, and gentleman-uſher to his late Majeſty, departed this life the 30th of December, 1774, aged ſixty-four."

On the North wall of the ſaid church is erected a monument, with the following inſcription:

"Robertus Hemington, vir memoriâ dignus,
ſi quid dignum habent
Scientia & Virtus.
Erat enim
literarum imprimis ſtudioſus, et omni ferè genere doctrinæ cultus.
Ingenium
dulce, facile, eratque excelſum;
judicio tamen acri & certo,
urbanitate, moribuſque ſuaviſſimis,
feliciter temperatum.
Bonitate, modeſtiâ, & ſapientiâ prope ſingulari præditus, totam ſanè vitam ſanctiſſimè & honeſtiſſimè inſtituit.
Mirâ temperantiâ, patientiâ, conſtantiâ, longam & pertinacem valetudinem pertulit.
Confectus tandem cruciatu dolorum, obiit anno MDCCLXXIV°, menſis Septembris die XXX°, ætatis LXIV°."

Mr. Hemington left one ſon and one daughter. The ſon, a clergyman, a ſhort time ſince was preſented to the living of Thorp Arok in Yorkſhire by the late earl of Huntingdon. He married the daughter of Thomas Fiſher, eſq. of Caſtle Donington. Miſs Hemington, his ſiſter, married Mr. Averne, ſon of Mr. Averne, of Thringſton, near Cole Orton.

Pedigree

Pedigree of HARLEY, of OSGATHORPE[1], ODDESTON, and LOUGHBOROUGH; continued from the Viſitation of 1683.

Arms: Or, a bend cottized, Sable. Creſt, a lion's head; Plate CXXIV. fig. A.

Francis Harley, of Oſgathorpe, died about 1658.=Ruth Spence.

1. Francis Harley, of Oſgathorpe, died about 1659.=Sarah, dau. of James Marſhall, of Oſgathorpe.

Joan, widow of Ralph Olive, citiz. of London; firſt wife. Mary, widow of Will. Kempſter, citizen of London; ſecond wife.=2. Thomas Harley, citizen of London; and of Oſgathorpe, where he founded an hoſpital for 6 clergymen's widows, and endowed it with £60. a year; as alſo a free-ſchool, endowed with £60.; he died Jan. 17, 1670, æt. 56.=Mary, dau. and coheir of William Noone, of Walton on the Woulds, widow of Sam. Blount, rector of Walton; third wife.

3. William Harley, of the borough of Leic.
4. Nicholas Harley, citizen of London.

Ellen, marr. to Tho. Wright, of Bredon; and had a daughter, the wife of John Smith, of Oſgathorpe.
Anne, marr. to Geo. Barton, of Bagworth.

Mary, only child and heir, born Aug. 4, 1668; died June 4, 1724.=John Bainbrigge, eſq. of Lockington; died Oct. 1, 1717, æt. 60.

William Bainbrigge, eſq. died Oct. 10, 1736, æt. 51.=Mary Lacock, died April 8, 1785, æt. 92.

Three ſons and two daughters; ſee before, under Lockington, p. 882.

1. Francis Harley, of Oſgathorpe, gent. died Oct. 19, 1715, æt. 76.=Dorcas Harwar, of Stoke juxta Coventry.

2. William Harley, of Oddeſton; living 1683.=Mary . . . .

Ruth, wife of Thomas Bodle, of Markfield.

1. Francis Harley, of Oddeſton, born 1678.=Sarah Tilecote, of Nailſton, d. ſ. p.

2. William, b. 1679.

3. Thomas Harley, of Market Boſworth, and Diſeworth, b. 1681; died at Loughborough Jan. 8, 1766.= . . . Matthews, of Sutton Cheney.

1. Francis, died Aug. 9, 1680, aged 4 months.
2. Thomas, died March 18, 1682, aged 14 months.
3. Francis, died Sept. 30, 1685, aged 5 months.
1. Mary, married . . . . Alleſtree, of . . . . . .

2. Sarah, died April 8, 1737, aged 53.=Henry Peach, of Derby, gent. died Feb. 23, 1752, aged 70.

1. A daughter.
2. Sarah, died June 5, 1738, aged 25.
3. Elizabeth, d. in February 1732, aged 9 years and 5 months.

3. Elizabeth, married at Lockington, June 24, 1718.=John Vaughan, of Leiceſter.

Harley Vaughan[3], eſq. made ſerjeant at law May 17, 1772; died at Leiceſter, ſenior ſerjeant, July 16, 1800, aged more than 70.

1. William Harley, d. 1791, aged 72.=Sarah Hackett, of Nailſton.

2. Francis.
3. Joſeph.
4. Thomas.
Anne[2].
Mary.
Elizabeth.
Priſcilla.
Sarah.

1. William Harley, of Loughborough, 1802.=Urſula Ella, dau. of John Ella, of Loughborough.

1. Edward, æt. 7, 1802.
2. John, dead.
3. William, æt. 6 months.
Anne.
Mary.

2. Francis Harley, of Loughborough, 1802.=Suſannah Lacy, dau. of Thomas Lacy, of Hoton.

1. William, æt. 11, 1802.
2. Francis, æt. 9.
3. Thomas, æt. 5.
4. Joſeph, æt. 3.
5. James, æt. 1.
Suſannah, æt. 7.

3. Thomas Harley, unmarr.

Sarah.
Elizabeth.
Frances.

* * *

Pedigree of PALMER, of OSGATHORPE; and of the NEWARK, LEICESTER.

(Continued from the Viſitation of 1682.)

Arms: Chequy, Argent and Azure; a chief Gules[4]; Plate CXXV. fig. 1.

Henry Palmer, a captain at ſea in the reign of queen Elizabeth; deſcended out of Glouceſterſhire; reſided ſome time at Watton in Norfolk.= . . . . . .

1. Edward Palmer[5], of Nayton, Norfolk, died about 1630, æt. circa 55.=Philippa, dau. of Henry Armiger, of Norfolk.

2. Chriſtopher Palmer, of London.= . . . . .

One only daughter and heir, wife of . . . . Pretty, of London, an officer in the Court of Wards.

1. Edward Palmer, of the Borough of Leiceſter, æt. 68 in 1682.=Anne, dau. of Tho. Benington, of Leiceſter, gent.

2. Thomas, died unmaried in Ireland about 1675.
3. Roger, went to Virginia, and afterwards to New England.
4. Robert Palmer, of London; married, and left iſſue.

1. Jane.
2. Anne; firſt married to John Townſhend of Halſtead; and after to Henry Palmer, of Norfolk, attorney at law.
3. Mary, married to Peter Dey, of London.

1. Edward Palmer, of Oſgathorpe, clerk of the peace for the county of Leiceſter, æt. 44 ferè in 1682; firſt huſband.=Margaret, ſole dau. and heir of John Marſhall, of Oſgathorpe, died June 24, 1707.=Charnell Mead, eſq. ſecond huſband.

Anne, died an infant.

2. Thomas, died an infant.
4. Henry, æt. 24, unmarried in 1682.

3. Thomas Palmer, of Leiceſter, æt. circa 34 ann. in 1682, and then under-ſheriff of Leiceſterſhire.=Anna, dau. of Hugh Watts, of the Newark, Leiceſter.

Edward, æt. circa 6.

1. Anne.=William Roberts, rector of Carleton Curlieu.

Benjamin, æt. 18.

2. Philippa.=Michael Wrightſon, of Oſbaſton.

Philippa, æt. circa 15.

3. Elizabeth,
4. Mary,
5. Jane,
} living unmarried in 1682.

---

[1] This account was exhibited by Mr. John Smith, of Oſgathorpe; whoſe wife is daughter of Thomas Wright by Ellen Harley before-mentioned; which John Smith is one of the guardians to Mary, daughter and heir of Thomas Harley above-mentioned.

JOHN SMITH, Aug. 3, 1683.

[2] Anne, daughter of Thomas Harley of Diſeworth, baptized at Lockington May 30, 1726. Pariſh Regiſter.

[3] Originally clerk to an attorney at Leiceſter, where he practiſed a little while; then was called to the bar; practiſed as a barriſter ſome time; then became a hoſier; afterwards reſumed the law; was called to the degree of a ſerjeant in 1772; and lived to be the ſenior ſerjeant. He was of ſtrict integrity, had profeſſional knowledge, ſome learning, and little practice.

[4] Theſe arms were exhibited by Mr. Edward Palmer ſenior in 1682.

[5] In 1625 he was one of the curſitors of the Chancery, and ſtyled eſquire in the pardon granted to him by king Charles I, under the great ſeal of that date; and is there written of Ceſterton in Norfolk.

PACKINGTON,

in antient writings called Pachinetone, is a large village, ſituated partly in Leiceſterſhire and partly in Derbyſhire[1]. It is little more than one mile from Aſhby de la Zouch, by which it is bounded on the North and on the Eaſt, by Normanton and Swebſton on the South, and by Meaſham and Willeſley in Derbyſhire on the South-weſt and Weſt. In the eccleſiaſtical diviſion of the county of Leiceſter it is within the deanry of Akeley. Of the Derbyſhire part of this lordſhip, no ſeparate notice is taken in Domeſday-book.

Leofric earl of Mercia gave this manor, with the advowſon of the church, to the abbey of St. Mary at Coventry, founded by him in 1043[2]. At the general ſurvey, that abbey held eight ploughlands and a half in Pachinetone, worth twenty ſhillings. In the demeſne was one plough; and three villans, with a prieſt and one bordar and five ſocmen, had three ploughs. There were three acres of meadow, and a mill of twelve-pence value[3].

On a vacancy of the abbey of Coventry, in 1095, Robert de Limeſy, biſhop of Cheſter, obtained not only the cuſtody of it, but alſo leave to remove thither his epiſcopal ſee; whereupon that monaſtery became a cathedral priory, and the prior and convent were one of the chapters to the biſhops of this dioceſe, many of whom ſtyled themſelves biſhops of Coventry only[4].

In the year 1200, the following entry occurs of a proceeding at law;

"Duellum inter Warinum de Snipſton, & priorem de Coventray, pro octo carucatis terre in Pakington. Milites qui ferebant recordum duelli dicunt quod Warinus in brevi de recto obtulit verſus eum quod Walterus Groſſus, avus ſuus, ſeiſitus fuit de illis octo carucatis terre, cum pertinentiis, tempore regis Henrici patris regis Johannis, ut de jure hereditatis[5]."

In the Itinerary of 1280, that part of Packington which was in the county of Leiceſter anſwered collectively with Snibſton as one vill.

In 1340, it was found that Henry de Beaumont earl of Boghan held, at his death, one quarter of a knight's fee in Packington, of the king in capite, as of the right of Alice his wife[6].

In 1346, the prior of Coventry (on the aid then granted for knighting Edward of Woodſtock, the king's eldeſt ſon) was aſſeſſed 40*s.* for one knight's fee in Packington and Snipſton, whereof one third part in Snipſton, parcel of the honour of Cheſter[7].

In a book of fifteenths and tenths granted by the laity in 1416, Packington was rated at £3. 1*s.* 10*d.*; and in the ſubſidy of 1445, at the ſame ſum; but an abatement was then made of 7*s.* 8*d.*; Snipſton at £1. 5*s.* and 5*s.* 4*d.* abated.

At the diſſolution of religious houſes, the lordſhip of Packington was granted by the crown to the family of Haſtings[8].

In 1564, there were 38 families in Packington.

Sept. 22, 1597, Henry Haſtings earl of Huntingdon died ſeiſed of the manor of Packington; held of the queen by the ſervice of a twentieth part of one knight's fee[9].

Sept. 30, 1607, George Haſtings earl of Huntingdon died ſeiſed of the manor of Packington; held of the king by the like ſervice[10].

In 1655, there was collected in Packington, for the relief of the poor Proteſtants in Piedmont, the ſum of £2. 8*s.* 1*d.*

In 1722, five freeholders polled from this pariſh; but in 1775, only one name occurs.

In the noble family of Haſtings this lordſhip continued till the death of Francis the laſt earl of Huntingdon in 1789. It is now the property of major-general Charles Haſtings, under a ſettlement made on his marriage with Parnel, only child of the late Thomas Abney, eſq. of Willeſley-hall. He takes alſo Mr. Abney's adjoining lordſhip of Willeſley, and other eſtates; but ſeldom, if ever, reſides in the country.

The lordſhip contains between 2 and 3000 acres, of old incloſure. There is ſome good meadow land, and ſome tolerably good plough land.

Here is a ſmall rivulet of water, in which are pebbles of great value. Great numbers have been got; and are ſtill getting, though in leſs plenty. They are made uſe of in London, Birmingham, and Sheffield; and are excellent for jewellers, lapidaries, and all manner of poliſhing. A ſmall ſtone is ſometimes ſold for 5*s.*

In June, 1764, the houſe of a farmer here received conſiderable damage by lightning.

On the 4th of February, 1790, about eleven o'clock at night, there was a diſturbance among the bells. When they came to ring the great bell, it was found to be cracked; which was ſuppoſed to have been done by lightning.

By the return made to Parliament in 1801, from the county of Leiceſter, Packington and Snibſton contained 84 houſes, inhabited by 88 families; conſiſting of 223 males, 216 females; total 439; of whom 269 were chiefly employed in agriculture, and 169 in trade, manufactures, &c.

In the Derbyſhire part of the pariſh, were 30 houſes; containing 56 males, 68 females; total 124; of whom 86 were chiefly employed in agriculture, and 30 in trade, manufactures, &c.

DONATIONS.

Anno 1664, Robert Breedon gave a cottage in Packington, and certain lands, ſince incloſed, which contain 7 acres, 2 roods, 38 perches, for the uſe of the ſaid pariſh for ever, for repairing the highways, bridges, and cauſe-ways.

One of the earls of Huntingdon, on the incloſure of the lordſhip of Packington, gave a certain piece of land, called Allowance Cloſe, containing 16 acres, 1 rood, 12 perches, for the uſe of nine poor widows of the ſaid pariſh for ever.

Suſannah Kiddier left ten ſhillings a year for ever, to iſſue out of lands in Doniſthorpe, now belonging to ſir Robert Burdett, bart. for the uſe of the poor of this pariſh, to be diſtributed annually on St. Thomas's day.

The ſum of 40*s.* was left, by ſome perſon not now known, to be lent to a poor tradeſman, free of intereſt, for three years.

Richard Harriſon, } Churchwardens
Richard Dunſthorpe, } 1784.

---

[1] "Packington partim in Leiceſtrenſi, partim in Derbienſi comitatu." Wyrley, MS.

[2] Regiſtrum prioratûs Coventrie penès Rememb. Regis in Scaccario.

[3] Abbatia de Coventrey tenet 8 carucatas terræ & dimidiam in Pachintone. In dominico eſt 1 caruca; & 3 villani, cum preſbytero & 1 bordario & 5 ſochmannis, habent 3 carucas. Ibi molinum de 12 denariis, & 3 acræ prati. Valet 20 ſolidos." Domeſday, fol. 231. a. 2.

[4] Tanner, Notitia Monaſtica.

[5] Placita de anno 2 regis Johannis de diverſis Rotulis Notarum in Receptu Scaccarii, Rot. 24.

[6] Eſch. 14 Edw. III. N° 24. Leic.

[7] Rot. Aux. 20 Edw. III.

[8] Ex autographo penès Decan. & Capit. Lincoln.

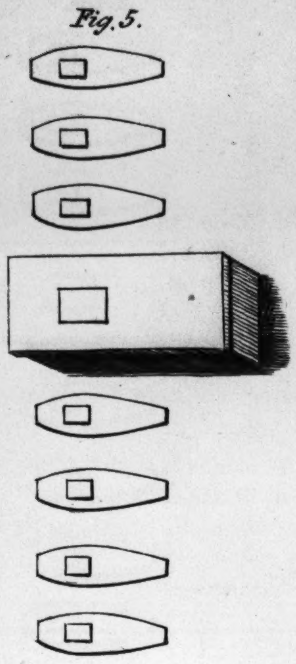
[9] Eſch. 39 Eliz.

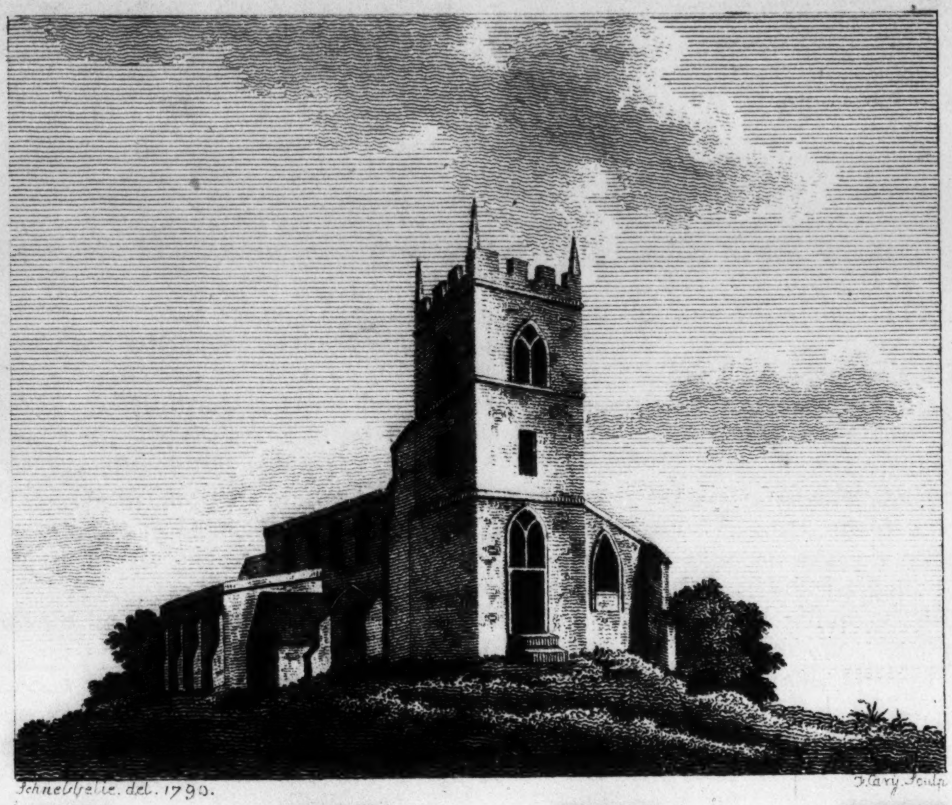
[10] Eſch. 5 Jac. I.

Vol. III. Pl. CXXV. p. 923.

PACKINGTON, N.W.

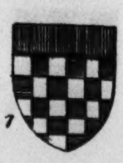
Fig. 5.



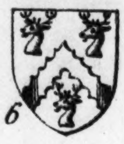


Schnebbelie. del. 1790.

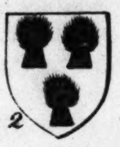
J. Cary Sculp.



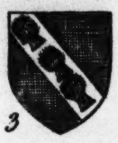
1



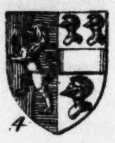
6



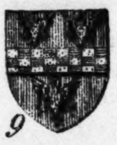
2



3

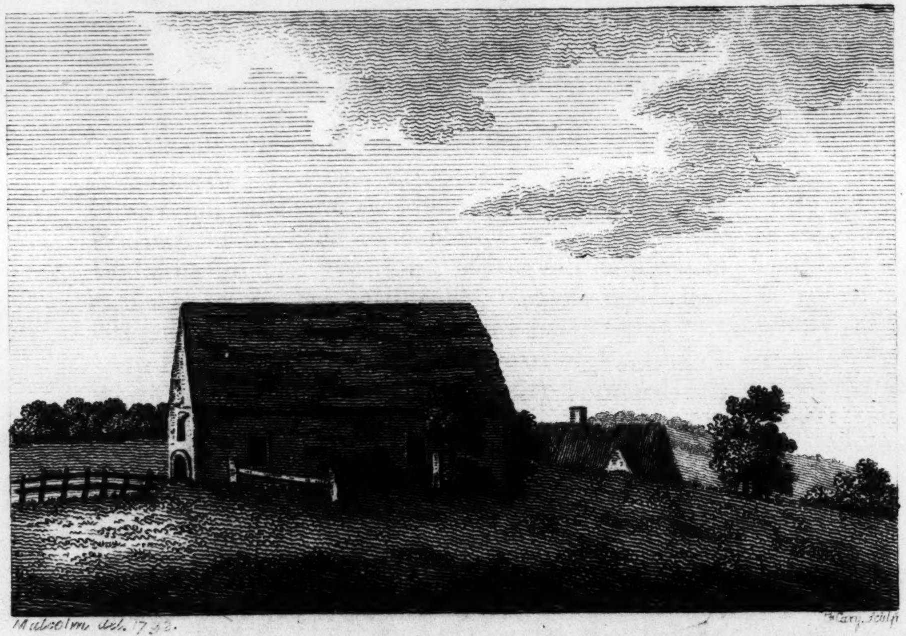


4



9

SNIBSTON, N.



J. Malcolm del. 1792.

J. Cary sculp.

Fig. 7.

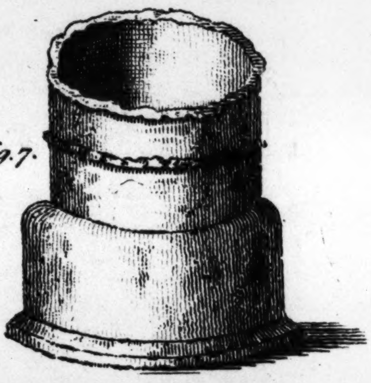


Fig. 8.

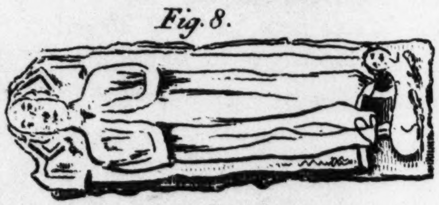
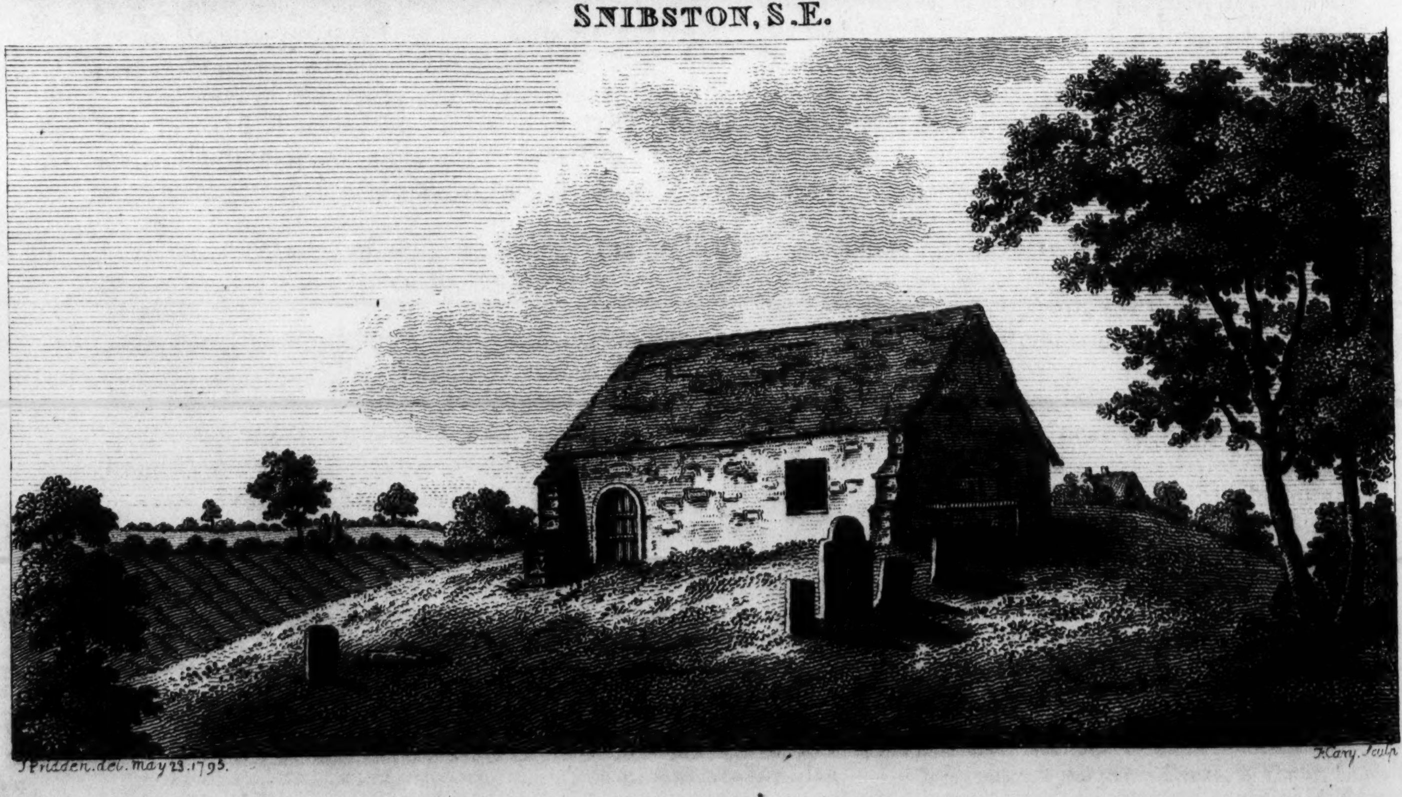


SNIBSTON, S.E.



J. Pridden. del. May 23. 1793.

J. Cary Sculp.

	£.	s.	d.	Money raiſed in the Derbyſhire part of Packington for the ſame period.	£.	s.	d.
Money raiſed for the poor, of that part of Packington which is in the county of Leiceſter, including Snibſton, within the year ending at Eaſter 1776,	94	2	8	———	28	19	9
Expended in county-rates, &c.	0	0	0	———	20	16	10
——— on the poor, —	94	2	8	———	0	12	0
Rent of habitations and workhouſe,	5	16	6	———	19	6	6
Expended in litigations, —	0	16	2	———	0	0	0
Money raiſed for 1783, —	60	7	7	———	38	13	0
——————— 1784, —	55	12	1	———	19	6	6
——————— 1785, —	47	8	1	———	1	17	10
Medium of theſe three years,	55	2	7	———	2	7	9
——— of county expences, —	0	0	0	———	15	0	11
——— of expences not relating to the poor; repairs of the church, roads, &c.	0	0	0	———	0	4	6
——— of nett annual expences,	55	2	7	———	0	0	0
——— of attending on magiſtrates,	0	8	7	———	1	16	5
——— of entertainments at meetings,	0	18	11	———	0	0	0
——— of law expences, —	1	0	10	———	0	0	0
——— of ſetting the poor to work,	0	0	0	———	0	0	0

The return made to the houſe of commons in 1786, in anſwer to an enquiry reſpecting the charitable donations in the Leiceſterſhire part of this pariſh, may be ſeen in vol. I. p. 71.

The CHURCH, (ſee Plate CXXV.)

dedicated to The Holy Rood, conſiſts of a tower ſteeple, in which are four bells; a ſmall chancel, nave, and two ailes, ſeparated by three arches. The inſide is neatly pewed; and, in the nave is a new loft.

The font is old, plain, and octagon.

In the Matriculus of 1220[1], Packington is deſcribed to be under the patronage of the prior of Coventry; the rector William de Caſtell, inſtituted by Hugh formerly biſhop of Lincoln, and paying to the prior ten ſhillings ab antiquo. The chapel of Snipeſton had a reſident chaplain from the mother church.

The church was appropriated to the priory of Coventry, in 1269, by Richard de Graveſend, then biſhop of Lincoln. The vicarage was then endowed with two yard-lands belonging to the church of Packington, and one yard-land belonging to the chapel of Snipſton, with all buildings, and all obventions of the church and chapel aforeſaid, and all tithes there; the vicar to ſerve the ſaid chapel with a ſufficient chaplain (the prior to have all tithe corn); and he to repair the chancels of the ſaid church and chapel; to bear alſo all charges pertaining to the ſaid church and chapel. The original of this agreement is to be found among the records at Lincoln[2].

In the reign of king Edward III. the chapels of Packington and Stretton, in this county, were given, by Richard Malore, of Kirkby, to the monks of Thelesford in Warwickſhire[3].

In 1344, the procurations were, 7*s.* 6¾*d.*; the rectory was taxed at 28 marks, and paid 2*s.* for Peterpence. The prior of Coventry had alſo a penſion from it of half a mark.

Mr. Burton mentions theſe arms at Packington, fig. 2, 3.

Argent, three garbs Or.

Sable, on a bend Argent, three garbs Gules; Pakington. Mr. Wyrley adds, dominus de Snipſton.

Among the payments of the cathedral church of Coventry in the year 1534, are enumerated the following articles:

To the biſhop of Lincoln, for the procurations of the churches of Packington and Scraptoft, 35*s.*; to the abbot of Leiceſter, for the appropriation of thoſe churches, 20*s.*; and to the archdeacon of Leiceſter, for the ſynodals, 13*s.* 8*d.*[4]

In 1552, the commiſſioners reported that the church of Packington contained,

"In primis, three belles.

Itm̄, two veſtmentes, on of ſatyn of Burges, and another of . . . . .

Itm̄, one cope of ſatyn of Burges.

Itm̄, one challice.

Itm̄, one croſs of maſtlyn."

In 1650, the rectory was returned worth 30*l.*; the vicarage 60*l.*; the incumbent as "ſufficient;" and, it is added, "Snibſton chapel was ſerved by the ſame man."

The value in the king's books is £5. 15*s.* 1*d.* "in pecuniâ, cum manſ'."

The preſent value is about £300. a year.

The epiſcopal procurations are, for the rectory 2*s.* 11*d.*; the vicarage 1*s.* 2*d.*

Beſides the church, there are two places of worſhip; one a Calviniſt meeting-houſe; the other a Methodiſt.

RECTORS.	PATRONS.
W. de Caſtell 1220. Simon de Sancte Maino, 1224.	Prior and convent of Coventry.
William de Pakinton, 1230.	Robert Mitton.
VICARS.
Robert Gerlaund, in whoſe time the vicarage was endowed, 1269.
Robert Dixley, 1534.
Thomas Leeſon, vicar; died 1539.
—— Preſton[5], 1556.
William Darling[6], buried at Clifton, March 12, 1612.
Thomas Peſtell[7], 1613; reſigned to his ſon,
Thomas Peſtell junior; ejected 164 . .
William Smith[8], ejected 1662.
Thomas Peſtell junior; reſtored 1662; died 1690.
Ithiel Smart[9], June 1690. John Hitchcock, June 19, 1693.	Theophilus earl of Huntingdon.

---

[1] See vol. I. p. lviii. [2] Burton, MS. [3] Dugdale, Warwickſhire, vol. I. p. 498. [4] First Fruits Office.

[5] In the Certificate referred to under Allexton, p. 8, Mr. Preſton is thus deſcribed: "Preſbyter, non conjugatus; competenter doctus; reſidet; hoſpitalis; degit ibidem; non licentiatus, nec prædicat; nullum aliud habet."

[6] 1612, 12° Martii, Gulielmus Darling, prædicator Evangelii, & vicarius de Packington, in com' Leiceſtr', ſepultus fuit." Clifton Regiſter. [7] See p. 927.

[8] He was born in Worceſterſhire, and educated in Oxford. His firſt labours were at one of the Langtons in this county, under Mr. Blackaby, to whom he was aſſiſtant. Thence he removed to Packington, near Aſhby de la Zouch. After his ejectment in 1662, he went to Diſeworth Grange, where he continued many years, teaching ſchool, and preaching conſtantly, either in his own houſe or in places adjacent, as occaſion and opportunity offered. He was a worthy divine, and a plain profitable preacher. He enjoyed a greater meaſure of health than moſt ſtudents and laborious preachers do; but at his entrance upon the 63d year, hypocondriacal winds ſo prevailed over him, as to put a period to his life Oct. 20, 1686.

[9] Vicar of Aſhby 1676—1690. He died June 27, 1692. See p. 619.

RECTORS.	PATRONS.
Michael Hutchinſon[1], D. D. Oct. 28, 1706; died 1730.	John Laughton clerk, pro hâc vice.
William Walmiſley, May 20, 1729.	Theophilus earl of Huntingdon.
Nathanael Pegge, M. A. Oct. 27, 1730; died 1782.
—— Wells, Jan. 7, 1783.	Francis earl of Huntingdon.
Robert Haſtings, M. A. June 19, 1783; died 1792.
John Prior[2], March 1, 1793.	Francis Haſtings, lord Rawdon.

MONUMENTAL INSCRIPTIONS.

On the monument of Mr. Leeſon, who died in 1539, Mr. Burton found this epitaph:

"Me genuit Tatenel, aſt Aſhbidavia nutrix: Packington tumulus; ſic mea fata ferunt."

[Which an unlucky wag thus tranſlated:

"My father he begat me;
At Aſhby I was nurs'd:
At Packington my tomb is—
My Fates have done their worſt[3]."]

In the chancel there is a ſingle monument againſt the South wall, and no other within the church.

Arms: a croſs patonce.

"Underneath are depoſited the remains of
Mr. George Pilkington, of this place, who lived, eſteemed by his acquaintance, to 80 years of age,
and died 21ſt of September, 1754.
And alſo,
the remains of his nephew,
George Middlemore Pilkington, of Bridgenorth, who died July 14, 1761, aged 63 years."

In the church-yard:

On an altar-tomb at the end of the chancel, within a large ſpace of ground, incloſed with iron-rails:

Arms: Per pale, Gules and Azure, a lion rampant Argent, Hutchinſon; impaling . . . . . a feſs componé between three helmets in profile; fig. 4.

"M. S.
Michaelis Hutchinſon, S. T. P.
Lichfieldienſis canonici, necnon eccleſiæ parochialis de Cheadle,
in agro Staffordienſi,
rectoris digniſſimi:
viri probi, fidi, & amici;
patriæ legum & officiorum omnium
obſervantiſſimi;
hujus eccleſiæ paſtoris vigilantiſſimi:
Templi Dei Opt. Max.
apud Derbienſes (Omnibus Sanctis dicati) labantis
(poſitis novis & amplioribus fundamentis)
Inſtauratoris munificentiſſimi; obſtantibus amicis, inimicis ingratis,
ingravate molientis.
Hunc taceant homines, hæc marmora, nulla notandum ſæcula prætereant opus hoc, ni fata ſuperſint.
Obiit anno æræ Chriſtianæ 1730,
ætatis ſuæ 65."

On a flat ſtone in the ſame incloſure:

"The Reverend
Nathaniel Pegge, M. A.
Vicar of this pariſh upwards of 52 years;
and ſome time fellow of Catharine Hall, Cambridge;
died November 23d, 1782, aged 85 years."

On an upright ſtone at the Eaſt end of the chancel:

"Here lieth interred the body of the Revd Robt Haſtings, M. A.
late vicar of this pariſh,
and rector of Oxcomb in Lincolnſhire, who died the 25th of October, 1792,
aged 68 years."

On a ſlate let into the tower of the church:

"Catharine, wife of Thomas Henworth, died Dec. 25, 1732, aged 59.
Thomas Henworth, died Sept. 19, 1741, aged 68."

In the South part of the church-yard is a table-monument, having on one ſide of it four graves, on the other three; each covered with a coffin-ſhaped ſtone the ſize of the grave, of the antient family of the Mugleſtons of this place.

Every ſtone had a large piece of braſs with an inſcription; but five of them have been ſtolen.

A ſlight ſketch of theſe tombs is given in fig. 5.

A braſs plate on the table-monument is thus inſcribed:

"Depoſitum MARIÆ MVGLESTON, quæ obiit calendas Aprilis, anno Domini mileſimo ſexcenteſimo nonogeſimo, ætatis ſuæ ſexageſimo quinto,
Hic requieſcit in ſpe beatæ reſurrectionis.
Hic jacet Edvardus Mugleſton, obiit 30 Julii, anno Dom. 1726,
ætat. ſuæ 58.
Inveniat miſericordiam in illo die."

At the bottom are the arms of Mugleſton; a chevron engrailed between three bucks heads, fig. 6.

On a braſs plate on one of the flat ſtones:

"Exuviæ Edwardi Mugleſton, nuper de Falkingham, in com. Lincolnienſi, cauſidici,
depoſitæ in ſpe lætæ reſurrectionis per ſola merita Jeſu Chriſti, qui obiit ſexto-decimo die Julii,
anno Domini 1723,
ætat. ſuæ 28.
Lucrum eſt mori."

On a ſimilar braſs on another of them:

"Under this ſtone the relicts lie
Of Anne Mugleſton, all y^{t} of her could die.
Tho' young in years, yet glorious was her mind,
Full fraught with virtues of each ſeveral kind.
Who, whilſt ſhe liv'd, liv'd to the nobleſt ends;
To ſerve her God, her neighbour, and her friends.
Her ſoul was fill'd with Heaven; and ſhe
Was always conſtant, always free
In her devotion. All her days
She ſpent to give her Maker praiſe.
She's gone to reſt juſt as ſhe did begin
Sorrow to know, before ſhe knew to ſin.
Her ſoul with God in regions lives above,
In regions like herſelf, all Peace and Love.
Only the grave in peace retains her duſt,
Until the reſurrection of the juſt.
She died the 23 November, anno Dom. 1725, aged 17."

On a modern ſlate-ſtone:

"Elizabeth Mugleſton,
the daughter of Mary Buxton, died February 18, A. D. 1763, anno ætatis 87."

On an altar-tomb:

"In memory of Mr. Richard Doniſthorp, who departed this life Dec. 9, 1790,
in the 63d year of his age."

On upright ſtones:

Richard Andrews died June 1, 1781, aged 64.
Dorothy Andrews died Feb. 10, 1791, aged 88.
John Mee died March 30, 1792, aged 70.
Elizabeth Bannodal, died July 5, 1767, aged 84.
James Newbold, died Feb. 23, 1783, aged 68.
Mary Newbold, died Aug. 1779, aged 56.
And ſeven of their children.

---

[1] Prebendary alſo of Longdone in the church of Lichfield, miniſter of All Saints, Derby; and rector of Cheadle, co. Stafford. Willis, Lichfield, p. 452. The miniſter of All Hallows, Derby, is only curate of the Corporation, and choſen by them; and never takes inſtitution or induction; and therefore Dr. Hutchinſon held this vicarage of Packington with the rectory of Cheadle.

[2] Vicar alſo of Aſhby. See p. 619.

[3] Leeſon's epitaph was clearly taken from Virgil's old epitaph, "Mantua me genuit, Calabri," &c.—In Wright's Travels, p. 175, it is ſaid that, "There is a wretched diſtich inſcribed on a wall, juſt over againſt the place where we enter [to his tomb], enough to fright away Virgil's aſhes, if ever they were there. There are many epitaphs of the like ſort; ſuch as,

"Roma mihi mortem tribuit, Horcalia vitam;
Nemo aliis vellet naſci & abire locis."

THOMAS PESTELL, a celebrated vicar of Packington, (where, in the old Regiſter, ſeveral children of his are entered between 1613 and 1643, ſome born at Cole Orton and others at Aſhby houſe,) was appointed chaplain to Robert Devereux earl of Eſſex about 1615; in which year, Aug. 15, two ſermons of his were entered on the books of the Company of Stationers, "The good Conſcience," and "The Carle's Calamitie;" and a third, "The Poor Man's Appeale," in 1623.

In 1630, he publiſhed "God's Viſitation: in a Sermon preached at Leiceſter at an ordinary Viſitation," with the following introductory epiſtle:

"To the right worſhipful and his worthy friends, Mr. Robert Coats, mayor, Mr. Thomas Chapman, recorder, Mr. James Ellis, alderman, Mr. T. G. Mr. W. S. with all the ſociety of that antient incorporation of Leiceſter, grace and peace, &c.

"I cannot deny but in my youth, among other weakneſſes, I yielded to the temptation of printing Sermons, at requeſt of ſuch as had a power over me. But ſince I grew both an elder man, and a poor retired vicar in an obſcure angle of the county, I reſolved againſt any more ſuch adventures. But behold your vehement entreaties (Mr. Ellis and Mr. G.), and charging me with my reſpecting God's glory, have drawn theſe poor Meditations abroad: yet with this proteſtation, that I deſire (if it were poſſible) no eye might be taken off from richer ſtuff and worthier books (wherewith the world abounds) to look on this, ſave only yours, wherein I have ever yet found ſo much and ſo undeſerved favour, that, peradventure, even for that affectionate favour's ſake, this will ſeem to you better than indeed it is, being only plain matter, and not elaborate in ſtyle or ornaments of quotations. With it (if that be any amends) I dedicate myſelf and my beſt endeavours to reſt at your ſervice. And ſo, praying for the continuance of all God's bleſſings upon you all, I remain Yours in the Lord Jeſu, THOMAS PESTELL."

From 1638 to 1640, we find him continually employed in preaching before the King, at Oatlands, and at the Court; and in 1640 before "the Council of King and Lords at York." In or before 1644, he reſigned the vicarage of Packington to his ſon; whoſe name in that year firſt appears in the Regiſter. By a letter written to ſir George Greſley, about 1645, it appears that he had then "long reſigned his means of Packington to his eldeſt ſon; and had been robbed and plundered of goods (almoſt all) five ſeveral times, beſides cattle [1]." The following particulars of him were communicated by his grand-daughter, Mrs. Sarah Mugleſton: "I have heard my mother ſay, Mr. Pegg (which was the uſurper's name) came into Packington church, in time of divine ſervice, with a troop of ſoldiers, with their piſtols cocked, and held them to my grandfather's breaſt when he was reading prayers. He ſaid, 'Gentlemen, uſe no violence; here is none will reſiſt you.' So they took away the Common Prayer Book, and laid a ballad in its place. My grandfather went and ſat with his wife and children, and heard Mr. Pegg read an account of all his faults, for which he was turned out, concluding, And ſo God has juſtly ſpewed him out of his mouth! Mr. Pegg went then into the pulpit, and took his text, 'I AM hath ſent me unto you.' My grandfather was ſeveral times impriſoned for chriſtening a child and marrying, and for not keeping parliament feaſts and thankſgiving days."

In the "Lachrymæ Muſarum, on the death of Henry lord Haſtings, 1649," is a poem "for the right honourable Lucie counteſs of Huntingdon, from her Honour's humbleſt ſervant, Tho. Peſtel, pater; her Soliloquy, or her Meditation; with the rational Reply;" and another, by him, "On the untimely Death of Henry lord Haſtings, only ſon to the Earl and Counteſs of Huntingdon;" whom he characterizes as

"Lucy large-ſoul'd, and Ferdinand the meek."

Bancroft, in 1634, thus addreſſes him:

"To Maſter Peſtell of Packington:

"Lo, here her labours doth my Muſe commend,
To you, her Phœbus, and her choiceſt friend;
Whoſe knowledge, brighten'd with a beame divine,
Doth through the freezing clouds of envy ſhine;
Making its ſplendor (like that deſert flame)
A guide to bliſſe, a column to your fame [2]."

This worthy old man appears to have taſted bitterly of the cup of affliction. He ſent forth, however, at an advanced period of life, "Sermons and Devotions, old and new; revived and publiſht as an oblation of gratitude to all ſuch of the Nobility, Gentry, and Clergy, as retain the noble conſcience of having miniſtred to the weak condition of the Author, now aged 73. (The Sermons at Court were before the war brake forth betwixt King and Parliament.) Alſo a Diſcourſe of Duels, being a Collection and Tranſlation of other mens opinions, with ſome additions of his own. And this in ſpecial dedicated, for their uſe, to the right honourable Thomas lord viſcount Beaumont of Cole Orton, and Mr. Robert Sutton, heir to Mr. Richard Sutton, of Tongue in Leiceſterſhire. By Thomas Peſtell, the meaneſt amongſt his late Majeſties Chaplains in Ordinary; 1659," 8vo.—This volume conſiſts of poetical "Devotions on certain Anniverſary Feaſts, and other occaſions;" the earlieſt dated 1624; and of ſeveral Sermons, principally preached before the King. The diſcourſe on Duels is "excerpted out of the Spaniſh Hiſtory, tranſlated into French by Mayerne." From Mr. Peſtell's additions, taken out of one of his Sermons to King Charles, a few lines ſhall be given, as a ſpecimen of his manner of writing: "I deſire to throw three or four cool words on this ignis fatuus, a meteor that hath place only in a middle rank or region of mankind. For, firſt, the whole ſky of women are clear againſt it; and, among the males, all noble ſpirits fitted for counſel or government will learn to look down with ſcorn upon it: beggars and the poorer tribes can live and die with a few brawls, or broken heads at moſt. The three profeſſions are better taught, finding no aphoriſms or law of God or man to defend it; and men of trade and corporations underſtand not the word buſineſs in the quarrelling dialect; ſo that fighting is confined; it deſcends not uſually beneath a ſerving-man, nor aſcends above a knight. And, being thus compreſt, the hope is, it will ſhortly vaniſh into nothing; for it riſes from that which is next to nothing, vanity, and lies, and vapours, in tap-houſes and taverns!"

By the favour of one of his immediate deſcendants I have now before me a volume of MS Poems by Mr. Peſtell; among which is a Latin comedy, dated 1631, under the title of "Verſipellis;" which appears to have been acted (probably at Cambridge) by the following gentlemen, whoſe names are added to the Dramatis Perſonæ: Ds. Bryant; Flout; Ds. Woodhall; Ds. Bea . . . .; Richards; Freear; Ds. Rogers; Mr. Harflett; Jocelin; Overton; Mr. Kemp; Mr. Rogers; Ds. Cantrell; Ramſbottom; Ds. Johnſon; Hemſon; Bradler; Wills; Ds. Carliſle; Penſon; Peſtell; Ds. Allen, ſenior; Crofts.—The ſcene is at Antwerp.

Of his unpubliſhed miſcellaneous Poems a few ſpecimens ſhall here be given:

To Francis Noone.

Laviſh not witt, in verſe, to caſt away
What would in proſe maintayne us many a day;
For, for this loſſe the ſtate has yet no plott;
No, nor the law: the church relieves us not.
'Gainſt warrs and plagues we have a Lytanie;
Collects for peace and health; and, when 'tis dry,
For raine: but looke, if you can find in it
A prayre to helpe againſt the drought of witt.
For fires and wracks we gather; witt once gone
There is nor collect, nor collection.

To the Earles of Eſſex and Warwick, going by the Lord Say and Earle of Harford towards the Parliament, 1625.

Eſſex and Warwick, God you ſave and bleſſe!
Beware Exceſs; make Warr with *Wick*edneſſe.
Virtue to Honour leads the right-hand way;
And ſoe God's angells guide you well to Say;
Till, join'd with him who noble Hart affords,
Deeds may advance your worths above all words!

---

[1] See before, under Cole Orton, p. 738.

[2] From a copy of Walker's Sufferings of the Clergy, with MS Notes, formerly belonging to William Huſband, M. A.

Anagramme

Anagramme on the Earle of Holland.

HENRICUS HOLLAND. He can ſurely hold.

Suppoſe a wheele, and neare unto the topp
I fixe thy foote, fayre Virtue gives the ſtopp;
Prevents all motion: up into the pure
And ſtarrie orbs I make thy right-hand ſure:
Thy left beneath great Charles's foot I bring;
Thy motto be "Feare God, honour the King;"
From head to foote this Anagramme: Be bold;
Holland ſtands firme, if he can ſurely hold.

On Mr. Bancroft his Glutton's Fever.

In Boſworth-feild the white-roſe redd in blood,
The redd grew white; and thence grew all our good,
Sweet princes, and ſweet peace; all joyes that fill
All angles of this Iſle. On Ambeame hill
Our Cæſar's garland grew; wherin he ſitts
Crown'd the ſole patrone of all learned witts.
Our (but unwanton, untempeſtuous) Jove,
Our tow'ring Eagle, and our ſtouping Dove.
This is, and ſhall be, Chronicle: but till
This howre I never heard of Bancroft's hill,
Or Muſes' ſprings therin; nor could I dreame
From Boſworth ſchole to reade ſo riche a theame,
A man obſcure, an uſher to do this;
This poliſht worke, this more than maſter-piece.
But wonders are not wonders in the raigne
Of our Auguſtus, peaceful Charle-le-maine.
For which (as once that conquering Richmond hadd
The crowne of golde) ſome abler hand might add
A wreath of bayes to thy victorious browe,
Which to my powre I here preſent thee now.
And firſt ſalute thee Poet; and that name
From me, ſtrikes Envy blind, and Malice lame.
Reading thy ſtrains, methinks I heard the ſame
From him that was our Academies' ſhame;
Our pullpitts' glorie; and I would be glad
Our plain-ſong prieſts but halph thy deſcant had:
They then, although they liv'd and died in proſe,
Might uſe their tongues, and not miſuſe their noſe.
How ſhall I name thy fabrick? A free-ſchole
For court and country; New Betheſday's poole;
Where bedd-ridd ſoules deſpairing, coucht in ſynn,
Helpt by thy hand, and by thy penne put in,
After a motion of repentant teares,
Catch angell thoughts, and loſe their deviliſh feares.
Call it a beacon, or a larum-bell;
Another arke, where all within are well;
The hovering dove, from waterie wilderneſſe
Comes here in peace, hir wearie wings to dreſſe;
But carrion crowes, the gluttons' brotherhood,
That never lawe nor prophets underſtood;
(Deriding preachers) hurle thy booke away,
Or elſe account it but a puppet play.
O reade it once, twice; if your hearts it wound,
Reade it againe, and it will ſett you ſound.
Dives himſelfe in hell, might he but looke
And reade, might yet be ſaved by his booke.

An Elegie I made on Mr. Francis Beaumont, dying 1615-16 at Weſtminſter.

Unto thy ever-loved memory,
And o'er thy hearſe, this weeping Elegie
Shedds hee, who to reſtore thee, as thou wert
Once a full perfect man, would ſpend his heart;
And 't were a bleſt fate, if ſuch things as I,
To make thee live, might but by myriades die.
Yet fond Philoſophie will prate, and dare
Tell us mens ſouls alike and equall are.
O, 'tis an odious lie, made out of pride;
Thine was as large as halph the world beſide:
And as old wives imagine to this day,
The moon to ſtarrs each month is clipt away,
Whence heaven is fill'd; if thy moſt ample witt,
Or juſt ſo much, God took and parted it
To dramms and grains, the pureſt and the beſt
Would furniſh fortie colledges at leaſt
(I think); the refuſe I am ſure would bee
Too good for th' Inns a Court and Chancerie.
'Tis true there be ſome able witts alive,
(Though very fewe), about a fowr or five;
But which of theiſe is natural and free,
Not prentiſe to long art and induſtrie;
Which, with mere labour, all that they can doo
Is patching up an old drie bobb or two
To make a lord laugh, or ſome lady gaye
A bracelett or a jewell caſt away?
But (which pure Nature only did refine)
A braine that could conceive ſo quick as thine,
And be delivered ſo without all paine,
He never looke to meet the like againe.
All ſuch ſleight ſylly things as I might ſteale
Witt, that thou threwſt away at every meale
(When firſt I knew thee), with good huſbandrie,
Able to ſerve us till the day we die.
The Jeſuites that trace witt and ſubtiltye,
And are mere cryticks in Divinitie;
Who to the ſoadring a crackt cauſe allow
Sett fees for every new diſtinction; thou
By a clean ſtrength of witt and judgment wert
Well able to confound, if not convert.
Have we not cauſe then to lament thee dead?
Death, I acknowledge thee the ſupreme head
Over all perſons: God haes given thee ſway
In thy two kingdomes of the earth and ſea.
I knew thee mighty; but I thought thou wert
More wiſe, and leſſe maliciouſe then thou art.
For, being re-adviſ'd, his death will ſhow
To be a fooliſh and a ſpitefull blow.
For was it wiſedome in a rage to kill
Him, for the very laſt words that his quill
Lett fall, inſtructing ladies how their lives
Are beſt preſerv'd, with not preſervatives;
Since he well knew, if this way were denied,
Thou hadſt a thouſand entrances beſides.
Alaſſe, he wrote it in none hate to thee;
His frequent wiſhes for thy company,
And, when thou cam'ſt, embrace, gave good proof
He ever lov'd and lik'd thee well enough.
How comes it with thy friends ſo angrie growne
Thou art, and tak'ſt pett; letting ſuch alone
Whoſe every writing gives a foule offence,
And all their deeds defie thine excellence?
Looke in that place where thou didſt laſt contrive
His death: they ſwarme as bees about the hive;
Which do diſgrace (for theiſe no lawyers be)
And ſtaine that needfull, noble facultie,
The ſinews of our ſtate, to which they grow
As hereſies, or as diſeaſes doo;
Atturneys, punies, clerks, ſolicitors,
Encamping and uniting all their force
'Gainſt thee: their gunns are bouncing inkhorns, and
Their armour ſkins of beaſts; their penns a ſtand
Of pikes and launces; and their watch-word Fees;
With buckram knapſacks fill'd with pilferies.
Yet is their language worſe than mutinie,
Drowning thy dradd name in obſcuritie
By talke of leaſes, ſtates, aſſurances,
Poſſeſſions, tenures, and recoveries,
Lives, and three lives; which ſuff'ring, look to ſee,
Shortly thy ſtate adjudg'd a nullitie.
Then thou art dead in law, and nothing lacks
But roubing thee in calve-ſkinns balm'd in waxe.
If thou beeſt ſenſible of wrong, then mend
This geare; and like a ravening ſtorke deſcend
Among theiſe froggs, whoſe hideous number crall
And cover ore the land; and now they fall
To building caſtles, and to fortifie
In each fatt place, like a new monkerie.
Do but enquire, as you travell ſtill,
Of every faire houſe upon everie hill,
And everie one will tell thee, here does live
Such a law-driver, nine times under-ſhreive;
And there dwells ſuch a one, ſolicitour
To ſuch a lord, that was not long before
A petitefogger, ſprouted from a clark's
Mann's boy that wypt boots; yet ſuch wretched ſharkes,
Such things not worth the thinking on as theiſe,
In ſpight of thee, ſtill grow in wealth and eaſe.
I ſhould believe, but that you canſt not ſee,
And art impartiall, they had bribed thee.
Sure thou wilt ſhortly, though you give them ſcope
Awhile, lett in the Devill or the Pope,
And make a ſkuffle: or is't policie
In thee to lett them waxe and multiplie,

And (like ranke weeds) ore-topping other men,
Poſſeſſe the land themſelfs alone; and then
This dragon-tongu'd fraternitie (as they
That ſprung of teeth) ſhall one another ſlaye?
Thy follie thus excus'd, I yet muſt judge
Thou ſlewſt him for a ſpitefull ſecret grudge,
'Cauſe thoſe quick lines from his live Muſe did paſſe
Have marble ſhedd and everlaſting braſſe
Over three ladies, which ſtill freſh ſhall be,
And live to thy diſgrace in memorie.
This did ſo vexe thee, Death, that thou wert faine
To hire an apoplexe, to ſhend his braine,
Till thou couldſt come thyſelfe, and hinder ſo
That ſprightly nectar which from it did flow;
And yet his puiſſant witt was nere ſo drie,
But even in midſt of moſt infirmitie
It crown'd his laſt worke with ſo faire an end,
'Twould puzzle the beſt witts alive to mend.
And now, although his life on earth be done,
Thou haſt gain'd nothing; he haes; it's begunne
In Heaven more glorious; wher that ſacred head,
'Mongſt Saints and Angells, is canoniſed;
And men ſhall henceforth, when they mean to frame
A wittie poeme, invocate his name
The new Saint Francis; and thoſe fewe that are Able to lead their lines ſo regular (Though ne'er in all points ſo exact) as hee
Shall a new order of Franciſcans bee.

Epigram on Tobacco, 1618.

Voyd, damned weed! that Hell's drie ſweetmeat art,
As molten lead is marmelat and tart.
What cheating Divell made our gallants think
Thee phyſick, wenches, comp'nie, meat and drinke,
And monie: for at this deare drugg alone
They catch, when for it all their gold is flowne.
'Tis our artillerie too, and, arm'd this way,
Our Engliſh ſcorne Bucquoy and Spinola.
Sett but each man unto his mouth his pipe,
And (as the Jews gave Jerico a wipe, Rayſing a blaſt of ramms hornes while it fell)
Some balade on a tyme the newes ſhall tell
How it befell when we our foes did choke
Like bees, and putt them pel-mel to the ſmoke.

To the honoured memorie of his deare mother-in-law, Mrs. Katharine Carr.

A virgin faire and pure, fowre luſters old;
A gratious wife, till twice ſo many told;
Five more ſhe paſt in turtle widow's ſtate,
And ſaw hir offspring runn about the rate
Of all thoſe years. You ſweet and happie race,
Bleſt with the beauties of hir ſoule and face;
In prints ſo lively, lovely, bright, and cleare,
As ſcarce in all the land the like appeare;
Come, helpe me reare theiſe trophies of my verſe
Upon your famous grandam's, beldam's herſe.
Bynd all your browes in bayes: no teare let fall;
This is hir triumph, and not funerall.
Who proud fowle children in their image gett,
Borne and conceiv'd in old originall debt;
Who bloudye tackt lands with poor orphans' curſe,
Leave dull vile heirs that mean to make them worſe;
Howlings are juſt for theiſe; but you ſhall wrong
Hir ſpotleſſe ſoule, unleſſe you lift a ſong
From all your joined breſts, that may rebound
Againſt the ſtarrs, till heaven and earth reſound.
While hir imperiall eagle-ſoule out-flies
To take that croune beyond thoſe Alpes of ſkies.
Two crounes of Age and Virtue here ſhe wore;
The laſt in glorie, laſting evermore.
Which God's owne holynes putts on at ſight,
Whereof that conclave ſings in high delight.

To Courtly Neophite, or the New Divinity Reader.

Boldly to turne each leafe, and fix your ſight
Upon a booke, I ſwear, is lect'ring right.
We ſaw your ſermon ſtolne, and heard you ſpell
And reade it ill, yet vow'''t was handled well.

The Contented.

Rure ego lætus vigeo, & beatos
Contero ſoles: requieque dulci
Perfruor fœlix nimis & ſolutus
Fœnore ab omni.
Pulchra mî conjux ſatis, & quieta
Aſſidens, longæ leviore brumæ
Tædium cantu reficit, micatque
Vividus ignis.
Sternitur mundis dapibuſque inemptis
Menſa: circumſtant pueri & puellæ;
Nec modis miris elegans, nec aſpernanda corona.

On the Biſhop of *Win*cheſter, deceaſed, and Lord *Man*cheſter, living.

If Cheſter boaſt her (fleſh and blood) chief men;
What was *Win*cheſter, is *Man*cheſter then?
Both noble born, to equall height of ſpirit;
Both glorious ſtrong in ſeverall wayes of merite;
That was a chiefe compackt of learn'd and good;
Both abling prieſthood, both enobling blood.
This that ſurvives: cheife Man of thoſe that weild
Great Charles his lawes and counſells, ſword and ſheild.
An iſthmus, or a rod t' imbarr the pride,
Or ſwelling waves of violence divide.
Death tooke *Win*cheſter, cheife of Churchmen, yong;
O ſpare *Man*cheſter, cheife of Stateſmen, long!

Among the other Poems, are ſeveral ſongs, quaint anagrams, epigrams, &c.; many on religious ſubjects; and complimentary verſes to his patrons or neighbours.

The earlieſt is, "A Song to Mrs. An. B. 1609;" and two others marked, "A Song old as 1610;" and "Another, for the lady Viſcounteſs Beaumont 1611."

Martial's epigram, Vitam quæ faciunt beatiorem, &c. in a Song, 1611.

Michaelmas Rent for the then Lady Kath. Stanhope[1], 1614.

To the ſame lady Stanhope, at Twickenham, 1615.

Anagram: KATHARINE STANHOPE. I keep an honeſt heart.

Two Poems to Mr. Clifton; one of them with Mr. Francis Beaumont's Verſes on the counteſs of Rutland. Mr. Peſtell takes ſeveral occaſions of praiſing the elegies of Mr. Beaumont, particularly thoſe on "Rutland the fair, Markham and Clifton ſweet."

On Curtains at Dr. T.'s houſe, 1619.

An haſty Letter to F. Noon, 1619.

A Thing of E. Catl., to mock the former Letter.

A Reply to Ned Catl., 1619.

An Epiſtle to the lady Elizabeth counteſs of Huntingdon, 1620.

On the lady Berkeley, 1620.

Salus Pluralis; ſicut Terra Auſtralis nondûm cognita; ſive Pampini pars ſecunda. To ſir Walter Devereux, 1620.

On the death of dame Dorothy Arden, relict of ſir Henry Arden, knt. of Curdworth, Warwickſhire, and ſiſter to Ralph Fielding earl of Denbigh, 1625.

Two Elegies on the death of Elizabeth counteſs of Huntingdon, 1625.

Epitaph on Mr. Hilderſam, 1631.

Expoſtulation on the Loſs of a noble Gentleman's Eye, Mr. Henry Haſtings, 1634.

To my Neighbour, Richard Baylie, D.D. Archdeacon of Nottingham; now Dean of Sarum, 1635.

Elegy on the truly noble Katharine counteſs of Cheſterfield, 1636.

My Brother Carr's Wedding-ſuit, marrying Mrs. Frances Davis, 1636.

To a young Lord at Court.

Upon a Bible preſented to a young Lady, the Lady Katharine.

To the moſt accompliſhed Gentlewoman for Muſical Qualifications, Mrs. Elizabeth Harpur, eldeſt daughter to my learned Friend Sir Edward Harpur; upon Occaſion of that Piece to her whom it ſo well ſuited.

A Rapture, bred of Muſical Harmony.

An Epitaph on Mrs. Angell at Leiceſter.

Epitaph on Mr. Sacheverell at Leiceſter.

To Mr. T. N. Phyſician at Leiceſter.

To Mr. Cotton, at Nottingham.

Livery Puddings, ſent to Mrs. Laſield, lately Mrs. Cage, Dr. Mountfort's daughter.

---

[1] Katharine daughter of Francis lord Haſtings, eldeſt ſon of George earl of Huntingdon; and wife of ſir Philip Stanhope, created baron Stanhope of Shelford in 1616, and earl of Cheſterfield in 1621.

To Thomas lord Cromwell, viſcount Lecale, afterwards earl of Ardglaſs in Ireland.

To the Reader of Mr. Bancroft's Poem of the King of Sweden; and a Memento on the Battaile of the King of Sweden by Mr. Bancroft.

To the Spiritual Thieves; or, to my Brother Sermon-ſnapper.

On Mr. Randole's Verſes upon the loſing of his Finger.

The Packington Shepherdeſs.

A Recorder's Wife.

A Country Juſtice.

A Village Villane Baylie deſcribed riding.

This pleaſant old bard was father to William Peſtell, of Cole Orton; of whom an account has been already given [1]; and to Thomas Peſtell, his ſucceſſor at Packington; who was at Worceſter, Sept. 3, 1651, (when the king was defeated there); and had a rope about his neck to have been hanged; but a gentlewoman who had intereſt with the party told a lie, and ſaid he was a relation of hers, and thereby diverted them from their fatal reſolution.—The younger Thomas Peſtell has a poem in the "Lachrymæ Muſarum, 1649;" which, being ſhort, ſhall be copied:

"Three loyal Henries, ſprung from Huntingdon,
We ſaw alive: the firſt and laſt are gone,
Bright Saints to Heaven, above all fancy'd ſpheres,
To meet their Soveraign in that Houſe of Peers:
The third God's hand by wonder hath preſerv'd,
In whom their honour trebly is reſerv'd.
So, Sybils books conſum'd, the laſt contains
Their precious truths, and treble value gains.
Howe'er, we ſadly mourn his nephew's fate
Makes widow'd England ſtill more deſolate.
Oh, never ſuch a ſon to parents' mind;
Oh, never ſubject loyaller inclin'd;
Oh, none more pious, none more man, ſo ſoon;
Ripe for his ſet, ere rais'd to half his noon.
That mightier hand, that ſtopp'd the mighty ſun,
Can throw his circle ſooner make him run.
A varied fever had ſurpriz'd his head,
And death enſued, when royal blood he bled.
Bodies live not, when head and heart decays,
Where all their veins are right Baſilica's.
The fountain dry'd, how ſhould the channel run?
Good night to ſtars, when dark'ned is the ſun.
Thus royal, loyal, learn'd, lov'd Haſtings lies;
All good mens loſs; to ſaints a glorious prize."

THOMAS PESTELLUS, filius.

Thomas Peſtell, junior, was afterwards rector of Markfield [2]; and was appointed confrater of Wigſton's Hoſpital in 1662, on the deprivation of William Syms, an intruder, rejected as a Nonconformiſt.

In the Regiſter of Packington, Mr. Peſtell has made the following entries:

"1660, king Charles II. returned in peace upon May 29, being his birth-day, after 12 years baniſhment; and the vicar of this pariſh in 1662, after 14 years expulſion: ſic viſum Superis.

"Regiſters hitherto have been omitted by the Black Long Parliament and Cromwell's tyrannicall uſurpations; and now, bleſſed be God! reſtored under the peacefull reigne of our bleſſed Soveraigne Charles the Second, 1662."

The following letter was written by him in 1682.

"To his worthy friend Thomas May, eſq. at the Bell in Aſhby de la Zouch.

"Noble Sir, I have received your double ſummons, to wait upon you at Aſhby or Boſworth. To ſhew you how obedient I am to your command, or to any thing that derives itſelf from my ſacred Prince, who is the Fountain of Honour, I (being ſo lame that I dare not come) ſend you this, to let you know I have a very good coat of arms hanging in my houſe, derived from the Peſtells of Colmworth in Bedfordſhire (as will appear by the Viſitation-book for that county), which a kinſman of mine, captain of one of his Majeſty's ſhips, ſent down; which he alſo hath recorded (ſince his Majeſty's happy Reſtoration) in the Heralds office above. For my part, I know not what it is; nor do I matter it, having no ſon to ſucceed me, and I being now onward of my 70th year old. I am your ſervant, Sept. 12, 1682. THOMAS PESTELL [3]."

SNIBSTON, or SNIPSTON, antiently written Snipeſtun, as in Mr. Greſley's Chartulary, N° 43. (where Warinus, mentioned in p. 924 of this hiſtory, is a witneſs, about the ſame æra of 1200).—"'Tis a rare place" (ſaid Hextall, one of the two principal tenants, to me in an accidental ride the 2d of March laſt, while I was queſtioning him about the owners of the place, no more thinking of Etymology than himſelf), "a rare place for Snipes!" And, caſting my eye forward, I ſaw the little rill below ſpreading itſelf in a conſiderable bog, which I was ſtrait convinced had been the ſtate of the ground ever ſince the age of Warinus. S.P.W. Aug. 27, 1802."

The village was given by Leofric earl of Mercia to the abbey of Coventry at its foundation; and, after the ſee of Cheſter was removed thither, was held by the prior and convent of that cathedral church, as of the honour of Cheſter [4].

This manor, ſays Mr. Burton, (either all, or the greateſt part) was ſome time belonging to the priory of Coventry, and was held of the honour of Cheſter. It is in the pariſh of Packington; and in 1346 the prior of Coventry had one third part of a knight's fee here [5].

In 1348, it was found that Lawrence de Haſtings at his death held the moiety of one knight's fee, with the appurtenances, in Snipſton and Newton [Harecourt], co. Leiceſter, of the earl of Pembroke (which Nicholas Charnells held) value 100*s.* [6]

In 1564, there were ſeven families in Snibſton.

After the ſuppreſſion of monaſteries, it came by purchaſe to the Kendalls of Smithſby, co. Derby; and by deſcent to Henry Kendall, gent. who was living in 1642 [7].

In 1654, Snibſton was the inheritance of Henry Kendall, of Smytheſby, co. Derby, eſq. who beareth Gules, a feſs chequée Or and Azure, between three eagles diſplayed Or; fig. 7.

No freeholder voted from this hamlet either in 1722 or 1775.

In 1726, ſeveral cloſes of John Wilkins, eſq. in the liberty of Snibſton, containing 264 acres, 2 roods, 12 perches, and let to divers tenants at the rent of £109. were ſold under a decree in Chancery. The taxes of this eſtate at 2*s.* at that time amounted to £5. 4*s.*; and a rate-tithe of £5. was paid to the vicar of Packington [8].

The village at preſent contains about 6 dwellings. The townſhip may contain 700 acres; of which about 400 belong to the Rev. Philip Story (as part of the Bainbrigge eſtate); and the remainder (except two ſmall portions, the property of hoſpitals, one at Leiceſter, the other at Oſgathorpe), to Leonard Foſbrooke, eſq. As the chapel belongs to Packington church, ſo is the manerial right underſtood to go with that of Packington.

The CHAPEL (ſee two views of it in Plate CXXV.)

is a very ſmall oblong, with no ſteeple, one bell, and an old round font, fig. 8.

In the church-yard are the remains of two very old grave-ſtones; one of them the fragment engraved, fig. 9.

On upright ſtones:

"In memory of John Saliſbury,
who departed this life Aug. 18, 1792, aged 85."

"John Orton [9], died Dec. 9, 1792, aged 66;
and Thomas Orton his father, aged 86;
Sarah his wife died Feb. 22, 1771, aged 47;
Iſabel his ſecond wife died April 12, 1776, aged 29."

Thomas Hextall died Aug. 19, 1781, aged 62.

---

[1] See p. 738.

[2] Rymer's Fœdera.

[3] See under Cole Orton, p. 739, a ſimilar letter from his brother William.

[4] Regiſtr. priorat. de Coventre in Scacc.

[5] Rot. Aux. 20 Edw. III.

[6] Eſch. 22 Edw. III. N° 42. Leic.

[7] Burton, MS.

[8] From the conditions of ſale.

[9] A celebrated water-doctor.

RAUNSTON, or RAVENSTON,

One ploughland in Raveneſton, which in the time of king Edward had been valued at fifteen ſhillings, was worth but twelve-pence at the general ſurvey, when it was rented by Godric under Nigel de Statford. This land, [which was in Derbyſhire], was equal to one plough, but lay waſte. There were eight acres of meadow[1].

Two ploughlands at Ravenſtorp, in the county of Leiceſter, which had lain waſte in the time of king Edward, continued ſo at the general ſurvey, when they were held by William Buenvaſlet[2].

The village is large, ſtands moſtly on an eminence, and has a very pleaſing appearance on the road from Aſhby to Leiceſter. It is three miles South-eaſt from Aſhby de la Zouch; and thirteen miles North-weſt from Leiceſter; and is bounded on the North by Swannington (Whitwick pariſh) and Cole Orton, on the Weſt by Alton (Aſhby pariſh) and Normanton, on the South by Hether and Ibſtock, and on the Eaſt by Snibſton. It is middling land; moſtly incloſed paſture, and has ſeveral conſiderable coal-delphs in and about it.

In the eccleſiaſtical diviſion of counties, the church of Ravenſton is within the deanry of Repington, in the county of Derby, in the dioceſe of Coventry and Lichfield; but the two counties are ſo intermixed, that the inhabitants, in ſome caſes, do not know their diſtinct bounds[3].

"This manor," ſays Mr. Burton, "is compaſſed round with Leiceſterſhire; yet is part in the county of Derby, and part in this county, though a mile and more diſtant from the neareſt part of Derbyſhire. So Seile is in this county of Leiceſter, yet toucheth no part of this county[4], but compaſſed round with Derbyſhire; and ſo is it in ſome parts of the counties of Warwick, Oxon, Glouceſter, Worceſter, and others. What ſhould cauſe this difference I cannot certainly deliver[5].

"I ſhould gueſs that in the Saxons time, when, as ſome ſheriffs were hereditary, ſome officiaries, and had juriſdiction over the counties, ſome manors in other counties near adjacent, either by compoſition, grant from the king or other perſons, were made ſubject to another ſheriff's authority and juriſdiction, and ſo by time were incorporated to the body of the other county, though indeed they were no part thereof, but belonging to that county within whoſe circumference thoſe manors did lye. That this may ſtand probable I could make inſtance, though not in equal degree, as touching the worth[6]; for whereas, within the honour of Tutbury, and near unto Tutbury, there be divers copyhold manors, wherein are copyholders of inheritance; ſome of which, having purchaſed certain acres of freehold land in the next manor adjoining, which are freehold land, and having made ſurrender of thoſe purchaſed acres, together with their cuſtomary lands, which have been ſo ſurrendered by three deſcents or more, are now held and taken to be parcel of the ſaid cuſtomary copyhold manors, though (in facto) they be not, but part of thoſe manors within whoſe bounds and limits they do lie[7]. Another conjecture I might make, that in the time of the Saxon Heptarchy, when continual encroachments and invaſions were made by thoſe ſeven kings upon their bordering neighbours; that thoſe lands were encroached, though lying (of right) in another's county, and under another's authority; yet, having now uſurped and gotten them perforce, did take and challenge them, and incorporate them to the next county of theirs to which they were adjacent[8].

"That this land was divided into counties and ſhires in the Britons time (long before the coming of the Saxons), appeareth by an old Treatiſe of the Antient Laws of this Land, called "The Mirrour of Juſtices," vouched by Bradſhawe, attorney-general to king Edward VI. in the argument of Fogaſſa's Caſe, the firſt in the Commentaries of Mr. Plowden[9], which he ſaith was made long before the Conqueſt, and which is briefly recapitulated by lord Coke in his Preface to his ninth part of Reports. In which book it doth plainly appear, that about the time of king Arthur, that renowned Britiſh king, this realm was divided into counties and ſhires; and the chief officers of them are there named Cuſtodes ſive prepoſiti Comitatus, after called by the Saxons ſhiremen and ſhireeves. And ſo it appeareth in the laws made by king Ina, one of the Heptarchs and king of the Weſt Saxons, who lived in the year of Chriſt 740. "Si quis rectum ſibi roget coram aliquo Schirmâ (id eſt prepoſito comitatûs) vel alio judice, & habere non poſſit, & accuſatus vadium recti dare nolit, emendet 30, & infra ſeptem noctes faciat ei recti dignum." And in another place, "Gif he Elderman hy tholyg his ſchire." Certain it is, by all hiſtories, that after that the Heptarchy was extinct, and that the Weſt Saxon kings (having vanquiſhed all the reſt) had ſettled a monarchy[10], that that learned and valiant king Alfred[11], who began his reign anno Domini 872, reformed much that firſt diviſion made of the ſhires. For whereas many encroachments had been made, many bounds and meres obſcured and quite taken away; he rectified them again, making an exact, plain, and eminent partition of each, taking advantage of all natural rivers, ſtreams, and water-courſes, hills, mounts, woods, marſhes, rocks, and cliffs, and in ſome places with artificial boundaries, which was almoſt performed quite throughout the realm, as by a curious obſervation of them had may appear.

---

[1] "In Raveneſton [terra Nigelli de Statford] habet Godric 1 carucatam terræ ad geldum. Terra eſt 1 carucæ. Waſta eſt. Ibi 8 acræ prati. Tempore regis Edwardi valebat 15 ſolidos; modò 12 denarios." Domeſday, fol. 278. a. 1.

[2] "William Buenuaſlet tenet 2 carucatas in Raveneſtorp. Vaſta fuit, & eſt." Ibid. fol. 235. a. 2.

[3] The houſe in which ſir Joſeph Mawbey was born ſtood in both counties.

[4] A miſtake; Seile adjoins Aſhby.

[5] "See Mr. Camden's reaſon in his Britannia, p. 577, in the Engliſh edition."

[6] Parcels of land lying in and environed by one county, and yet appertaining to another, may ſeem to be thus ſevered from the counties wherein they lie; viz. that they being originally (before the diviſions of counties were abſolutely made and ſettled) belonging to ſome great perſon whoſe reſidence was far diſtant, and in the old aſſeſſment rated there, continued ever afterward ſo taxed, and for that reſpect have been and ſtill are reputed part of thoſe ſhires; and ſo Tredington, with the towns thereto belonging, viz. Tidminton (olim Tidelminton, or perhaps rather Tolton or Talton, in the ſame pariſh of Tredington, is ſeemingly underſtood, by Dr. Naſh and others, to be the old Tatlington or Tadlinton) Blackwelle, and Darlingſcote, being ſo environed with Warwickſhire, together with Newbold (antiently a member thereof) were parcel of the lands heretofore belonging to the church of Worceſter, founded before Alfred's time, that the condition of our counties as now they are, were abſolutely ſettled, as alſo Goldecot and Aldermanſton, (or Alderminſter) belonging to . . . ." Wadland, MS note; and ſee Dugdale's Warwickſhire.

[7] Freehold lands voluntarily made copyholds by the owners, for the ſake of the great man's protection. The copyholders all ſtood up for one another, and formed a body with the baron at their head. Little freeholders were ſingle, and liable to be inſulted by ſuch powerful neighbours.

[8] Some lands are called Adjacentes, others Enclavées. By the firſt is not meant barely lands that are ſituated in the neighbourhood, but which are comprehended under the ſame juriſdiction, though they are not of the body: by the latter, a portion or dependence of a juriſdiction, the territory of which is entirely detached, and incloſed in that of another: thus Danvilliers is an Enclave of Luxemburg in Lorraine. Introduction to Geography, prefixed to D'anville's Maps, pp. 8 & 9. In the ſame are good definitions of rivers, brooks, torrents, fountains, foreſts, woods, copſes, parks, cities, towns, pariſhes, hamlets, &c. mountains, hills, chart topographical, one meaſured geometrically from actual ſurvey, and on which, beſides the rivers, towns, villages, caſtles, houſes, mills, &c. are alſo marked the mountains, hills, lands, coaſts, valleys, plains, &c.; woods, vines, meadows, ploughlands, heaths, &c.; parks, bridges, rivers, lakes, marſhes, fountains, moraſſes, &c. and in general every thing worthy of note, p. 2. According to Buache and Guettard's ſcheme, the foſſils may be marked. G. A.

[9] Commentaries, fol. 8.

[10] Richard Verſtegan, in his Reſtitution, fol. 150.

[11] Aſſer Menevenſis wrote a tract of the Acts of king Alfred, ſet forth by Matthew Parker, archbiſhop of Canterbury, afterwards by W. Camden, 1603. And Ethelwardus, fol. 140.

"On the North ſide of the town ſometime ſtood a an antient caſtle, which was deſtroyed in the time of Robert Boſſu earl of Leiceſter (in the reign of king Henry II); to which there was a manor belonging in this town, which was granted by the ſaid Robert Boſſu to the abbey of Gerendon near by, which was of the foundation of the ſaid Robert Boſſu[1]."

There was alſo another manor in this town, which belonged antiently to Roger de Herdeberewe; whoſe ſon Hugh granted the homage and ſervice of all his free tenants here to the abbey of Gerondon.

This part came after to the Deſpencers; and, upon their attainder was granted, in 1327, together with the advowſon of the church, to Henry lord Beaumont, as a member of the manor of Loughborough[2].

John lord Beaumont paſſed away moſt of his intereſt here to —— Saliſbury, whoſe anceſtors were ſeiſed of a conſiderable freehold here temp. Edward III.

In 1286, Henry le Waleſh was permitted to give to the abbot and convent of Gerondon two meſſuages and two virgates of land at Ravenſtone, which were held immediately under the abbot, and were of his fee[3].

In 1297, Edmund earl of Lancaſter, the king's brother, at his death, held divers lands at Raunſton[4].

In 1313, Ralph Baſſet of Sapcote held the twelfth part of one knight's fee in Alton and Raunſton of Alan la Zouch, deceaſed[5].

In 1327, Thomas earl of Lancaſter, at his death, held 30*s.* 10*d.* ariſing out of divers free tenements in Swanington and Raunſton[6].

In 1328, ſir Robert Holand, deceaſed, held, as of the right and inheritance of Maud his wife, the twelfth part of one knight's fee, with the appurtenances, in Raunſton and Alton, value 20*s.* which Joſeph Sapcote held[7].

In 1330, the lord Botelcr of Wemm held lands here.

July 20, 1336, king Edward III. granted divers lands at Raunſton, as alſo the advowſon of the church there (late parcel of the poſſeſſions of Hugh le Deſpencer earl of Winton) to Henry lord Beaumont and Alice his wife[8].

In 1340, Henry de Beaumont earl of Boghan, at his death, held the hamlet of Raunſton as a member of Loughborough; alſo the advowſon of the church of Ravenſton, value 8*s.*[9]

July 16, 1361, it was found that Henry Plantagenet duke of Lancaſter, at his death, was ſeiſed of a quarter of one knight's fee in Raunſton, which William Botiller held[10].

In 1413, it was found that Henry de Beaumont, knight, at his death, was ſeiſed of the advowſon of the church of Raunſton, value 100*s.* per annum[11].

In 1415, it was found that John Vylers, at his death, was ſeiſed of a moiety of one meſſuage and a moiety of one virgate of land, with the appurtenances, in Raunſton, held of the king in capite, as of the honour of Tutbury, by ſuit at the court of Tutbury, from three weeks to three weeks[12].

In a book of fifteenths and tenths granted by the laity in 1416, Ravenſtone was rated at 9*s.*; and in the ſubſidy of 1445, at the ſame ſum; and no abatement was made.

In 1427, Elizabeth wife of Henry de Beaumont, at her death, was ſeiſed of Raunſton (as alſo of the advowſon of the church there) as a member of Whitwick[13].

In 1455, it was found that Richard duke of York, Henry Grey, John Seyville of Coplow, John Perſy, John Scarburgh, eſqrs. and John Eſtone, clerk, were ſeiſed, on the day when Leonard Haſtings, knt. died, of the ſite of a certain mill in Raunſton, by the gift of the ſaid Leonard; held of Reginald de Grey, knt. lord of Rutbin, in ſocage[14].

In 1461, it was found that Everard Digby, attainted of high treaſon by act of parliament, was ſeiſed of three tofts, four virgates of land, 12 acres of meadow, and 2*s.* rent in Raunſton[15].

Aug. 28, 1462, king Edward IV. granted divers lands at Raunſton (late parcel of the poſſeſſions of Everard Digby, eſq.) to Alice Ruſſell for life[16].

Oct. 25, 1464, king Edward IV. granted divers lands at Raunſton (late parcel of the forfeited poſſeſſions of Everard Digby) to Peter Curteys and Alice his wife and their heirs, to hold by fealty only, in lieu of all ſervices[17].

In 1483, William lord Haſtings, at his death, was ſeiſed of one water-mill in Raunſton[18].

The greateſt part of the lands of the Saliſburys came temp. Henry VII. to —— Barwell by purchaſe; whoſe heir ſold them to ſir Thomas Wolſeley, of Wolſeley, co. Stafford, knt.

The lady Wolſeley, ſecond wife of ſir Thomas Wolſeley, of Wolſeley, co. Stafford, purchaſed lands here. She had iſſue by him colonel Devereux Wolſeley, and ſeveral other children. Becoming a widow, ſhe afterwards married Mr. Woolley.

The manor, with the advowſon of the church, were granted after the diſſolution, by king Henry VIII. to Thomas Manners earl of Rutland, who, in the 33d of that king's reign, aliened the manor to Henry Digby, of Tickencote, in Rutlandſhire, gent.

Rowland Babington, eſq. and Francis his grandſon had lands here in the reign of Edward VI; and in queen Elizabeth's reign Thomas Cockaine, eſq. left an eſtate to his ſon Francis.

Anthony Babington, eſq. died Jan. 2, 1559, ſeiſed of Ravenſtone Grange, 20 acres of arable, 30 of meadow, and 400 of paſture, worth £12. a year; and of the manor of Normanton in Derbyſhire[19], with divers other lands in that county, and the advowſon of St. Peter's church[20].

Thomas Digby, great-grandſon to Henry, poſſeſſed the manor in 1619, when the following pedigree was entered.

Arms: Azure, a fleur de lis Argent; a mullet for difference. Plate CXXVI. fig. 15.

Henry Digby, of Tichmerſh, co. Northampton.=Margaret.

Thomas Digby. John Digby.=Urſula, dau. of —— Halfehead, of London. Henry Digby.

Thomas Digby, of Ravenſton, 1619.=Mary, dau. of Ralph Gegge, of Bradley, co. Cheſter.

Henry Digby. John Digby. Elizabeth Digby.

The freeholders here in 1630 were, Thomas Elliot and Jonathan Barwell.

In 1712, Raunſton, Stretton, and Willeſley, were taxed together at £143. 12*s.*; and at this period a rent charge of £40. was paid to Morley hoſpital in Derbyſhire, and a ſuit-fine of 3*s.* 11*d.* to the Dutchy, out of the eſtate[21] of John Wilkins, eſq. who had raiſed himſelf by coal-delphs and marriage of an heireſs of the Wollaſtons of Shenton, and reſided in a noble manſion-houſe built by himſelf of brick and ſtone; with out-houſes, ſtables, gardens, courts, grove, orchards, and fiſh-ponds, to the extent of 12 acres;

---

[1] Burton, corrected by the Chetwynd MS.

[2] Burton, MS.

[3] Eſch. 14 Edw. I. N° 18. Leic.

[4] Eſch. 25 Edw. I. N° 51. Leic.

[5] Eſch. 7 Edw. II. N° 36. Leic.

[6] Eſch. 1 Edw. III. N° 88. Leic.

[7] Eſch. 2 Edw. III. N° 54. Leic.

[8] Pat. 10 Edw. III. pars 2. m. 2.

[9] Eſch. 14 Edw. III. N° 24. Leic.

[10] Fin. 35 Edw. III. m. 23.

[11] Eſch. 1 Hen. V. N° 45. Leic.

[12] Eſch. 3 Hen. V. N° 22. Leic.

[13] Eſch. 6 Hen. VI. N° 49. Leic.

[14] Eſch. 34 Hen. VI.

[15] Eſch. 1 Edw. IV. N° 7. Leic.

[16] Pat. 2 Edw. IV. pars 1. m. 23.

[17] Pat. 4 Edw. IV.

[18] Eſch. 1 Ric. III. N° 32. Leic.

[19] Willoughby Dixie, who died at Boſworth Oct. 5, 1802, had Normanton manor near Derby, and St. Peter's advowſon in that town.

[20] Inq. 1 Eliz. n. 26. pars 2.

[21] When taxes were 2*s.* this eſtate paid £14. 8*s.*

and 456 acres more within the lordſhip, then leaſed at £272. 14*s.* 2*d.* a year; which, after his death, in 1726, together with his ſeveral freehold eſtates in Snibſton, Swannington, Higham, Thringſton, Oſgathorpe, Caſtle Donington, and Thorpe Acre by Loughborough, in the counties of Leiceſter and Derby; and at Sutton Coldfield, in the county of Warwick; and at Willoughby, in the county of Nottingham; were directed to be ſold, purſuant to a decree in the court of Chancery, before Mark Thurſton, eſq. in a caſe between the Attorney General on the part of Edward Hextall and others, plaintiffs, againſt William lord Digby and others, defendants[1].

From the executors of Mr. Wilkins, the manor was purchaſed by Roger Cave[2], eſq. a younger ſon of ſir Roger Cave, of Stanford Hall, in Leiceſterſhire, bart.

Sir Roger Cave married to his ſecond wife Mary, daughter of ſir William Bromley, of Bagington, knt. by whom he had Roger Cave, of Eydon, Northamptonſhire, and Ravenſtone, in the counties of Leiceſter and Derby, who married in 1721 Catharine, daughter of William Browne, of Stretton-en-le-field, in the counties of Leiceſter and Derby, eſq. by whom he had a numerous family. Her only ſurviving ſon John took the eſtate and name of his grand-father William Browne; whoſe other daughter and coheir married to James Chambers, rector of Higham and Croft, and was mother of the late James Chambers, rector of Stretton-en-le-field, and of Samuel, rector of Higham and Croft, and others[3].

After the death of Mr. Cave in 1740-41, the manor was purchaſed by Leonard Foſbrooke, eſq. of Shardlow, in Derbyſhire, father of the late Leonard Foſbrooke, eſq. who died in 1801; and it is now the property of Leonard Foſbrooke, eſq. of the ſame place, ſon and heir of the laſt.

Mr. Wilkins built a very large and magnificent ſeat near the hoſpital, in which Mr. Cave afterwards lived; but which Mr. Foſbrooke, ſoon after his purchaſe, pulled down, ſold the greater part of the materials, and built an handſome, though much ſmaller ſeat in its ſtead. His ſon, after his marriage with a daughter of James Winſtanley, eſq. of Braunſton, reſided during ſeveral years at this place; but, on the death of his mother, removed to Shardlow; ſince which Raunſton-hall has been occupied by ſeveral tenants: the late one, till Lady-day 1802, was Godolphin William Burſlem, eſq. who had been concerned in the coal-mines in and near Cole Orton; where his father lived. The preſent tenant is the Rev. Thomas Adnutt, rector of Croft.

Robert Creſwell, eſq. has conſiderable property in this pariſh, and has lately erected a very handſome houſe in a pleaſant ſituation by the road ſide. He alſo rents a conſiderable farm belonging to Raunſton-hall. His family is ſtated, by Mr. Creſwell, to be of long-ſtanding here, much preceding the pariſh records; the earlieſt regiſter beginning only in 1705.

Mr. John Mawbey was poſſeſſed of a ſmall eſtate in this pariſh; which, on his death, came to his eldeſt ſurviving ſon John Mawbey, eſq.; who on his removal to Vauxhall, in the county of Surrey, in 1755, where for many years he was an active juſtice of the peace, ſold the eſtate to his brother-in-law Mr. William Alcock, deſcended from a family of that name, of Sibertoft, in the county of Northampton; on whoſe death, in 1764, the eſtate came to, and is now the property of, his eldeſt ſon, the preſent Joſeph Alcock, eſq. of his Majeſty's Treaſury, who is in the commiſſion of the peace for the county of Surrey, and who married, March 2, 1790, Miſs Elizabeth-Jane Tayler, ſiſter to Richard Tayler, eſq. of Charlton-houſe, in the county of Middleſex. By his wife Mary Mawbey Mr. William Alcock had ſix children; the above-mentioned Joſeph; William (deceaſed); John, of the Temple, London; Thomas, an officer in the Eaſt India Company's troops at Bengal; Maria; and Martha (who died in 1762).

A family of the name of Pratt have lived many years in Raunſton, though they came originally from Ibſtock, and other parts of Leiceſterſhire. One of their anceſtors, John Pratt, eſq. was colonel in the army of the parliament during the civil wars of Charles the Firſt's time; and afterwards, during the Uſurpation, repreſented the county of Leiceſter in the parliament which met in 1653; ſince that time one of the family has uſually been called Colonel. Mr. Thomas Pratt is now the elder branch of this family; and his father, whoſe name was alſo Thomas, was couſin-german to ſir Joſeph Mawbey. Mr. Pratt is owner of ſeveral houſes and ſome land at Ravenſton; but having purchaſed an eſtate at the Berryhills, in the adjoining pariſh or chapelry of Snibſton, he has built himſelf a ſmall, but pleaſant reſidence there, to which he removed about 16 years ago. He is married, but has no iſſue. One of his neareſt relations is Mr. John Pratt, of Welleſborough, in the county of Leiceſter.

There was alſo long reſiding at Raunſton a family of the name of Saliſbury, very probably a younger branch of the family of that name of Llewenny, in the county of Denbigh. They removed afterwards to Snibſton, where Mr. John Saliſbury, an opulent yeoman, the elder branch of theſe Saliſburys, died in 1792, poſſeſſed of conſiderable eſtates in different parts of Leiceſterſhire. He left a ſon, whoſe reſidence is in Northamptonſhire.

In 1722, three freeholders polled from this pariſh; and in 1775, we find eight names.

In 1770, an act was paſſed for dividing and incloſing three open fields, called Alton Field, Granno Field, and Heather Field, within the lordſhip or liberty of Raunſton, in the counties of Leiceſter and Derby, conſiſting of arable land and meadow and paſture ground; and alſo divers ſmall parcels of waſte ground, containing in the whole 250 acres or thereabouts. In this act Leonard Foſbrooke, eſq. is deſcribed as lord of the manor of Ravenſtone; the King as patron of the rectory; and the Rev. William Clayton, clerk, as rector; The ſaid Leonard Foſbrooke and William Clayton, together with the Rev. William Skinner, clerk, Mary Heard, ſpinſter, the Chaplains and poor of Wigſton's Hoſpital, and others, were then the owners and proprietors of the ſaid fields, meadows, paſture, and waſte ground. An allotment was firſt directed to be made to the lord of the manor, in full compenſation for his rights; and a full ſeventh part of the reſidue in lieu of all great and ſmall tithes and other payments (accuſtomed mortuaries, Eaſter offerings, and ſurplice-fees excepted); and from the owners of ſuch old incloſures, homeſteads, gardens, and orchards, as contain more than one rood each, ſuch an allotment as ſhall be equal to 1*s.* 6*d.* an acre on ſuch old incloſures; and from ſuch owners of old incloſed land as had no claim in the common field ſuch compoſition, in lieu of tithe, as the commiſſioners ſhould think proper to award.

The two Roman coins in Plate CXXVI. fig. 19, 20, were found here in 1741.

	£.	s.	d.
Money raiſed for the poor, within the year ending at Eaſter 1776,	41	3	7
Expended in county rates, &c.	1	19	8
———— on the poor, —	28	3	2
Rent of workhouſe and habitations,	3	0	0
Expended in litigations, —	0	0	0
Money raiſed for 1783, —	94	10	7
———————— 1784, —	133	8	0
———————— 1785, —	119	7	6
Medium of theſe three years,	115	15	4
———— of county expences,	5	0	11
———— of expences not relating to the poor; repairs of the church, roads, &c.	10	2	5
———— of nett annual expences,	100	12	0
———— of attending on magiſtrates,	4	17	7
———— of entertainments at meetings,	0	0	0
———— of law expences, —	3	7	0
———— of ſetting the poor to work,	0	3	6

The return made to the Houſe of Commons in 1786, in anſwer to an enquiry reſpecting the charitable donations in this pariſh, may be ſeen in vol. I. p. 71.

---

[1] From the conditions of ſale.

[2] See an epitaph, at Loughborough, on Catharine Cave, his widow, and on Francis their ſon, who died young, in p. 904.

[3] See vol. II. p. 888; and Gent. Mag. vol. LXVII. p. 207.

By the return made to Parliament in 1801 from the county of Leiceſter, Raunſton contained 44 houſes and 45 families; conſiſting of 114 males, 101 females, total 205; of whom 38 were chiefly employed in agriculture, and 16 in trade, manufactures, &c.— In the Derbyſhire part of the pariſh were 64 houſes inhabited, and 2 uninhabited; 68 males, 126 females, total 194; of whom 20 were chiefly employed in agriculture, and 14 in trade, manufactures, &c.

A Regiſter for the pariſh of Raunſton, bought the 1ſt of September, 1705.

On the firſt page the births of rector Thomas Peſtell and his children.

Francis Wolleſton Wilkins, ſon of John Wilkins, eſq. and Rebecca his wife, was baptized May 2, 1689, and was buried Feb. the 5th, 1711.

Rebecca Wilkins, wife of John Wilkins, eſq. was buried July 12, 1718.

John Wilkins, eſq. departed this life the 19th day of February, between the hours of one and two o'clock, and was buried the 25th day of the ſaid month, 1726.

Separate entries, after five pages more:

Penelope, daughter of Roger Cave, eſq. and Catharine his wife, was baptized the 26th day of November, 1736.

Edward, the ſon of Roger and Catharine Cave, was baptized the 16th of July, 1738; and Louiſa-Margaretta, daughter of the ſaid Roger and Catharine, was buried the ſame day.

Thomas, ſon of Roger Cave and Catharine his wife, was baptized the 11th, and buried the 13th day of October, 1740.

Roger Cave, eſq. departed this life March 2, between the hours of eleven and twelve at night, and was buried the 5th day of the ſame month, 1740.

The following are ſelected from other entries:

Edward, the ſon of Roger Cave, eſq. was buried the 23d of January, 1742-3.

1768, Aug. 17, Leonard, ſon of Leonard Foſbrooke, eſq. and Anne his wife, was baptized. Dec. 8, buried the ſame.

1769, July 8, Anne, daughter of Leonard Foſbrooke, eſq. and Anne his wife, born and baptized the ſame day.

Ann Mouby, daughter of John and Martha Mouby, was baptized the 9th of January, 1724.

Martha, the daughter of John and Martha Mouby, was buried the 2d of July, 1729.

Joſeph, the ſon of John and Martha Mouby, was baptized the 9th of January, 1730-1.

William Mauby, was buried the 12th of December, 1733.

Martha Mauby, was buried the 20th day of September, 1737.

John Mauby and Jane Shepherd were married the 24th of November, 1737.

Francis, ſon of John and Martha Mauby, was buried the 9th of Auguſt, 1739.

Jane Mauby, the wife of John Mauby, died the 17th of April, 1747.

John Mawby and Mary Darling were married December the 27th, 1751.

Mary, the wife of John Mawby, was buried the 26th of September, 1752.

Elizabeth, daughter of John and Mary Mawby, was baptized the 26th of September, 1752, and buried the 26th of November, 1752.

Thomas Ball, who was 56 years clerk of this pariſh, in which he alſo kept an alehouſe, died Jan. 22, 1786. In accurate reading, ſtrength and melody of voice, he was excelled by few. He was an ingenious man; a good engraver of tomb-ſtones, houſe-painter, gardener, and wool-card-maker; and, in his youthful day, had been the beſt hedger, ditcher, and mower, in the pariſh. He might be ſaid to die in his profeſſion; for he loſt his life by a cold which he caught in a grave made for one of his grand-daughters. In his 70th year he married a young woman of the pariſh for his third wife, by whom he had one child. He had a numerous iſſue by a former wife, who attended him to the grave with his old friends and neighbours.

The CHURCH (ſee Plate CXXVI.)

dedicated to St. Michael, conſiſts of a tower (in which are three bells); a nave and South aile; over which are clereſtory windows.

The nave is ſeparated from the South (and only) aile by four ſemi-circular arches.

The old ſquare font is lined with lead.

In the South aile is a ſmall piſcina.

"Eccleſia de Ravenſton, præter penſ' indecimabilem, vii m̄."[1]

The value in the king's books, "in manſ' cum gleb'," is £5. 1*s.* 0½*d.*; certified value £80. Preſent value about £220.

The ſynodals are 1*s.*

Mr. Burton notices theſe arms at Ravenſton; fig. 4—17:

Gules, three lions paſſant guardant in pale Or; a label Azure.

Aure, ſemé of fleur de lis, a lion rampant Or; Beaumont.

Quarterly, Argent and Gules, a bend Sable, Widerington.

Azure, an orle Or, Landeles.

Lozengy, Argent and Gules, a bend Sable, Rokeley.

Gules, ten bezants, 4, 3, 2, and 1, Zouch.

Quarterly, Argent and Gules, in the ſecond and third a fret Or, over all a bend Sable, Deſpenſer.

Argent, ſemé of croſſlets fitché, three fleurs de lis Sable, Bereford.

Argent, a cinquefoil Azure, Moton.

Gules, ſemé of croſſes bottoné, a roſe Or, Humfrevill.

Or, on a croſs formé patée Gules, five maſcles Vaire, Frevile.

Lozengy, Argent and Gules, Fitzwilliams.

Gules, a chevron between three croſs croſſlets Or, Coupledike.

Azure, a chevron between three lions heads eraſed Or, Wyndham.

Over the porch in 1790 was, "J. D. R. C. 1719."

The figure of a head, engraved in the ſame plate, fig. 21. is let into the ſecond arch from the Eaſt window of the aile.

RECTORS.	PATRON.
Richard Saliſbury, 16...	The King.
John Shuttlewood, B. A. 1659.
William Squire, M. A. died in September 1667.
Samuel Hackſup, M. A. died 1666.
William Peſtell[2], April 11, 1667; reſigned.
Thomas Peſtell, M. A. 1693; died 1741.
John Clayton, M. A. Oct. 12, 1741.
Thomas Billio, M. A. June 17, 1745.
William Clayton, July 13, 1754.
Samuel-Bracebridge Hemming[3], June 3, 1799.

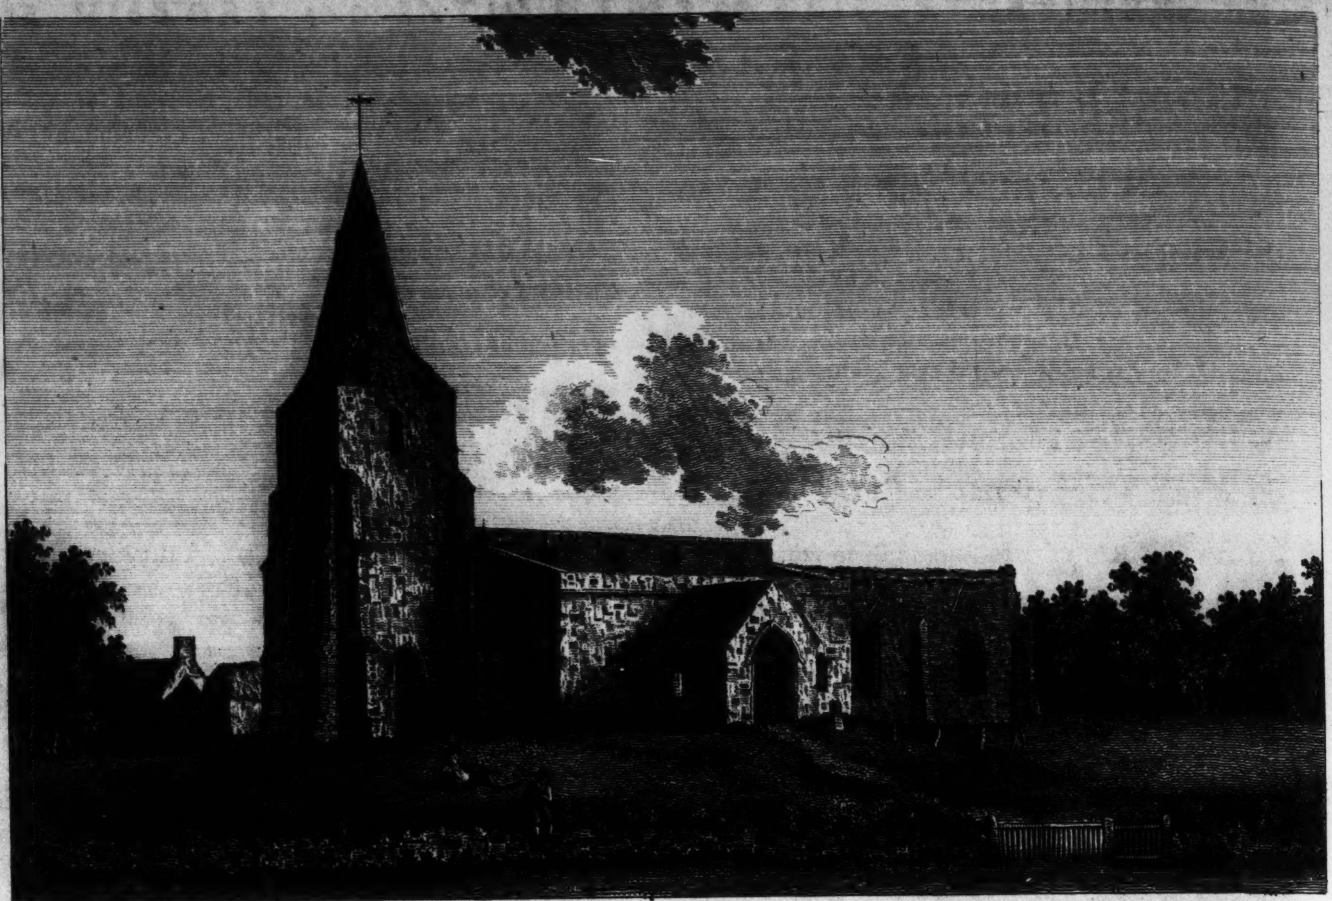
---

[1] MS. Valor at Lichfield.

[2] Rector alſo of Cole Orton, where he was buried in 1695-6; ſee p. 741.

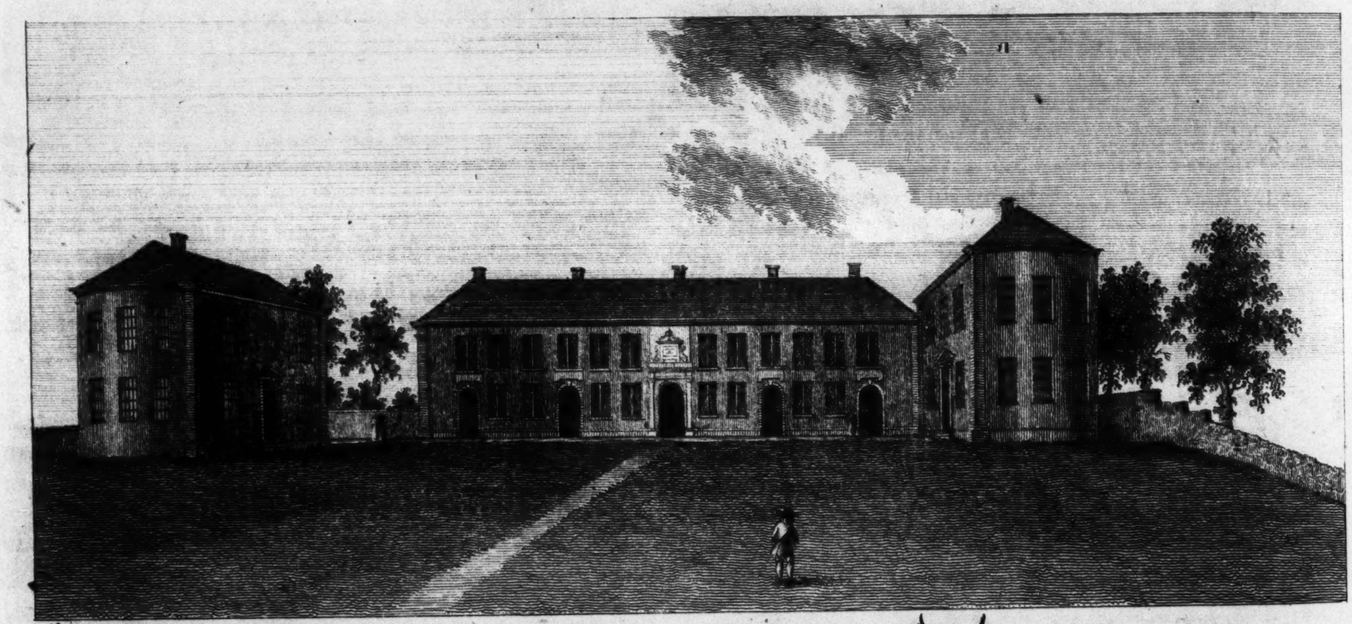
[3] Mr. Hemming had a diſpenſation, in June 1799, to hold this rectory with Weddington, co. Warwick; where he reſides.

RAVENSTON, S.W.



M 1795

RAVENSTON HOSPITAL.



Malcolm 1795

19 20
1
2
3
21
Ground Plan of the HOSPITAL a b c
4
5
6
7
8
9
10
11
18 12
13
14
15
16
17
22

MONUMENTAL INSCRIPTIONS.

On a ſmall braſs on the floor-ſtone of the chancel:
Arms at bottom: A chevron between three mullets; Plate CXXVI. fig. 2.

"Samuel Hackſup, M^r of Arts, and rector of Ravenſton,
departed this life the 20th day of February,
anno Dom. 1666, aged 76."

On a monument of white marble, within an alabaſter frame in the North wall:

Arms: Or, a croſs Gules, fretty, Or, between four eagles diſplayed Azure, each charged with a bezant in the breaſt; Mawbey; impaling, Sable, on a feſs between three elephants heads eraſed Argent, as many mullets of the firſt, Pratt. Creſt, an eagle diſplayed Azure. Motto, Always for liberty. Fig. 3.

"Mr. John Mawbey, late of this pariſh, died on 4th Sept. 1754,
in the 62d year of his age, deſcended from an ancient and genteel family, long ſettled in the counties of Leiceſter and Northampton, into which latter they came from the county of Norfolk,
where formerly they were owners of large poſſeſſions[1].
The ſaid John Mawbey married Mary, daughter of Mr. Thomas Pratt, late of this pariſh; and by her, who died in 1737, had the following ſons and daughters:

Francis M.	born	29 March, 1720,	died in Auguſt 1739.
Martha,		2 May, 1721,	buried on 2 July, 1729.
John,		24 July, 1722,	died an infant.
John,		18 Aug. 1724,	now of Vauxhall, in the commiſſion of the peace for the county of Surrey.
Anne,		29 Nov. 1725,	married to Mr. John Cooper, of Burbage in this county.
Mary,		1 Aug. 1726,	married to Mr. William Alcock, of this pariſh.
Elizabeth,		. . . .	died an infant.
Joſeph,		2 Dec. 1730,	of Kennington and Botleys, in the county of Surrey.

Their father, John Mawbey above-mentioned, was the only ſon of Mr. William Mawbey, of this pariſh, who died in 1733, ſeventh ſon of Eraſmus Mawbey, of Shenton,
in the county of Leiceſter,
only ſon of Richard Mawbey, of South Kilworth; whoſe elder brother John, by Agnes, daughter of William Chamberlayne, eſq. of Leiceſter, was father of Eraſmus Mawbey or Mautbey, who,
in 1643, joining the regiment of horſe commanded by ſir Arthur Haſelrigg, bart. with many recruits, raiſed at his own expence, was ſoon afterwards killed at the battle of Roundway Down, near the Devizes in Wiltſhire, valiantly fighting for the liberties of his country.
His unfortunate death,
his widow's ſecond marriage,
and the calamities brought on them by the civil war,
proved greatly prejudicial to the intereſts of the family.
John and Richard Mawbey were the eldeſt ſons of William Mawbey;
from Thomas the 3d ſon are deſcended
the Mawbeys at this time of South Kilworth;
the ſaid William,
with his brothers Richard and Robert,
the laſt of whom was baptized at South Kilworth (as appears by the Regiſter of that pariſh) on 12 May, 1561,
were the ſons of Richard Mawbey, eſq.
by Margaret his wife, of South Kilworth aforeſaid, born at Kettering, in the county of Northampton;
and deſcended from the ancient family of the Mawbeys, of Mautbeys, of the county of Norfolk.
Joseph Mawbey, eſq.
of Kennington and Botleys, in the county of Surrey, ſheriff in 1757 for that county, and afterwards member of parliament for the borough of Southwark, dedicated this monument, in 1764,
to the memory of his parents and progenitors."

On a flat ſtone at the entrance of the chancel:

"Thomas Peſtell, M. A. rector of this pariſh 48 years, obiit Oct. 16, 1741, æt. 84.
Elizabeth his wife was buried in the chapel 1701.
Sarah their daughter buried Dec. 12, 1755, aged . . ."

On a flat ſtone in the South aile:

"Underneath lie the remains of Lucy, daughter of the Rev. Thomas Rogers and Elizabeth his wife; who died December 24th, 1791, aged 14 months."

On upright ſtones in the church yard:

"Near this place are depoſited the remains of Martha, daughter of Mr. Thomas Pratt, and wife of Mr. John Mawbey, of this pariſh, who died in the year 1737,
in the 48th year of her age.
As alſo the body of the aforeſaid John Mawbey,
who departed this life Sept. 4, 1754,
in the 59th year of his age.
With a due ſenſe of his obligations to his parents, their ſon Joſeph Mawbey,
of Vauxhall near London,
has cauſed this ſtone to be erected."

Martha, daughter of William and Mary Alcock, died Feb. 3, 1762, aged 7.

William Alcock died Sept. 3, 1764, aged 41.

Mary Creſwell, wife of Richard, died May 14, 1732, aged 72.

Richard (her huſband) died March 29, 1734, aged 66.

Robert Creſwell died June 30, 1747, aged 43.

Catharine Creſwell, third daughter of Martha White, of Great Appleby, and wife of Robert Creſwell, died Sept. 11, 1734, in the 32d year of her age. She had one ſon and three daughters.

Mary Creſwell, daughter of Robert and Catharine Creſwell, died Dec. 31, 1777, aged 49.

Catharine Creſwell, another daughter of the ſame, died Jan. 23, 1797, aged 67.

Mary, daughter of William and Mary Creſwell, died May 28, 1741, aged 15.

Alſo Sarah, wife of John Kendall of Sileby, died Nov. 22, 1741, in her 18th year.

John Hiell, late of the Huaſt in this pariſh, died June 23, 1790, aged 90.

{ Richard Richardſon, died Dec. 23, 1797, aged 75.
{ Elizabeth Richardſon, died Jan. 1, 1798, aged 80.

Sacred to the memory of William Browne, eſq. who departed this life Nov. 12, 1792, aged 55.

---

[1] The name of this family, which has been variouſly written, Mawtebey, Maultby, Mauteby, Mawbie, Mawby, and Mawbey, is derived from the village of Mawtby in Norfolk, of which they were early enfeoffed by the Crown. Simon de Mauteby had an intereſt therein in 1199, when he was querent, and Lambert Fitz Otho petent, in a fine of 16 acres of land. This Simon was the father of Walter de Mauteby, and he of Robert de Mauteby, to whom the ſix ſons of Robert de Mauteby, his uncle, releaſed three carucates of land in Mautby. He was father of ſir Walter de Mauteby, who married Chriſtiana de Baſſingham, one of the daughters and coheirs of ſir Piers de Baſſingham, ſub-collector and accomptant in 1214; who, it appears, had two other daughters, Margaret, married to ſir John de Flegg, and another, married to ſir Peter de Brampton; and amongſt theſe Salkirk manor, in Salle, was divided, as well as other the eſtates of the ſaid ſir Piers de Baſſingham. Sir Walter de Mautbey had a grant in 1248 of free-warren in Mautbey; and occurs lord thereof in 1250 and 1257. About 1248, Simon prior of Norwich granted the manor of Weſt Becham in Norfolk, and all his lands there (except the advowſon of the church and glebe lands) to ſir Walter de Mautby and his heirs; and about the ſame period ſir Walter was ſued for impoſing a new toll in Becham. In 1269, ſir Walter de Mauteby purchaſed Flegg Hall in Winterton of ſir William de Flegg; who alſo releaſed to him, in the 6th year of Edward I. all his right and title in Baſingham manor, Weſt Becham, and Matlaſk. Chriſtiana his wife brought him Mauteby's manor in Burſton. It appears that William de Valentia earl of Pembroke, half-brother to king Henry III. held Matlaſk in capite of that king, with Saxthorpe, in his 34th year, which were held of him by the ſaid ſir Walter de Mauteby; who, by Chriſtiana abovementioned, was father of another ſir Walter, the immediate anceſtor of the Mawbeys of South Kilworth in this county.

THE HOSPITAL (ſee Plate CXXVI.)

Near the church is a good building for an hoſpital for 32 poor widows of Raunſton, Cole Orton, and Swanington. They are very amply provided for; and have a chapel and chaplain, for whom an houſe is provided in one wing of the building. The chapel occupies the other wing[1]. The Rev. Mr. Thomas is the preſent chaplain.

In the front are the founder's arms, Gules, two ſwords in ſaltire Argent, hilted and pomeled Or. On a chief Argent, three mullets Sable. Creſt, a demi-griffin regardant Gules, holding in his dexter claw a ſword as in the arms (Pl. CXXVI. fig. 1.) and this inſcription:

"This Hospital was built by John Wilkins[2], eſq.
and with his conſent very liberally endowed by Rebecca his wife, in memory of their only ſon
Francis-Wollaston Wilkins, who died on the 5th day of February,
anno Domini 1711.
Soli Deo Gloria."

On another tablet:

"The two wings in the front of this Hoſpital were erected by the ſavings from the fund appropriated to its ſupport, anno Domini 1784."

The truſtees in 1767 were, lord Middleton, ſir Robert Burdett, Mr. Pole of Radbourne, Mr. Horton of Catton, Mr. Repington of Amington, Mr. Stratford of Merevale, and Mr. Taylor of Hartſhorne.

The preſent truſtees (1802) are, ſir Nigel Bowyer Greſley of Drakelow, Richard Dyott, eſq. of Treford, Euſebius Horton, eſq. of Catton, Thomas Fiſher, eſq. of Caſtle Donington, Joſeph Boultbee, eſq. of Baxterley, Leonard Foſbrooke, eſq. of Shardlow, William-Phillips Inge, eſq. of Thorpe, Dugdale Stratford-Dugdale, eſq. of Merevale, Charles-Edward Repington, eſq. of Amington, and Theophilus Levett, eſq. of Whichnor.

Mrs. Rebecca Wilkins, wife of John Wilkins, eſq. of Ravenſton, by her laſt will, dated Jan. 24, 1712, directs her interment in the chancel of that church; and recites an indenture, made 27 April, 9 Anne, by which all the property of the ſaid John and Rebecca is ſettled on the longer liver, and on their ſon Francis-Woolaſton Wilkins, and his iſſue; and, for want of ſuch iſſue, to ſuch uſes as the ſaid Rebecca by her laſt will ſhould direct; and notices that her ſon was ſince dead; ſhe then veſts all her property in Thorpe Ernald and Sutton Cheyney, after the death of her huſband and herſelf, to the uſe of William lord Digby of the kingdom of Ireland; ſir Nathan Wrighte, then late lord keeper; John Curzon, of Kedletton, eſq. Robert Burdett, of Foremarke, eſq. William Jeſſon, of Langley, eſq. John Burdett, of Doniſthorp, eſq. her nephew Nicholas Harding, of the Inner Temple, eſq. John Beresford, of Aſhbourne, eſq. John Port, of Ilam, eſq. her nephew James Adams, gent. Simon Barwell, of the borough of Leiceſter, gent. and John Perry, of Winſter, gent.; in truſt; out of the rents, iſſues, and profits, of the ſaid meſſuages, &c. (as ſoon as may be after the deceaſe of herſelf and huſband), "to erect and build at Ravenſton, in remembrance of my dear ſon Francis-Wollaſton Wilkins, an hoſpital, or almſhouſe, for the perpetual habitation and dwelling of 30 poor, blind, aged, or impotent women, widows or maids, and three able women-ſervants for the attendance and ſervice of the ſaid 30 poor women in ſickneſs and health, with convenient out-houſes, court-yards, and back-ſides for the ſaid hoſpital or almſhouſe: and, as ſoon as the ſame ſhall be erected, built, and made habitable, that then my ſaid truſtees and the ſurvivors of them, and their heirs and aſſigns, ſhall nominate and appoint 30 poor women, widows or maidens, of good fame and reputation, to inhabit and dwell in the ſaid hoſpital or almſhouſe, there to be maintained and provided for during their reſpective natural lives, according to the directions I ſhall hereafter declare and appoint. And I do alſo direct and appoint that my ſaid truſtees alſo ſhall maintain and keep three able women-ſervants for ever in the ſaid hoſpital, for the neceſſary attendance and ſerving of the ſaid 30 poor women in ſickneſs and in health, in ſuch manner as my ſaid truſtees, their heirs and aſſigns, ſhall order and direct. I do hereby farther will, deviſe, and appoint, that, when any of the ſaid 30 poor women, or of the ſaid three ſervants, ſhall happen to die, or be removed from the ſaid hoſpital, that then my ſaid truſtees, and the ſurvivors of them, for the time being, and the heirs and aſſigns of the ſurvivors of them, whom I will ſhall be truſtees for the ſaid hoſpital for the time being for ever, ſhall and may nominate and appoint ſome other poor woman to be taken into the ſaid hoſpital, and there to abide and be provided for, in the room or place of the perſon ſo dying or removed; and ſo for ever hereafter as often as any vacation ſhall happen in the ſaid hoſpital. And I do will and appoint, that all the poor women hereafter to be placed in the ſaid hoſpital, and the ſaid three ſervants and attendants, ſhall be ſubject to ſuch orders and rules as I ſhall hereinafter, or by any writing, appoint; and, in default of ſuch appointment, to ſuch rules and orders as my ſaid truſtees, or the ſurvivors of them, or the heirs or aſſigns of the ſurvivors of them, ſhall think fit to make and eſtabliſh, concerning the ſaid hoſpital, and for the better government thereof; and ſubject to ſuch correction or puniſhment, by ſuſpenſion, deprivation, or expulſion from the ſaid hoſpital, or otherwiſe, as ſhall be thereby ordained or eſtabliſhed. And I do give, deviſe, and appoint, to every and each of the ſaid 30 poor women and three ſervants, for the time being, for their maintenance in the ſaid hoſpital, the ſum of three ſhillings and ſixpence per week, or weekly, for ever; and alſo every year a gown and petticoat of grey ſerge, at two ſhillings and four-pence per yard; and alſo two waggon-loads of coals; the ſaid gowns and petticoats to be delivered to them yearly at the feaſt of St. Mark, being the birth-day of my late dear ſon; and the ſaid coals to be delivered to them at the ſaid hoſpital, yearly, between the Annunciation of the bleſſed Virgin Mary and the feaſt of St. Michael the Archangel, in every year. I do hereby appoint my ſaid truſtees, their heirs and aſſigns, for ever, out of the rents, iſſues, and profits, of all the ſaid lands, tenements and premiſes hereby to them given, deviſed, limited, and appointed, to pay the ſaid weekly allowances of money to the ſaid 30 poor women in the ſaid hoſpital, and alſo to the ſaid three ſervants, and alſo to pay for the ſaid gowns and petticoats, and the making of them, and for the ſaid coals, and for the bringing and laying them in at the ſaid hoſpital, for ever; and alſo, from time to time, to repair, maintain, and keep in good order, the out-houſes, building, walls, court-yards, and fences thereof, in all manner of needful and neceſſary reparations whatſoever. And I do will and appoint, that my ſaid truſtees, their heirs and aſſigns, for ever, ſhall provide three-and-thirty braſs badges, whereupon ſhall be cut or engraved three capital Roman letters, F. W. W.; one of which badges ſhall be yearly affixed upon the upper and moſt viſible parts of the breaſts of each of the ſaid gowns, and to be worn together with the ſaid gowns by the ſaid 30 poor women and the ſaid three ſervants, ſo long as they ſhall reſpectively be and continue members or ſervants of the ſaid hoſpital. And in caſe the ſaid rents and revenues of my ſaid lands and premiſes ſhall prove deficient, and fall ſhort of anſwering the yearly expences of the ſaid hoſpital before appointed, and other incident charges in managing the ſaid eſtate and truſt, my mind and will is, and I do hereby direct and appoint, that my ſaid truſtees, their heirs and aſſigns, ſhall, at their diſcretion, either abridge or leſſen the number of the poor of the ſaid hoſpital, and maintain and keep therein under the number of 30 women, or may abridge or leſſen the weekly pay and other allowances of the ſaid poor. And in caſe the ſaid rents and revenues of the ſaid lands and premiſes ſhall be of greater value than is ſufficient for the expences aforeſaid, my mind and will is, and I do direct and appoint, that the over-plus ſhall for ever be employed, expended, and laid out in like charitable uſes; and that my ſaid truſtees, their heirs and aſſigns, ſhall in ſuch caſe either augment and increaſe the number of the poor of the ſaid hoſpital, and make proviſion for, and maintain and keep, a greater number of poor therein than 30, or may increaſe and augment the weekly pay and allowance of the ſaid 30 poor women, as my ſaid truſtees, their heirs and aſſigns, ſhall in their diſcretion think fitting. And my mind and will farther is, and I do hereby direct and appoint, that the poor women to be taken into the ſaid hoſpital or almſhouſe, and maintained and provided for there, as before is directed, ſhall be of the town of Ravenſton aforeſaid, or of the towns or pariſhes of Swanington or Cole Orton, in the ſaid county of Leiceſter, or ſome of them; and ſhall be ſingle women, maidens or widows, of good fame and reputation, and of the age of 50 years at the leaſt, unleſs blind or impotent. And in caſe the ſaid towns or pariſhes ſhall not be able to ſupply the ſaid number of poor women ſo qualified when any occaſion may happen, that then my ſaid truſtees, their heirs and aſſigns, ſhall and may nominate and appoint, into the ſaid hoſpital, any ſuch poor women of any other town or pariſh lying near or adjoining to the ſaid towns of Raunſton, Swanington, and Cole Orton, or ſome one of them. Provided always, my mind and will is, that if any woman who is of my blood and kindred, or of the blood and kindred of my dear huſband, or who is or hath been a ſervant to me or my ſaid huſband, or who is the daughter of any perſon who is a gentleman of higher degree in the ſaid counties of Leiceſter and Derby, or one of them, ſhall be poor and ſtand in need of this my charity, and ſhall be deſirous thereof, being ſingle and unmarried; in ſuch caſe, my ſaid truſtees, their heirs and aſſigns, for the time being, may, if they think proper, nominate to and place in the ſaid hoſpital any ſuch woman or women laſt mentioned, there to inhabit and be provided for as aforeſaid, although they, or any of them, are not of the towns of Ravenſton, alias Raunſtone, Swanington, and Cole Orton, or any town adjoining to the ſaid towns, or any of them. And I do farther direct and appoint, that no married woman ſhall be admitted into the ſaid hoſpital. And if any ſingle woman ſhall be admitted and placed in the ſaid hoſpital, and ſhall afterwards marry, or take a huſband, ſuch woman ſhall be immediately removed and turned out of the ſaid hoſpital, and have no farther benefit thereof. And I do hereby order and declare, that no woman under the age of 50 years, unleſs ſhe be impotent or blind, ſhall be capable of being nominated and appointed into the ſaid hoſpital as one of the 30 poor women there to inhabit and be maintained, except only ſuch women as ſhall be ſervants to the ſaid hoſpital, and ſhall have ſerved there by the ſpace of ſeven years to the ſatisfaction and good liking of the ſaid truſtees for the time being; which ſaid ſervants, and every of them, I declare ſhall be capable of being placed in the ſaid hoſpital, and admitted as one of the 30 poor women, there to inhabit and be maintained as aforeſaid, at the age of 40 years, and although they are not of the ſeveral towns and places herein-before appointed, or any of them. And to the intent that Almighty God may be duly worſhiped by all ſuch as ſhall be inhabitants in the ſaid hoſpital, and that good order and honeſt and laudable converſation may for ever be had and preſerved among them, I do will and appoint, that all the poor women and ſervants, that at any time hereafter ſhall be nominated to and placed in the ſaid hoſpital, ſhall be ſubject to the government of the maſter, for the time being, of the hoſpital that is deſigned to be eſtabliſhed and built at Ravenſton aforeſaid by my ſaid dear huſband, or by his order and appointment. And I do deſire my ſaid dear huſband to direct that the maſter of the ſaid hoſpital ſhall take into his care and government the ſaid poor inhabitants of my ſaid hoſpital, for the time being, for ever. And, until ſuch maſter ſhall be appointed, I do order and direct that my ſaid truſtees, their heirs and aſſigns, ſhall from time to time appoint ſome fitting perſon to read divine ſervice, according to the Liturgy of the Common Prayer of the Church of England, to the poor people of my ſaid hoſpital, between the hours of ten and twelve in the forenoon, and the hours of two and four in the afternoon, every day, either in the pariſh church of Ravenſton aforeſaid, or in ſome fitting place in my ſaid hoſpital to be ſet apart for that purpoſe; and that they cauſe the poor women of my ſaid hoſpital, for ever, duly to attend the ſaid prayers, unleſs prevented by ſickneſs, or ſome other reaſonable impediment; and that my ſaid truſtees, their heirs and aſſigns, do take care for the preſervation of good order, and of a modeſt, quiet, decent, and laudable behaviour in the poor women during their continuance in my ſaid hoſpital, by all ſuch ways and means, rules and orders, as my ſaid truſtees, their heirs and aſſigns, ſhall think moſt proper and moſt conducive to the ends and purpoſes aforeſaid.

---

[1] See a ſmall ground-plan of the Hoſpital, in Plate CXXVI. a. b. c.

[2] John Wilkins, eſq. repreſented the county of Leiceſter in two parliaments, in queen Anne's time, 1702 and 1705.

"And I do hereby farther deviſe, will, and appoint, that my ſaid truſtees, their heirs and aſſigns, ſhall and may make ſuch allowances for reading divine ſervice as aforeſaid as they ſhall think reaſonable; and alſo ſhall and may, from time to time, as occaſion may require, make and appoint ſuch bailiffs, agents, and receivers, for the letting, ſetting, and ordering my lands, tenements, and hereditaments, herein-before given or limited and appointed to them as aforeſaid, and for receiving the rents thereof, with ſuch wages and allowances or ſalaries, as they or the greater number of them, for the time being, ſhall think proper and needful. And to the end that my mind and will herein-before declared, and the truſts herein-before limited and appointed, may be the better performed, I do deſire that my ſaid truſtees, or the greater number of them, do and ſhall meet twice every year at Raunſton aforeſaid; that is to ſay, on the 25th day of April (being the birth-day of my late dear ſon), or, if it ſhall happen on a Sunday, then on the day following, and on the firſt Monday in September, yearly, there to conſider of all matters relating to the ſaid hoſpital, and to make ſuch order, and give ſuch directions, for the better management thereof, and of the revenues herein given them, as ſhall be needful; and alſo to take the accounts of all the bailiffs and ſervants as ſhall be from time to time appointed for the receipt and management of the rents, iſſues, and profits, of the lands and premiſes herein-before bequeathed to my ſaid truſtees as aforeſaid. And I do farther direct and appoint, that, when any five of my ſaid truſtees ſhall depart this life, the ſurvivors of my ſaid truſtees ſhall, with all convenient ſpeed, elect and nominate five other honeſt and worthy gentlemen of the counties of Derby, Warwick, and Stafford, or ſome of them, and not elſewhere, to be truſtees, together with my ſaid ſurviving truſtees, for the performance of this my will, as to the truſts herein declared for the ſaid charitable uſes; and, after ſuch election and nomination, to grant and convey, as learned counſel ſhall adviſe, all my ſaid lands, tenements, and hereditaments, as well of inheritance as leaſehold, to the ſaid five perſons ſo to be elected and nominated, their heirs and aſſigns, for ever, ſubject to the ſeveral truſts herein declared and appointed, and ſo often as occaſion ſhall require. And I farther will and appoint, that all the perſonal expences whatſoever that my ſaid truſtees and their heirs and aſſigns ſhall be put to in the execution of the ſaid truſt herein appointed, or in any other matter and thing relating thereto, ſhall from time to time be ſatisfied and paid in the firſt place, and before any of the ſaid charitable payments or allowances out of the rents and iſſues of the ſaid premiſes herein-before given and deviſed to them as aforeſaid [1]."

---

[1] Abſtracted from the original.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

JOHN SHUTTLEWOOD, B. A. of Bene't college, Cambridge, was born at Wymeſwould in Leiceſterſhire, Jan. 3, 1631, and educated in the grammar-ſchool at Leiceſter. On April 26, 1654, he was ordained to the miniſtry in the congregation of Raunſton, with an honourable teſtimonial from the claſſical preſbytery of Wirkſworth, in the province of Derby. He was a conſiderable ſufferer for Nonconformity, not only by the loſs of a comfortable ſubſiſtence, but by the ſeizure of his goods, and the impriſonment of his perſon. In 1668 he was taken, with many others, ſinging a Pſalm, by 30 or 40 horſemen with ſwords drawn and piſtols cocked. Several of both ſexes were beaten and driven into the field, and diſmiſſed upon promiſe of appearing the next day before ſome juſtice of the peace. Mr. Shuttlewood was examined by juſtice S. "When had he been at his pariſh church to hear divine ſervice?" Mr. S. anſwered, "that he did not know any who charged him with being abſent." The juſtice then aſked him, "if he would promiſe to go the next Sunday?" Mr. S. replied, "that he did not know how Divine Providence might diſpoſe of him before that time." Upon this the juſtice made him his mittimus for a breach of the 35th of Elizabeth, and delivered him to the cuſtody of Charles Gibbons, a quarter-maſter of the troop of trained bands, to convey him to Leiceſter gaol. It being too late that night, they reſted where they were. As Mr. S. was aſking a bleſſing upon their food, Gibbons came into their room, ſwore a bloody oath, and ſaid, "What! are you a-preaching?" Soon after a neighbouring gentleman came, and requeſted that Mr. S. and the reſt of the priſoners might go for that night to their own houſes, and offered a bond of a thouſand pounds for their appearance. Upon the gentleman's preſſing the matter hard, Gibbons girt his ſword about him, and deſperately ſwore, "that ſince he loved them ſo well, he ſhould go with them;" and continued ſwearing all night, "that if the gentleman ſtirred, he would run him through." The next morning Gibbons, ſtaying himſelf with the gentleman, ſent the priſoners away to priſon; and glad they were that they were going, eſteeming their late ſituation worſe than that of a priſon. They continued in confinement till Feb. 24, and were then diſmiſſed. In 1670, ſoon after the act againſt conventicles came out, the ſaid Gibbons came with armed men, and took Mr. Shuttlewood and ſix or ſeven others at an houſe in Th. and carried them to an alehouſe, but after ſome time diſmiſſed them, upon promiſing to appear the next morning at four o'clock at the ſame place. The next day he carried them all to three different places in Leiceſterſhire and Northamptonſhire, keeping them a conſiderable time in each place, and at laſt brought them to C. in Leiceſterſhire, where juſtice C. would have extorted ſome confeſſions from them. Gibbons, commonly a deſperate ſwearer, told the juſtice, in the preſence of them all, "that he would not damn his ſoul for any of them, and that he could not ſwear there was a conventicle." Upon which, the juſtice was about to diſmiſs them; but a lawyer preſent told him "that he might commit him upon notorious evidence." Accordingly he ſent warrants to diſtrain upon Mr. Shuttlewood for £20. and £20. upon the owner of the houſe, and 5*s*. a-piece on others. Mr. S. conveyed away his cattle, but the reſt paid the money. In 1670, while Mr. S. had the king's licence, Gibbons came upon him, and took him and the maſter of the houſe, and brought them before captain C. of Leiceſter, who then refuſed to act, but afterwards ſent out warrants to diſtrain on Mr. Shuttlewood £20. on the houſe, &c.; but both eſcaped, though not without damages, and heavy fines were laid upon the hearers. In the end of February, 1674, Gibbons came to Mr. Shuttlewood's houſe at Lubbenham, Leiceſterſhire, and took ſeveral names, appointing Mr. S. and them to appear before colonel F. who was wont to furniſh him with warrants before-hand. They all appeared according to promiſe; but were diſmiſſed upon aſſurance given to appear upon a lawful ſummons. But, inſtead of ſuch a ſummons, Gibbons procured a warrant of ſir Thomas Beaumont to diſtrain upon Mr. S. for £40. and the officers took away ſeven of his milch cows, and ſold them to one D. S. of L. without Mr. Shuttlewood's knowledge. They paid the money to the juſtices, who gave receipts for it. He was ſeldom permitted to live long in quiet, and was obliged to make frequent removes, being ſometimes in Leiceſterſhire, and ſometimes in Northamptonſhire. But, notwithſtanding theſe troubles, he educated ſeveral perſons for the miniſtry, and appears ſometimes to have had a flouriſhing ſeminary, from a memorandum of his in a pocket almanack, "that ſix ſtudents were added to his academy in one year." The following perſons, among others, ſtudied under him, and afterwards roſe into eminence in life: Mr. Julius Saunders, Mr. John Sheffield, Mr. Matthew Clarke, Dr. Joſhua Oldfield, Mr. Wilſon (the father of the late Rev. Mr. Samuel Wilſon of London), and Mr. Thomas Emlyn. Though Mr. Shuttlewood was bleſt with a robuſt, athletic conſtitution, yet he was of a very tender ſpirit; and the death of one of his children ſo deeply pierced him as to bring on ſome bodily complaints, which he carried with him to his grave. His conſtitution was alſo greatly injured by the ſufferings he met with, and the labours he went through in thoſe rigorous and cruel times, preaching often at unſeaſonable hours and incommodious places; ſo that his uſeful light was extinguiſhed at an earlier period than, if it could have had a fair burning, might have been expected. He died at Creton in Northamptonſhire, March 17, 1688, in the 58th year of his age; where an humble ſtone was erected to his memory in the churchyard, with this brief but honourable teſtimony to his character, "Multùm dilectus, multùm deflendus." He was a very able and learned man; an acceptable and uſeful preacher; much valued, not only in the places where he ſtatedly reſided, but in all the country round about. Mr. Shuttlewood's only ſon, who bore his name, was brought up for the miniſtry by his father. He was a man of conſiderable abilities, and many years a miniſter among the Diſſenters in London, where he died May 17, 1737, in the 71ſt year of his age. He left behind him two ſons and two daughters, the youngeſt of which was married in 1744 to the Rev. Thomas Gibbons, D. D. paſtor of the church at Haberdaſhers Hall, and one of the tutors of the academy at Homerton, to whom the publick are obliged for the above account. It doth not appear that Mr. Shuttlewood publiſhed any thing; but he left ſeveral MSS. which (with the papers above-mentioned) were in the hands of Dr. Gibbons, who died Feb. 22, 1785. Some of theſe are in Latin, and ſome in Engliſh, on ſubjects of learning and divinity; one of which, from an Epiſtle to the Reader, appears deſigned by him for the preſs. One part of it is "upon the Scriptures, Prophecy, Sacraments, Offices in the Church, &c." Another is intituled, "Certain Poſitions or Concluſions concerning Chriſt's Kingdom and his Church;" and the concluſion is, "A Diſcourſe on the Falſe Church [1]."

WILLIAM MAWBEY, ſeventh ſon of Eraſmus Mawbey, of South Kilworth [2] in this county, by Mary Wright his firſt wife, was born Jan. 31, 1659, at Shenton [3]. He ſettled at Raunſton, and was buried there, Dec. 12, 1733. By his wife Anne, daughter of Mr. John Walker, of Swannington, he had an only ſon, JOHN MAWBEY, who was born at Raunſton, and had two wives; 1. Martha Pratt, eldeſt daughter of Mr. Thomas Pratt, of Raunſton, deſcended from John Pratt, eſq. colonel in the Parliamentary army [4]; and by her he had four ſons and four daughters, Francis, Martha, John, another John, Anne, Mary, Elizabeth, and Joſeph. Their mother dying, he married to his ſecond wife Mrs. Jane Shepherd, of Raunſton, widow, by whom he had no iſſue. Of the children, Francis, Martha, the firſt John, and Elizabeth, died under age, and unmarried.

---

[1] Nonconformiſts Memorial, 1778, vol. II. p. 123.

[2] Where a farther hiſtory of the Mawbeys will be given.

[3] See, under Shenton, ſome extracts from the Regiſter.

[4] Of whom ſee before, p. 935.

John Mawbey, eſq. the eldeſt ſurviving ſon, married two wives: Mary, daughter of Mr. Jonathan Darling, of Raunſton, and by her (who died in childbed) he had a daughter, Elizabeth, who died in two months: by his ſecond wife Anne, his couſin-german, daughter of Mr. William Fielding, by Anne his wife, daughter of Mr. Thomas Pratt, he had a daughter Maria, born at Vauxhall, Surrey, Sept. 28, 1756, who died of the ſmall-pox, Dec. 12, 1764.

Dying without any ſurviving iſſue, June 22, 1786, at Fulbrooke, co. Oxford; his body was depoſited in ſir Joſeph Mawbey's vault, in the chancel of Chertſey church, Surrey; at which time the remains of his daughter, Maria Mawbey, were placed therein, being removed from Lambeth church, at the particular deſire of his widow, the late Anne Mawbey, who enjoyed his eſtates in Oxfordſhire and in Surrey. He bequeathed the principal part of his property to Mrs. Catharine Goleborn, daughter of his brother ſir Joſeph.

Anne, the eldeſt ſurviving daughter of the firſt John Mawbey, married Mr. John Cooper, of Burbach, in the county of Leiceſter; and by him (who died in 1766) had ſeveral children; of whom three daughters are now living; the eldeſt, Martha, is married to the Rev. William Cooper, of Higham, vicar of Chertſey, Surrey, a benefice given him by ſir Joſeph Mawbey; and he now poſſeſſes the advowſon of Peckleton, co. Leiceſter, by the gift of his uncle, the late Mr. alderman Fiſher, of Leiceſter. 2. Suſannah, married, firſt, to John-Deans Hogard, eſq. of James Deeping, Lincolnſhire; and, 2dly, to Samuel Greaves, eſq. of Spalding, now of James Deeping. 3. Fanny, married Mr. James Cooper of Leiceſter, now of Burbach. Their mother died in March 1802, aged 77.

Mary, youngeſt daughter of the firſt John, married Mr. William Alcock, of Raunſton, by whom ſhe had ſix children, four of whom are now living (ſee p. 935). 1. Joſeph Alcock, eſq. firſt clerk of the Treaſury, now reſiding at Putney, Surrey; 2. John, an attorney in the Borough; 3. Thomas, a major in the Eaſt India Company's ſervice; 4. Maria, now reſiding at Ravenſtone. Their mother died in Feb. 1802, aged 76.

Joseph Mawbey, a younger brother of the laſt-mentioned John Mawbey, quitted Leiceſterſhire at a very early age, having been educated in Surrey by his uncle Joſeph Pratt, eſq. of Vauxhall, with an intention of being admitted into the church: but that uncle, who was largely engaged in the malt-diſtillery, obſerving the declining ſtate of health of another nephew, then his partner, prevailed upon him to relinquiſh ſtudy for buſineſs; in conſequence of which, he and his brother John Mawbey, eſq. for ſeveral years carried on the malt-diſtillery and vinegar buſineſs at Vauxhall, which for many years were conſiderable enough to yield more than £60,000. per annum to Government in duties.

His uncle, at his death in 1754, left him conſiderable property; which was further increaſed on his marriage, in 1760, with Elizabeth, only ſurviving daughter of his couſin Richard Pratt, eſq. of Vauxhall aforeſaid; who, on the death of her brother Joſeph Pratt, eſq. in 1766, then a fellow commoner of Trinity college, Cambridge, ſucceeded to all his eſtates.

In 1757, he ſerved the office of ſheriff for the county of Surrey. At the general election in 1761, he was choſen one of the repreſentatives for the borough of Southwark; July 30, 1765, was created a baronet; and in March 1768 was again elected member for the borough of Southwark. At the general election in 1774, he was candidate to repreſent the county of Surrey in parliament; but four other candidates having previouſly conſolidated their intereſts againſt him, he was defeated at that time. Sir Francis Vincent's death making a vacancy in June 1775, he was again a candidate to repreſent that county in parliament, and was choſen by a conſiderable majority; ſir Francis Vincent, ſon of the former member, and Mr. Norton, now lord Grantley, being his opponents. At this period, both ſir Joſeph and his brother relinquiſhed their buſineſs at Vauxhall.

In 1780 he was again choſen knight of the ſhire for Surrey, with admiral Keppel, the conteſt lying between the latter and the hon. Thomas Onſlow; and in 1784 was again elected for that county. He was for many years one of the chairmen of the quarter ſeſſions for Surrey; and his life, as a magiſtrate and member of parliament, was active, diſintereſted, and independent. He died June 16, 1798, at his ſeat at Botleys; where Lady Mawbey alſo died in 1790, and was buried at Chertſey; in the chancel of which church a handſome monument is erected, with the following inſcription:

"Dame Elizabeth Mawbey, wife of ſir Joseph Mawbey, bart.
of Botleys, in this pariſh, after ſuſtaining a long and painful illneſs with the greateſt fortitude and reſignation, died on the 19th day of Auguſt, 1790,
in the 46th year of her age.

"Why weep for me?" (the blameleſs woman ſaid)
"We all muſt die; and I am not afraid—
No good to me affords or ſigh, or tear;
I've done no wrong, and therefore cannot fear:
Good works and Truth ſhall cheer life's parting ſcene,
For Virtue only makes the mind ſerene.
Yes, we muſt part!—the conflict now is o'er,
And Huſband, Children, Friends, in vain deplore!
But ah! bleſt Saint! to all around impart
Thy ſettled goodneſs, thy unerring heart,
Which bad thee ſhine in ev'ry ſtate of life,
As Daughter, Maiden, Parent, Friend and Wife!—
Bad thee be pious, feelingly to grieve
For others wants, and ſilently relieve!—
Bad thee, with Fortitude ſupreme, ſuſtain
The waſte of ſickneſs and the rack of pain;
So ſhall we all obtain Heaven's bleſt abode,
Nor dread the preſence of a righteous God!"

By this lady ſir Joſeph had nine children; of which two only are now living; ſir Joſeph, the preſent baronet; and Catherine, who married Thomas Goleborn, eſq.

Sir Joſeph lived in habits of great perſonal intercourſe and friendſhip with the right honourable Arthur Onſlow, eſq. Speaker of the Houſe of Commons, from the time of his ſerving the office of ſheriff of Surrey, till the latter's death in 1768; and he was the inſtrument, under Providence, of ſaving the life of Mr. Onſlow. The malt-diſtillery had been under prohibition from the year 1757 to 1760, on account of the high price of corn: in the latter year application was made to parliament to permit its going on again under high duties; and this begat an enquiry in the Houſe of Commons reſpecting that trade; during which ſir Joſeph was examined as a witneſs before a committee of the whole houſe. The Speaker had retired to his own chamber; but left word with a friend to inform him when his countryman, as he called ſir Joſeph, was to be examined. On his being called to the bar, the Speaker quitted his chamber, and came into the gallery of the houſe; immediately after which, one of the turrets of the Houſe of Commons was blown by the violence of the wind, and fell through the cieling into the very part of the room where Mr. Onſlow a minute before had been ſitting. An eſcape ſo providential had its due weight on Mr. Onſlow's mind; and he always afterwards attributed his eſcape to his curioſity in wiſhing to hear ſir Joſeph's examination.

Amidſt the hurry of buſineſs and public life he cultivated a love for ſtudy; and having, when a ſchool-boy, written many poetic pieces, he afterwards at intervals amuſed himſelf in the ſame way. For ſome years he was a regular correſpondent to the Gentleman's Magazine [1], and to ſeveral other periodical works; in almoſt all of which are many of his poetical compoſitions, ſome with his name at length, but moſt commonly under borrowed ſignatures.

---

[1] His correſpondence with Mr. Urban may be ſeen, in his Hiſtory of the Surrey Elections, vol. LVIII. p. 1052; in verſes on the ſubject of his Lady before marriage, vol. LX. p. 649; in his account of her death, ibid. 748. 769; in his account of the poet Cook, vol. LXI. 1090. 1178; LXII. 26. 215. 313; his letter to the magiſtrates, LXVI. 379; his propoſal for a parliamentary reform, and account of his own parliamentary conduct, ibid. 380; letter to Dr. Leonard Howard, LXVII. 702; ſpeech after the election for Surrey, 1774, ibid. 825; and in many poetical eſſays, both with and without his name.

Pedigree

Pedigree of SALISBURY, of RAVENSTON, NEWTON BURGULAND, and SNIBSTON.

(From the Viſitations of 1619 (cited by Mr. Saliſbury) and 1682 [1].)

Arms allowed by William Camden, Clarenceux, to Mr. William Saliſbury, of Newton Burguland: Gules, a lion rampant Argent, charged on the ſhoulder with a creſcent Sable, between three creſcents Or. Creſt, a lion rampant Argent, charged on the ſhoulder with a creſcent Sable, holding in his dexter foot a creſcent Or; Plate CXXVI. fig. 22.

Saliſbury. = ...

1. John Saliſbury, of Ravenſton, firſt ſon. = ...
2. Richard Saliſbury, of Newton Burguland. = Joan, daughter and heir of . . . . Gillett.

Robert Saliſbury, of Ravenſton. = ...

William Saliſbury, of Newton Burguland. = ... dau. of . . . . Wright, of Loughborough.

1. Thomas Saliſbury, of Ravenſton. = Anne, dau. of Joſeph Creſwell, of the county of Cheſter.
2. John, died ſ. p.
3. William, died ſ. p.

Richard Saliſbury, of Newton Burguland. = Elizabeth, dau. and heir of Edward Kirk, of Whittowe, in the pariſh of Chapel en le Frith, co. Derby.

1. Ambroſe Saliſbury, of Ravenſton. = Elizabeth, dau. of George Hopkins, of Wedneſbury, co. Staff.
2. Thomas, a draper in London.
Sarah.

Katharine, dau. to Thomas Saliſbury, firſt wife. = 3. Richard Saliſbury, rector of Ravenſton. = Frances, dau. of . . . . Wightman, of Burbach, ſecond wife.

1. William Saliſbury, of Newton. = Cornelia, dau. and heir of John Berye of Bocheſton.
2. Edward, died ſ. p.

Heſter. = John Barwell, of Packwood, co. Warwick.
Elizabeth. = John Bent, of Stoney Staunton.
1. Nathanael, æt. 18.
2. Samuel, æt. 15.
1. Sarah.
2. Abigail.

1. Thomas, æt. 24, 1619.
2. Joſeph, apprentice with William Hawkes, a ſalter in Friday-ſtreet, æt. 19, 1619.
3. Ambroſe, æt. 21, 1619.
1. Margaret. = Thomas Lavender, grocer, in Woodſtreet, London.
2. Elizabeth. = William Michell, of Thrinkſton.
3. Anne.
4. Lydia.
5. Mary.
6. Martha.
7. Jane.

Richard Saliſbury, of Newton Burguland, æt. 34 in 1619; died about 1640. = Elizabeth, dau. of Robert Burgulon, of Newton Burguland.
2. John Saliſbury, æt. 32. = Elizabeth, dau. of Jo. Warde, of Bocheſton.
3. Edward, a draper in Redcroſs-ſtreet, at the ſign of the Saliſbury Plain, æt. 30.
4. Thomas, æt. 24.
5. Nathanael, æt. 15.
6. William, died ſ. p.
7. Paul, d. ſ. p.
1. Elizabeth, marr. Francis Muckeſlow, of Desford.
2. Jane, marr. Arthur Brooke, of Longerſton.
3. Abigail.
4. Mary.
5. Sarah.

1. William, 2 years old in 1619.
2. John, 1 month old Sept. 8, 1619.
Cornelia.
Elizabeth.

1. William Saliſbury, of Newton, æt. 7 in 1619, living in 1682, æt. ferè 70. = Jane, dau. of Geo. Clare, of Newton.
2. Richard Saliſbury, of London, æt. 65. = Mabell . . . . .
1. Mary, wife of John Jeſſon, of Leiceſter.
2. Elizabeth.
3. Alice, wife of Thomas Sutton of Newton.
Three other daughters.

Richard. Elizabeth. Mabell.

1. Richard Saliſbury, of Newton. = Elizabeth, dau. of John Oneby, of Barwell, gent. died Sept. 1, 1682.
2. William.
1. Elizabeth, wife of Tho. Sareſon.
2. Jane, living 1682, unmarried.
3. Anne, wife of Robert Coleman, of London.
4. Mary, living unmarried.
5. Sarah, wife of John Riley, of the city of London.
6. Abigail, wife of Stephen Coleman, of London.
7. Cornelia, living unmarried.
8. Alice, æt. 17.
9. Hannah, æt. 13.

William, born Sept. 20, 1679.
Elizabeth, æt. 1 month 1682.

◆

. . . . . Saliſbury, of Ravenſton. = ...

1. John Saliſbury, of Snibſton, gent. died Aug. 18, 1795, æt. 85. = ...
Elizabeth = Robert Creſwell, eſq. of Raunſton.
2. Ambroſe Saliſbury, died 1791. = Philippa Wells, ſiſter to David Wells, eſq. of Burbach [2], died 1801.

Ambroſe Saliſbury, of Nortolt, Guilſborough, co. Northampton.
Ambroſe Saliſbury, eſq. of Caldecot, unmarried 1803.
Mary. = John Roby, of Shenton; now of Alvecote Priory, co. Warwick.

Pedigree of PESTELL, of PACKINGTON and RAVENSTON.

Thomas Peſtell, born about 1586; vicar of Packington; reſigned before 1644; living 1659. = ... dau. of Mrs. Katharine Carr [3].

1. Thomas Peſtell, born in 1613; vicar of Packington 1644; rector of Markfield; and confrater of Wigſton's Hoſpital; buried in Ravenſton chancel 1701.
2. William Peſtell, rector of Cole Orton 1644; of Ravenſton 1661 (which he reſigned); buried at Cole Orton Jan. 31, 1695-6. = ...

Elizabeth . . . ., born April 14, 1657; died the 16th, and was buried the 19th of October 1701; firſt wife. = Thomas Peſtell, rector of Ravenſton 1693; died 1741. = Elizabeth Twinbury, ſecond wife.

Thomas Peſtell, born June 12, 1694.
Sarah, born Oct. 12, 1697; buried at Ravenſton Dec. 12, 1755.
William Peſtell, born 10 March, 1716.
Charles Peſtell, of Aſhby, gent. born Sept. 9, 1721; died Aug. 2, 1783. = Jane Saunders.
Anne, born Feb. 20, 1710-11.
Elizabeth, born March 15, 1718.
Mary, born Jan. 20, 1725; married . . . . . . Alt; buried at Ravenſton July 6, 1799.

1. Ellis-Shipley Peſtell, of Aſhby, gent. living unmarried 1803.
2. Charles Peſtell, of Stratford on Avon, ſurgeon, without iſſue ſurviving 1803. = Elizabeth Zouch.

---

[1] Entered by Richard Saliſbury, of Newton Burguland, Sept. 13, 1682.

[2] Under which pariſh ſome account of this very ingenious and worthy Antiquary will be given.

[3] See p. 929.

ROTHLEY,

ROTHLEY,

in antient writings called Roel, Roely, Ralegh, Rolegh, Rowleya, Rothele, Rotheley, Rodolei (or rather Roðolei), and afterwards Rothley Temple, "is feated," fays Mr. Wyrley, "on a brook that fhortly falleth into the Sore. The town belonged antiently to the Templars, and is fo furnamed [1]." It is a confiderable village on the Weft fide of the turnpike-road leading from Leicefter to Loughborough, from each of which places it is diftant about five miles; bounded on the North by Mountforell; on the Eaft by Coffington; on the South by Wanlip; on the Weft by Thurcafton; and on the North-weft the large common called Rothley Plain abuts on Swithland. In the ecclefiaftical divifion of the county, it is within the deanry of Akeley.

Rothley, which ftill remains the headfhip of feveral fubordinate manors, was formerly parcel, as appeareth by the book of Domefday [2], of the poffeffions of the Crown; and, as fuch, has the privilege of being accounted Antient Demefne; which is defined by Serjeant Raftall [3] to be "certain tenures holden of thofe manors that were in the hands of Edward the Confeffor before the Conqueft, or of king William the Conqueror [4]."

The fituation of this lordfhip at the time of the Norman Conqueft is thus defcribed:

"The king holds Rodolei. King Edward held it. Here are five ploughlands; two of thefe are in the demefne, and here are two ploughs; and twenty-nine villans, with one prieft and eighteen bordars, have fix ploughs. There is a mill of four fhillings value; and there are thirty-eight acres of meadow. The demefne wood is a mile long, and half a mile broad. The wood of the villans is four furlongs long, and three broad.

This vill is worth 62 fhillings; and the manor has the following members belonging to it.

In Adelicheftone are fix oxgangs. It lies wafte.

In Barnefbi are five ploughlands, all but one oxgang, and 15 acres of meadow.

In Setgrave are fix ploughlands, and a meadow three furlongs long, and one and a half broad.

In Seglebi are two ploughlands and two bovates, and ten acres of meadow.

In Tochebi are fix ploughlands, ten acres of meadow, and a wood two furlongs long and one broad.

In Sciftitone are 12 ploughlands, a mill of 12 pence value, and a wood three furlongs long and one broad.

In Merdefelde are three ploughlands, and eight acres of meadow.

In another Merdefelde are three ploughlands, and eight acres of meadow.

In Elftede are three ploughlands, all but two oxgangs; one acre of meadow, and a wood a furlong long, and the fame broad.

In Caldewelle and Wiche are four ploughlands, and two mills of two fhillings value.

In Tiletone are two ploughlands, four acres of meadow, and five acres of wood.

In Offerdebie are 12 ploughlands, two mills of eight fhillings value, and 20 acres of meadow.

In Caibam are four ploughlands, and eight acres of meadow.

In Worcnodebie are fix ploughlands, and ten acres of meadow.

In Tuiverde are four ploughlands and a half, and eight acres of meadow.

In Sumerlidebie is one plough and a half, and there are fix acres of meadow.

In Frifbie are eight ploughlands, and four acres of meadow, and two fhillings are paid from part of a mill.

In Saxelbie is one ploughland, and there are five acres of meadow.

In Grimeftone are three ploughlands, all but one oxgang and a half.

In Badegrave are fix ploughlands, all but three oxgangs, and there are ten acres of meadow.

In Gadefbie are eight ploughlands, and there are three acres of meadow.

In thefe are two hundred and four focmen, with one hundred and fifty-feven villans and ninety-four bordars, who have eighty-two ploughs; and they pay among them all thirty-one pounds, eight ſhillings, and one penny [1]."

---

[1] Wyrley, MS.

[2] In the Differtation on Domefday, vol. I. p. xli. I ventured to fuggeft, that Mr. Burton might never have feen Domefday-book; and it is ftill probable that he had not feen it till after the publication of his Hiftory in 1622. But in his corrected copy, now before me, he has altered the word to which I alluded; and fubjoined the following note: "This book, called Domefday-book, was a regifter, or liber ratiocinarius, or a book of furview, containing in it all the lands throughout almoft all England, and in whofe tenure thofe lands were then; fo called, for that it was intended to continue till the day of doom; or, as it is in the Black Book of the Exchequer *, "as the laft judgement at the day of Dome could not be avoided, fo the judgement and authority of this book produced could not be infringed or gainfaid." It was begun in the reign of king Edward the Confeffor, before the Conqueft, as appeareth by the author of the old "Natura Brevium," fol. 14; but finifhed in the time of William the Conqueror, as Mr. Lambarde proveth out of Gervafe de Tilbury, in his Explication of Saxon words, in the word Jus Dacorum. The like Ingulphus abbot of Croyland (who lived in the Conqueror's time) fetteth down in thefe words: "Totam terram defcripfit; nec erat hyda in totâ Angliâ, quin valorem ejus & poffefforem fcivit, nec lacus, nec locus aliquis quin in regis rotulo extitit defcriptus, ac ejus redditus & proventus, ipfa poffeffio, & ejus poffeffor regiæ notitiæ manifeftatus, juxta taxatorum fidem, qui electi de qualibet patriâ territorium proprium defcribebant. Ifte rotulus vocatus eft Rotulus Wintoniæ, & ab Anglis pro fuâ generalitate, quòd omnia tenementa totius terræ continuit, Domefday cognominatur." It is fo called in Stat. 1 Ric. II. cap. 6; and in Ockham "de Fifci regii ratione †." In imitation whereof, divers abbeys (whofe revenues were great) had their regifters and books of furvey; as the abbey of Leicefter, St. Alban's, Abington, Ramfey, Merevale, and Tutbury, and the Hofpitallers of St. John of Jerufalem, and many others, fome of which I have feen. The learned fir Henry Spelman, in his Archæologia or Gloffary, hath written of this book more at large, fol. 218; who faith, that it was begun 1083, 16 Will. Conq (as appeareth by the Annals of Waverley), and ended 1087, 20 Will. Conq. (as it appeareth by the book itfelf)." Burton, MS.

[3] Expofition des Termes de Ley, fol. 29.

[4] "Thefe tenants in antient demefne (for that they were bound by their tenure to plough and hufband the king's demefnes, before and in the Conqueft time ‡,) had divers privileges belonging unto them; viz. that they fhould not be impleaded out of their own manor §; to be free from paying toll throughout England for all manner of things touching their own provifion ‖; to be free from all taxes and tallages, pontage, murage, terrage, laftage, and paffage; and not to be impannelled or put on juries or inquefts in the country, or at the affizes ; to be free from payment to the expences of the knights of the parliament for the country, and not to be returned burgeffes to ferve in parliament; to be exempt from court-leets, or the fheriff's turn ††. The tenants in antient demefne were of two forts; either free tenants by charter, or cuftomary tenants which held by copy of court-roll ‡‡; the free-tenants might bring a writ of Right Clofe, or a Monftraverunt; the cuftomary tenants a pleint in the bafe court §§. The free tenants hold their land in focage, and not in knight fervice: for land held by knight fervice was frankfee, and not antient demefne. And a common perfon (as well as the king) may be lord of a manor in antient demefne, and may alike alter the tenure thereof, and make it frankfee ‖‖." Burton, p. 33; revifed by his MS.

* Book II. chap. laft but two. † Ingulphus, p. 516. b. ‡ MS. A. 279. 391. 408. MS. B. 436. 128.
§ Fitzherbert, Natura Brevium, 11. ‖ 46 Edw. III. Regift. 25. 49 Edw. III. 22, 23. 7 Hen. IV. 45. Regift. fol. 26. 11 Hen. IV. 2.
 Dugdale, Mon. Angl. vol. I. p. 303. †† Regift. 181. ‡‡ Roper. §§ Fitzherbert, Natura Brevium, 11, 12. ‖‖ Affif. pl. 13

The next mention we find of Rothley is in a charter of king Stephen, about 1150, to Ranulph de Gernoniis, the ſecond earl of Cheſter [2]; wherein, among other ample poſſeſſions, he granted him The Soke of Rodeley. Soke, from the Saxon Socne, ſignified the power of adminiſtering juſtice; as alſo the circuit of a liberty, franchiſe, or local privileged juriſdiction; and therefore the Saxons frequently called by that name thoſe parts or members of large manors which belonged to, or were disjoined from, the principal or capital ſeat of the manor [3]. To theſe there belonged of old ſeveral privileges, as, 1. Soc, 2. Sac, 3. Team, 4. Toll, 5. Infangthef, 6. Utfangthef, &c.; that is, 1. Power to keep courts. 2. To impoſe and levy fines and amerciaments among their tenants. 3. To judge and puniſh their villans and vaſſals. 4. To buy and ſell, or to hold a kind of market within the limits of their manors; with, 5. Power to try thieves and malefactors belonging to their manors, and taken within the precincts thereof; and, 6. To judge foreign thieves taken within the ſaid manors. But theſe juriſdictions and liberties have been long laid aſide; though they are rather antiquated and diſcontinued, than taken away by any law that we have ſeen [4].

About 1152, by a charter of Henry Fitz Empreſs duke of Normandy (afterwards king Henry II.), dated at the Devizes, co. Wilts, the ſame earl of Cheſter had another grant of the Soke of Rothley [5]; which in 1180 was amerced in the Exchequer for ten marks, pro libertatibus ſuis [6].

That the abbot and convent of St. Mary de Pratis at Leiceſter had a ſmall annual ſum ariſing from lands at Rothley, appears by the following entry:

"Eccleſie de Rodeley patronus dominus rex, ſecundum matriculum epiſcopi.

"Habemus in villâ de Rodle annuum redditum xiid. ad inveniendum luminare ad miſſam de Dominâ, ex dono Willielmi capellani, filii Ricardi de Roleyâ, recipiendum annuatim per manus Ricardi patris ſui vel heredum ſuorum, pro tribus acris quas idem Ricardus tenuit de ipſo in eadem villâ.

"Habemus confirmationem Ricardi filii Rogeri de Roleyâ, pro dicto redditu xii denariorum ſolvendo annuatim de ipſo vel ex heredibus ſuis ſacriſte Leyc', pro tribus acris terre quas ipſe tenuit de Willielmo fratre ſuo. Et ſi defecerit in ſolutione, tunc archidiaconus vel decanus qui pro tempore fuerit per cenſuram eccleſiaſticam poteſt compellere eos ad plenariam ſolutionem faciendum [7]."

April 5, 1217, king Henry III. ſent his writ to the ſheriff of Leiceſterſhire, requiring him forthwith to give Robert Vipont full ſeiſin of all the lands of John Vipont his brother (then with the king's enemies) in his bailiwick. But hear the record:

"Rex vicecomiti Leic' ſalutem. Precipimus tibi, quod ſine dilatione plenam ſeiſinam habere facias Roberto de Veteri Ponte, de omnibus terris que fuerunt Ivonis de Veteri Ponte, fratris ſui, in ballivâ tuâ, qui eſt cum inimicis noſtris; quas ei conceſſimus quamdiu ei placuerit. Teſte Comite [Gulielmo Mareſcallo comite Pembrochie, Regis gubernatore], apud Winton', v° die Aprilis [8]."

In Auguſt the ſame year, the king, by his writ, required the ſheriff to permit John de Harecourt to take ſuch an aid of his manor of Roleg as he (the king himſelf) would have taken if the ſaid manor had been in his hands:

"Mandatum eſt vicecomiti Leic', quod permittat Johannem de Harecourt capere tale auxilium de manerio ſuo de Roleg, in ballivâ ſuâ, quale inde caperemus ſi manerium illud eſſet in manu noſtrâ. Teſte Comite, apud Oxon', xii° die Auguſti [9]."

About the year 1218, John de Harecourt, at that time a Cruſader in the Holy Land, gave a conſiderable part of his property within the Soke of Rothley to the maſter and brethren of The Temple of Solomon of Hieruſalem; a religious order of military knights, which with rapid ſtrides obtained to ſuch unprecedented wealth and conſequence, that it may not be deemed improper in this place to give ſome account of their origin, and of their introduction into England.

About the year 1118, under the reign of Baldwin II. king of Jeruſalem [10], certain gentlemen honoured with knighthood, having betaken themſelves to a religious courſe of life, under the patriarch of Hieruſalem, after the rule or Canons Regular, began this or-

---

[1] "Rex tenet Rodolei. Rex Edwardus tenuit. Ibi ſunt 5 carucatæ terræ. In dominico ſunt due de his; & ibi due carucæ; & 29 villani, cum preſbytero & 18 bordariis, habent 6 carucas. Ibi molinum de 4 ſolidis, & 37 acræ prati. Silva dominica 1 leugæ longitudinis, & dimidiæ leugæ latitudinis. Silva villanorum 4 quarentenarum longitudinis, & 3 quarentenarum latitudinis. Hæc villa valet per annum 62 ſolidos.—Huic manerio pertinent ſubſequentia membra:

In Acelacheſtone ſunt 6 bovatæ terræ. Vaſta eſt.

In Barneſbi v carucatæ terræ, 1 bovata minus, & 15 acræ prati.

In Setgrave 6 carucatæ terræ, 1 bovata minus, & 15 acræ prati.

In Seglebi 2 carucatæ terræ & 2 bovatæ, & 10 acræ prati.

In Tochebi 6 carucatæ terræ & 10 acræ prati. Silva 3 quarentenarum longitudinis, & 1 quarentenæ latitudinis.

In Sciftitone 12 carucatæ terræ, & molinum de 12 denariis. Silva 3 quarentenarum longitudinis, & 2 quarentenarum latitudinis.

In Merdefelde 3 carucatæ terræ, & 8 acræ prati.

In aliâ Merdefelde 3 carucatæ terræ, & 8 acræ prati.

In Elſtede 3 carucatæ terræ, 2 bovatis minus, & 1 acra prati. Silva 1 quarentenæ longitudinis, & alia latitudinis.

In Caldeuuelle & Wiche 4 carucatæ terræ, & 2 molini de 2 ſolidis.

In Tiletone 2 carucatæ terræ & 4 acræ prati; & 5 acræ ſilvæ.

In Offerdebie 12 carucatæ terræ, & 2 molini de 8 ſolidis, & 20 acræ prati.

In Caiham 4 carucatæ terræ, & 8 acræ prati.

In Worenodebie 6 carucatæ terræ, & 10 acræ prati.

In Tuiuorde 4 carucatæ terræ & dimidia, & 6 acræ prati.

In Sumerlidebie 1 carucata terræ & dimidia, & 6 acræ prati.

In Friſebie 8 carucatæ terræ, 4 acræ prati, & de parte molini 2 ſolidi.

In Saxelbie 1 carucatæ terræ & 2 acræ prati.

In Grimeſtone 3 carucatæ terræ, unâ bovatâ & dimidia minus.

In Badegrave 6 carucatæ terræ, 3 bovatis minus, & 10 acræ prati.

In Gadeſbie 8 carucatæ terræ, 3 bovatis minus, & 12 acræ prati.

In his ſunt 204 ſochmanni, cum 157 villanis & 94 bordariis, habentes 82 carucas; & reddunt inter omnes 31 libras & 8 ſolidos & 1 denarium." Domeſday, fol. 230. a. 2. b. 1.

[2] Communicated by ſir William Dugdale, "ex autographo in Caſtello de Pontefract." See ſir Peter Leyceſter's Cheſhire.

[3] Spelman's Gloſſary, voc. Soca.

[4] Sir Thomas Cave, from the Chetwynd MS.

[5] The charter is printed in the Hiſtory of the Town of Leiceſter, in vol. I. p. 220, from a MS. in the Britiſh Muſeum; but, the latter part of it being there ſomewhat imperfect, the following brief abſtract is here repeated:

"Henricus dux Normannie, & comes Andegaviæ, omnibus archiepiſcopis, epiſcopis, comitibus, baronibus, vicecomitibus, & omnibus amicis & fidelibus ſuis, Normannis & Anglis, ſalutem. Sciatis me dediſſe & conceſſiſſe Ranulfo comiti Ceſtrie omnem hereditatatem ſuam Normannie & Anglie, ſicut unquàm aliquis anteceſſorum ſuorum eam meliùs & liberiùs tenuit: & nominatim caſtellum de Virâ & Barbifluvium cùm tali libertate, quòd per totam baleugam poſſit capere forisfactum ſuum: & Maunsfield cùm ſocâ, & Roela cùm ſocâ, & Stanleiam juxtà Coventreiam cùm ſocâ; & de Belvario tenebo ei rectum quàm citiùs potero, ſicut de ſuâ hereditate: & ſex baronibus ſuis, quos elegerit, cuique centum libratas terre dabo, de his que mihi ex hoſtibus meis adquiſita acciderint, de me tenendas: & omnibus parentibus ſuis ſuam reddo hereditatem undè potens ſum, & de hoc undè ad preſens potens non ſum, rectum plenarium tenebo ex quo potens ero. Teſtibus; Willielmo cancellario, Reginaldo comite Cornubie, Rogero comite Herdiâ, Patricio comite Saliſburie, Umfrido de Bohun dapifero, J. filio Gilberti, R. de Hum' conſtabulario, Guarino filio Ger, Roberto de Curcy dapifero, Manaſſero Byſſet dapifero, Philippo de Columbe. Ex parte comitis Ranulfi, Willielmo comite Lincolnie, Hugone Wac', G. Caſtell de Fines, Simone filio Willielmi, Thurſtano de Monteforti, Gaufrido de Coſtentyn, Willielmo de Verdon, Ricardo de Pincerna, Rogero Wac', Simone filio Oſberti. Apud Deviſas." The original is in one of the great Coucher books in the Dutchy Office, tom. II. Honor ſive Soca de Bolingbroke, num. 7. p. 498, 499.

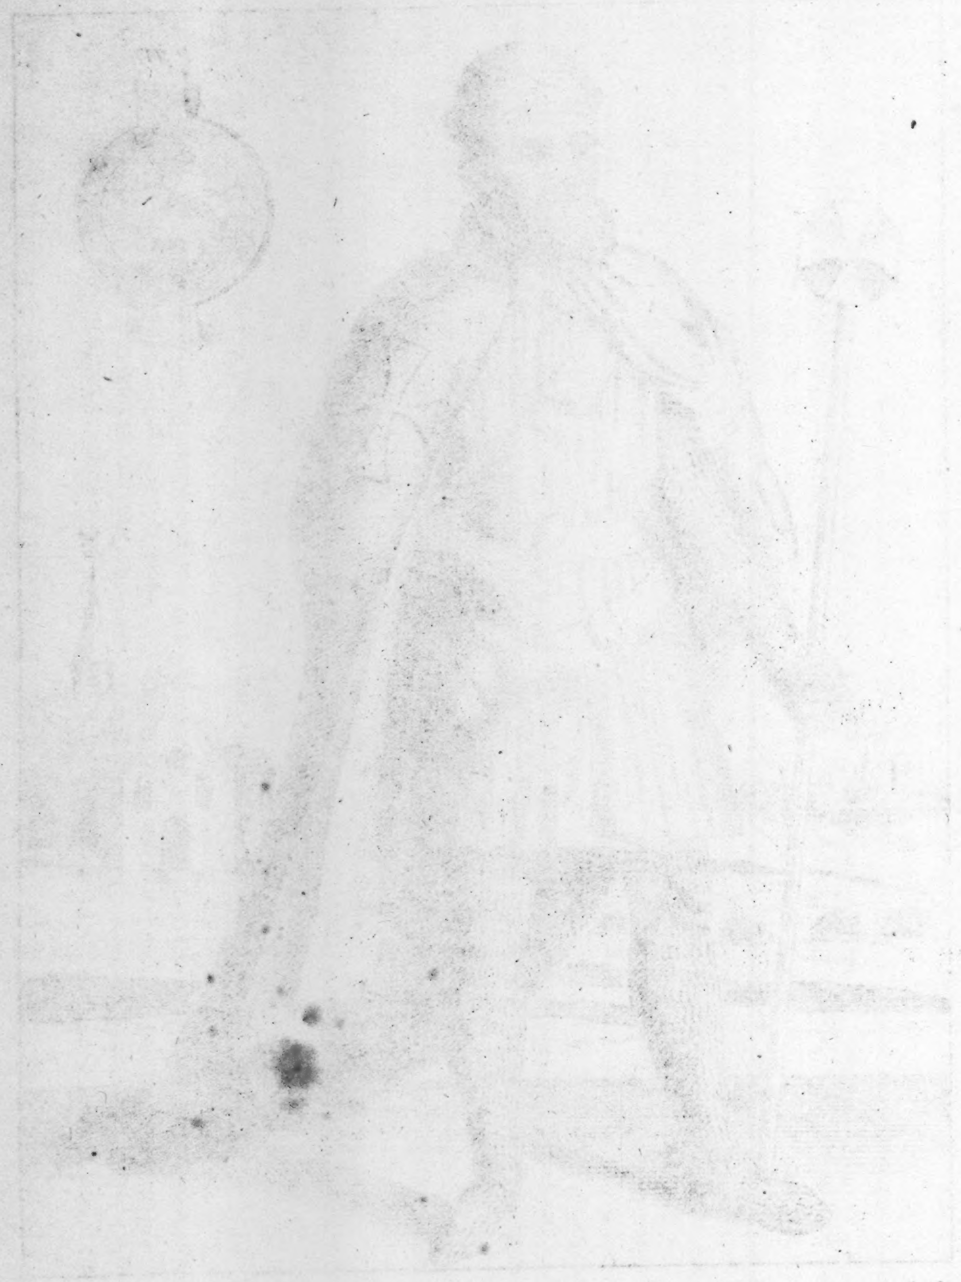
[6] Madox, Firma Burgi, p. 88; ex Mag. Rot. 26 Hen. II; Rot. 7. b. Warwichſcira & Legereceſtrieſcire.

[7] Charyte's Rentale, fol. cxxiii.

[8] Clauſ. 1 Hen. III. m. 9.

[9] Clauſ. ejuſdem anni, m. 11.

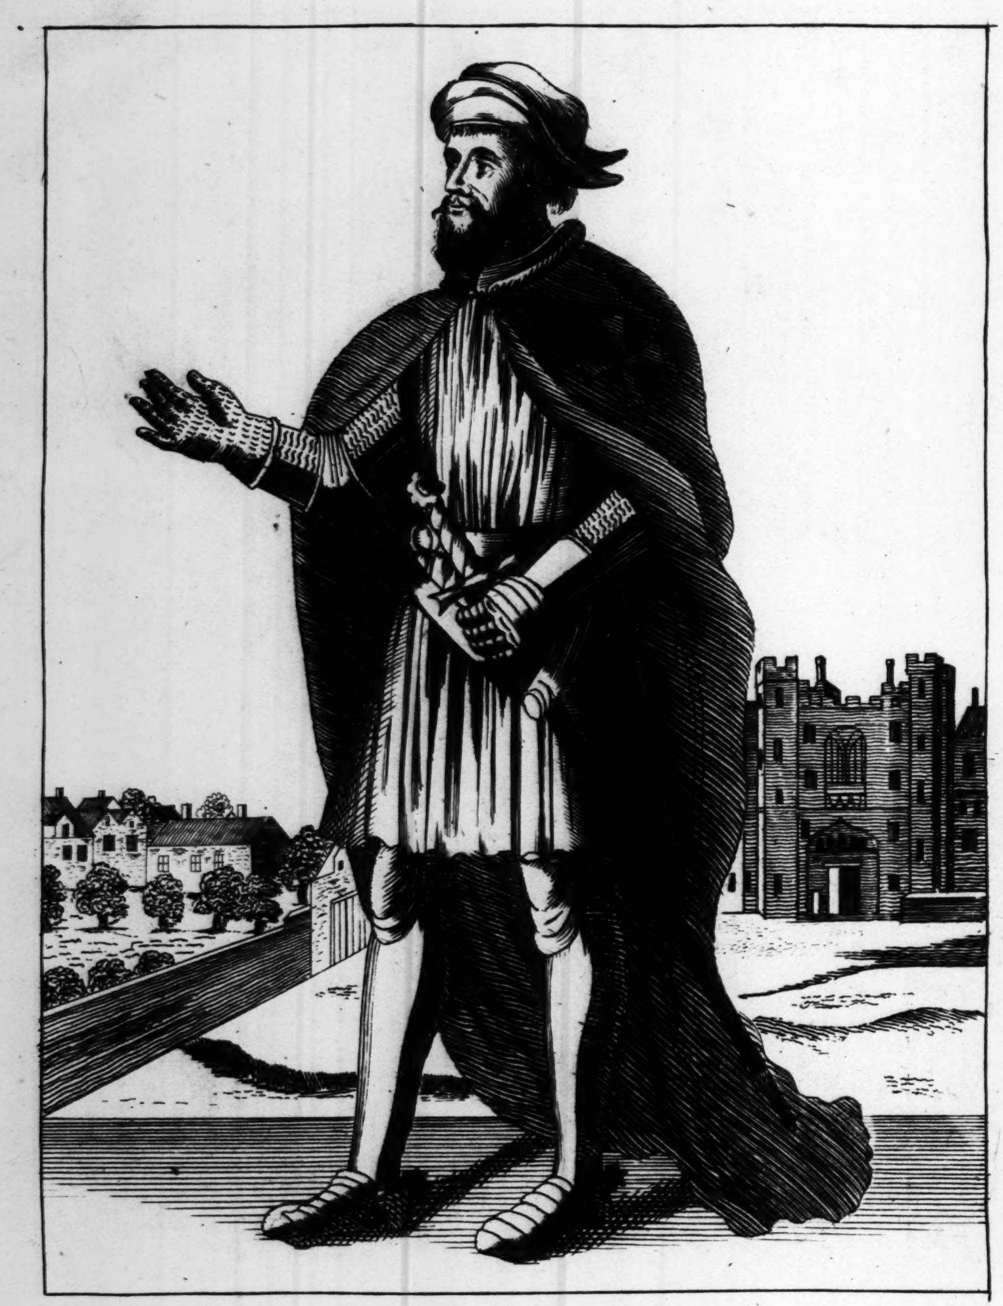
[10] Pantaleon de Ordine Johannis. Fl. Cherub. Comp. Bull. F. 1. p. 87.



[illegible]

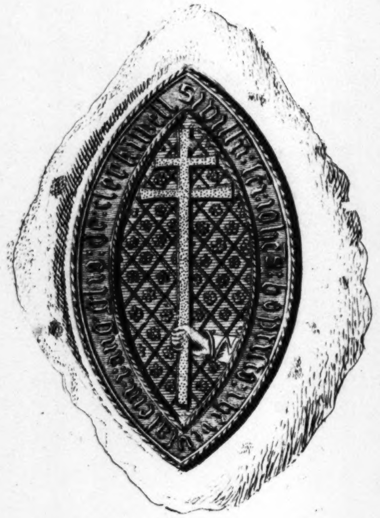
[illegible]

Vol. III. Pl. CXXVII. p. 943.

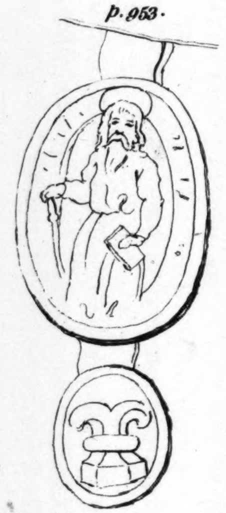


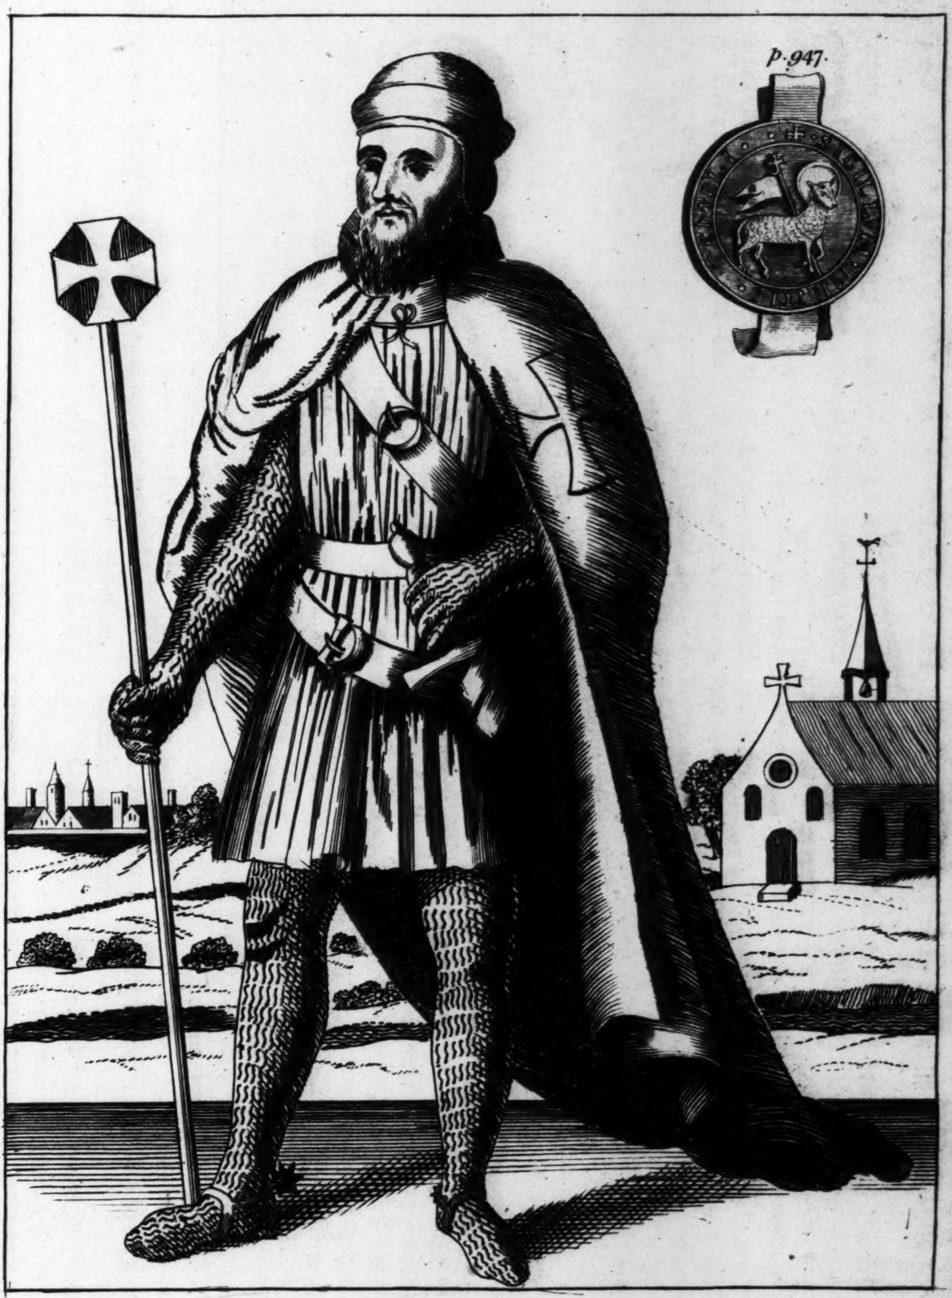
A KNIGHT HOSPITALAR.

p. 953.



p. 953.





A KNIGHT TEMPLAR.

der[1]; the firſt of which were Hugh de Paganis and Godfrey de St. Audomare; who in the beginning were ſo poor, though they were valiant men, as that they had but one horſe to ride on; in memory of which their primitive poverty, and to the end they might be mindful of humility, they had the figure of two men riding upon one horſe engraven on their ſeal; which two knights, having no certain habitation, and ſeeking for a place of abode, were ſo much favoured by Baldwyn, then king of Jeruſalem, as that he aſſigned them a piece of ground within his own palace, ſituate on the South part of the Temple of our Lord, for that purpoſe; whereunto the canons of the Temple added a ſtreet adjoining, for erecting of buildings neceſſary for their uſe; the patriarch, with the king, nobles, and prelates, allowing them lands out of their demeſnes for ſupport in food and raiment[2]. Touching their firſt profeſſion we find, that, in order to the remiſſion of their ſins, they were, to their power, to defend pilgrims from ſpoil and robbery by thieves in their paſſage to and from Jeruſalem; and that thereupon, at the end of nine years, they had a certain rule aſſigned to them in the council of Trecas, as alſo a white habit by pope Honorius. After which, they began to multiply very much, their poſſeſſions being greatly enlarged; but, in the time of pope Eugenius, they ſewed croſſes made of red cloth upon the left ſhoulder of their mantles, partly to the end that, having ſuch a triumphal figure inſtead of a buckler, they ſhould not flee back from any infidel whilſt they were armed with ſo great a protection, and partly to the intent they might be diſtinguiſhed from other religious perſons. There are who affirm, that the beginners of this rule were ſome of the meaneſt Hoſpitallers, and that they were at firſt ſuſtained with weapons and food from the reliques of their proviſions[3]: whether it was ſo or not, we ſhall not ſtand to argue; but it is agreed on all parts, that they were originally called Knights Templars, from having their reſidence in certain rooms[4] adjoining to that Temple ſome time built by king Solomon. As for their habit, the deſcription which William Darrell[5] made thereof to Mr. Lambarde was thus; that on their heads they wore linen coifs (like to the ſergeants at law), and red caps cloſe over them; on their bodies ſhirts of mail, and ſwords girded unto them with a broad belt; over all which they had a white cloak reaching to the ground, with a red croſs on the left ſhoulder, as hath been ſaid, in ſuch ſort as in Plate CXXVII. is repreſented. And that they uſed to wear their beards of a great length (whereas moſt other religious orders do ſhave) appears from the teſtimony of king Edward II. made in the behalf of an eminent ſervant in his court: "Rex, &c. Cum dilectus valettus noſter Petrus Auger, exhibitor preſentium, nuper voverit quod barbam ſuam radi non faciat, quouſque peregrinationem fecerit in certo loco in partibus tranſmarinis; & idem Petrus ſibi timeat, quod aliqui ipſum, ratione barbe ſue prolixe, fuiſſe Templarium, imponere ſibi velint & ei inferre impedimenta ſeu gravamina ex hâc cauſâ; nos veritati volentes teſtimonium perhibere, vobis tenore preſentium intimamus, quod predictus Petrus eſt valettus camere noſtre, nec unquam fuit Templarius, ſed barbam ſuam ſic prolixam eſſe permittit ex cauſâ ſuperius annotatâ, &c. Teſte Rege, &c. 17 Febr. anno, &c. 4°."[6] And touching their manner of reception into this order, it is thus certified of one of them, being examined as to that point: "Requiſitus de modo receptionis, dicit quod erat claviger in Templo dum erat ſecularis, & requiſivit magiſtrum ut eum reciperet in fratrem; & expoſitis ſibi hiis que rigoris ſunt in ordine Templi, & ſubſtantialibus ordinis, quod ad obedientiam, caſtitatem, & abdicationem proprietatis, fuit ductus in capellam, fratribus ordinis, duntaxat capellanis, militibus & ſervientibus preſentibus, ſecularibus omnibus excluſis, preſtito ab eo ad ſancta Dei Evangelia juramento, quod predicta tria ſubſtantialia dicti ordinis, & conſuetudines bonas & laudabiles ordinis Templi ſervaret; & negotium terre Sancte ultra marine, pro poſſe ſuo, juvaret contra inimicos fidei Chriſtiane: adjecit etiam quod juravit, quod neminem injuſtè exhereditaret, & tunc ſibi tradebatur mantellum, cum cruce, & pileum in capite[7]."

For ſome years after their firſt inſtitution, the Templars continued in ſo great poverty, that they lived upon alms, and wore ſuch cloaths as were for charity's ſake beſtowed upon them; but afterwards had habits appropriated to their order, and were enriched with vaſt poſſeſſions, by the bounty of various Chriſtian princes.

In the beginning of the reign of king Stephen they were ſettled in the chief houſe of their order in England, The Old Temple, without Holbourn-bars, on the South ſide of the ſtreet where Southampton-houſe formerly ſtood, adjoining to which Southampton buildings were afterwards erected. At this very early period ſeveral manors and eſtates had been given to them, which that king confirmed[8]; and of his own bounty added the manors of Creſſynge, Witham, and Egle. Maud his queen gave alſo the manor of Cowley, two mills in Oxfordſhire, common of paſture in Shotover foreſt, and the church of Stretton in Rutland.

William de Aſſheby about the ſame time founded the commandery of the Knights Templars at Temple Bruere, and gave them the ground on which their church and houſe were built[9].

In 1172, pope Alexander III. iſſued a bull, "pro privilegiis concedendis Templo quod ſitum eſt in Ieroſolymis, immunitate fratrum Templi, & eorum gubernatione; prohibens ſtrictè ne quis temerè predictum locum perturbet;" which in 1181 was confirmed by another bull of pope Lucius III.[10]

In 1182, a diſpute which had taken place between them and the Knights Hoſpitallers, a rival inſtitution, (from which, as has been obſerved, they have by ſome writers been ſuppoſed to take their origin) was amicably adjuſted, by an agreement under the title of "Confirmatio initæ pacis inter fratres Militiæ Templi & fratres Hoſpitalis[11]."

From king Henry II. they obtained a grant of a place ſituated on the river Fleet[12], near Bainard's

---

[1] "Anno Domini MCXXIII, ordo Templariorum incepit ſub Kalixto Papâ ſecundo; que poſtea ſub anno Domini MCCCVIII. ſub Clemente Papâ quinto deleta fuit." Cotton MS. Nero E. VI. p. 461.

[2] Matth. Paris, Chron. ſive Hiſt. minor MS. in Bibl. Cotton. Vide etiam Matth. Paris, Hiſt. p. 67. 2. 10.

[3] "Ex infimis Hoſpitaliorum congregati, & ex reliquiis eorum in cibis & armis ſuſtentati, ad tantam rerum opulentiam devenerunt, ut filia ditata matrem ſuffocare & ſupergredi videretur." Chron. J. Bromton, col. 1008. Ypod. Neuſtr. p. 37.

[4] "In porticu templi Ieroſolymitani ſedem ſui ordinis ſtatuerunt."

[5] Ex Coll. St. Lo Kniveton.

[6] Pat. 4 Edw. II. p. 2. m. 20.

[7] MS. in Bibl. Bodl. T. 88. Th.

[8] Dugdale, vol. II. pp. 524. 525. 551.

[9] A thin folio book relative to Temple Bruere was in the hands of Nevill King, eſq of Grantham, 1730; whence Mr. Peck has made large extracts towards its hiſtory. See his projected continuation of the Monaſticon, Harl. MSS. 4937.

[10] Both theſe bulls are printed in Rymer's Fœdera, vol. I. pp. 30. 54. Otto was maſter in 1172; and Arnald in 1181.

[11] Ibid. p. 61.

[12] In 1290 we find the "prior & fratres de Carmelo" (the White Friars) complaining to the king and parliament, of the putrid exhalations ariſing from Fleet-river; which were ſo powerful as to overcome all the frankincenſe burnt at their altar during divine ſervice; and even occaſioned the deaths of many of the brethren. They beg that the ſtench may be immediately removed, leſt they ſhould alſo periſh. The Friars Preachers alſo (Black Friars) and the biſhop of Saliſbury (whoſe houſe was then in Saliſbury Court) united in the ſame complaint. In 1306, a petition was preſented by the earl of Lincoln [Henry Lacy], ſetting forth, "that the water-courſe under Holbourn and Fleet-bridges uſed to be wide and deep enough to carry 10 or 12 ſhips up to Fleet-bridge, laden with various articles and merchandize; and ſome of them paſſed under that bridge to Holbourn-bridge, to cleanſe and carry off the filth of the ſaid water-courſe, which now, by the filth and influx of tan-yards and ſundry other matters troubling the ſaid water, and particularly by the raiſing of the key, and turning off the water which the Knights Templars [ipſi de Novo Templo] had made to their mills without Caſtle Baignard, that the ſaid ſhips cannot get in as they uſed and ought to do; and praying that the lord mayor, with the ſheriffs and diſcreet aldermen, may view the water-courſe; and, on the view and oath of good and lawful men, cauſe all nuiſances thereon to be removed, and the water-courſe repaired, and put into its antient ſtate." Roger le Brabazon, and the conſtable of the Tower of London, with the mayor and ſheriffs, and certain diſcrete aldermen, were directed to enquire into and remov theſe nuiſances. Rot. Parl. vol. I. pp. 60. 200.

Caſtle, with the whole current of that river, for the erecting of a mill, and alſo a meſſuage near Fleet-bridge; which meſſuage was afterwards conveyed in fee-ſimple by Almaric de St. Maur, maſter of the Temple, at a general chapter held at the preceptory of Dineſſe in Hertfordſhire on the feaſt of St. Martin, to the monks of Bruere, for the conſideration of 6*s.* a year in lieu of all ſervices. Teſtibus; fratre Thomâ Bardolf, fratre Rogero filio Alexandri, fratre Willielmo de Fanflorum, fratre Herberto de Monaſteriis, fratre Rogero eleemoſinario, fratre Willielmo de Bernewd tunc-tempori preceptore Londonie, fratre W. de Middelton[1].

From king Henry II. they had alſo the church of St. Clement, "que dicitur Dacorum, extra civitatem Londonie;" with thoſe of Elle, Swynderby, and Skarle, in Lincolnſhire; Kingeſwode juxta Waltam in Kent; the manor of Stroder in the hundred of Skamele; the vill of Kele in Staffordſhire; the hermitage of Flikeamſtede, and all his lands at Lange Curewey; a houſe in Broſal, and the market of Witham; land at Bergholte; a mill at the bridge of Pembroke caſtle; the vill of Finchingfelde belonging to Temple Creſſinge; and three fat bucks either from Eſſex or Windſor foreſt. He confirmed to them the houſe of Bockland for ſiſters only; granted them an annual fair at Temple Bruere; and ſuperadded many capital benefactions in Ireland[2].

Simon de Senliz, earl of Northampton, about 1184, gave the churches of Southwike and Wodemancote[3].

Roger de Mowbray, by conſent of his ſons Nigell and Robert, gave them about the ſame time the preceptory of Balſhall, the manors of Keleby and Witheley, with divers lands in the iſle of Axholme and many other places[4]; and was held in ſuch high eſteem for his munificent donations, as to obtain for himſelf and his heirs the eſpecial privilege which we find long after thus confirmed by the Knights Hoſpitallers:

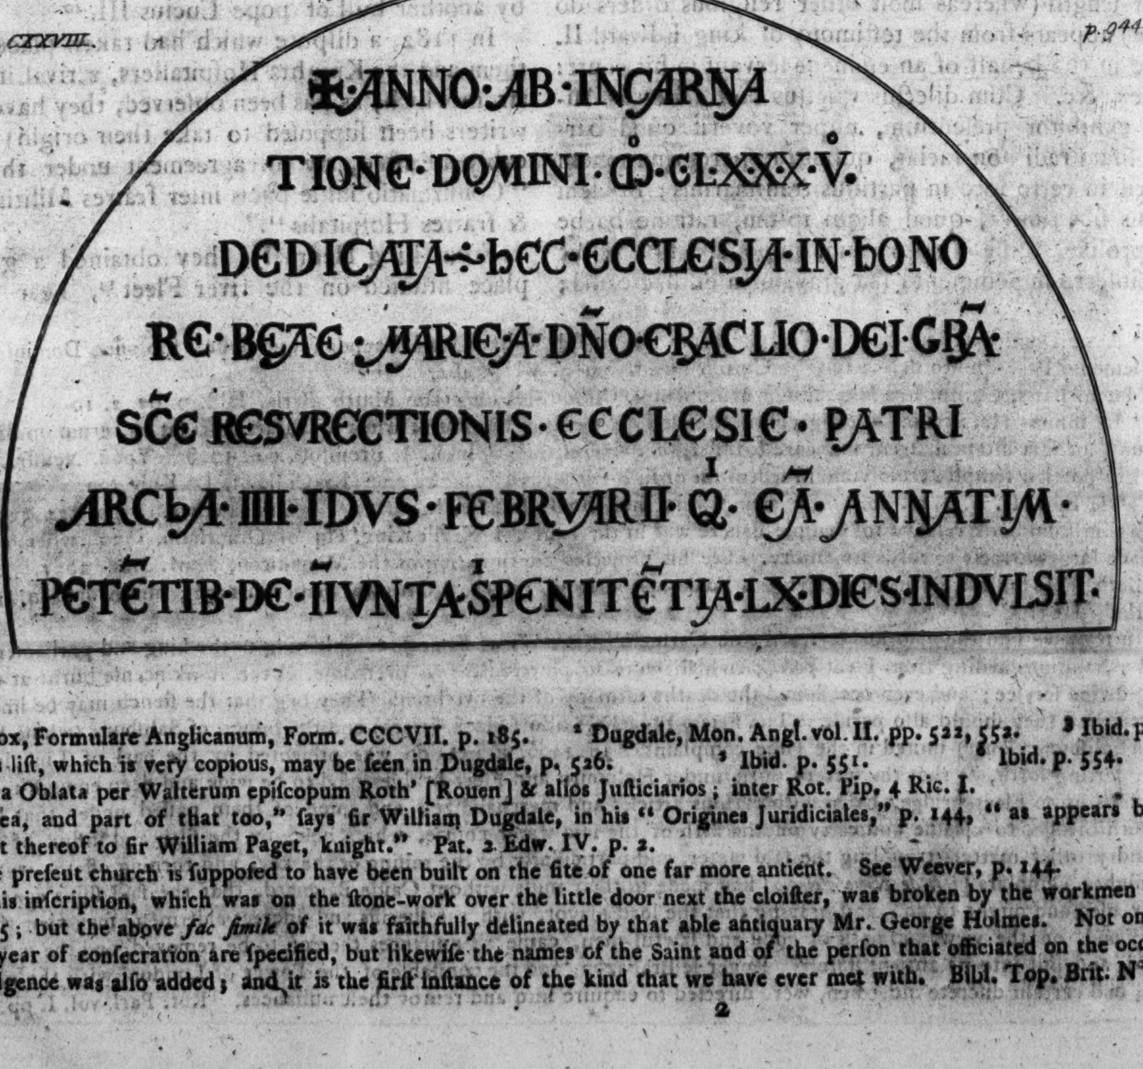
"Memorandum, quod inter omnes fundatores ac benefactores hoſpitalis . . . . . maximè tenentur Hoſpitalarii Rogero domino de Moubray, & heredibus ſuis; ac etiam ſpecialiter tenebantur Templarii. Quare Templarii, ad tantam devotionem erga religionem ſuam premonſtratam, conſiderationem habentes, ut tenentur, uno aſſenſu conceſſerunt, pro ſe & ſucceſſoribus ſuis, eidem Rogero & heredibus ſuis, quod quotienſcunque idem Rogerus contingeret invenire aliquem fratrem religionis predicte, pro aliquo delicto erga religionem ſuam, ad pœnitentiam publicam, prout moris eſt religionis ſue, poni, adtunc benè liceat eidem Rogero & heredibus ſuis ipſum fratrem, ſic publicè pœnitentem, à pœnitentiâ relevare, ſine contradictione alicujus fratrum Milicie Templi, ſeu ſucceſſorum ſuorum in perpetuum. Et hoc idem prior & fratres Hoſpitalis in Angliâ conceſſerunt domino Johanni de Moubray, domino inſule de Axholme & de Gower, & heredibus ſuis in perpetuum; quod cum ipſe & heredes ſui, ob aliquam devotionem in conventu fratrum ſuorum, in partibus tranſmarinis venire contigerit, quod honorificè recipientur; & eiſdem deſerviretur, ut illis, quibus, poſt dominum ſuum regem, magis tenentur in beneficiis. Hec prefata conceſſio facta fuit per predictos fratres Hoſpitalis apud Londonias xx die menſis Marcii, anno Domini MCCCXXX, & anno regni regis Edwardi Tertii poſt Conqueſtum x°."[5]

In 1185, an inquiſition was made concerning the donors of the ſeveral lands of the Knights Templars, and their ſeveral poſſeſſions, including all their churches, mills, demeſne lands, and rents of aſſize[6].

In 1194, "Robertus de Harecurt dominus de Boſewardâ debet C marcas pro habend' XL libratas terre in Stanton, & XVI libratas terre in Horton & Sutton, in Sochâ de Roeleiâ, que eum contingit de hereditate uxoris ſue; que rex Henricus pater domini regis Ricardi dedit Ricardo de Camvile & heredibus ſuis, quod habet de Milleſent uxore ejus, ſicut carta domini regis teſtatur[7]."

"During the reign of king Henry II. the Templars of this country exchanged their old habitation for one far more commodious, built purpoſely for their reception at the Weſt end of Fleet-ſtreet, which was called The New Temple, containing all the ſpace of ground from the White Fryars Weſtward, to Eſſex-houſe without Temple-bar[8]; where they flouriſhed in wealth and honour under the government of a maſter, who was head of all the preceptories and houſes of theſe knights in England, but he himſelf ſubject to the grand maſter of the order. At this their chief ſeat in England they built a magnificent church[9], after the faſhion of the temple of Solomon at Jeruſalem, ſtanding upon grey marble pillars, vaulted and arched over with true ſymmetry and excellent workmanſhip. This church, which in the ſame ſtate continueth to this day, was conſecrated in 1185, by Heraclius patriarch of Jeruſalem, as by the following inſcription over the door is manifeſt[10].

Pl. CXXVIII. p. 944.



✠ ANNO · AB · INCARNA
TIONE · DOMINI · M · C · LXXX · V.
DEDICATA ÷ HEC · ECCLESIA · IN · HONO
RE · BEATE · MARIE · A · DÑO · ERACLIO · DEI · GRA
SCE RESVRECTIONIS · ECCLESIE · PATRI
ARCHA · IIII · IDVS · FEBRVARII · Q · EA · ANNATIM ·
PETETIB · DE · IIVNTA SPENITETIA · LX · DIES · INDVLSIT ·

---

[1] Madox, Formulare Anglicanum, Form. CCCVII. p. 185.
[2] Dugdale, Mon. Angl. vol. II. pp. 522, 552.
[3] Ibid. p. 525.
[4] This liſt, which is very copious, may be ſeen in Dugdale, p. 526.
[5] Ibid. p. 551.
[6] Ibid. p. 554.
[7] Nova Oblata per Walterum epiſcopum Roth' [Rouen] & alios Juſticiarios; inter Rot. Pip. 4 Ric. I.
[8] "Yea, and part of that too," ſays ſir William Dugdale, in his "Origines Juridiciales," p. 144, "as appears by the firſt grant thereof to ſir William Paget, knight." Pat. 2 Edw. IV. p. 2.
[9] The preſent church is ſuppoſed to have been built on the ſite of one far more antient. See Weever, p. 144.
[10] This inſcription, which was on the ſtone-work over the little door next the cloiſter, was broken by the workmen in the year 1695; but the above fac ſimile of it was faithfully delineated by that able antiquary Mr. George Holmes. Not only the day and year of conſecration are ſpecified, but likewiſe the names of the Saint and of the perſon that officiated on the occaſion. An indulgence was alſo added; and it is the firſt inſtance of the kind that we have ever met with. Bibl. Top. Brit. N° XLI.

In 1199, the Knights Templars obtained from pope Innocent III. a bull, "ne quis inficiat manus violentas in confugientes ad domos Templariorum, ſub penâ excommunicationis." In the ſame year, king John confirmed to them all the lands in Berecholt, which had been given to them by Peter Lyeſchamps, who had them from king Henry I. He gave them alſo the whole Iſle of Lundy; all his land at Radenache, to the amount of £10. a year; and all his lands at Harewood in Herefordſhire. In 1200, they paid 1000 marks, for the confirmation of their charters, that they might be freed from all amerciaments in the Exchequer; and in the next year, on payment of a palfrey, obtained the king's letters of protection, and the privilege of not being compelled to plead except before the king or his chief juſtice.

"In the round walk at the Weſt end of the Temple church, many of the order lye buried; their proportions cut in ſtone, ſome of them croſs-legged [1], and were of the chiefeſt houſes of nobility; as Vere earl of Oxford, Magnaville earl of Eſſex, Marſchall earl of Pembroke, Bohun earl of Hereford, the lord Ros, and William ſon of king Henry III.; and in the body of the church Conſtance de Hover, under a large blue marble inlaid with braſs, with this circumſcription [2]:

"Hic requieſcit Conſtantius de Houerio, quondam viſitator generalis ordinis Militiæ Templi in Anglia, Francia, ⁊ in Italia [3]."

The figures of Geoffrey de Magnaville, 1144; William Marſhall, earl of Pembroke in 1201, and William his eldeſt ſon, 1231; Robert lord Ros, 1227; William Plantagenet, fifth ſon of Henry I. 1256, have been engraved in Plate V. of the firſt volume of Mr. Gough's Sepulchral Monuments; and five others in his Plate XIX. which have not been aſcertained. One of them is ſuppoſed to be Gilbert Marſhall, third ſon of the earl of Pembroke; who, on the death of his father, ſucceeded to the whole of the paternal inheritance; and, under the title of earl of Pembroke, gave to the Templars the church of Weſtone, with lands in that manor and in other places [4]. He loſt his life, in a tournament at Ware, in 1241 [5]. Two others, as erroneouſly pointed out by Mr. Burton, are Hugh de Vere earl of Oxford and lord chamberlain, who was a benefactor to the Knights Templars, and died in 1263; and Humphrey de Bohun, the good earl of Hereford, and lord conſtable, who in 1250 took upon him the croſs, and went into the Holy Land. He died in 1275; but was buried before the high-altar in Lanthony abbey [6]; and the former was buried, with his family, at Earl's Colne, Eſſex.

William Plantagenet, fifth ſon of Henry III. who died in his infancy, about 1256, was buried in the Temple church; where his father alſo had given his body to be buried whenever he ſhould die, as did his queen Eleanor, as appears by their reſpective deeds, dated at Glouceſter, July 7, 1234; which were confirmed in 1236 by a grant of £8. ſterling a year from the Exchequer, for the perpetual maintenance of three chaplains in this church. A fourth chaplain was provided for by the bounty of Idonea de Veteri Ponte, who gave 13 bovates of her land at Oſtrefeld, to pray for her own ſoul and that of her late huſband Robert de Veteri Ponte [7].

To return to the local hiſtory of Rothley, where the Knights Templars firſt obtained a footing in 1218, by favour of John de Harecourt, lord of it, as has been ſtated. On the 21ſt of September 1219, king Henry III. acquainted the ſheriff of Leiceſter, that he had aſſigned the manor of Ralegh (which John de Harecourt ſome time held), to Philip de Ulecot, for his better ſupport in his ſervice (exempting from the ſaid grant the lands given to the Templars in free alms by the ſaid John de Harecourt whilſt employed in foreign parts [8]); and required him, if it were not worth £60. to make it up ſo much to the ſaid Philip, out of the lands of the ſaid John de Harecourt aforeſaid, or from elſewhere in his bailiwick:

"Rex vicecomiti Leic', ſalutem. Scias, quod aſſignavimus dilecto & fideli noſtro Philippo de Ulecot, ad ſe ſuſtentandum in ſervicio noſtro, quamdiu nobis placuerit, terram de Ralegh, cum pertinentiis ſuis, quam Johannes de Harecourt tenuit, in aſſignatione LX libratarum terre, ad quas ei teneamur; ſalvâ fratribus Militie Templi terrâ illâ cum pertinentiis, quam idem Johannes, agens in extraneis, eis dedit in eleemoſinam, in ipſo manerio de Ralegh. Ita quod, ſi predicte LX librate terre eidem Philippo perfici non poſſint in ipſo manerio de Ralegh, precipimus, quod ei perficias de aliis terris quas prefatus Johannes tenuit in ballivâ tuâ; & ſi forſitan de terris illis omnino perfici non poſſunt prefate LX librate terre, ſicut predictum eſt, nos ei alibi extra ballivam tuam perficiemur. Ita tamen quod, quando voluerimus vel opus habuerimus, ipſe Philippus reddet nobis predictam terram de Raleghe, cum pertinentiis ſuis, & nos aſſignabimus ei alias terram ad valenciam terre ille. Et ideo tibi precipimus, quod eidem Philippo de predictâ terrâ de Ralegh, cum pertinentiis, & de aliis terris ſi opus fuerit, ſine dilatione plenariam ſeiſinam habere faciat, ſicut predictum eſt. Teſte Huberto de Burgo, apud Novum Templum, London', xxi° die Septembris [9]."

March 18, 1218-19, the king ſent his writ to the ſheriff, acquainting him, that he had granted to Joan his half-ſiſter, wife of Lewellin prince of North Wales, licence to collect an aid of her manor of Ralegh (which he had given her), after the ſame manner as all ſuch aids were levied of his own demeſnes, which he had then alſo commanded to be taxed; and therefore required the ſheriff to further her with his aſſiſtance:

"Rex vicecomiti Leic', ſalutem. Scias, quod, cum conceſſimus Joanne ſorori noſtre, uxori Lewellini principis Nor-Wallie, quod homines de manerio noſtro de Ralegh, quod ei commiſimus quamdiu nobis placuerit, rationabile ei faciant auxilium, eo quod nos cetera dominica noſtra talliari fecimus. Et ideo tibi precipimus, quod certo die ad dictum manerium accedens, una cum ballivis ipſius ſororis noſtre, dictum auxilium rationabile & moderate aſſideri facias; ita quod dicti homines nummis inde nec graventur. Teſte meipſo, apud Weſtm', xviii° die Martii [10]."

In a very few years after this, the growing conſequence of the Templars appears to have given umbrage; for we find, in 1223, a bull of pope Honorius III. "de inſolentiâ Templariorum reprimendâ;" which aroſe from a complaint of king Henry III; ſtating, "quod cum clare memorie Henricus avus & Ricardus patruus ejus, regus Anglie, in villâ ſuâ de Rupellâ[1] fratribus Militie Templi, Xantonenſis dioceſis, quaſdam domos piâ liberalitate donaverint, illi, facta ſibi gratia perperam abutentes, quaſcumque domos, ſive poſſeſſiones, aut homines poſſunt circumquaque infra proprietatem regiam apprehendere, ſibi ea, in prejudicium ejus, uſurpant; & ſtatim imponentes ſigna ſua taliter uſurpatis, non permittunt exinde regi debita & conſueta ſervicia provenire[2]."

---

[1] Knights Templars being uſually found croſs-legged, in token of the banner they fought under, and completely armed in regard to their being ſoldiers, this ſort of armour grew much in faſhion; and though all which we meet with in that ſhape are vulgarly called ſo, yet certainly many are not ſuch. Robert duke of Normandy, ſon to William the Conqueror, is repreſented in this faſhion on his tomb at Glouceſter; and Henry Lacy earl of Lincoln was thus repreſented on his fine tomb in old St. Paul's; nor is it probable, that either William Marſhall earl of Pembroke, or William and Gilbert his two ſons, in the Temple church, were of the order of Templars, though they might have viſited the Holy Land. See Mr. Gough's Sepulchral Monuments, vol. I. p. xciv.—Biſhop Lyttelton takes occaſion to ſhew that croſs-legged monuments more generally repreſent only ſuch who had taken upon them the croſs, and had actually been, or vowed to go, the holy voyage. As this religious frenzy laſted no longer than the reign of king Henry III. and the whole order of Knights Templars was diſſolved in 1311, the military expeditions to the Holy Land, as well as religious pilgrimages thither, were in general laid aſide; conſequently none of theſe croſs-legged monuments are of a later date than the reign of Edward II, or beginning of Edward III; or of an earlier date than the reign of Henry I. when the Knights Templars firſt flouriſhed in this kingdom. Naſh's Worceſterſhire, vol. I. p. 31; Shaw's Staffordſhire, vol. II. p. 261.—Roger Gillingham, eſq. treaſurer of the Middle Temple, who died Dec. 29, 1695, æt. 70, had the credit of "facing the entrance of the Temple church with new Portland ſtone, and of marſhalling the Knights Templars in an uniform order." Flying Poſt, Jan. 2, 1695-6.

[2] Weever, by miſapplying this inſcription to one of the croſs-legged knights, has miſled the learned author of the Sepulchral Monuments, vol. I. p. 41. Mr. Burton, who reſided ſeveral years in the Temple, very plainly deſcribes the tomb of Conſtance de Hover to have been in the body of the church, on a large blue marble inlaid with braſs; and gives the full name.—In the North wall of the choir of the Temple church a body pontifically habited is aſcribed by Browne Willis to Sylveſter de Everdun, biſhop of Carliſle, 1246—1255. Ibid. p. 221.

[3] Burton, p. 234.

[4] Dugd. Bar. vol. I. p. 524.

[5] Sepulchral Monuments, vol. I. p. 50.

[6] Dugdale, Bar. Angl. vol. I. p. 181.

[7] Dugd. Mon. Angl. vol. II. p. 522.

[8] See the Hiſtory of the Town of Leiceſter, p. 220.

[9] Clauſ. 3 Hen. III. m. 2.

[10] Clauſ. 3 Hen III. m. 16.

May 22, 1224, the king acquainted the ſheriff, that he had given Philip Marc lands worth 100 ſhillings (which Geoffrey Lutterel ſome time held) in the Soke of Roell, for the better ſupport of the ſaid Philip in his ſervice; and therefore required him to give him full ſeiſin thereof:

"Rex vicecomiti Leic', ſalutem. Sciatis, quod commiſimus dilecto & fideli noſtro Philippo Marc c s̄. terre, quas Galfridus Lutterel tenuit in ſokâ de Roell, ad ſe ſuſtendandum in ſervicio noſtro, quamdiu nobis placuerit. Et ideo precipimus, quod de illis c s̄. terre eidem Philippo ſine dilatione plenam ſeiſinam habere faciatis. Teſte Rege, apud Weſtm', xxiii° die Maii[3]."

A charter of king Henry III, Feb. 9, 1226-7, confirming the liberties granted to the Knights Templars, declares, that they and all their homagers ſhould enjoy their ſeveral poſſeſſions, "cum omnibus libertatibus & liberis conſuetudinibus & quietanciis ſuis, in boſco & plano, in pratis & paſturis, in aquis & molendinis, in viis & ſemitis, in ſtagnis & vivariis, in mariſcis & piſcariis, in grangiis & virgultis, infra burgum & extra, cum ſoccâ & ſaccâ, & tol, & theam, & infangenethef, & utfangenethef, & hamſoca, & grithbrich, & blodwite, & fictwite, & flictwite, & ferdwite, & hengewite, & leirwite, & flemenefrith, murdro, latrocinio, forſtall, ordel, oreſte, infra tempus & extra tempus, & in omnibus locis, & cum omnibus cauſis, que ſunt vel eſſe poſſunt. Concedimus etiam in perpetuum, quod predicti fratres quieti ſint de auxiliis regum, vicecomitum, & omnium miniſterialium eorum, & hidagio & carucagio, & danegeld, & hornegeld, & excercitibus & wapentachiis, & ſcutagiis, & tallagiis, leſtagiis, ſtallagiis, ſiris & hundredis, placitis & querelis, wardâ & wardpeni, & averpeni, & hundredeſpeni, & borethalpeni, & thethingepeni; & de operibus caſtellorum, parcorum, pontium, clauſuris, & omni careio, & ſummagio, & navigio; & domuum regalium edificatione; & omnimodâ operatione. Et prohibimus ne boſci eorum ad predicta opera, vel ad aliqua alia ullo modo capiantur; & ſimiliter bladum eorum vel hominum ſuorum, vel aliquid de rebus ſuis, vel hominum ſuorum, ad caſtella munienda non capiantur. Volumus etiam, quod liberè & ſufficienter, ſine qualibet occaſione, de omnibus boſcis ſuis, ad uſus domûs ſue, quando voluerint; nec propter hoc in forisfacto de waſto, vel miſericordiâ ponantur. Omnes quoque terras ſuas & eſſarta ſua & hominum ſuorum, jam facta, & que in poſterum fient, aſſenſu regis, eis in perpetuum quieta clamamus de waſto & reguardo, & de viſu foreſtariorum & de omnibus aliis conſuetudinibus. Concedimus etiam eiſdem fratribus, quod de omnibus boſcis, quos habent in preſenti, infra metas foreſte, poſſint exſartare & excolere, ſine licentiâ noſtrâ vel ballivorum noſtrorum, ita quod indè in nullo à nobis vel heredibus noſtris, vel ballivis noſtris in perpetuum occaſionentur. Precipimus etiam, quod ipſi fratres & homines ſui liberi ſint & quieti ab omni theloneo, in omni foro & in omnibus nundinis, & in omni tranſitu pontium, viarum, & maris, per totum regnum noſtrum, & per omnes terras noſtras, in quibus libertates eis dare poſſumus, & omnia mercata ſua, & hominum ſuorum, ſint ſimiliter in predictis locis ab omni theloneo quieti[4]."

In 1228, a bull of pope Gregory occurs, "ut fratres Militie Templi poſſint produci in teſtimonium in cauſis domûs[5].

In 1231, the Knights Templars obtained from king Henry III. a grant of the manor of Rothley, with its appurtenances, and the advowſon of the church and its ſeveral chapels; alſo £4. 8*s.* rent from lands in North Mardefeld and South Mardefeld; and annual rents to the amount of £26. and 5*d.* from different villages appendant to the Soke.

In the Teſta de Nevill, compiled about 1240, under the title of "De Serjantiis arrentatis per Robertum Paſſelewe, tempore Henrici Regis, filii Regis Johannis," we find the following entries; which ſhew that the Soke of Rothley was at that period the property of thoſe knights; who then poſſeſſed 15 virgates of land at Bagrave, the gift of John de Harecourt (who died in the Holy Land); and that there was at that time a chapel at Bagrave, formerly appendant to the church at Keame as parcel of the Soke of Rothley, but then belonging to Hungarton, and under the patronage of the abbey of Leiceſter; though by what authority was not then known.

In the ſame record are entered the lands which the Knights Templars poſſeſſed at Normanton by Botteſford, and in the two Mardefelds.

"De dominico domini regis, manerium de Rolle, cum totâ ſocâ, & advocatione eccleſie. Et datum eſt Templariis. Precium LX librarum. Sed neſcitur, &c.[6]

Magiſter Milicie Templi tenet in North Mardefeld XII virgatas terre de dono domini Henrici Regis qui nunc eſt; & jam XX annis elapſis tenuit, ſed neſciunt per quod ſervicium.

Idem Magiſter tenet in aliâ Merdefeld IX virgatas terre de dono ipſius, & jam XX annis tenuit; ſed neſcitur per quod ſervicium, &c.

Idem Magiſter tenet XV virgatas terre in Babbegrave, & habuit integrum per Johannem de Harecurt, qui obiit in Terrâ Sanctâ jam XXVIII annis elapſis; ſed neſcitur per quod, &c.

Item capella de Babbegrave ſolebat pertinere eccleſie de Kayam, & pertinens ad ſocam de Role; & modò eſt pertinens eccleſie de Hungarton, que eſt in donatione abbatis de Leiceſtriâ; ſed neſcitur quo warranto.

Babbegrave eſt de donatione domini regis. Templarii eam tenent; & valet per annum LXV s̄. II đ.

Mardefel Lutrel, membrum de Reelegh, eſt de donatione domini regis; & valet per annum XXXVIII s̄. X đ. Andreas Lutrel tenet eam per dominum regem.

Lewelinus tenet in Mardefeld, membrum de Reelegh, LXIII s̄. terre, & V đ. per regem[7]."

An original deed, dated in November 1246, from "Robertus dictus Sapiens, ſacerdos," granting, "pro novem libris Turon', fratribus Milicie Templi Salomonis apud Sanctum Stephanum commorantibus, unam peciam terre que vocatur campus de Trau'lem, & aliam peciam que vocatur campus de Lagariee, & aliam peciam apud Marneriam Pagani;" with the ſeal engraved in Plate CXXX. fig. 9; inſcribed, ✠ S. ROB'TI PB'RI NOR'HAMPT'[8], is preſerved, among many other valuable charters, in the Britiſh Muſeum[9].

In 1255 and 1256, the Knights Templars obtained the following additional privileges and immunities[10]:

A bull of pope Alexander IV. non Dec. pontif. 1°, ne aliqui in illos, qui ad domos Templi pro ſalute ſuâ confugiunt, aut in res illorum, ibi depoſitas, manus violentas injiciant.

7 id. Dec. de confirmatione libertatum & immunitatum, conceſſarum domui Templi, tam per privilegia & indulgentias apoſtolicas, quam per ſeculares reges & principes.

(Same date) Quod illi qui manus violentas injiciunt in fratres Templi, aut eos verbis contumelioſis afficiunt, aut bona eorum diripiunt, excommunicentur donec ſatisfecerint.

6 id. Dec. Ut prelati recipiant humiliter, & fideliter exponant, privilegia & literas apoſtolicas pro fratribus Templi directas, & ut cogant ſubditos ſuos ad juſtitiam eis exhibendam.

5 id. Dec. Ut, ſi Fratres Templi aliquando fuerint verberati, moleſtatores hujuſmodi aut ſe purgent per

---

[1] Rochelle.

[2] Rymer, vol. I. p. 258.

[3] Clauſ. 8 Hen. III. m. 15.

[4] Dugdale, Mon. Angl, vol. II. p. 558.

[5] Rymer, vol. I. p 298.

[6] See vol. I. p. xlix.

[7] Ib. p. li.

[8] Robert de Northampton is noticed in Pope Nicholas's Valor, p. 318. b. as one of the ten canons of the collegiate church of St. Mary at Warwick, within the dioceſe of Worceſter. Robertus Diſertus, probably the ſame Sapiens Sacerdos, occurs hereafter under Seile. A Robert de Boſco was archdeacon of Coventry about 1220; a Robert de Northampton was rector of Sulgrave in Northamptonſhire 1222; and another Robert de Northampton (called alſo Robert le Paumer) was rector of Clay-coton in 1249, and died in 1286.

[9] Chartæ Antiquæ, XXIX. 39.

[10] Rymer, vol. I. pp. 574, 575, 576, 577. 579. & 582.

proprium juramentum, aut evitentur tanquam excommunicati donec ſe purgent.

1256, 3 non Jan. Ne Confratrie aliorum preponantur Confratriis Templi. "Cum dilectis filiis," ſays the bull, "fratribus domûs Militie Templi Jeroſolomitami fuerit a predeceſſoribus noſtris indultum, & a nobis poſtmodum confirmatum, ut ſemel in anno recipiantur in eccleſiis, ad elemoſinas colligendas; quidam veſtrûm, avaritie ardore ſuccenſi, confratrias ſuas confratriis ipſorum, eadem die, in ipſorum adventu, preponunt; & ſic fratres ipſi confuſi, aut nichil exinde, aut modicum conſequuntur."

1256, 15 kal. Feb. Ut fratres Templi liberè poſſint uti privilegiis ſibi indultis, licet multotiens omiſerint uti eis, dummodo non ſit preſcriptum.

6 id. Feb. Ne prelati convertant in debitum ſi Fratres Templi ipſis hoſpitalitatis gratiam caritativè impendant. By this bull, it appears that the prelates and other eccleſiaſtics of the day, who were frequently entertained with great hoſpitality by the Templars, wiſhed to eſtabliſh as a right what they received only as a favour.

Many of the preceding privileges received the confirmation of king Henry III; who gave alſo to the Knights Templars the manor of Blacolveſley; the park of Hateſhall; free-warren in moſt of their demeſne lands; a market and fair in Temple Bruere, 1259 (inſtead of one that had been granted by his grandfather) and fairs and markets in all other places where they were required.

Simon de Montfort, earl of Leiceſter[1], granted them alſo a very conſiderable parcel of land at Rothley (magnam quantitatem terræ); a wood called Rothley wood, near Leiceſter; and a meadow called Belleholme[2]; and John Bareteur[3] gave them all his lands in Rothley, to the value of £10. a year.

From this period Rothley may be conſidered as "a Preceptory; a kind of benefice ſo termed becauſe poſſeſſed by the more eminent ſort of Templars, whom the chief maſter by his authority created, and called Præceptores Templi[4]. It was alſo called a Commandery, becauſe he who had the government of a capital meſſuage, with lands or tenements thereunto belonging, was called the Commander, who had nothing to diſpoſe there but only to the uſe of the houſe, taking only his ſuſtenance hence, according to his degree, and was a brother of the order[5]."

Among the records, "Pedes Finium," or "Placita temp. Henry III." in the Chapter-houſe at Weſtminſter, in the cheſt marked B. are ſome deeds relative to Gadeſbey and Rothele, cum appendiciis, marked 28[6]."

A grant of lands at Normanton, by the maſter and brethren of the Temple, in 1258, to Henry de Colvile, is printed at large in a former volume[7]. The ſeal of the order, appendant to it, is repeated in Plate CXXVII.

In 1273, king Edward I. confirmed the Soke of Rothley to the Knights Templars; together with the church of Rothley, and the chapels of Gaddeſby, Keyham, Grimſton, Wartnaby, Cawdwell, and Wykeham, all belonging to it, and members of the ſaid Soke, and 36l. 0s. 5d. of annual rent within the ſaid villages[8]; for the expreſs purpoſe of increaſing the pittance of their brethren in the hoſpital of St. Thomas of Acon, within the city of London.

In 1278, the maſter and brethren of the Temple complained to the king in parliament, that they had, in prejudice to their privileges, been impleaded in three different counties; for a carucate of land at Eſtanly in Warwickſhire, which they had enjoyed in the time of king Henry I; the advowſon of a church in Rutland, which they had poſſeſſed to their own uſe, by the gift of the undoubted patron, for 60 years; and of a carucate of land at Melton Mowbray, of which they had long been ſeiſed; and that, ſince the laſt parliament, their franchiſes had been infringed in many parts of England[9].

In the Itinerary of 1280, Rothley, Swithland, Anſtey, Bradgate, Cropſton, and Newtown Linford, anſwered collectively as one vill.

March 26, 1285, the Knights Templars obtained the grant of a weekly market at Rothley on the Monday, and a fair every year on the feaſt-day of St. Barnabas, by the grant of king Edward I[10]; who gave them alſo the grant of a market at South Cave in Yorkſhire; and free-warren for their demeſne lands at Lidale in Shropſhire[11]. And in Eaſter Term that year, "Magiſter Milicie clamat cognitiones placiti pro terris in curiâ ſuâ infra ſocam ſuam, ſcilicet, in Wartnaby, &c. Et ei per Curiam adjudicatur iſta libertas[12]."

In 1290, "Magiſter Militie Templi petit quod dare poſſit epiſcopo Menevenſ' xxxs̃. redditûs annui, & arrerag' x annorum, pro quadam domo in Lond' in qua non poteſt diſtringere niſi tempore Parliamenti; petit quod habeat licentiam diſtringendi tempore Parliamenti.—Reſponſio. Non videtur oneſtum quod Rex concedat quod illi de Conſilio ſuo diſtringantur tempore Parliamenti; ſet alio tempore diſtringat per hoſtia & feneſtras, prout moris eſt[13]."

In 1293, their lands in the counties of Leiceſter and Warwick were ſeized into the king's hands; as appears by the following accompt of the ſheriff of thoſe counties, from June 10, 1293, to May 20, 1294:

"Computus Johannis de Dene, nuper vicecomitis Warw' & Leyc', de exitibus manerii de Rothele, & eccleſie ejuſdem ville, cum ſocâ ad idem manerium pertinente, & membris ſuis; & maneriorum de Babbegrave, Gaddeſby, Stoneſby, & Melton, in com' Leyc'; & maneriorum de Balſhale, Wolfhey, Cherlecote, Shireburne, Herbebure, Stodleye, Fechamſted, Cobington, Tyſho, & Warroyke, in com' Warw', que fuerunt magiſtri & fratrum Milicie Templi in Angliâ, & que Rex certis de cauſis capi fecit in manum ſuam; viz. a decimo die Januarii, anno regni regis Edwardi primo uſque xx diem Maii proximè ſequens, antequam liberavit eadem maneria Galfrido de Segrave, tunc vicecomiti comitatuum predictorum, una cum omnibus bonis & catallis in eiſdem exiſtentibus, per breve, regis indenturam, &c.

Annus primus. Rothele. Idem Johannes de Dene reddit computum de xix lĩ. xv s̃. ii đ. q̃. de redditu aſſiſe liberè tenentium & cuſtumariorum manerii de Rothele, & hamlettorum eidem manerio pertinentium; viz. Barneſby, Warknetheby, Grymeſton, Saxelby, Mardefeld North, Tilton, Somerdeby, South Croxton, Caldewell, Wykham, & Kayham, de termino Annunciationis beate Marie, ſicut continetur in Rotulo de particulis quem liberavit in Theſaurario, & in extentâ per preceptum regi inde factâ, & ad Scaccarium retornatâ.

Forma ſecundi receptûs. Idem reddit computum de xv lĩ. recept' de Thomâ de Bertruell, quas idem Thomas debuit pro denariis tempore arreſtationis ejuſdem magiſtri, ſicut continetur in Rotulo de particulis.

Capella. Idem reddit computum de uno calice prec' x s̃.; ii miſſalibus x s̃.

Babbegrave. Idem reddit computum de xix s̃. i đ. ob. de redditu aſſiſe liberè tenentium hamlete de Babbegrave, de termino Annunciationis beate Marie.

Gaddeſby. Idem reddit computum de lxx s̃. iiii đ. de redditu aſſiſe liberè tenentium hamlette de Gaddeſby, de termino predicto.

Stoneſby. Item reddit computum de v s̃. vii đ. ob. de redditu aſſiſe diverſorum tenentium hamlette de Sewſterne pertinentium ad manerium de Stoneſby, quod eſt dictorum fratrum, ad terminum Paſche; &

---

[1] Regiſtr. Leic. Abbath.
[2] Dugdale, Mon. Angl. vol. II. p. 548.
[3] Cod. MS. in Offic. Armor.

[4] Joachimus Steph. de Juriſdictionibus, l. iv. c. 10. p. 27

[5] Petrus Gregorius, libr. de Beneficiis, cap. ii. p. 11. has theſe words: "Præceptoriæ dictæ Commendæ ſanctorum militum, veluti Templariorum, vel ordinis Hoſpitalis Sancti Johannis de Hieroſolimâ, beneficia quidam ſecundum quod Eccleſiaſtici dicunt, tamen non propriè ex genere communium beneficiorum, eo quod perſonæ conferentes & quibus conferuntur non ſunt laicæ vel eccleſiaſticæ, ſed tertii ordinis."

[6] The Repertorie of Records, 1631, p. 57.
[7] See the Appendix to vol. II. p. 12.
[8] Pat. 2 Edw. I. m. 7. per Inſpeximus.

[9] Rolls of Parliament, vol. I. p. 2.
[10] Rot. Cart. 13 Edw. I. n. 23.
[11] Dugdale, Mon. Angl. vol. II. p. 553.

[12] Placita de Banco, de termino Paſche 13 Edw. I. Rot. 34.
[13] Rolls of Parliament, vol. I. p. 61.

de LXIs̃. IIIđ. ob̃. de redditu aſſiſe diverſorum tenentium hamlette de Normanton, pertinentium ad idem manerium, ad eundem terminum; & de IIs̃. de conſimili redditu tenentium hamletti de Wymundham, ad feſtum beate Marie. Et non reſpondet de redditu aſſiſe liberè tenentium dicti manerii de Stoneſby, eo quod redditus ille levabilis eſt ad feſta Pentecoſtis & Sancti Martini.

Idem reddit computum in redditu reſoluto Willielmo de Ros de Belvero, pro quibuſdam tenementis que dicti fratres de eo tenuerunt in manerio predicto, de termino Paſche, VIs̃. VIIIđ.

Melton. Idem reddit computum de XXVIIIs̃. Xđ. ob̃. de redditu aſſiſe liberè tenentium hamlette de Melton, de termino Paſche.

Cave. Idem reddit computum de VIIIlĩ. VIIIs̃. VIIđ. de redditu aſſiſe in manerio predicto, Northcave, Ynerthorp, Hothum, Santon, Suthcliffe, & Howton, de termino Sancti Michaelis, una cum firmâ unius molendini aquatici, ſicut continetur in Rotulo de particulis, & de Xs̃. de firmâ unius mercati ibidem dimiſſi ad firmam, ad eundem terminum.

Idem reddit computum in redditu ſoluto Petro de Eyvill pro tribus bovatis terre & V acris prati, que dicti Templarii tenuerunt de eodem in villâ de Cave, ad terminum Sancti Michaelis, IIIs̃. VIđ.; & in redditu ſoluto Alexandro de Cave per ejuſdem tenentes, ad eundem terminum; & in LXI acris predicti prati, falcis, & ten', XLs̃.[1]"

"Eodem die rex commiſit Galfrido de Seymour vicecomiti terras & tenementa fratrum Militie Templi, ac Walteri de Langton, cuſtodiend', cum bonis & catallis in eiſdem terris & tenementis exiſtentibus; ita quod prefatus Galfridus de exitibus terrarum & tenementorum, & de bonis & catallis, regi redeat ad ſcaccarium. Et mandatum eſt tam liberè tenentibus quam aliis, ut ſupra. Et eodem die mandatum eſt Johanni de Dene, nuper vicecomiti, cuſtodi terrarum & tenementorum predictorum, quod ea, cum bonis, & totâ pecuniâ quam inde levavit ad opus regis, per indenturam prefato Gilberto liberet, cuſtodiend'[2]."

Though this ſeizure of the lands of the Knights Templars may be conſidered as a prelude to their final overthrow, they were again received into favour; for we find that on the 6th of Auguſt, 1296[3], the king again confirmed to them the manor of Rothley, with the advowſon of the church and its ſeveral chapels, as they had been given by his father king Henry III.

In 1297-8, the Knights Templars and the Knights Hoſpitallers of St. John of Jeruſalem were reſpectively rated at 700 marks, for the defence of the realm, for the confirmation of the great charters of liberties and of the foreſt with the articles newly added thereto; and for the tenth part of all the temporal goods of them the ſaid maſter of the Temple and prior of Jeruſalem, and their brethren reſpectively, and of their villans in England; provided that this gift [done] be not hereafter made uſe of to their prejudice or ſervitude, or to the infringing of their liberties[4].

At this period the antient family of Meignell, who poſſeſſed divers lands in various other parts of Leiceſterſhire, had property alſo at Rothley; and in 1297, ſir Thomas de Meignell, knight, was elected one of the members for the county[5].

In 1305, "Ad petitionem magiſtri & fratrum Milicie Templi, petencium, quod theſaurarius & barones de Scaccario Regis habeant breve de cancellariâ ad ſcrutandum Rotulos de Scaccario, ſi una marca, quam predeceſſores Regis nunc de comitatu Cornubie eiſdem magiſtro & fratribus conceſſerunt in perpetuam elemoſinam, ſit ſuper aliquem compotum vicecomiti allocata, & ad faciendum ulterius inde quod de jure fuerit faciendum; & eciam potencium, quod cum Rex eis per cartam ſuam conceſſerit mercatum in manerio ſuo de Rotelegh, & pro eo idem mercatum eis utile non fuit, alias ſupplicarunt regi quod idem mercatum de gratiâ ſuâ mutaret uſque Gaddeſby infra procinctum dicte ville de Rothelegh, quod Rex eis conceſſit, & pro magno feodo ſigilli carta de conceſſione nondum fuit proſecuta, unde petunt nunc cartam Regis de conceſſione predictâ. Ita reſponſum eſt ad primam petitionem. Habeant breve de cancellario, theſaurario & baronibus de Scaccario, quod, ſcrutatis Rotulo & memorandis Scaccarii, ſi compertum ſit quod predicta marca debentur, & quod eam hactenus ſingulis annis receperunt, tunc inde certificent Regem, &c. Ad ſecundam. Videatur conceſſio alias eis per Regem facta de mercato mutando; & ſi inveniatur illa petitio ſic indoſſata, tunc habeant cartam de hujuſmodi mercato ſecundum conceſſionem prius inde factam[6]."

The privilege of a market and fair was accordingly transferred, Oct. 5, 1306, from Rothley to Gaddeſby[7]; where it very ſoon alſo fell into diſuſe.

In the ſame year the Knights Templars had a licence, Sept. 10, to make and fortify [kernellare] a great gate at their manor of Temple Bruere[8].

In 1306, William de la More, maſter of the Temple, for himſelf and brethren, conſented to pay to the king 700 marks for the thirtieth part of their own and their villans goods, agreeably to a grant by the prelates and magnates[9]. The like ſum was paid by the prior and brethren of St. John of Jeruſalem; who in all taxations ſeem to have been placed on the ſame footing with the maſter and brethren of the Temple.

The wealth and conſequence of the Knights Templars were at this time immenſe; it being affirmed by contemporary writers that they were ſeiſed of 16,000 lordſhips in Europe, two millions of yearly revenue, and not leſs than 4000 Commanderies[10]. In this kingdom their revenues muſt certainly have been very great, if we judge of them according to the proportion of what they poſſeſſed in Leiceſterſhire; for, beſides the Soke of Rothley, including the villages already mentioned, they had thoſe of Beaumont, Bareſby, Dalby, North and South Mardefeld, Saxby, Stoneſby, and Walton, with land in above 80 others[11]. But the time was now rapidly approaching, when this illuſtrious military order, which for many years had been the honour and ſupport of the kingdom of Jeruſalem under the Chriſtians, was to be charged with hereſy, idolatry, and moſt horrible blaſphemy; even to the abjuring of Chriſt himſelf. Whether it were really their guilt of ſuch high enormities which were laid to their charge, or rather their potency, ſo generally feared, which occaſioned their ruin; certain it is, that the proceedings againſt them are marked with ſtrict ſeverity. But perhaps it ought to be obſerved, that king Edward II. (when he had been but a few months on the throne) apparently favoured the Knights Templars; and, Dec. 4, 1307, wrote to the kings of Portugal, Caſtile, Sicily, and Arragon, and, Dec. 10, to pope Clement V. not to believe the ſtories which were raiſed againſt them. But, receiving ſhortly after the pope's bull, he ſent out writs, Dec. 15, for attaching them; and, Dec. 26, wrote to the pope, how willing he was to act againſt them[12]. An order of the king and council was accordingly iſſued, Feb. 27, 1307-8, "de univerſis Templariis unâ die capiendis[13];" which was followed by a circular letter to the ſeveral ſheriffs, "de cunctis per Angliam Templariis in craſtino Epiphanie capiendis;" and by a ſimilar mandate, "de Templariis in Scotiâ, Hiberniâ, & Walliâ, attachiandis[14]."

They were accordingly apprehended and caſt into priſon, not only throughout England and France, but univerſally through Chriſtendom; and in 1308 another papal bull was iſſued, appointing a general council to be held at London, "ſuper negotio Templariorum[15];" where being convicted of divers great impieties, all their poſſeſſions were confiſcated.

The whole proceedings of this council, which conſiſted of all the biſhops within the dioceſe of Canterbury, are given at large in Dugdale's Monaſticon[16].

---

[1] Dodſworth's MSS. vol. XXXV. pp. 65—67; ex quodam Rotulo in cuſtodia Henrici Croke, militis, clerici Pipe apud Weſtminſter, reſervato, tangente terras Templariorum, Rot. 42 & 46.

[2] Ex Rotulo Computantium.

[3] Madox, Hiſtory of the Exchequer, 25 & 26 Edw. I. p. 426.

[4] Mich. Communia, 25 & 26 Edw. I.

[5] See before, under Hemington, p. 810.

[6] Rolls of Parliament, vol. I. p. 182.

[7] Rot. Cart. 23 Edw. I.

[8] Pat. 34 Edw. I. n. 9.

[9] Mich. Communia, 34 & 35 Edw. I. Rot. 22. a. pars 1.

[10] Flor. Cherub. ut ſupra, Tho. Walſingham, p. 72.

[11] Burton, p. 215.

[12] Rymer, vol. I. pp. 30. 43. 35. 37.

[13] Ibid. p. 34.

[14] Ibid. pp. 43. 45.

[15] Ibid. p. 101.

[16] Vol. II. pp. 559—564.

There are many articles in Rymer's Fœdera, relating to their being taken into cuſtody, both in this kingdom and on the continent[1]. Several particulars of the legal proceedings againſt them are alſo printed in Wilkins's "Concilia;" and many others are preſerved in MS. in our public repoſitories; in the Britiſh Muſeum, the Bodleian Library, the Aſhmolean Muſeum, &c.

In 1309, an order from the king was iſſued to the treaſurer and barons of the Exchequer, for an extent on their lands[2]; with a commiſſion to Alan de Goldyngham and John de Medefeld, "de inquirendo ſuper bonis Templariorum elongatis[3]."

In an antient MS Chronicle the cauſe of their ruin is thus ſet forth[4]: "Anno 1310, circa feſtum S. Hilarii, omnes Templarii in Angliâ & in Scotiâ; & alii omnes, ut dicebantur, per totam Chriſtianitatem, unâ horâ diei, capti ſunt propter hereſie pravitatem, necnon propter fraudem quam fecerunt in quodam bello inter regem Tharſis & Paganos, in quo tergiverſerunt ad Paganos, & occiderunt predictum regem & exercitum ejus, & filium ejus unicum ceperunt, unde tota Chriſtianitas turbata eſt valdè[5]." But Thomas de Walſingham[6] ſetteth forth other reaſons for this ſevere proceeding againſt them; namely, ſeveral groſs and heatheniſh, yea, rather deviliſh practices; all which and more were laid to their charge in particular articles; whereupon, witneſſes being examined, they were proceeded againſt, as hath been ſaid; the whole ſeries thereof being at large yet to be ſeen in an antient MS.[7] of that time; wherein it has been obſerved, that the ſaid articles do charge them with no leſs than hereſy, idolatry, and moſt execrable blaſphemy; but very little, or nothing at all, appeareth to have been proved: and ſo much doth an honeſt hiſtorian[8], in his Acts of the Archbiſhop of York, declare; where, ſpeaking of the proceedings againſt them, he ſaith, "Quamvis in multis eſſent accuſati, nichil tamen inventum eſt quod de jure videretur ſtatum illorum annullare." And that this was truth, ſpeaking then of William de Grenefield archbiſhop of York at that time, he further ſaith, "Archiepiſcopus Willielmus, pietate motus ſuper ſtatu Templariorum ſue dioceſis, omni auxilio deſtitutorum, eos in diverſa ſue dioceſis inſtituit monaſteria, eiſque ſuo perpetuo vite neceſſaria miniſtrari precepit[9]." Yet ſuch was their hard fate, that, having been thus dealt withal, their whole order was ſhortly after formally condemned and diſſolved, by the Council of Vienne in France[10], under pope Clement V; and their laſt Great Maſter, Jaques de la Maul, a Burgundian, publicly burnt at Paris[11]: but neither he, nor any of the reſt, ever confeſſed thoſe enormous crimes they were charged with; which made ſome men believe they were ~~only~~ criminal in their riches, and that the Chriſtian Princes had a deſign to ſhare their poſſeſſions; which, however, ſucceeded not.

Their poſſeſſions were immediately ſeized; and they were proceeded againſt in St. Peter's church in York, by two ſucceſſive councils, in 1310 and 1311; and in the laſt-mentioned year the entire abolition of their order in that province was proclaimed by archbiſhop Grenefield.

"Whether the crimes or the riches of the Templars raiſed the indignation of the world againſt them, does not at this diſtance well appear. Hereſy, idolatry, blaſphemy, have been laid to their charge; and cowardice too, or ſomething worſe, which they have been accuſed of; taking part with the Pagans againſt Tharſus a Chriſtian king, and ſo ruining him and his army. Silver croſſes always gave great offence; and, if one had a mind to be generous, the account of the archbiſhop of York, who declared he could ſee nothing proved againſt them, was of more value than a thouſand hearſays of their enemies. The archbiſhop took pity of all thoſe in his dioceſe, and provided for them in the monaſteries there[12]."

Not finding any regular liſt of the maſters of the Temple in print; the following is copied from the Cotton MSS. with additions from Mr. Gough's copy of Dugdale's Monaſticon, with biſhop Kennett's MS. notes:

Magiſter Galfridus, filius Stephani, 1180.
Aymericus de Sancto Mauro, 1203.
Alan Marcell' 1228.
Amberaldus 1229.
Robert Mounford 1234.
Robert Saunforde 1241. 1252[13].
Amadeus 1254.
Thomas Berardi 1260[14].
Imbcus Perot 1270.
Rocelinus de Foſſâ.
Guido de Foreſtâ 1292[15], 2 E. I.
Jacobus de Molayo 1293.
William de la More 1300, 1306[16].
William de Tochale 1304[17].
Leonard Tibett 1332, 1334[18].
Philip de Thurns 1339[19].
John Pavely 1366, 1371[20].
Brian de Jay, 16 kal. Jan. 1295[21].
Rob. Hales, 2 Ap. 1377[22].
John de Rudington, Nov. 1, 1333, 21 Maii 1338[23].
Robert Turvile.
Richard Jay.
Richard Haſtyngs[24].

Three different rolls are preſerved in the Britiſh Muſeum, under the title of "Computus Edwardi capellani, cuſtodis manerii de Boleſtrode, quondam Templariorum," 1308—1310[25].

Nov. 4, 1311, the poſſeſſions of the Knights Templars in the counties of Leiceſter and Warwick were committed to the cuſtody of Alexander de Compton[26]; who accounted for £60. to the king for the iſſues thereof[27]. William de Ferrariis was at that time the king's cuſtos of Rothley[28].

By a bull of pope Clement V, May 2, 1312, the lands of the Knights Templars were given to the Knights Hoſpitallers[29]; which, as far as related to their poſſeſſions in this kingdom, was, with a few exceptions, confirmed by king Edward III.

May 17, 1312, the king's mandate was iſſued to the biſhop of Lichfield, to provide for the maintenance of ſix Knights Templars, then lately allotted to his care by the archbiſhop of Canterbury, to be provided for in ſome of the monaſteries within his dioceſe. The biſhop of Worceſter had ſeven in like manner to provide for[30].

July 5, ſeveral orders were iſſued, at the requeſt of particular individuals, to the different cuſtodes of the lands and tenements of the Knights Templars, "de vadiis & ſtipendiis de exitibus Templarum ſolvendis;" and to John le Clerk, who was cuſtos in Cambridgeſhire, "de vadiis Johanni epiſcopo Elienſi pro Roberto Scot & Rogero de Dalton, Templariis, liberandis[31]."

The following royal mandate was iſſued Aug. 21:

"Rex dilecto ſibi in Chriſto priori Hoſpitalis Sancti Johannis Ieroſolymitani in Angliâ, ſalutem. Rumor, noſtris ſenſibus admirandus, auribus noſtris innotuit hiis diebus; videlicet, quod certe perſone, de regno noſtro, ad aſſignandum vobis omnia bona Templariorum, mobilia & immobilia, infra idem regnum conſiſtentia, jam ſunt executores per literas Apoſtolicas deputati; quodque vos erga executores ipſos, pro executione literarum predictarum, ad opus veſtrum, celeriter faciendâ, inſiſtitis diligenter. Et, quia executio illa, ſi fieret, in noſtrum & dignitatis corone noſtre regie prejudicium cederet manifeſtè, vobis, ſub gravi forisfacturâ noſtrâ, firmitèr inhibemus, ne quicquam ulteriùs ſuper negotia memorata, clam vel palam, per vos vel per alios, aut alium, procurare, facere, vel attemptare, citra proximum Parliamentum noſtrum, quomodolibet preſumatis: Teſte Rege, apud Londinias, primo die Auguſti [1]."

---

[1] See the articles referred to in p. 948.
[2] Rymer, vol. II p. 130.
[3] Ibid. p. 178.
[4] Chron. H. Knighton, col. 2531. n. 50. & col. 2494. n. 30. Act. Pontif. Ebor. per T. Stubs, col. 1730. Ypod. Neuſtr.
[5] In Bibl. Bodl. (K. 84.) f. 95. b.
[6] Hiſt. Angl. p. 73.
[7] In Bibl. Bodl. T. 88. Th.
[8] T. Stubs, col. 730. n. 10.
[9] Ibid. n. 30.
[10] Thomas Walſingham, fol. 99; Petrus Crinitus Cornel de honeſtâ diſciplinâ, lib. 24. cap. 13.
[11] Favini Theatrum Honoris.
[12] Salmon's Herts, 16. 17.
[13] 8 kal. Maii, anno pontif. Walteri Grey 23. Reg. major W. Grey.
[14] Berardi writes to Amadeus 1260. Annal. Burton, 441.
[15] Prynne, Collect. III. 143, Reg. Ol. Hutton, ep. Linc.
[16] Prynne, Ib. 360.
[17] Reg. Pontiſſara ep. Winton.
[18] Reg. A. de Salop.
[19] Reg. A. de Salop. 18 E. III.
[20] Clauſ. 28 E. III. dorſ. 30.
[21] Reg. Ol. Sutton, ep. Linc.
[22] Reg. Beckingham, ep. Linc.
[23] Ib.
[24] Cotton MSS. Nero E. VI. p. 466.
[25] Cartæ Antiquæ, A. 25, 26, 27.
[26] Rot. Fin. 5 Edw. II. m. 14.
[27] Pat. 6 Edw. II. p. 1. m. 23.
[28] Rymer, vol. III. p. 456.
[29] Ib. p. 323.
[30] Ib. pp. 327, 349.
[31] Ib. p. 331. 334.

In a confirmation charter from king Edward II. Oct. 7, 1313, to the prior and convent de Laundâ, among other particulars is a grant and quit-claim, from the maſter and brethren Militie Templi Salomonis in Angliâ, of the ſuits and cuſtoms which had been recovered in the King's bench againſt them for their poſſeſſions within the Soke of Rothley at Tilton [2].

Nov. 21, 1313, a grant occurs to Albert de Nigro Caſtro, the then Grand Maſter of the Hoſpital of St. John of Jeruſalem, and to Leonard de Tibercis, then prior at Venice, and procurator-general of the order, of "all the houſes, churches, manors, lands, rents, and other poſſeſſions whatever, in this kingdom, that had formerly belonged to the Knights Templars, together with all the corn that might then be in the ground, and the ornaments of their churches [3]; reſerving only to the crown and to individuals their private rights in every part of the ſame. Among the reſervations to the crown was the advowſon of Rothley church; and in ſome few inſtances it appears that the heirs of the donors obtained their original property.

Nov. 28, 1313, a letter from the king, "cuſtodi quorundam terrarum & tenementorum quondam Templariorum in comitatu Leyceſtr', de terris quondam Templariorum Hoſpitalariis liberandis" (and the like in all other counties where the Templars had property) in purſuance of the order of pope Clement V. and the general council at Vienne, having charged them, under pain of a capital interdict, to deliver up all their poſſeſſions (which had been ſeized in October 1308) to Albert de Nigro Caſtro and Leonard de Tibercis, for the uſe of the Knights Hoſpitallers; "factâ priùs per nos quadem proteſtatione pro conſervatione juris noſtri, & ſubditorum noſtrorum in hâc parte [4]."

"Proteſtatio per regem ſuper reſtitutione terrarum Templariorum facienda Hoſpitalariis, Dec. 26, 1313; with a warrant to the ſheriffs, "de protegendo Hoſpitalarios in aſſecutione premiſſorum [5]."

Eodem modo mandatum eſt Willielmo de Ferrariis de manerio de Rotheleie cum pertinentiis liberandis; & Alexandro de Compton, cuſtodi quorundam terrarum & tenementorum quondam Templariorum in comitatibus Leyceſtrie & Warwic [5]."

In 1314, a petition of Henry de Lancaſter was preſented to the king in parliament, "petentis juſtitiam ſibi fieri de quadam placeâ terre in manerio de Rodeleye, quod quidem manerium Edwardus pater ejuſdem Henrici habuit ex feoffamento domini Edwardi patris regis, quam quidem placeam Ricus de Haydon conſtabularii Sancti Brionelli uſurpavit ad opus regis, ad exheredationem ipſius Henrici."—Which was thus anſwered: "Mandetur cuſtodi foreſte, quod in preſentiâ conſtabularii de Sancto Brianello nunc, & Henrici de Lancaſtrie ſuper hoc premuniend' ſi intereſſe voluerit, inquirat ſuper modo & cauſâ captionis paſture in manum regis; & ſi paſtura illa ſit de pertinentiis manerii predicti; & pro tempore capta fuit in manum regis; & per quem; & a quo tempore; & qualiter & quo modo; & utrum tempore prefati Henrici an patris ſui; & utrum paſtura illa ſit in manu regis, an alterius; & ſi in manu alterius, tunc cujus, & qualiter, & quomodo; & quantum paſtura illa contineat, & valeat per annum; & de aliis articulis, &c. Et certificet regi de eo quod inde invenerit in premiſſis [6]."

In 1315, "Ad petitionem quorundam ſervientum qui victum ſuum habuerunt in domo Templariorum pro denariis ſuis datis, ſuggerentium, ſe tempore quo terre Templariorum fuerunt in manu Regis victum ſuum habere de eodem Rege; ſet poſtquam terre predicte ad manus aliorum devenerunt nichil habuerunt, nec habent: unde petunt remedium; Reſponſum eſt: Oſtendant in cancellariâ ſcripta & munimenta, ſi que habeant, de ſuſtentatione ſuâ, & habeant ibidem remedium contra tenentes, &c." [7]

June 29, 1319, a mandate was iſſued by Walter Raynold archbiſhop of Canterbury, including a bull from pope John XXII. "pro Templariis ad aliquam aliam religionem ingrediend' cogendis [8]; which was followed, Nov. 1, 1320, by another mandate from the ſame archbiſhop, with a bull from pope John, "pro liberatione bonorum Templariorum Hoſpitalariis [9]. A third bull of the ſame pope, in 1322, confirmed all the former grants, "cum anathematibus contra detentores [10];" and finally, by a general decree of a great council at Vienne, May 2, 1324, their lands in general were annexed and incorporated to the Knights Hoſpitallers [11].

The headſhips of Rothley and Dalby appear to have been at this time conſolidated, under the title of "The Commandery of Dalby and Rothley [12]."

"The lands of the Templars," Mr. Burton ſays, "were given by act of parliament, 17 Edward II. 1324, to the Knights Hoſpitallers [13] of St. John of Jeruſalem; who granted the Temple-houſe in Fleet-ſtreet, in the reign of king Edward III. to the Students of the Common Laws; which houſe, in the time of king Henry VI. was divided into two honourable ſocieties; viz. The Inner Temple and The Middle Temple [14]; the Inner Temple being the mother and moſt antient of all other the houſes of court, to which I muſt acknowledge all due reſpect, being a fellow thereof, admitted into the ſame Society on the 20th of May, 1593.

Their principal houſe, The New Temple, was given by the king to Thomas earl of Lancaſter; who, forfeiting it ſhortly after by rebellion, it returned again to the crown; and was granted, firſt, to Adomare de Valence earl of Pembroke [15]; and after his deceaſe to Hugh le Deſpenſer the younger for life [16]; which Hugh being attainted in 1327, the right thereof devolved once more to the Crown [17]; and might therein have continued, but that (in compliance with the decree of the great council at Vienne in 1324 [18]) the lands of the Templars having been generally beſtowed upon the Knights Hoſpitallers of St. John of Jeruſalem, king Edward III. granted this manſion unto the Knights of that order here in England; who, ſoon after (as the tradition is) demiſed the ſame, for the rent of £10. a year, unto divers profeſſors of the common law, that came from Thavies Inn in Holbourn. Now that there is nothing but tradition left to us for this cannot ſeem ſtrange, conſidering what ſpoil Wat Tyler, with his fellow rebels, made here in 4 Richard II. by deſtroying and burning their books and records, as an old Annal [19] telleth us, in the law French of that time; ſcil. "Les rebells alleront a le Temple, & jetteront les meaſons a le terre, & avegheront tighles, iſſint que ils faitont coverture en mal array; & alleront en l'egliſe, & priſteront touts les liveres & rolles de remembrances, que furont en lour huches deins le Temple de Apprentices de la Ley; & portentont en le haut chimene, & les arderont [20]."

As an account of the Knights Hoſpitallers has been already given under Old Dalby [21]; it may be ſufficient here to ſtate, that their profeſſion was, to defend Chriſtianity againſt Pagans, and to defend the church [22]; to entertain pilgrims in their journies to the Holy Land, and to defend them from robbers; and that it was from the high eſtimation in which their character at that time ſtood that they obtained the lands of the Knights Templars. None were to be admitted that were of a defamed life, or without being gentlemen by blood; eſpecially the priors were required to be gentlemen by deſcent [1]; and they had aſſigned to them for their dreſs, by pope Honorius II. a black mantle with a white croſs in the fore part thereof, as ſhewn in Plate CXXVII. They were firſt introduced into England in 1100, when John Briſet built them a houſe near Smithfield, called St. John of Jeruſalem; which ſtill retains that name. By a petition of the prior and brethren of this hoſpital to king Edward III. and his council, in 1314, it appears, that in the reign of king Edward I. the ſum of £2654. 11s. 4*d.* had been taken out of their treaſury at Clerkenwell, for the king's uſe, by ſir Philip de Wyloughby, chancellor of the Exchequer; of which they requeſted re-payment; and moreover that (though they had voluntarily given to the late king in his great need 700 marks, in return for which the lands of their ſocmen and their villans were to be exempt from talliage), "la reigne Margarete ſuit briefs de faire lever de eux lxx marcs pur ſon ore, auxint come le Priour euſt fait une fyn devers le Roi; de quoi il prient remedie." To the firſt part of their petition, they were anſwered, that they might take credit for the ſum they mentioned in their payments at the Exchequer. The ſecond part was poſtponed till the next parliament, "ut tunc vel ante diſcutiatur ſi Regina hujuſmodi aurum habere debet, vel non [2]."

---

[1] Clauſ. 6 Edw. II. m. 29. dorſo. [2] Cart. 7 Edw. II. pars 1. m. 12. [3] Rymer, vol. III. p. 451. [4] Ibid. p. 454.

[5] Ibid. pp. 451. 456. [6] Rolls of Parliament, 8 Edw. II. vol. I. p. 315. [7] Ibid. p. 319.

[8] Dugdale, Mon. Angl. vol. II. p. 943. [9] Ibid. p. 945. [10] Rymer, vol. III. p. 956.

[11] Dugdale's Warwickſhire, ed. 1730, vol. II. pp. 962—965; Rymer, vol. IV. p. 323. [12] See vol. III. p. 246.

[13] The lands of the Templars given to the Hoſpitallers were ſuppoſed to be tithe-free, as given before the Lateran Council.

[14] See Blount's Gloſſography, voc. Mort. [15] Cart. 15 Edw. II. m. 21. [16] Cart. 1 Edw. III.

[17] Hiſt. Angl. Script. Antiq. col. 2549. [18] Ibid. col. 1733. l. 16. 34. [19] Olim Abbathiæ S. Mariæ Ebor. ſpectans.

[20] Dugdale, Origines Juridiciales, p. 144. [21] See vol. III. p. 315.

[22] I have a copy of the "Statuta Hoſpitalis Hieruſalem," printed in 1586, folio, with many fine plates, and the portraits of fifty-one of their grand maſters, beginning with "Fr. Gerardus, tum Hoſpitalis Præfectus, cum a Chriſtianis Duce Gothofredi Hieruſalem capta eſt, anno Domini MXXXXVII."

In 1325, the prior and brethren of the Hoſpital of St. John of Jeruſalem repreſent, "Qe come nr̃e dit ſeigneur le Roi, par aſſent de ſon parlement, livrer as ditz priour & freres totes les terres & tenementz, ove les appurtenaunces, qe furent du Temple en ſon roiaume, forſpris aſquns manoirs qe ſont demorez a nr̃e dit ſeigneur le Roi del graunt de l'avauntditz priour & freres; la ad le gardein del manoir de Faxflete, quel eſt un les manoirs enſuit forſpris, de ſa auctorite demene pris & ſeiſi en le mayn le roi totes les terres & tenementz, ove les aportenances, que furrent du Temple en Suth Cave & Beford en le counte d'Everwik; et les claime et chalenge come aportenantz au dit manoir de Faxflete, pa la ou il ne ſont, ne unqes ne furent, de rien a cel manoir de Faxflet aportenantz: dont les ditz priour & freres prient remedie pur Diewe [3]."

In 1327, the prior of St. John of Jeruſalem experienced ſome difficulty in ſecuring the poſſeſſions which had been transferred to the priory by the ſeveral foregoing grants; as appears by the following petition: "A nr̃e ſeigneur le Roi e a ſon Conſeil prie le priour de l'Hoſpital Seint Johan de Jeruſalem en Engleterre, q̃ come les terres e tenements qe furent du Temple ſoient ꝑ eſtatut ordenez & liverez au dit Hoſpital; qe meiſmes celes terres & ten' ſoient forpris en le ſtatur e les briefs qe ſeront faitz a les gentz deſhitez put lour letres re-avoir [4]." What anſwer was received does not appear; but in Hilary Term, 1328, "Prior Sancti Johannis Jeruſalem in Angliâ, per petitionem ſuam, Gallicè, petit jus ſuum ad eccleſiam de Rothely, nuper per Regem recuperatam; quam petitionem Dominus Rex huc mittit', ut, &c. In hoc placito ſit mentio de dictâ rectoriâ, & de capellis eodem pertinentibus; ſcilicet, Gaddeſby, Cayham, Grimſton, Wartnaby, Caudwell, & Wikeham, & medietate dicti manerii: Judicium redditum eſt, quod prior & fratres eant ſine die pro premiſſis [5]."

In 1329, the Knights Hoſpitallers obtained from king Edward II. a confirmation of the manor of Rothley, with the advowſon of the church and its ſeveral chapels, as fully as it had been granted to the Templars by king Edward I. But in the following year we find their poſſeſſions in this county and other places again conteſted in parliament: "A noſtre ſeigneur le Roi & a ſon Conſail prient ſes bones gentz, q̃ come l'ordre des Templiers eſt & fut defait ꝑ l'apoſtoille, & puis quele defaute noſtre ſeigneur le Roi votre piere, & ſes liges homes, cheſcun a qi l'eſchete apendoit, entrierent, ſicome Ley de terre voleit, la feut ordine, trop ſuttilement & en male manere, contre le Roi & ſes bones gentz, ꝑ ſire Hugh le Deſpenſer le piere & le fuiz, pur trop grantz deñs outre meſure q'il priſtent des Hoſpitaliers, apres un parlement fu auxi come euſt eſte en parlement, les ditz Hugh & Hugh firent venir les juſtices le Roi. & les diſaient q'il informaſſent le Roi, s'il poet g̃nter totes les dites terres & tenementes as Hoſpitaliers qe eſtoient as Templiers. Les dites juſtices diſoient apꝑtement & expreſſement, qe le Roi ne ne devote ne ne le poiet faire ꝑ Ley; non pas pur ce les ditz Hugh & Hugh, ꝑ poair q'il avoient, firent fair un ſtatut, ſicome piert ꝑ le ſtatut, qe les Hoſpitaliers euſſent les terres de Templiers. Et en lequel eſtatute poet eſtre trowe, q̃ les juſtices ne s'aſſentirent point; car ils ne poient pur lour ſerment par la diſheritaunce du Roy & du ſes gentz. Et diſoient, q̃ ce ſunt contrarie a ley, iſſi q̃ cel eſtatut ſe fiſt contre ley & contre reſon. Par qoi prient ſes bones gentz de ſa ligeance, q̃ cel eſtatut ſoit deffait, & tenu pur nul, iſſi q̃ cheſcun puiſſe reſſortir a ſoen, deſicome per force eſtaient oſtez, per briefs q̃ iſſerent de cel eſtatut nient aſſentu per parlement. Et q̃ accion ſoit reſerve a noſtre ſeigneur le Roi, & a touz autres ṽs les Hoſpitaliers, des iſſues qe ils ont pris en le mene temps des terres & tenemontz ſuſditz."—The anſwer to this was, "Demoergie tan qe un autre parlement [6]."

Their privileges were thus again confirmed by king Edward III. in 1333 and 1334.

"Edwardus, Dei gratiâ, rex Anglie, dominus Hibernie, & dux Aquitainie, omnibus ad quos preſentes litere pervenerint ſalutem. Sciatis quod cum celebris memorie dominus Henricus rex Anglie, pater noſter, dudum per cartam ſuam dediſſet & conceſſiſſet dilectis nobis in Chriſto magiſtro & fratribus Milicie Templi in Angliâ manerium de Rotheley, cum advocatione eccleſie ejuſdem & capellarum ad eam ſpectantium: habendum & tenendum de ipſo rege patre noſtro & heredibus ſuis dictis magiſtro & fratribus & ſucceſſoribus ſuis in puram & perpetuam elemoſinam, ſicut in dictâ cartâ pleniùs continetur: Nos, licet diverſis rationibus jus habeamus in advocatione eccleſie manerii predicti, & capellarum predictarum; volumus tamen et concedimus, pro nobis & heredibus noſtris, quantum in nobis eſt, quod iidem magiſter & fratres & ſucceſſores eandem eccleſiam, cum capellis de Gaddeſby, Kayham, Grymeſtone, Warnoteby, Caudewell, & Wykeham, ad dictam eccleſiam ſpectantibus, habeant & teneant ad pitanciam fratrum conventûs ſui de Acon, ſine reclamatione noſtri vel heredum noſtrorum, in perpetuum. In cujus rei teſtimonium has literas noſtras fieri fecimus patentes. Teſte meipſo, apud Selebourn, ſexto decimo die Auguſti, anno regni noſtri quarto. Nos autem tenorem literarum predictarum, ad requiſitionem dilectorum nobis in Chriſto prioris & fratrum Hoſpitalis Sancti Johannis Jeruſalem in Angliâ duximus exemplificandam. In cujus (&c.) Teſte Rege, apud Weſtmonaſterium, xxviii die Novembris [7]."

In 1339, the privileges which had been granted to the Knights Templars, and had been transferred to the Knights Hoſpitallers, were once more confirmed by the king in parlement: "A noſtre ſeigneur le roy & a ſon conſeill prie le priour de Hoſpitall St. Johan de Jeruſalem, en Engleterre, qe come totes les terres & tenementz del dit Hoſpitall & du Temple en Engleterre, ſoient doneez en pure & perpetuele aſmoigne, & en defence de la terre ſeinte, le dit priour a la requeſt del dit noſtre ſeigneur le roi a ſon parlement de Nottingham, granta en aide de ſa guerre en Eſcoce x hoñes d'armes y a demorer un quarter de l'an a les deſpenſes & couſtages le dit priour, leſqueux demorerent la pres de troys quarters de l'an a les couſtages meſmes celui priour. Pleiſe a noſtre dit ſeigneur le roy & a ſon conſeil graunter letter deſuz ſon grant ſeal au dit priour, qe cel graunt des gentz d'armes a celle foiz fet ne lui tourne en cuſtume el temps avenir."—The petition was thus anſwered: "Il demaunde reſon, & pur ceo eſt accordez per les counſeill q'il eit ceo q'il prie [8]."

---

[1] Dugdale, Warwickſhire, vol. II. p. 115; Willis, Mitred Abbeys, vol. I. p. 129.

[2] Rolls of Parliament, 8 Edw. II; vol. I. p. 299.

[3] Ibid. p. 431.

[4] Rolls of Parliament, vol. II. p. 12.

[5] Placita coram Rege, apud Ebor', Termino Hill', anno Edwardi III. 2°, Rot. 19°, in Receptu Scaccarii.—"Hoc placitum continet quatuor Rotulos integratos." Roper, MS.

[6] Rolls of Parliament, vol. II. p. 41.

[7] Pat. 2 Edw. III. p. 2. m. 7. per Inſpex. Vide etiam Pat. 5 Ric. II. p. 2. m. 31. Dugdale, Mon. Ang. II. p. 412. 511—513.

[8] Rolls of Parliament, vol. II. p. 100.

From this time the Knights Hoſpitallers continued to enjoy their property and their privileges uninterrupted, with additional confirmations by every ſucceeding king, till their final diſſolution.

When the Infidels got poſſeſſion of the Holy Land, theſe knights retired to the iſle of Rhodes, which they maintained 200 years. When the Turks beat them out there, the iſland of Malta was given to them by Charles V and Pope Clement VII.; whence they are called Knights of Malta, as before of Rhodes. They have reſiſted ſeveral attacks of the Turks; and were betrayed to the French in 1798. By the Treaty of Amiens, 1802, their iſland and poſſeſſions have been reſtored to them, under guarantee of certain Powers; till the terms of which are complied with in the full extent, it ſeems to be both the duty and the intereſt of Great Britain to retain them in her hands.

Richard, ſon of Richard le Foune, releaſed to ſir Hugo de Meygnell all his right to lands, &c. in Yeveley[1], by deed dated at Rakedale on the feaſt of St. Matthew, 13 Edward III. 1339[2].

"Noverint univerſi per preſentes nos Hugonem de Meignell[3] chivaler & Aleſiam uxorem meam attornaſſe & loco noſtro poſuiſſe dilectos nobis in Chriſto Johannem le Parker capellanum, & Willielmum Attehall, conjunctim & diviſim, ad recipiendum ſeiſinam noſtram de Johanne filio Richardi del Pek de Rodeley de duabus acris terre & dimidiâ, cum ſuis pertinentiis, in Rodeley, &c. In cujus rei teſtimonium, &c. Dat' apud Rodeley, &c. 21 Edward III. 1347."[4]

Alice, daughter of Robert Paynell, of Herteyſhorne, granted ſir Hugo de Meygnell, knt. and Aleſia his wife, and to Thomas ſon of the ſaid Hugo and Aleſia, and to his heirs, the reverſion of all his lands and manor of Kyngeſley. Dated at Newhall, 24 Edw. III. 1350.

Roger de Verdon, of Herteſhorne, granted to the ſame parties all his right to the lands at Kingeſley, &c. Dated alſo at Newhall 24 Edward III.[5]

By an inquiſition in 1352, it appeared that John (ſon of Nicholas) de Glenfield held at his death 40*s.* rent in Rothley, of the prior of St. John of Jeruſalem in England by ſocage[6]; and by another in 1358, that he alſo held ſome lands in Rothley[7].

In 1370, Baldwin Fitz Piers, of Glenfield, granted all his right in all his lands and tenements at Rothley to Robert de Swillington (his uncle) and his heirs[8].

"The following Rental of this Commandery of the Knights Hoſpitallers," ſays Mr. Burton, "I have thought good here to inſert, taken out of that manuſcript pertaining to this order, made 46 Edward III. 1372; which I vouched before in Dalby on the Woulds[9].

Preceptorium de Rothley.

Manerium ibidem, cum rectoriâ & molendino aquatico dimittitur ad firmam pro 22 lī.; & firmarius oneratur cum ſtipendiis capellanorum.

Redditus de ſokâ de Rothley valet per ann.	6	9	0
Reddit' de ſokâ de Cateſby[10] valet per ann.	6	11	5
Reddit' de ſokâ de Barneſby[11] valet per ann.	3	0	3
Reddit' de South Croxton valet per ann.	1	4	0½
Reddit' villate de Babegrave valet, &c.	2	19	2½
Reddit' villate de Kayham valet per ann.	3	4	5
Reddit' villate de Merdefeild South valet per ann.	2	6	0½
Reddit' villate de Merdefeild North valet per ann.	2	8	6
Reddit' villate de Tilton valet per ann.	2	0	9
Reddit' villate de Somerby valet per ann.	1	15	0
Reddit' de Grimſton valet per ann.	2	16	0
Reddit' de Warkeney[12] valet per ann.	5	13	1
Reddit' de Cauldwell & Wykeham valet	4	1	11
Reddit' villate de Saxby valet	1	0	4
Reddit' ſervicii ejuſdem manerii valet per annum	7	6	8
Reddit' de volunt' ejuſdem manerii	3	5	4
Terra de Temple Cateſby[10] dimiſſa hoc anno dictis hominibus	2	0	0
Reddit' de Melton Moubray valet per ann.	0	17	8
Reddit' manerii de Stoneſby valet per ann.	2	6	8
Reddit' ibidem valet 11 lī. 11 s̄. 10 đ. 1 libram piperis, & 4 capones.
Capella de Cateſby[10], viz. decima garbarum & feni ibidem, valent per ann.	12	0	0
Decime garbarum & feni capelle de Grimſton valet per ann.	6	13	4
Decime garbarum & feni capelle de Warkney[12] valet per ann.	5	0	0
Capella de Cauldwell & Wikam dimittitur ad firmam per ann. pro	4	6	8
Perquiſita curie de Rotheley valent per ann.	5	19	0

Ad manerium de Rotheley pertinent 5 carucate terre, unde ſuſtentari poſſunt 24 vacce, 100 boviculi, & 60 porci & porcelli.

Item debent maneria predict' cariag' blad' per 20 dies in ancupio.

Summa totalis recept'	138	1	8½

Et ſic in marcis 208 marc' 1 s̄. 8½ đ.

Onus preceptorii predicti.

In viſitatione domini prioris pro 2 diebus	2	0	0
In denariis capituli	0	14	10
In ſtipendiis collectorum colligend' redditus per ann.	1	6	8
In feodo ſeneſchalli & ſubſeneſchalli nihil hic computatur, quia allocatur in Dalby.
In ſolutione pro annuo redditu archidiaconi Leic', pro juriſdictione infra parochiam de Rotheley,	2	13	4
Item abbati de Croxton per ann.	1	2	0
In ſtipendiis cuſtodum boſcorum & terrarum dominicarum per ann.	0	6	8
Et firmarius inveniet cuſtodum menſam.
In ſtipendiis duarum capellanorum apud Rotheley.
Summa totius oneris	8	3	6

Et ſic in marcis 12 marc' 3 s̄. 6 đ.

Rotheley, cum eccleſia de Melton, Stoneſby, Whelleſburgh, Buckminſter, & Seuſterne	125	16	0

Et ſolvit archidiacono Leiceſtrie, pro penſione ſuâ, 4 marcas.

Dalby & Rotheley.

Extenta eorum valent per annum 363 marc' 11 s̄. 8¼ đ.
Onus eorum per annum 31 marc' 3 s̄. 2¾ đ.
Sic remanet ultra onus ut ſupra 329 marc' 7 s̄. 5½ đ.
Inde in annuâ reſponſâ eorum 160 marc'.
Rem' pro ſuſtentatione & ſtatu ut ſupra 169 marc' 8 s̄. 5½ đ.

In 1537, William Hakeluit, deceaſed, held one place of land, with two granges thereupon erected, and one virgate and a half of land thereto belonging, in capite, of the prior of the Hoſpital of St. John of Jeruſalem, of his manor of Rothley, by the ſervice of 3*s.* a year[13].

In 1401, Hugh le Deſpencer, knight, deceaſed, was ſeiſed of ſix meſſuages, ſix tofts, and ſix virgates of land, with their appurtenances, which were held of the prior of St. John of Jeruſalem in ſocage; and Anne (the wife of Edward Botiller, knight) was the ſiſter and next heir of the ſaid Hugh[14].

In a book of fiſteenths and tenths granted by the laity in 1416, the poſſeſſions of the prior of the Hoſpital of St. John of Jeruſalem at Rothley Temple were rated at 10*s.* 6*d.*; and at the ſame ſum in the ſubſidy of 1445, when no abatement was made.

The Soke of Rothley, with its appurtenances, was from this period enjoyed by the Knights Hoſpitallers till the general ſuppreſſion of religious houſes.

---

[1] Sir William Meynille, in 1268, gave to the Hoſpitallers of St. John of Jeruſalem ſeveral lands and tenements in his lordſhip of Yeveley. Dugdale, Mon. Angl. vol. II. p. 546.

[2] Harl. MSS. 4208, p. fol. 118. See the ſeal, Plate CXXIV. fig. C.

[3] The Meignells of Langley Meignell were lords of the manor of Old Dalby. See vol. II. p. 246.

[4] Harl. MSS. 4208. fol. 119; ſee fig. D.

[5] Ibid. See fig. E.

[6] Eſch. 26 Edw. III. N° 41. Leic.

[7] Eſch. 32 Edw. III. N° 1. Leic.

[8] Clauſ. 44 Edw. III. N° 16.

[9] See before, vol. III. p. 215; and ſee in Churton's Life of Smith, p. 106, the claims of the Hoſpitallers.

[10] Gaddeſby.

[11] Bareſby.

[12] Wartnaby.

[13] Eſch. 49 Edw. III. pars 1. m. . . . . N° 66.

[14] Eſch. 3 Hen. IV. N° 29. Leic.

Two different ſeals of the Knights Hoſpitallers have been given, under Old Dalby. The firſt of them is a double ſeal of their earlieſt prior Garnerius, to a deed in 1189. On one of them a perſon kneeling at prayers before a crucifix, inſcribed, SALVE, ARBOR SC'A, ARBOR DIGNA. On the other, a venerable head, and ✠ S. GARN. PRIORIS HOSPITAL IN ANGL. The other of Thomas Docwra, who was prior in the early part of the reign of Henry VIII. ✠ S. PRIORIS HOSPITAL JERUSALEM IN ANGL[1].—A third ſeal, from the original now in my poſſeſſion[2], is here given in Plate CXXVII. The face of it is elegantly cut on ſilver; and it was probably the ſeal uſed by prior Weſton, in whoſe time the houſe was diſſolved. The inſcription is, Sigillum fr'i Joh'is baptiſte Jeruſalem in Anglia de Clerkenwell.

In 1463, Thomas Walſh, late of Onlep, eſq. deceaſed, was ſeiſed of one meſſuage, 20 acres of land, and 12 acres of meadow, in Rothley[3].

May 24, 1446, ſir John Langstrother, maſter of the commandery of Rothley, gives his teſtimony, among many others, to the marriage of Laurence Sherard, eſq. of Stapleford, with Elizabeth Durant, of Cotteſmore, in Rutland; and to the fact of their having had a daughter, who lived full two hours, and was afterward buried in Stapleford kirk-yard with maſs and due oblations[4]. To this deed is appended the double ſeal of the maſter of the commandery of Rothley, engraved in Plate CXXVII.

Sir John Langſtrother was elected prior of St. John of Jeruſalem, March 9, 1469[5]; but, "ſiding with the Houſe of Lancaſter," he was taken priſoner in Tewkeſbury battle, 1471, and by king Edward IV. put to death in cold blood, contrary to the promiſe of a prince, who had aſſured his life with oaths[6].

Sir Thomas Newport occurs as commander of the commandery of Dalby and Rothley in 1503 and 1505[7]; and was ſucceeded by ſir John Babington, a knight of Rhodes; who, becoming farmer of Temple Bruere, revived an old claim of the Knights Hoſpitallers to a diſtant part of Aſhby-heath, againſt Thomas de la Laund, then lord of Aſhby; who filing a bill in Chancery to ſupport his right, was anſwered in 1522 by ſir John Babington. By the inſtructions drawn up on this occaſion by ſir Thomas de la Laund, for Hugh Clerke, of Lincoln's Inn, his learned counſel, and by his notes on thoſe inſtructions, it appears that he was betrayed by the ſaid Clerke, and otherwiſe endamaged to the value of 200 marks. "And here," ſays Mr. Peck, "ended the ſquabble; for Babington being, as it ſhould ſeem, too great for de la Laund to contend with, he was therefore forced to ſit down contented with loſs both of his money and his right[8]."

July 7, 1524, Andrew Noell, of Dalby, gent. obtained from the prior and brethren of the Hoſpital of St. John of Jeruſalem a leaſe, for the term of his life, of the rectory of Rothley, at a rent of £12. ſterling[9].

The introduction of the family of Babington was owing to the above-mentioned preferment of ſir John Babington to the commandery. Attending a chapter of the order at Clerkenwell in 1526, he was permitted to anticipate the revenues of his preceptory for three years; for which purpoſe, a leaſe for that term was granted to (his brother) Humphrey Babington, eſq. and John Vinald, merchant of Genoa, and to John Mahlfreyn, a brother of the houſe, on a rent of £57. 5*s.* 1½*d.* for the two firſt years, and of £200. for the third year, of the whole preceptory, with all its rights, except only the woods, underwoods, oblations, advowſons, wardſhips, marriages, eſcheats, reliefs, naives, penſions, heriots, and mortuaries[10].

The manor and advowſon again reverted to the crown at the diſſolution of religious houſes; when the eſtates of the Hoſpital of St. John of Jeruſalem here were valued at 87*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* a year, as a MS Valor; but in Dugdale[11], Rothley is jointly valued, with Dalby and Hether, at 231*l.* 7*s.* 10*d.* a year.

At the ſame period lands at Rothley of the yearly value of 22*s.* appertained to the monaſtery of Croxton; which were granted in 1539 to Thomas earl of Rutland by deed of exchange[12].

In 1544, king Henry VIII. for a valuable conſideration, granted to Edward Cartwright the manor of Rothley, with the priory, and all the demeſne lands and woods; and in the ſame year they were conveyed by Cartwright to the above-mentioned Humphrey Babington, eſq.; who was a lineal deſcendant from ſir John Babington, of Babington, in Northumberland, chief captain of the city of Morlaix in Bretagne in the time of king Edward III. by whom he was knighted in 1352. He was buried in the monaſtery of the White Fryars at Morlaix.

His ſon and name-ſake had five ſons; of whom ſir William the eldeſt was bred to the law, and became firſt a baron of the Exchequer, and afterward chief juſtice of the common pleas. He lived to the age of 99, in godly life and converſation; and was buried in the priory of Lenton, co. Notts, 1497[13]. This branch of the family ſoon terminated in females.

Thomas Babington, the ſecond ſon, ſold in his youth his patrimony at Brigford, co. Notts[14], and after ſerved in the battle of Agincourt with king Henry V. His ſword and bow that he bore that day are yet preſerved in the family. At the age of 63 he returned home, and became poſſeſſed of the capital manor of Dethick in Derbyſhire by marriage with Iſabel heireſs of Robert Dethick, eſq. a family of great conſequence being ſettled at that place.

Sir John Babington, his ſon and heir, married Iſabel daughter of Henry Bradbourne, of Weſt Haugh in Derbyſhire; and was ſlain in Boſworth field, Aug. 22, 1485.

Thomas Babington, of Dethick, his ſon and heir, married Editha daughter of Ralph Fitzherbert, of Norbury; and had licence, Auguſt 30, 1512, from king Henry VIII, by writ of privy ſeal, to found a chantry in the pariſh church of All Saints, at Aſton, in the dioceſe of Coventry and Lichfield. He had nine ſons and ſix daughters; and died March 13, 1518.

Anthony, the eldeſt ſon, by marriage with Elizabeth daughter and heir of John Ormond, added greatly to the aggrandizement of the family[15]; as his great grandfather had before done by his match with the heireſs of Dethick.

Sir John, the ſecond ſon, was the maſter of the commandery of Rothley.

Two others, Ralph the third, and Thomas the ſixth ſon, were provided for in the church.

Humphrey, the fifth ſon, died in 1544, poſſeſſed of the lordſhip of Rothley; and was buried in that church. His wife Eleanor was daughter and co-heir of John Beaumont, of Wedneſbury, co. Stafford, great-grandchild of Henry lord Beaumont; and William the ſeventh ſon married Joan the other ſiſter and coheir.

---

[1] See under Old Dalby, Plate XXXIX. fig. 245. 247; from Madox's Collections, in the Britiſh Muſeum; where, however, neither of the inſcriptions is accurately given by the engraver.

[2] This ſeal was in 1741 poſſeſſed by Samuel Gale, eſq. F. A. S.; in 1777 by E. Thomas, F. R. S.; and in 1802 I purchaſed it at the ſale of Samuel Tyſſen, eſq. F. S. A. together with an engraving of it by Vertue while in Mr. Gale's poſſeſſion.

[3] Eſch. 3 Edw. IV. N° 13. Leic.

[4] See vol. II. p. 348.

[5] Willis's Mitred Abbeys, vol. I. p. 132.

[6] Fuller's Church Hiſtory, Book VI. p. 359.

[7] See vol. III. p. 246.

[8] Peck, MSS. 4937. p. 103. b.

[9] See vol. III. p. 247.

[10] Ibid.

[11] Mon. Angl. vol. II. p. 412.

[12] Grants in the Augmentation office.

[13] He gave to the third brother Norman, the manor, lands, and tenements in Brigford, co. Notts; which Norman and his wife lie buried at Brigford.

[14] A fine occurs in 1432, between Thomas Babington, eſq. and Iſabella his wife, querents, and Thomas Chaworth, eſq. ſir William Babington, and William Algarthorp, deforcients, concerning the manors of Dethick and Lutchurch, with a meadow, two meſſuages, and three bovates of land, in Whittington, and the advowſon of the chapel of St. John the Baptiſt at Dethick. Fin. 10 Hen. VI.

[15] "A tolerable liſt of the eſtate as it ſtood 8 Eliz. may be ſeen in Thoroton, p. 9. But another Anthony engaging in a conſpiracy in that reign, againſt the queen, in favour of Mary queen of Scots, a great part of the eſtate was forfeited in 1587; and moreover Francis the next brother unthrifty ſold the remainder; which gave the finiſhing ſtroke to the opulency of this line." Dr. Pegge, MS.; confirmed by Harl. MSS. 5809. p. 80.

In 1564, there were 26 families in Rothley; and in that year queen Elizabeth granted to Bryan Cave and Edward Williams the chief rents, tithes, advowſon of the vicarage, and certain lands. The parties in whoſe favour theſe grants were made conveyed the rights they enjoyed under them in 1561 to ſir Ambroſe Cave, a privy counſellor to queen Elizabeth; who in 1567 conveyed to Thomas Babington, eſq. of Rothley (who died on the 27th of October that year) and to his ſon Humphrey Babington, of Coſſington.

Certain lands in Rothley were leaſed, in 1588, by queen Elizabeth, to Chriſtopher Middleton for 21 years[1].

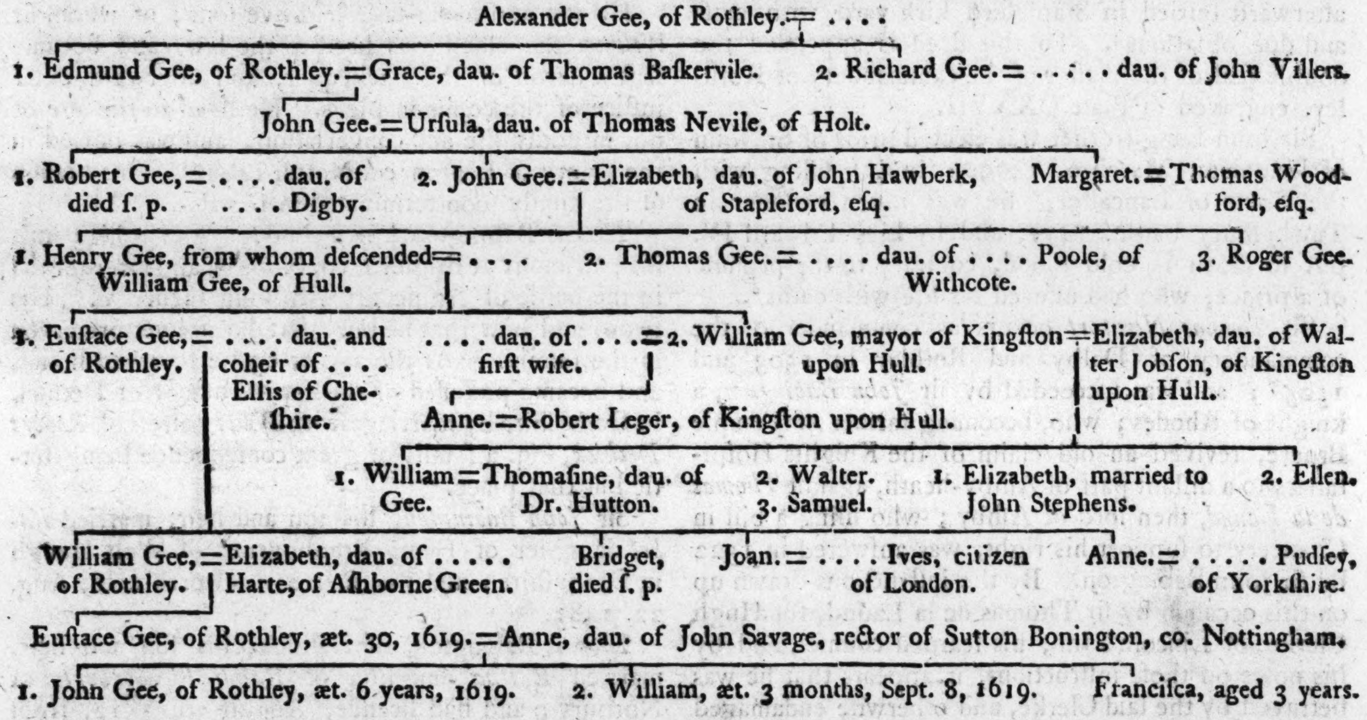
Humphrey Babington, eſq. died June 17, 1611, ſeiſed of the manor, rectory, and advowſon of Rothley, held in capite by knight's ſervice. His arms were, Quarterly, Argent, ten torteauxes; 4. 3. 2. and 1. a label of five points Azure, Babington; 2. Azure, a croſs flory Or, Braham; 3. Argent, a feſs Vaire, Or and Azure, between three water-bougets Sable, Dethick; 4. Or, a chevron Gules, and a canton Ermine, Stafford; 5. Azure, ſemé of fleur de lis, a lion rampant Or, Beaumont; 6. Gules, a lion rampant Vaire, Everingham; 7. Argent, a bend compony Gules and Sable, between two gemelles of the laſt, Lenthorpe; 8. Sable, two lions paſſant regardant in pale Argent, Britley. Creſt, On a wreath a demi-dragon between two wings Gules[2].

The following letter from the next owner of Rothley to his friend and neighbour ſir William Herrick, gives ſome idea of the generous manners of the time:

"Good ſir William; as I have bene behouldinge to you for many kindneſſes, ſo ame I bould now to intreate this one; which is, that you would be pleaſed to beſtow a pare or two of yonge hearnes of me. And if it ſhall happen that either my woodes or waters may pleaſure you, they ſhall be at your commaunde. And ſo concludinge with my love to yourſelfe and my good lady, reſtinge reddye to repaye your courteſy if any occaſion be offered wherin I have power, I end. From Rotheley Temple, June 19, 1615. Your aſſured loving friend, THO. BABINGTON[3]."

In 1619, the family of Gee poſſeſſed ſome property at Rothley; and their pedigree is thus entered in the Viſitation of that year.

Arms: Gules, a ſword in bend Argent, hilted and pomeled Or; in chief a creſcent Argent for difference. Creſt, a gauntlet Argent, garniſhed at the wriſt Or, holding a ſword Argent, hilted and pomeled Or; Plate CXXX. fig. 10.[4]



Alexander Gee, of Rothley.=....

1. Edmund Gee, of Rothley.=Grace, dau. of Thomas Baſkervile.
2. Richard Gee.=.... dau. of John Villers.

John Gee.=Urſula, dau. of Thomas Nevile, of Holt.

1. Robert Gee, died ſ. p.=.... dau. of .... Digby.
2. John Gee.=Elizabeth, dau. of John Hawberk, of Stapleford, eſq.
Margaret.=Thomas Woodford, eſq.

1. Henry Gee, from whom deſcended William Gee, of Hull.=....
2. Thomas Gee.=.... dau. of .... Poole, of Withcote.
3. Roger Gee.

1. Euſtace Gee, of Rothley.=.... dau. and coheir of .... Ellis of Cheſhire.
.... dau. of .... first wife.=2. William Gee, mayor of Kingſton upon Hull.=Elizabeth, dau. of Walter Jobſon, of Kingſton upon Hull.

Anne.=Robert Leger, of Kingſton upon Hull.

1. William Gee.=Thomaſine, dau. of Dr. Hutton.
2. Walter.
3. Samuel.
1. Elizabeth, married to John Stephens.
2. Ellen.

William Gee, of Rothley.=Elizabeth, dau. of ..... Harte, of Aſhborne Green.
Bridget, died ſ. p.
Joan.=.... Ives, citizen of London.
Anne.=..... Pudſey, of Yorkſhire.

Euſtace Gee, of Rothley, æt. 30, 1619.=Anne, dau. of John Savage, rector of Sutton Bonington, co. Nottingham.

1. John Gee, of Rothley, æt. 6 years, 1619.
2. William, æt. 3 months, Sept. 8, 1619.
Franciſca, aged 3 years.

The freeholders at Rothley in 1630 were, Roger Walker, Robert Paget, and John Parker.

"At this town," ſays Mr. Burton about 1630, "not long ſince dwelt John Parker [5], a famous farriour, much ſpoken of for his excellent ſkill and knowledge: a ſcience worthy to be reſpected, if one conſiders the worthineſs of the beaſt; being, as ſome writers hold, the moſt generous, docible, and intelligible of any, and that is moſt employed in the neceſſary affairs of man; or the neceſſity of the knowledge, for the manifold and continual miſchances which daily happen, through the diſorder, miſdemeanor, and miſuſage of theſe poor creatures, which are more abuſed in this land than in any other country under the ſun; which is juſtly taxed in that quadripartite Italian proverb, in part truly ſpoken of this realm:

Englhitierra è	England is,
Prigione de gli huomini.	1. A priſon for men.
Paradiſo de gli donne.	2. A paradiſe for women.
Purgatorio de gli ſervienti.	3. A purgatory for ſervants.
Infierno de gli cavalli.	4. An hell for horſes.

1. Becauſe they be compaſſed with the ſea, and cannot go forth of the land without licenſe.

2. For their free liberty, free paſſage, and freedom of will.

3. For that ſervants here do perform ſuch baſe offices and drudgeries, which are there impoſed upon ſlaves.

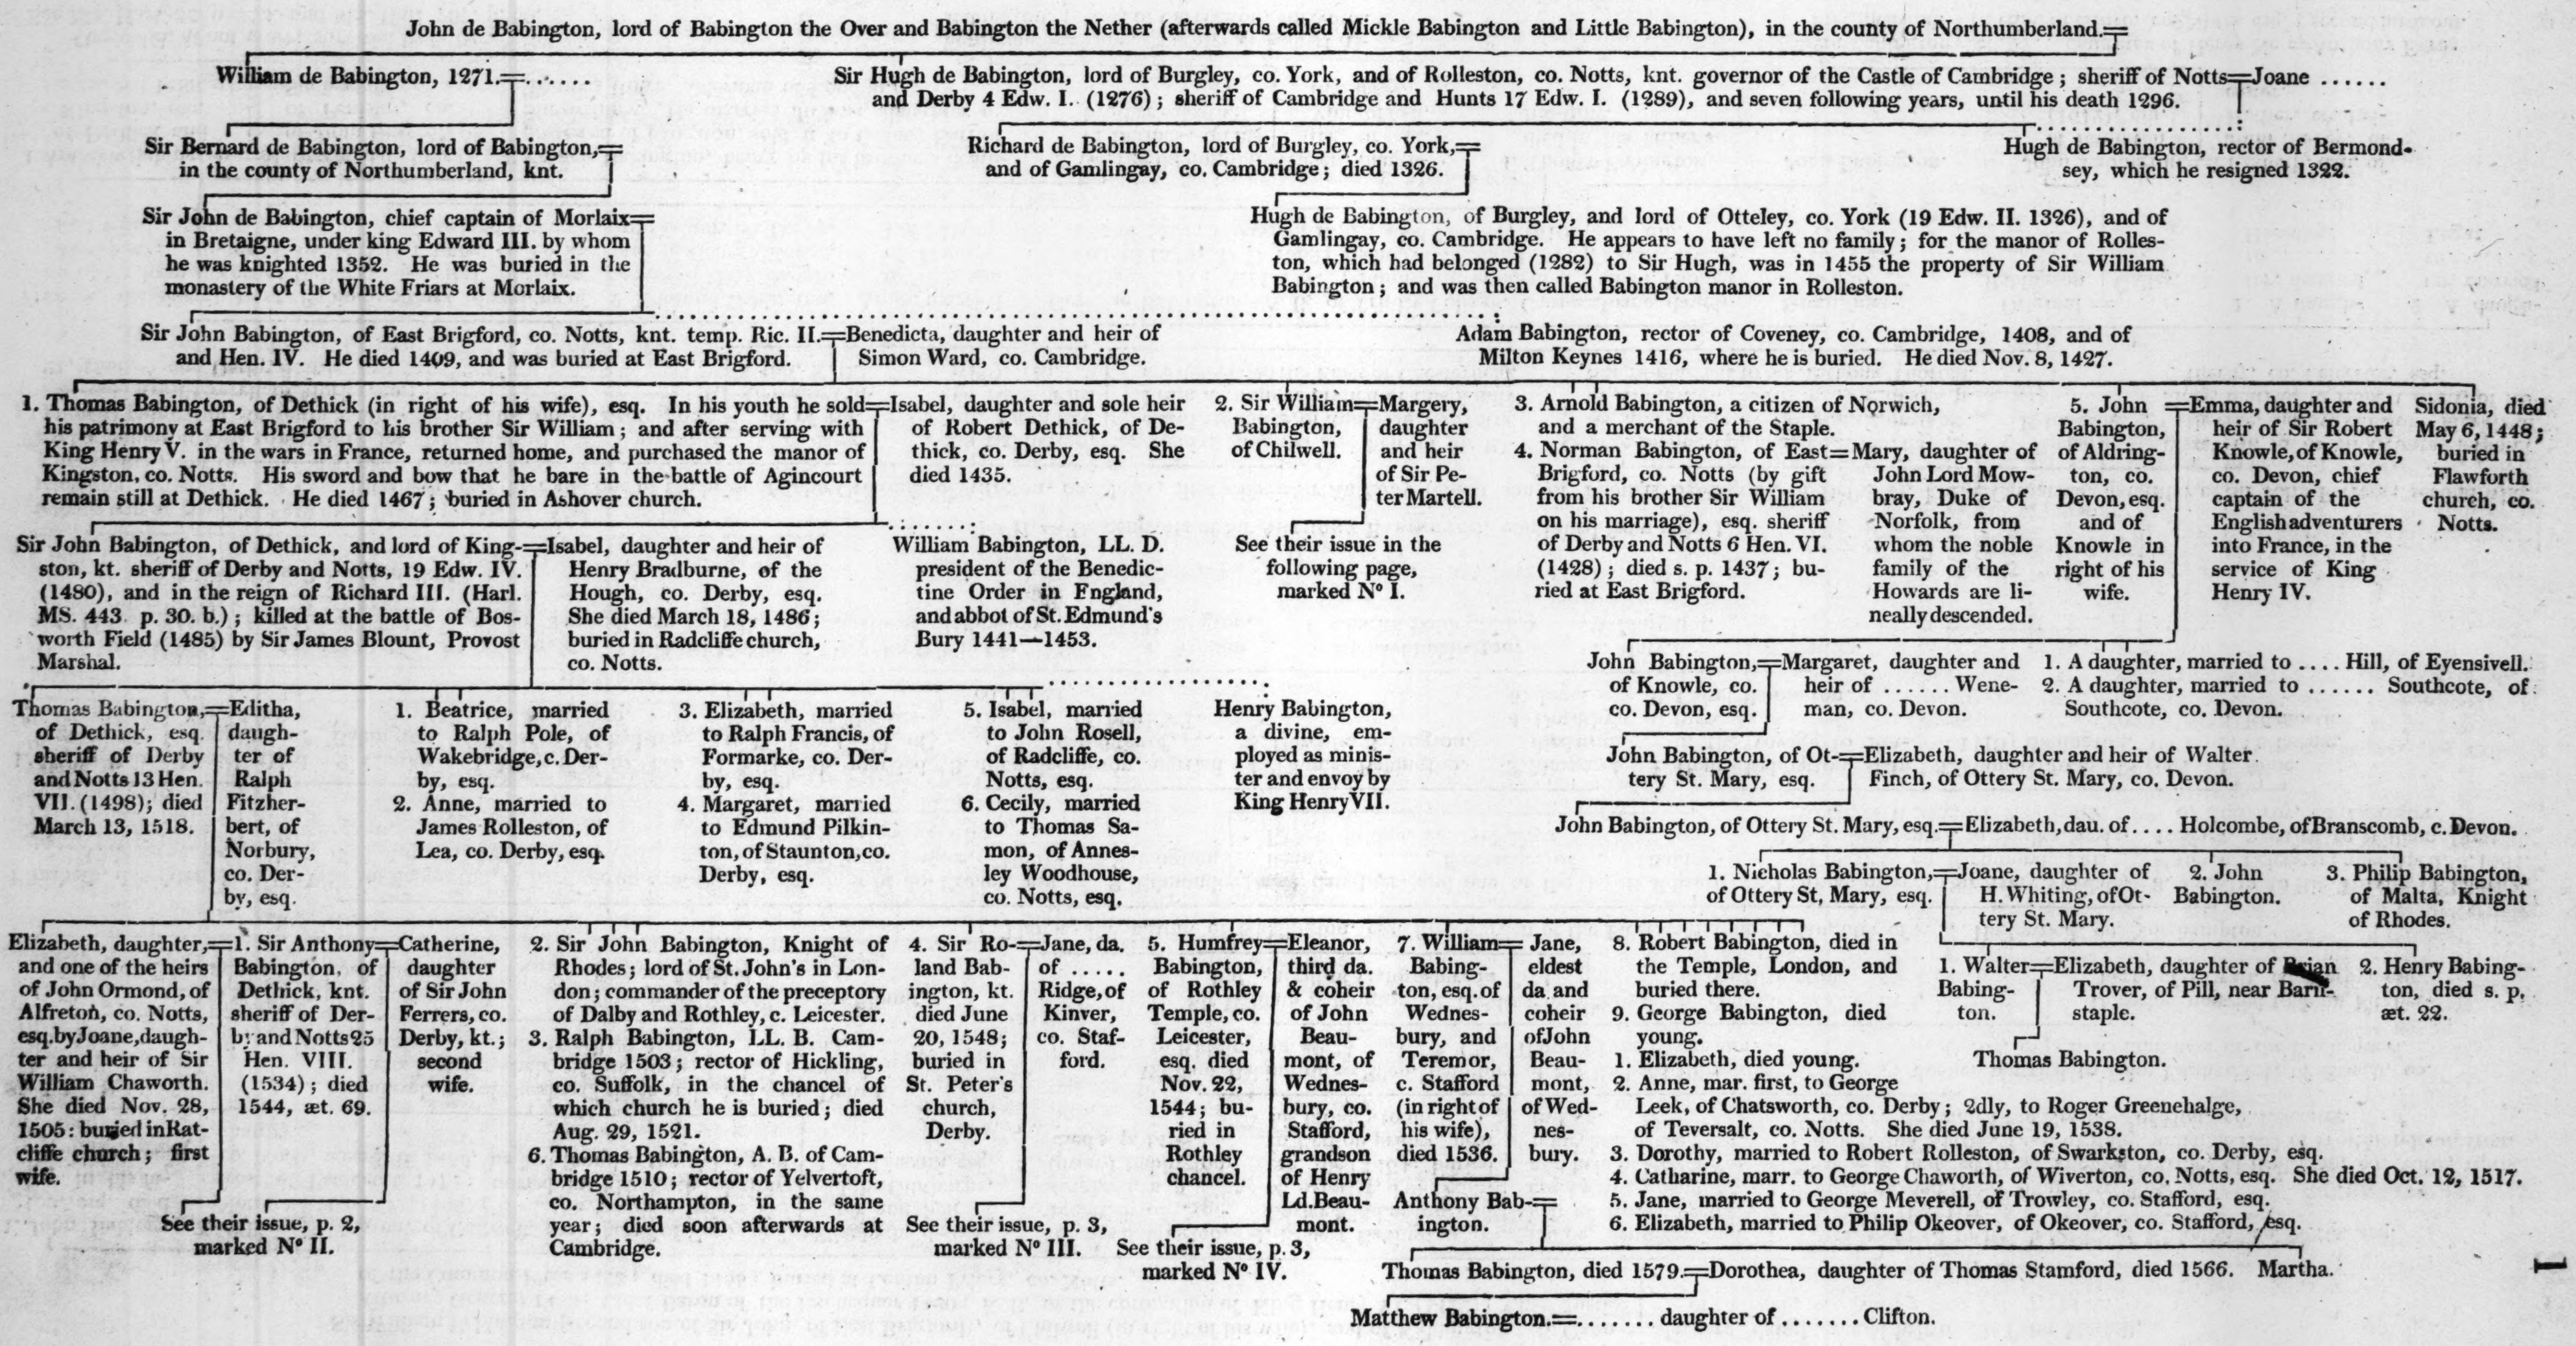
4. For the violent and intolerable abuſe of them in unreaſonable riding, as long ſpeedy journies, traines, wild-gooſe (or rather mad-mens) chaſes, and other moſt extream labours.

The Italians (as I have read and heard) do moſt love and favour a good horſe, and cannot endure injury to be done them, no, not to their ordinary hired hackneys; for, if one do either wrong them in the journey, or alter that pace which he firſt contracted for, he ſhall be impriſoned at the next town, there to remain till he have made ſatisfaction to the owner. This inſight, love and affection, is not only in the vulgar and baſer ſort, but in the nobleſt and chiefeſt perſonages among them, as appeareth by their many works written on this ſubject; as Paſquale Caracciolo, a Neapolitan gentleman, in his book of The Glory of a Horſe; Carolo Ruini, a noble ſenator of Bononia, Of the Diſeaſes in an Horſe, and the Cures of them, a work there in great eſteem; of Philippo Scaccho da Tagliacozze, a Roman gentleman, Of all the Griefs in an Horſe, with the Remedies; Caſare Fiaſchi, Of ſhoeing, bridling, teaching of Tricks and Geſtures, and many others[6]. Of our own countrymen in this kind have written, Martin, Maſchall, Clifford, and lately maſter Gervaſe Markham, deſcended out of the houſe of Cotham, in the county of Nottingham[7]; who, in his Maſter-piece, hath exactly ſet down all things belonging to ſmith, farrier, or horſe-leach; printed 1615[8]."

---

[1] Leaſes in the Augmentation office.
[2] Harl. MSS. Nº 1180; and ſee Plate CXXX.
[3] See the autograph in Plate CXXX.
[4] Theſe arms were granted by William Camden, Rouge-dragon; and Nicholas Charles, Lancaſter.
[5] Francis Parker, his ſon, whom Mr. Burton ſtyles "a cunning farriour," lived in 1641 at Deſford in this county.
[6] La Gloria del Cavall, dell' Paſquale Carracciolo; Anatomia del Cavallo; Carolo Ruini; Opera di Meſcalzia di M. Philippo Schaccho.
[7] Thoroton, p. 176.
[8] Burton, MS.—Gervaſe Markham was the author of a tragedy called "Herod and Autipater;" and publiſhed ſeveral volumes on agriculture and horſemanſhip.

PEDIGREE of BABINGTON, from a Roll drawn by the College of Arms in 1627 (with Additions from Public Records, Heraldic Visitations, and Private Documents); continued to the present time from Parish Registers, and other authentic sources; by M. D. B.



John de Babington, lord of Babington the Over and Babington the Nether (afterwards called Mickle Babington and Little Babington), in the county of Northumberland.=

William de Babington, 1271.= . . . . .

Sir Hugh de Babington, lord of Burgley, co. York, and of Rolleston, co. Notts, knt. governor of the Castle of Cambridge; sheriff of Notts and Derby 4 Edw. I. (1276); sheriff of Cambridge and Hunts 17 Edw. I. (1289), and seven following years, until his death 1296.=Joane . . . . .

Sir Bernard de Babington, lord of Babington, in the county of Northumberland, knt.=

Richard de Babington, lord of Burgley, co. York, and of Gamlingay, co. Cambridge; died 1326.=

Hugh de Babington, rector of Bermondsey, which he resigned 1322.

Sir John de Babington, chief captain of Morlaix in Bretaigne, under king Edward III. by whom he was knighted 1352. He was buried in the monastery of the White Friars at Morlaix.=

Hugh de Babington, of Burgley, and lord of Otteley, co. York (19 Edw. II. 1326), and of Gamlingay, co. Cambridge. He appears to have left no family; for the manor of Rolleston, which had belonged (1282) to Sir Hugh, was in 1455 the property of Sir William Babington; and was then called Babington manor in Rolleston.

Sir John Babington, of East Brigford, co. Notts, knt. temp. Ric. II. and Hen. IV. He died 1409, and was buried at East Brigford.=Benedicta, daughter and heir of Simon Ward, co. Cambridge.

Adam Babington, rector of Coveney, co. Cambridge, 1408, and of Milton Keynes 1416, where he is buried. He died Nov. 8, 1427.

1. Thomas Babington, of Dethick (in right of his wife), esq. In his youth he sold his patrimony at East Brigford to his brother Sir William; and after serving with King Henry V. in the wars in France, returned home, and purchased the manor of Kingston, co. Notts. His sword and bow that he bare in the battle of Agincourt remain still at Dethick. He died 1467; buried in Ashover church.=Isabel, daughter and sole heir of Robert Dethick, of Dethick, co. Derby, esq. She died 1435.

2. Sir William Babington, of Chilwell.=Margery, daughter and heir of Sir Peter Martell.

See their issue in the following page, marked Nº I.

3. Arnold Babington, a citizen of Norwich, and a merchant of the Staple.

4. Norman Babington, of East Brigford, co. Notts (by gift from his brother Sir William on his marriage), esq. sheriff of Derby and Notts 6 Hen. VI. (1428); died s. p. 1437; buried at East Brigford.=Mary, daughter of John Lord Mowbray, Duke of Norfolk, from whom the noble family of the Howards are lineally descended.

5. John Babington, of Aldrington, co. Devon, esq. and of Knowle in right of his wife.=Emma, daughter and heir of Sir Robert Knowle, of Knowle, co. Devon, chief captain of the English adventurers into France, in the service of King Henry IV.

Sidonia, died May 6, 1448; buried in Flawforth church, co. Notts.

Sir John Babington, of Dethick, and lord of Kingston, kt. sheriff of Derby and Notts, 19 Edw. IV. (1480), and in the reign of Richard III. (Harl. MS. 443 p. 30. b.); killed at the battle of Bosworth Field (1485) by Sir James Blount, Provost Marshal.=Isabel, daughter and heir of Henry Bradburne, of the Hough, co. Derby, esq. She died March 18, 1486; buried in Radcliffe church, co. Notts.

William Babington, LL. D. president of the Benedictine Order in England, and abbot of St. Edmund's Bury 1441—1453.

John Babington, of Knowle, co. co. Devon, esq.=Margaret, daughter and heir of . . . . . Weneman, co. Devon.

1. A daughter, married to . . . . Hill, of Eyensivell.
2. A daughter, married to . . . . . Southcote, of Southcote, co. Devon.

John Babington, of Ottery St. Mary, esq.=Elizabeth, daughter and heir of Walter Finch, of Ottery St. Mary, co. Devon.

Thomas Babington, of Dethick, esq. sheriff of Derby and Notts 13 Hen. VII. (1498); died March 13, 1518.=Editha, daughter of Ralph Fitzherbert, of Norbury, co. Derby, esq.

1. Beatrice, married to Ralph Pole, of Wakebridge, c. Derby, esq.
2. Anne, married to James Rolleston, of Lea, co. Derby, esq.
3. Elizabeth, married to Ralph Francis, of Formarke, co. Derby, esq.
4. Margaret, married to Edmund Pilkinton, of Staunton, co. Derby, esq.
5. Isabel, married to John Rosell, of Radcliffe, co. Notts, esq.
6. Cecily, married to Thomas Samon, of Annesley Woodhouse, co. Notts, esq.

Henry Babington, a divine, employed as minister and envoy by King Henry VII.

John Babington, of Ottery St. Mary, esq.=Elizabeth, dau. of . . . . Holcombe, of Branscomb, c. Devon.

1. Nicholas Babington, of Ottery St, Mary, esq.=Joane, daughter of H. Whiting, of Ottery St. Mary.

2. John Babington.

3. Philip Babington, of Malta, Knight of Rhodes.

Elizabeth, daughter, and one of the heirs of John Ormond, of Alfreton, co. Notts, esq. by Joane, daughter and heir of Sir William Chaworth. She died Nov. 28, 1505: buried in Ratcliffe church; first wife.=1. Sir Anthony Babington, of Dethick, knt. sheriff of Derby and Notts 25 Hen. VIII. (1534); died 1544, æt. 69.=Catherine, daughter of Sir John Ferrers, co. Derby, kt.; second wife.

See their issue, p. 2, marked Nº II.

2. Sir John Babington, Knight of Rhodes; lord of St. John's in London; commander of the preceptory of Dalby and Rothley, c. Leicester.

3. Ralph Babington, LL. B. Cambridge 1503; rector of Hickling, co. Suffolk, in the chancel of which church he is buried; died Aug. 29, 1521.

6. Thomas Babington, A. B. of Cambridge 1510; rector of Yelvertoft, co. Northampton, in the same year; died soon afterwards at Cambridge.

4. Sir Roland Babington, kt. died June 20, 1548; buried in St. Peter's church, Derby.=Jane, da. of . . . . Ridge, of Kinver, co. Stafford.

See their issue, p. 3, marked Nº III.

5. Humfrey Babington, of Rothley Temple, co. Leicester, esq. died Nov. 22, 1544; buried in Rothley chancel.=Eleanor, third da. & coheir of John Beaumont, of Wednesbury, co. Stafford, grandson of Henry Ld. Beaumont.

See their issue, p. 3, marked Nº IV.

7. William Babington, esq. of Wednesbury, and Teremor, c. Stafford (in right of his wife), died 1536.=Jane, eldest da and coheir of John Beaumont, of Wednesbury.

8. Robert Babington, died in the Temple, London, and buried there.
9. George Babington, died young.
1. Elizabeth, died young.
2. Anne, mar. first, to George Leek, of Chatsworth, co. Derby; 2dly, to Roger Greenehalge, of Teversalt, co. Notts. She died June 19, 1538.
3. Dorothy, married to Robert Rolleston, of Swarkston, co. Derby, esq.
4. Catharine, marr. to George Chaworth, of Wiverton, co. Notts, esq. She died Oct. 12, 1517.
5. Jane, married to George Meverell, of Trowley, co. Stafford, esq.
6. Elizabeth, married to Philip Okeover, of Okeover, co. Stafford, esq.

1. Walter Babington.=Elizabeth, daughter of Brian Trover, of Pill, near Barnstaple.

2. Henry Babington, died s. p. æt. 22.

Thomas Babington.

Anthony Babington.=

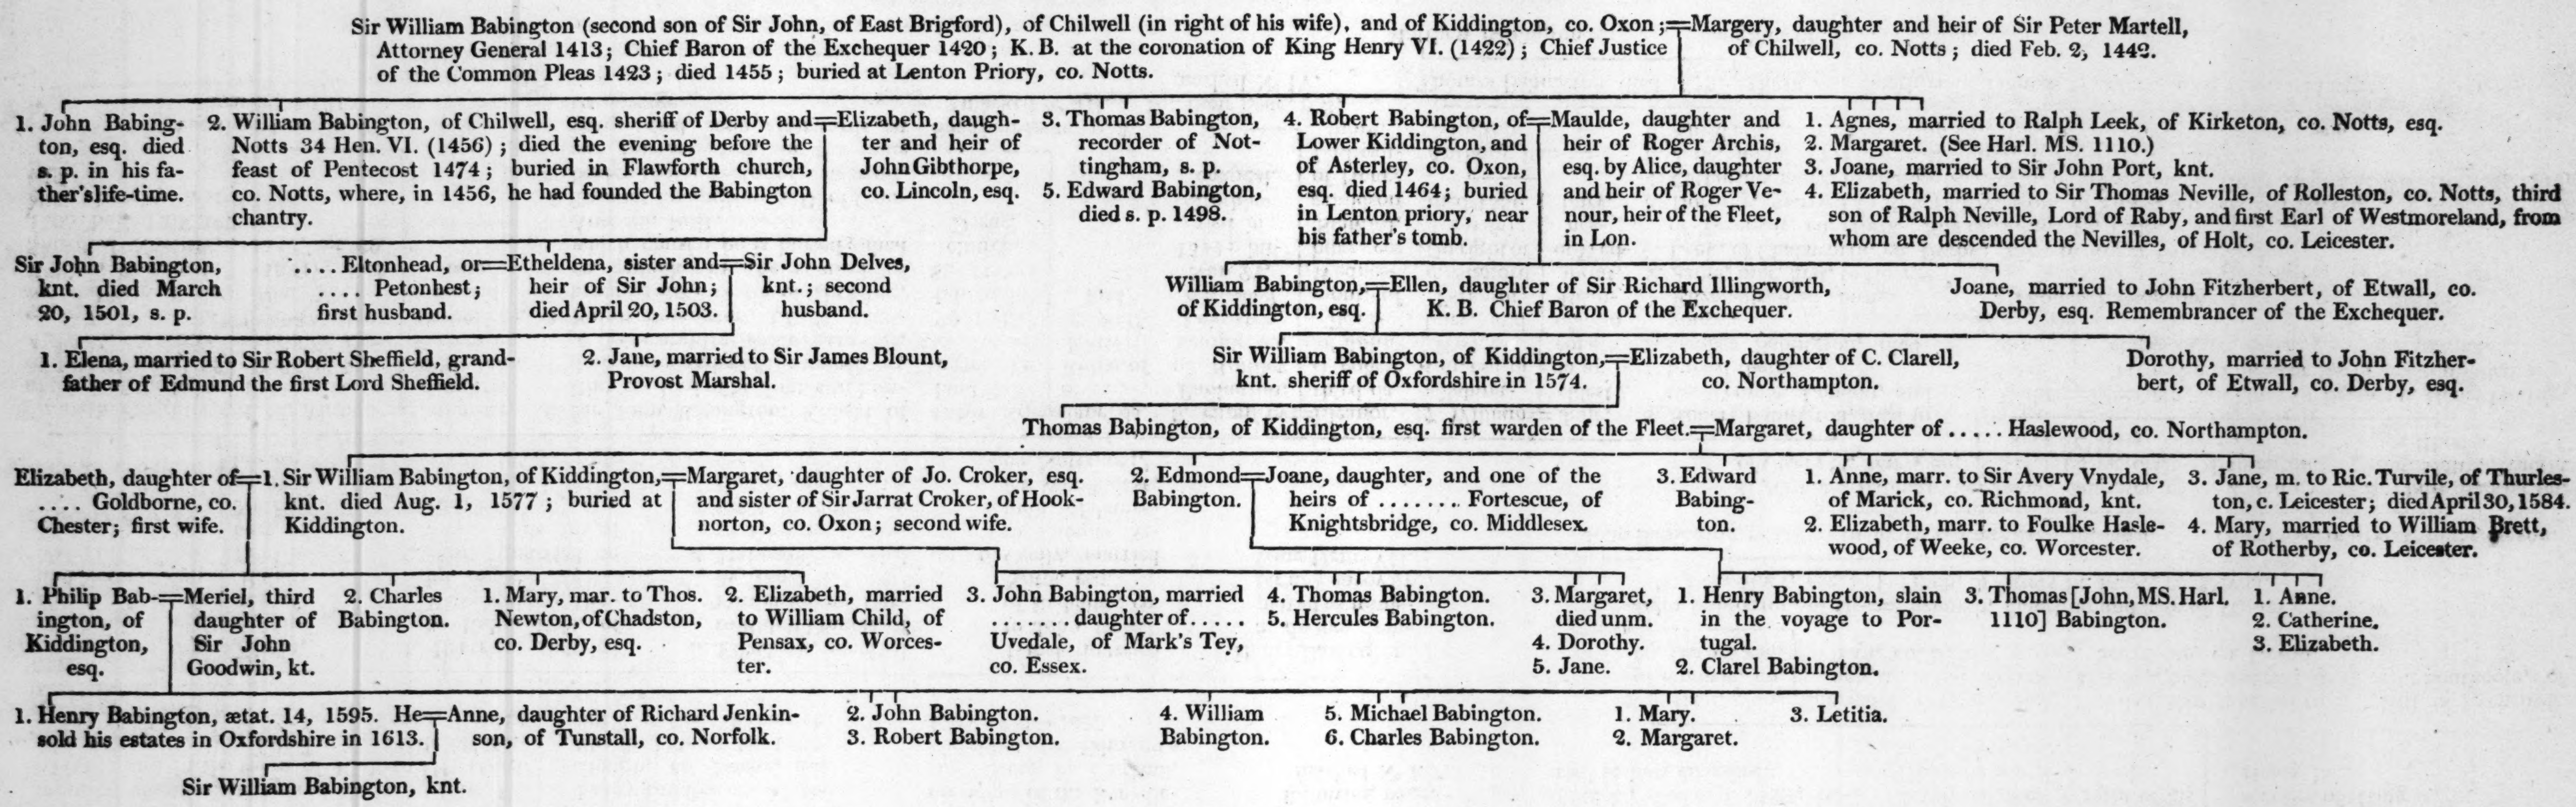
Thomas Babington, died 1579.=Dorothea, daughter of Thomas Stamford, died 1566.

Martha.

Matthew Babington.= . . . . . . daughter of . . . . . . Clifton.

Morey

Nº I. — Descendants of Sir WILLIAM BABINGTON, continued from page 1.



Sir William Babington (second son of Sir John, of East Brigford), of Chilwell (in right of his wife), and of Kiddington, co. Oxon; Attorney General 1413; Chief Baron of the Exchequer 1420; K. B. at the coronation of King Henry VI. (1422); Chief Justice of the Common Pleas 1423; died 1455; buried at Lenton Priory, co. Notts. = Margery, daughter and heir of Sir Peter Martell, of Chilwell, co. Notts; died Feb. 2, 1442.

1. John Babington, esq. died s. p. in his father's life-time.

2. William Babington, of Chilwell, esq. sheriff of Derby and Notts 34 Hen. VI. (1456); died the evening before the feast of Pentecost 1474; buried in Flawforth church, co. Notts, where, in 1456, he had founded the Babington chantry. = Elizabeth, daughter and heir of John Gibthorpe, co. Lincoln, esq.

3. Thomas Babington, recorder of Nottingham, s. p.

5. Edward Babington, died s. p. 1498.

4. Robert Babington, of Lower Kiddington, and of Asterley, co. Oxon, esq. died 1464; buried in Lenton priory, near his father's tomb. = Maulde, daughter and heir of Roger Archis, esq. by Alice, daughter and heir of Roger Venour, heir of the Fleet, in Lon.

1. Agnes, married to Ralph Leek, of Kirketon, co. Notts, esq.
2. Margaret. (See Harl. MS. 1110.)
3. Joane, married to Sir John Port, knt.
4. Elizabeth, married to Sir Thomas Neville, of Rolleston, co. Notts, third son of Ralph Neville, Lord of Raby, and first Earl of Westmoreland, from whom are descended the Nevilles, of Holt, co. Leicester.

Sir John Babington, knt. died March 20, 1501, s. p.

. . . . Eltonhead, or . . . . Petonhest; first husband. = Etheldena, sister and heir of Sir John; died April 20, 1503. = Sir John Delves, knt.; second husband.

1. Elena, married to Sir Robert Sheffield, grandfather of Edmund the first Lord Sheffield.

2. Jane, married to Sir James Blount, Provost Marshal.

William Babington, of Kiddington, esq. = Ellen, daughter of Sir Richard Illingworth, K. B. Chief Baron of the Exchequer.

Joane, married to John Fitzherbert, of Etwall, co. Derby, esq. Remembrancer of the Exchequer.

Sir William Babington, of Kiddington, knt. sheriff of Oxfordshire in 1574. = Elizabeth, daughter of C. Clarell, co. Northampton.

Dorothy, married to John Fitzherbert, of Etwall, co. Derby, esq.

Thomas Babington, of Kiddington, esq. first warden of the Fleet. = Margaret, daughter of . . . . . Haslewood, co. Northampton.

Elizabeth, daughter of . . . . Goldborne, co. Chester; first wife. = 1. Sir William Babington, of Kiddington, knt. died Aug. 1, 1577; buried at Kiddington. = Margaret, daughter of Jo. Croker, esq. and sister of Sir Jarrat Croker, of Hooknorton, co. Oxon; second wife.

2. Edmond Babington. = Joane, daughter, and one of the heirs of . . . . Fortescue, of Knightsbridge, co. Middlesex.

3. Edward Babington.

1. Anne, marr. to Sir Avery Vnydale, of Marick, co. Richmond, knt.
2. Elizabeth, marr. to Foulke Haslewood, of Weeke, co. Worcester.
3. Jane, m. to Ric. Turvile, of Thurleston, c. Leicester; died April 30, 1584.
4. Mary, married to William Brett, of Rotherby, co. Leicester.

1. Philip Babington, of Kiddington, esq. = Meriel, third daughter of Sir John Goodwin, kt.

2. Charles Babington.

1. Mary, mar. to Thos. Newton, of Chadston, co. Derby, esq.

2. Elizabeth, married to William Child, of Pensax, co. Worcester.

3. John Babington, married . . . . daughter of . . . . . Uvedale, of Mark's Tey, co. Essex.

4. Thomas Babington.
5. Hercules Babington.

3. Margaret, died unm.
4. Dorothy.
5. Jane.

1. Henry Babington, slain in the voyage to Portugal.
2. Clarel Babington.

3. Thomas [John, MS. Harl. 1110] Babington.

1. Anne.
2. Catherine.
3. Elizabeth.

1. Henry Babington, ætat. 14, 1595. He sold his estates in Oxfordshire in 1613. = Anne, daughter of Richard Jenkinson, of Tunstall, co. Norfolk.

2. John Babington.
3. Robert Babington.

4. William Babington.

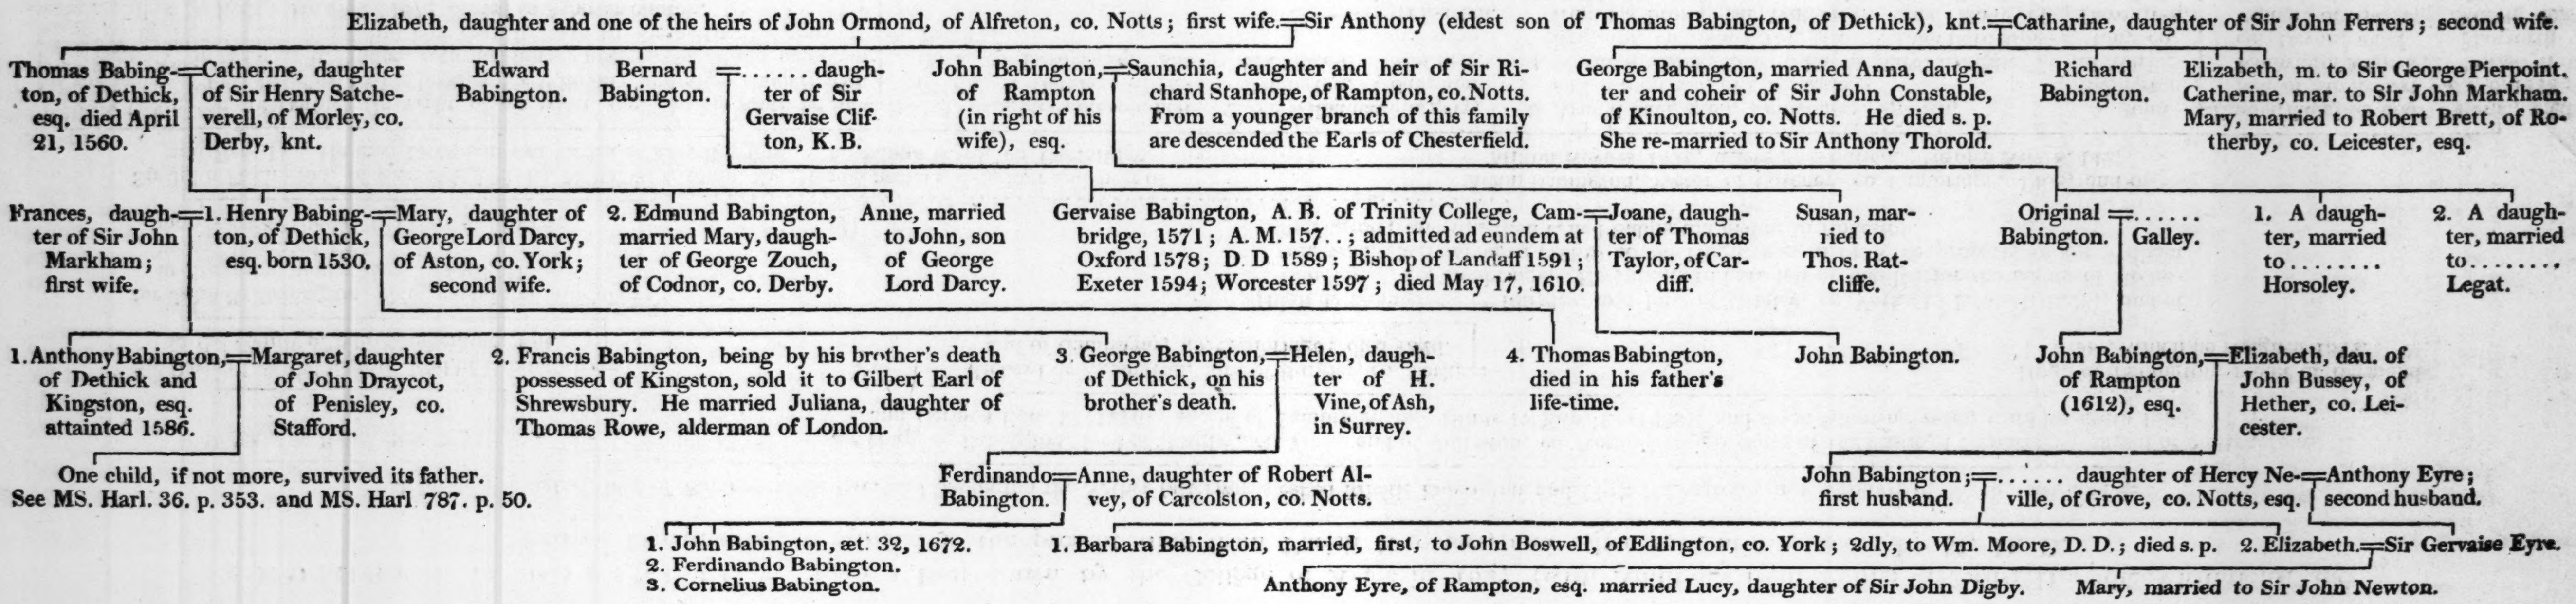
5. Michael Babington.
6. Charles Babington.

1. Mary.
2. Margaret.

3. Letitia.

Sir William Babington, knt.

Nº II. — Descendants of Sir ANTHONY BABINGTON, continued from page 1.



Elizabeth, daughter and one of the heirs of John Ormond, of Alfreton, co. Notts; first wife. = Sir Anthony (eldest son of Thomas Babington, of Dethick), knt. = Catharine, daughter of Sir John Ferrers; second wife.

Thomas Babington, of Dethick, esq. died April 21, 1560. = Catherine, daughter of Sir Henry Satcheverell, of Morley, co. Derby, knt.

Edward Babington.

Bernard Babington. = ... daughter of Sir Gervaise Clifton, K. B.

John Babington, of Rampton (in right of his wife), esq. = Saunchia, daughter and heir of Sir Richard Stanhope, of Rampton, co. Notts. From a younger branch of this family are descended the Earls of Chesterfield.

George Babington, married Anna, daughter and coheir of Sir John Constable, of Kinoulton, co. Notts. He died s. p. She re-married to Sir Anthony Thorold.

Richard Babington.

Elizabeth, m. to Sir George Pierpoint.
Catherine, mar. to Sir John Markham.
Mary, married to Robert Brett, of Rotherby, co. Leicester, esq.

Frances, daughter of Sir John Markham; first wife. = 1. Henry Babington, of Dethick, esq. born 1530. = Mary, daughter of George Lord Darcy, of Aston, co. York; second wife.

2. Edmund Babington, married Mary, daughter of George Zouch, of Codnor, co. Derby.

Anne, married to John, son of George Lord Darcy.

Gervaise Babington, A. B. of Trinity College, Cambridge, 1571; A. M. 157. .; admitted ad eundem at Oxford 1578; D. D 1589; Bishop of Landaff 1591; Exeter 1594; Worcester 1597; died May 17, 1610. = Joane, daughter of Thomas Taylor, of Cardiff.

Susan, married to Thos. Ratcliffe.

Original Babington. = ... Galley.

1. A daughter, married to . . . . Horsoley.

2. A daughter, married to . . . . Legat.

1. Anthony Babington, of Dethick and Kingston, esq. attainted 1586. = Margaret, daughter of John Draycot, of Penisley, co. Stafford.

2. Francis Babington, being by his brother's death possessed of Kingston, sold it to Gilbert Earl of Shrewsbury. He married Juliana, daughter of Thomas Rowe, alderman of London.

3. George Babington, of Dethick, on his brother's death. = Helen, daughter of H. Vine, of Ash, in Surrey.

4. Thomas Babington, died in his father's life-time.

John Babington.

John Babington, of Rampton (1612), esq. = Elizabeth, dau. of John Bussey, of Hether, co. Leicester.

One child, if not more, survived its father.
See MS. Harl. 36. p. 353. and MS. Harl 787. p. 50.

Ferdinando Babington. = Anne, daughter of Robert Alvey, of Carcolston, co. Notts.

John Babington; first husband. = ... daughter of Hercy Neville, of Grove, co. Notts, esq. = Anthony Eyre; second husband.

1. John Babington, æt. 32, 1672.
2. Ferdinando Babington.
3. Cornelius Babington.

1. Barbara Babington, married, first, to John Boswell, of Edlington, co. York; 2dly, to Wm. Moore, D. D.; died s. p.

2. Elizabeth. = Sir Gervaise Eyre.

Anthony Eyre, of Rampton, esq. married Lucy, daughter of Sir John Digby.

Mary, married to Sir John Newton.

N° III. — Descendants of Sir ROLAND BABINGTON, continued from page 1.

Sir Roland Babington (fourth son of Thomas Babington, of Dethick), of Derby, knt.=Jane, daughter of .... Ridg, of Kinver.

Henry Babington, died before his father.=Agnes, daughter, and one of the coheirs of Sir Richard Bozom, of Barrowby, co. Notts, and of Claxton, co. Leicester.

Augustine Babington.=..... daughter of George Zouch, of Codnor, c. Derby.

Michael Babington, of Derby, 1611.=....

Catherine, married to George Curzon, of Croxall, co. Derby.

Francis Babington, a twin child.

John Babington, sold Normanton, and other lands near Derby.=..... daughter of Francis Kellaway.

Mary Babington, died unmarried, at Oxford, May 22, 1632.

John Babington.

N° IV. — Descendants of HUMFREY BABINGTON, continued from page 1.

Humfrey (fifth son of Thomas Babington, of Dethick), of Rothley Temple, esq.=Eleanor, third daughter and coheir of John Beaumont.

1. Thomas Babington, of Cossington, co. Leicester, and lord of the manor of Rothley, esq. died Oct. 27, 1567; buried in Rothley church. Will dated Sept. 25, 1567; proved at Canterbury ult. die Jan. 1567-8.=Eleanor, daughter of Richard Humfrey, of Barton, co. Northampton, buried at Rothley June 7, 1578; entered also in Cossington Register.

Robert Babington, buried at Rothley April 7, 1605.

Francis Babington, A. B. of Cambridge 1548; rector of Cathrope, co. Lincoln. Will dated Dec. 10; proved Dec. 23, 1596.

John Babington, of Newtown; living 1567.=

.... first wife.=Barnaby Babington, of Mountsorrel, co. Leicester; buried at Barrow-upon-Soar, in the same county, 1566.=Joane Sutton, married at Barrow-upon-Soar 1565; second wife.

Two other sons; one of whom was a priest. See Harl. MS. 5809. fol. 80.

1. Margaret, mar. to Edward Vincent, of Peckleton, co. Leic. esq.
2. Jane, marr. to George Langham, of Gopsall, co. Leicester, esq.
3. Mary, married, first, to John Lowth, of Rayworth, co. Notts, D. D. archdeacon of Nottingham, who died 1590; secondly, to Christopher Middleton.
4. } Harl. MS. 5809. fol. 80.
5. }

Thomas Babington, living 1576.

Eustace Babington, baptized at Rothley Feb. 2, 1563; buried at Barrow 1566.

1. Humfrey Babington, of Temple Rothley, esq. buried at Rothley June 17, 1610.=Margaret, daughter of Francis Cave, of Bagrave, co. Leicester, LL. D. buried at Rothley Sept. 20, 1629.

2. Matthew Babington, of Cossington, esq. married, first, at Rothley, Jan. 17, 1574, Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas Leigh, of Eggington, co. Derby, esq. from whose eldest grand-daughter and coheir descends Sir Henry Every, of Eggington, bart.; 2dly, Faith, only daughter and heir of Henry Stapleton, of Rempston, co. Notts, esq. (buried at Cossington June 1, 1589); thirdly, Priscilla, daughter of Richard Creswell, of Barneshurst, co. Stafford; fourthly (Dec. 20, 1610), Margaret, daughter of Erasmus Borough, of Borough, co. Leicester. He died 1615, s. p.; buried at Cossington, Feb. 13, 1615.

3. Edmond Babington, buried at Rothley Aug. 15, 1571.

5. ... Babington.

4. Zachary Babington, LL. D. baptized at Cossington July 9, 1549; prebendary of Pipa Parva in the church of Lichfield, and chancellor of that diocese in 1581; prebendary of Curdborough 1583; installed precentor of Lichfield July 10, 1589; rector of Cossington 1602; and of Sedbury, co. Derby; archdeacon of Nottingham; died 1613.=Thomasina, daughter of John Lowth, of Rayworth, c. Notts (archdeacon of Nottingham 1565); living in 1613.

1. Margaret, baptized at Cossington April 16, 1548; married (July 23, 1576) to St. John Borough, son of Erasmus Borough.
2. Jane, baptized Dec. 10, 1550; married to Stephen Everard, of Hether, and Shenston, co. Leicester.
3. Frances, bapt. and buried Sept. 8, 1552.
4. Mary.

1. Thomas Babington, of Rothley Temple, esq. and lord of the manor, and patron of the church of Cossington, on the death of his uncle Matthew; buried at Rothley Sept. 17, 1645.=Catherine, only daughter of Henry Kendall, of Smithesby, co. Derby, esq. buried at Rothley Feb. 21, 1657.

2. Francis Babington, baptized at Rothley Jan. 6, 1576; buried Jan. 23, same year.
3. Edward Babington, baptized at Rothley Nov. 10, 1577, a goldsmith in London.

4. Adrian Babington, bapt. at Rothley Dec. 21, 1578; rector of Cossington 1614; bu. there Aug. 10, 1625.=Margaret, dau. of Henry Cave, of Barrow-upon-Soar, co. Leicester, esq.

5. William Babington, bapt. at Rothley June 27, 1585; of the Inner Temple, London; buried at Rothley Sept. 22, 1657.

1. Anne, bapt. at Rothley Feb. 23, 1579; buried next day.
2. Dorothy, bapt. at Rothley May 24, 1582; buried Dec. 18, 1584.

William Babington, of Whittington, near Lichfield.=Helen, daughter of Sir Edward Littleton, of Pillaton, co. Stafford, knt.

See their issue, p. 4, marked N° V.

1. Rev. Thomas Babington, baptized at Cossington May 14, 1611; buried at Rothley April 29, 1693.

2. Humfrey Babington, LL. D. baptized at Cossington Nov. 5, 1615; S. T. P. Cambridge, by royal mandate 1669; vice master of Trinity College, Cambridge, in the chapel of which college he is buried; and where he built two sets of rooms for the family of Babington; died Jan. 4, 1691, æt. 75, founder of Barrow Hospital.

1. Catherine, baptized at Cossington March 25, 1613.
2. Philippa, baptized Oct. 28, 1618; married (1661) to Rev. John Sheppardson, of Over Broughton, co. Notts.
3. Anne, baptized at Cossington April 26, 1621.
4. Margaret, baptized April 13, 1624; buried July 29, 1632.

Zachary Babington, of Whittington and Curdborough, near Lichfield. A. M. of Christ Church, Oxford, 1669.=.... daughter of ... Floyer, of Hints, co. Stafford.

John Babington, of Whittington, Curdborough, and Packington, co. Warwick, which latter he purchased about 1690.=...... daughter of ..... Manwaring.

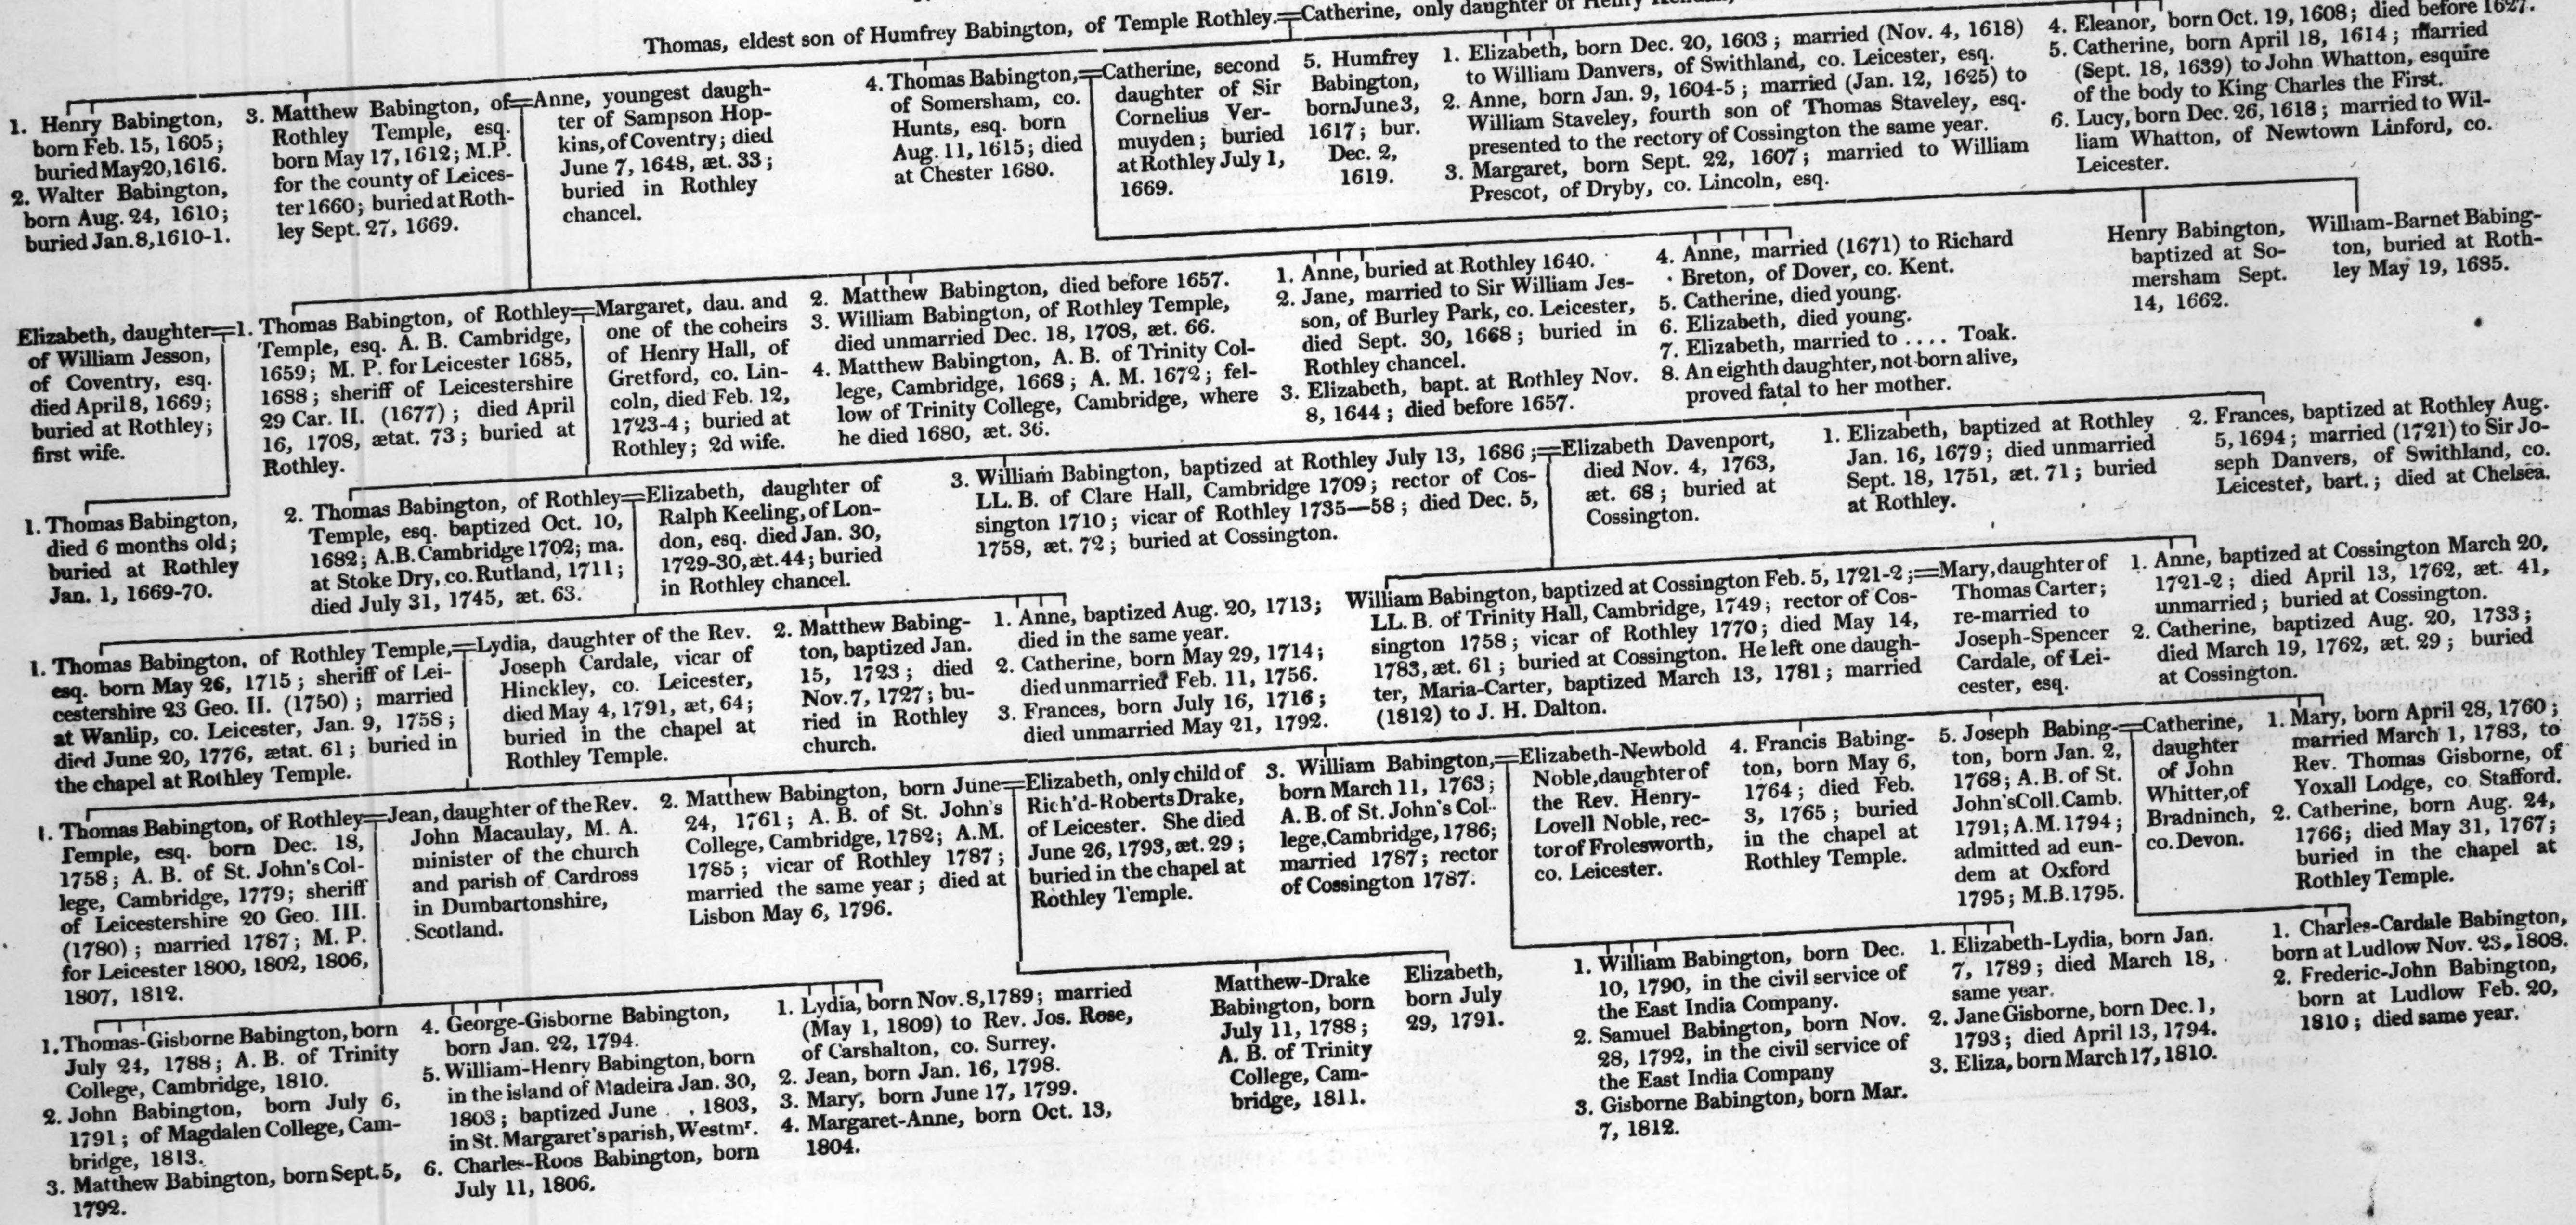
Zachary Babington, of Whittington, Curdborough, and Packington, died 1745.

1. A daughter, married to..... Hawks, of Newton, co. Stafford.

2. A daughter, married to .... Levitt, of Lichfield.

3. A daughter, married to Luke Robinson, of Lichfield.

Nº V. — Descendants of Thomas Babington, continued from page 3.



Thomas, eldest son of Humfrey Babington, of Temple Rothley.=Catherine, only daughter of Henry Kendall, of Smithesby, co. Derby.

1. Henry Babington, born Feb. 15, 1605; buried May 20, 1616.
2. Walter Babington, born Aug. 24, 1610; buried Jan. 8, 1610-1.

3. Matthew Babington, of Rothley Temple, esq. born May 17, 1612; M.P. for the county of Leicester 1660; buried at Rothley Sept. 27, 1669.=Anne, youngest daughter of Sampson Hopkins, of Coventry; died June 7, 1648, æt. 33; buried in Rothley chancel.

4. Thomas Babington, of Somersham, co. Hunts, esq. born Aug. 11, 1615; died at Chester 1680.=Catherine, second daughter of Sir Cornelius Vermuyden; buried at Rothley July 1, 1669.

5. Humfrey Babington, born June 3, 1617; bur. Dec. 2, 1619.

1. Elizabeth, born Dec. 20, 1603; married (Nov. 4, 1618) to William Danvers, of Swithland, co. Leicester, esq.
2. Anne, born Jan. 9, 1604-5; married (Jan. 12, 1625) to William Staveley, fourth son of Thomas Staveley, esq. presented to the rectory of Cossington the same year.
3. Margaret, born Sept. 22, 1607; married to William Prescot, of Dryby, co. Lincoln, esq.
4. Eleanor, born Oct. 19, 1608; died before 1627.
5. Catherine, born April 18, 1614; married (Sept. 18, 1639) to John Whatton, esquire of the body to King Charles the First.
6. Lucy, born Dec. 26, 1618; married to William Whatton, of Newtown Linford, co. Leicester.

Henry Babington, baptized at Somersham Sept. 14, 1662.

William-Barnet Babington, buried at Rothley May 19, 1685.

Elizabeth, daughter of William Jesson, of Coventry, esq. died April 8, 1669; buried at Rothley; first wife.=1. Thomas Babington, of Rothley Temple, esq. A. B. Cambridge, 1659; M. P. for Leicester 1685, 1688; sheriff of Leicestershire 29 Car. II. (1677); died April 16, 1708, ætat. 73; buried at Rothley.=Margaret, dau. and one of the coheirs of Henry Hall, of Gretford, co. Lincoln, died Feb. 12, 1723-4; buried at Rothley; 2d wife.

2. Matthew Babington, died before 1657.
3. William Babington, of Rothley Temple, died unmarried Dec. 18, 1708, æt. 66.
4. Matthew Babington, A. B. of Trinity College, Cambridge, 1668; A. M. 1672; fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge, where he died 1680, æt. 36.

1. Anne, buried at Rothley 1640.
2. Jane, married to Sir William Jesson, of Burley Park, co. Leicester, died Sept. 30, 1668; buried in Rothley chancel.
3. Elizabeth, bapt. at Rothley Nov. 8, 1644; died before 1657.
4. Anne, married (1671) to Richard Breton, of Dover, co. Kent.
5. Catherine, died young.
6. Elizabeth, died young.
7. Elizabeth, married to .... Toak.
8. An eighth daughter, not born alive, proved fatal to her mother.

1. Thomas Babington, died 6 months old; buried at Rothley Jan. 1, 1669-70.

2. Thomas Babington, of Rothley Temple, esq. baptized Oct. 10, 1682; A.B. Cambridge 1702; ma. at Stoke Dry, co. Rutland, 1711; died July 31, 1745, æt. 63.=Elizabeth, daughter of Ralph Keeling, of London, esq. died Jan. 30, 1729-30, æt. 44; buried in Rothley chancel.

3. William Babington, baptized at Rothley July 13, 1686; LL. B. of Clare Hall, Cambridge 1709; rector of Cossington 1710; vicar of Rothley 1735—58; died Dec. 5, 1758, æt. 72; buried at Cossington.=Elizabeth Davenport, died Nov. 4, 1763, æt. 68; buried at Cossington.

1. Elizabeth, baptized at Rothley Jan. 16, 1679; died unmarried Sept. 18, 1751, æt. 71; buried at Rothley.
2. Frances, baptized at Rothley Aug. 5, 1694; married (1721) to Sir Joseph Danvers, of Swithland, co. Leicester, bart.; died at Chelsea.

1. Thomas Babington, of Rothley Temple, esq. born May 26, 1715; sheriff of Leicestershire 23 Geo. II. (1750); married at Wanlip, co. Leicester, Jan. 9, 1758; died June 20, 1776, ætat. 61; buried in the chapel at Rothley Temple.=Lydia, daughter of the Rev. Joseph Cardale, vicar of Hinckley, co. Leicester, died May 4, 1791, æt, 64; buried in the chapel at Rothley Temple.

2. Matthew Babington, baptized Jan. 15, 1723; died Nov. 7, 1727; buried in Rothley church.

1. Anne, baptized Aug. 20, 1713; died in the same year.
2. Catherine, born May 29, 1714; died unmarried Feb. 11, 1756.
3. Frances, born July 16, 1716; died unmarried May 21, 1792.

William Babington, baptized at Cossington Feb. 5, 1721-2; LL. B. of Trinity Hall, Cambridge, 1749; rector of Cossington 1758; vicar of Rothley 1770; died May 14, 1783, æt. 61; buried at Cossington. He left one daughter, Maria-Carter, baptized March 13, 1781; married (1812) to J. H. Dalton.=Mary, daughter of Thomas Carter; re-married to Joseph-Spencer Cardale, of Leicester, esq.

1. Anne, baptized at Cossington March 20, 1721-2; died April 13, 1762, æt. 41, unmarried; buried at Cossington.
2. Catherine, baptized Aug. 20, 1733; died March 19, 1762, æt. 29; buried at Cossington.

1. Thomas Babington, of Rothley Temple, esq. born Dec. 18, 1758; A. B. of St. John's College, Cambridge, 1779; sheriff of Leicestershire 20 Geo. III. (1780); married 1787; M. P. for Leicester 1800, 1802, 1806, 1807, 1812.=Jean, daughter of the Rev. John Macaulay, M. A. minister of the church and parish of Cardross in Dumbartonshire, Scotland.

2. Matthew Babington, born June 24, 1761; A. B. of St. John's College, Cambridge, 1782; A.M. 1785; vicar of Rothley 1787; married the same year; died at Lisbon May 6, 1796.=Elizabeth, only child of Rich'd-Roberts Drake, of Leicester. She died June 26, 1793, æt. 29; buried in the chapel at Rothley Temple.

3. William Babington, born March 11, 1763; A. B. of St. John's College, Cambridge, 1786; married 1787; rector of Cossington 1787.=Elizabeth-Newbold Noble, daughter of the Rev. Henry-Lovell Noble, rector of Frolesworth, co. Leicester.

4. Francis Babington, born May 6, 1764; died Feb. 3, 1765; buried in the chapel at Rothley Temple.

5. Joseph Babington, born Jan. 2, 1768; A. B. of St. John's Coll. Camb. 1791; A.M. 1794; admitted ad eundem at Oxford 1795; M.B. 1795.=Catherine, daughter of John Whitter, of Bradninch, co. Devon.

1. Mary, born April 28, 1760; married March 1, 1783, to Rev. Thomas Gisborne, of Yoxall Lodge, co. Stafford.
2. Catherine, born Aug. 24, 1766; died May 31, 1767; buried in the chapel at Rothley Temple.

1. Thomas-Gisborne Babington, born July 24, 1788; A. B. of Trinity College, Cambridge, 1810.
2. John Babington, born July 6, 1791; of Magdalen College, Cambridge, 1813.
3. Matthew Babington, born Sept. 5, 1792.
4. George-Gisborne Babington, born Jan. 22, 1794.
5. William-Henry Babington, born in the island of Madeira Jan. 30, 1803; baptized June , 1803, in St. Margaret's parish, Westmr.
6. Charles-Roos Babington, born July 11, 1806.

1. Lydia, born Nov. 8, 1789; married (May 1, 1809) to Rev. Jos. Rose, of Carshalton, co. Surrey.
2. Jean, born Jan. 16, 1798.
3. Mary, born June 17, 1799.
4. Margaret-Anne, born Oct. 13, 1804.

Matthew-Drake Babington, born July 11, 1788; A. B. of Trinity College, Cambridge, 1811.

Elizabeth, born July 29, 1791.

1. William Babington, born Dec. 10, 1790, in the civil service of the East India Company.
2. Samuel Babington, born Nov. 28, 1792, in the civil service of the East India Company
3. Gisborne Babington, born Mar. 7, 1812.

1. Elizabeth-Lydia, born Jan. 7, 1789; died March 18, same year.
2. Jane Gisborne, born Dec. 1, 1793; died April 13, 1794.
3. Eliza, born March 17, 1810.

1. Charles-Cardale Babington, born at Ludlow Nov. 23, 1808.
2. Frederic-John Babington, born at Ludlow Feb. 20, 1810; died same year.

Matthew Babington, eſq. about 1634 married Anne daughter of Samſon Hopkins, gent. alderman of Coventry; by whom he had four ſons and eight daughters before the eldeſt was 12 years and three quarters old. She died June 7, 1648.

In 1655, there was collected in Temple Rothley, for the relief of the poor Proteſtants in Piedmont, the ſum of £2. 3*s*. 6*d*.

In 1660, Matthew Babington, eſq. was elected knight of the ſhire; and by a ſettlement, dated Jan. 24, 1666-7, previous to the marriage of Thomas Babington, gent. (ſon and heir apparent) with Elizabeth Jeſſon, in conſideration of her fortune of £3000. a capital meſſuage and divers lands at Rothley were veſted in truſtees, as a proviſion for portions for daughters, by a term of 500 years, with power to make leaſes [1]. Matthew Babington died in 1669; and Thomas his ſon (who in 1685 repreſented the borough of Leiceſter in parliament) died April 16, 1708, at the age of 73.

Thomas Babington, eſq. his ſon and ſucceſſor, died July 31, 1745, aged 63; and his ſon Thomas, who was high-ſheriff in 1750, died in 1776.

His eldeſt ſon and ſucceſſor, Thomas Babington, eſq. the preſent worthy head of this very antient family [2] (who may boaſt of being allied to the firſt families in this county, ſince the Babingtons were tranſplanted here from Northumberland ſome centuries ago), was appointed high-ſheriff in June 1780, on the death of ſir Thomas Cave, bart. In 1800 he was elected one of the repreſentatives in parliament for the borough of Leiceſter; as he was a ſecond time in 1802. And it is but juſtice to ſay of him that he poſſeſſes all that integrity and goodneſs of heart for which his anceſtors were conſpicuous, with an underſtanding highly cultivated.

Mr. Babington is lord of the manor and ſoke of Rothley; which not only extends through the lordſhips of Rothley and Rothley Temple, and the chapelries of Caldwell, Gaddeſby, Grimſton, Keame, Mountſorell ſuperior, Wartnaby, and Wykeham, but to ſeveral other parts of the county, in which it is the moſt extenſive manor. It had antiently, and ſtill enjoys, a peculiar juriſdiction in matters eccleſiaſtical, exempt and free from all other eccleſiaſtical courts. It has the privilege alſo of marrying within itſelf, the commiſſary, who derives his authority from the lord of the manor, granting licence; and is exempt from the juriſdiction and viſitation of the biſhop of the dioceſe; who ſtill, however, grants inſtitution to the vicarage. In the record cited p. 952. mention is made of a penſion to the archdeacon, which by other inſtruments appears to be for an exemption from juriſdiction.

The Soke of Rothley enjoys moreover the privileges of court-leet, court-baron, &c. oyer, terminer, and gaol delivery, independent of the county.

The cuſtom of gavelkind alſo prevails throughout the Soke; a ſokeman's widow holds all her huſband's real property therein, ſo long as ſhe continues ſuch; and the lord receives an alienation fine for every firſt purchaſe made by a foreigner, i. e. a non-ſokeman.

Theſe ſeveral privileges are holden in virtue of a patent of the land heretofore of the Knights Templars, and afterwards of the Knights Hoſpitallers; who originally enjoyed it by ſpecial and expreſs words conveyed by the patent; which, with all its privileges, was conveyed to the anceſtor of the preſent owner.

The Soke comprehended in 1695, as appears by the Court Rolls of that year,

All Rothley, containing 96 houſes.
All Keyham hamlet, 39 houſes.
All Gaddeſby hamlet (except one or two houſes), containing 43 houſes.
All Grimſton hamlet, being 31 houſes.
In Saxulby, four houſes.
In South Croxton one ſtreet, containing 19 houſes.
All Wykeham hamlet, containing 23 houſes.
All Cawdwell hamlet, containing ſix houſes.
Part of Somerby, viz. 24 houſes.
All Barſby (except two or three houſes), containing 40 houſes.
In Mountſorell 16 houſes do ſuit and ſervice to Barkby court, and above 50 more are in the pariſh of Rothley, and therefore in the eccleſiaſtical juriſdiction; but do ſervice to Mountſorell court.
Wartnaby, containing 22 houſes.

The ſeal now officially uſed for the peculiar of Rothley is engraved in Plate CXXX. fig. 1.

Round it is inſcribed, "SIGIL. CONSERV. SPIRITUAL. ECCL'E JURISDIC' DE ROTHELEY; and on the front of it are the arms, creſt, and motto of Babington.

The family ſeat at Rothley Temple is remarkable for having been one of the few reſidences of the Knights Templars in this kingdom [3]; of which a front view, including the fine old chapel, with its handſome Eaſt window, is given in Plate CXXIX. from a drawing taken by Mr. Schnebbelie in 1791.

Within the houſe are ſeveral good portraits of the Babingtons; and in a large bow window the following intermarriages are beautifully recorded on ſtained glaſs; Plate CXXIX. fig. 1—8.

---

[1] From a copy of the original deed in Palmer's MS Caſes, in my poſſeſſion, p. 369.

[2] The Babingtons of various branches are divided into ſundry worthy houſes in ſeveral counties within this kingdom, having matched into many honourable families.—"Many perſons of note," the late Mr. T. Warton obſerves, "were of this family. In 1271, the cuſtody and revenues of the counties of Nottingham and Derby were committed to Hugh de Babington, as appears by Rot. Pip. Memorand. 55 Hen. III.; and again, the caſtle of Cambridge, with the counties of Cambridge and Huntingdon, to the ſame, Mich. Commun. 18 Edw. I. Rot. 1. n. At Gamlingay in Cambridgeſhire Hugo de Babington is noticed in an early record as holding half a knight's fee, which had been poſſeſſed by Richard de Babington temp. Hen. III.; and in that pariſh the Babingtons were, at an early period, worth £400. lands by the year.—Hugh de Babington reſigned the rectory of Bermondſey 1322.—Adam Babynton, rector of Coveney in the Iſle of Ely, to which he had been inſtituted 4 Aug. 1408, became rector of Milton Keynes in 1416; and lies buried about the middle of the chancel of the laſt-mentioned church, with a blueiſh marble over him, on which is ſtill a ſmall effigies of him in braſs in prieſt's veſtments, and under his feet the arms of Babington, and this inſcription:

> "Hic jacet Adam Babyngton, quondam rector iſtius eccl'ie, qui obiit octavo die menſis Novembr', anno D'ni mill'mo cccc° viceſimo ſeptimo; cujus a'i'e p'picietur Deus. Amen."

William Babington, LL. D. and preſident of the Benedictine order in England, occurs abbot of St. Edmondſbury in 1441, 1447, and 1453.—In the reign of king Henry VI. the family of Babington, a branch of the Babingtons of Chilwell in Nottinghamſhire, acquiring the lordſhips of Kiddington and Aſterley in Oxfordſhire, appear to have been eſtabliſhed in the capital ſeat at Kiddington. Robert Babington, eſq. who preſented to the church of Aſterley in 1454, 1460, and 1463, ſeems to have died at Lower Kiddington in 1464. He left the manors of Over Kiddington and Aſterley, and of Hoke, otherwiſe Noke, in that county, to his ſon and heir William Babington; who married Eleanor the daughter of ſir Richard Illingworth, chief baron of the Exchequer; and, in the year 1466, granted and conveyed the premiſes to his uncle Thomas Babington.—William Babington, of Chilwell, perfected a chantry begun by the family of Martell, conſiſting of three chaplains; two of which were appointed to officiate in the chapel of St. Andrew in the church of Flawforth in Nottinghamſhire, and one in the manor houſe of Chilwell. They were ordered to pray for the ſouls of Henry VI. of his queen Margaret, of the founder William Babington, and of the Martells, &c. It was called Babington's chantry, and was endowed with the yearly rent of 25*l*. About the ſame time the ſaid William founded at Rodynton in Nottinghamſhire a college of one warden and four chaplains, which was valued at the yearly rent of 30*l*. juſt before the diſſolution.—William Babington, eſq. preſented to the church of Kiddington in 1559; in 1573, being then a knight, was living at that place; and in that year ſold the manor of Broadway in Worceſterſhire, which he had acquired at the diſſolution of Perſhore abbey, to Sheldon and others. He was ſheriff of Oxfordſhire in 1574; and from that period till 1613, when the Babingtons ſold their eſtates in that county, many of the family appear to have been born, married, and buried, at Kiddington.—Of this family alſo was Henry Babington, an eccleſiaſtic, often employed as miniſter or envoy to foreign courts by king Henry VII.; and the learned Gervaiſe Babington, an aſſiſtant to Mary Sydney counteſs of Pembroke in her tranſlation of the Pſalms; ſucceſſively biſhop of Landaff, Exeter, and Worceſter; who died in 1610.—In the church of Merton college, Oxford, on a graveſtone near the entrance into the choir, is this inſcription: "Maria Babington, generoſa et piiſſima virgo, obiit 22 Maii, 1632." She was daughter of Michael Babington, of Derby. Thoroton's Nottinghamſhire, p. 66; Naſh's Worceſterſhire, vol. II. p. 235; and Warton's Kiddington, p. 36—41.

[3] The houſe at the Temple, or one room of it (perhaps the chapel) is reputed to be in the pariſh of Jeruſalem. So King's College, Cambridge, is in Lincolnſhire; and all the London-houſes of the ſeveral biſhops were in their reſpective dioceſes. G. A.

1. Quarterly; 1. Babington. 2. Dethick. 3. Sable, a lion rampant; a chief Or. 4. Argent, on a bend Gules, three eſcutcheons of the firſt, and a chief of the ſecond. 5. Stafford.

2. Quarterly; 1. and 4. Beaumont. 2. and 3. Lenthorpe.

3. Quarterly; 1. Babington. 2. Dethick. 3. . . . . . a wivern in chief . . . . . . and a lion rampant in baſe; . . . . . . 4. Argent, a feſs between three billets Gules. 5. Argent, on a bend Gules, three eſcutcheons of the firſt, and a chief of the ſecond; . . . . . 6. Stafford. 7. Beaumont. 8. Lenthorpe. 9. Britley. Impaling, Quarterly; 1. and 4. Beaumont; 2. Lenthorpe; 3. Britley.

4. The nine coats as N° 3. Impaling, Quarterly, 1. and 4. Argent, a croſs croſslet Sable; Waſteley: 2. and 3. Gules, a bend Argent, between four leopards' faces Or.

5. The creſt of Babington.

6. The nine coats as N° 4. Impaling, Quarterly, 1. and 4. Azure, fretty Argent; Cave. 2. Ermine, on a bend Gules; three whales' heads eraſed; Liſley. 3. Argent, a chevron between three martlets Vert.

7. Quarterly; 1. and 4. Cave; 2. and 3. Liſley. Impaling, three bars . . . . a bend engrailed between two cottizes.

8. Quarterly; 1. Babington; 2. Dethick; 3. . . . . a wivern in chief . . . . . . and a lion rampant in baſe . . . . .; 4. Argent, a feſs between three billets Gules, 5. Argent, on a bend Gules, three eſcutcheons of the firſt, a chief of the ſecond . . . .; 6. Stafford. 7. Beaumont. 8. Britley. 9. Lenthorpe.

In 1722, a Roman pavement was diſcovered near Rothley, of which the following particulars are preſerved in the MS Collections of the Rev. Sam. Carte:

"May 14, 1722, to ſatisfy the requeſt of Mr. Bridges, I went to Rothley; and, by information and ſight, learned that about a quarter or half a mile from Rothley, on the right hand of the road leading from thence to Swithland, near the hedge, there had been a very large houſe, the foundations already diſcovered being above 30 yards long; out of which there were dug up this laſt year many ſcores of loads of ſtone which have been carried away, and there ſtill be upon the grounds 20 load or more; and how far further the foundation extends is not yet diſcovered. I ſaw a part of a floor, which was of lime mortar, about an inch and a half thick; but in other parts of it they found a pavement, conſiſting of little bricks or teſſellæ of about three quarters of an inch ſquare, ſome red, and ſome white; but whether they were placed chequer-wiſe, and whether any were of another colour, I could not learn. Mr. Babington told me that there had been found ſome human bones, and particularly the jaw-bone of a man with the teeth in it. I ſaw upon the place ſome pieces of bricks that were very freſh red, and of a firmer ſubſtance than any now made; and Mr. Babington ſhewed me ſome whole tiles of ſuch a make as I never ſaw before. They were $17\frac{1}{8}$ inches long and 14 broad, with an edge on each ſide extending till about two inches of the end. Each tile had, about the middle of the upper end, a hole fit for a peg, ſuch as is uſed for the hanging of ſlates; and therefore it is thought that theſe were uſed for the covering of the houſe. The edges are about three quarters of an inch high and an inch broad, and the reſt of the tile, where theſe edges are not, is above three quarters of an inch thick; at the two corners of the bottom of the tile, there is a break of about an inch ſquare, not only of the edge, as there is at the top, but alſo of the ſubſtance of the tile."

In 1781, an act was paſſed for dividing and incloſing ſeveral open and common fields, common meadows, common paſtures, and other commonable lands and grounds, in the pariſh and townſhip of Rothley, containing about 1200 acres; alſo ſeveral open and common fields, common meadows, common paſtures, and commonable lands and grounds, within the extra-parochial liberty of Rothley Temple; all which lands and grounds, as well within the ſaid pariſh and townſhip as within the ſaid extra-parochial liberty, are intermixed with each other; and the ſaid pariſh and townſhip and extra-parochial liberty are parcels of the manor and ſoke, and within the peculiar and exempt juriſdiction of Rothley aforeſaid, belonging to Thomas Babington, eſq. as lord of the manor and ſoke of Rothley, and intitled to the ſoil of all the waſte grounds in the ſaid pariſh, townſhip, and liberty; and to divers rents, fees, and other privileges and royalties belonging to the ſaid manor and ſoke; alſo, as impropriator of the great tithes within the ſaid pariſh and townſhip, except of the homeſteads; and as owner of a very conſiderable part of the open and common fields, common meadows, common paſtures, and other commonable lands and grounds, in the ſaid pariſh and townſhip and in the ſaid extra-parochial liberty;—the rev. William Babington, clerk, as vicar of Rothley, intitled to certain glebe lands within the ſaid fields of the ſaid pariſh and townſhip, and to right of common therein, to the tithes of all homeſteads in the town of Rothley, and to the vicarial or ſmall tithes ariſing within the pariſh and townſhip of Rothley;—Francis earl of Huntingdon, and others, as being, or claiming to be, owners of antient cottage-houſes in the town of Mountſorrel, intitled to right of common upon part of the land intended to be incloſed, and to certain ſmall pieces of land, part of the land to be incloſed, called Bull Roods;—and ſir John Danvers, bart. John Pagett, John Dawſon, Joſeph Newbold, John Vickons, and Ralph Scampton Wheatley, gents.; John Fiſher, clerk, and others, were the then owners and proprietors of the reſidue of the ſaid open and common fields, common meadows, common paſtures, and other commonable lands and grounds, within the ſaid pariſh and townſhip and liberty reſpectively, and intitled to right of common in and upon the ſame reſpectively. The right of fiſhery in Rothley Brook is directed to be allotted to the owners of lands through whoſe allotment the brook leads; and parcel out lands, of the annual value of 20 ſhillings, to be ſet out for Mr. Babington, for his right to the ſoil of the waſte lands; and an equivalent to the vicar for his glebe and right of common. From the reſidue, the impropriator and vicar to have an allotment of not more than two parts in thirteen, nor leſs than a ſeventh, from ſuch lands and eſtates as are liable to great and ſmall tithes, of which the vicar to have his proper proportion; and alſo an equivalent for his tithes of old incloſures, with a reſervation of his right to ſurplice-fees, Eaſter offerings, or mortuaries; and the allotments to the impropriator and vicar to be ſubject to the repair of the chancel. The commiſſioners are empowered to ſet out to Mr. Babington and ſir John Danvers allotments proportionable to divers chief rents or annual payments, or bare rents or bare ſervices, to which they were reſpectively intitled. The extra-parochial liberty of Rothley Temple ſtill to remain ſo; and the turnpike-road from Leiceſter to Loughborough not to be altered. This act not to extend to Charnwood Foreſt, or to Rothley Plain; where all right of tithes, or common property and intereſt, is to remain as heretofore; nor to prejudice the claims of owners of houſes in Mountſorrel to an allotment for ſuch common right as they may legally claim.

By a letter from Mr. Babington to ſir Joſeph Banks, dated in June, 1788, it appears that a labourer, digging in a ditch in a field near Rothley Temple, in 1784, found among fragments of ſtone and lime, about two feet below the ſurface, a croſs, plated with ſilver and gilt, and having behind it a needle and hook, as if to faſten it to a garment. At a few yards from it ſome coins of Conſtantine, and a circular piece of metal, perhaps part of a fibula. At the diſtance of 50 yards from the ſpot was a teſſelated pavement; a ſquare of about four feet, and within a foot of the ſurface of the ground, formed of lime-ſtone cubes of different colours, which, ſoon after being expoſed to the air, changed to grey[1]. The croſs above alluded to is engraved in Plate CXXIX. fig. 15. a. b.; with another croſs found in nearly the ſame ſpot in 1791, fig. 16. a. b.; with four other fragments of fibulæ, fig. 17, 18, 19, 20.

---

[1] Archæologia, vol. IX. p. 371.

Some old helmets and an antient conſtable's ſtaff preſerved in the houſe, are repreſented in fig. 21, 22, 23; and a ſword[1], or rapier, fig. 24, uſed at Rothley Temple in 1588, when its owner was ſummoned to bear arms on account of the Spaniſh Armada.

Fig. 25. is a flooring brick, or quarry, four inches and a half ſquare, ploughed up with many more at Rothley, and communicated, in 1785, by the late David Wells, eſq. The figures of moſt of the quarries were gone; but that here given was evidently the arms of one of the family of Haſtings[2]. A Richard Haſtyngs occurs among the maſters of the Temple[3]; and William Haſtings gave to the Templars a meadow near Hackney, called Hackney-mead[4].

In 1722, 27 freeholders polled from Rothley; and in the election of 1775 we find exactly the ſame number; the firſt of which is "Thomas Babington, eſq. of Temple, otherwiſe called Rodeley Temple, otherwiſe called Rothley Temple, otherwiſe called Temple Rothley; an extra-parochial place near Leiceſter, in the county of Leiceſter."

The money raiſed and expended for the poor of Rothley in 1776, and in 1783—1785, may be ſeen hereafter, under Wartnaby, p. 984.

The Return made to Parliament in 1786, in anſwer to an enquiry reſpecting the charitable donations in this pariſh, may be ſeen in vol. I. p. 61.

In 1795, when the extreme dearneſs of bread made all perſons anxiouſly attend to every circumſtance which contributed to enhance its price, a friendly ſociety at Rothley, in Leiceſterſhire, under the auſpices of Mr. Babington, determined to employ 50*l.* of their capital in purchaſing corn, and to diſpoſe of the flour obtained from it at a low price. Their chief object was to ſupply the members of the ſociety with flour at prime coſt. They propoſed alſo to ſell it to their neighbours at a price, which, though conſiderably lower than that at which the article was retailed by the neighbouring millers and huckſters, might give them legal intereſt for their 50*l.* and indemnify them for contingent expences and loſſes. In a ſhort time, however, this diſtinction between members and other perſons was thought invidious; and flour was ſold by the ſtone to all who applied, on ſuch terms as would barely reimburſe the price of the corn and the expences, and afford intereſt for the 50*l.* It was their reſolution to ſell for ready money only; and they fixed on a part of every Monday, when two of their members were to attend at their club-room, and ſupply ſuch purchaſers as ſhould apply there. They bought a quantity of corn with the aſſiſtance of a reſpectable farmer; and found that they could ſell the flour for at leaſt 6*d.* a ſtone (of 14 lb.) leſs than was charged for flour apparently of the ſame quality by the neighbouring dealers. The ſaving to the purchaſers was about 20*l.* per cent. Flour continued to be ſold to the amount of 10*l.* or 12*l.* every week, until after ſome months had elapſed, when the millers lowered their prices, and the ſales decreaſed. From that time to the preſent from 4*l.* to 7*l.* has been the amount of the weekly ſum received at the ſales. When the plan of the ſociety was firſt ſet on foot, they ſold much more barley flour than wheat flour; but, as corn became cheaper, the poor returned by degrees to the uſe of wheat, to which moſt of them had been accuſtomed; and now the quantity of wheat flour diſpoſed of is three fourths, or four-fifths of the whole quantity ſold. The wheat is ground into a ſort of flour called "thirds," without any finer part of the flour being taken from it; and thus all the nutritious qualities of the grain are preſerved. The bread made of this flour is very wholeſome and palatable, and not ſo brown as that which is uſually eaten in farmers' houſes. There is a very ready ſale for the bran, which, in order to make the flour of the requiſite quality, is ſeparated at the mill from the groſs quality of the wheat. The miller is not paid for grinding, by an allowance of toll, but in money; which is found to be by far the moſt eligible method of ſatisfying his demands. For ſome time flour has been ſold on two days of the week, for the better accommodation of the poor. The foregoing plan has effectually anſwered the purpoſe of keeping the price of flour as low as that of corn would admit; and, in ſome degree, of improving the quality of the flour ſold in the neighbourhood, by affording the poor a certainty of buying it in its pureſt ſtate of the friendly ſociety. The mode adopted at Rothley is ſuch as would be imitable in almoſt every part of the kingdom; and it has the merit of putting into the hands of the ſuffering individuals, their own remedy againſt the monopoly of the millers. It is to be obſerved, that the power of purchaſing corn is by no means ſo clear and deciſive a benefit to the poor, as that of purchaſing flour at prime coſt. The benefit of the plan adopted at Rothley is ſo evident, the mode of proceſs ſo ſimple, and the amount of expence ſo eaſily aſcertained, that arguments in its favour are unneceſſary. Similar modes of procuring a regular ſupply of flour, at a moderate price, have been adopted at Quorndon, Sileby, Mountſorell, and ſome other places in Leiceſterſhire; recommended by the ſame benefits, as thoſe attending the execution of the plan at Rothley[5].

A ſtill more intereſting plan was adopted in 1799 by Mr. Babington, for ſupplying induſtrious labourers and mechanics with ſmall parcels of land; which was communicated in detail, by Mr. Babington himſelf, in a letter to the Board of Agriculture; but, I believe, has not yet been publiſhed.

By the Return made to Parliament in 1801, Rothley contained 145 inhabited houſes, and 3 uninhabited; 382 males, 394 females; total 775; of whom 152 were chiefly employed in agriculture, and 354 in trade, manufactures, &c.

---

[1] This ſword is now in the collection of Mr. Fowke, of Elmeſthorpe; who had it from David Wells, eſq. in 1790, with the following brief hiſtory: "This Rapier is a real Toledo. It came from Rothley Temple into my family by a relation of the name of Bywater, who was ſteward there in 1682; and it has been in my family ever ſince. The antiquity of it handed down to me are, that it was to help arm a horſe-man in the general muſter about the year 1614; and by others was thought to be made uſe of as early as 1588; when Thomas Skeffington, eſq. of Belgrave, high-ſheriff for the county of Leiceſter, ſummoned all perſons between the ages of 18 and 50, that were able to bear arms againſt the forces that were then coming over in the Spaniſh Armada. The blade is curiouſly indented, being ſtamped or indented alternately; and near to the hilt one the remains of ſome ſmall letters, that perhaps might be etched on after it was made. The whole length from the pomel to the point two feet eleven inches, and one quarter. The hilt appears to have been ſilvered over."

[2] Mr. Wells, in Gent. Mag. vol. LV. p. 89. [3] See before, p. 949. [4] Dugdale, Mon. Angl. vol. II. p. 543.

[5] Seventh Report of the Society for bettering the Condition and increaſing the Comforts of the Poor, Oct. 25, 1798, 2d edition, p. 49.

conſiſts of a large old handſome tower (in which are four bells); a large and handſome chancel, ſeparated by a neat ſkreen from the nave; which on the North ſide reſts on five, on the South ſide on four pointed arches on round pillars with ſquared capitals, with clereſtory windows.

The North and South ailes have each of them a chapel at the Eaſt end.

Two flat perks from the ſides of the Eaſt windows.

In the North chapel window two hands elevated.

In the South chapel are many fragments of painted glaſs; particularly part of a ſaint bearing a croſs, in his hand a long ſtaff.

The old round font is engraved, Pl. CXXXII. fig. 2.

In the South wall of the chancel are two low pointed ſtalls, fig. 3; and the upper part only of a double piſcina; and on the North ſide is a large locker.

In the South wall of the North chapel is a ſingle piſcina well preſerved, fig. 4; and another in the South aile.

The communion rails entirely ſurround the altar-table; with a commodious ſpace for kneeling and for walking round on all the four ſides.

The four following coats of arms (Plate CXXXI. fig. 9—12.) are from Burton.

In a North window of Rothley church:

Or, on a croſs Sable, five lions heads eraſed Argent, ducally crowned Or. [This remains in the Eaſt window of the South aile.]

Gules, ſeven maſcles voided and conjoined Or; Quincy.

Sable, a lion rampant Argent, crowned Or; Segrave.

In a South window:

Azure, a croſs Or, between four leopards' faces Argent; Kingſton.

To which Mr. Smith, in 1740, adds (fig. 13, 14)

Gules, a chevron Or, between three combs Argent; Ponſonby.

Kingſton, impaling Skeffington.

The churches of Rothley and Medbourn were given in pure alms by king Henry II. and the grant confirmed by Richard I. about the year 1190, to the monks of Oweſton, for the expreſs purpoſe of completing their abbey church [1].

In 1213, king Henry III. was patron of the advowſon of Rothley.

In the Matriculus of 1220, Rothley is deſcribed to be in the patronage of the king; the then rector, John (nepos G. quondam Legati) who had been inſtituted by the legate. At this period the church of Rothley had ab antiquo an annual payment of half a mark from the chapel of Anlep [2]. In the ſame record, Gaddeſby is ſtated to be a chapel of Role, having a reſident chaplain, and every privilege appertaining to a mother church, and anſwering for all ſynodals.

The like privileges belonged to the chapels of Cayham, Caddeſwell, and Grimſton; and alſo to Warkeneteby, except that this laſt did not pay ſynodals [3].

The vicarage was endowed, about the year 1240, by Robert Groſſeteſte, then biſhop of Lincoln; and a diſpute concerning the tithes in the chapelry of Gaddeſby, and alſo concerning an annual penſion from the churches of Skeffington and Wanlip, and other particulars relative to an annual rent from the church of Rothley, and the demeſne lands of that lordſhip, was adjuſted by Richard Graveſend, biſhop of Lincoln, in 1277.

King Edward I. in 1273 gave the advowſon of Rothley to the hoſpital of St. Thomas of Acon, London [4].

In Pope Nicholas's Valor 1291 the penſion of the rector of Rothley, in the church of Skeffington, was taxed at 10*s*.

In 1337, the appropriation of the church of Rothley, with the endowment of the vicarage and all its chapelries, was thus freely confirmed to the Knights Hoſpitallers by Henry Burgherſh then biſhop of Lincoln:

"Univerſis ſancte matris eccleſie filiis ad quos preſentes litere pervenerint, Henricus permiſſione divinâ Lincolnie epiſcopus ſalutem in Domino ſempiternam. Noveritis nos literas bone memorie dominorum Roberti & Ricardi predeceſſorum noſtrorum, de conſenſu dilectorum in Chriſto filiorum Rogeri tunc temporis decani & capituli eccleſie noſtre Lincoln', per religioſos viros priorem & fratres Sancti Johannis Jeruſalem in Angliâ nobis porrectas, veras, ſacras, & integras, non oboletas, nec in aliquâ parte vitiatas, eorumque ſigillo communitas, accepiſſe & diligenter inſpexiſſe, ſub tenoribus infraſcriptis: 'Omnibus Chriſti fidelibus ad quos preſens ſcriptum pervenerit, Robertus, Dei gratiâ, Lincolnie epiſcopus, ſalutem in Domino. Noverit univerſitas veſtra, nos, de conſenſu Rogeri [5] decani & capituli Lincolnie, divine pietatis intuitu, conceſſiſſe, dediſſe, & hâc preſenti charta noſtrâ confirmâſſe, Roberto de Stamford [6], magiſtro Militie Templi in Angliâ, & fratribus ejuſdem ordinis, patronis eccleſie de Roleyâ, ipſam eccleſiam de Roleyâ, cum pertinentiis ſuis, cum ipſam vacare contigerit, in proprios uſus, perpetuò poſſidendam. Salvâ vicariâ perpetuâ in eâdem eccleſiâ, quam, de conſenſu dictorum magiſtri & fratrum, in formâ ſubſcriptâ duximus ordinandum; viz. 'quod capellanus idoneus ad ipſam vicariam, per magiſtrum dicte Militie qui pro tempore fuerit nobis & ſucceſſoribus noſtris ſucceſſivè preſentandus, & per nos & ſucceſſores noſtros vicarius perpetuus in eadem vicaria canonicè inſtituendus, habebit, nomine vicarie ſue predicte, totum altaragium eccleſie de Rowleyâ, cum maneriâ perſone, & cum totâ terrâ de dominico ipſius eccleſie, cum omnibus ad eandem terram pertinentibus, & totam capellam de Gaddeſby, integrè, cum omni terrâ & omnibus aliis ad eandem capellam pertinentibus; & totum altaragium capelle de Kayam, una cum virgatâ terre ad eandem capellam pertinente, cum omnibus pertinentiis ſuis; & totum altaragium capelle de Grimſton, cum unâ virgatâ terre ad eandem capellam pertinente, cum omnibus pertinentiis; & totam capellam de Wartnoteby, cum unâ virgatâ terre ad eandem capellam pertinente, cum omnibus pertinentis; & totum altaragium capelle de Caldwell & de Wikham, cum unâ bovatâ terre ad eandem capellam pertinente, cum omnibus pertinentiis ſuis. Qui quidem vicarius, curam habens animarum totius parochie in ipſâ eccleſiâ de Royleyâ, cum uno diacono & alio clerico idoneo pariter in officio ſacerdotali miniſtrante, ſingulas predictas capellas per ſingulos capellanos & clericos idoneos propriis ſumptibus & oneribus deſerviri faciet; libros & ornamenta alia, tam matricis eccleſie quam capellarum predictarum, quantum ad rectorem eccleſie predicte pertinent, ſuſtinebit; & de ſynodalibus omnibus dictas matricem eccleſiam & capellas ſuas contingentibus ordinario loco reſpondebit. Et ſalvis dilecto in Chriſto filio Johanni archidiacono Leyc', & ſucceſſoribus ſuis ejuſdem loci archidiaconis, pro omnibus que poſſunt vel poſſint aliquo tempore de totâ parochiâ de Rowleiâ quocunque tempore noſtris archidiaconis Leyc' qui pro tempore fuerint provenire, quatuor marcis ſingulis annis, ad feſtum Sancti Michaelis, de domo dictorum magiſtri & fratrum apud Rowleyam, ſine difficultate qualibet in perpetuum percipiendis. Salvâ etiam eidem archidiacono & ſucceſſoribus ſuis procuratione ſuâ annuâ ratione viſitationem faciend' in perpetuum percipiend', ſecundum tenorem carte inter archidiaconum & predictos magiſtrum & fratres, ſicut ſine pedlatione cepta eſt & confecta. Salvis & in omnibus ſpalibus conſuetudinibus & Lincolnie eccleſie dignitate. Predicti verò magiſter & fratres eccleſiam predictam de Roleyâ & capellas ejuſdem antedictas, cum omnibus pertinentiis ſuis, exceptis portionibus ad dictos vicarium & archidiaconum ſuperius expreſſis, in propriis uſibus perpetuò poſſidentes in formâ prenominatâ, edificia & reparationes tam matricis eccleſie quam omnium capellarum predictarum propriis ſumptibus & oneribus in perpetuum ſuſtinebunt. Et, ut omnia iſta predicta perpetuam obtineant roboris firmitatem, preſenti ſcripto ſigillum noſtrum, una cum ſigillo capituli noſtri, memoratis duximus apponend'. Hiis teſtibus;

---

[1] See vol. II. p. 757; and the Appendix to that volume, p. 146.

[2] See vol. I. p. lviii.

[3] See vol. I. p. lx.

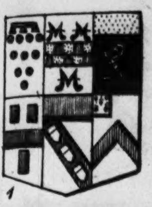
[4] Dugdale, Mon. Angl. vol. II. p. 412.

[5] Roger de Weſeham, dean of Lincoln from 1232 to 1245.

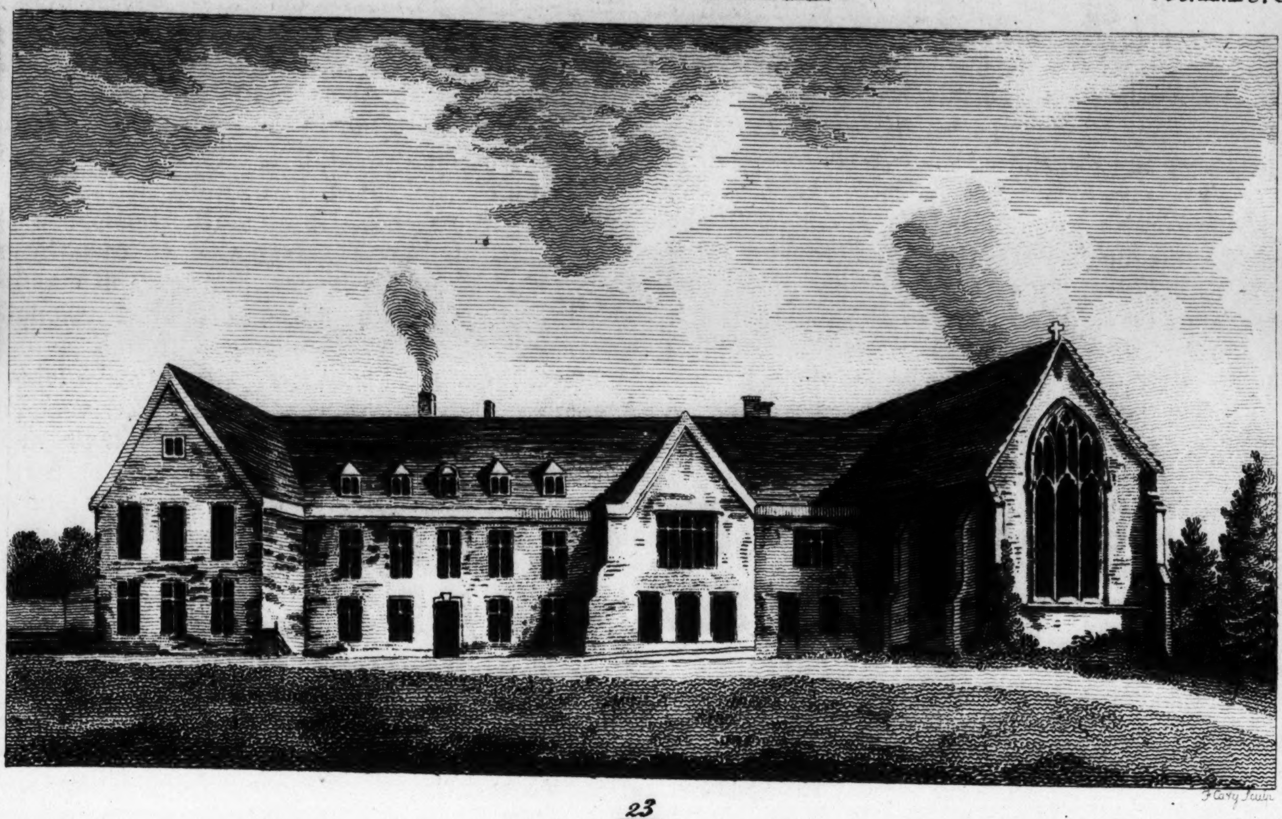
[6] Robert de Sandford was maſter 1240, in the 23d year of archbiſhop Gray in the ſee of York. Kennett's MSS.

Rogero

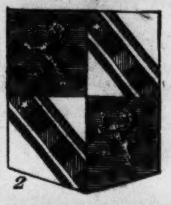
ROTHLEY TEMPLE.



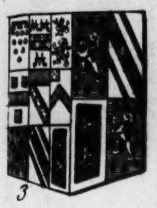
1



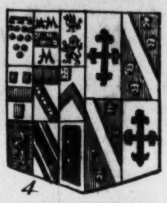
F. Cary sculp.



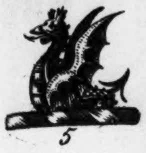
2



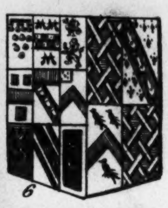
3



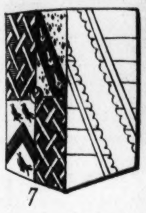
4



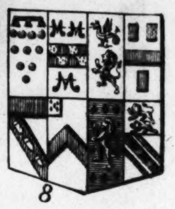
5



6

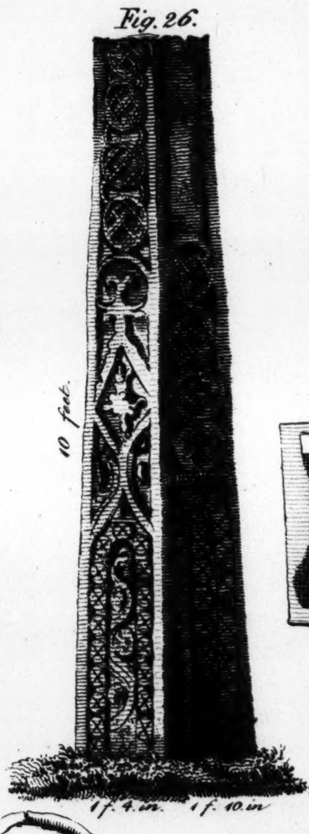


7



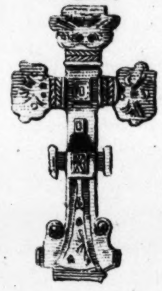
8

Fig. 26.

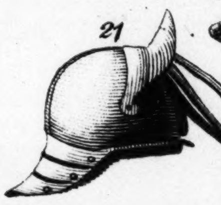


10 feet
1 f. 4 in.
1 f. 10 in

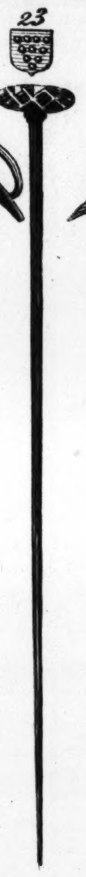
15.a.



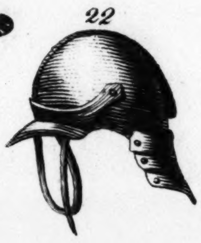
21



23



22



15.b.

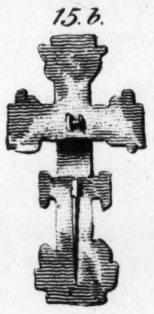


Fig. 27.

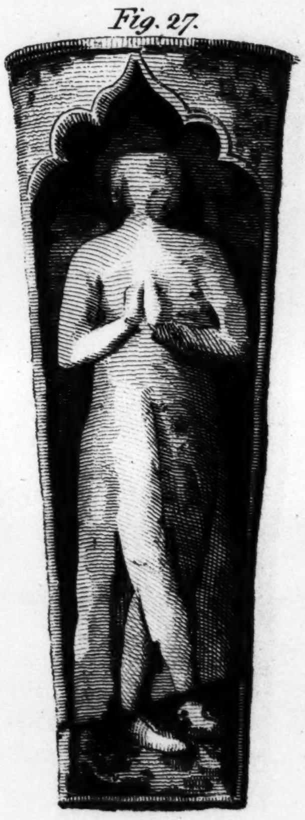
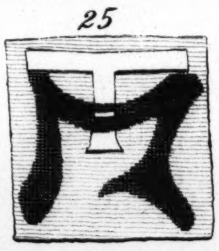
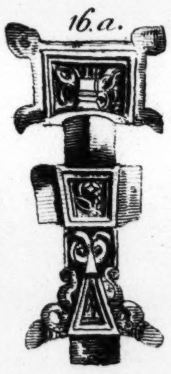


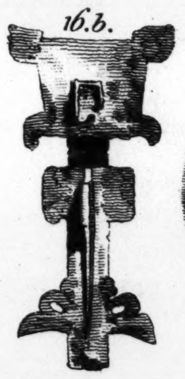
25



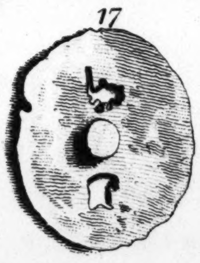
16.a.

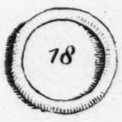


16.b.

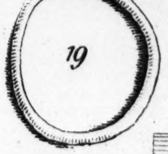


17



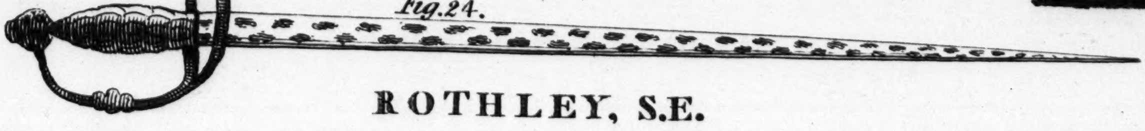


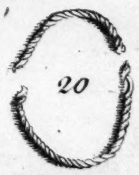
18



19

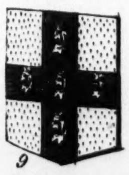
Fig. 24.



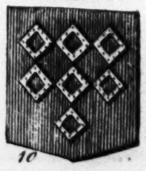


20

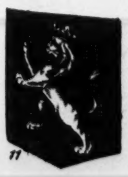
ROTHLEY, S.E.



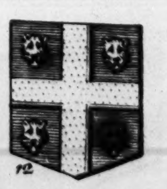
9



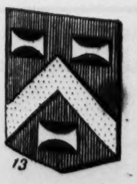
10



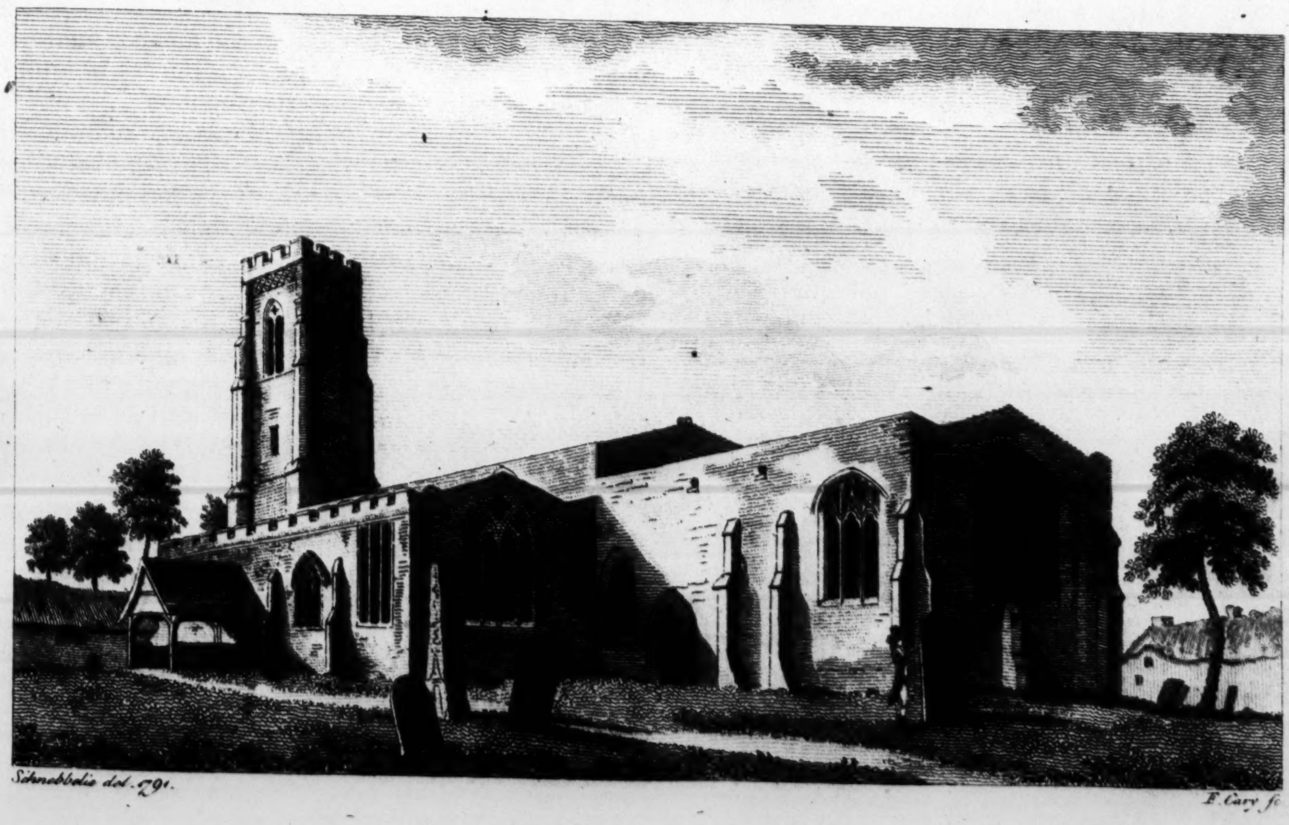
11



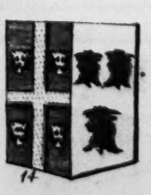
12



13



Schnebbelie del. 1791. F. Cary sc.



14

Rogero decano, Willielmo precentore, Nicholao cancellario, Waltero theſaurario, Willielmo ſubdecano Lincolnie; Thomâ Lincolnie, Johanne de Northampton, Willielmo de Huntington, Amura Bedeford, Johanne Lincolnie, Johanne Oxonie, Gilberto de Stowâ, archidiaconis; magiſtro Roberto de Cadeney, Roberto Gravell, Roberto de Bremphill, Willielmo de Wynchecumbe, Roberto de Bollſhore, Rogero Blundo, Rogero de Kavenham, Thomâ de Aſhebie, & Johanne de Crakehull, canonicis Lincolnie; magiſtris Nicholao Teſſum, Leonardo filio Alexandri, Benedicto de Burgo, Stephano de Caſtello, & Rogero de Fredeſwell, clericis. Dat' apud Lyddinton, xii° kal' Septembris, pontificatûs noſtro ſexto[1]." Premiſſâ verò inquiſitione ſuper equalitate valoris decimarum garbarum capelle de Gadeſby, & annuarum penſionum decem ſolidorum de eccleſiâ de Skeffington, & dimidiâ marcâ de eccleſiâ de Anlep eccleſie de Rodleyâ debitarum; necnon annui redditûs eccleſie de Roleyâ in villâ de Roleyâ, cum pleno dominico eorundem, ſicut ipſi Templarii eos quocunque tempore plenius habuerûnt. Per quam quidem inquiſitionem eſt inventum quod dicte decime garbarum prefatam penſionem & porcionem in nullo ferè excedunt, vel modicò. Nos igitur Ricardus Lincolnie epiſcopus, de conſenſu expreſſo & procuratione partis utriuſque, propter mutuam pacem & tranquillitatem inter eos conſervand', dictas decimas garbarum capelle de Gadeſby porcionem Templariorum in eccleſiâ de Roleyâ annectimus & aſſignamus; dictas penſiones, cum annuo redditu memorato, pertinentes vicarie in eccleſiâ de Roleyâ, in vicem dictarum decimarum applicantes; memoratam ordinationem predeceſſoris noſtri in omnibus aliis articulis ejuſdem, quantum ad nos pertinet, ratum habend' & acceptand'. Dat' 8 kal' Junii, A. D. 1277.'—Attendentes etiam quod, ordine ipſius Militie Templi per felicis recordationis dominum Clementem Papam Quintum, in Concilio Vienenſ', deliberatione prehabitâ diligenti, coram Sacro Conſilio approbante, ipſam domum Militie Templi, ceteraſque domus eccleſiaſticas, capellas, oratoria, civitates, caſtra, villas, terras, grangias, & loca, poſſeſſiones, juriſdictiones, & redditus, atque jura, omniaque alia bona immobilia & mobilia, vel ſe moventia, cum omnibus membris, juribus, & pertinentiis ſuis, ultra & citra mare, ac in univerſis quibuſlibet mundi partibus conſiſtentia, quos ipſe ordo & dicti magiſter & fratres ipſius ordinis Militie Templi in regno Francie, communiter rapti fuerunt, viz. A.D. 1308, menſe Octobris, per ſe vel quoſcunque alios habebunt, tenebunt, & poſſidebunt, vel ad eoſdem domum & ordinem Militie Templi, & dictos magiſtrum & fratres ipſius ordinis Militie Templi quomodolibet pertinebunt, cum omnibus privilegiis, indulgentiis, immunitatibus, & libertatibus, quibus prefati magiſter & fratres dictorum domûs & ordinis Militie Templi, & ipſa domus & ordo, per ſedem Apoſtolicam, vel per Catholicos Imperatores, Reges, & Principes, & fideles alios, vel quocumque alio modo, erunt legitimi communiti, ordini Hoſpitii Sc̄i Jerl̄m & ipſi Hoſpitio donantibus, conceſſit unanimiter, incorporante applicavit, & annexavit in perpetuum, de apoſtolicâ plenitudine poteſtatis, prout in literis apoſtolicis ad ipſos inde confectis, non raſis, non cancellatis, nec in aliquâ ſui parte vacatis, vidimus plenius contineri. Nos igitur, conſideratis & ponderatis omnibus & ſingulis ſupraſcriptis, volentes in hâc parte quod piè & utiliter geſtum eſt, executioni debitè quatenus ad nos attinet demandare, ac neceſſitatibus dictorum prioris & fratrum hoſpitii predicti in juris ſui preſentatione proprio compatientes affectu, conceſſionem & appropriationem eccleſie de Roleyâ predictâ, cum capellis, juribus, & pertinentiis ſuis univerſis, per predeceſſores noſtros in decanum & capitulum predictos ritè & canonicè ſicut premittitur factas, deliberacione que requiritur in hâc parte prehabitâ, approbamus, ratificamus, & ex certâ ſcientiâ & authoritate noſtra pontificali confirmamus. Volumus etiam & concedimus quod, prefatis donacione, conceſſione, unione, incorporatione, applicatione, & annexione apoſtolicis ſupraſcriptis, cedente vel decedente ipſius eccleſie de Roleyâ nunc rectore, liceat dictis priori & fratribus hoſpitii predictis, & ſucceſſoribus ſuis, per ſe vel procuratorem ſuum, poſſeſſionem ipſius eccleſie de Roleyâ, cum omnibus capellis eidem annexis, de juribus & pertinentiis ſuis univerſis, auctoritate premiſſorum ſufficienter munitis, nanciſci & apprehendere corporale, & ipſam eccleſiam, cum pertinentiis ſuis predictis, in uſus prioris, ut dicti magiſter & fratres ordinis Militie Templi cum tenuerunt in perpetuum poſſidere, noſtri vel ſucceſſorum noſtrorum aſſenſu minimè requiſito, prout conceſſionis & appropriationis predictarum tenor exigit & natura. In cujus rei teſtimonium ſigillum noſtrum fecimus hiis apponi. Dat' apud Vetus Templum Londonie, 7 kal. Aprilis, A. D. 1337, & conſecrationis noſtre decimo ſeptimo."

26° die Sept. 1668, concordat cum originali in Regiſtro domini epiſcopi Lincolnie remanente.

Ita teſtor, Tho. Makinder, Notarius publicus[2].

April 18, 1329, the advowſon of the church of Rothley was granted by Edward III. with the conſent of the prelates, peers, and others then aſſembled in parliament, in conſideration of good and faithful ſervices, to Henry de Ferrariis, to hold of the king and his heirs for ever. His teſtibus; Johanne Cantuar' archiepiſcopo; Henrico Lincolnie epiſcopo; magiſtro Roberto Stratford, archidiacono Cantuarie, cancellario noſtro[3]; Willielmo de Monte acuto comite Sarum, Willielmo de Clinton comite Huntingdon, Hugone de Audele comite Glouceſtrie, Johanne Darcy le neveu ſeneſcallo hoſpitii noſtri, & aliis. Dat' per manum noſtram, apud Weſtm', xviii° Aprilis[4]."

In 1344, the procurations for Rothley, including the chapel of St. Nicholas in Mountforell, were 7*s.* 6¾*d.*; the rectory was taxed at 100 marks, the vicarage at 20 marks; and paid 1*s.* 6*d.* for Peter-pence.

At the ſame period the chapels of Gaddeſby, Grimſton, and Cayham, were together taxed at 12*d.*; Caldwell and Wartnaby at 12*d.*

Gaddeſby and Caldwell paid 2*s.* each for Peter-pence; and Grimſtone, Cayham, and Wartnaby, 1*s.* each.

In 1372, the archdeacon of Leiceſter received from the Knights Hoſpitallers of Rothley £2. 13*s.* 4*d.* as a penſion for his juriſdiction in that pariſh[5].

In 1534-5, the procurations and ſynodals were £1. 8*s.* 6¾*d.*, a penſion of £1. was paid to Maſter Robert Duckett; Hugh Woodcock was vicar; and the value of the vicarage was £10.[6]

The value of the preceptory of Rothley at that period has been already ſtated[7].

In 1564, dn̄s Harold Pachet is certified to be the vicar of Rothley, having been regularly inſtituted; and enjoying all the juriſdiction thereto belonging; and annexed to the ſame was a hamlet [Rothley Temple] with a chapel[8].

In 1552, the commiſſioners reported that the church of Rothley contained,

In primis, one chales withowt a cover.
It̄m, tow copes and foore veſtements.
It̄m, foore belles and a ſance[9] bell."

In 1650, the rectory was returned worth £80.; the vicarage £50.; and the incumbent as "no preacher."

The rectory of the chapel of Caldwell was returned worth £30.; the vicarage £10.

The chapels of Gaddeſby, Grimſton, and Keame, are barely noticed, without any remark.

The value in the King's books, "in decimis majoribus & minutis, cum manſ', &c." is £12. 1*s.* 5*d.*

In 1716, the value of the vicarage of Rothley, cum capellis, was certified to be £76. 10*s.* 2¾*d.*

On a ſmall braſs plate over the vicarage kitchen chimney, the following lines are adopted from Horace:

"Linquenda tellus, & domus, & placens
Uxor: neque harum, quas colis arborum,
Te, præter inviſas cupreſſos,
Ulla brevem dominum ſequetur."

The earlieſt Regiſter begins in 1706.

"Samuel, ſon of John Sheffield, though he lived on the demeſne land, was buried in Rothlye churchyard, by conſent, Oct. 13, 1707."

On the ſkreen between the nave and chancel:

"Jonathan Leake and Thomas Bywater Churchwardens, 1790."

---

[1] Circa annum 1240.

[2] This was tranſcribed by the Rev. Sam. Carte, in 1717, from a copy taken in 1700, by Sam. Daniel, then rector of Rothley.

[3] Ciceſtr' tandem epiſcopo.

[4] Cart. 3 Edw. III. n. 59.

[5] See p. 952.

[6] See vol. I. p. lxxx.

[7] See p. 953.

[8] Vol. I. p. lxxxviii.

[9] A ſaint's bell.

On two tables of benefactions on the ſcreen:

1. BENEFACTIONS.

1664, Margaret Bryan, of St. Giles's, London, £10.
1682, Suſanna Holloway, of Weſt Ham, Eſſex, £1.
1685, Mr. Robert Pagett, of Dort in Holland, £20.
1686, Samuel Burſnall, of Rothley, £20.
1688, Mr. John Stirk, of the city of London, £5.
1694, Tho. Wilſon, of Dalby on the Woulds, £3.

Mr. Staveley, rector of Coſſington, gave 20*s.* yearly, to be given in ſixpenny-loaves to the poor of Rothley, by the vicar and churchwardens, on St. Thomas's day.

2. BENEFACTIONS TO THE SCHOOL.

1691, Bartholomew Hickling, of Loughborough, gave the ſchool-houſe, and land for the teaching of 14 poor boys to read; and a Bible yearly to any boy who can read the firſt chapter of St. John's Goſpel the moſt diſtinctly.

John Willows gave 5*s.* yearly, to buy a Bible, to be given on Whitſunday to any boy who can read the firſt chapter of St. John's Goſpel the moſt diſtinctly.

Mrs. Daniel, relict of the Rev. Mr. Daniel, vicar of Rothley, gave £30. to purchaſe land, or to be put out to intereſt, for teaching poor girls to read.

RECTORS.	PATRONS.
. . . . . . 1209.	The prioreſs of Etton[1].
John, nepos G. legati.	The King.
William de Bruderia, 1276.
. . . . 12 kal. Oct. 1309.	The King, ratione terrarum & tenementorum in manu ſuâ exiſtentium.
. . . . 12 kal. Jan. 1315.	The King, ſalvo jure prioris & fratrum Hoſpitalis Sancti Johannis Jeruſalem.
Hugh Woodcock, 1534.
William Heybreet, reſigned 1556.	Sir Ambroſe Cave.
Thomas Caſtyn, Feb. 12, 1556-7.
Harold Pachet, 1564.
Thomas Paget, 1656.
Edward Ward, Oct. 14, 14, 1661.	Matthew Babington, eſq. pleno jure.
Samuel Daniel, June 25, 1691.	Thomas Babington, eſq.
William Babington, 1706.
Samuel Daniel, 1707.
William Babington, Feb. 3, 1735.	Thomas Babington, eſq.
George Cardale, D. D. March 19, 1759; died 1769[2].	Thomas Babington, eſq.
William Babington[3], Feb. 3, 1770; died 1783.
Henry Woodcock[4], LL. B. Oct. 27, 1783; reſigned,	Thomas Babington, eſq.
Matthew Babington[5], July 24, 1787; died 1796.
Aulay Macaulay[6], M. A. Aug. 31, 1796.

MONUMENTAL INSCRIPTIONS.

Burton mentions, in the South chapel, a monument of Randle Kingſton, who died 1480; and of Raſe Kingſton and Beatrix his wife, 1488; neither of which is now legible; but one of them, an altar-tomb, ſtill remains; as does a ſlab on the floor, on which are tricked the figure of a man in armour, with his wife, and an imperfect date MCCCC . . . . .

The Kingſtons held lands within this manor, and ſeem to have been men of good account.

In the North chapel, adjoining to the North wall, is a very large altar-tomb, about three feet high, with the effigies of a man in armour, with long ſtrait hair, head on cuſhion, ſword and dagger, and large ſpur-rowels; a grey-hound at his feet looking back. His lady, who reſts on a cuſhion, has a veil head-dreſs, and a cordon; at her feet a dog looking up, and lifting up his fore-paw. Over their heads the arms of Kingſton, and the following inſcription, Plate CXXXII. fig. 5. (which on the tomb is reverſed):

"This ys the wyll of Bartholmew Kyngſtō, eſquyer, to have an obet kepyd onys ev'y zere for me and Ely' my wyff, my fad^{r} and my mod^{r}, on ye Monday next after Symōd day and Jude; ye wyche obet to be kept wth y^{e} ꝑfeth off ye lande and medo y^{t} I boght of Wyllm̄
Adcoke, wth ii acars off medo in Quer̄dn medo; ye firſt
I wyll ye vecar have for derige iiiid. and to be offerd at maſſe be ye handys of ye feffers xvid. and to the ſayde vecar for ye beydroll viiid. and to viii clarkis for redy'g off viii leſſons xvid. and a pōnd of wax to be brent at hie derge and meſſe, and aftyr y^{t} to be ſett afor y^{e} ſepulker in time off pace[6], and after y^{t} ye tone ſett to bren afor ye crucifix, and ye todyr afore ye image of owr lady, and for y^{e} waſt of iiii torchys xvid. and to iiii pore mē to hold the torchys iiiid. and ye reſedew of y^{e} ꝑfetts off y^{e} ſayd land and medo to be diſpoſyd in meytte and drinke among pore men, ye zere of our lorde a thouſand cccclxxxvi."

At the North-eaſt corner of the South chapel, on an altar-tomb of alabaſter, is tricked the figure of a lady with the veil head-dreſs, falling cape, and broad fringed belt; her hands on her breaſt, her head on a cuſhion. On one ſide the arms of Kingſton; on the other, a blank ſhield, fig. 6. Round the ledge,

✠ "Hic jacet Agnes Kingſton, que dedit feoffatoribus ſuis duo cotagia, ſex acras terre ⁊ prati, et unam rodam, ... ſacerdoti de Rotheley annuatī reddend' unā . . . .
ut cuſtodiat obituū ſuā in hac ecc'a de Rothele, ad inveniendam un' . . . .
ut . . . .
dicte eccleſie . . . .
ſub . . . .
. . . .
. . . .
jus . . . . . ō in perpetuū reſiduum erit' dict' terr' alteri eor'dem.

On the floor of this chapel is an alabaſter, inſcribed,

✠ "Orate pro animabus Johannis Kingſton et Margaretæ uxoris ejus, qui obierunt nono die menſis Auguſti, anno Domini mill° quadrageſimo . . . . . .
quorum animabus propitietur Deus. Amen."

On a low altar-tomb of alabaſter, in the ſame chapel, adjoining to the South wall, is this inſcription:

"Hic jacent Georgius Kingſton, armiger, et Maria uxor ejus, cum filiis et filiab's eorundem, qui obierunt xxx die menſis Septembris, anno Domini millo cccccxvl.
quorum animabus p'pitietur Deus. Amen."

On the North ſide are theſe arms, fig. 7:

Quarterly; 1. and 4. Kingſton; 2. and 3. Ermine, a chevron Sable; over it a leopard's head Or; a chief Sable. Impaling, 1. Argent, three bulls heads eraſed, Skeffington; 2. Azure, a bend cotized between ſix

---

[1] Priorissa de Etton preſ' ad eccleſiam (ſalvis Johanni de Cyneges xiii marcis annuis nomine ſimplicis beneficii) & ad vicariam de Rodeley.

[2] Rector alſo of Wanlip.

[3] Rector alſo of Coſſington; and died by a fall from his horſe, May 14, 1783.

[4] He had a diſpenſation, in November 1783, to hold this vicarage with the rectory of Coſſington; and another, in April 1784, to hold Rothley with the vicarage of Barkby. On reſigning Rothley, he had a diſpenſation to hold Barkby with the rectory of Calſthrop in Lincolnſhire.

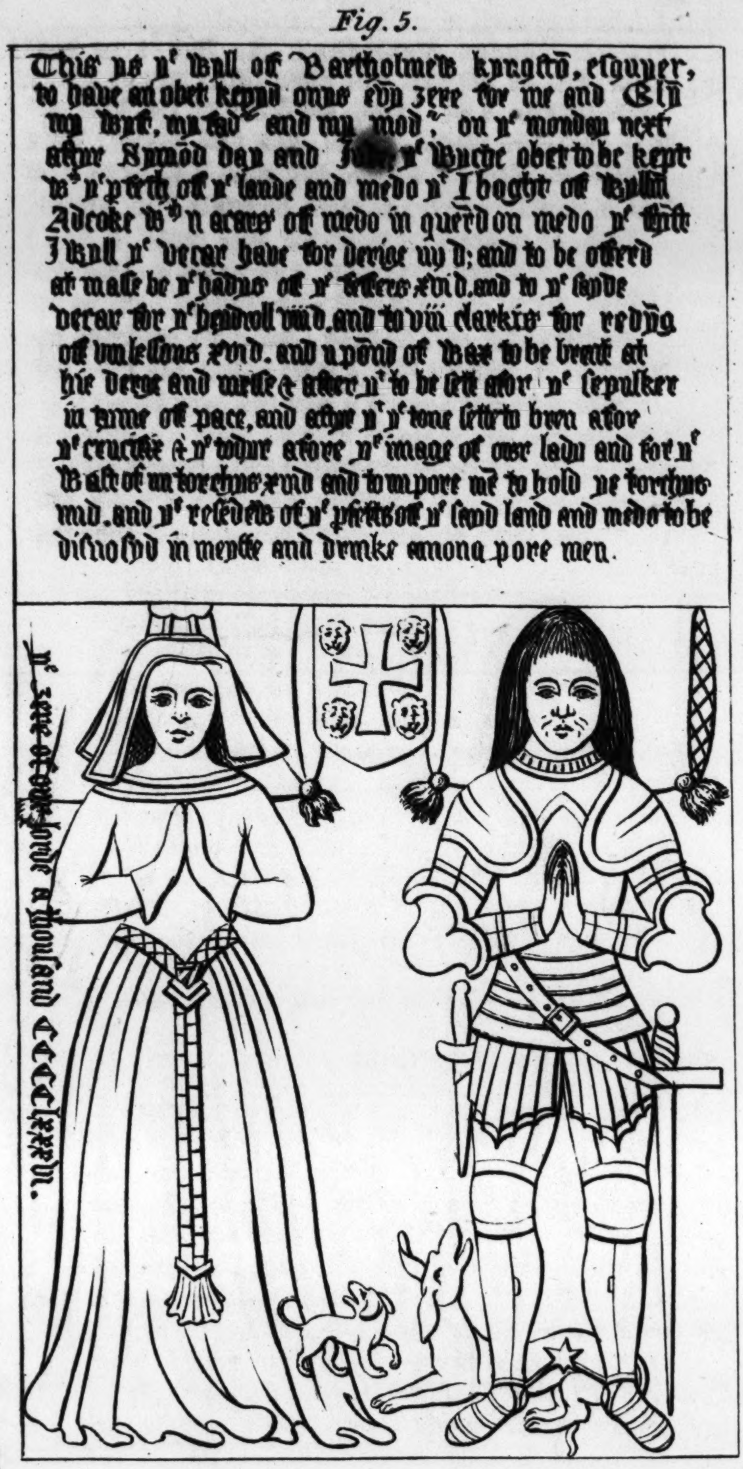
[5] Brother to the preſent Thomas Babington, eſq. of Rothley Temple.

[6] That part of the maſs at which the pax is given to the particular friends of the deceaſed.

mullets

MONUMENTS, &c. at ROTHLEY.

Fig. 5.



This ys yᵉ wyll of Bartholmew kyngstō, esquyer, to have an obet kepyd onys evy zere for me and Elȳ my wyfe, my fad' and my mod'; on yᵉ monday next afore Symōd day and Jude yᵉ whyche obet to be kept wᵗ yᵉ p'fety of yᵉ lande and medo yᵗ I boght of Wyllm
Adcoke wᵗʰ ii acars of medo in querdon medo yᵉ whiche
I wyll yᵉ vecar have for dirige iiij d; and to be offered at masse be yᵉ handys of yᵉ fefferes xvi d. and to yᵉ seyde vecar for yᵉ beadroll viij d. and to viii clarkis for redyng of ix lessons xvi d. and a pond of wax to be brent at his derge and messe & after yᵗ to be sett afor yᵉ sepulker in tyme of pace, and after yᵗ yᵉ same sett to bren afor yᵉ crucifix & yᵉ other afore yᵉ image of our lady and for yᵉ wast of iii torchys xvi d and to iiij pore men to hold yᵉ torchys iiij d. and yᵉ resedew of yᵉ p'fetts of yᵉ seyd land and medo to be disposyd in mette and drynke among pore men.

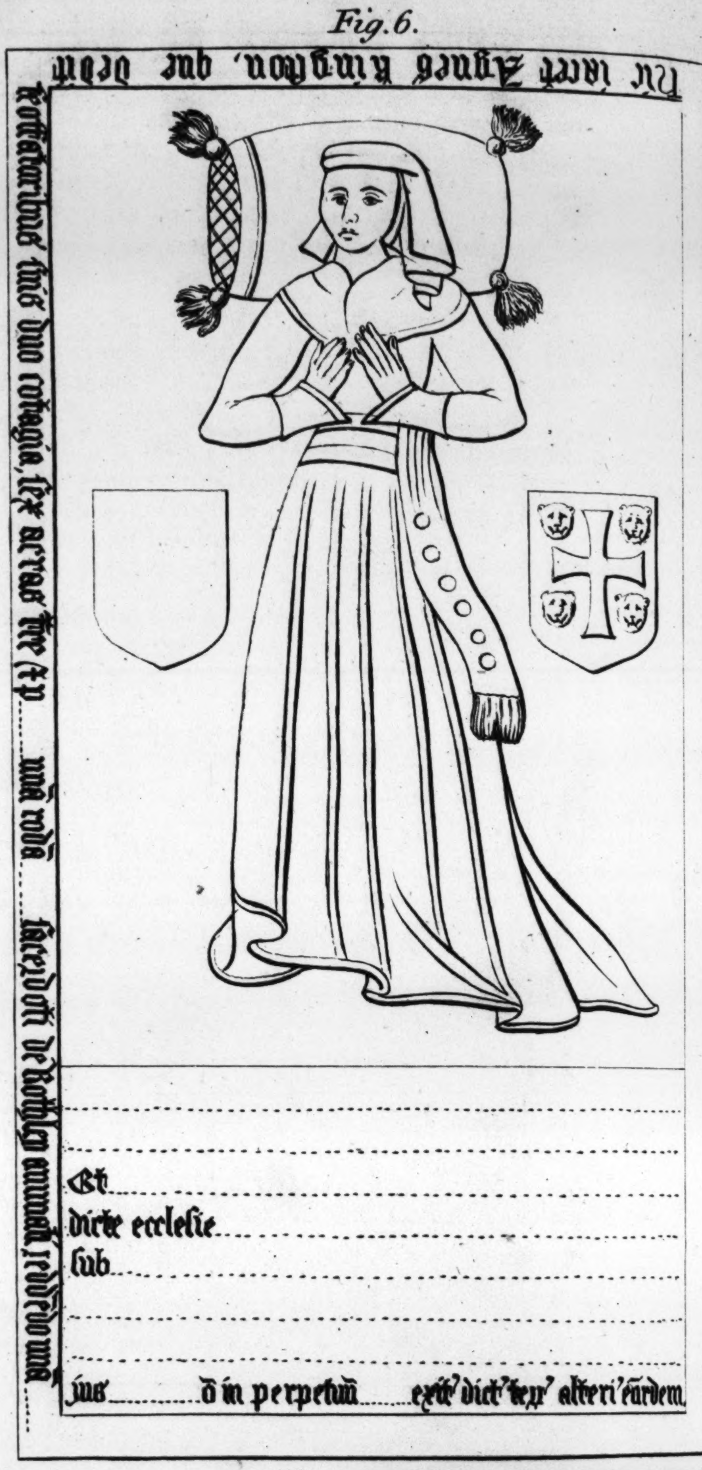
yᵉ zere of our lorde a thousand CCCCLxxxvi.

Fig. 6.



Hic iacet Agnes kingston, que dedit
Confratribus suis duo cotagia, sex acras terre (?) p.... una cum.... sacerdoti de Rothley annuatim reddendum....
Et....
dicte ecclesie....
sub....
ius.........d in perpetuū.......exit' dict' terr' alteri' eardem.

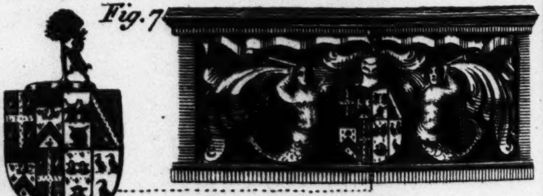


Fig. 7.

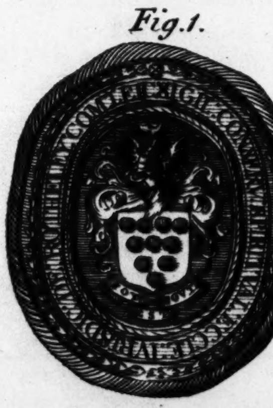
Fig. 1.



Tho: Babington

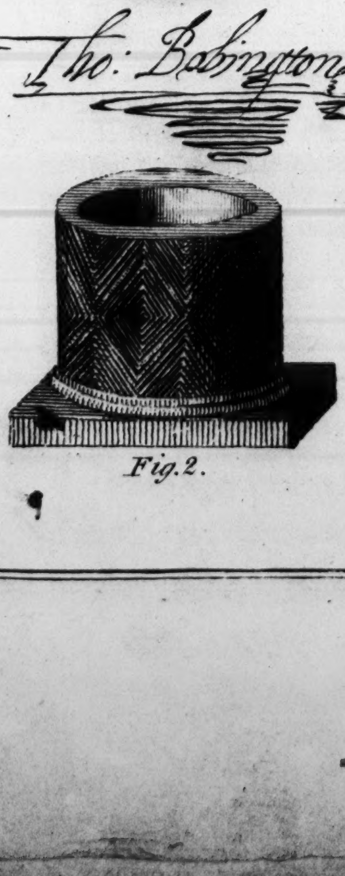


Fig. 2.

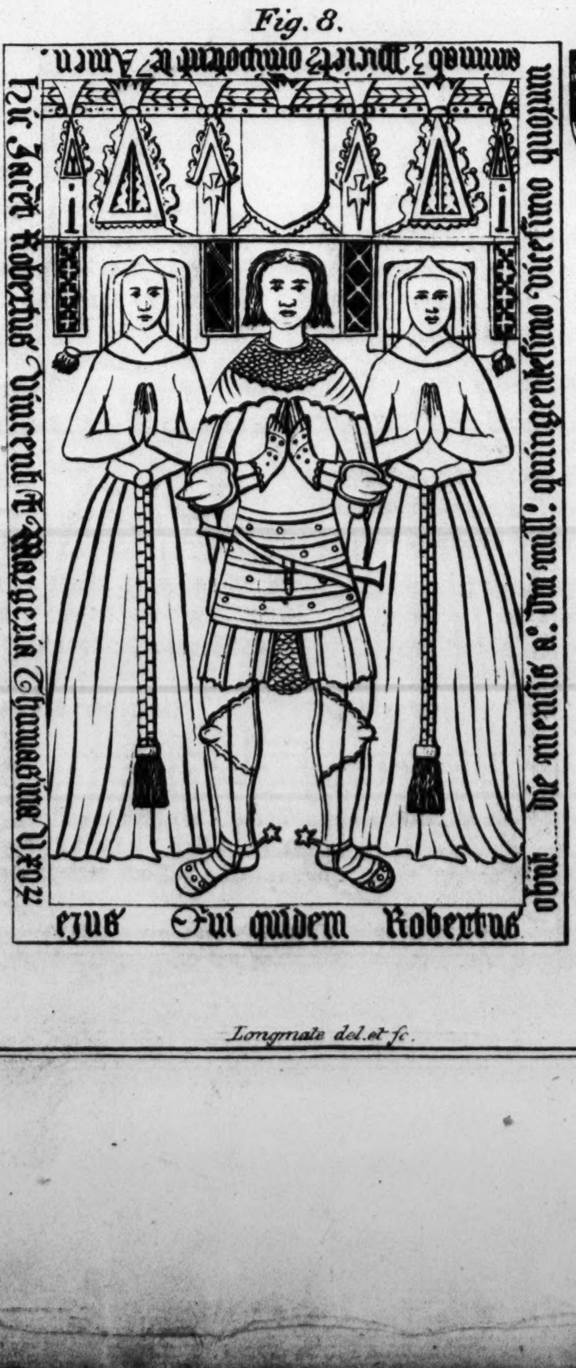
Fig. 8.



animab' p'picietur omnipotens. Amen.
Hic Jacet Robertus Vincent & Margeria Thomasine Uxor
ejus Qui quidem Robertus obiit.... die mensis a°. D'ni mill°. quingentesimo vicesimo quorum

Fig. 3.

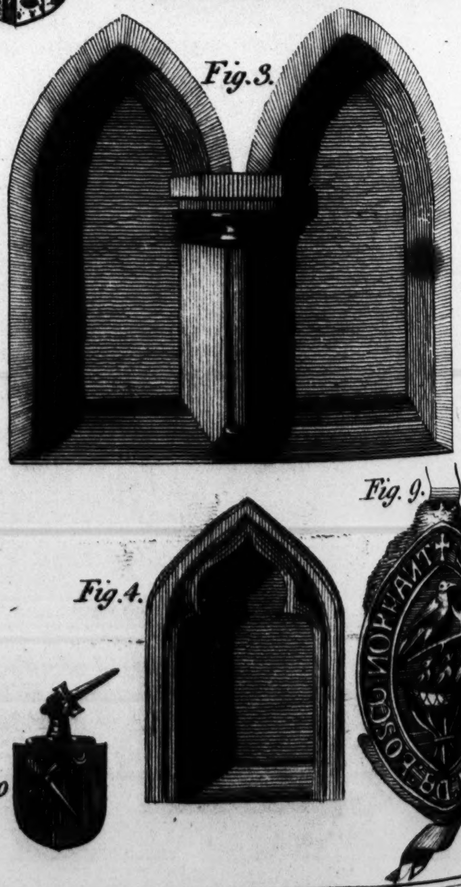

Fig. 4.

10

Fig. 9.

Longmate del. et sc.

mullets Or; 3. Ermine, three eſcalops Or, on a chief indented Gules; 4. Argent, three birds Sable. Supporters, two mermaids combing their heads. Creſt, a goat erect Argent, againſt a date-tree Vert.

On a large altar-tomb, adjoining the North wall of the North chapel, are tricked, under very rude pediments, with finials and a blank ſhield over his head, the figures of a man, bare-headed, in plated armour, gorget of mail, ſword, and dagger; and his two wives, in the veil head-dreſs, belt, and cordons; fig. 8. with this inſcription:

"Hic jacēt Robertus Vincent et Margeria et Thomaſina uxor' ejus, qui quidem Robertus obiit . . . . . . die menſis . . . . . . a° D̄ni milleſimo quingenteſimo ⁊ viceſimo, quorum animabus ꝓpitiet' omnipotens de'. Amen."

On an alabaſter-tomb, fixed againſt the South wall of the chancel, are tricked the figures at length of an old man in a gown, with ſhort ſlit ſleeves and ruffles, in his hand a roſary; a lady, with pointed head-dreſs, long ſleeves and ruffles, a pouch, roſary, ſaſh, and belt; ſeven[1] ſons and five daughters; thus circumſcribed; Plate CXXX. fig. 1.

CXXIV

"Hic jacēt Humfrid' Babyngton, IV armiger, et Eleanora uxor ejus, et filii cū filiab' eorund'; qui quidem Humfrid' obiit xxii° die mēſis novembris, anno Dñi M°CCCCC°XLIIII°, quorum animabus ꝓpiciet' de'. Amen."

On the North ſide of the ſame monument, towards the Eaſt end, is the figure of one kneeling at a deſk, fig. 2, with this inſcription:

"Thomas Babyngton, armiger, fil' et heres Humfredi Babyngton, armigeri, nuper defuncti. Precor ut filii corpori propicietuꝫ de', et aīe patris hic jacentis, et omnium fideliū.
Amen."

On the lower end of the ſame ſide of the monument: Quarterly, 1. and 4. Babington; 2. and 3. Dethick; impaling Beaumont; ſupported with two baboons chained; and beneath, near to each, a ton. Creſt, a goat's head, holding on the horns a label; fig. 3.

Within a wooden preſs, above this tomb, a fine monument of variegated marble is fixed in the wall, with elegant figures in white marble, in a niche, of Matthew Babington, eſq. and his lady, their right hands joined over a ſkull, fig. 4. He is in flowing hair, and in full armour, his left hand graſping the handle of a ſword; ſhe in hair finely curled, and in very elegant robes; in her left hand a roſe. Above them the arms of Babington; impaling, Sable, on a chevron Argent, between three arquebuſſes Or, three lozenges Gules, Hopkins; and at top the arms of Babington with the creſt. And below, this inſcription:

"HERE LYETH INTERRED NEARE THIS PLACE THE BODY OF ANNE, WIFE OF MATHEW BABINGTON, OF TEMPLE ROTHLEY, IN THE COUNTY OF LEICESTER, ESQ.
AND DAUGHTER OF SAMSON HOPKINS, GENT.
AND ALDERMAN OF THE CITTY OF COVENTRY.
THEY HAD ISSUE FOUR SONNES AND EIGHT DAUGHTERS,
AT 12 SINGLE BIRTHS, BEFORE THE ELDEST WAS 13 YEARS
AND 3 QUARTERS OLD, (VIZ.)
1. THOMAS, 2. ANNE, 3. MATTHEW, 4. JANE, 5. ELIZABETH,
6. ANNE, 7. WILLIAM, 8. KATHARINE, 9. ELIZABETH,
10. ELIZABETH, 11. MATTHEW; THE 12, BEING A DAUGHTER
NOT BORN ALIVE, PROVED FATAL ALSO TO HER MOTHER, WHO DIED THE 7TH DAY AFTER, BEING THE 7TH DAY
OF JUNE, AN° D'NI 1648,
IN THE 33D YEAR OF HER AGE.
HER SOULE (WITHOUT FLATTERY) WAS ADORNED WITH A TRINITIE OF AS DIVINE EXCELLENCIES, AS RARE COMPANIONS; A SOUND KNOWLEDGE, A PRUDENT PROFESSION, A SINCERE AND CONSTANT PRACTICE, OF THE BEST RELIGION OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND
IN ALL HER RELATIONS; HER BODY BEING FOR BEAUTY
A FIT CABINET FOR SUCH A JEWELL; IN MEMORY OF WHOM, HER SAD HUSBAND ERECTED
THIS MONUMENT.
IN HER BOTH GRACE AND NATURE MIGHT DESPAIRE, WHICH ADDED MOST, WHICH HAD THE GREATEST SHARE."

At the Eaſt end of the South ſide of the North chapel is a mural monument in marble, with the ſtatues of an old gentleman in ſhort armour, and of his lady; both kneeling at a deſk, with books, fig. 5. He has a long beard; ſhe a black coif and rich gown. By him are five ſons; by her four daughters; and over his head is this motto,

"FOY EST TOUT."

Above, the eſcutcheon of Babington and Dethick; impaling Beaumont, with the creſt of Babington.

On one ſide, Gules, a wivern Argent; on the other, Gules, a leopard Argent.

On the Eaſt ſide, an eſcutcheon blazoned as the above, but no creſt.

On the Weſt ſide, Quarterly; 1. and 4. a croſs patonce Or, pierced Argent, charged with four eſcalops Sable, Humfry; 2. and 3. Gules, a bend Argent, between four leopards faces Or, Kingſton; fig. 6.

"Hic jacent corpora Thomæ Babington, nup' de Temple Rotheley, armigeri, qui obiit xxvii° die menſis Octobris, anno Dñi 1567, ⁊ Alianoræ uxoris ejus, unius filiarum Richardi Humfreye, quæ obiit anno Dñi 1570, quoru' animæ beatiſſimi ac chariſſimi Chriſti clementia Abrahami ſinu ⁊ cœtu fideliū æterna pace quieſcant."

In the chancel:
Several large ſlabs remain, without inſcriptions.

On flat ſtones:

1. "HERE LIETH THE BODY OF THOMAS BABINGTON[2],
WHO DIED APRIL 16, 1668, AGED 73."

2. Arms: a feſs embattled Azure, between three talbots heads Or, Jeſſon; impaling Babington, fig. 7.
"HERE LIETH JANE, DAUGHTER OF
MATTHEW BABINGTON, OF RODELEY TEMPLE
IN THIS COUNTY, ESQ. WIFE OF SIR
WILLIAM JESSON, OF BURLEY IN THIS COUNTY
(ALSO), KNIGHT, WHO DIED SEPT. 30, 1668."

3. "HERE LIETH ELIZABETH,
DAUOHTER OF WILLIAM JESSON,
OF THE CITY OF COVENTRY, ESQ.
WIFE TO THOMAS BABINGTON, OF TEMPLE ROTHLEY, ESQ.
WHO DIED THE 8TH OF APRIL, 1669."

4. Arms of Bobington; impaling Jeſſon; fig. 7.
"HERE LIETH THE BODY OF THOMAS BABINGTON, OF TEMPLE ROTHELEY, ESQ.
ELDEST SON OF MATTHEW BABINGTON, ESQ.
WHO DIED APRIL 16, 1708, AGED 73."

5. Arms of Babington.
"HERE LIETH THE BODY OF WILLIAM BABINGTON, OF TEMPLE ROTHELEY, GENT.
THIRD SON OF MATTHEW BABINGTON, ESQ.
WHO DIED DEC. 18, 1708, AGED 66."

6. "Matthew, ſon of Thomas Babington, eſq.
and Elizabeth his wife, of Rotheley Temple, died Nov. 7, 1727, aged 3 years and 43 weeks.
Anne, daughter of Thomas Babington, eſq.
and Elizabeth his wife, died 1713, aged 28 weeks."

7. "Here lies the body of a good and faithful ſoul, Catharine Coldough, who died A. D. 1721."

8. "Margaret, daughter of Henry Hall, eſq.
of Gretford in Lincolnſhire, and ſecond wife of Thomas Babington, eſq.
died Feb. 12, 1723-4."

9. Arms: Babington; impaling, Sable, a lion queué furché Or, holding a ſhield Argent, charged with a croſs croſslet fitché Gules. Creſt, a croſs croſslet fitché Gules, Keling; fig. 9.
"Elizabeth, daughter of Ralph Keling, eſq. of London, cityzen, and wife of Thomas Babington, eſq. of the Temple near Rothley,
by whom he had two ſons and three daughters.
She died Jan. 30, 1729-30, anno ætatis 44."

10. Arms of Babington ſingle.
"Thomas Babington, eſq.
ſon of Thomas Babington, eſq. of Temple Rothley, died July 31, A. D. 1745, anno ætatis 63.
He left ſorrowing, by his wife Elizabeth, daughter of Ralf Keling, eſq. one ſon and two daughters."

---

[1] Two of theſe ſons were prieſts. See the pedigree of Babington, in the Viſitation of Derbyſhire, Harl. MSS. 5809. fol. 80.

[2] This inſcription, copied many years ago, is not now to be found in the chancel.

11. "Elizabeth Babington, daughter of Thomas Babington, of Rothley Temple, eſq. by Margaret his wife, died Sept. 18, 1751, aged 71."

12. "Catharine Babington, daughter of Thomas and Elizabeth Babington, of Rothley Temple, in the county of Leiceſter, eſq.
died the 11th of February, 1756."

13. "The Rev. George Cardale, Doctor in Divinity, rector of Wanlip, and vicar of this pariſh, died Oct. 28, 1769, aged 54 years.
Joſeph Cardale, his ſon, died in 1767."

14. "Frances Babington, daughter of Thomas and Elizabeth Babington, of Rothley Temple,
in the county of Leiceſter,
died the 21ſt of May, 1792."

15. "The remains of
Colonel Arthur Carter, lieutenant-colonel of his Majeſty's 20th regiment of light dragoons, and brigadier-general in the Weſt Indies.
He died 27th day of February, 1803,
aged 42 years;
29 of which were ſpent in his Majeſty's ſervice.
Friend of my heart, adieu!
In ſtrength of mind,
and every honorable ſentiment,
I never knew thy equal:
Never ſhall I forget thee:—
Even in the hour of mirth,
Gallant ſpirit,
I ſhall not forget thee.
R. R. GILLESPIE."

In the nave:

"HERE LIES THE BODY OF ZACHARY HEAWARDE, WHO DEPARTED THIS LIFE APRIL 2, 1664."

In the North aile:

1. "Here lies the body of Samuel Daniel, A.M.
late vicar of this pariſh,
who died October 30, 1735, aged 82.
He married Elizabeth, the daughter of John Barwell, late of Kegworth, in this county, gent.
Here alſo lieth the body of the ſaid Elizabeth,
the wife of the ſaid Samuel Daniel,
who died Aug. 19, 1740, aged 87.
Elizabeth Morgan, niece to Mrs. Daniel, died May 13, 1708."

In the South aile:

1. "Here lieth Mr. John Jarratt, of Mountſorell;
who departed this life Jan. 5, 1708, aged 53."

2. "Here lieth the body of Elizabeth, wife of William Bacon, who departed this life April the 10th, 1711,
aged 56 years."

3. "Here lieth the body of John Meakins, who departed this life March the 2d, anno Domini 1712, in the 51ſt yeare of his age."

4. "To the memory of John Dawſon, who departed this life May 9, 1783, aged 83 years."

5. "Jonathan Jarrat, died October the 10th, 1742,
aged 38 years."

6. "Beneath are depoſited the remains of Elizabeth, relict of the late John Dawſon, who departed this life Nov. 16, 1787, aged 79 years."

On flat ſtones in the croſs-paſſage from the North to the South door:

1. "Here lieth Anne,
the daughter of Henry and Elizabeth Conſtable.
She died Jan. 7, 1717, aged 6 months."

2. "Suſanna, daughter of Joſeph Doody, of the borough of Stafford, gent. and wife to John Newbold, of Rothley,
died Dec. 1, 1770, aged 71."

3. "John Newbold died April 6, 1775, aged 75."

Epitaphs in the old chapel at Rothley Temple:

1. "Here lie the remains of Anne, the daughter of Thomas and Mary Giſborne, of Yoxall Lodge, in the county of Stafford.
She was born April 24, 1755, and died on the 14th of May following."

2. "Katharine, the daughter of Thomas Babington,
eſq. and Lydia his wife, of this Temple, was born Auguſt the 24th, 1766,
and died the 3d of May, 1767."

3. "Francis, the fourth ſon of Thomas Babington, eſq.
and Lydia his wife, of this Temple, was born the 6th day of May, in the year 1764,
and died the 3d day of February, 1765."

4. "In memory of Mrs. Mary Cardale, widow of the rev. Mr. Joſeph Cardale, vicar of Hinckley, who departed this life
Oct. 14, 1778, aged 86."

5. "In memory of Mrs. Elizabeth Babington, wife of the rev. Matthew Babington, vicar of Rothley.
She departed this life on the 26th day of June, 1793,
aged 29 years."

6. "In memory of Thomas Babington, eſq.
of Temple Rothley,
who departed this life June 20, 1776, aged 61.
He left by his wife Lydia, daughter of the rev. Mr. Joſeph Cardale, four ſons and one daughter."

7. "In memory of Mrs. Lydia Babington, widow of the late Thomas Babington, eſq.
of Temple Rothley,
She departed this life the 4th day of May, 1791,
aged 64."

There are no monuments of the Templars within the church; but in the churchyard, by the aſſiſtance of Mr. Schnebbelie, I diſcovered in 1790, on a ſtone coffin nearly covered with earth and weeds, a figure from which the drawing in Plate CXXIX. was taken. Whatever may be the opinion concerning croſs-legged figures in other churches, there can be no doubt that this once elegant monument repreſented a genuine Knight Templar; perhaps ſome Maſter of Rothley. Before the abolition of the order of the Templars, it probably had a place in the church; and it would be highly creditable to the cultivated talents of the preſent owner of this fair and extenſive domain, if ſo venerable a relique of the Templars were again reſtored to its former ſituation. A very ſmall ſum would replace it in a manner that would reflect honour on the lord of the Soke.

On the South ſide is a beautiful Runic croſs, about 10 or 12 feet high, extremely well performed, tapering from the bottom, on the Weſt ſide of which ſome tracery work is carved; and ſomething of carving is alſo to be ſeen in other parts. At the foot lie three flat ſtones, as if placed for ſupports. There is no tradition concerning it. It is engraved in Plate CXXIX.

Epitaphs in the church-yard:

On a table-monument in the South part:

"Elizabeth Hall departed this life
March 9, 1786, aged 58 years.
Richard Jennings, gent. late of Nottingham, departed this life the 10th of March, 1791,
aged 62 years."

On upright ſtones:

1. "Depoſitum hic eſt quod mortale habuit
Tho. Some, juvenis pius, ſtudioſus.
In hanc viciniam literas quæſitum conceſſit;
mortem invenit, anno ætat. XIX, Salutis MDCCXXIII."

2. "Thomas Preſton, clerk, died April 12, 1740,
in the 79th year of his age.
Iſaac Preſton (his ſon) late clerk of this pariſh, died Dec. 3, 1777, aged 87 years.

Though far advanc'd in years I was,
God gave me ſtrength and ſight
To do my duty to the end;
In which I took delight."

[Thomas Preſton ſucceeded his father Iſaac as clerk in 1777, and died in 1790; when he was ſucceeded by his ſon Iſaac, the preſent clerk.]

3. "Ann Noon, of Mountſorrel, widow,
died July 24, 1740, aged 83."

4. "Thomas Brown, of Mountſorrell, died January 10, 1744, aged 31.

"Behold in me the life of man,
Compar'd by David to a ſpan.
Wife, mother, friends, lament no more,
Here's all the odds—I went before."

5. "Catharine Cort, daughter of Mr. James Cort, of Great Bowden, and wife of William Hunt, of Rothley Houſe, died Feb. 1, 1781, aged 58 years."

6. "Here lieth interred the body of Robert Skerrett, gent.
who departed this life the 11th day of December,
in the year of our Lord 1788,
in the 71ſt year of his age."

7. "Beneath are interred the remains of John Pitt, late of Mountſorrel, who died Auguſt 1ſt, 1795, aged 37 years.

"Expiring nature feels a ſolemn dread,
To quit this life, and join the ſilent dead.
Yet hope in God relieves the lab'ring mind,
And gives a taſte of pleaſures all refin'd;
Here pauſe, ſpectator! aſk thyſelf, have I
This hope in God, and thus prepar'd to die?"

8. "Here are departed the remains of Thomas, ſon of Thomas and Elizabeth Biddles, of Mountſorrel,
who died June 4, 1798, aged 14.
Alſo near this place lie four other ſons and two daughters, children of the above
Thomas and Elizabeth Biddles, whoſe tender hearts greatly lament theſe afflictive ſtrokes."

9. "Rachel Meers, of Mountſorrel, died Jan. 15, 1799,
aged 89."

10. "Dedicated to the memory of John, William, and Thomas, ſons of John and Ann Bodycoat;
John, died aged 2; William, aged 7; and Thomas, 1.

"Beneath this dreary rueful ſhade, Theſe lovely ſpotleſs babes are laid."

William Hunt 16 March, 1794, aged 66.
Stephen Hunt, died June 11, 1736, aged 53.
John Olderſhaw, died April 17, 1736, aged 53.
Elizabeth Olderſhaw, died 1767, aged 69.
Elizabeth Olderſhaw, died Nov. 8, 1743, aged 15.
Thomas Scampton 27 Oct. 1770, aged 78.
Elizabeth Scampton 21 Sept. 1773, aged 80.
Mary Burnaby, died Jan. 28, 1741, aged 84.
John Pagett, died Nov. 7, 1732, aged 56.
Barbara Pagett, his wife, died March 16, 1716, aged 40.
Joſeph Pagett, died April 25, 1783, aged 67.
Elizabeth Sewell, died Sept. 1, 1757, aged 82.
George Sewell, died Oct. 4, 1769, aged 69.
Martha Sewell, died Jan. 30, 1783, aged 82.
Thomas Hewes, died Dec. 31, 1783, aged 57.
Daniel Preſton, died Oct. 7, 1753, aged 57.
Anne Preſton, died Jan. 20, 1777, agad 77.
Matthew Smith, died July 1, 1787, aged 64.
Joſhua Timpſon, died Feb. 28, 1786, aged 65.
Anne Timpſon 11 Aug. 1796, aged 76.
Matthias Preſton, died Dec. 27, 1735, aged 67.
Elizabeth Preſton, died Aug. 11, 1765, aged 66.
Thomas Preſton, died April 4, 1752, aged 45.
Thomas Preſton, died Nov. 19, 1745, aged 12.
Sarah Preſton, died March 13, 1783, aged 75.
William Bloud, died Feb. 4, 1706, aged 84.
Elizabeth Burrows, died Nov. 12, 1764, aged 65.
Thomas Sibſon, died Feb. 22, 1736, aged 60.
Elizabeth Sibſon, died April 17, 1760, aged 88.
Richard Fowks, died Jan. 12, 1776, aged 80.
Matthew Parker, died Oct. 28, 1761, aged 72.
Anne Parker, died March 14, 1763, aged 70.
Thomas Walker, died Jan. 24, 1789, aged 76.
William Gamble, died July 30, 1787, aged 70.
Mary Gamble, died Jan. 25, 1798, aged 73.
Joſeph Porter, died Feb. 6, 1793, aged 79.
Sarah Porter, died Feb. 15, 1798, aged 82.
Suſanna Leake, died April 13, 1781, aged 71.
Sarah Pagett, died March 13, 1783, aged 75.
Jonathan Duffield, died March 3, 1798, aged 71.
William Brewer, died May 19, 1799, aged 83.

The North ſide of the churchyard is appropriated to the burials of the inhabitants of that part of Mountſorell which is within this pariſh.

Sarah, relict of John Noon, buried July 14, 1785, aged 57.

Walter Barrs, gent. of Mountſorell, died Oct. 28, 1752, aged 70.

Walter Barrs, of Mountſorell, died July 10, 1779, aged 49.

Elizabeth Wheatley, died June 18, 1773, aged 72.

Anne wife of William Buck, died Sept. 22, 1782, aged 46.

John Biddle, died Feb. 2, 1782, aged 59.

William Biddle, died May 2, 1780, aged 46.

Hugh Phipps, died June 12, 1781, aged 63.

PEDIGREE of BABINGTON of DETHICK; compiled from the ſeveral Viſitations of DERBYSHIRE and LEICESTRSHIRE.

John de Babington, lord of Over Babington and Nether Babington (now called Mickle Babington and Little Babington), in the county of Northumberland.=

William de Babington, 1271.=

Sir Barnard Babington, knt. lord of Babington in Derbyſhire.=

Sir John Babington, chief captain of Morlaix in Bretagne, knighted whilſt ſerving under king Edward III. in 1352.=

Sir John Babington, of Chilwell, co. Notts, knt.=Benedicta, dau. and heir of Simon Warde, of Cambridgeſhire, eſq.

1. Sir William Babington, made knight of the Bath at the coronation of king Henry VI.; chief baron of the Exchequer 1420; chief juſtice of the Common Pleas 1423; died 1445, æt. 74.=Margery, dau. and heir of ſir Peter Martell, of Chilwell, knt. died Feb. 2, 1442.

2. Thomas Babington[1], of Dethick, in right of his wife; he married at the age of 63.=Iſabel, dau. and heir of Robert Dethick, of Dethick, co. Derby, eſq. died 1435.

3. Arnold Babington, citizen of Norwich, and merchant of the Staple.

4. Norman, died 1441 without iſſue.=Mary, dau. of John lord Mowbray.

5. John Babington, of Aldrington.=Emma, dau. and heir of ſir Robert Knowles[2], knt.

1. John, died ſ. p.

2. William Babington, of Chilwell, eſq. died the evening before the feaſt of Pentecoſt, 1474.=Elizabeth, dau. and heir of John Gipthorpe, of Lincolnſhire, eſq.

3. Thomas, recorder of Nottingham, died ſ. p.

4. Robert Babington, eſq. died in 1464.=Maud, dau. and heir of Roger Archer, eſq.
See their deſcendants, p. 967.

Elizabeth, married to ſir Tho. Nevill, of Harleſton, knt. ſon of Ralph lord Raby.

John Babington, eſq. of Dethick, and lord of Kinſton, was ſlain in Boſworth field, 1485.=Iſabel, dau. of Henry Bradbourne, of le Hough, co. Derby; and widow of .... Rolleſton, of Rolleſton, co. Suff.; died March 18, 1486.

John Babington, of Knoll in Devonſhire.=Margaret, dau. and heir of ... Wenman of Devonſhire.

John Babington, ſon and heir.=Elizabeth, dau. and heir of Walter Finch, of Ottery St. Mary.

Sir John Babington[3], knt. died March 20, 1501.

.... Eltonhead, firſt huſband.=Etheldena, ſiſter and heir to ſir John, died Aug. 20, 1503.=Sir John Delves, knt. 2d huſband.

Sir Thomas Babington, of Dethick, died May 13, 1518[4].=Editha, dau. of Ralph Fitzherbert, of Norbury, co. Derby; ſecond wife; re-married to ... Liſter.

1. Beatrix, ma. Ralph Poole.
2. Anne, m. James Rolleſton.
3. Elizabeth, mar. Randolph Franceis.
4. Margaret, mar. Thomas Simon.

John Babington, of Ottery St. Mary.=Elizabeth, dau. of ... Holcombe, of Branſcomb, Devon, eſq.

Nicholas, ſon and heir.=Joan, dau. and heir of Henry Whiting, of Ottery St. Mary.

2. John.
3. Philip.

1. Walter; and, 2. Henry; both died ſ. p.

Elizabeth, da. and coheir=Sir Robert Sheffield, of Butterwick, grandfather of Edmund lord Sheffield[5].

Jane, d. and coheir.=Sir James Blount, kt. provoſt marſhal in the battle of Boſworth field, 1485.

Elizabeth, d. of John Ormond, eſq. of Alfreton, by Joan[6], da. and heir of ſir Wm. Charnock, knt. firſt wife; died Nov. 25, 1505.=1. Sir Anthony Babington, of Dethick, knt. eldeſt ſon (noticed among the patrons of Babington chantry[7] at Aſhover 1535); died 1544, æt. 69.=Katharine, da. of ſir J. Ferrers, of Derby, 2d wife.

2. John Babington, knight of Rhodes, commander of Rothley in 1526.
3. Ralph, LL.B. rector of Hintleſham, Suffolk, d. at Cambr.

4. Rowland; died 1548.=Jane Ridge, of Kinway.
(See p. 967.)

5. Humphrey Babington, of Temple Rothley, died 1544.=Eleanor, 3d dau. and coheir of John Beaumont, of Wedneſbury, c. Stafford, d. 1544.
(See other deſcendants, p. 965.)

6. Thomas, B. A. rector of Yelvertoft; died at Cambridge.

7. William Babington.=Joan, eldeſt da. and coheir of John Wedneſbury.

Anthony.=....

Martha.

8. Robert, died in the Temple, London, and was buried there.
9. George, d. an infant.

1. Elizabeth, died an infant.
2. Anne, married, firſt, to George Leeche, of Chatſworth, eſq.; 2dly, to Roger Greenehaugh, of Teverſall.
3. Catharine, marr. to George Chaworth, of Winerton, Notts, eſq.
4. Dorothy, married Robert Rolleſton, of Swarkſton, eſq.
5. Jane, married George Meverell, of Throwley, eſq.
6. Elizabeth, married Philip Okeover, of Okeover, eſq.

Thomas Babington, of Dethick, eſq. died April 21, 1560, æt. 46.=Catharine, dau. of ſir Henry Sacheverell, of Morley, co. Derby, knt.

1. George Babington, died ſ. p.=Anne, da. and coheir of ſir John Conſtable, of Kinolton; m. 2dly, to ſir Anthony Thorold.

2. John Babington.=Sanchia, da. and ſole heir of Richard Stanhope, eſq. of Rampton, Northamptonſhire.

Anne, married John, ſon of George lord Darcy of Aſton.

Frances, dau. of ſir John Markham, knt. firſt wife.=Henry Babington, of Dethick, eſq. b. 1530.=Mary, da. of George lord Darcy of Aſton, 2d wife.

Original Babington, of Rampton, married .... Galley.

John Babington.=.... Buſſy, of Hather.

1. Anthony Babington, eſq. of Dethick, and of Kinſton, Notts; ma. Margery, da. of John Draycot, of Paynſley; attainted 1586.

2. Francis Babington, of Kinſton 1587; m. Juliana, d. of Thos. Rowe, ald. of London.

3. George Babington, of Dethick 1587.=Helen, da. of H. Vine, of Aſhe in Surrey.

Thomas, died in his father's life-time.

John Babington, firſt huſband.=.... daughter of Henry Nevill.=Anthony Eyre, ſecond huſband.

Ferdinando Babington.=Anne, dau. of Robert Alvey, of Carcolſton.

1. Barbara, da. and coheir, mar. 1ſt, to .. Boſwell; 2dly, to William More, D. D.

2. Elizabeth, da. and coheir.=Sir Gervaſe Eyre, knt.

1. John Babington, æt. 32, 1672; ſervus Beaumont Dixie, de Selſton.
2. Ferdinando.
3. Cornelius.

Anthony Eyre, of Rampton, eſq.=Lucy, dau. of ſir John Digby, knt.

Mary, mar. to ſir John Newton, bart.

---

[1] Chief captain of the Engliſh adventurers in France. His daughter Emma had all his lands in Devonſhire.

[2] For this Thomas Babington (founder of a chantry in Aſhover church) and Iſabel his wife there is a monument, without date, on the North ſide of the chancel of Aſhover church. Their effigies are in ſtone, recumbent on an altar-tomb.

[3] Eſch. 31 May, 20 Henry VII.

[4] This appears from his epitaph on a flat ſtone in Aſhover church, with the figure of a ſkeleton in braſs.

[5] Thoroton, p. 151.

[6] Couſin and heir to Ralph Baſſet and John Engayne, barons; and to ſirs Robert Lathome, ... Caltoft, John Bret, Thomas Aylesbury, Thomas Keynes, knights. Thoroton, p. 12.

[7] Harl. MSS. 5809. p. 80.

PEDIGREE of BABINGTON, of TEMPLE ROTHLEY;

from the Viſitations of 1619 and 1681[1], continued from the Epitaphs in Rothley Church, and from the Regiſters.

Humphrey Babington, eſq. of Temple Rothley, fifth ſon of Thomas Babington, eſq. of Dethick; died 1544.=Eleanor, third dau. and coheir of John Beaumont, lord of Wedneſbury, co. Stafford; died 1544.

1. Thomas Babington, of Rothley; will dated Sept. 27, died Oct. 27, 1567.=Eleanor, dau. of Richard Humfrey, of Barton, co. Northampton, died 1570.

2. John Babington, of Newtown.= . . . .
Thomas Babington.

1. Margaret.

2. Jane, married to George Langham, of Gopſal, eſq.

3. Mary.

3. Zachary Babington, of Merton college, Oxford; LL.D. 1599; præcentor, prebendary, and chancellor of Lichfield, archdeacon of Nottingham, rector of Coſſington, co. Leiceſter, and of Sudbury, co. Derby; died about 1614.= . . . . Lowth.

William Babington.=
Zachary Babington.

4. Edmund.

1. Humfrey Babington, of Rothley, died June 7, 1611.=Margaret, dau. of Francis Cave, LL.D. of Bagrave, (See p. 290.)

2. Matthew Babington, eſq. of Coſſington, died 1615, æt. 71. He had four wives; (as ſtated in his epitaph, p 230.)

1. Eldeſt daughter, died unmarried.
2. Margaret, married Edward Vincent, of Peckleton.
3. Jane. married Stephen Everard, of Hether, co. Leic.
4. Mary, married ſir John Borough, of Borough, knight.

1. Thomas Babington, of Rothley, b. 1581.=Katharine, only da. of George Kendall, of Smithſby, co. Derby, died 1668.

2. Edward, a citizen.

3. Adrian, rector of Coſſington[2], died 1625.=Margaret, dau. of Henry Cave, of Barrow ſuper Soar, gent.
Humphrey Babington, D. D. joint founder of Barrow Hoſpital[3].

4. William Babington, a counſellor of the Inner Temple 1634.

1. Matthew Babington, of Rothley, born May 17, 1612; M. P. 1660; died 1669.=Anne, youngeſt dau. of Samſon Hopkins, alderman of Coventry; died Jan. 7, 1648, æt. 33.

3. Humphrey,
4. Henry,
5. Walter,
died ſ. p.

2. Thomas Babington, of Somerſome, co. Huntingdon, born Aug. 11, 1615; married Katharine, ſecond dau. of ſir Cornelius Vermuyden, of Kent; died at Cheſter in 1680.

1. Elizabeth, born Dec. 20, 1603; wife of Will. Danvers, of Swithland; died 1681, æt. 79.
2. Anne, born Jan. 9, 1604; wife of William Staveley, of Coſſington, died 1681, æt 78.
3. Margaret, born Sept. 22, 1607; wife of William Preſcot, citizen of London, died about 1679, æt. 72.
4. Eleanor, died unmarried.
5. Katharine, b. April 18, 1614, wife of Jon Whatton, eſquire of the body to king Cha. I.
6. Lucy, wife of Will. Whatton, of Newtown.

Elizabeth, da. of W. Jeſſon, of Coventry, died April 3, 1670.=1. Thomas Babington, eſq. æt 46 in 1681, and then in the commiſſion of the peace; died April 14, 1708, æt. 73.=Margaret, d of H. Hall, of Gretford, c. Lincoln, 2d wife; d. Feb. 12, 1723-4.

Thomas, died at the age of 6 months.

2. Matthew Babington, fellow of Trinity-coll. Cambr. died there 1680, æt. 36.

3. Will. Babington, gent. died Dec. 16, 1708, æt. 66.

1. Thomas Babington, born 1682; d. July 31, 1745, æt. 63.=Elizabeth, dau. of Ralph Keſing, eſq. of London, died June 30, 1729-30, æt. 44.

2. Rev. William Babington, rector of Coſſington, died Dec. 5, 1758, æt. 72.=Elizabeth . . . ., died Nov. 4, 1763, æt. 68.
1. Anne, died April 13, 1763, æt. 41.
2. Catharine, died March 19, 1762, æt. 29.

3. A ſon, died at 3 months old in or before 1681.

1. Jane, married ſir William Jeſſon, of Burley park, knt.; died April 30, 1668; and had iſſue William Jeſſon, æt. 12 in 1681.

2. Anne, married Richard Britton, of Dover; and had iſſue Robert Britton, æt. 10 in 1681.

3. Catharine, unmarried 1681.

4. Elizabeth, born Feb. 1, 1679-80; wife of . . . . . . Toak, of Dover.

1. Thomas, died an infant.
2. Thomas, died an infant.

3. Thomas Babington, eſq. born 1715; high-ſheriff in 1750; died 1776.=Lydia, dau. of the Rev. Joſeph Cardale, vicar of Hinckley, by Mary, dau. of the Rev. John Millicent.

4. Rev. William Babington, rector of Coſſington and vicar of Rothley; died May 14, 1783, æt. 61.

5. Matthew, born 1723; died 1727.

1. Elizabeth, born Feb. 1, 1679.

2. Anne, died an infant 1713.

3. Catharine, born 1714; died Feb. 11, 1756.

4. Frances, born 1716; died May 21, 1792.

1. Thomas Babington, eſq. born Dec. 18, 1758; high-ſheriff in 1780; M. P. for the borough of Leiceſter 1800, and again in 1802.=Jean, daughter of the Rev. John Macaulay, miniſter of the church and pariſh of Cardroſs in Dumbartonſhire, Scotland, and ſiſter to the preſent vicar of Rothley.

2. Rev. Matthew Babington, born June 24, 1761; vicar of Rothley 1787.=Eliz. Drake, Aug. 18, 1787, of Leiceſter; died in 1796.

3. Rev. William Babington, born March 11, 1763; rector of Coſſington 1787.=Elizabeth-Newbold Noble, dau. of the Rev. Henry-Lovell Noble, rector of Froleſworth.

4. Francis, born May 6, 1764; died in 1765.

5. Joſeph, born Jan. 12, 1768.

1. Mary, born April 28, 1760; married the Rev. Thomas Giſborne[4], rector of Coſſington, 1784—1787.

2. Katharine, b. Oct. 24, 1766; died an infant.

1. Thomas-Giſborne, born July 24, 1788.
2. Lydia, b. Nov. 8, 1789.
3 John, b. July 6, 1791.
4. Matthew, born Sept. 3, 1792.
5. George-Giſborne, b. Jan. 22, 1794.
6. Jean, b. Jan. 16, 1798.
7 Mary, b. June 17, 1799.
8. A ſon, born at Madeira, Jan. 30, 1803.

Matthew, b. 1788.
Elizabeth, b. 1791.

1. Elizabeth-Lydia, died an infant 1787.
2. William, born Dec. 10, 1790.
3. Samuel, born Nov. 28, 1792.
4. Jane-Giſborne, died an infant 1794.

---

[1] Entered at Leiceſter, March 24, 1681-2, by "Thomas Bywater, in behalf, and by direction, of my maſter, Thomas Babington, eſq."; and counterſigned "Thomas Babington."

[2] See p. 228.

[3] See p. 68.

[4] Of this excellent writer, ſee before, under Coſſington, p. 229.

CALDWELL and WYKEHAM.

CALDWELL, antiently written Cadwall and Caudwell, belonged formerly to the Knights Templars, to whom it was given by king Richard I; and after their ſuppreſſion to the Knights Hoſpitallers of St. John of Jeruſalem. It is within the hundred of Eaſt Goſcote, though ſituated in the very centre of Framland hundred; bounded by Waltham on the Eaſt; Scalford on the Weſt; Goadby Marwood on the North; and Goldſmith's Grange on the South; and is one of the peculiars of Rothley Temple, where the inhabitants attend, and do ſuit of court. In the eccleſiaſtical diviſion of the county it is within the deanry of Akeley.

WIKEHAM is another ſmall hamlet, ſituated about a mile to the North of Cauldwell, and with it is included in the Soke of Rothley; from which each of theſe little townſhips is diſtant about 12 miles.

At the general ſurvey, Caldwelle and Wiche are noticed as parcel of the royal manor of Rodelie; containing together four ploughlands, and two mills of two ſhillings value [1].

In the Itinerary of 1280, Caldwell, Wikeham, Grimſton, and Wartnaby, anſwered collectively as one vill.

In a book of fifteenths and tenths granted by the laity in 1416, Caldwell and Wikeham were rated at £1. 15*s*.; and in the ſubſidy of 1445, at the ſame ſum; but 2*s*. were then abated.

In 1371, William de Ferrars of Groby at his death had two knights fees in Sibeſden, Schepey, Hegham, and Wikeham, which John Burdet, couſin and heir of Thomas de Cavenby, held [2].

In 1387, Henry de Ferrars of Groby, knight, at his death, had two knights fees in Sibeſden, Shepey, Hegham, and Wikeham, which John Burdet, knt. held [3].

May 1, 1526, a leaſe was granted, by the prior and brethren of the hoſpital of St. John of Jeruſalem, to Barnaby and Baldwin Somer, of Loughborough, gentlemen, of the tithes of the villages of Cawdwell, Wycame, and Grymeſton, at an annual rent of £9. 6*s*. 8*d*. [4]

In 1552, ſir William Brabazon, knight, at his death, was ſeiſed of the manor of Wikeham, held of the king, as of his duchy of Lancaſter [5].

By an inquiſition taken at Mountſorell, Jan. 22, 1593, it was found that Richard Wightman, at his death, was ſeiſed of the manor or capital meſſuage of Wikeham; three tofts and 11 virgates of land there; a cloſe or paſture, called Spiceley Hill, in Wikeham, held of the queen, in capite, by the ſervice of an hundredth part of one knight's fee; alſo a meſſuage, ſix furlongs and two virgates of land in Wikeham, in tenure of Peirce Berckley, held of the queen, in capite, by knight's ſervice; that he died Dec. 12 then paſt; and that William Wightman, his ſon and heir, was 17 years old the 29th of September laſt [6].

In 1596, ſir George Villiers of Brokeſby held lands at Caldwell [7].

The freeholders in Caldwell and Wickham, in 1630, were Chriſtopher Smith and Robert Stokes.

In 1655, there was collected, in Caldwell, Wikeham, and Wartnaby, for the uſe of the poor Proteſtants in Piedmont, the ſum of £1. 7*s*. 9*d*.

Sept. 13, 1729. In the pariſh of Wikeham is now living a maid, a woman grown, one Elizabeth, the daughter of Robert Dugſon, who was born deaf and dumb; yet ſo very nimble in obſerving and underſtanding what people do, that ſhe often ſets her neighbours together by the ears by ſigning and raiſing ſlanders in dumb ſhew [8]."

In 1777, an act was paſſed for dividing and incloſing the open and common fields, common meadows, common paſtures, and other commonable lands, lying and being in Wikeham and Caudwell, in the pariſh of Rothley, computed to be 26 yard-lands and an half, and to contain about 750 acres; in which Wikeham and Caudwell are deſcribed as parcel of the manor and ſoke, and within the peculiar and exempt juriſdiction of Rothley, belonging to Thomas Babington, eſq. then an infant; who was alſo patron of the vicarage of Rothley, of which Wikeham and Caudwell are members; and the chapel in Caudwell belongeth to the mother church of Rothley. Mr. Babington, as lord of the manor and ſoke of Rothley, was entitled not only to the ſoil of all the waſte grounds in Wikeham and Caudwell, but alſo to an alienation fine from every purchaſer of lands or hereditaments within the ſaid manor, who had not lands or hereditaments in the ſaid manor at the time of ſuch purchaſe, of one ſhilling in the pound for every pound of the conſideration money of ſuch purchaſe; and was entitled to divers rents, fees, and other privileges and royalties, incident to the ſaid manor and ſoke. The duke of Rutland was impropriator of the great tithes; and William Babington, clerk, vicar and incumbent of Rothley, was entitled to one yard-land and certain common rights by way of glebe, and to the tithes of wool and lamb, and all other vicarial tithes. The duke of Rutland, Edmund biſhop of Ely, the chaplain and poor of Wigſton's Hoſpital, Joſeph Girdler, eſq. the Rev. Henry Lovell Noble, William Wartnaby, Thomas Friſby, Edward Stokes junior, and others, were proprietors of lands. To the lord of the manor an allotment of 20 ſhillings a year was made for his right of common, with a full reſervation of every manerial right; to the impropriator and vicar a ſeventh of the common field and a tenth of the homeſteads, in lieu of all great and ſmall tithes, except only on thoſe homeſteads and old incloſures which had no intereſt in the common field; and except fees for burying in the chapel or chapel-yard at Caudwell, mortuaries, ſurplices, and other accuſtomed vicarial fees.

In 1722, five freeholders polled from Caldwell, and three from Wykeham; and in 1775, 14 names occur from the two hamlets.

The money raiſed and expended for the poor in theſe two hamlets in 1776, and in 1783—1785, may be ſeen under Wartnaby, p. 984.

The Regiſters are extremely imperfect: the oldeſt met with begins in 1702. Average baptiſms for 20 years appear to be rather more than 3 in the year; and burials more than 2. For 20 years, 1770—1790, more than 4 baptiſms yearly; and about 2½ burials; and ſomewhat more than 20 marriages in 20 years.

In 1790, there were 30 families in the pariſh; 15 in Caldwell, and the ſame number at Wikeham.

By the return made to parliament in 1801, Wickham and Caldwell, miſcalled *Chad*well (both in Eaſt Goſcote), contained 25 houſes; the number of males was 50, of females 55; total, 105; of whom 50 were chiefly employed in agriculture.

There is a charity of £20. by whom left is not mentioned (now in the poſſeſſion of widow Inatt); the intereſt of which is diſtributed among the poor, yearly on old St. Thomas, by the churchwardens and overſeers of the poor.

As parcel of the Soke of Rothley, the manors of Caldwell and Wykeham are now the property of Thomas Babington, eſq.; but the duke of Rutland has the impropriation; and Mr. Stokes of Melton has the chief property there.

---

[1] "In Caldeuuelle & Wiche 4 carucatæ terræ, & 2 molini de 2 ſolidis." Domeſday, fol. 230. b. 1.

[2] Eſch. 45 Edw. III. N° 22. Leic.

[3] Eſch. 11 Ric. II. N° 26. Leic.

[4] Cotton MSS. Nero E. VI. p. cclxxxviii.

[5] Eſch. 6 Edw. VI.

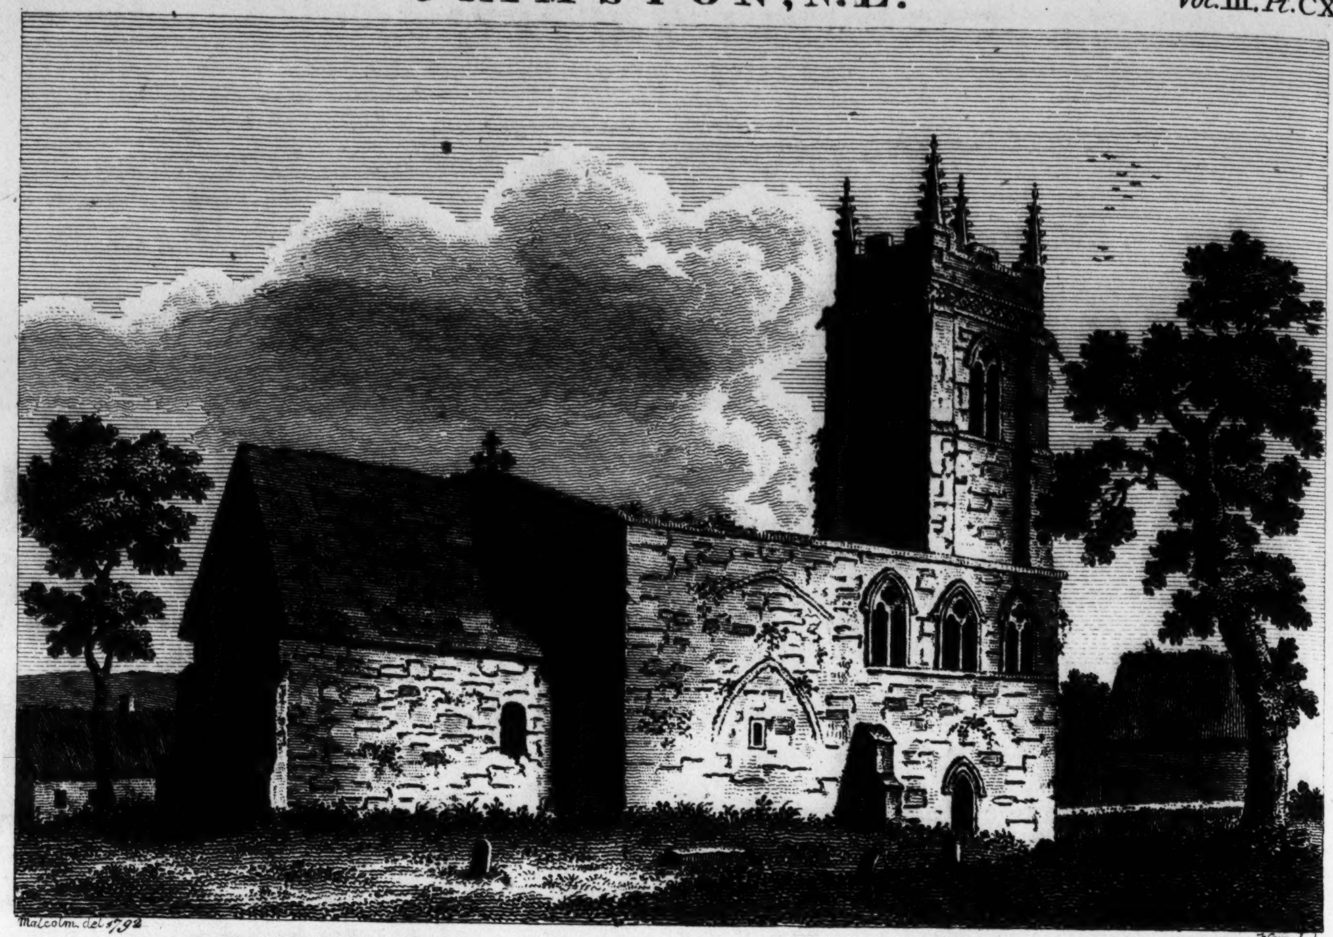
[6] Eſch. 36 Eliz.

[7] Burton, MS.

[8] Peck's MS Collection towards a Natural Hiſtory of Leiceſterſhire, &c.

GRIMSTON, N.E.

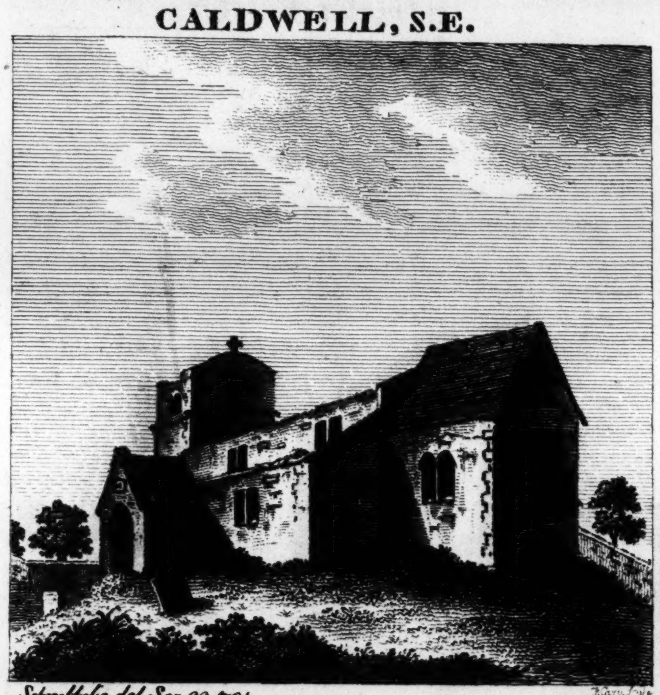
Vol. III. Pl. CXXXI. p. 967.



Malcolm del 1792

F. Cary Sculp

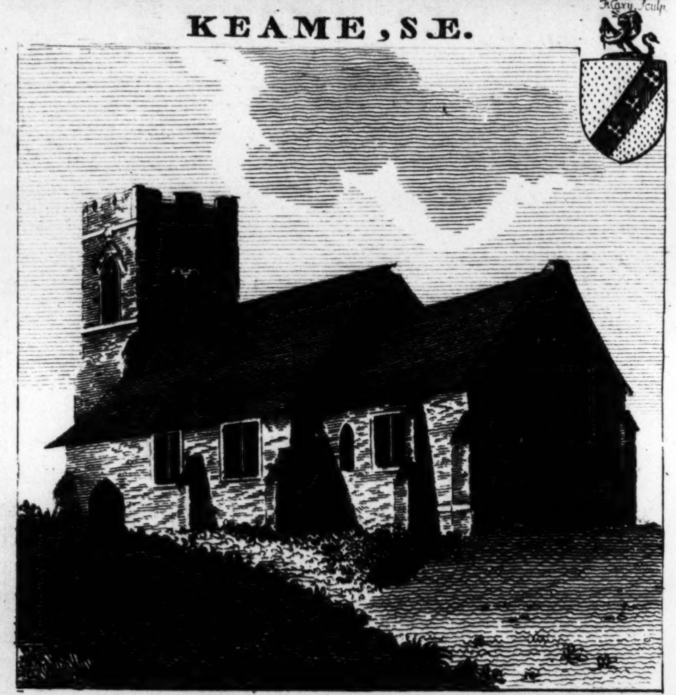
CALDWELL, S.E.



Schnebbelie del. Sep. 22. 1791.

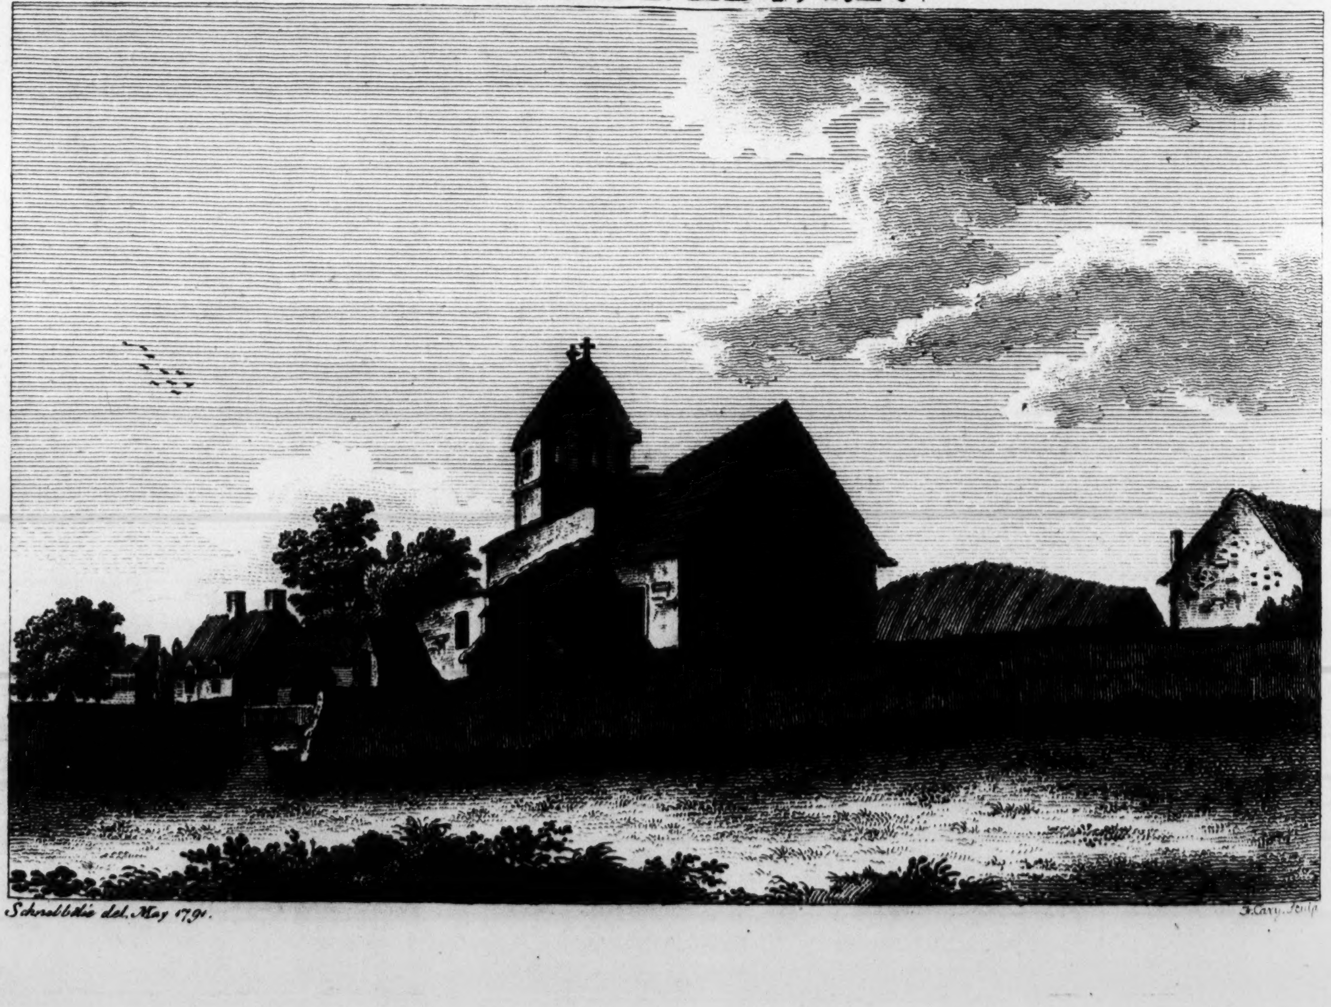
F. Cary Sculp

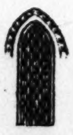
KEAME, S.E.

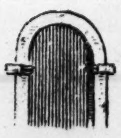


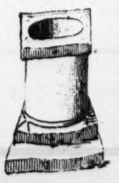
Prattent del. et sc. 1793.

WARTNABY, S.E.









Schnebbelie del. May 1791.

F. Cary. Sculp

The CHAPEL, (ſee Plate CXXXI.)

dedicated to St. Mary, conſiſts of a nave and North aile leaded, and a ſlated chancel. The South aile has been deſtroyed, and is now walled out.

At the Weſt end of the nave is the ſteeple, a ſmall ſtone tower, wherein hang three little old bells, which are thus inſcribed:

1. "Jhesus Nazarenus Rex Judeorum."
2. "Sancti Petri.
3. "Ave Maria."

Pointed, elliptical, and circular arches appear within the chapel, which is but a plain building, without any thing elſe remarkable.

This chapel ſerves alſo for the neighbouring village of Wikeham; whence the proverb,

"Wikeham and Caldwell are built of a ſtone, Caldwell hath a church, but Wikeham hath none."

Wyrley, who viſited this chapel about 1590, ſays, "Caudwell nullum ſcutum oſtendit;" nor are there at preſent in it any arms or monuments.

In 1552, the commiſſioners reported that the chapel of Caldwell and Wikeham contained,

"In primis, three belles, a ſaunce bell, and a handbell.
Itm, a challice ſtollen.
Itm, a cope which was ſtollen.
Itm, a red veſtement wyth an albe.
Itm, a ſuete of veſtementes.
Itm, ij old veſtementes, wyth two albes."

The curate in 1729 was the Rev. Robert Jones, then rector of Kingſton, to whom it was worth about £18. a year.

The preſent curate, to whom it is worth about £.25 a year, is the Rev. John Ivor.

The wake is kept on the 8th day of September (the Nativity of the Bleſſed Virgin) be the ſame Sunday or week-day.

PEDIGREE of BABINGTON of OXFORDSHIRE.

Robert Babington, of Lower Kiddington, Oxfordſhire, died 1464. = Maud, daughter and heir of Roger Archer, eſq. by Alice, daughter and heir of Robert Viner, eſq.

William Babington[1]. = Helen, daughter of ſir Richard Illingworth, chief baron of the exchequer, K. B.
Joan, married John Fitzherbert, of Etwall, co. Derby, eſq.

William Babington. = Elizabeth, daughter of C. Clarell, of Northamptonſhire.
Dorothy, married John Fitzherbert, of Etwall, co. Derby, eſq.

Thomas Babington, of Kiddington, co. Oxford, eſq. firſt warden of the Fleet. = Margaret, daughter of . . . . . Haſlewood, of Northampton, eſq.

2. Edmund. = Joan, dau. and coheir of . . . Forteſcue, of Knightſbridge, co. Middleſex.
Elizabeth, da. of . . . . Golbourne, of Weſt Cheſter, eſq. 1ſt wife. = Sir William Babington, of Kiddington, knt. ſon and heir, buried at Kiddington. = Margaret, ſiſter to ſir Jarret Croker, of Hook Norton, co. Oxon, knt. 2d wife.
1. Anne, m. Avery Uvedale, of Marick, c. Richmond, eſq.
2. Elizabeth, marr. Fulk Haſlewood, of Wick, co. Worceſter, eſq.
4. Mary, m. Wm. Brett, of Rotherby, co. Leiceſter, eſq.
3. Edward.

1. Henry. 2. Clarell. 3. Thos.
1. Anne. 2. Catharine. 3. Elizabeth.
1. Philip Babington. = Meriell, 3d d. of ſir John Goodwin, of Wynehall, knt.
2. Chas.
Mary, mar. Tho. Newton, of Chaddeſton, co. Derby, eſq.
Elizabeth, m. Wm. Child, of Penſwick, co. Worceſter, eſq.
3. John. = ... da. of . . . . . Uvedale, of Mackſey, in Eſſex.
4. Thomas. 5. Hercules.
Margaret. Dorothy. Jane.

Henry Babington, ſon and heir, born 1581. = Anne, dau. of Richard Jenkinſon, of Tunſtall, co. Norfolk.
2. John. 3. Robert.
4. William. 5. Michael.
6. Charles.
1. Mary.
2. Margaret. 3. Lettice.

William, ſon and heir.

---

[1] Richard Illingworth, chief baron of the exchequer, William Babington, eſq. and others, feoffees of William, ſon and heir of Robert Babington, preſented to the church of Aſterley in Oxfordſhire 1566.

PEDIGREE of BABINGTON of DERBY.

Sir Richard Babington, fourth ſon of ſir Thomas Babington of Dethick, buried in St. Peter's church, Derby, June 30, 1548. = Jane, daughter of . . . . Ridge, of Kinva.

1. Henry Babington, died before his father. = ...
2. Auguſtine Babington.
3. Michael Babington, of Derby, 1611. = ...

Francis Babington, of Derby, a twin child.
John, who ſold Normanton and other lands about D[illegible]ſhire.
Mary[1], died at Oxford 1632.

---

[1] See her epitaph, p. 955.

GADDESBY,

GADDESBY,

a conſiderable village, parcel of the Soke of Rothley, "is placed below Aſhby Folvile, on the brook which cometh from Laund abbey to Ouſton abbey, and ſo to Twiford, and then to Aſhby and Gaddeſby [1]." It is nine miles diſtant from Leiceſter, and ſix from Melton Mowbray; is bounded by Aſhby Folvile and Bareſby on the South and South-eaſt; by Friſby on the Wreke and Kirkby Beler on the North and North-eaſt; by Rereſby on the Weſt; by Brokeſby and Rotherby on the North-weſt; and by Queneborough on the South-weſt. It is within the hundred of Eaſt Goſcote; and, in the eccleſiaſtical diviſion of the county, is part of the deanry of Akeley.

Gaddeſby is noticed in the general ſurvey as a member of Rodolei, containing eight ploughlands and three oxgangs, and 12 acres of meadow [2]. One ploughland, four acres of meadow, and a mill of three ſhillings value, were at the ſame time held by earl Hugo of the king, as parcel of the manor of Barrow [3]; and one ploughland and a half, which in the time of king Edward employed one plough, and was worth five ſhillings, continued of the ſame value at the general ſurvey, when it was held by Feggo under the counteſs Judith. One plough was in the demeſne, with one bordar. There were three acres of meadow, and a mill of twelve-pence value.

Half a ploughland alſo in this lordſhip, which in the time of king Edward employed half a plough, and was worth five ſhillings, continued of the ſame value at the general ſurvey, when it was held by Othingar under the counteſs Judith. Half a plough was then alſo employed; and there were two acres of meadow, and a mill of two ſhillings value [4].

In the Itinerary of 1280, Gaddeſby, Syſton, and Rereſby, anſwered collectively as one vill.

This village was by king Henry III. given with Rothley (of which it was then a member) to the Knights Templars; and, after their ſuppreſſion, came to the Knights Hoſpitallers of St. John of Jeruſalem, who remained lords of it till their diſſolution.

In 1298, Henry ſon of John de Bracebrigge, who was outlawed for the felony which he did, held one meſſuage and a bovate of land, with the appurtenances, in Gaddeſby, of Robert de Folvile [5].

In 1326, Robert de Gaddeſby had permiſſion to found a chantry [6].

By a book of knight's fees in the reign of king Edward VII. it appears that Euſtace de Folvile then held two knight's fees in Aſhby Folvile, Newbold Folvile, and Gaddeſby, of the fee of William Brewes and Iſabella his wife [7].

In 1346, the prior of Trentham (on the aid then granted for knighting Edward of Woodſtock, the king's eldeſt ſon) was aſſeſſed 2*s.* for a twentieth part of one knight's fee in Gaddeſby, parcel of the fee of Cheſter and Huntingdon [8].

The manor and lordſhip of Gaddeſby were afterwards purchaſed by Lebbeus Derby (deſcended from Thomas de Derby, who had a conſiderable freehold there in 1400); whoſe daughter and heir-general brought it in marriage to John Eyton; and it was again transferred by an heir female (as is ſhewed in the following deſcent), to Mr. Henry Pilkington; who in 1631 was lord thereof in his wife's right [9]; and from whom it was purchaſed by Samuel Bordman [10]; who in 1635 had a grant of lands in this county jointly with Ralph Cottgrave [11].

Pedigree of DERBY and EYTON, of GADDESBY. (From the Viſitation of 1619.)

Arms of Derby: Argent, a feſs Gules, between three ſiniſter wings Sable, Creſt, an eagle cloſe proper, with a ſnake in his beak; Plate CXXXII. fig. 1.

Arms of Eyton: 1. and 4. Or, a frett Azure, Eyton; 2. Barry of ſix, Ermine and Gules, Huſſey; 3. Derby. Creſt, a lion's head eraſed Argent, devouring a tun. fig. 2.

Thomas de Derby, 1400.=. . . . .

Thomas Derby, of Gaddeſby, 1411 and 1451.=. . . .

Everard Derby =. . . .

William Derby [12] of Gaddeſby, died 1496.=. . . .

Everard Derby, of Gaddeſby, died in 1526.=Mary, dau. and coheir of Godfrey Somerſhall and Agnes, daughter and coheir of John Malory, of Walton (diſinherited.)

1. Everard Derby, of Walton, gent. died March 28, 1519.=Rebecca . . . . died May 8, 1569.
2. Lebbeus Derby, of Gaddeſby, died in 1561.=Anne, dau. of Thomas Digby, of Olney, co. Bucks, knight.

Elizabeth, dau. and heir, aged 30, 3 Eliz.=Edward Eyton (ſon of Richard Eyton, of Perie, co. Stafford, by Mary, dau. of William Braſbridge), of Gaddeſby, in right of his wife.

1. Simon Eyton, of Gaddeſby, and of Eyton, Salop, 1608.=Mary, eldeſt dau. of Tho. Aſhby, of Loſeby, eſq.
2. Anthony Eyton, of Gaddeſby, 1619.=. . . . dau. of . . . . Grey, of Newtown.

Anne, dau. and heir.=Henry Pilkington, of Borough (ſon of Robert, by the dau. and heir of . . . Singleton of Lancaſhire) lord of Gaddeſby in right of his wife, 1619.

1. Iſaac, æt. 14 1619.
1. Damaris.
2. Apula.
3. Priſcilla.
4. Deborah.

1. Henry Pilkington, of Gaddeſby, æt. 12, 1619.=Mary, dau. of the Rev. Tobias Heyrick, vicar of Houghton, ſon of ald. Rob. Heyrick, of Leiceſter.
2. William, æt. 8.
3. Robert, æt. 6.
4. Thomas, æt. 4.

In the Regiſter of the abbey of St. Mary de Pratis at Leiceſter this lordſhip is thus noticed:

"Gaddeſby eſt capella de Role, habens capellanum ſuum reſidentem, & omnia que matrix eccleſia habet; & reſpondet pro omnibus ſinodalibus, &c. ut in matriculo epiſcopi.

Habemus in Gadſby, ex dono Roberti filii Rogeri, pro unâ virgatâ terre quam Reginaldus filius Nicholai tenet de ipſo, XVIIId. per annum, ad veſtimenta canonicorum invenienda.

---

[1] Wyrley, MS.

[2] In Gadeſbie 8 carucatæ terræ & 3 bovatæ, & 12 acræ prati." Domeſday, fol. 230. b. 1.

[3] "In Gadeſbi 1 carucata terre, & 4 acræ prati; & molinum 3 ſolidorum." Ibid. fol. 237. a. 1.

[4] "Feggo tenet de Co[mitiſſâ Juditâ] 1 carucatam terre & dimidiam in Gadeſbi. Ibi 1 caruca fuit. Nunc in dominico 2 carucæ cum 2 bordariis. Ibi molinum de 12 denariis, & 3 acræ prati. Valuit, & valet, 5 ſolidos.—Othingarus tenet de Comitiſſâ dimidiam carucatam terræ in Gadeſbi. Ibi fuit dimidia carucæ; modò eſt; & 2 acræ prati; & dimidia pars molini de 2 ſolidis. Valuit, & valet, 5 ſolidos." Ibid. fol. 236. b. 1.

[5] Eſch. 26 Edw. I. N° 45. Leic.

[6] Ad quod dampn. 16 Edw. II. N° 86; & Eſch. 17 Edw. II.

[7] Woodford Chartulary, Cotton MSS. Claudius A. XIII. p. 237. b.

[8] Rot. Aux. 20 Edw. III.

[9] Burton, MS.

[10] MS. Staveley.

[11] 4 Pars Original. 11 Car. I. Rot. 68.

[12] See his epitaph, p. 975.

Habemus ibidem, ex dono Ricardi de Gadſby, totam terram ſuam & pratum quod habuit in eadem villâ, ex utrâque ponte aque que dicitur Hardingburn; ſcilicet, a capite duorum ſelionum ſuorum in Brocfurlong juxta predictam aquam; in longitudine quatuordecim perticarum uſque partem auſtralem, in latitudine verò ad quantitatem ſelionum predictarum.

Habuimus ibidem, ex dono Ricardi filii Ricardi de Gadſby, &c. decem acras & octo terre, & unam rodam in campis de Gadſby; ſcilicet, decem acras ex unâ parte ville, & octo ex alterâ; unum meſſuagium, unum croftum, & unum toftum, ut patet in cartâ. Item dedit nobis per aliam cartam octo acras terre, ut patet in cartâ.

Habemus idem, ex dono Radulphi filii Galfridi de Gadſby, &c. unam ſelionem in Langelond, que jacet juxta parcellam canonicorum Leyc', ad molendinum de Newboth uſque partem auſtralem, in longitudine quinquaginta trium perticarum.

Require terrarium de predictis terris in terrario fratris W. Charyte.

Mem', quod O. Dei gratiâ abbas Leyc' & ejuſdem loci conventus dederunt & per cartam ſuam confirmaverunt Reginaldo filio Rogeri Ivonis unam bovatam terre cum pertinentiis in Gadſby, continentem xviii acras & unam rodam, cum toſto; &, in augmentum illius bovate, unam rodam & dimidiam in Langlond, ad hoſtium molendini de Gadſby; & dimidiam rodam prati quam Robertus Prepoſitus & Godfridus dederunt abbati & conventui, reddendo inde annuatim eis iiiis̄. iđ. Jam verò reddit nobis niſi iis̄. viđ.

Johannes Wygynton tenet predicta; ſcilicet, unam bovatam continentem ut ſupra, cum toſto, &c. Reddit iis̄. viđ. & ſectam curie.

Habuimus quondam de uno aquatico molendino de Newbold xiis̄. per annum ibidem. Item de eodem molendino aquatico xxxs̄.; ſcilicet, de molendino de Newbold.

Et nos habuimus omnia bona illius[1], & non dominus rex Edwardus IV, anno Domini m°cccc°lxix°."[2]

In a book of fifteenths and tenths, granted by the laity in 1416, Gaddeſby was rated at £3. 18*s.*; in the ſubſidy of 1445 at the ſame ſum; and 9*s.* 9*d.* abated.

In 1432, John duke of Norfolk, at his death, was ſeiſed of a moiety of one knight's fee in Gaddeſby, parcel of the manor of Sileby, which the heirs of Reginald Lathbury then held[3].

The family of Dannett were long ſeated at Gaddeſby, as appears from the Viſitation of 1619[4]:

Arms of Dannett: Sable, gutté de ſang; on a canton Argent, a mullet of the firſt. Creſt, on a wreath, a greyhound's head Sable, ſtuds and buckles Azure, gorged with a collar Argent; Plate CXXXII. fig. 3.

Arms of Chamber: 1. and 4. Ermine, a feſs chequé Or and Gules, Chamber; 2. Dannett; 3. Gules, a feſs between three birds, within a border engrailed Or; 4. Gules, a chevron between three towers Or. Creſt, out of a ducal coronet, Or, three holly-leaves Vert; fig. 4.

Henry Bromwich. = Elizabeth. = John Wheatley, of Caſtle Bromwich, 1355. | Thomas Dannett[5], of Leiceſterſhire. = Margaret, dau. to ſir William Skewſhall, knight, lord chief juſtice of England.

Iſabel, dau. and heir; releaſed Elizabeth and John Wheatley of all her right in Caſtle Bromwich, 1360. | William Wheatley, 1404. = | Sir William Danett, knight. = Agnes, dau. and coheir to .... Allen, of Devonſhire.

Thomaſine, dau. and heir of William Wheatley. = John Dannett, of Leiceſter, proved by evidence 4 Oct. 1461. | William Dannett. = ... dau. to .... Walter Deincourt.

Richard Chamber, of Gaddeſby, alias Arden, temp. Hen. VI. = Eleanor, dau. and coheir to John Dannett, of Gaddeſby. | Elizabeth, wife to John Bedford, alias Sandey. | Sir Richard Dannett, knt.

Elizabeth, dau. to Bartholomew Villers; firſt wife. = William Chamber, temp. Hen. VII. = ... dau. to ... Mallory, of Walton; ſecond wife. = Margaret, dau. to Tho. Lathbury[6], of Derbyſhire; third wife.

1. William Chamber, eſq. of Gaddeſby, died ſ. p. = ... dau. to .... Aſhby, of Loſeby. | 2. Richard Chamber, of Gaddeſby, and lord of half the Nether lordſhip of South Croxton[7], died 1558. = Barbara, dau. to William Pochin, of Leiceſter.

1. William Chamber, eldeſt ſon, died ſ. p. 1564. | John Chamber, ſon and heir, æt. 26, 1575. | Mary[8], died Feb. 19, 1578; buried at South Croxton. = John Barnes, of Danett's Hall, South Croxton. | Elizabeth.

1. William Barnes. | 2. John Barnes. | 1. Elizabeth. | 2. Dorcas.

The Rental of Bartholomew Brokeſby, who was a conſiderable land-holder at Gaddeſby in 1465, is preſerved in the Bodleian Library at Oxford; and forms a large octavo volume, under the title of "Regiſtrum Bartholomei Brokesby de terris & tenementis ſuis in villis infraſcriptis[9]; videlicet,

In Thorpe Ernald	—		fol. 1
Alnote Crofte	—	—	2
Melton	—	—	4
Abbeketilby and Holwelle		—	69
Melton	—	—	82
Litul Dalby	—	—	97
Aſheby Folvile	—	—	103
Gaddesby	—	—	105."

Fol. 139. b "Rentale tenementorum Bartholomei Brokesby in Gaddesby, factum anno regni Regis Henrici Sexti viceſimo tercio.

Barkeby	—	—	f. 140
Rent' ibid.		—	142 b.
Houby	—	—	142 b.
Rent' ibid.		—	143 b.
Werknamby	—	—	144
Friſeby	—	—	169
Rethurby	—	—	185—192 b.

The Chartulary is on vellum; and on a blank leaf at the beginning is "Carta de Friſeby," in two folio pages. At the bottom of the two firſt pages are the arms of Brokeſby, Barry, nebulé of ſix, Or and Gules; on a canton of the ſecond a mullet round pierced Or. Plate CXXXII. fig. 7; and a merchant's mark, fig. 8.

Another Chartulary, deſcribing the property of the Woodford family, adds, "Here may ye ſee, and truly underſtand, the franchiſes that pertain to the manor of Aſhby Folvill, with the appurtenance in Newboult Folvill, and to Aſhby fee in Gaddeſby; the which manors and tenements, in the towns aforeſaid, are holden of the Prince of England, as of the honour of Huntingdon, as Aſhby Folvill, Newboult Folvill, and Gaddeſby that is of Aſhby fee. Theſe franchiſes, as granted by king Henry III. to John le Scot earl of Cheſter and Huntingdon, and confirmed in 1303 by king Edward I. Dec. 5, anno regni 31°, included the liberty of ſac and ſoc, with various other peculiar privileges and immunities[10].

---

[1] It does not appear by the Original to whom this illius applies.

[2] Charyte's Rentale, fol. lix. a.—In the Terrier referred to under Barkby, p. 45, Gaddeſby fills one page.

[3] Eſch. 4 Hen. VI. N° 43. Leic.

[4] A Pedigree of Dannett of South Croxton, has already been given in p. 235.

[5] See vol. III. p 257.

[6] Arms of Wheatley; Argent, on a chief Gules, three garbs Argent; fig. 5.

[7] Arms of Lathbury; Barry of ſix, Argent and Azure; on a canton Or, a martlet Sable; fig. 6.

[8] In her epitaph, p. 237, ſhe is called daughter of Richard Chamber.

[9] MS. Wood, Empt. 7.

[10] Woodford Chartulary in the Britiſh Muſeum, p. 233.

Mr William Ford, of Coventry, merchant of the Staple, in 1515, gave by will, inter alia, to his foundation of the Grey Friars in Coventry, a meſſuage and croft in Gaddeſby, and another croft and 132 acres of land, arable and meadow, in the fields of Gaddeſby, of the yearly rent of £2. 1*s*. 4*d*.; to which large additions were made by his executor William Wigſton of Leiceſter, merchant of the Staple[1].

In 1575, certain lands and tenements in Gaddeſby, Bareſby, and Crowſon, parcel of the preceptory of Rothley, of the yearly value of 42*s*. were deviſed for 20 years to Robert Gaſcoigne.

Eleanor, daughter and heir of John Danett, married Richard Chamber; and had iſſue William; who had iſſue Richard; who had iſſue John; who by patent, dated 3 March, 1581, under the ſeal of the king at Arms, had a creſt granted to his coat[2].

John Chamber, eſq. appears to have died without iſſue; and was ſucceeded in part of his property at Gaddesby by the children of his ſiſter, Mrs. Mary Barnes of South Croxton; and in the remainder by his relation the Rev. John Chamber, M. A. whoſe hiſtory will be beſt given from his epitaph in the North aile of Bray's chapel in the collegiate church of Windſor, p. 392.

"Johanni Chamber, ſocio primùm Collegii
Merton, 1569, dein Etonenſis,
1582, poſtremum Canonico hujus
Eccleſiæ, 1601.
Theologo, Medico, Mathematico, inſigni.
Henr. Neville, & Henric. Saville, milites, poſuere.
Natus apud Swillington, in comitat. Ebor.
1546, menſe Maio; obiit Altonæ
1604, ineunte Auguſto.
Corpus hoc marmore humatum jacet.
Præter alia legavit moriens Collegio Mertonenſi mille libras[3]."

"Mr. Chamber of Gaddeſby left a yard-land, conſiſting of 20 acres or more, together with houſe and homeſtead. Part of the money ariſing from this land is to put out as apprentices certain poor boys of the pariſh of Gaddeſby at Eaſter time of the year; and the remainder to be given, with an eſtate lying at Scraptoft in this county, of the conſideration of £40. or £50. a year, to the augmentation of four poor vicarages; viz. Northmerſton, co. Bucks; Daddington, co. Oxon; Caxton, co. Cambridge; and Waddon, co. Cambridge. I have ſeen and peruſed Mr. Chamber's will, who died one of the canons of Windſor in 1604. He left the dean and canons in truſt for the ſame. It is very authentic, and a pious will, and well intentioned and clear. The peruſal of the ſame went through my hands when I was curate for Gaddesby in the neighbourhood 17 years. I am afraid this charity is greatly abuſed, eſpecially that part lying and being ſituate at Scraptoft, and having been made a proviſion for the late rector's man-ſervant[4]."

Jan. 23, 1583, Francis Cave, eſq. died ſeiſed of one meſſuage, and divers lands and tenements thereunto belonging, in the town of Gaddeſby; held of the queen, in ſocage, by fealty and the rent of 22*d*. a year; and Thomas Cave, eſq. his ſon and heir, was then aged 43 years and upwards[5].

In 1587, certain lands in Gaddeſby of the yearly value of 40*s*. were demiſed for 20 years to John Welles[6].

In 1609, Edward Eyton held lands in capite at Gaddeſby.

The freeholders here in 1630 were, Henry Pilkington, gent. Chriſtopher Black, William Beeby, and John Dunn.

The common field at Gaddeſby began to be incloſed in 1650, by an agreement of the ſeveral proprietors; the principal of whom were George Smith, eſq. of Queniborow, Samuel Bordman, eſq. the Rev. Francis Nedham, clerk, and William Nedham, gent.

June 20, 1655, by conſent of all the other proprietors, the whole of the common field was aſſigned to George Pochin, of Barkby, eſq. Robert Bernard, of Sileby, eſq. and Thomas Bennet, of Queniborow; by whom the proportions of the ſeveral proprietors were regularly re-conveyed in fee ſimple, and the final arrangement of the incloſure was completed, agreeably to a decree made in the court of Chancery, May 25, 1652, in a cauſe wherein Samuel Bordman, eſq. and Henry Coleman, clerk, were plaintiffs, and George Smith, eſq. and the Rev. Francis Nedham, clerk, defendants[7].

In 1655, the ſum of 11*s*. 3*d*. was collected at Gaddeſby, for the poor Proteſtants in Piedmont.

By the proceedings on the incloſure, it is evident that Mr. George Smith was dead before 1656: but it does not preciſely appear by whom he was ſucceeded, as there is ſome error in the pedigree of the family copied under Aſhby Folvile, in p. 29; one deſcent being probably there omitted. The George Smith of 1629 died in 1640; his ſon George about 1654; to whom Francis (who died in 1699) was probably a grandſon; whom Thomas Smith, eſq. of Nottingham, ſucceeded in the property at Gaddeſby; and, dying in 1700, left it to his ſon, Thomas Smith, eſq. high ſheriff in 1718; whoſe hiſtory may be briefly given from his monument in St. Mary's church at Nottingham:

"Near this place lyeth the body of Thomas Smith, eſq.
who died Jan. 8, A. D. 1717, ætat. 45.
He was a man of exact integrity and ſkill in his extenſive buſineſs;
by which he acquired a handſome fortune, and reputation of univerſal humanity and benevolence. The charity intruſted unto him by others[8], received an increaſe from his prudence and generoſity; qualities that he readily and heartily exerted in the ſervice of mankind,
and which was returned to him
by general and moſt ſincere love and eſteem.
He married Mary, the daughter of Thomas Manley, eſq.
and left behind him five daughters."

In 1719, 13 freeholders polled from Gaddeſby; but in 1775 only 8 freeholders polled from this town.

In an accompt of Samuel Patrick, for the executors of Mr. Smith, for one year ending at Michaelmas 1732, are the following particulars relative to Gaddeſby:

	£.	s.	d.
Paid one year's land-tax, ending at Chriſtmas 1732,	19	4	9½
Paid ſir Samuel Barnardiſton, one year's chief rent due at Michaelmas 1732,	10	16	8
Paid Thomas Townſhend, highway and conſtable, for impropriation tithe,	0	18	6
Paid Edward Gillet, aſſeſſment to the poor, for ditto,	1	2	3

---

[1] From an account of the Charities and Loans to the City of Coventry.

[2] See p. 969.

[3] For the addition of two portmaſters to the twelve before eſtabliſhed, and for the augmentation of the ſalaries to the whole number. Gutch, Colleges and Hoſpitals, p. 5.

[4] This memorandum was communicated by the late Rev. Philip Hackett, who died rector of South Croxton in 1801; and was ſucceeded by the Rev. William Wilkinſon, M. A.

[5] Eſch. 26 Eliz.

[6] Leaſes in the Augmentation office.

[7] See Palmer's MS Caſes, pp. 12, 13. 458. 459.

[8] Mr. Abel Collin, by his will, dated February 4, 1704, left the remainder of his perſonal eſtate (after all his legacies and perſonal bequeſts were ſatisfied) to his nephew Mr. Thomas Smith, in truſt, for his building and endowing of almſhouſes, all which the ſaid gentleman, like a good and truſty ſteward, has faithfully performed to the utmoſt, in building an ornamental, yet at the ſame time ſuitable for the habitations of 24 poor men and women in Fryer-lane in the year 1709, commonly called the New Hoſpital. Theſe poor have beſides two decent rooms and 2*s*. a week paid to them duly every Saturday morning, and annually a ton and a half of coals. On the North front of this light and airy building is this inſcription:

"This Hoſpital,
by the appointment of Abel Collin, late of Nottingham, mercer, deceaſed; who in his life was of extenſive charity to the poor of all ſocieties, and at his death, by his laſt will and teſtament, left a competent eſtate for erecting and endowing the ſame; was by his nephew and executor
Thomas Smith begun and finiſhed in the year 1709.
ΑΠΟΘΑΝΩΝ ΕΤΙ ΛΑΛΕΙΤΑΙ."

Mr. Smith's eſtates were very conſiderable both in Nottinghamſhire and Leiceſterſhire; but, being divided among his five daughters, the principal part of the eſtate at Gaddeſby was allotted to Mary the eldeſt daughter, wife to Thomas Tenniſon, D. D. by whom it was ſold. The tithes became the property of Harriet the youngeſt daughter of Mr. Smith; who dying about ten years ſince, they were ſold by her ſurviving ſiſters to George Williamſon, eſq. who purchaſed from the family great part of the eſtate he holds; and is now the principal land owner in Gaddeſby, where he reſides in an excellent modern houſe.

Gaddeſby is one undivided manor; of which, as parcel of the Soke of Rothley, Thomas Babington, eſq. is lord. It is a pleaſant village; and ſeveral of the houſes are handſome. The lordſhip contains in the whole about 1400 acres of good land; which is nearly thus divided: Mr. Williamſon has about 400 acres; Mrs. Ayre, 200; Mr. King, 150; Meſſ. Boſworth and Alleyne, 134; colonel Charlton, 150; Mr. Lawrence, 84; Mr Saunt, 50; Rev. Aulay Macaulay, as vicar of Rothley, 40; Mr. W. Black, 16. The remainder is in ſmall portions.

A ſingle houſe, and about 24 acres of land, at the two extremities, are in the pariſh of Aſhby Folvile.

Paske Hall,

a very good manſion, with the lands thereunto belonging, was formerly the property of the Ingrams; and in 1653 Francis Nedham, gentleman, was the owner [1].

Paſke Hall, which which was formerly ſurrounded by a moat, has been long entirely pulled down; and on the ſite is a large modern houſe, which in 1744 was the property of John Ayre, eſq. of Gaddeſby, at that time high-ſheriff of the county, who died in 1758, at the age of 82, when it became the property of Thomas Ayre, eſq. [2]; who dying in 1769, it was exchanged by Catharine his only daughter and heir, for another eſtate, with her uncle John Ayre, eſq. who died in 1791, aged 74; having ſurvived his only ſon John, who died in 1785, aged 35; and whoſe widow Anne (daughter of John Henſhaw, of Stapenhill, co. Derby,) is the preſent owner.

The money raiſed and expended for the poor of Gaddesby in 1776, and alſo from 1783 to 1785, may be ſeen hereafter, under Wartnaby, p. 984.

By the Return to Parliament in 1801, Gaddeſby contained 56 houſes; 128 males, 135 females, in all 263; of whom 164 were chiefly employed in agriculture, and 47 in trade, manufactures, &c.

Pedigree of SMITH, of Gaddesby; from the Entry made in the College of Arms in 1718; (with Continuations).

Arms: Or, a chevron cotized Sable, between three demi griffins ſegreant, couped of the ſecond; the two in chief reſpectant; Plate CXXXII. fig. 10.

Thomas Smith, of Crophull-Boteler, co. Nottingham. = ...

Mary, da. of John Hooper, eſq. of Somerſet; first wife. = Thomas Smith, of Nottingham and of Gaddeſby, co. Leiceſter, died in 1700. = Fortune, da. of Lawrence Collin, of Nottingham, and ſiſter of Abel Collin, of that town; ſecond wife; died 1715.

Mary, only daughter, wife of John Eggleton, citizen and goldſmith of London.

Sir Charles Eggleton, knt. only ſon, ſheriff of London 1743; who died April 25, 1769, æt. 69; leaving a ſon Charles, who took the ſurname of Kent, and was created a baronet 1782.

1. Thomas Smith, eſq. of Broxtow and of the town of Nottingham and of Gaddeſby; high ſheriff for Leiceſterſhire 1717-18. = Mary, da. of Thos. Manly, of Thorney-hills, co. Stafford, eſq.

2. Samuel Smith, merchant, of London. = Elizabeth, dau. of John Cartlitch, citizen and goldſmith of London.

3. Abel Smith, of Eaſt Stoke, Notts, eſq. = Jane, dau. of George Beaumont of Chapelthorp, York, eſq.

1. Mary, married, Feb. 14, 1737-8, to Thomas Tenniſon, D. D.; and had iſſue Thomas Tenniſon, of the kingdom of Ireland, counſellor at law, who ſold the eſtate at Gaddeſby.
2. Elizabeth, married to Giles Eyre, of Box, co Wilts, eſq.
3. Catharine, married to William Ring, eſq. of Bath.
4. Anne, married to Henry Walters, of Bath Eaſton, co. Somerſet, eſq.
5. Harriett, died unmarried.

1. John, died unmarried.

2. Samuel Smith, of London, merchant. = Eliz. da. of Thos. Watſon, of London, eſq.

Seven ſons, and three daughters.

3. Thomas Smith, of Keyworth, Notts, eſq. = Dorothy, da. of John Liſter, eſq. of Syſonby, co. Leiceſter.

Elizabeth, only daughter, married ſir Philip Hales, bart.

4. William Smith, counſellor at law.
5. Charles Smith, a merchant at Aleppo.

1. Anne.
2. Eliz.
3. Mary.

Mary, dau. and ſole heir of Wm. Howe, of Beckingham, co. Lincoln, eſq. firſt wife; died 1761. = 1. Sir George Smith, of Eaſt Stoke, created a baronet in 1757; d. Sept. 5, 1769. = Catharine, da. of the Rev. R. Vyſe, archdeacon of Lichfield, 2d wife; d. 1786.

1. Howe, born 1749; died young.
2. Sir George Bromley Smith, the preſent baronet, who in 1778 was authorized to take the name of Bromley.

Mary.
Jane.

2. John Smith, of London, merchant.

3. Abel Smith, a banker in London and at Nottingham. = Mary, dau. of Thomas Bird, of Barton, co. Warwick, eſq.; died 1780.

Jane. = Francis Wheeler, of Coventry.

Jane, only daughter. = Hon. Henry Hood.

1. Thomas Smith, born 1746; died unmarried 1769.
2. Abel Smith, of Welford, eſq. ma. Elizabeth Uppleby; and d. 1779; leaving 1 daughter, Mary.

3. Robert Smith, born 1752; created baron Carrington of the kingdom of Ireland 1796, and in 1797 baron Carrington of Upton, Notts. = Anne-Boldero Bernard, dau. of H. Boldero Bernard, eſq. of South Cave in Yorkſhire.

Robert-John Smith, eſq. born 1796; and eleven daughters.

4. Samuel Smith, of Welford and Nottingham, eſq. born 1754; M. P. for the borough of Leiceſter, 1790, 1796, 1802. = Elizabeth-Frances, eldeſt dau. of Edmund Turnor, eſq. of Panton, co. Lincoln.

Four ſons and ſeven daughters.

5. William Smith, eſq. of Welford, eſq.
6. Henry, born 1762, di 1764.
7. George, married a dau. of ſir John Moſely, bt. and has iſſue.
8. John Smith, eſq. of Finſbury-ſquare, marr. Sarah, daughter of Thomas Boone, eſq. and has one daughter.
1. Elizabeth, wife of William Manning, eſq. died 1789.
2. Lucy.

---

[1] See his epitaph, and that of his wife, p. 976.

[2] See the epitaphs of this family in p. 975; and before, under Aſhby Folvile, p. 33.

The CHURCH (ſee two views of it in Plate CXXXII), dedicated to St. Luke, conſiſts of a ſtout tower, in which are three bells; a fine ſpire; a South porch and a North porch of wooden frame-work; the nave ſeparated from the chancel by an open wooden ſcreen, with a locked-up door in the entrance part thereof; a North and South aile, each ſeparated by five pointed arches, with as many clereſtory windows over them; the ſteeple ſeparated from the body by a pointed arch, the upper part of which is now blocked by the back of the oak gallery for the choir.

The Weſt, and part of the South front of the South aile, is a fine piece of architectural workmanſhip: it ſhews different ſculptured emboſſed figures in ſtone in various attitudes, executed in a maſterly manner; of which ſome ſlight idea is given in Plate CXXXII.

The inſide is large, but in very indifferent repair.

In the chancel is a very perfect piſcina.

At the Eaſt end of the North aile is another perfect piſcina with a pointed arch and eſcaloped baſon.

A third piſcina, in the South wall of the South aile, is nearly hid by the back of a pew.

A round octagon font; fig. 11.

Round the edge of the ſounding-board of the pulpit, which is painted blue, is cut,

"EX DONO THOMÆ FOSTER, 1743."

Mr. Wyrley noticed theſe arms here in 1590:

Chamber, quarterly; as in fig. 4, p. 969.

Gules, a chevron between three cinquefoils Or. Chamber; fig. 12.

Barry of ſix, Or and Azure. Conſtable; fig. 13.

Sable, a lion rampant, crowned Or. Segrave; fig. 14.

Per feſs Argent and Or, a croſs moline Gules. Folvile; fig. 15.

Quarterly, Or and Azure, in the two firſt quarters a creſcent counterchanged. Farnham; fig. 16.

Sable, cruſuly of croſs croſslets, three fleurs de lis and a border engrailed Argent; fig. 17.

Gules, a chevron Ermine, a border engrailed Azure; fig. 18.

Gules, fretty Or, a border Argent, charged with three fleurs de lis Sable. Audley; fig. 19.

Eyton; quarterly, as in fig. 2, fig. 20.

None of the arms mentioned by Wyrley remain; but ſome little painted ornamental glaſs is yet viſible in the windows.

Over the entrance into the chancel:

"John Laurence, John Townſhend, churchwardens 1771."

Mr. Burton obſerves, that "the impropriate tithes of Gaddeſby have long been ſevered from Rothley[1];" and the hiſtory of that ſeparation ſhall here be given:

July 17, 1524, the rectorial farms which had been before demiſed to Thomas Patchett, was leaſed by the priory of St. John of Jeruſalem to Andrew Noell, eſq. for his life, at a rent of 12*l.* a year; which, afterward reverting to the Crown, was granted by queen Elizabeth, as part of the rectory of Rothley, Jan. 10, 1560-1, to Bryan Cave and Edward Williams; who on the 17th of May following ſold the ſame to ſir Ambroſe Cave; by whom it was again demiſed to Thomas Babington, eſq. the immediate anceſtor of the preſent owner.

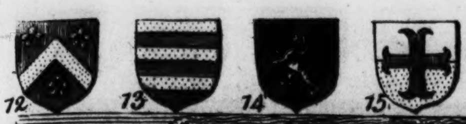
The impropriate tithes of Gaddeſby were leaſed by the priory, May 7, 1528, for 21 years, to Richard Waſe, gentleman, at a rent of 11*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*; and, reverting to the Crown, were again leaſed, June 20, 1551, by king Edward VI. for 21 years, at the ſame rent, to John Aſhby, eſq. On the ſame terms a leaſe was granted by queen Elizabeth, July 18, 1579, to Francis Smith, George Smith, and Thomas Smith, or the longer liver of them; and on the 29th of November, 1606, king James I. granted the ſame, inter alia, at the ſame yearly fee-farm rent, to John Shelbury and Philip Chewett; by whom they were conveyed to George Smith, eſq. of Queneborow, brother to ſir Francis Smith, of Aſhby Folvile; who in 1639 and 1640 had a ſuit concerning this property in the Court of Exchequer, which it may not be incurious to detail here at large.

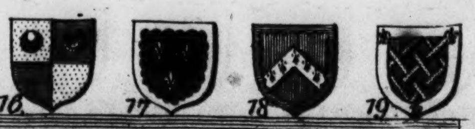
Termino Sancti Michaelis, Anno xvi Regis Caroli.
Lunæ, xii die Octobris, 1640.

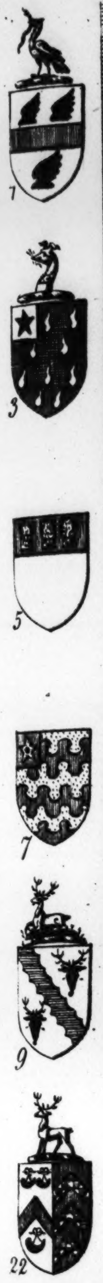
Leiceſter.—Whereas his Majeſty's Attorney-General, at the relation of George Smith, eſq. in Hilary Term, in the 13th year of his Majeſty's reign, did exhibit his Engliſh bill in this Court againſt Thomas Babington, eſq. defendant; ſhewing thereby, that the late prior and convent of the late diſſolved hoſpital or priory of St. John of Jeruſalem in England, were ſeiſed in their demeſne as of fee, in right of their ſaid priory, of and in the lordſhip or preceptory of Rothley, in the county of Leiceſter, with the members thereof, and of and in the manor of Rothley, and of and in the rectory of Rothley, with the tithes, rights, and profits thereunto belonging, in the county of Leiceſter; and of and in the tithes of corn, grain, and hay, ariſing within the pariſh of Gaddeſby, in the ſame county, and of a barn to the ſame tithes belonging; being all members of and within the ſaid lordſhip or preceptory of Rothley, and parcel of the poſſeſſions of the ſaid late priory; and that, although the ſaid rectory of Rothley did extend into ſeveral townſhips near thereunto adjoining, whereof the ſaid townſhip of Gaddeſby is one, yet the ſaid prior and convent did let out ſeveral parcels of the ſaid rectory to ſeveral tenants, under ſeveral and diſtinct yearly rents and farms; and that, by long continuance and enjoyment thereof, at ſuch ſeveral rents, by the tenants thereof, the ſame have become in reputation, and to be accounted, as ſeveral and diſtinct things, although in truth but the poſſeſſions of the ſaid rectory; viz. There was one farm of the ſaid rectory which went by the name of "The farm of the rectory of Rothley," at the yearly rent of 12 l. per annum, with all and ſingular tithes, oblations, rights, profits, and commodities, to the ſaid rectory appertaining, as one Thomas Patchett late held and occupied the ſame, which was leaſed to Andrew Noell, eſq. by indenture, under the convent ſeal of the late priory and brethren of St. John of Jeruſalem in England, dated ſeptimo die Julii, anno ſexto decimo Regis Henrici Octavi, to hold from the feaſt of the Nativity of Saint John Baptiſt then laſt paſt, for the life of the ſaid Andrew, under the yearly rent of 12l. And that there was alſo another farm of the ſaid rectory, which went by the rent of 11*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* of the farm of all the tithes of grain and hay in Gaddeſby aforeſaid, with the barn thereof, to the ſaid tithes belonging, to Richard Waſe, gentleman, by indenture, under the ſaid convent ſeal, dated ſeptimo Maii, anno viceſimo nuper regis Henrici Octavi, to hold from the feaſt of St. John Baptiſt then next following after the date of the ſaid indenture, for the term of 29 years, under the ſaid yearly rent of 11*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*; and that, accordingly, the ſaid leſſees and their aſſigns, before the diſſolution of the ſaid priory, did ſeverally hold the ſaid ſeveral parcels of the ſaid rectory under the ſaid ſeveral yearly rents, as ſeveral and diſtinct rents one from another, and that they were ſo accounted and anſwered unto the ſaid prior and convent of the ſaid late priory; viz. the ſaid rectory of Rothley, with the rights and appurtenances late in the occupation of the ſaid Thomas Patchett, demiſed unto the ſaid Andrew Nowell, at the ſaid rent of 12*l.* per annum; and the ſaid tithes of grain and hay and barn in Gaddeſby aforeſaid, in the occupation of the ſaid Richard Waſe, under the ſaid farm of 11*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*; and the manor of Rothley at the farm or rent of 11*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*: And that, upon the diſſolution of the ſaid priory, the ſaid ſeveral farms and rents came in charge to the Crown, and the rent paid as for ſeveral and diſtinct farms, and afterwards were ſeverally let and diſpoſed of under the ſaid ſeveral rents; and that, upon and after the diſſolution of the ſaid priory, the ſaid late king Henry the Eighth became ſeiſed of the ſaid lordſhip or precep-

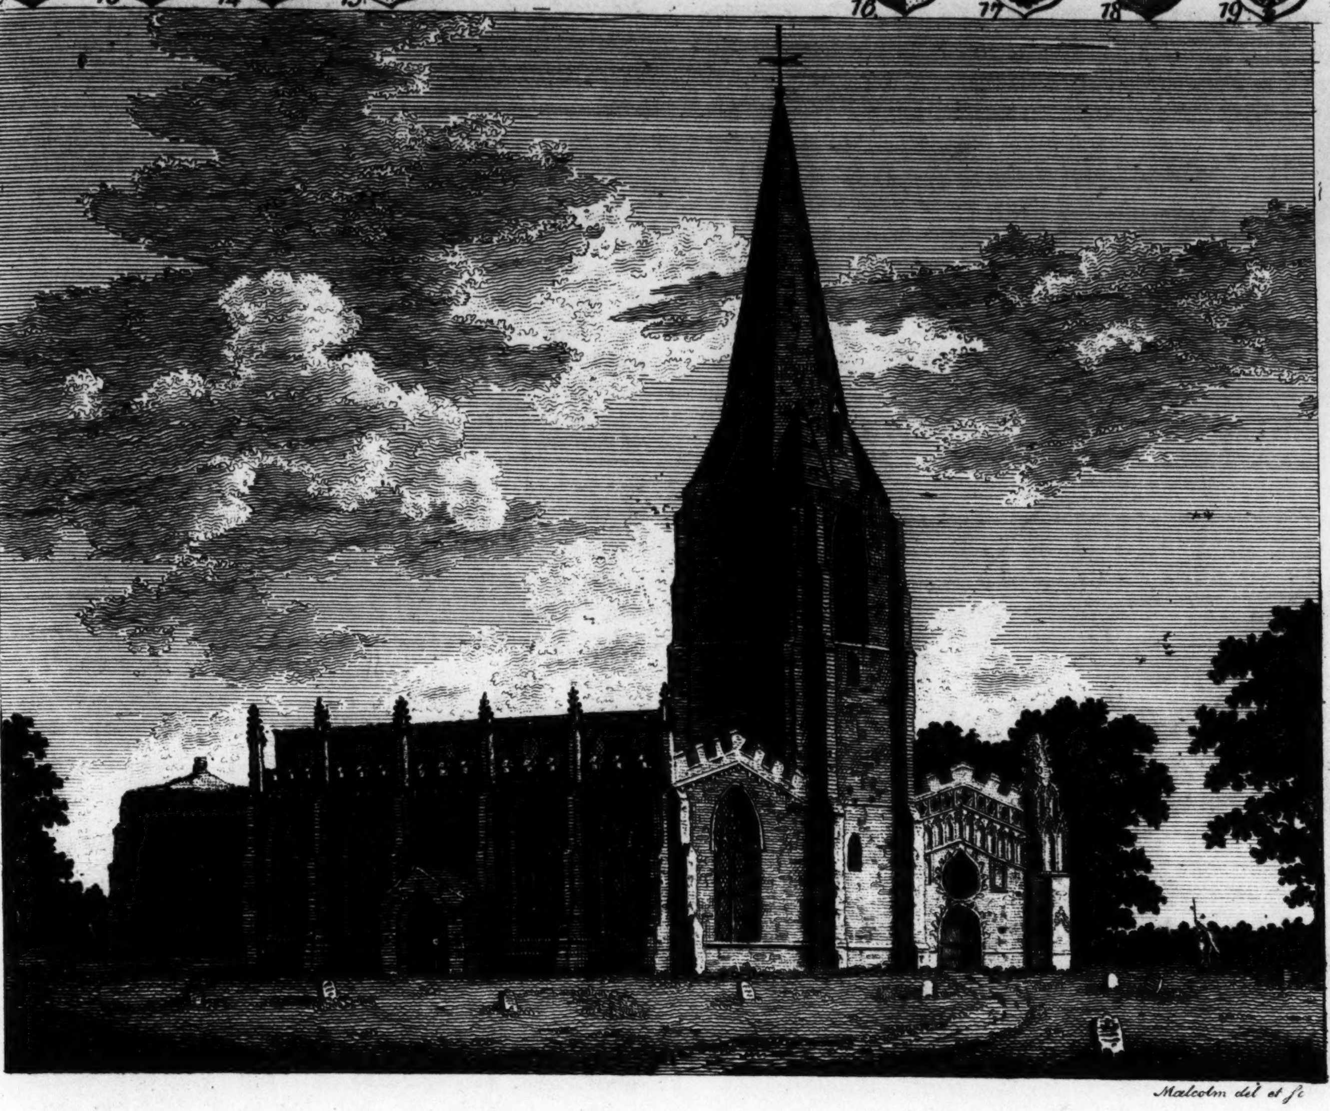
---

[1] Burton, MS.









Malcolm del et sc

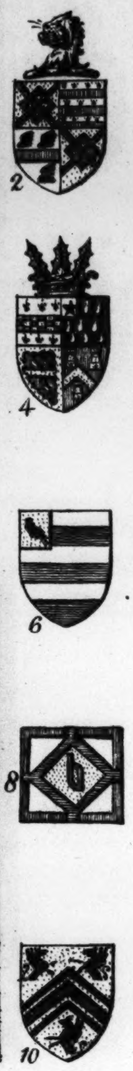


Fig. 23.

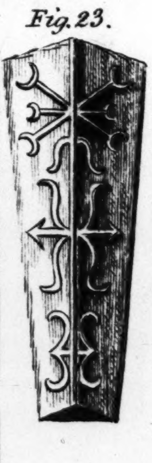

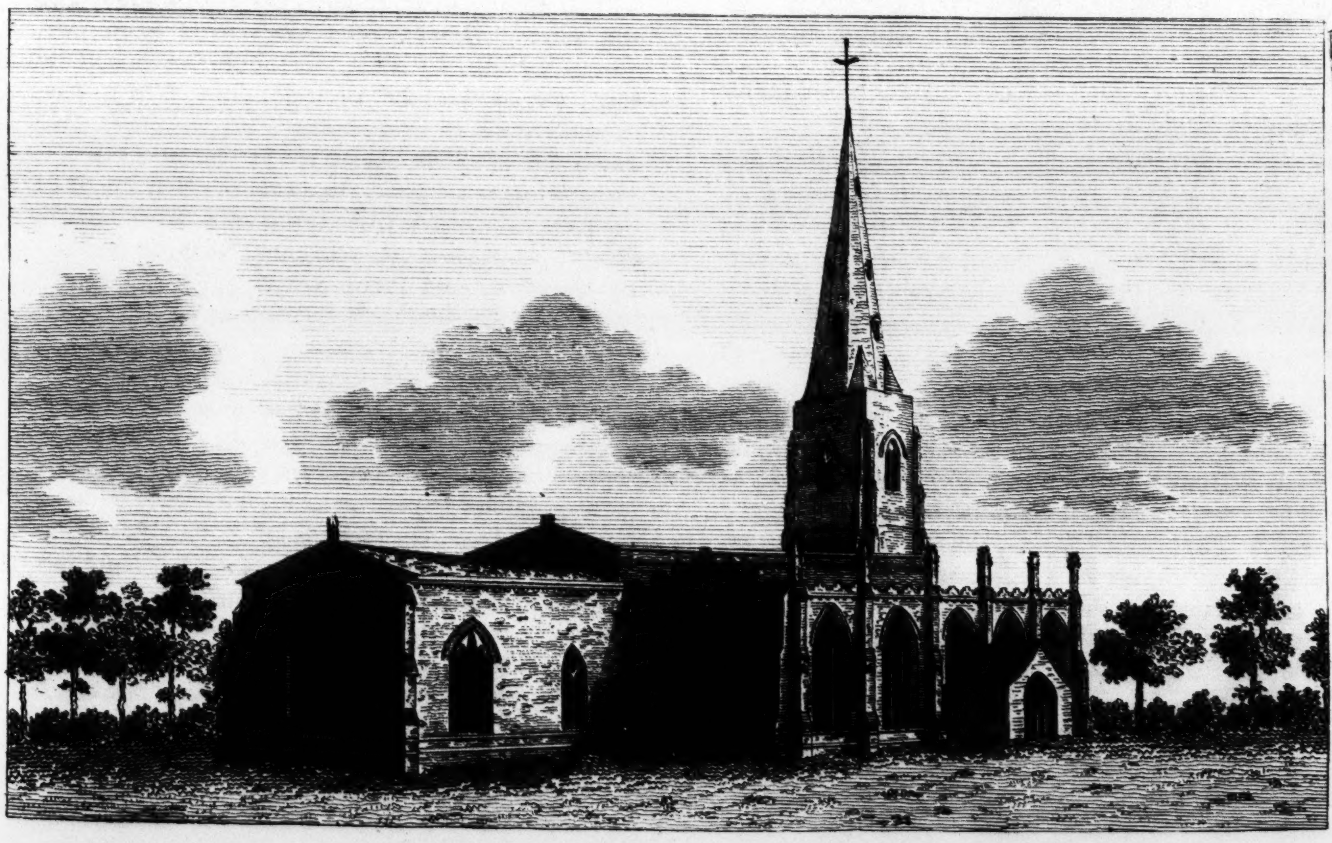

Fig. 20.

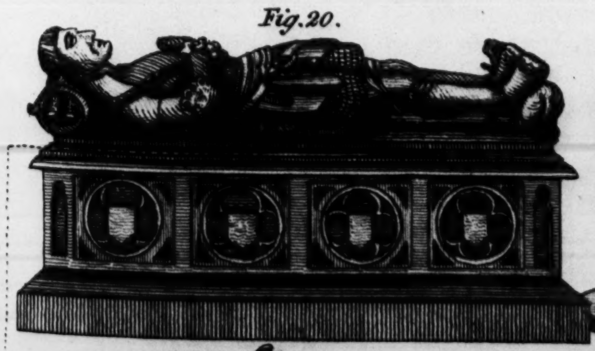

Fig. 11.

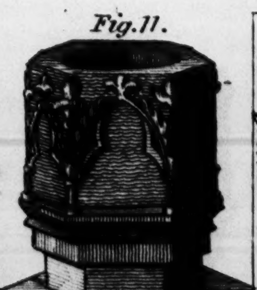

Fig. 21.

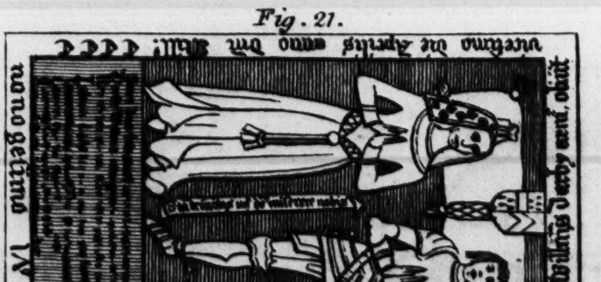

Hic jacet Willmus Jacby armi. obiit vicesimo die Aprilis anno dni Mill. CCCC nonogesimo IV cuius aie ppiciet de Amen. Sca trinitas un de miserere nobis Sca trinitas un de miserere nobis

tory of Rothley in his demeſne, as of fee, in right of the Crown of England, and of the reverſion of the rectory of Rothley, with the appurtenances, and of the tithes of grain and hay in Gaddeſby, with the barn there, in fee and right expectant, upon the determination of the ſaid ſeveral leaſes; and, being thereof ſo ſeiſed, died thereof ſo ſeiſed; from whom the ſame deſcended unto the late King Edward the Sixth, who by his letters patent, dated viceſimo die Junii, anno regni ſui quinto, leaſed the ſaid tithes in Gaddeſby to John Aſhby, eſq. for the term of 21 years, at the ſame yearly rent of 11*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* who, by virtue thereof, held the ſame accordingly during the ſame term, under the ſame rent, paid as a diſtinct thing of itſelf; and likewiſe, at the ſame time, the other rent of 12*l.* was paid as a diſtinct thing for the ſaid rectory of Rothley, while the ſame was held in farm under the Crown: And that afterwards the ſaid reverſion of the ſaid rectory and tithes deſcended from the ſaid late King Edward the Sixth to the late queen Mary, and from her to queen Elizabeth, who, being thereof ſeiſed in fee and right as aforeſaid, by her letters patent, dated about the 10th day of January, in the third year of her reign, did, inter alia, grant the ſaid rectory of Rothley, with the appurtenances, as it then ſtood, in charge, under the ſaid yearly rent of 12*l.* unto Cave and Williams, and their heirs, who entered upon ſuch part of the ſaid rectory as was let at that rent; of which the tithes in Gaddeſby were no part, they being then, and long before, and ever ſince, held and enjoyed as a ſeveral and diſtinct thing of themſelves, under the yearly rent of 11*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*; and no conſideration given, upon the purchaſe of the rectory of Rothley from the Crown, for the tithes of Gaddeſby; for that the contract was but for ſo much of the rectory of Rothley as was held under the rent of 12*l.* and the other rent of 11*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* for the tithes of Gaddeſby remained, and ſo yet remaineth, in charge before the Auditor of his Majeſty's revenues of the ſaid county of Leiceſter: And that, ſince the ſaid grant of the rectory of Rothley, ſeveral leaſes have been granted from the Crown of the ſaid tithes of Gaddeſby, under the ſaid rent of 11*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* and the ſeveral leſſees have enjoyed the ſame accordingly; and that, by the death of the late queen Elizabeth, the reverſion of the ſaid tithes of Gaddeſby and tithe barn did deſcend to the late king James, who, by his letters patent under the great ſeal of England, dated in or about the 29th day of November, in the fourth year of his reign of England, granted the ſame (inter alia) to John Shelbury and Philip Chewett, and their heirs and aſſigns, under the yearly fee farm-rent of 11*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* whoſe eſtate therein is, by meſne conveyances, come to the ſaid relator and his heirs, who is now thereof ſeiſed accordingly, and ought to enjoy the ſame; and that, by the deceaſe of the ſaid King James, the ſaid fee-farm rent of the ſaid tithes deſcended to his Majeſty that now is; and that the ſaid relator ought to enjoy the ſame tithes as formerly he hath done; but that Thomas Babynton, eſq. having the eſtate and intereſt of the letters patent of the ſaid rectory of Rothley, as it was comprized under the ſaid yearly rent of 12*l.* intending as well to defraud his Majeſty of the ſaid rent of 11*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* as alſo the ſaid relator of the ſaid tithes and barn in Gaddeſby, under pretext of the general words of the ſaid letters patent, maketh claim to the ſaid tithes and tithe barn in Gaddeſby, pretending the ſame, in ſtrictneſs of law, to be paſſed under the general words of "the rectory of Rothley with the appurtenances," or elſe as parcel of ſome other rents and values granted by the ſaid letters patent, although the ſaid defendant did know that the ſaid tithes and tithe barn in Gaddeſby are and were a diſtinct thing of themſelves, and held under a diſtinct rent as aforeſaid, and did not paſs, neither were intended to paſs, under the ſaid other rent of 12*l.*; and that the ſaid rent of 12*l.* only was put into the particular upon which the grant did paſs, which was only of ſo much as the ſaid Noell and Patchett did hold by leaſe under the ſaid rent of 12*l.*; who never held any part of the ſaid tithes or tithe barn in Gaddeſby aforeſaid, nor was her late Majeſty queen Elizabeth anſwered any thing upon the contract of thoſe tithes, nor was the ſaid other fee-farm rent of 11*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* diſcharged with the auditor upon the ſaid grant, when the other parcels which paſſed were diſcharged; neither did the patentees, or any claiming under them, claim the ſaid tithes or tithe barn in Gaddeſby, until that of late, the intereſt of the ſaid letters patent being come to the defendant, he claimeth the ſame; but that the ſame before, at, and ever ſince, the diſſolution of the ſaid priory, have been held apart from the ſaid rectory, under the ſaid rent of 11*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* which hath been and is only anſwered to the Crown; and that the ſaid defendant hath of late entered upon divers of the tithes of corn in the ſaid pariſh of Gaddeſby, and made ſecret eſtates and leaſes or compoſitions with ſeveral of the inhabitants there for the ſaid tithes, to withdraw the ſame tithes for the relator, and diſinherit his majeſty of the fee-farm of the ſaid rent of 11*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* and to diſturb the ſaid relator's antient poſſeſſion; and therefore his majeſty's ſaid attorney-general, to the end that neither his majeſty may be impeached of his ſaid fee-farm rent, to the diminution of his revenue; neither that the ſaid defendant, claiming under the ſaid letters patent, ſhould have more than ever thoſe from whom he claimeth either claimed or had, eſpecially when his majeſty's intereſt ſhall thereby be barred, by drawing the ſame to paſs by general words, againſt the intention of the ſaid grant. And to the end the ſaid defendant might diſcover his tithe and claim to the ſaid tithes, and to give anſwer to the premiſes, and that his majeſty's intereſt, and of his ſaid farmers, may be ſettled by the order and decree of this Court, his highneſs' ſaid attorney prayed the proceſs of this Court againſt the ſaid defendant. To which bill the ſaid defendant being ſerved with proceſs of ſpa', did appear to the ſaid bill; confeſſing that he believeth it to be true, that the ſaid late prior or convent of St. John's of Jeruſalem was ſeiſed in fee, in right of the ſaid priory, of the ſaid lordſhip or preceptory of Rothley, with the members thereof, and of the ſaid manor of Rothley, and of the ſaid rectory, and tithes, rights, and profits thereunto belonging, in the county of Leiceſter, and of the tithes of corn, grain, and hay, ariſing within the town or hamlet of Gaddeſby, in the ſaid pariſh of Rothley, in the ſaid county of Leiceſter, and not in the pariſh of Gaddeſby, (for that the ſaid defendant ſaith, and hopeth to prove, that Gaddeſby aforeſaid is in the pariſh of Rothley, and not a diſtinct pariſh of itſelf), and of the ſaid tithe barn thereunto belonging, alledging the ſame tithes and barn to be parcel of the rectory of Rothley, which was a member of and within the ſaid preceptory of Rothley, and parcel of the poſſeſſions of the ſaid priory; and that the ſaid prior did let out divers parcels of the ſaid rectory to divers tenants under ſeveral and diſtinct rents, viz. the ſaid farm of the rectory of Rothley at the rent of 12*l.* per annum, with the ſaid tithes, oblations, and appurtenances, to the ſaid rectory appertaining, as the ſaid Thomas Patchett held the ſame, which were ſo demiſed as aforeſaid to the ſaid Andrew Nowell, as in the ſaid bill is expreſſed; and that there was another farm of the ſaid tithes and tithe barn in Gaddeſby at the ſaid rent of 11*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* which it may be were demiſed to the ſaid Richard Waſe, as in the ſaid bill is alſo expreſſed; and that the ſaid leſſees, Andrew Nowell and Richard Waſe, and their aſſigns, did ſeverally hold the ſaid ſeveral parcels of the ſaid rectory, under the ſeveral rents, as ſeveral and diſtinct rents, and were ſo accounted for to the ſaid prior, viz. the ſaid rectory of Rothley at 12*l.* per annum; the ſaid tithes of grain and hay, with the barn in Gaddeſby, at 11*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* per annum; and the ſaid manor of Rothley at 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* per annum; and that, upon the diſſolution of the ſaid priory, the ſaid ſeveral farms and rents came in charge to the crown; but whether they had been reputed ſeveral and diſtinct farms, or ſeverally let and diſpoſed of at the ſame rents, he ſaith he knoweth not; and likewiſe confeſſeth, that the ſaid late king Henry the Eighth, after the diſſolution of the ſaid priory, was ſeiſed in fee of the ſaid lordſhip or preceptory of Rothley, and of the reverſion of the rectory of Rothley, with the appurtenances, and of the ſaid tithes and barn in Gaddeſby, parcel of the rectory expectant; and that, after the determination of the ſaid leaſes he dying, the ſame deſcended to the late king Edward the Sixth; but that he the ſaid defendant did not know that the ſame late king Edward did leaſe the ſaid tithes and barn in Gaddeſby to the ſaid John Aſhby, for the ſaid 21 years, at the ſaid rent of 11*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* or at any other rent; neither whether the ſaid John Aſhby entered or were poſſeſſed thereof, nor that he paid the rent for the ſame as a diſtinct charge of itſelf; neither that the ſaid 12*l.* paid for the ſaid rectory of Rothley was paid as a diſtinct thing of itſelf, whilſt the ſame was in the crown, or at any other time; but confeſſeth, that the reverſion of the ſaid rectory and tithes, after the death of the ſaid king Edward the Sixth and queen Mary, did ſo deſcend to the late queen Elizabeth; and that ſhe, being thereof ſeiſed, decimo Januarii, anno tertio Elizabethe, for 752*l.* 12*s.* 1¼*d.* did grant the ſame to Bryan Cave and Edward Williams, and their heirs, all the rectory and church of Rothley, with the members and appurtenances, in the ſaid county of Leiceſter, as parcel of the poſſeſſion as aforeſaid, and all manner of tithes, both great and ſmall, in the town-fields, pariſh, or hamlets, of Rothley aforeſaid, or elſewhere, to the ſame rectory belonging or appertaining, as member, part, or parcel thereof, and the reverſions thereof, with the rents and ſervices thereof, as by the letters patent thereof appeareth; and that, by virtue of the ſaid letters patent, the ſaid Cave and Williams entered into the ſaid rectory of Rothley and premiſes, and were ſeiſed thereof, in their demeſne, as of fee; and that afterwards, viz. xvii^{mo} Maii, anno tertio regine Elizabethe, by their deed indented, dated, on or about xvii° Maii, anno tertio regine Elizabethe, inrolled in the Court of Chancery within ſix months, for the conſiderations therein expreſſed, did bargain and ſell the ſame to the ſaid ſir Ambroſe Cave and his heirs, to which deed he the ſaid defendant referreth himſelf. And that the ſaid rectory of Rothley, with the appurtenances, afterwards, by meſne conveyance, came to him the ſaid defendant, for his life, with divers remainders, as in the ſaid anſwer is ſpecified; and that, by virtue thereof, he the ſaid defendant was ſeiſed of the ſaid rectory and premiſes for life, the remainders over as aforeſaid. And that he the ſaid defendant, the 17th day of September, in the eighth year of the late king James, did demiſe unto John ——— eſq. the ſaid rectory of Rothley, with the appurtenances, and all the tithes in Rothley, Gaddeſby, Grimſton, and Wartnolbie, in the ſaid county of Leiceſter; to hold the ſaid rectory and tithes in Gaddeſby for ten years, and the reſidue but until the feaſt of Pentecoſt next enſuing the date of the ſaid leaſe, the reverſion to him the ſaid defendant; and he did not know into what part of the ſaid rectory and premiſes the ſaid Cave and Williams did enter; and denieth that it was intended, by the ſaid letters patent to them made, that the ſaid tithes in Gaddeſby ſhould paſs, or that the ſame was a diſtinct thing from the ſaid rectory, nor diſtinct in law, but, being only in leaſe for years, was and continued part of the ſaid rectory; and denieth that he knew what particular was made before the paſſing of the ſaid letters patent, or was contained in the ſame particular; but that, although the particular and letters patent do not agree, yet that would be no cauſe in law to vitiate the ſaid letters patent in any thing paſſed thereby; and that, if the ſaid rectory being valued in the ſaid letters patent at the yearly value of 12*l.* per annum, if it be miſ-valued, yet is the ſame aided by the Statute of 18 Elizabeth for confirmation of patents; and denieth that he doth know that the ſaid late queen was anſwered any thing at all for the ſaid tithes in Gaddeſby; neither doth know that the ſaid rectory was contracted for in groſs, nor that, after the grant by the ſaid letters patent, the ſaid rent of 11*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* or any other rent for the ſaid tithes and barn in Gaddeſby, did remain in charge with his majeſty's ſaid auditor of the ſaid county, but was, or ought to have been, diſcharged before the ſaid auditor, the ſame rent being paſſed away by the ſaid letters patent as aforeſaid; and denieth that the ſaid patentees, or their aſſigns, to his knowledge, for many or any years after the ſaid grant, did not claim any thing in the ſaid tithes of Gaddeſby, or in the rent reſerved upon the ſame; and albeit, ſince the patent and grant to Cave and Williams, and their heirs, any leaſes were made of the ſaid tithes in Gaddeſby at or under the rent of 11*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* or other rent, yet nothing did thereby paſs in law unto the ſaid leſſees; and although the leſſees and their aſſigns did enjoy the ſame, yet it was by wrong; and alſo denieth that the reverſion thereof, after the death of the ſaid late queen Elizabeth, did, to his knowledge, come to king James; and although the ſaid late king James, by his ſaid letters patent, did grant the ſame to the ſaid Selbury and Chewett, yet he the ſaid defendant is adviſed by his counſel, that nothing could paſs by the ſaid grant, becauſe the ſaid late king had nothing in him therein to grant; neither that they did take any profits, or convey the ſame to the ſaid relator, to the knowledge of the ſaid defendant; and likewiſe denieth that the ſaid relator is lawfully ſeiſed thereof under the ſaid fee-farm rent of 11*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* or under any other rent; nor that any thing can be payable for the ſame to his majeſty that now is; and alſo confeſſeth the carrying away of ſome tithe corn and hay in Gaddeſby aforeſaid, and that he hath compounded and contracted with ſome of the owners and poſſeſſors of ſome of the lands in Gaddeſby aforeſaid for the tithes of their lands, which they ought to have paid, affirming that Gaddeſby aforeſaid is a member of the pariſh of Rothley, and within the pariſh of Rothley aforeſaid, as by the ſaid anſwer more at large appeareth. Whereupon his majeſty's ſaid attorney replied; and the ſaid defendant rejoined. And the ſaid cauſe being at iſſue, witneſſes were examined on either part, and their depoſitions publiſhed; and the cauſe came this day to be heard before the lord chief baron and the reſt of the barons of this Court. Now, upon full and deliberate hearing of the ſaid cauſe, and of the allegations as well of his majeſty's attorney-general and other learned counſel on the behalf of his majeſty and of the ſaid George Smith, as of the counſel of the ſaid defendant; foraſmuch as, by the ſaid letters patent under the great ſeal of England, bearing date the 10th day of January, in the ſaid third year of the reign of the ſaid late queen Elizabeth, it appeareth that the ſaid rectory and church of Rothley, with the members and appurtenances, in the ſaid county of Leiceſter, were granted to the ſaid Bryan Cave and Edward Williams, their heirs and aſſigns for ever, in fee ſimple, as parcel of the ſaid late diſſolved hoſpital or priory of St. John's of Jeruſalem in England, in the county of Middleſex, then extended at the clear yearly value of 12*l.*; and that the ſaid Cave and Williams, by virtue of the ſaid grant, did enter into ſuch part of the ſaid rectory as was, and formerly had been, comprized under the ſame rent of 12*l.* whereof the ſaid tithes and barn in Gaddeſby aforeſaid were no part; and that, by virtue of the ſaid letters patent of the grant of the ſaid rectory of Rothley, with the appurtenances, in form aforeſaid, the ſame annual rent of 12*l.* and the ſaid rectory, being therewith formerly charged before his majeſty's auditor of his revenues in the ſaid county of Leiceſter, were then and ever ſince diſcharged, againſt the ſaid late queen Elizabeth, the ſaid late king James, and againſt his majeſty that now is; and that the ſaid other yearly rent of 11*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* reſerved and payable to the ſaid late queen were then and ever ſince in charge before the ſaid auditor, and anſwered to the crown; and for that alſo it appeared, by the ſaid other letters patent under the great ſeal of England, bearing date the ſaid 29th day of November, in the ſaid fourth year of the ſaid late king James, that the ſaid tithes of grain and hay, and the ſaid barn in Gaddeſby aforeſaid, with their appurtenances, were granted to the ſaid John Shelbury and Philip Chewett, their heirs and aſſigns for ever, in fee-farm, as parcel of the ſaid poſſeſſions of the ſaid late priory or hoſpital of St. John's aforeſaid, at the time of the grant aforeſaid being in charge as aforeſaid to his majeſty, and in leaſe, under the great ſeal of England, by letters patent, bearing date XVIII° die Julii, anno XXI^{mo} regine Elizabethe, granted to Francis Smith, George Smith, and Thomas Smith, during the lives of them, and the longer liver of them, at the ſaid clear yearly value of 11*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* under which rent the ſaid tithes and barn in Gaddeſby have been ever ſince and long before the date of the ſaid letters patent of demiſe, and until this preſent, held and enjoyed as a diſtinct thing from the ſaid rectory, under the ſaid yearly rent of 11*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* and ſo at this preſent ſtands charged to his majeſty of record before his ſaid auditor, as by divers records and accompts remaining with his majeſty's ſaid auditor, now ſhewed in Court at large, appeared; and for that the ſaid defendant inſiſteth only upon the validity and general words of the ſaid letters patent granted to the ſaid Bryan Cave and Edward Williams: It is this day ordered and decreed by this Court, in the preſence of his majeſty's ſaid attorney-general, on his majeſty's behalf, and of the counſel of the ſaid defendant, that, upon the whole matter, a caſe ſhall be made, and agreed upon by the counſel of either party; whereupon the Court will further proceed as they ſhall ſee cauſe: and that, in the mean time, the poſſeſſion of the ſaid tithes of corn, grain, and hay, and of the ſaid barn in Gaddeſby aforeſaid, ſhall be ſettled in the quiet poſſeſſion of the ſaid relator George Smith, eſq. his majeſty's ſaid farmer, his heirs and aſſigns, until this Court ſhall take order to the contrary. And to that end the injunction formerly granted out of this Court, for the quieting of the plaintiff's poſſeſſion, ſhall ſtand; and likewiſe that ſuits at the common law ſhall be ſtayed[1]."

By the following order of the Committee of Sequeſtrations it will appear that theſe tithes continued in the poſſeſſion of the Smiths:

"Feb. 4, 1645-6. Reſolved, that the yearly ſum of £50. be paid out of the profits of the impropriate rectory of Gaddeſby, ſequeſtered from Thomas Smyth, of Queniborough, Papiſt and delinquent, for increaſe of the maintenance of Zachary Burrongh, miniſter of Wigſton; unleſs the pariſhioners of Gaddeſby aforeſaid ſhall ſhew good cauſe to the contrary by this day month; whereof the ſaid pariſh are to have convenient notice."

"April 9, 1646. Reſolved, that the yearly ſum of £50. be paid out of the profits of the impropriate rectory of Gaddeſby, ſequeſtered from ſir Thomas Smyth, Papiſt and delinquent, being tenant thereof for life; the reverſion whereof is in George Smyth, of Queniborough, Papiſt and delinquent, for increaſe of the maintenance of Zachary Burrough, miniſter of Wigſton, the vicarage whereof is worth but . . . .[2] per annum; and what," &c.

"April 28, 1648. By virtue of an order of both houſes of parliament, of the 2d of May, 1646, it is ordered that the yearly ſum of £50. be allowed and paid out of the impropriate tithes of Gaddeſby, in the county of Leiceſter, ſequeſtered from Mr. Smith, Papiſt and delinquent, and out of the impropriate tithes of Thruſſington in the ſaid county, ſequeſtered from Fitz William Coningſby, eſq. delinquent, to and for increaſe of the maintenance of Younge Dixy; a godly and orthodox divine, miniſter of the pariſh church of Gaddeſby in the ſaid county; his preſent maintenance being not worth above £40. a year: and the ſequeſtrators of the premiſſes are required to allow and pay the ſame accordingly, at ſuch times and ſeaſons of the year as the ſaid tithes ſhall grow due and payable[3]."

Gaddeſby and Keame (chapels belonging to Rothley) were valued in 1729 at £50. a year.

MINISTERS of GADDESBY.

Edward Wright occurs in 1568.
Edward Heathe, in October 1571.
William Croſon, from the beginning of 1575.
John Whitby, from the beginning of 1576.
William Drakeford, from the beginning of 1577.
Mark Wierſdale, from the beginning of 1588.
William Drakeford, from the beginning of 1590.
William James, from the beginning of 1590.
William Staynes, 1593; buried Nov. 20, 1599.
Edward Hardye, from the beginning of 1600.
Peter Gamble, in the year 1625-6.
Thomas Thorpe, 1626.
Thomas Boſs, M. A. from the beginning of 1627.
Henry Coleman, 1652.
Francis Nedham, 1655.
William Wilkinſon, 1796.

MONUMENTAL INSCRIPTIONS.

"There is in this chapel," ſays Mr. Burton, "an antient monument, with a proportion cut out, of one of the Segraves. There is alſo a monument of William Derby, eſq. who died 1496[4]."

Both theſe monuments ſtill remain there. That of Segrave, without any inſcription, is on an altar-tomb near the Eaſt end of the North aile, as delineated in the plate, fig. 20. He is in armour, with a collar of SS; a large dagger on his right ſide; at his feet a dog; his head reclines on a helmet; and his hands, which are broken off, were uplifted in prayer. On the front are four blank ſhields.

On another altar-tomb of alabaſter, near the laſt, is the figure of a man in armour, having on the right hand his wife in a long flowing robe faſtened with a girdle, and her head-dreſs ornamented with long lappets; the heads of both reclining on two cuſhions, between which are the arms of Darby, impaling Chambers; their hands uplifted in prayer; fig. 21.

Between them, on a ſcroll,

"Sc'a Trinitas un' De' miſerere nobis."

Round the ledge,

"Hic jacet Will'm's Darby, qui obiit viceſimo v° die Aprilis anno Dñi mill° CCCC°, nonogeſimo IA° cuj' ai'e ꝑpiciet' de' Amen. S'ca Trinitas un' de' miſerere nobis."

At the bottom, much defaced:

"Concedens fato jacet hic conteſtus in tumba
Darby Willielmus, armiger . . . . . .
Redeat e . . . 'e ma' poticunt' dñ nie at orbe'
Juſticia pollens un . . . are miſeris.
Illius bonitas multas jam notâ per urbes
Laudatur gratis divitibus et populis.
Eſt tort . . . . anua talia fundere vota.
Serica quod ineat gaudia milia dei."

On flat ſtones in the chancel:

1. "This ſtone was laid to the memory of Mary, the wife of Thomas Ayre, gent.
who died much lamented June 2, 1746,
aged 22 years."

"Philip Hacker, many years curate, died 1796."

2. "Beneath lie interred the remains of Thomas Ayre, eſq. who departed this life
the 16th of June, 1769, aged 56 years.

Think, as ſoftly ſad you tread
Above the venerable dead,
Time was, like thee, they life poſſeſs'd;
And time ſhall be that thou ſhalt reſt."

3. "Beneath lie interred the remains of Katharine Ayre, wife of Thomas Ayre, eſq.
who departed this life 4th of Auguſt, 1770,
in the 58th year of her age.

Death's but a path that muſt be trod
If man would ever paſs to God:
A port of calms, a ſtate of eaſe
From the rough rage of ſwelling ſeas."

On flat ſtones in the nave:

1. "Thomas Cooke, gent.
died January 10, 1679 [no age mentioned]."

---

[1] From the original Record remaining in the Court of Exchequer.

[2] No ſum mentioned in the MSS.

[3] From the original minutes of the Committee of Sequeſtrations, preſerved in the Bodleian Library.

[4] Burton, MS.

2. "William Palmer, gent.
died 20th September, 1709, aged 28 years."

3. "Dorothy, the wife of William Simpſon, died March 10, 1747, aged 43."

4. "William Simpſon died Dec. 31, 1762, aged 66."

5. Arms: Argent, a chevron Gules, between three bugle-horns Vert; Foſter: Impaling, Gules, three chevrons Vaire; Turvile. Creſt, a ſtag ſtatant, Quarterly, Argent and Sable, attired Or; fig. 22.

"Katharine Foſter, the wife of Thomas Foſter, gent.; which ſaid Katharine was daughter of Benjamin Turvile, eſq. barriſter at law;
a wife juſtly faithful, loving, and induſtrious, charitable, lowly, and compaſſionate,
and truly pious to God;
on the 10th day of September, 1743,
aged 53,
was freed from the ſorrows of a tranſitory life:
her ſoul now reſts, we truſt, thro' Chriſt,
in peace and felicity with the juſt."

6. "Thomas Foſter, gent. died March 29, 1788,
in the 80th year of his age.
A loving huſband; to the poor a friend."

7. "Mary, the wife of William Sutherington, dyed 1ſt February, 1776, aged 76 years.
She that lies here was in her life
A tender, prudent, loving wife;
A quiet neighbour; to the poor a friend;
Happy is ſhe that ſuch a life doth end!"

Adjoining the laſt:

8. "William Sutherington dyed Feb. 11, 1785,
aged 79 years."

On flat ſtones in a paſſage at the Eaſt end of the nave:

1. "Franciſcus Nedham, generoſus, obiit duodecimo die Aprilis, 1692."

South aile:

2. "Martha Nedham, relict of Francis Nedham, gent.
dyed 17th December, 1721, aged 89 years."

3. "James Southwell died 4th September, 1727,
aged 65 years."

4. "George Nedham,
of Gadſby in the county of Leiceſter, eſq.
died 10th March, 1738, aged 67 years."

5. "Mrs. Elizabeth Nedham, widow, relict of George Nedham, eſq. and ſiſter to ſir Henry Penrice, judge of the high Court of Admiralty, dyed Jan. 8, 1741, in the 67th year of her age."

6. "Elizabeth Cheſelden, relict of Richard Cheſelden, gent.
daughter of Geo. Nedham, eſq. by Elizabeth his wife, dyed 3 April, 1767, aged 57 years."

7. "Richard Cheſelden, gent.
died the 14th of February, 1763, aged 77 years."

In the South aile:

1. "John-Henſhaw Ayre, ſon of John and Anne Ayre, of Gadſby, died 11th March, 1783, aged 4 months."

2. "John Willford, gent.
died 30th Nov. 1723, aged 59.
Mary his wife dyed June 3, 1754, aged 83 years."

3. "Benjamin Hyott, died 16 May, 1734, in his 10th year."

4. "Elizabeth Foſter, died 27 Nov. 1724, in her 57th year."

In the North aile, cloſe to the wall:

"Mr. James Southwell died 4th September, 1727,
aged 65."

On the South ſide of the church-yard lie three or four flat ſtones partly within the ground, ridged up the middle with fancy work upon them in relievo, but no inſcription viſible; one of theſe is ſketched, fig. 23. They are about ſix feet long.

Extracts from the Regiſters.

Everard Darby, gent. buried March 28, 1569.

Barbara Darby, his wife, buried May 8, 1599.

Richard Whattafte, of Syſton, and Barbara Underwood, of Gaddeſby, were married June 16, 1570.

Francis Darby, of Walton, gent. and Katharine Wood, of Gaddeſby, were married July 20, 1570.

William Smithe and Barbara Whattafte were married Nov. 22, 1574.

Thomas Herricke, ſon of Robert, baptiſed at Gaddeſby April 28, 1603.

William, ſon of ditto, born June 1613; buried Oct. 5, 1617.

Anne, daughter of ditto, baptiſed Nov. 8, 1618.

Robert Herricke, buried Dec. 5, 1620.

1631. Henricus Pilkington, ſepultus fuit decimo die Martis.

1634. Maria Pilkington, uxor Henrici, ſepulta fuit decimo ſexto die Auguſti.

1641, 1642, 1643, 1644, 1645, 1646, 1647, 1648, 1649, 1650, 1651, 1652, Bellum civile!

Martin Nedham, ſon of Francis Nedham, gent. buried Aug. 21, 1653.

Francis St. John, gent. buried Sept. 20, 1654.

John, the ſon of Mr. Francis Nedham and Martha his wife, buried March 25, 1666.

George, ſon of Francis Nedham and Martha his wife, died Aug. 28, 1670.

Martin, ſon of Francis Nedham, bapt. Dec. 26, 1677.

Martin Nedham, bapt. June 31, 1671.

Thomas, ſon of Francis Nedham, buried Feb. 5, 1671.

William, ſon of Leiceſter Sacheverell, gent. bapt. May 4, 1676.

Francis, ſon of Francis Nedham, gent. buried Aug. 2, 1682.

John Nedham, gent. buried April 15, 1692.

Pedigree of NEDHAM, of GADDESBY[1]. (From the Viſitation of 1683.)

Arms: Argent, a bend engrailed Azure, between two bucks heads caboſhed Sable. Creſt, on a mount Vert, a buck lodged Sable; Plate CXXXII. fig. 9.

Thomas Nedham, of Allexton.=. . . .

Thomas Nedham, of Belton, Rutland.=. . . .

William Nedham, of Belton, Rutland.=Anne Lamb, of Peterborough.

1. Francis Nedham, of Gaddeſby, died Aug. 1656, æt. 63.=Dorothy, dau. of Will. Chamberlaine, of Tilton, died in October 1682.
2. William Nedham, of Gaddeſby.
3. Anthony Nedham, citizen of London.

1. William, died in his father's life time unmarried.
2. Francis,
4. John,
5. Thomas,
6. Martin,
7. Thomas, } died ſ. p.
8. Samuel, living 1683; a fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge, æt. 28.

3. Francis Nedham, of Gaddeſby, born June 15, 1633; died April 12, 1692, æt. 61.=Martha, dau. of Timothy Cole, of Cole-end, Eſſex; died Dec. 17, 1721, æt. 89.

1. Francis, died young.
2. John,
3. George,
4. Martin,
5. Samuel, } all living unmarried in 1683.

Martha,
Mary, } living unmarried 1683.

William,
Thomas,
Dorothy, } died young.

1. Mary, wife of Francis Becket, of Bedford.
2. Bridget, wife of Arthur Cloudſley, of Melton Mowbray.
3. Dorothy, wife of Thomas Maſon, of Aſhby Magna.
4. Anne, wife of Thomas Shore, of Boſton, co. Lincoln.
5. Elizabeth, unmarried 1683.
6. Joyce, wife of Edw. Sculthorp, rector of Rettenham, Norf.

---

[1] See ſome of their names in the above-cited extracts from the Gaddeſby Regiſter.

GRIMSTON,

a peculiar of Rothley, is pleaſantly ſituated on an eminence commanding an extenſive proſpect over the counties of Leiceſter and Rutland. It is 14 miles diſtant from Leiceſter; 5 miles Weſt-north-weſt from Melton Mowbray; 9 miles Eaſt-north-eaſt from Loughborough; is bounded on the North and North-weſt by Old Dalby, and on the South-eaſt by Saxulby. It is within the hundred of Eaſt Goſcote; and, in the eccleſiaſtical diviſion of the county, is part of the deanry of Akeley.

Grimſton is noticed in the general ſurvey as a member of the royal manor of Rodolei, and containing three ploughlands all but one oxgang and a half[1].

Three ploughlands here, which in the time of king Edward had employed three ploughs and a half, and were valued at three ſhillings, were worth ten ſhillings at the general ſurvey, when they were held by Gerard under Robert de Buci. In the demeſne was one plough; and five villans, with two ſocmen, had three ploughs[2].

Richard Baſſet and Maud his wife, in the time of Henry I. granted half this village to the priory of Laund; the other half was given by king Henry III. to the Knights Templars; and after their ſuppreſſion came, with the reſt of their lands, to the Knights Hoſpitallers of St. John of Jeruſalem.

In the Teſta de Nevill, compiled about 1240, three ploughlands at Grimſton are noticed.

In the Itinerary of 1280, Grimſton, Wartnaby, Caldwell, and Wykeham, anſwered collectively as one vill.

In 1303, it was found that Stephen D'Anvers held one quarter of a knight's fee in Grimſton of Robert de Tateſhall, deceaſed; and that it was worth 12*s*. a year[3].

In 1325, it was found that John de Segrave, deceaſed, and Chriſtian his wife held divers lands in Grimſton; and that John de Segrave (ſon and heir of Stephen de Segrave, couſin of the aforeſaid John de Segrave ſenior) was his next heir[4].

In the ſame year, it was found that Roger Beler, deceaſed, and Alice his wife held one meſſuage and one carucate of land, with the appurtenances, in Grimſtone, of the heir of John de Segrave, by the ſervice of 3*s*. a year[5].

In the Segrave Chartulary it is obſerved, that the lordſhip had been alienated for 6*s*. a year; "qui remanet cum ſectâ curie, ut docet extenta."

A quit-claim alſo there occurs, from the prior and convent de Landâ, to Stephen de Segrave and his heirs, of 2*s*. a year, part of 3*s*. which he had been accuſtomed to pay for that bovate and a half of land, cum tenente & familiâ ſuâ, in Grymmeſton, nuper Alani de Siwaldeby; and a grant of the ſame land, with the tenant and his family, to the ſaid Stephen and his heirs, to be held in future by the ſervice of 12*d*. annually, at Michaelmas and Eaſter, pro omni ſervicio, ſalvo forinſeco.

A grant of the ſame land, and of an acre of meadow, from the ſaid Stephen, to Robert de Grymmeſton, to be held of Stephen and his heirs by homage and 4*s*. a year for all ſervice, ſalvo forinſeco ſervicio[6].

May 6, 1327, king Edward III. granted to Ralph de Crophull and his heirs liberty of free-warren in all their demeſne lands at Grimſton[7].

In 1380, it was found that Roger Beler, at his death, held one meſſuage and one carucate of land, with the appurtenances, of the caſtle of Rockingham, co. Northampton, by the ſervice of 1½*d*. a year[8].

In 1391, it was found that Mary wife of Roger Beler (firſt married to John Seintclere) died ſeiſed of one meſſuage and one carucate of land, in Grimſton, held of the heir of John de Segrave, by the ſervice of 4*s*. a year[9].

In a book of fifteenths and tenths granted by the laity in 1416, Grimſton was rated at £4. 14*s*.; and in the ſubſidy of 1445 at the ſame ſum; but 2*s*. were then abated.

In 1420, Robert Swillington died ſeiſed of one meſſuage and one carucate of land, with the appurtenances, in Grimſton, held of the heir of John Segrave[10].

On the diſſolution of the religous houſes, the poſſeſſions of the Knights Hoſpitallers at Grimſton were beſtowed on the family of the Brokeſbys.

The priory of Kirkby Beler had lands in Grimſton, for which they paid an acknowledgement of 8*s*. 10½*d*. to the commander of Dalby, and 4*s*. a year to the lord of Melton[11].

Elizabeth Hutchinſon, widow of . . . . . Brokeſby of Grimſton, was married a third time, in 1564, to Thomas Cranmer of Aſlakton.

In 1578, certain lands at Grimſton, within the pariſh of Rothley, to the yearly value of 60*s*. 4*d*. were demiſed for 21 years to William Northyngton[12].

Thomas Giles had a leaſe from queen Elizabeth of lands in Grimſton, dated 16 May, 1583[13].

In 1630, in right of Mary his wife, daughter and coheir of William Brokeſby, eſq. Grimſton was the inheritance of ſir Francis Englefield[14]; who in that year was the only freeholder in the lordſhip.

In 1655, the ſum of 3*s*. 6*d*. was collected at Grimſton for the relief of the poor Proteſtants at Piedmont.

In an act paſſed in 1765, for dividing and incloſing the ſeveral open and common fields in Grimſton, conſiſting of arable land, meadow and paſture ground, and commons, containing about 1000 acres; Grimſton is deſcribed as parcel of the manor and ſoke, and within the peculiar and exempt eccleſiaſtical juriſdiction of Rothley, belonging to Thomas Babington, eſq. patron of the vicarage of Rothley aforeſaid, within which pariſh Grimſton is a chapelry; and Mr. Babington, as lord of the manor and ſoke of Rothley, of and within which Grimſton is a parcel and member as aforeſaid, was not only entitled to the ſoil of all the waſte grounds in Grimſton, but alſo to an alienation fine from every purchaſer of lands or hereditaments within the ſaid manor and ſoke who hath not lands in the ſaid manor at the time of ſuch purchaſe of 1*s*. in the pound for every pound of the conſideration money for ſuch purchaſe, and to divers rents, fees, and other privileges and royalties, incident and belonging to the ſaid manor and ſoke; and Heneage earl of Aylesford was impropriator of, and entitled to, the great tithes of every ſort ariſing within the ſaid open and common fields of Grimſton, and the precincts and liberties thereof, and alſo to the tithe of hay ariſing within the ſaid fields, or to a yearly modus, compoſition, or money payment, in lieu thereof; and was alſo ſeiſed of and entitled to certain glebe lands, and to divers other parcels of land, lying in the ſaid open and common fields, and to a right of common in, upon, and over the ſame fields; and the Rev. George Cardale, D. D. as vicar of Rothley, was entitled to certain glebe lands within the ſaid fields of Grimſton, and to a right of common in reſpect of ſuch lands, and alſo to all the ſmall tithes and vicarial payments in Grimſton; and Thomas Smith, eſq. Jonathan Trueman, Selina counteſs of Huntingdon as guardian to Joſeph Bird, Michael Maſon, Henry Ward, William Grayham, and others, were then the proprietors of the reſidue of the lands in the ſaid fields, and entitled to the reſidue of the right of common thereupon. An allotment in the firſt place is directed to Mr. Babington, in ſatisfaction for his right and intereſt in the waſte ground; and to the earl of Aylesford, and the vicar of Rothley reſpectively, a proportionable quantity for their glebe lands and right of common; two acres to be appropriated to the repairs of the highways; and one ſeventh part of the reſidue to be allotted to the impropriator and vicar, as a compoſition for all impropriate and vicarial tithes (except only the tithes of the homeſteads in Grimſton, mortuaries, ſurplice and other fees, of right due to the vicarage of Rothley); the allotment to be divided between the impropriator and vicar in proportion to the ſums they were entitled to receive reſpectively for their great and ſmall tithes.

---

[1] "In Grimeſtone 3 carucatæ terræ, unâ bovatâ & dimidiâ minus." Domeſday, fol. 230. b. 1.

[2] "Gerardus tenet de R[oberti de Buci] 3 carucatas terre in Grimeſtone. Tempore Regis Edwardi erant ibi 3 carucæ & dimidia. In dominico eſt una; & 3 villani, cum 6 bordariis. Ibi 7 acræ prati. Valuit 12 denarios; modò 5 ſolidos." Domeſday, fol. 234. b. 1.

[3] Eſch. 31 Edw. I. N° 30. Leic.

[4] Eſch. 29 Edw. II. N° 88. Leic.

[5] Eſch. 29 Edw. II. N° 98. Leic.

[6] Appendix to vol. II. p. 113.

[7] Cart. 1 Edw. III. N° 66.

[8] Eſch. 4 Ric. II. N° 14. Leic.

[9] Eſch. 15 Ric. II. pars 1. N° 15.

[10] Eſch. 8 Hen. V. N° 71. Leic.

[11] Bailiffs Accompts in the Augmentation office, 31 Hen. VIII.

[12] Leaſes in the Augmentation office.

[13] Ibid.

[14] Burton, MS.

The greateſt part of this lordſhip is now the property of the earl of Aylesford, who is alſo impropriator.

The ſoil of the lordſhip in general is clay; the neighbourhood remarkably hilly; and the air dry and healthy. The principal employment of the inhabitants is in huſbandry; the principal produce are fat ſheep.

The oldeſt Regiſter begins in 1635. Average baptiſms yearly for the firſt 20 years, 4; burials, 2¼; marriages not quite one.—In 20, near the laſt, baptiſms, 8½; burials, ſomewhat more than 5; and marriages 1¼.—The pariſh contains about 40 families.

The money raiſed for the poor of Grimſton in 1776, and alſo in 1783—1785, may be ſeen hereafter, under Keame, p. 982.

By the return to parliament in 1801, Grimſton contained 40 inhabited houſes, and 2 uninhabited; 84 males, 99 females, in all 183; of whom 28 were chiefly employed in agriculture, and 12 in trade, manufactures, &c.

The poors rates are about 1*s*. 6*d*. in the pound.

The CHURCH (Plate CXXXI.)

dedicated to St. John, conſiſts of a nave and chancel; and a South tranſept, now uſed as a ſchool; for which 50*s*. a year was left by Mrs. Stevens of Shouldby; and 50*s*. is paid out of a cloſe, called The Church Cloſe.

On the Weſt end of the church is a ſmall old ſquare tower, with three bells; the firſt thus inſcribed:

"By friends to Country, Church, and King,
I was re-caſt again to ſing. 1780."

The font is plain; and the church neatly pewed.

May 1, 1526, a leaſe was granted, by the prior and brethren of the hoſpital of St. John of Jeruſalem, to Barnaby and Baldwin Somer, of Loughborough, gentlemen, of the tithes of the villages of Grimeſton, Caldwell, and Wycame, at an annual rent of £9. 6*s*. 8*d*.[1]

John Clackſton occurs miniſter in 1635; and he was appointed to ſerve the cure of the ſequeſtered miniſter at Grimſton, Oct. 9, 1644, on a ſtipend of £50. a year out of the impropriate rectory belonging to ſir Francis Inglefield; which was repeatedly confirmed by the following orders of the Parliamentary ſequeſtrators:

"May 20, 1646. By virtue of an order of both houſes of Parliament of the 2d of May inſtant, it is ordered, that the yearly ſum of £50. out of the rectory impropriate of Grimſton, in the county of Leiceſter, ſequeſtered from ſir Francis Inglefeild, Papiſt and delinquent, be paid to and for increaſe of the maintenance of Mr. John Clackſton, miniſter of the church of Grimſton aforeſaid, the vicarage whereof is worth in the beſt times but £16. per annum: And the ſequeſtrators of the premiſſes are required to pay the ſame accordingly, at ſuch times and ſeaſons of the year as the ſame is due and payable."

"Aug. 16, 1650. This Committee do appoint to hear parties on both ſides to the petition of John Claxton, miniſter of Grimſton, in the county of Leiceſter, this day preſented, concerning the augmentation by him claimed out of the impropriation of Grimſton aforeſaid, ſequeſtered from ſir Francis Inglefield, Papiſt and delinquent, on the 20th of Auguſt inſtant, the firſt cauſe; whereof parties on both ſides are hereby to take notice."

"Aug. 22, 1650. Upon hearing the cauſe between Mr. Claxton, miniſter of Grimſton, in the county of Leiceſter, and ſir Francis Inglefield, concerning the £50. a year by the ſaid Mr. Claxton claimed, in purſuance of a former order of this Committee, out of the impropriate rectory of Grimſton aforeſaid, ſequeſtered from the ſaid ſir Francis Inglefield, in preſence of counſel on both ſides; it is alledged, in behalf of the ſaid ſir Francis Inglefield, that the ſaid rectory is, together with other the lands of the ſaid ſir Francis, ſettled for payment of his debts, and that thereupon the ſequeſtration is taken off by the barons of the Exchequer: but it no way appeareth to this Committee, upon the peruſal of the deed by which the ſame is pretended to be ſo ſettled, nor of the order of the barons of the Exchequer, that there is any ſuch ſettlement, the ſaid rectory being not comprehended within the deed by which his lands are ſettled as aforeſaid, nor the ſequeſtration diſcharged: It is therefore ordered, that as well the three ſcore and ſeven pounds arrear of the ſaid £50. a year, by him the ſaid Mr. Claxton claimed, or ſo much as the ſaid rectory was worth for the time, as the ſaid £50. from hence accruing, or ſo much as the ſaid rectory is worth, be paid unto him the 29th of September next, without any farther delay; and that the ſaid £50. a-year be from time to time, or ſo much as the ſaid rectory is worth, from thence continued unto him the ſaid Mr. Claxton."

"Nov. 28, 1650. Exceptions being taken to the order of this Committee of the 22d of Auguſt laſt, made in the cauſe between Mr. Claxton, miniſter of Grimſton in the county of Leiceſter, and ſir Francis Inglefield, impropriator of the ſaid rectory, proof being offered that the ſaid rectory is not under ſequeſtration; this Committee do appoint to hear parties on both ſides thereon on the 31ſt of December next; whereof the ſaid Mr. Claxton is to have convenient notice."

"Dec. 31, 1650. Upon hearing the cauſe between ſir Francis Inglefield and Mr. Claxton, miniſter of Grimſton, in the county of Leiceſter, in preſence of counſel on both ſides, in purſuance of the former order of the 28th of November laſt; the ſaid ſir Francis Inglefield inſiſted upon the deed formerly by him produced the 22d of Auguſt laſt, whereby the tithes in queſtion are pretended to be conveyed for payment of his debts: Upon reading whereof, and full hearing both ſides, it appeareth unto this Committee, that the tithes in queſtion are not within the ſaid deed; and therefore this Committee think not fit as to the allegation to alter their judgement; but the ſaid ſir Francis Inglefield now farther inſiſted on it, that he is not ſequeſtered: Therefore, that this Committee may be likewiſe fully ſatisfied of the truth therein, it is ordered, that, upon the ſaid miniſter producing a ſufficient certificate, or other proof, of his the ſaid ſir Francis Inglefield being ſequeſtered, this Committee will then proceed to the determination of the ſaid cauſe, as to that point alſo, and no other; which evidence is to be produced on or before the 22d of January next."

"Jan. 22, 1650. Ordered, upon motion of the counſel of Mr. Claxton, miniſter of Grimſton in the county of Leiceſter, that the ſaid Mr. Claxton ſhall have further time till the 6th day of February next, peremptorily to prove the ſequeſtration of ſir Francis Inglefield; on which day the Committee will proceed to judgement in the ſaid cauſe."

"Feb. 6, 1650. Upon hearing the cauſe between Mr. Claxton, miniſter of Grimſton in the county of Leiceſter, and ſir Francis Inglefield, in preſence of both ſides; the ſaid Mr. Claxton produceth an order of the committee of ſequeſtration in the ſaid county, made in purſuance of an order of this Committee of the 20th of May, 1646; whereby they order Mr. Thomas Sondfield, their treaſurer, to pay unto the ſaid Mr. Claxton the £50. a year, granted by the ſaid order of this Committee, quarterly, out of the moneys due for the compoſition for the ſaid ſir Francis Inglefield's land at Grimſton aforeſaid: It is therefore ordered, that the former order of the 22d of Auguſt laſt, for payment of the ſaid £50. a year unto the ſaid Mr. Claxton, with the arrears thereof, be, and the ſame is hereby, confirmed."

---

[1] Cotton MSS. Nero E. VI. p. cclxxxviii.

"Feb. 19, 1650. This Committee do appoint Tueſday the 25th inſtant, to hear what ſir Francis Inglefield ſhall move, why he ſhould be heard againſt the order of the 6th of February inſtant, made in the cauſe between the ſaid ſir Francis Inglefield and Mr. Claxton, miniſter of Grimſton in the county of Leiceſter; whereof the ſaid Mr. Claxton is to have convenient notice."

"Feb. 27, 1650. Upon hearing counſel on both ſides, how that ſir Francis Inglefield could alledge why the former order of this Committee, of the 6th of February inſtant, ſhould not be put in execution, the ſaid ſir Francis Inglefield ſtill inſiſting upon it that the rectory of Grimſton, in the county of Leiceſter, is not ſequeſtered from him: Now, beſides the former evidence given the ſaid 6th of February for proof of the ſaid ſequeſtration, teſtimony is now given before this Committee, that two parts of the ſaid rectory were ſequeſtered from him the ſaid ſir Francis Inglefield for his recuſancy: It is therefore ordered, that the former order of this Committee for the ſaid ſir Francis's payment of £50. a year to Mr. Claxton, miniſter of the pariſh church of Grimſton aforeſaid, be, and the ſame is hereby, confirmed; and that the ſaid Mr. Claxton ſhall have the ſaid £50. a year paid unto him out of the ſaid rectory, according to the ſaid order, together with the remainder of the three ſcore and ſeven pounds formerly ordered to be paid unto him; and in caſe the ſaid ſir Francis ſhall not pay unto him the ſaid Mr. Claxton the ſaid remainder of the three ſcore and ſeven pounds arrears within one month next enſuing, that then the ſerjeant at arms attending the Parliament, or his deputy or deputies, do bring him the ſaid ſir Francis in ſafe cuſtody, to anſwer his ſaid contempt[1]."

In 1719, Grimſton and Wartnaby chapels were valued at £18. 10s.[2]

In 1778, a violent wind aroſe, which ſtript part of the church of its lead; and blew one ſheet over the top of a cottage at the diſtance of 30 yards.

The wake is on the Sunday before Midſummer. The feaſt follows St. Peter's day.

In 1793, the chapelry of Grimſton was augmented with £200. by the Governors of Queen Anne's bounty, in conſequence of which it became a perpetual curacy.

The preſent curate is Mr. Noble, vicar of Friſby.

In this church are no monumental inſcriptions; but there is a ſmall old croſs in the church-yard.

K E A M E,

antiently written Cayham and Keyham, is a ſmall village, and part of it is within the Soke of Rothley. It is ſix miles Eaſt from Leiceſter; and is bounded on the North by Beby and Hungarton: on the Weſt and South-weſt by Scraptoft; on the South by Houghton on the Hill; and on the Eaſt by Quenby. It is in the hundred of Eaſt Goſcote; and, in the eccleſiaſtical diviſion of the county, is within the deanry of Akeley.

In the general ſurvey, four ploughlands and eight acres of meadow in Cayham were noted as parcel of the royal manor of Rodelie; which manor was given by king Henry III. to the Knights Templars; and in like manner came afterwards to the Knights Hoſpitallers of St. John of Jeruſalem.

In 1260, the following legal proceeding occurs:

"Aſſiſa, &c. ſi Jo͞hes filius Simonis avunculus Willi filii Ric͞i de Cayham, fuit ſeiſitus de medietate 19 bovatarum terre in Cayam, &c. quam terram W' le Paamere tenet. Qui venit, & dicit q͞d manerium de Cayham eſt quoddam hamelettum ꝑtinens ad mañiũ de Role, q͞d eſt antiqũ manerium d͞ni regis de coronâ, & in quo non currit aliquod tale breve niſi parvum breve de recto clauſ͞m, &c. Quia hoc convictum eſt, perquirant aliud breve, ſi viderint expedire, &c."[3]

In the Itinerary of 1280, Cayham, Beby, Hungerton, and Quenby, anſwered collectively as one vill.

In the Regiſter of St. Mary de Pratis at Leiceſter is the following entry:

"Habemus in Kayham, ex dono Johannis filii Rogeri Clerici, 1 bovatam terre, cum omnibus pertinentiis ſuis; illam ſcilicet bovatam terre que fuit Rogeri Clerici patris mei: & 2 toſtum ad Wellebathe pro capitali manſo quod jacet juxta toſtum Gilberti patris mei, & ut in cartâ; reddendo capitali domino 11s͞. per annum, ut in libro de Chartwary[4]."

In 1346, Thomas Falkner (on the aid then granted for knighting Edward of Woodſtock the king's eldeſt ſon) was aſſeſſed 2s. for a twentieth part of one knight's fee in Cayham; and John de Seaton 2s. 6d. for a ſixteenth part of one knight's fee in the ſame lordſhip; both parcel of the fee of Cheſter and Huntingdon[5].

In a book of fifteenths and tenths granted by the laity in 1416, Cayham is rated at £1. 1s. 4*d*.; and in the ſubſidy of 1445 at the ſame ſum, but 4s. 4*d*. was then abated.

In 1478, John Cotton, eſq. died ſeiſed of the manor of Kayham, held of the king as of his dutchy of Lancaſter. He held alſo the manor of Thurcaſton; and left Richard his ſon and heir[6].

Certain lands in Keame, parcel of the priory of St. John of Jeruſalem, were leaſed by queen Elizabeth, Dec. 12, 1583, to Robert Bickerton[7].

In 1630, the freeholders at Keyham were Ralph Woodcock, gent. Thomas Davye, Thomas Neale, Thomas Reade, gent. and William Woodenby.

In 1722, 11 freeholders polled from Keame; and 10 in 1775.

In Auguſt 1762, a terrible fire broke out at the houſe of John Illſon at Keyham, which in a few hours entirely conſumed the ſame, together with the principal part of his houſehold furniture. He had a wife and ſix ſmall children, which were by this unhappy accident reduced to the greateſt diſtreſs.

By an act paſſed in 1771, for dividing and incloſing, in Keyham, in the pariſh of Rothley, ſeveral open fields and commonable places, Thomas Babington, eſq. is deſcribed as lord of the manor and ſoke of Rothley, of which Keyham is a member, with a peculiar exempt from eccleſiaſtical juriſdiction; and, as patron of the vicarage of Rothley, of which vicarage Keyham is alſo a member, is entitled to a fourth part of a yard-land in the ſaid fields, and to right of common therein, and in the ſaid commonable places; the Rev. William Babington, clerk, as vicar of the ſaid pariſh, entitled to all the tithes in kind, great and ſmall, ariſing in Keyham aforeſaid, except tithe hay, and to a certain yearly money payment, called hayſilver, in lieu thereof; and Cartwright Morris and Elborough Woodcock, deviſees in truſt named in the will of Thomas Glegg, deceaſed, John Miles, Samuel Woodford, and John Gilford, gentlemen, Ann Lovett, widow, and others, were then the proprietors of, and the perſons intereſted in, the reſidue of the ſaid fields and commons. An allotment was firſt directed to be made to the lord of the manor for his right and intereſt; and an eighth part of the reſidue to the vicar of Rothley, in lieu of all tithes and money payments; ſurplice fees, Eaſter offerings, and mortuaries (if any are payable in Keyham), alone excepted. The allotment to the vicar contained 125 acres. The Commiſſioners' award on the incloſure is inrolled in the Court of Common Pleas.

---

[1] From the original Minutes of Sequeſtration, preſerved in the Bodleian Library.

[2] Peck, MS.

[3] Placita apud Leic. anno 44 Hen. III. Rot. 7. in Receptu Scaccarii.

[4] Charyte's Rentale, fol. lxviii.

[5] Rot. Aux. 20 Edw. III.

[6] Eſch. 18 Edw. IV. n. 34.

[7] Leaſes in the Augmentation office.

The inhabitants of part of Keyham perform ſuit at Rothley Court; and of the other part at the Court for the Honour of Winton: and at the laſt-mentioned Court the thirdborough for this lordſhip is annually appointed.

Robert Hubbard, eſq. attorney at law, who died at Leiceſter in October 1802, poſſeſſed ſome of the property at Keame, which was not within the juriſdiction of the Soke.

The whole lordſhip contains about 900 acres; and Samuel Miles, eſq. of Leiceſter, is the preſent owner of about a third part of it.

For the charities at Keyham left by the family of Woodcock, ſee the copy of the Return as made to Parliament, in vol. I. p. 75; to which may be added, that, upon the incloſure in 1771, the field lands of the firſt charity were thrown into an allotment, containing 28 acres and 6 perches, the rent of which, and of ſundry ſmall houſes and gardens in the town, are applied to the benefit of the poor by the rev. Henry Woodcock of Barkby, the heir male and truſtee.

The money raiſed for the poor of Keame in 1776, and alſo in 1783—1785, may be ſeen hereafter, in p. 982.

By the Return made to Parliament in 1801, Keame contained 34 inhabited houſes, and 4 uninhabited; 66 males; 111 females; in all 177; of whom 27 were chiefly employed in agriculture, and 17 in trade, manufactures, &c.

Keame is delightfully ſituated upon an eminence; and hill and dale all around it are prettily interchanged. In this ſequeſtered ſpot is a boarding-ſchool for young ladies, under the ſuperintendance of a very reſpectable lady, Miſs Woodford. The number of boarders is between 50 and 60; who on Sunday make a very pleaſing appearance at church among the ruſtic worſhipers. They occupy the chancel, where they appear like beds of lilies in a flower-garden.

There are now living at Keame (June 18, 1803) 41 males, upward of 21 years of age, five of which are from 70 to 74 years old, and very likely to live ſeveral years longer. There are alſo now living 42 females, upwards of 21 years of age; ſeven of which are from 70 to 86 years old, moſt of them in good health; particularly one of them is ſo ſtout and hearty, as to bid fair to live to ſee 100 and upwards.

Mr. Samuel Woodford, the pariſh clerk, informs me that ſince he has known the town, being about 45 years, ſeveral men and women have died from 70 to 80 years of age, and two of the males at the advanced age of 92 and 93; and three females died within the three laſt years, one of them 79, one 82, the other 86.

The CHAPEL (ſee Plate CXXXI.)

dedicated to All Saints, is ſmall; conſiſting of a low tower (in which are three bells), and a nave and chancel all of one pace.

"Fonts," as Warton obſerves, in his Hiſtory of Kiddington, "in proportion to their antiquity, are capacious." The font of Keame chapel is capacious enough to contain a new-born infant, and ſeems to be of as antient a date as any thing about the chapel. The ſeats are in the old rectangular faſhion.

This church appears antiently to have been an independent parochial church, having within its juriſdiction the chapel of Bagrave: but, before the year 1240, we find it a chapelry of Rothley[1]; and to the vicar of Rothley an annual penſion of 6*s*. 8*d*. is ſtill paid, out of the eſtate of Samuel Miles, eſq.

The vicar of Rothley, having all the tithes of this pariſh ſmall and great, might without arrogance aſſume the title of rector of Keame.

From a MS Eſſay on Pariſh Regiſters, by the Rev. George Aſhby, B. D. preſident of St. John's college, Cambridge, ſir Thomas Cave extracted the following remarks; which, though founded on an erroneous principle, deſerve inſertion for their great ingenuity.

"In the Parochial Regiſter of Keame is the extraordinary account of the longevity of a former miniſter there; viz. Mr. Thomas Sampſon; if the evidence of his ſigning that Regiſter is an indiſputable proof of his great age.

The Regiſter commences A. D. 1563; Mr. Thomas Sampſon being their miniſter; but it appears not how long he might have been ſo before that date. He had by his wife Thomaſine eight children:

Joyce,	baptiſed	12 Feb.	1630.
Anne,	———	6 May,	1632.
Edward,	———	6 Feb.	1633.
Francis,	———	11 Oct.	1635.
Thomas,	———	1 Nov.	1637.
John,	———	15 Dec.	1639.
Suſanna,	———	25 July,	1641.
Elizabeth,	———	20 Oct.	1644.

And himſelf was buried 4 Aug. 1655.

Now, on ſuppoſition that Mr. Sampſon was only 22[2] years of age at the time this Regiſter begins (1563), he had then been miniſter of Keame, at the birth of his firſt child 67 years, and was 89 years of age.

his ſecond	69	———	91.
his third	70	———	92.
his fourth	72	———	94.
his fifth	74	———	96.
his ſixth	76	———	98.
his ſeventh	78	———	100.
his eighth	81	———	103.

and, according to this computation, he died when he was 114 years old, having been miniſter of Keame 92 years.

From the beginning of this Regiſter (1563) to the year 1623, Thomas Read and Edward Wigley were churchwardens. Allowing them to have been only 20 years of age when they came into their office, A. D. 1563 (though they might have been older than 20 years, as well as been in office before the year 1563), they had each of them been churchwardens at leaſt 70 years, and neither of them could have been leſs than 90 years of age[3]; and it is a ſtartling circumſtance, bordering upon improbability, though not an impoſſible thing, that the ſame two perſons ſhould continue living, and in the ſame office of churchwardens for 70 years, as well as the ſame miniſter, Mr. Sampſon, have continued in the ſame cure for the long term of 92 years.

There is ſomething greatly marvellous in theſe three inſtances of great age in the parſon and churchwardens of this pariſh; and the whole evidence of the truth ariſes from their ſigning the Regiſter themſelves; and from the entry of their deaths in the ſame Regiſters by their ſucceſſors. With regard to this point, it is to be obſerved, that all regiſters have an imaginary commencement; i. e. from the time in which they began to be kept in their reſpective pariſhes[4]; and alſo that few or none of them were begun ſo ſoon as at the time they were firſt directed to be, whatever ſome of them may pretend to. Some years after this order, the parſon of a pariſh thought proper, either in obedience to his ſuperiors, or for his own ſecurity, to collect, all at once, in a book (which he ought to have done at firſt, and continued annually), the burials, marriages, and chriſtenings, within his pariſh; and then he, the actual parſon of the pariſh, and the churchwardens for the time being, ſigned every page of it, to give it a more virtual evidence. This was plainly the fact in one caſe; viz. Robert Tatterſhall, vicar of Ardley in Hertfordſhire, collected, from the ſcattered looſe papers of his predeceſſors, the names of all ſuch perſons who had been chriſtened, married, or buried there, and engroſſed them fairly in a parchment book, as a record to poſterity [5]; and doubtleſs was the common practice of that time; and there all difficulties and doubts are ſolved about the matter; more eſpecially, when we may recollect that the parſon ſometimes excuſed himſelf the trouble of ſigning every page of the tranſcript after it is finiſhed; and ſometimes continues ſigning it to his death; ſo that if the old Regiſter happened to begin early, or ſoon after the order for regiſtering was made, and the incumbent happened to be a young man about the year 1600, ſo as to enjoy his living 30 or 40 years afterwards, he would appear to have lived incumbent on the ſame living for almoſt a hundred years. Whether the point of improbability in theſe remarkable ages is ſufficiently cleared up or not, this conjecture may put us upon our guard againſt a too implicit faith in all theſe kind of matricular and parochial records; following the prudent rule of the courts of juſtice in regard to evidence, who always rightly make a diſtinction between a copy, and a copy of a copy.

---

[1] See p. 946.

[2] It is not to be ſuppoſed that the Clergy before the Reformation could enjoy a benefice at an earlier age than they can ſince; however, it is not probable that any common perſon could attain an eccleſiaſtical benefice before that age; though there may be ſome inſtances of particular perſons having done ſo. See Bridges's Northamptonſhire, ſub Courten-hall, in Regiſtro.

[3] The whole of this Regiſter, ſo far as this account is concerned, is all written with Mr. Sampſon's own hand, till near the time of his death, which happened in 1655.

[4] Lord Cromwell probably took the hint of Parochial Regiſters from the ſame thing being practiſed in the monaſteries which he deſtroyed; or ſome of the myrmidons employed by him in that unjuſt work might have ſuggeſted the thought to him; or he might have ordered it from what he ſaw abroad in religious houſes: as I have ſeen the birth of Petratch proved from a Regiſter, without its being noticed as an uncommon practice. G. A.

Mr. Sampſon was buried Aug. 4, 1655; he was then at leaſt 114, and had been miniſter of Keame 92 years. The regiſter is of his own writing till near the time of his death. It was examined by the Rev. Mr. Juxon, on Feb. 28, 1743."

The ſuppoſition, however, of this great age was confuted in the General Evening Poſt, Dec. 10—12, 1765, by another, that he probably tranſcribed the Regiſter from 1563, and ſet his name to each page; which might make him paſs for rector there ever ſince 1563. The confutation came from the late lord Wentworth, who had it from Dr. Cardale of Rothley, to whom Mr. Aſhby had lent his MS diſſertation two or three years before. In this diſſertation the ſubject is fully conſidered, on occaſion of a regiſter at Mundane Parva, Herts, ſigned by the ſame rector (Richard Newton) and churchwardens, from 1558 to 1604.

The extract from Keame regiſter was copied by Mr. Bray; who, in a ſecond edition of his "Tour," ſays, "Deſirous of examining into ſo extraordinary a ſtory myſelf, I have ſince been at Keyham, and ſeen the Regiſter. It is very true that it is ſigned by Mr. Sampſon, as miniſter, every year from 1563 to 1655, or thereabouts: but on inſpection it appears, that from 1563 to about 1633, is nothing more than a tranſcript made by Mr. Sampſon from a former Regiſter, and atteſted by him at the bottom of each page by ſigning his name as miniſter, omitting to date his atteſtation. A circumſtance corroborates this: he has added the names of his two churchwardens after his own, which are the ſame for the firſt 70 years; a thing which would be not much leſs marvellous than his own age. It may be further obſerved, that after 1633 (or thereabouts, for I do not recollect the exact year) there appears to be different churchwardens every year."

"This obſervation," adds the Rev. Mr. Woodcock, "exactly correſponds with my ideas upon the ſubject. Some years ago (when I was vicar of Rothley, and had poſſeſſion of Keame Regiſter) I carefully examined it, to aſcertain how far the tradition of Mr. Sampſon's longevity [1] could be proved from it; and I was perfectly ſatisfied that for many years in which he is ſuppoſed to have ſigned the Regiſter as the reſident curate, he had only made a tranſcript from another; for in theſe years the ſame names are repeated as churchwardens alſo, they having evidently examined the original with him, and thus teſtified the truth of the copy. Many are the inſtances in which former Regiſters (probably in a ſtate of decay) have been carefully tranſcribed by clergymen aware of the importance of preſerving ſuch records, and ſigned, as here, at the bottom of each page by the churchwardens. In Beby, the adjacent pariſh, it ſeems to have been the caſe from 1538 to 1599 [2]."

This account ſhall be cloſed by obſerving, that my curioſity led me to a perſonal inſpection of this noted Regiſter, which is in the poſſeſſion of Mr. Babington; and find that it was tranſcribed in 1633 or 1634, by Mr. Sampſon, whoſe death is thus recorded in it:

"Mr. Thomas Sampſon, miniſter, buried the 4th day of Auguſt 1655;" ſigned "Henry Stork, miniſter."

A later Regiſter begins in 1735; and contains during the firſt five years 33 baptiſms, and 24 burials. In the five years ending in 1790, are 25 baptiſms and 19 burials.

The burial-ground is in a field nearly half a mile from the village.

In Bacon's Liber Regis, the chapel of Keame is ſtated to be worth 50*l*. a year.

On the North wall of the chancel is this memorial:

"Thomas Woodcock, of Keam, gent. gave to the poor of Keam, by his laſt will (bearing date 1680), yearly and every year for ever, out of the rents and profits of a cloſe in Scraptoft lordſhip, commonly called Depdale cloſe, containing 60 acres or thereabouts, upon the feaſt-day of St. Thomas the Apoſtle, to four of the pooreſt widows, and in default of ſuch four to a leſs number, 20 hundred weight of good pit-coals, and alſo 30 twopenny loaves, to be then diſtributed among the pooreſt inhabitants. That this charitable donation be remembered for the benefit of the poor, John Summerfeld, churchwarden of this place, cauſed this ſtone to be erected, A.D. 1750."

---

[1] See Chauncey's Hertfordſhire, p. 74.

[2] I ſhall be excuſed for copying another paragraph from Mr. Woodcock's letter, as ſtrictly connected with the ſubject-matter of theſe volumes: "From an old deed belonging to my family I find that Hugh Botham, whoſe will I furniſhed you with as to his benefactions to the poor of Barkby and many other pariſhes, was living at Barkby in 1593.—On examining the Roman pavement at Mr. Worthington's houſe in Leiceſter lately, I was ſtruck with an idea, from the ſmall ſize of it, that it was the dreſſing floor of a bath, and that one of larger ſize, forming the bottom, might probably be diſcovered by digging a few feet lower than the preſent cellar; and I am rather confirmed in this opinion upon looking into your hiſtory of that part of the town of Leiceſter, where, it ſeems, the ſurface of the earth was antiently many feet lower than at preſent. I throw out this hint, that it may be conſidered further by your Antiquarian Friends.—In the Weſtern part of Humberſton field the point or apex of an extenſive rock of the granite kind, like thoſe of Mountſorell hills and the places adjoining thereto, riſes up conſiderably above the ground. This is called Holſtone; a corruption probably of Holy Stone; and tallies ſomewhat with the tradition, that near this ſpot there once was an houſe, or cell, belonging to the abbey of St. Mary de Pratis, within full view of which it would there have ſtood."—Somewhat ſimilar to this is Little John's ſtone (7 feet 2 inches high, and 11 feet 3 inches wide, and engraved as a vignette in p. 1084.) ſituate about a quarter of a mile North-eaſt of Leiceſter Abbey, in a kind of amphitheatre, which ſeems naturally made; and about 16 feet diſtant from the ſite of ſuch another.—Theſe are the only inſtances that have occurred to me of the Cromlech kind (for ſuch they moſt probably are) within this county. In Dorſetſhire and the other Weſtern counties theſe Holy ſtones are very frequent, and in general are rough, as drawn out of the quarry. By the common people they are ſometimes called Hell ſtones; a name deducible either from helan, to cover or conceal, or rather from heiliȝ, holi. See Hutchins's Dorſet, ed. 1803, vol. II. p. 310, where a Cromlech at Portiſham is engraved.

	Rothley[1].			Caldwell and Wykeham.			Gaddeſby.			Grimſton.			Keame.			Wartnaby.
Money raiſed for the poor	£.	s.	d.	£.	s.	d.	£.	s.	d.	£.	s.	d.	£.	s.	d.	£.	s.	d.
in year ending at Eaſter 1776,	115	2	5	24	2	9	78	5	5	38	15	2	73	12	0	41	11	10
Expended in county rates,	5	0	9	3	10	4	5	12	4	5	4	4	4	8	8	10	1	7
——— on the poor,	110	0	1	20	12	5	74	2	4	33	10	10	69	3	4	27	1	2
Rent of workhouſe,	6	13	4	2	10	0	6	3	8	0	0	0	2	15	0	3	0	10
Expended in litigations,	0	18	0	0	0	0	0	7	11	0	0	0	2	18	4	0	0	0
Money raiſed for 1783,	182	12	2	34	12	5	35	6	2	66	8	1	120	13	9	37	19	8
——— 1784,	187	4	3	41	14	0	39	14	11	53	4	6	120	9	1	39	7	9
——— 1785,	180	1	7	36	3	5	52	19	4	64	18	7	100	16	1	46	9	4
Medium of three years,	183	6	0	37	9	11	43	13	6	61	10	4	113	19	7	41	5	7
——— of county expences,	3	4	8	4	13	11	0	0	0	5	17	0	5	9	0	4	11	5
——— of expences not relating to the poor; repairs of the church, roads, &c.	4	0	11	0	0	0	2	10	0	3	8	3	1	10	10	0	2	6
Medium of annual expence,	176	0	5	32	16	0	40	3	6	52	5	1	106	19	9	36	11	8
Attending on magiſtrates,	4	4	7	0	1	4	2	19	4	2	0	5	1	13	2	0	0	0
Entertainments at meetings,	1	6	5	0	2	7	0	0	0	0	3	0	0	13	1	0	2	0
——— of law expences,	0	13	4	0	0	0	2	14	9	0	1	2	1	18	4	0	0	0
Setting the poor to work,	0	10	10	0	0	0	0	9	1	0	10	7	0	0	2	0	0	0

MONUMENTAL INSCRIPTIONS.

In the chancel:

On a mural tablet:

"Ann Reade, the ſecond wife of Thomas Reade, departed this life the 29th day of January, and was buried in the chancel belonging to the pariſh church of Houghton,
Anno Domini 1634, ætatis 52.
My faith in Chriſt my ſoul ſhall ſave,
And raiſe my bodie from the grave."

On the floor:

"William . . . . . the . . . . .
and Elizabeth, who departed this life the 20th day of December, 1650, aged 90."

"Here lieth interred the body of William Clayton,
who died 27 April, 1753, aged 30.
Alſo here lieth interred the body of Mary,
the wife of William Clayton,
who departed this life the 24th day of June, 1773,
aged 52 years.
Likewiſe here lieth interred the body of Conſtant, the daughter of the above William and Mary Clayton,
who died in her infancy."

"Here lieth interred the body of Thomas Steel.
He departed this life the 9th day of September, 1770,
in the 29th year of his age.
Here alſo lieth the body of Ann,
the daughter of Thomas Steel by Elizabeth.
She died October the 30th, 1767, in her infancy.
And alſo of Elizabeth, relict of Thomas Steel.
She died September the 6th, 1797, aged 59 years."

"Here lieth the body of Thomas Woodcock, gent.
who departed this life the 11th day of June,
anno Dom. 1731,
in the 71ſt year of his age."

"Here lyeth the body of Elizabeth,
relict of Thomas Woodcock, gent.
who died April 6, 1743, aged 70."

"Sacred to rhe memory of Thomas Clayton.
He departed this life the 2d of September, 1780,
aged 52 years.
Beneath alſo reſt the remains of Ann, relict of the above Thomas Clayton.
She died May the 9th, 1798, aged 70 years."

Partly covered by a pew:

" . . . .
. . . . Clayton,
. . . . 1736, aged 34."

" . . . . died October 8, 1719, aged 18."

"Here lieth the body of Mr. John Clayton, who departed this life the 17th day of March, anno Dom. 1756, aged 73 years.
The remains of Sarah,
the ſecond wife of the above Mr. John Clayton, lie alſo interred here.
She died October the 25th, 1783, aged 75 years."

On the chapel floor:

"Here lieth the body of Daniel Clayton,
who departed this life the 11th of November,
Anno Domini 1746, aged 50 years."

"Here lieth interred the body of John Clayton, ſon of Daniel Clayton, and Catharine his wife, who died, much lamented, Nov. 10,
Anno Domini 1757, in the 21ſt year of his age.
Young men, prepare yourſelves to die,
For life is ſhort, and death is nigh:
In health and ſtrength put not your truſt,
The ſtrongeſt living is but duſt."

"Here lie the bodies of Thomas and Catherine, ſon and daughter of Daniel Clayton,
by Catharine his wife. He was born May 19, 1734;
ſhe March 7, 1738.
He was buried May 18, 1735; ſhe Oct. 27, 1740."

"Here alſo lieth interred the body of Catherine, wife of Daniel Clayton,
who departed this life Dec. 9, 1755, aged 56."

"Here lyeth the body of Thomas Clayton, who departed this life the 17th of Auguſt,
Anno Domini 1728, in the 79th year of his age.
Alſo the body of Conſtance Clayton, his wife.
She died 22 April, 1744, in the 89th year of her age."

"In hopes of a joyful reſurrection to life eternal, here lieth interred the body of Thomas Clayton (late of Thurnby) ſecond ſon of Thomas Clayton, by Conſtance his wife.
He died July 23, 1752, in the 72d year of his age."

"Here lieth interred the body of Joan Ray,
the wife of William Ray, late citizen of London, and daughter of Richard and Dorothy Ewen,
of Mackſey, in the county of Lincoln.
She departed this life Nov. 18, 1757,
in the 57th year of her age."

" . . . .
Shee had iſſue four ſons and one daughter;
Edward, William, Thomas, Ralphe, and Elizabeth; departed this liſe the 31ſt of December, 1666, aged 84."

In the chapel burial-ground:

Elizabeth daughter of Charles Guilford, wife of William Jelley and T. Cobley, died June 7, 1747, aged 72.

William Guilford, died July 10, 1743, aged 87.
Henry Guilford, died Oct. 17, 1768, aged 92.
John Guilford, died Nov. 18, 1771, aged 65.
Samuel Guilford, died May 2, 1787, aged 71.
Mary his wife, Nov. 7, 1785, aged 62.
Sarah Butling, died Oct. 1, 1761, aged 71.
William Butling, died March 17, 1768, aged 79.
William Summerfield, died Sept. 6, 1777, aged 59.
Grace Summerfield his wife, August 8, 1780, aged 57.
Alexander Moore, died Oct. 28, 1771, aged 72.

---

[1] In the Liberty of Rothley Temple, the return ſtates that there were "no poor."

Elizabeth Moore, died Sept. 27, 1766, aged 63.
Thomas Neale, died May 22, 1762, aged 92.
Mary Neale, died Feb. 18, 1762, aged 68.
Mary wife of Jonathan Goddard, died April 7, 1771, aged 70.
Sarah wife of William Goddard, died Jan. 15, 1767, aged 69.
Joſeph Gilbert, died March 10, 1776, aged 63.
Rachel, relict of Joſeph Gilbert, died Dec. 2, 1796, aged 83.
Thomas Gilbert, died May 21, 1755, aged 89.

The Pedigree of WOODCOCK, of Keame, alias Cayham, and of Barkby, in the County of Leiceſter; deſcended, through the Families of Pochin, Dixie, Beaumont, and Faunt, from Eleanor fifth Daughter of Henry Plantagenet Earl of Lancaſter, Grandſon to King Henry III.; and by another Branch, through the Families of Faunt and Percy, to Mary one other Daughter of Henry Plantagenet Earl of Lancaſter; and through the Families of Pochin and Hussey, to Sir William Huſſey, Brother to Lord Huſſey, temp. Henry VIII. (Collected from the Regiſters of the College of Arms, and other authentic Records, and deduced to the Year 1803.)

Arms: Or, on a bend ſiniſter Gules, three croſſlets fitchy Or. Creſt, a demi lion rampant Gules, holding in his paw a croſſlet fitchy Or. Plate CXXXI.

Thomas Woodcock, of Keame, or Cayham, co. Leiceſter, deſcended from a family in London = . . .

Ralph Woodcock, of Keame aforeſaid about 1558; noticed as a freeholder there in 1630; died about 1656, æt. 98. = Catharine, daughter of William Clarke, of Bruntingthorpe, co. Leiceſter, clerk.

Margaret, third dau. of Henry Faunt,[1] of Claybrooke, firſt wife. = 1. Edward Woodcock, of Keame aforeſaid about 1606; died about 1658, æt. 52. = Jane, dau. of Will. Roe, of Welborn, co. Linc. ſecond wife.
2. William, unmarried.
3. Tho. Woodcock, of Keame, born about 1610; living 1682; died ſ. p. = Mary, dau. of Tho. Jennour, of Llandornrod, co. Radnor, eſq. died about 1677.
4. Ralph Woodcock, a woollen draper in London, died 1666. = Anne, dau. of Simon Gearing, of London, brewer.
Elizabeth, unmarried.

Elizabeth, living unmarried, æt. about 32.
Thomas Woodcock, of Keame, æt. about 34. = Anne, dau. of Sampſon Goodall, of Earl Shilton.
1. Ralph, born 1648.
2. Thomas, born 1651.
Catharine, born 165.

Mary, æt. about 4.

1. Ralph[2] Woodcock, born 1633. = Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas Lewin, of Thurnby, co. Leic. gent.
2. Henry Woodcock, a mercer in London, æt. 47. = Mary, dau. of Thomas Cotton, of Laughton, ſiſter to Samuel Cotton, eſq. of Dadlington, eſq.

Henry, æt. about 18.
1. Margaret.
2. Mary.

1. Thomas Woodcock, of Keame, b. at Thurnby in 1663; buried in Keame chancel 1734. = Elizabeth[3], dau. of Thomas Pochin, of Barkby, co. Leic. eſq. by his ſecond wife Barbara, daughter of ſir Wolſtan Dixie, of Boſworth-park, co. Leic. bart.
2. Ralph, born 1666.
3. Edward, b. 1667.
4. Henry, b. 1681.
1. Elizabeth.
2. Alice.
3. Margaret, married to Tho. Hall, of Shakerſton, gent.

Thomas Woodcock, of Keame, born 1690; married Jan. 22, 1716. = Mary[4] daughter of Thomas Pochin, of Barkby, eſq. (grandſon of Thomas Pochin above) by Mary, daughter and at length heir of ſir Charles Huſſey, of Caythorpe, co. Lincoln, bart.

1. Thomas Woodcock, born at Segrave, co. Leic. May 1, 1718; married July 24, 1745, at St. Sepulchre's, Northampton; vicar of Wiſtow and Kilby; died March 9, 1763; and was buried in the church at Kilby, near to the altar, on the North ſide. = Chriſtiana daughter of . . . Fox, of Burton Latimer, co. Northampton, gent. died 1774.
3. Edward, b. at Barkbythorpe Feb. 5, 1723; died and was buried at Aſhby de la Zouch. = . . . dau. of . . . Somerfield of Keame.
2. Ralph, born at Barkbythorpe Nov. 9, 1719; married . . . .; and had one daughter Sarah; died at Barkby 17 . . .
Elizabeth, b. at Barkbythorpe Dec. 10, 1720; died a maiden, May 24, 1776; and was buried in Barkby church.
Mary, Catharine, Catharine, all died infants.

Edward. Thomas.
Three daughters.

Henry Woodcock, born at Kilby Aug. 12, 1755; LL. B. of Trinity Hall, Cambridge, 1780; married Nov. 1, 1785, at Syſton; vicar of Barkby, co. Leiceſter, 17 . . . rector of Caythorpe, co. Lincoln 17 . . .; living 1803. = Anne, dau. of John Whattoff Cleever, of Syſton, co. Leic. gent. living 1803.

1. John-William Woodcock, born at Barkby Sept. 13, 1786.
2. George, born at Barkby Nov. 8, 1789.
3. Henry, born at Barkby June 4, 1794; d. 1802.
Anne, born at Barkby Dec. 23, 1787.
Eleanor-Mary-Frances, born at Barkby Sept. 3, 1792.
Mary-Chriſtian, born at Barkby Dec. 25, 1795.

---

[1] See the pedigree of Faunt of Foſton, up to ſir Alexander Percy, knt. ſon of Henry lord Percy and Mary daughter of Henry Plantagenet earl of Lancaſter, and grandſon to king Henry III.

[2] By this Ralph, the family pedigree was entered at the Heraldic Viſitation at Loughborough, Sept. 11, 1682.—From either Ralph his ſecond ſon, or Edward the third ſon, is deſcended the family of John Woodcock, eſq. of Bloomſbury-ſquare, ſon of Elborough Woodcock, eſq. deceaſed; (although in a modern folio book of family deſcents it has been otherwiſe ſtated.) There is alſo a branch of the Keame family of Woodcock interred in Highgate chapel, with an eſcutcheon in the chapel, and the coffin-plate of Jane Woodcock, who died in 1767, taken up, and nailed on the outſide of the South wall. She was of a family of Woodcock of Highgate, Iſlington, St. Andrew's Holborn, Hackney, and Wrangle, Leake, and Harbling, Lincolnſhire.

[3] See the pedigrees of Pochin of Barkby, to Walter Blunt lord Mountjoye, Willoughby, Skeffington, Palmer, and Walter le Poer, who gave great revenues to Leiceſter Abbey; and of Dixie of Boſworth Park, through Beaumont, to Eleanor fifth daughter of Henry Plantagenet earl of Lancaſter.

[4] See the pedigree of Pochin of Barkby, and of Humfrey of Keythorpe, co. Leic. to ſir William Humfrey, brother to lord Humfrey, temp. Hen. VIII.

WARTNABY,

WARTNABY,

antiently written Worcnedbie and Warkenothby, is a ſmall village, parcel of the Soke of Rothley; 4 miles diſtant from Melton Mowbray, 10 from Loughborough, and 15 from Leiceſter; bounded by Abkettleby on the Eaſt; Saxulby on the South-weſt; Nether Broughton on the North; and Grimſton on the Weſt. It is in the hundred of Eaſt Goſcote; and, in the eccleſiaſtical diviſion of the county, is part of the deanry of Akeley.

Beneath the town is a beautiful artificial ſheet of water.

At the general ſurvey, Worcnedbie is noticed as a member of the royal manor of Rodolei, containing ſix ploughlands, and ten acres of meadow [1].

One ploughland and a half, and half an oxgang, in Wordebi, were held by Goiſfrid de Wirce, as parcel of the manor of Melton [2]; and half a ploughland there lay waſte, yet was worth eight pence [3].

The following deed is about the reign of king John:

"Inter Willielmum de Verdun & Aliciam uxorem ejus, & Philippum de Waſteneis & Ampheliam uxorem ſuam, & Simonem de Sancto Mauro & Iſoudam uxorem ſuam, de toto tenemento quod tenuit Dina mater predictarum Alicie, Amphelie, & Iſoude. Ad partem Willielmi Verdun venit totum tenementum cum parte liberè tenent' quod Robertus filius Walteri tenuit in Eſton & Shardelaw & Wilnâ, except' quod tenuerunt Reginaldus de Wilnâ & Hawiſia vidua & Robertus frater Baudwini; & remanet Willielmo Verdun terra de Warkenathbi, & boſci de Mort & Small' & Rideſley; & totum jus quod Philippus de Waſteneis & Amphilia & Simo de Sancto Mauro & Iſouda habuerunt in terrâ quam tenet Willielmus filius Nigelli. Ita ſit quod venient in curiâ domini regis ad commodum Willielmi, & illud jus ei quietum clamabunt. Philippo verò de Waſteneiâ & Amphelie pro parte ſuâ remanent tenementa Roberti Dine, & quod Robertus filius Walteri tenuit in Kirkebi, & quod Juliana de Daivill tenet, & quod dicta Dina tenuit in Angodeſthorpe & Huñetorp & Trengeſton, & 2 virgate terre in Hemington quas Hugo de Waldo & Brune tenuerunt, & ſervicium Willielmi de Neylſton. Simoni de Sancto Mauro & Iſoude que terre Robertus filius Walteri tenuit in Mort & Small' & Rideſley, except' (ut prius); toftum quem Doda tenuit in Wilnâ, in Shardelaw & Hemington, quas Reginaldus & Adam & Rogerus tenuerunt, & Matilda quondam uxor Bruning in Warkenathbi. Et ſciendum quod Willielmus de Verdun debet reddere per annum Philippo de Waſteneis & Simoni de Sancto Mauro xx denarios ad proficiendum ſervicium comitis Leiceſtrie pro terrâ de Hemington. Teſtibus; G. abbate Ceſtrie, B. decano Ceſtrie, Heliâ de Dittſwrth, Roberto de Trengſton, Roberto de Mort, Hugone fratre ſuo, Gaufrido de Sancto Mauro, Willielmo filio Reginaldi, Henrico filio ſuo, Warino de Snipeſton, Willielmo de Gardino, Gilberto Lindeſeia."

In 1274, Maud de St. Andrew died ſeiſed of this manor [4]; but he was ſuppoſed to have held it of the Knights Templars [5].

In the Itinerary of 1280, Wartnaby, Grimſton, Caldwell, and Wykeham, anſwered collectively as one vill.

In a book of fifteenths and tenths granted by the laity in 1415, Warknaby was rated at £2. 4ſ.; and in the ſubſidy of 1445 at the ſame ſum, when 4ſ. was abated.

As part of the Soke of Rothley, Wartnaby became the property of the Knights Templars, and after of the Knights Hoſpitallers of St. John of Jeruſalem; from whom, at the diſſolution of religious houſes, it reverted to the crown.

Tithe corn and hay in Wartnaby were let to Andrew Nowell by queen Elizabeth in 1583, yearly rent £4.; and certain lands there were alſo let to Thomas Giles, by the crown, in the ſame year [6].

The freeholders here in 1630 were, William Noble, gent. John Wartnabye, William Stokes, John Pares.

By an act paſſed in 1764, for dividing and incloſing ſeveral open and common fields in Wartnaby conſiſting of arable land, and meadow and paſture ground, containing about 700 acres, Wartnaby is deſcribed to be parcel of the manor and ſoke, and within the peculiar and exempt eccleſiaſtical juriſdiction, of Rothley, belonging to Thomas Babington, eſq. patron of the vicarage of Rothley, within which pariſh Wartnaby is a chapelry; and Mr. Babington, as lord of the manor and ſoke of Rothley (of and within which Wartnaby is a parcel and member), was not only entitled to all the waſte grounds in Wartnaby, but alſo to an alienation fine from every purchaſer of lands or hereditaments within the ſaid manor and ſoke, who had not lands in the ſaid manor at the time of ſuch purchaſe, of one ſhilling in the pound for every pound of the conſideration money for ſuch purchaſe; and alſo to divers rents, fees, and other privileges and royalties, incident and belonging to the ſaid manor and ſoke; and the lord viſcount Howe in the kingdom of Ireland as impropriator of the great tithes of every ſort and kind ariſing within the ſaid open and common fields of Wartnaby, and the precincts and liberties thereof, in manner following; that is to ſay, as to ſome of them in kind, and as to the others to a yearly modus, compoſition, or money payment, in lieu thereof; and alſo ſeiſed of, and entitled to, divers parcels of land lying in the ſaid open and common fields, and to a right of common in, upon, and over, the ſame fields; and the Rev. George Cardale, D. D. as vicar and incumbent of the vicarage of Rothley, and in right of the ſaid church, entitled to certain glebe lands within the ſaid fields of Wartnaby, and to right of common therein in reſpect of ſuch lands, and alſo to all the ſmall tithes and vicarial dues and payments in Wartnaby; and Ann Cant, widow, the Rev. John Cant, the Rev. Moor Scribo, Robert Wartnaby, and others, were the proprietors of the reſidue of the lands in the ſaid fields, and entitled to the reſidue of the right of common thereupon. An allotment is directed to be made to the lord of the manor of Rodeley, and to the vicar of that place, for their right in the waſte land and in the glebe; and two acres to be ſet out for the farther uſe of the lordſhip, for obtaining ſtone for the highways; after which, a ſeventh part to be allotted to the impropriator and vicar, in lieu of all impropriate and vicarial tithes and payments (except ſome cloſes, of about 27 acres, called Wartnaby Woulds, and the tithes of homeſteads in Wartnaby, mortuaries, burials, or ſurplice fees); the ſaid ſeventh part to be divided into forty-one parts and one quarter, of which the impropriator to have 35 parts, and the vicar 6 parts and a quarter.

In 1722, 8 freeholders polled from Wartnaby; and 7 in 1775; among whom whom was the Rev. Moor Scribo, then, and ſtill, vicar of Croyland, Lincolnſhire [7].

Forty ſhillings a year are given to the poor in coals.

The money raiſed for the poor of Wartnaby (and alſo of Rothley, &c.) in 1776, and in 1783-1785, may be ſeen under Keame, p. 982.

For the Return made to Parliament in 1786 reſpecting the poor at Wartnaby, ſee under Keame, p. 982.

By the Return to Parliament in 1801, Wartnaby contained 19 inhabited houſes, and one uninhabited; 40 males, 37 females; in all 77; of whom 23 were principally employed in agriculture, and 2 in trade and manufactures.

---

[1] "In Worcnodebie 6 carucatæ terræ & dimidia, & 8 acræ prati." Domeſday, fol. 230. b. 1.

[2] "In Wordebi 1 carucata terræ & dimidia, & dimidia bovatæ; & 6 acræ prati." Ibid. fol. 235. b. 1.

[3] "In Wordebi eſt dimidia carucata terræ vaſta. Tamen valet 8 denarios." Ibid. fol. 233. a. 2.

[4] Eſch. 3 Edw. I. n. 9.

[5] Burton, MS.

[6] Leaſes in the Augmentation office.

[7] Of whom ſee before, under Woodhouſe, p. 108.

The CHURCH (Plate CXXXII.)

dedicated to St. Martin, is ſmall and very antient, conſiſting of a nave, porch, South aile, and chancel.

On the Weſt end hang two ſmall bells.

The porch is ſlated, and the church is leaded.

Sketches of the font, which is very antient, of the old North door, and a ſmall window, are added in the plate, from drawings taking by Mr. Schnebbelie in 1791.

In or about the year 1791, Wartnaby received the benefit of an augmentation by Queen Anne's bounty; and the Rev. John Noble, vicar of Friſby, became the firſt perpetual curate.

MONUMENTAL INSCRIPTIONS.

In the chancel:

On mural tablets on the North ſide:

1. "Near this place lieth the body of Anne,
the wife of Chriſtopher Dexter, buried Jan. 18, 1709, aged 42 years.
Alſo the body of the aforeſaid Chriſtopher Dexter;
he departed this life May 31, 1736, aged 73 years."

2. "Here lieth interred the body of John Dexter, the ſon of Chriſtopher Dexter by Ann his wife;
he departed this life Feb. 21, 1717,
in the 7th year of his age."

3. "In memory of Sarah, the wife of Thomas Shuttlewood.
She departed this life Jan. 31, 1780, aged 28 years.
And near this place lie three children of Thomas and Sarah Shuttlewood.
Joel died Aug 16, 1779, aged 2 years.
Mary died Sept. 18, 1777.
Thomas died Sept. 24, 1779, aged 6 years."

In the nave:

"John Cantrell, gent. died Jan. 17, 1754, aged 52."

On a neat mural monument in the South aile:

"Near this place lie interred the remains of the Rev. William Cant[1], A. M. late vicar of North Somercotes, rector of Harby, and one of his Majeſty's juſtices of the peace for the county, who died Jan. 24, 1763, aged 56.
Alſo the body of Ann Cant, daughter of William and Ann Cant,
who died Dec. 17, 1751, aged 21.
Likewiſe the Rev. John Cant, ſon of William and Ann Cant, B. D.
rector of Knaptoft,
and late fellow of Queen's College, Cambridge,
who died the 4th day of February, 1781, aged 39."

In the church-yard.

Againſt the South wall, is an inſcription to the memory of Robert Wartnaby, who died April 27, 1727, aged 64; and of Ann his wife, who died Feb. 3, 1728, aged 60 years.

At the Weſt end is a monument, railed round, with the following inſcription:

"Ever dear to her friends will be the memory of Violatta, wife of
John Bullivant of Sproxton, gent.
and only grandchild of Robert Wartnaby, of Melton Mowbray, gent.
who departed this life Sept. 4, 1799,
aged 24 years.
Forbear, my friends, to weep,
Since Death has loſt its ſting:
Thoſe Chriſtians that in Jeſus ſleep,
Our God with him will bring."

On an upright ſtone:

"To the memory of Stephen Crofts, who died Sept. 10, 1781, aged 66 years.
Here lies interr'd beneath this ſacred ſod,
An honeſt man, that nobleſt work of God!
This ſtone poſterity does truly tell,
In every ſcene of life he acted well;
Let proud Oppreſſion ſuch an exit ſhew;
Friends he had many, not a ſingle foe!"

"Joyce, wife of Thomas Herrick, died Sept. 25, 1757, in her 49th year."

---

[1] Of Queen's college, Cambridge; B.A. 1728; M.A. 1734; vicar of North Somerton 17...; rector of Harby 1751. He poſſeſſed conſiderable property at Wartnaby; and, by marriage with Anne Cantrell, an heireſs, obtained the manor of Hartſhorn in Derbyſhire; which deſcended to his eldeſt ſon William, who was alſo of Queen's; B.A. 1758; M.A. 1761; and rector of Church Langley near Derby 1768, in right of his wife Miſs Marſh, ſiſter of John Marſh, eſq. of the Lloyd, near Wolverhampton, a well-known juſtice of the peace for the county of Stafford. The eſtate at Wartnaby became the property of a ſecond ſon, John, who was alſo of Queen's; B.A. 1763; M.A. 1766; B.D. 1773; and who, when ſenior fellow, retired on a college living, which he was permitted to exchange for Knaptoft, as more convenient to the eſtate at Wartnaby, where he died in the prime and enjoyment of life, after a few days confinement with a cold, Feb. 4, 1781; as did his elder brother, much in the ſame way, a few days after, at Langley; whoſe widow not long ſurviving, their ſon William-Bayley Cant, eſq. ſucceeded, whilſt a minor, to all the above property, of which, on his coming to age, in the ſummer of 1792, he took full poſſeſſion. He was intended for that ſacred profeſſion in which his family had enjoyed much emolument, and was with that intent admitted a penſioner of Queen's college, where, being of a convivial turn, he grew extremely corpulent from an indulgence of the pleaſures of the table; but that propenſity to grow fat was a much earlier conſtitutional diſeaſe, and the principal cauſe of a premature and ſudden death at the age of 29. His mental abilities being naturally diminiſhed by the incumbrance of dull and ſlothful matter, made him conſcious of incapacity to offer himſelf a candidate for holy orders, which (after taking the degree of B. A. in 1793) he prudently declined; and therefore ſold his maternal inheritance to the preſent rector of Langley, the rev. Edward Wilmot, ſecond ſon of the late ſir Robert Wilmot, bart. of Chaddeſdon, near Derby, for £6000. Mr. Cant was a young man of a natural good diſpoſition; but ſo warm an advocate for the principles which revolutionized America, that he gave to a favourite horſe of remarkable ſtrength the name of General George. Yet, notwithſtanding this humourous and apparently ſpirited appellation, he ſeemed to have been no little afraid of his revolutionizing friends in this country, when he ſo ſecured a pipe of his favourite old beverage within the walls of his cellar at Wartnaby, that it would puzzle the moſt ſhrewd and dextrous plunderer to find it out. The immediate cauſe of his death is ſuppoſed to have been an apoplexy, occaſioned by a ſhort confinement with a ſlight fit of gout, from which he was apparently almoſt recovered, and pronounced ſo much better by his apothecary, and alſo felt himſelf in ſuch ſpirits all the day on which he died, Dec. 16, 1801, that he invited a few friends to partake of a good dinner the next day, when he promiſed himſelf much pleaſure from their ſociety and a little muſic; but, about eight o'clock in the evening, after ordering the intended feaſt, he rung again for his houſekeeper, aſked her how he looked, and, upon her ſaying, "Very ill, Sir," he ſaid, "No, ſure!" took a glaſs of wine, threw himſelf on the bed;

And ſoon his feeble pulſe then beat no more;
His dazzled ſun of life thus early ſet,
No more to riſe, till, on the empyreal ſhore,
The juſt Tribunal of the World is met.

He left his eſtates and manor at Hartſhorn and Wartnaby, of the value of £25,000. (ſubject to legacies of £5000. to each of his three couſins, Miſs Partridge, Mrs. Andrew, and Mr. Murcott, who married a Partridge) to the Hon. Thomas Erſkine, as a token of his reſpect for that gentleman's abilities, as well as his approbation of his political principles; but, after making his will, in order to ſell a part of the Hartſhorn eſtate, he paſſed a recovery upon it; in conſequence of which, as he had done no act or deed afterwards to diſpoſe of it, the eſtate reverted to the heirs at law; and the reſidue not being ſufficient to pay the legacies, Mr. Erſkine's claim was laid aſide; but that reſpectable gentleman, it has been ſaid, (out of gratitude for the doubtleſs ſincere intention of his deceaſed friend) means to erect a monument to his memory in the pariſh church of Langley, where he was very handſomely interred in the family vault on Chriſtmas eve. Mr. Cant had left 100 l. to the poor of Wartnaby; but, owing to a deficiency in the legacies, only 85 l. and a few ſhillings came to the pariſh, which ſum is veſted in the Three per cent. Conſols.

The following Caſe and Opinion throw much hiſtorical light on the ſubject of a benevolent deed.

“ Dame Mary Weld, by will, dated Feb. 12, 1603-4, gave to the Company of Merchant Taylors, London (if they would accept the ſame), or otherwiſe ſuch other Company as her executors ſhould think fit, £2000. to be paid in ſix months after her deceaſe; upon truſt, that they and their ſucceſſors ſhould purchaſe therewith impropriations; which purchaſes ſhould be taken in the names of twelve or more of the better ſort of the ſaid Company: to hold, to them and their heirs, upon the ſeveral truſts in the will; and, for the better performance of the ſaid truſts, the Company ſhould covenant with the Governors of Chriſt's Hoſpital, to accompt yearly with them for the ſaid ſtock of £2000. And, to the intent the Hoſpital ſhould be careful to require ſuch yearly accompt, the Company, upon taking the ſame, were to pay five marks for the uſe of the poor children of the ſaid Hoſpital.

“ The Company of Merchant Taylors refuſing to accept the offer made by her executors; they as aforeſaid made offer thereof to the Company of Haberdaſhers: who did accept the ſame; and, by indenture tripartite, June 11, 1630, between ſir Robert Brooke, knt. ſir William Litton, knt. Peter Pheſant, eſq. executors of the ſaid lady Weld, of the firſt part; the Mayor, Commonalty, and Citizens of London, Governors of the Hoſpital, of the ſecond part; and the Maſter and Wardens of the Company of Haberdaſhers, of the third part; reciting the will and truſt therein, and the Merchant Taylors refuſal, &c.; in purſuance of the truſt, and accompliſhment of the ſaid Lady's will, the executors paid to the ſaid Company the ſaid £2000. And the Company thereby covenanted with the Governors of the ſaid Hoſpital to accompt and pay the ſaid five marks per annum, and perform the truſts in the ſaid will.

“ In 1632, the Company, with the ſaid ſtock of £2000. and produce thereof, purſuant to the aforeſaid truſts, inter alia, then purchaſed the impropriate rectory of Bitteſwell, in the county of Leiceſter; and preſented thereto accordingly. That the Company neglected the aforeſaid truſt, and ſuffered the ſaid ſtock to be embezzled: whereas the increaſe and whole fund (if managed as it ought to have been) would have amounted to ſeveral thouſand pounds; and, being ſued by the Hoſpital, and a recovery obtained for the ſame, and they in no capacity (their loſſes by fire and otherwiſe as alledged) to make it good, made offers of accommodation in reſpect thereof.

“ 13 Nov. 1706; many overtures having been made by the Company, they propoſing, by a voluntary ſubſcription of their own members, to raiſe a new ſtock of £1000. for the charitable purpoſes aforeſaid; it was agreed between the Company and Hoſpital, that ſuch a ſtock ſhould be accordingly raiſed, and employed for the charitable purpoſes in the ſaid Lady Weild's will; and that the Company ſhould defray all charges in law or equity that the Hoſpital had been or ſhould be at, in ſettling the ſaid charity; and the Company to give a deed under their common ſeal, to empower the Governors of the Hoſpital to preſent alternately to the parſonages then purchaſed, and to be purchaſed, for the ſole benefit of ſcholars educated in the ſaid Hoſpital; and to allow the ſaid Hoſpital the liberty of preſenting to the firſt vacancy.

“ Upon communicating to a General Court in Chriſt's Hoſpital the aforeſaid agreement, Nov. 29, 1706, the ſame was ratified and confirmed.

“ In Michaelmas Term 1707, the Hoſpital exhibited their bill in Chancery on the foot of the agreement; to which the Company of Haberdaſhers put in their anſwer. The cauſe came to hearing; and, May 30, 1708, it was decreed, that the ſaid propoſals made by the defendants the Haberdaſhers, and ratified by a General Court of Chriſt's Hoſpital, and by a General Court of the ſaid Company, for re-eſtabliſhing the ſaid charity, be accepted and complied with by each party; and that the agreement do ſtand and be performed: and that the Complainants and their ſucceſſors, and Defendants and their ſucceſſors, ſhall have a right of preſentation alternately to the ſaid five impropriations already purchaſed, and thoſe to be purchaſed. And the Complainants and their ſucceſſors ſhall have the nomination to the firſt vacancy that ſhall happen upon any the impropriations already purchaſed or hereafter to be purchaſed as aforeſaid.

“ July 1, 1707, the Hoſpital, purſuant to the agreement ratified between them and the Company, preſented one Matthew Dudley to one of the five parſonages, that of Layſton[1] St. Margaret in Suffolk.

“ In 1712, the Company preſented Mr. Swann to one of the five, which was the vicarage of Diſeworth in Leiceſterſhire[2]; and the next turn being the Hoſpital's, and taking place Aug. 1, 1717, by the death of Mr. Nicholſon, incumbent of Bitteſwell in Leiceſterſhire, another of the five; the Hoſpital, Oct. 16, 1717, nominated Mr. Crewe to be preſented thereto: And ſince ſuch nomination, it appears that a preſentation to that very living had been tendered to the biſhop, whereby Mr. Sanderſon claims a right to inſtitution and induction; and, upon ſome enquiry and ſearch made, it will appear to be founded upon the following order:

“ At a Court of Aſſiſtants, held at the Haberdaſhers Hall. Whereas Mr. Richard Snow, one of the Governors of Chriſt's Hoſpital, having been very ſerviceable in concluding a controverſy between the Governors of Chriſt's Hoſpital and this Company; and having heretofore given this Court to underſtand that he had a poor relation, one Richard Barnwell, that was in holy orders, whom he had brought up at his own charge; and giving this Court to underſtand likewiſe that he was a perſon of a ſober life and converſation, and at preſent had no manner of preferment; the ſaid Mr. Snow requeſted of this Court, that they would pleaſe to grant unto the ſaid Richard Barnwell the next preſentation of the vicarage of Bitteſwell, in the county of Leiceſter. This Court, taking the ſame into conſideration, and conſidering the ſervice the ſaid Mr. Snow had done, and how far it was in his power to ſerve the Company in perfecting the ſaid agreement: This Court doth order that the next preſentation be granted to the ſaid Mr. Richard Barnwell;” and, by contrivance between Mr. Snow and Mr. Stacy, then clerk to the Company, was under their ſeal granted accordingly, March 7, 1706, to Richard Barnwell, citizen and oilman of London. During the time of treaty between the Hoſpital and the Company and agreement made, Mr. Snow was a Governor of Chriſt's Hoſpital; and, being a clerk of the Six Clerks Office, was employed by the Hoſpital as their clerk in Chancery; and, without regard to his truſt as to the former, or duty as to the latter, but in notorious breach of them both, and direct abuſe of the Company, obtained the aforeſaid preſentation.

“ Q. I. Whether the grant from the Haberdaſhers Company to Richard Barnwell, oilman, be a good grant; when it was founded upon the order of the Company (that was made Feb. 21, 1706), that the preſentation ſhould be granted to Richard Barnwell that was in holy orders?

“ Opinion. This grant to Mr. Barnwell, the oilman, ſeems to be a deceit and impoſition on the Company, who intended the next preſentation for another perſon; but, however, till ſet aſide for ſuch deceit, would be valid in law, being under the common ſeal, if it were not for the preceding agreement, by which it now belongs to Chriſt's Hoſpital.

“ Q. II. Whether the agreement between the Company and Chriſt's Hoſpital, as mentioned in the Caſe, and ratified and confirmed by a General Court of Chriſt's Hoſpital, be ſuch an agreement as would be binding to the Hoſpital and Company, without the decree of the Court of Chancery?

“ Opinion. This agreement, being perfected by both the Company and the General Court of Chriſt's Hoſpital, veſts an intereſt in this living as from that time, the turn happening to the Hoſpital by virtue of that agreement; and though intermediate between the agreement and the vacancy, the Company of the Haberdaſhers have granted the next preſentation. That was not then in their power to do, unleſs it ſhould have happened to have been their turn; and it happening otherwiſe, the right of the Hoſpital is, by virtue of your agreement, antecedent to this grant: the decree of Chancery perpetuates the agreement, and ſeems to give it a ſanction; but it was valid in law of itſelf before the decree.

Wm. Thompson, Nov. 17, 1717.”

---

[1] Layſton was augmented by the Company of Haberdaſhers, by buying in the impropriation of about £50. a year, formerly wholly appropriated to Laiſton Abbey. Kennett on Impropriations, p. 410.

[2] The five livings purchaſed with the ſum left by lady Weld are Bitteſwell, Wigſton, and Diſeworth, in Leiceſterſhire; Layſton in Suffolk; and Albrighton in Shropſhire. They are alternately preſented to by the Haberdaſhers and the Governors of Chriſt's Hoſpital.

The eccleſiaſtical hiſtory of the Soke of Rothley, and of its peculiar and exempt juriſdiction, will be conſiderably illuſtrated by the following articles, all which have been extracted from original documents.

By leaſe dated May 31, 23 Hen. VIII. 1531, Hugh Woodcock, vicar of Rothley, demiſed to Thomas Stone, of Cawdewell, chaplain, "the chapel of Cawdewell and Wycam, the which belongs unto the vicarage of Rothley, with all manner of tithes, oblations, mortuaries, as now is couſtumyd to be had and taken, with all other manner of commodities and profits unto the ſaid chapel appertaining or belonging, within the towns and fields of Cawdewell and Wycam aforeſaid, with one yard-land meadow, paſture, and cloſing, now in the holding of Henry Browne," to hold from the feaſt of St. Martin in Winter next for three years, and ſo from three years to three years to the end of 21 years; the ſaid Thomas Stone to hold the tithes, &c. "for his wages in ſerving the cure [1]."

April 2, 1569, Robert Kendall was inſtituted to the vicarage of Rothley, by Nicholas Bullingham, biſhop of Lincoln, on the preſentation of Brian Cave, eſq. patron for that turn under a grant made "per honorabilem virum Ambroſium Cave militem [2]."

During the incumbency of Mr. Kendall, the chapel of St. Nicholas, in the South end of Mountſorell (which in 1552 appears to have contained every decent appendage to religious ſervice [3]) firſt fell into diſuſe; as will appear by the following particulars, which are copied from his own hand-writing:

> "Greeves and demand of Robert Kendall, vicar of Rothley, to the inhabitants of Mountſorell, for the decaying of the chapel belonging to the pariſh of Rothley; viz.

Imprimis, I find myſelf greeved with the inhabitants of Mountſorell, for pulling down of the chapel granted for the eaſe of my pariſhioners in Mountſorell, and making away the bells and like things belonging to the ſaid chapel, having neither grant from her majeſty, conſent of the biſhop, patron, or me the incumbent, againſt all right and equity.

Alſo, that they have ſold my chapel-yard, and made it the temporal poſſeſſion of a mere layman; which I and my predeceſſors have in good will ſuffered to go to the maintenance of a miniſter, to eaſe the inhabitants.

Alſo, I find myſelf greeved that the door of the ſaid chapel-yard was locked againſt me and my neighbours, that I and they could not go in and keep our accuſtomed perambulation.

Alſo, that they keep not a regiſter of the names of thoſe which be baptized and married in the ſaid chapel, and ſend me a note weekly of them, that I may regiſter the ſame.

Moreover, that when the perambulation of pariſhes is commanded and appointed by the Injunctions to be kept, not of any ſuperſtition, but for the keeping and holding the precincts, liberties, bounds, and meres of pariſhes, lordſhips, and manors; they, either of blind ſuperſtition, or rather to win to themſelves hereafter a pariſh, to the indignity and defrauding of my patron, myſelf, and my ſucceſſors, which may be much feared, have not only defaced, but utterly taken away, the knowledge and liberties of a chapel, the ſpecial evidence of my right.

My demands.

Firſt, all chapels of eaſe, with their bells, that might be ſpared, being given to the queen; as it would not be the part of a good and lawful ſubject to ſee her majeſty defrauded of her right; I demand there may be a juſt account made of the bells, ſlate, ſtone, and timber, and a third part thereof to be paid into the Exchequer, with humble ſuit to accept of that, and pardon their raſh attempt. Another part to be given to the churchwardens of Rothley, to make convenient comtres and ſeats for the inhabitants of Mountſorell, pariſhioners of Rothley church. The other part to be beſtowed upon the chapel yet ſtanding [4], by the diſcretion of ſuch as Mr. Babington and myſelf ſhall nominate.

Alſo, I demand the chapel-yard to be at my diſpoſition, and at the diſpoſition of my ſucceſſors, to give that or the rent thereof to the miniſter, as we ſhall ſee occaſion.

Alſo, I demand articles and covenants of them in writing, under the hands and ſeals of ſix of them, and a bond of them to perform; which bond I will by covenant to be renewed ſo often as any of thoſe ſix ſhall die, that there may be always ſix bounden.

That they ſhall be rated and pay to the maintenance of our books, bells, and repairing of our church and church-yard.

That they ſhall come to their pariſh church four ſeveral high days in the year, that ſhall be ſet down and appointed them.

That I and my ſucceſſors ſhall like and excuſe the miniſter; and they to appoint none without our conſent.

That they ſhall not defraud the vicar intaroled [5] of any tithes and dues belonging unto him; but ſhall make it known to the vicar when any ſuch defraud and wrongs ſhall be committed; and ſhall aſſiſt him, and help him to his right.

That, in time of peſtilence, they ſhall bury their dead in the Over-chapel yard.

That they ſhall weekly bring a true note of the names of all ſuch as ſhall be married and baptized, dwelling within Rothley pariſh.

That they ſhall come and go in perambulation with us, and not uſe any of their own within our pariſh beſide that we walk about."

June 3, 1602, Zachary Babington, LL.D. was inſtituted to the rectory of Coſſington, by William Chaderton biſhop of Lincoln, then vacant by the death of Hugh Bothe, on the preſentation of Matthew Babington, eſq. of Coſſington [6].

"Termino Paſche, anno tertio Jacobi Regis.
Lunæ, ſexto die Maii, 1605.
Ex parte Remembratoris Regis.

"Leiceſtr'. Whereas Robert Johnſon, clerk, archdeacon of the county of Leiceſter, hath exhibited his bill of complaint into this honourable Court againſt Humphry Babington, eſq. for not paying unto the ſaid complainant the yearly penſion or rent of 53*s*. 4*d*. due and payable for ſuch penſions, rents, procurations, and ſynodals, iſſuing and payable out of the church and rectory of Rothley appropriate, whereof the ſaid defendant is ſuppoſed to be the ſole proprietor, the ſaid penſion having been antiently accuſtomed to have been paid for the ſame. Whereunto the ſaid defendant hath this term appeared, and upon his corporal oath made his anſwer, and therein laid down that the ſaid rectory heretofore was one whole and entire rectory, conſiſting of ſeveral members, and ſundry tithes, profits, and other commodities, lying and being as well within the ſaid town of Rothley, as within the towns, hamlets, and territories, of Caldwell and Wykeham, Grimſton, Wartnaby, Gaddeſby, and Keame, within the ſaid county, and was heretofore impropriate to the Hoſpital of St. John of Jeruſalem; upon the impropriation whereof, there was made a perpetual vicarage to continue for ever, and endowed with part of the profits of the ſaid rectory, acknowledging the ſaid yearly penſion reſerved to the archdeacon of Leiceſter and his ſucceſſors, and payable out of the whole rectory and entirely out of all members thereof; which entire rectory, by the diſſolution, came to the crown, and ſince by ſeveral aſſurances conveyed to ſeveral perſons and their heirs in fee: And acknowledged, in his ſaid anſwer, ſo much thereof only as doth ariſe within the town of Rothley, whereof a part of Mountſorell is parcel, of the yearly value of £60, to be the inheritance of the ſaid defendant; for which the ſaid defendant offereth, and is content henceforth to pay his rateable part of the ſaid penſion of 53*s.* 4*d.* in regard to the value which other perſons in like ſort having other parcels of the ſaid rectory hold and enjoy; and deſiring that all the ſaid perſons may be equally charged therewith, and not the ſaid defendant only; as by the ſaid anſwer of the ſaid defendant more at large appeareth. Now, for as much as the Court conceiveth the offer of the ſaid defendant to be very reaſonable; therefore day is given to the complainant until the beginning of the next term, to ſhew cauſe why he ſhould not be ordered by this Court to take a rateable portion of the ſaid Mr. Babington accordingly, and to ſeek his remedy againſt the other owners thereof for the reſidue of the ſaid yearly penſion of 53*s.* 4*d.* due and payable to the complainant out of all the poſſeſſions of the whole rectory of Rothley aforeſaid."

---

[1] From the original leaſe.

[2] From the original, with the ſeal of the biſhop well preſerved.

[3] See before under Mountſorell, p. 91; and the Appendix to the preſent Volume, p. 1130.

[4] The chapel of St. John the Baptiſt, at the North end of the town, and within the pariſh of Barrow. See p. 92.

[5] Sic.

[6] From the original inſtrument.

Adrian Babington, M. A. of Chriſt Church, Oxford, was ordained deacon Sept. 1, 1606, by Thomas Ravis biſhop of Glouceſter; was inſtituted to the rectory of Coſſington, Feb. 5, 1606-7, by biſhop Chaderton, on the reſignation of Dr. Zachary Babington, and on the preſentation "venerabilis viri Matthei Babington de Coſſington armigeri, veri & indubitati patroni[1];" inducted, April 30, 1607, by authority of John Chippingdale, LL. D. archdeacon of Leiceſter, commiſſary and official, by Hugh Roberts, vicar of Syſton, in the preſence of Matthew Babington, eſq. patron, Humphrey Babington, Thomas Babington, and many other witneſſes; inſtituted, by William Overton, biſhop of Lichfield and Coventry, to the prebend of Gaia Minor, in the church of Lichfield, Oct. 31[1], appointed chaplain to lord Stafford Nov. 28, and inſtituted to the vicarage of Rothley Dec. 14, 1608.

Jan. 21, 1610-11, the anſwer of Simon Eyton, gent. defendant to a bill of complaint of Adrian Babington in 1609, ſtates, "that he doth not know, nor hath ever credibly heard, that the chapel of Gaddeſbie was a chapel or member of the church of Rothley; but is, and time out of mind hath been, a pariſh-church entire and ſole of itſelf, and ſo hath always been reputed to be; and that Gaddeſby is a village or town, and a pariſh of itſelf, and no hamlet. He allows, however, that for 15 acres of land in Gaddeſby he had been accuſtomed to pay to the vicar of Rothley an annual penſion of 8*s.*"

Letter from Mr. Robert Blunt, rector of Walton, to Mr. Adrian Babington, rector of Coſſington.

"Good Mr. Babington; The parſonadg of Walton, as of Coſington (as your good uncle knoweth well by certayne records which I have heartofore ſhewed unto him), did ſometymes belong to the mannor of Loughborowe, and have been bought from the manor; in reſpect whereof my parſonag and the glebe is not of the Duchie: yet the tenant to a cottage erected ſome 40 yeares paſt upon the glebe hath bene much wronged by the ſtuards of the Duchie, who have conſtrayned them, rather of their willfull ignorance then otherwyſe, to have done ſervyce at the Duchie courte, contrarye to all equitie and lawe, becauſe the cottage is not upon the Duchie, as I can make good proofe unto your good ſelfe. Nowe for that you are a gentleman of better judgment in lawe, and of greater knowledg then any of them have bene by muche; lett me therefore be ſo much beholden unto you in ſo honeſt a cauſe, wherein the king is not wronged, nor your good ſelfe any waye diſparaged, but my poore tenante by your knowledg righted, to diſmiſſe him of ſuyte and ſervyce unto the Duchie court, which heartofore my tenants to the ſaid cottage have done, thoughe they had no reaſone to doe ſo. Thus, hoping of your kyndnes, do leave you to the Almightie's protection, wiſhing to you as to myſelfe, regnum Dei & juſtitiam ejus.

"Your ever aſſured, Robert Blunt.

"Walton, the 4th daye of Maye, 1614."

John Orme, B. A. was preſented to the vicarage of Rothley, by Matthew Babington, eſq. July 22, 1619.

William Staveley, M. A. was preſented to the rectory of Coſſington, Oct. 13, 1615, by Thomas Babington, eſq.; and was inducted to the vicarage of Rothley Jan. 14, 1625.

Viſitatio prima magiſtri Willielmi Staveley, clerici, in artibus magiſtri, vicarii de Rothlye, peculiaris & exempte juriſdictionis de Rothlie Temple, in com' Leiceſtrie, commiſſarii & officialis legitimè conſtituti, tenta in eccleſiâ de Rothlie predictâ, die Lune, ſecundo videlicet die menſis Octobris, anno Domini milleſimo ſexcenteſimo viceſimo ſexto, coram eodem commiſſario, in preſentiâ mei, Henrici Iremongere, notarii publici, ejuſdem juriſdictionis regiſtrarii legitimè aſſignati.

At this Viſitation (after a ſermon by Mr. Gooch) Mr. Staveley exhibited the letters patent by which he was appointed commiſſary and judge of the peculiar and exempt juriſdiction, took the oaths of ſupremacy, and entered on the execution of his office by adminiſtering the oaths of regiſter to Mr. Iremonger; after which, William Brandon made his perſonal appearance as apparitor of the court; in which the following among ſeveral other proceedings occur:

For the church of Rothley, Abraham Allen attended as curate; and Michael Stirſacre and Thomas Lewen were ſworn into the office of churchwardens.

For Mountſorell, Thomas Jarrett and Michael Boſſe were ſworn wardens.

For the church or chapel of Keame, Nathaniel Gooch attended as curate; and Thomas Gilford was ſingly ſworn warden; his colleague, Thomas Worthington, being nuper de mortuis.

For the chapel of Cawdwell cum Wykham, Thomas More appeared as curate; and Nicholas Spicke and Edward Caunt were ſworn wardens.

For the chapel of Gaddeſby, Thomas Thorpe appeared as curate; and Henry Neuton and William Beebye were ſworn wardens.

For the chapel of Wartnaby, Joſhua Spongue appeared as curate; and John Parre and Robert Wartnabye were ſworn wardens.

For the chapel of Grimſton, John Claxon appeared as curate; and Richard Adcocke and William Stevenſon were ſworn wardens.

At this Viſitation, the preceding wardens of Wartnaby preſented, "that there is no decent communion-table nor carpet for the ſame in the church, nor convenient pulpit; and that the church and the font are out of repair; likewiſe that the church-walls are decayed; and there want Jewell's Works, and The Paraphraſe of Eraſmus' Works."—Which the new wardens having been cited to anſwer; they admitted, "that there is no decent communion-table, nor carpet for the ſame; and that the leads of the church are a little decayed; and that the pulpit is not very decent; and that they want the books above named."—Undè dominus monuit eos ad reparand' delicta predicta, & ad emend' libros predictos, citra proximam Viſitationem; & monuit eos ad tunc comparend' in hoc loco, ad certificandum ſuper premiſſis."

On the ſame day, it having been preſented that "the ſeats and roof of the chapel at Keame were out of repair;" it was certified that they had been properly repaired; and the complaint was diſmiſſed.

It having appeared "that the church of Rothley was in decay;" the wardens, who had been directed to repair it, this day certified that the repairs had been made.

Mr. Patchett, cited for not kneeling at the holy ſacrament, was admoniſhed as to his conduct in future.

John Wartnabye appeared, on the complaint of Joſhua Spongue, curate and fermour of Wartnaby; and admitted that 4½*d.* was due for the tithe of nine ſheep, and 2*d.* for the tithe of hemp.

Dec. 3, Mr. Patchett, being again cited, alledged, "That he is not yet perſuaded in his conſcience to receive the communion kneeling; but prayeth further time to be therein reſolved;" which was granted, till the next enſuing Viſitation.

Robert Remington of Mountſorell being preſented, "for abſence from divine ſervice during the time that the churchwardens have been in office;" it was alledged by his proctor, "that he was ſo lame that he could not travel; and, beſides, that he dared not go abroad, by fear to be taken upon execution."

---

[1] From the original inſtrument.

Two perſons of Mountſorell were cited, "for a fame of incontinency;" two others, of Rothley, "for incontinency before marriage;" a woman at Rothley, and another at Cawdwell, for "diſhoneſt life," one for "having a child, not being married;" and three perſons at Gaddeſby, "for diſquieting the miniſter and the congregation in the time of divine ſervice."

Jan. 12, 1626-7, Thomas Muſton, of Grimſton, was cited, "for not receiving the Sacrament at Eaſter;" and John Adcocke and William Stevenſon, wardens, "for not preſenting the decays of the church-yard fence, and for not providing a cuſhion, and making a canopy or cover of wainſcot over the pulpit, in the church of Grimſton;" Edmund Noble and Richard Thrumpton of Wartnaby, "for not paying their offerings at Eaſter;" and Elizabeth Stiles, "for talking in the church in time of divine ſervice."

May 22, 1627, Thomas Neale and Elizabeth Neale, alias Reade, appearing before the commiſſary in Keame chapel, on a charge of "being married without licence, or banns of marriage three ſeveral days publiſhed;" it was alledged, that the marriage had been ſolemnized at Kinolton, co. Notts, by Mr. Robinſon, curate, in April 1626. But, on account of the informality, they were excommunicated, till they ſhould produce a certificate of the marriage, under the hand of the miniſter, at the next court to be held in Rothley church.

On the ſame day, complaint having been made againſt Thomas Woodcock and William Waddington, wardens of Keame, the commiſſary came "to view the decays and defects of reparation of Keame chapel, and the fences belonging to the church yard thereof, as alſo of providing things decent for the ſervice of God, and benefit of the pariſhioners, in the ſaid church;" and found, "that there wanteth a cuſhion for the preaching pulpit, and alſo a canopy or cover over the pulpit, and a door for the ſaid pulpit; and alſo that there wanteth a cover for the font." All which the wardens were directed forthwith to provide.

In Gaddeſby chapel, the commiſſary found that "there wanted a cuſhion for the preacher."

John Butler, of Gaddeſby, being preſented "for diſturbance at divine ſervice," denied "that he did any thing willingly to diſturb divine ſervice; but only came into the ſeat where Robert Archer, Everett Swift, and Hugh Clarke, do ſit, in which ſeat he the ſaid Butler had formerly ſat, and where he takes he had a right to ſit, and deſired to ſit down; but, finding the foreſaid parties unwilling that he ſhould ſit with them, the room being very ſtraight, he went quietly away, and ſat in another place; and of this he was ready to make oath." Whereupon the charge was diſmiſſed.

At Wartnaby, the wardens were directed to provide a new communion-table, and to amend the leads of the chapel, between this and Michaelmas next; and to certify thereupon, the Viſitation day after Michaelmas, in Rothley church; and likewiſe, by the ſame day, to get two ſufficient locks and keys for the cheſt in the church.

At Grimſton, Thomas Kilbye, one of the wardens, was directed to provide "a long cuſhion for the preacher, and a door for the pulpit."

Aug. 7, 1627, Robert Clerke of Grimſton was preſented, "for not chriſtening his child;" and George Patchett of Rothley was preſented, "for not having received the communion at his pariſh-church at Midſummer, Michaelmas, or Chriſtmas laſt;" and ſeveral were cited "for fame of incontinency."

At another Viſitation of Mr. Staveley, in Rothley church, Oct. 5, 1627, it appeared that the ſaid Mr. Staveley was then vicar, and Edward Poole curate, of Rothley; Nathaniel Gooch curate of Keame; William Boſſe curate of Cawdwell; Thomas Boſſe curate of Gaddeſby; Joſhua Spongue curate of Wartnaby; and John Claxon curate of Grimſton. And ſeveral preſentations were made, as at the former Viſitation.

The copie of the lettre to ſir John Lambe, concerning the juriſdiction, November 27th, 1634; with ſir John his anſwere thereunto.

"Noble Sir, I conceive it is not unknowne unto you, that it pleaſed my Lord's Grace of Canterbury, upon his viſitation, to inhibit the officiall and comiſſaries and regiſters of all the peculiar juriſdictions within the archdeaconry of Leiceſter to menyſter with mine of Rotheley (which extends but onely to that pariſhe), for excerſycinge any eccleſiaſticall authorite duringe that his viſitation; to which wee did with all reverence humblie ſubmitt; and, at the time of his Lordſhip's viſitation at Leiceſter, repaired thither to Mr. Doctor Ayllett, there viſitor for his Lordſhipp, to know whether, after his viſitation ended, my officiall of my juriſdiction might not, as formerly hee had done (with his Lordſhipp's favour) exerciſe his eccleſiaſticall authorite therein. Whereupon Mr. Doctor Ayllett tould mee, that my Lord's Grace was perſwaded that wee had not any juriſdiction, nor ought to uſe the authority thereof; and therefore his Lordſhipp's pleaſure was, they ſhould ſtand inhibited untill his Lordſhipp had ſeene, or might be ſatisfied, by what authorite wee hould them; and for my juriſdiction, Mr. Doctor Ayllett was pleaſed to give time to mee till towards the latter end of this tearme, to ſatisfie my Lord's Grace therein; and in the mean time, and in the preſence of Mr. Doctor Robinſon, Mr. Rueden, and Mr. Lake, promiſed mee that the miniſters and officers of my juriſdiction ſhoulde be noe farther troubled, nor any waie proceeded againſt: Yet, notwithſtandinge, they forbeare not to proceed againſt the miniſters and churchwardens of my juriſdiction, for not ſubmittinge to their juriſdiction, alleadging that it is by your direction; which I humbly pray you wil be pleaſed to take into your conſideration, and to write to the officers of the courte at Leiceſter, to forbeare their further proceedings againſt them until my Lord's Grace his pleaſure be further knowne therein, whome I hope I ſhall ſatisfie for my right to my juriſdiction, if before this time it be not done. Thus cravinge pardon for my bouldnes, and deſiringe your favour herein, I ſhall never faile to be,

Your ſervant to be comaunded, THO. BABINGTON."

"November 16, 1634."

"To the worſhipfull his much-reſpected friend, Mr. Thomas Babington, eſquier, at Rothely Temple.

"Sir, I received your letter; and I think you conceive it right, that all that pretend any peculiers were inhibited in his Grace's viſitation, and are not yet releaſed by his Grace; and that you appointed to give his Grace ſatiſfaction (touching the right of that which you claimed) ſome time this terme; which is a thing which he expecteth of you, and of all others in like caſe, and will ſuffer none to be governours in the Church (eſpecially where he hath viſited, and ſo the caſe lieth uppon him), except they can ſhew that it juſtly belongs to them. For my parte, I was not at the viſitation at Leiceſter; and I thinke the officers there do but purſue the comaundment which they received then. You ſhall do well, yf you have any power of eccleſiaſticall juriſdiction or exemption (which I confeſſe I underſtand not), to acquaint his Grace with yt, that he may receive ſatiſfaction therein, and graunt you his relaxation under ſeale; and then you ſhall not finde me difficult or troubleſome; for I hold it a thing of litle value, yet it may be of much conſequence (as his Grace well obſerveth); for, I can ſay of my owne experience, that in one pariſh, and no peculier neyther, where a lay fermor hath taken upon him to name curates, there hath bene ſuch a ſucceſſion of Puritan curates within theſe 20 yeares, that it hath engendered a greater breed of refractory unconformiſtes, then the third parte of the whole country hath done. I make no particular applications; but I note onely the generall inconvenience of what is there, and may be in any other the like, and the rather if the place be exempt, which they call a peculier. Thus, with my beſt love remembered, I reſt

Your pore frend to do you ſervice, JO. LAMBE.

"Doctors Commons, 22 Nov. 1634."

To Dr. William Laud, Archbiſhop of Canterbury, 1636.

"Maye it pleaſe your Grace,

"I underſtande by Thomas Babington, of Rothley Temple, in the county of Leiceſter, eſq. (a very neare kinſman to my ſonne ſir Thomas Cave), that he hath preferred two ſeverall petitions to your Grace for the releaſinge of the inhibition (att your Grace's viſitation att Leiceſter) graunted for reſtrayninge of the xerciſe of the peculier juriſdiction of Rotheley aforeſaid, his and his aunceſters auncyent inheritance, by graunte from ſome of his majeſty's progeniters ſince the diſſolution of the priory of St. Johne of Jeruſalem; to the which priory att and before the ſaid diſſolution, and before that order was to the Templers, it did belonge time out of minde, and hath beene conſtantly reſpectively exerciſed by his and theire commiſſaries, or officialls, or conſervators, for that peculier juriſdiction, and perſones quallifyed to exerciſe the ſame, in that behalfe deputed by them. The conſideration of the firſt of which petitions your Grace, the ſixt of May, 1635, referred to ſir John Lambe; and hee gave noe accompte to your Grace why it ſhoulde not be releaſed, after a yeare's deliberation thereupon. And the conſideration of the ſeconde petition your Grace referred, the nineteenth of Maye, 1636, to ſir Henry Martin, ſir John Lambe, Doctor Eden, and Doctor Ducke, or any three of them, to give an accompte concerninge the ſaid juriſdiction, and howe farr it was fitt for your Grace to graunt what thereby was required. And upon the ſeconde petition your Grace withall gave order that the miniſters and churchwardens there ſhoulde not be further troubled till the buſines might be hearde and ſettled; both which petitions ſir John Lambe had delivered unto him. And the ſaid referries, three att one time, and all fower at the laſt time (which was preſently after thend of the laſt tearme), mett, and hearde councell on my coſen Babington's parte; but ſtill the comiſſary of that peculier his exerciſe of the ſaid juriſdiction ſtands reſtrayned, and the miniſters and churchwardens there have beene ever ſince the ſaid referrence, and ſtill are, convented forth of the ſaid peculier, and troubled before ſir John Lambe, as comiſſary and official of the archdeaconry of Leiceſter his ſurrogates, although all of them knewe of the ſaid referrences preſently after the ſaid referrences made. Wherefore my moſt humble petition to your Grace is, that if the ſaid referrees have made a certificate, your Grace would be pleaſed to ſignify your pleaſure thereupon, that the ſaid buſines maye be ſetled, and the miniſters and inhabitants within the ſaid peculier maye be noe longer diſquieted nor drawne forth of the ſaid peculier, nor the inheritance of my kinſman intruded upon by ſir John Lambe or the archdeacon, under colour of your Grace's inhibition; but that the ſaid inhibition may att laſt be releaſed, and the comiſſarie of that peculier exerciſe the ſame againe. ALEXANDER CAVE."

A ſuit between the inhabitants of Rothley and Mountſorell in 1638 will be noticed hereafter[1].

Another exemplification of the endowment of the vicarage of Rothley, as ſtated in p. 959, was obtained from biſhop Williams, May 2, 1639.

"Memorand. Richard Maden, M. A. preſented as vicar to the pariſh church and vicarage of Rothley, with all rights, members, and perquiſites, thereunto belonging, by Matthew Babington, of Temple Rothley, eſq. lawful patron of the ſame, did enter, take quiet and peaceable poſſeſſion of the ſaid church, upon the 13th day of December, 1652, in the name of the poſſeſſion and right of the ſaid church, vicarage, and vicarage-houſe, with all thereunto belonging; which poſſeſſion was delivered by the ſaid patron himſelf. And the ſaid Mr. Maden took the ſaid poſſeſſion alſo by order of the Committee for plundered miniſters; which order the ſaid Mr. Maden read and publiſhed, together with the ſaid preſentation, in the preſence of us, whoſe names are here ſubſcribed.

Zachary Yeawarde; and 12 others.

"Memorand. That the above-mentioned Mr. Richard Maden did, upon the 20th day of Dec. 1652, at the vicarage-houſe of Rothley, demand poſſeſſion of the ſaid houſe, and all thereunto belonging, as pertaining to the vicarage of Rothley; and, being kept out of poſſeſſion there by ſuch as kept the houſe ſhut and finally kept poſſeſſion, the ſaid Mr. Maden did preſently dig up and carry away a turf of a cloſe belonging to the vicarage of Rothley, and adjoining to the ſaid vicarage-houſe, in the name of poſſeſſion thereof and all other things belonging to the ſaid vicarage, in the preſence of us whoſe names are here ſubſcribed. William Staveley; and 5 others."

Oct. 2, 1669, by deed under his hand and ſeal, Thomas Babington, eſq. of Rothley, appointed George Savile, notary public, to be "Regiſtrarius ſive Scriba peculiaris juriſdictionis de Rothley cum membris, cum omnibus feodis, vadiis, & proficuis, eidem officio ab antiquo debitis[2]."

The earlieſt Regiſter-book of Rothley begins in October 1562, and ends in 1634; a ſecond extends from 1635 to 1649; a third from 1653 to 1705. Theſe are all preſerved at the vicarage.

Peter Gym ſigns miniſter 1609; Francis Gibſon 1614;
William Howell 1615—1617;
Thomas Chadwyck curate 1617;
Joſhua Plaw miniſter 1624; Adrian Babington 1618;
John Orme 1636; Richard Maden, M. A. vicar 1652;
Sam. Daniel miniſter 1683, curate 1684, vicar 1691.

Matthew Babington and Elizabeth Lee married Jan. 17, 1574-5.

Mr. St. John Borrowe and Margaret Babington July 23, 1576.

William Danvers and Eliz. Babington Nov. 4, 1618.

John Whatton, eſq. and Katharine Babington, married Sept. 18, 1639.

Thomas ſon of Humphrey Babington buried Nov. 16, 1567; [and Eleanor his widow was buried at Coſſington, June 7, 1578.]

John Danvers, eſq. buried Auguſt 29, 1598.

Francis Danvers, eldeſt ſon of William Danvers of Rothley, gent. bapt. Oct. 9; buried Oct. 22, 1619.

Catharine Danvers, bapt. March 4, 1620-1.

The marriages from December 1653 to January 1657-8 are very regularly entered, and atteſted by the following different juſtices: William Danvers, Thomas Pochin, Thomas Brudnell, William Hartopp, William Hewett, John Goodman, William Bainbrigg, Thomas Beaumont, J. Billers (mayor of Leiceſter), George Martin, and Richard Ludnam.

Inſcription on a handſome monument of marble, juſt erected in the chapel of Rothley Temple:

"Sacred to the memory of the Rev. Matthew Babington, ſecond ſon of Thomas Babington, eſq.
and Lydia Babington his wife,
of Rothley Temple,
and Vicar of Rothley.
During the three laſt years of his life,
he ſuffered much from the loſs of a beloved wife,
and from the malady which had proved fatal to her,
a pulmonary conſumption;
and, after exhibiting a bright example of Chriſtian virtue to his ſurviving friends, he died at Liſbon, on May the 6th, 1796,
in the 35th year of his age;
humbly relying on Jeſus Chriſt his Saviour,
and with an hope full of immortality.
He left behind him one ſon, Matthew Drake Babington, born on July 11th, 1788; and one daughter,
Elizabeth Babington, born on July 29th, 1791.

Quick heav'd his partner's labouring ſide,
He claſp'd her waſted frame.
"Thy will, O God, be done," he cried;
And bleſt his Saviour's name.
She ſank—Contagion touch'd his breaſt;
He felt her triumph won;
Again the Saviour's name he bleſt.
And cried, "Thy will be done."
"Why fear the path of pain to tread,
"Why ſhrink from thy decree,
"If thus my longing ſoul be led
"A ſhorter way to Thee?"

---

[1] See the Additions and Corrections to Weſt Goſcote.

[2] From the original inſtrument.

SEILE, now commonly written SEALE, and antiently Scella, Sceala, Sceile, Shaile, &c. is divided into two ſeveral townſhips, Nether Seile and Over Seile; and formerly contained ſeveral manors. The pariſh, including a large portion of Doniſthorpe, is bounded on the South by Stretton, Chilcot in Derbyſhire (but a chapelry to Clifton Camvile in Staffordſhire), and Clifton itſelf; on the Weſt by Clifton, Lullington, and Roſtlaſton (the two laſt in Derbyſhire); on the North by Greſley in Derbyſhire, and Aſhby Woulds in Leiceſterſhire; and on the Eaſt by Willeſley, thoſe parts of Doniſthorpe in Meaſham and Greſley pariſhes, and by Okethorpe, all in Derbyſhire. The hamlet of Boothorpe, partly in this pariſh, is disjoined from the reſt of Seile by the ſaid Aſhby Woulds. Seile conſtablewick and land-tax aſſeſſment extend beyond the pariſh, taking in parts both of Stretton and Appleby. Seile church is nearly ſix miles diſtant from Aſhby; three from Appleby; 20 from Leiceſter; and, in the eccleſiaſtical diviſion of the county, is within the deanry of Akeley.

"Nether Seile and Over Seile," ſays Mr. Burton, not quite correctly as to the bounds, "ſtand on the Weſtern borders of the county, and are encompaſſed round with Derbyſhire."

Seven ploughlands in Scella, which in the time of king Edward employed five ploughs, and were worth twenty ſhillings, were of the ſame value at the general ſurvey, when they were held by Robert under Henry de Ferieres. Four ſocmen, with two villans, had two ploughs; and there was a wood ſix furlongs long, and four broad. Six ploughlands in another Scela, which in the time of king Edward had employed three ploughs, and were valued at twenty ſhillings, were worth ſixty ſhillings at the general ſurvey, when they were alſo held by the ſame Robert under Henry de Ferieres. Three ploughs were in the demeſne; and twenty-one villans, with twelve bordars, had three ploughs. There were twelve acres of meadow; and a mill of five ſhillings value. The ſame Robert alſo held of Henry one ploughland in Bortrod, where one villan had one plough. In the time of king Edward it had been worth eight-pence; and at the ſurvey was worth four ſhillings [1].

Two ploughlands alſo in Sela, which in the time of king Edward had been valued at twelve pence, were worth five ſhillings at the general ſurvey, when they were held of the king by Nigell de Albini, and under him by Hunfrid. One plough was in the demeſne [2].

The whole of both lordſhips ſeems to have come afterwards to William de Ferrariis earl of Derby; under whoſe fee it occurs in 1240, about which time the Teſta de Nevill was compiled: for that record notices [3],

"In Scheles, dimidium feodum quod Willielmus de Rideware tenet de comite de Ferrariis.

In Parvâ Scheyl, dimidium feodum, quod abbas de Mirevall tenet de Willielmo de Meyſham, & ipſe de eodem comite.

In Bramcote [4], Neuton [4], & Durandeſtorp, dimidium feodum quod Willielmus de Bramcote tenet de Ricardo de Kanvill, & ipſe de eodem comite."

The manor of NETHER SEALE, called alſo Great Seile and Church Seile, belonged in the time of Henry I. and II. to a family which took their name from the town. William de Seyl atteſts Miravall foundation charter, in Monaſticon, vol. I. p. 830 [5]. The ſame (ſays T. Blore, citing Liber Niger, p. 219.) "tenuit 2 feod' mil', temp. Hen. I."

"Ralph de Seile held the ſame 12 Henry II." He, with the conſent of William earl Ferrars, ſold his mill at Seile, with four virgates of his demeſne land, to Ralph ſon of William de Greſeley, for 13 marks of ſilver.

"Will's comes de Ferrariis omnibus hominibus, &c. Sciatis quod Rad' de Seile vendidit Rad' de G'ſel, filio Willielmi, molendinum ſuum de Seile & IIIIor virgatas terre de dominio, pro XIII marcis argenti, ad tenendum de Rad' de Seile & heredibus ſuis, ſibi & heredibus ſuis, liberè & quietè ab omni ſervitio pro unis ocreis de cordvan', vel pro II ſol' per annum, in feodo & hereditate; & Rad' de Seile neque firmabit neque affidet alter' molendin' infra territor' de Seile, nec ipſe nec heredes ſui; & illud molendinum habet & habebit ſiwtam totam adeo plenariè quemadmodum haberet ſi Rad' de Seile teneret molendinum in manu ſuâ; & ſi aliquis hominum Rad' de Seile fortè capiatur eundo ad alt̄m molend', Rad' de G'ſel' habebit molturam, & Rad' de Seile forisfactum; & Rad' de G'ſel' & homines ſui capient quicquid neccūm fuerit molendino & arſure ſue & aiſiamento ſuo, per oſtenſionem foreſtarii, in boſco Rad' de Seile, ubicunque Rad' de Seile capiet ad opus ſuum; & de predictâ tenurâ Rad' de G'ſel' hab' curiam ſuam & omnes eaſdem libertates quas Rad' de Seile ibid' habuit, cum omnibus operationibus quas Rad' de Seile ibid' habuit. Hoc factum fuit coram me & totâ curiâ meâ, per conceſſionem meam, & per requiſitionem Rad' de Seile; & Rad' de G'ſel' dedit mihi pro recognitione conceſſionis unum anulum auri. Teſt'; Ricardo Calcun abbate Sancti Petri ſuper Dinam, & Rob' priore de Kineldwurd, & Willielmo de Calewich, & magiſtro Ricardo de Sallaw, Rob' de Piry dap', Willielmo de G'ſel' & Rob' filio ſuo, & Henrico & Willielmo, Rob' fil' Walk', Henrico & Petro, Waltero de Sumervillâ, Ricardo de Curcun & Rob' filio ſuo, Waltero de Montgomeri & Rad' fratre ſuo, & Rad' filio Rad' de Montegom', Reinado de G'ſel', Humfrido de Tokâ, Rob' del Bec, Rob' filio Rad', Rad' fil' Ernaldi, Haraldo de Lecâ, David de Stantonâ, Geralin de Curcun, G. de Bakepuz, Johanne de Willintonâ, Rad' de Caldwellâ, & David' filio ſuo, Aluredo de Cumbrai, Simone de Tuſchet, Rad' filio Ghermundi & Willielmo filio ſuo, & Rogero de Strettonâ, Johanne de Suliâ, & Willielmo filio Herberti, Thomâ filio Rad', Thomâ de Piry, Rad' Feone, Willielmo de Dun, Rob' filio H'ngi, & Colſwano coco & Anſ' filio ſuo, Godefrido, Roberto M'ghi, G. de Camerâ & Rob' homine ſuo, Reinald' de Sancto Albano, & Wald' de Wineſhullâ, & Rob' de Ferr', & Rogero capellano, & Willielmo decano de Tatenhul, & Rad' de Brei[dſhalle], & Rogero canonico Lincoln', & Johanne de Liſvis, & aliis pluribus, ſcil' Rob' Grim, & Luciano de Seile, & Alano, & Willielmo filio Rogeri, & multis aliis."

A large thick ſeal; the earl on horſeback:

"SIGILLVM WILLIELMI COMITIS DE FERRARIIS [6]."

---

[1] "Robertus tenet Scellam de H[enrico de Ferieres]. Ibi ſunt 7 carucatæ terræ. Tempore Regis Edwardi erant ibi 5 carucæ. Ibi 4 ſochmanni, cum 2 villanis, habent 2 carucas. Silva 6 quarentenarum longitudinis, & 4 quarentenarum latitudinis. Valuit, & valet, 20 ſolidos.—Idem tenet de H. aliam Scelam. Ibi ſunt 6 carucatæ terræ. T. R. E. erant ibi 3 carucæ. In dominico ſunt 3 carucæ; & 21 villani, cum 12 bordariis, habent 3 carucas. Ibi molinum de 5 ſolidis, & 12 acræ prati. Valuit 20 ſolidos, modo 60 ſolidos. Idem tenet de H. 1 carucatam terre in Bortrod. Ibi unus villanus habet unam carucam. Valuit 8 denarios; modò 4 ſolidos." Domeſday, fol. 233. b. 1.

[2] "Nigellus de Albini tenet de Rege in Selâ 2 carucatas terre, & Hunfridus de eo. Ibi 1 caruca in dominico eſt. Valuit 12 denarios; modò 5 ſolidos." Ibid. fol. 236. a. 1.

[3] Vol. I. p. lii.

[4] In Warwickſhire (both Bramcote and Newton).

[5] Miravall foundation Dugdale makes to be in 1148: it was certainly in the time of biſhop Clinton, who died 1149. The confirmatory charter to Tutbury by the ſame junior Robert earl Ferrars the Miravall founder, which was ſomewhat later, being directed to Clinton's ſucceſſor (I. Monaſticon, 354-5.) among the gifts of his "homines & fideles," recites that "Robertus filius Widelini dedit duas partes decimarum dominii ſui de Sceyle." Was this Robert, perchance, one of the ſame family de Seyl? The name "Widelini" ſounds rather oddly, and might be miſ-read, one is ready to think, for "Willelmi." A different William de Seila ſeemingly, "cognatus Luciani," atteſts the ſecond of Radulph junior's deeds, printed in p. *980.

[6] Plate CXXXIII. fig. 1.

Radulph de Greſele, or de Hethre (as indorſed by the monks), gives one carucate in Seile to Mirevall. Broken ſeal; man on foot, ſword drawn, and ſhield.

Radulph de Seile confirms that gift, by conſent of William earl Ferrars, and of Radulph his heir, and releaſes the 2*s.* rent paid by Radulph de Greſele. For ſoul's health of ſelf, his heirs, and his lord Robert earl de Ferrariis.

Robert biſhop of Lincoln confirms to Mirevall 120 acres, with wood, meadow, paſture, and common of paſture, of the gift of Radulph de Seile.

"Sciant tam preſentes quam futuri, Rad' de Seile, conceſſione Rad' filii ſui, dediſſe Willielmo Noreis unam virgatam terre, pro hominio & ſervitio ſuo, liberam & quietam ab omni ſervitio, & Wlſene uxori predicti Willielmi, tenendam de predicto Rad' & heredibus ſuis, ſibi & heredibus ſuis, liberè & quietè, ſcilicet de pannagio & de filiabus (N. B.) & de omnibus conſuetudinibus domino pertinentibus. Dum predicta Wlſene domino ſervierit, liberè & quietè pro ſervitio ſuo predictam terram poſſidebunt; & quum predicta Wlſene ampliùs domino non ſervierit, ſponſus ſuus & heredes illorum annuatim xiiđ. pro omni ſervitio reddent. Hiis teſt'; Willielmo preſbitero de Seile, Willielmo perſonâ, Luciano, Will' fil' Rog' de Durandeſthorp, Will' de Ederichale, Rog' de Stretunâ & Willielmo fil' ſuo, Rad' cantore de Seile, Alano, Goim'o, Turſtino & Adam filio ſuo, Rog' fil' Anſchetilli & Andreo ſuo fratre, Will' Buche, Walerando de Apelbi & Rob' ſuo fil' & Ric' ſuo nepote, & Matheo, Walerando de Childecote & Johannne ſuo fratre, Rob' fil' Rog' de Seile, & multis aliis. Terminus ÷ (put in ſome very old deeds for "eſt") reddendi cenſum prenominatum viđ. ad feſt' Purificationis Sancte Marie, & viđ. ad feſt' Sancti Michaelis[1]."

Ralph de Seile, ſon and heir of the former, made many grants to the abbey of Merevale by deed. One is thus given by Burton: "Radulphus filius Radulphi de Seilâ omnibus hominibus ſuis, Francis & Anglis, ſalutem. Sciatis me dediſſe eccleſie & Beate Marie de Miravall, pro ſalute animarum patris mei & matris mee Anneis de Oiley, quandam terram in Scheile, &c. Teſtibus; Herveo de Ocle, Adâ de Wethelesberge, Adâ & Roberto filiis ejus, Roberto de Haſtinges, Ankitello filio Walteri, [Willielmo[2]] de Bartune, Willielmo Norreis, Roberto filio Wallerani de Appleby. Dated 1181." His ſeal, the picture of a man armed on horſeback, holding in his right hand a ſword, in his left a ſhield, wherein was a carbuncle of eight ſtaves noué and fleuretté, circumſcribed, SIGILLVM RADVLFI FILII RADVLPHI DE SEILA; fig. 2.

Univerſis ſancte matris, &c. Ego Rad' filius & heres Rad' de Seilâ dedi, &c. Deo & Sancte Marie de Miravalle, & fratribus Grangie de Seilâ, in perpetuam eleemoſynam, omnem libertatem in boſco meo de Seila, tenendam & habendam de me & omnibus heredibus meis abſque omni vexatione & querelâ in perpetuum, ad capiendum, videlicet, per totum boſcum, tam de viridi boſco quam de veteri, de groſſo & de gracili, ſtando aut jacendo, cum unâ redâ aut cum bobus trahere ter aut quater omnibus diebus & ſingulis diebus, tam per hyemem quam per eſtatem, ad ignem & ad cetera aiſiamenta predictorum fratrum & preſcripte Grangie. Conceſſi item & confirmavi Deo & Sancte Marie & prenominatis fratribus libertatem paſture per totum boſcum tam bobus quam vaccis & equis ejuſdem Grangie. Iſtam libertatem, &c. dedi, &c. pro animâ patris mei & matris mee, & pro ſalute anime mee, & omnium, &c. Hiis teſtibus; Willielmo de Stretton, Willielmo de T're, Rad' Morcoc, Jacobo Drake, Rodb' Coppe, Adam de Weolebrge, Rodb' de Ruvre, & Rad' filio ejus, Will' de Seilâ cognato Luciani, Thomâ Bretun de Drait', & multis aliis."

"Rad' filius Rad' de Seile ſalutem. Sciant omnes tum futuri quam preſentes me dediſſe & hâc cartâ meâ confirmâſſe Deo & Sancte Marie & conventui de Miravalle unam virgatam terre de dominio meo in perpetuam elemoſinam, liberam & quietam ab omnibus ſecularibus ſervitiis, de me & omnibus heredibus meis liberè & quietè in perpetuum tenendam. Hanc virgatam terre tenuit Alanus de patre meo antiquitùs. Et hanc donationem conceſſi predicto conventui pro animâ Rad' patris mei & pro animâ Anneis matris mee & pro animâ Rodb' comitis de Fer', & pro animâ meâ & omnium dominorum & parentum meorum. Preterea eidem conventui conceſſi, &c. tres virgatas terre quas preſcriptus Alanus tenuit de dominio patris mei & meo antiquitùs, tenendas de me & heredibus meis in feudam firmam in perpetuum, ſcil' pro omnibus ſecularibus ſervitiis ſingulis annis pro ſingulis virgatis xii nummos, reddendos tantummodò tranſacto tamen termino xii annorum, in quorum quidem initio totam firmam pre manibus accepi & habui pro voluntate meâ tam in equis quam in nummis & aliis rebus, termino conventionis incipiente anno Incarnationis Domini mill'o centeſimo lxxxi°. Hujus carte teſtes ſunt iſti, Willielmus miles d'Ovillâ & Gillebertus frater ejus."

A ſimilar grant, "pro animabus patris mei Rad' & matris mee Anneis de Oilli, &c." of a virgate, que fuit Radulfi cantoris, very much like that of which Burton gives an extract (only this is not dated), having the ſame witneſſes, and additional ones. "Sunt iſti teſtes, Herveius de Ocle, & Herveius & Alanus filii ejus, Adam de Wetheleſbergâ & Adam & Rob' filii ejus, Rob' de Ruvra & Radulf & Reinald filii ejus, Goiſmer, Willielmus de Strettunâ, Rogerus filius Aſketilli, Willielm' Buche, Aſketilli filius Walt', Will' de Bartunâ, Rob' de Haſtinges, Adam filius Turſtani, Will' de Turre, Radulf filius Willielmi Norreis, Robertus filius Waleranni de Happelbi."

Of the grants by Radulphus junior to Miravall there are in all 12, the laſt of which recapitulates moſt of them, and confirms them in general, firſt his own, then his father's; and proceeds, "Dedi etiam eidem eccleſie brueriam ad Rukedich, & portionem quandam terre que jacet ante hoſtium domus ovium ſuarum, & aliam portionem terre parvulam que fuit Rodberti Buriond, que ſita eſt juxta Meres[3]. Preterea dedi, &c. totum pratum meum de dominio meo de Seilâ & pratum de Fulleſlokh[3], & pratum de Culurewellemor[3], abſque omni querelâ, &c. Teſtibus; Symeone preſbytero de Sepe (elſewhere ſacerdote de Xepeiâ), Walkelino de Maneceſtre & filiis ejus Waltero & Willielmo, Rodberto de Ruvre & filiis ejus Radulfo & Regin', Poer' (de Witenton) & filio ejus Serlone, Henrico de Caili, Adam clerico fratre uxoris Walkelini de Maneceſtre, Willielmo filio Ricardi de Carletun, Rodberto le Megre." Seals remain, perfect or broken, to nearly all Rad' junior's deeds. They are very large, and anſwer to Burton's deſcription, only that his carbuncle, &c. ſeems little more than an umbo.

"Willielmus fil' Rogeri de Strettonâ & Anneis uxor" give to Miravalle a toft, "quam Rad' juvenior dedit preſcripte Anneis ſorori ſue poſt mortem Rad' ſenioris, patris videlicet Rad' junioris & Anneis. Cartam iſtam optulit Anneis ſuper altare Sancte Marie in eccleſiâ de Seilâ majore. Et ego Willielmus poſtea ſuper altare Sancte Marie de Miravalle. Teſtes ſunt iſti, Goiſmerus, Rad' Cokin, Rodb' de Haſtinc, Hugo de Templo, Henricus fab' de Hoſpit', Johannes filius Godberti, G', Rad' filius Goiſm', Alan' de Hoſpit', Adam, Rog' filius Hugonis de Templo, Anketill' pater Rogeri."

"Anneis filia Rad' de Seile, & heres[4] illius, aſſenſu & bonâ voluntate Willielmi ſponſi," confirms to Miravalle and the monks there, all they had in Seile "ad Paſcha octavo anno regis Ric'. Teſtibus; Will' de Ridw', Will' de Brai, Hug' decan', Ric' de Curcun, Ric' de Vernun, Will' perſonâ, Walt' cleric' de Sumervillâ, Adam de Weoleſb'ge, Will' cleric' de Moleburne."

Conſtantia filia Rad' de Seile confirms to Miravalle her father's and brother's grants in Seile. Teſtibus; Gilleberto vicecom', &c.[5]

Ralph de Seile, junior, after his above grants, as ſeems, ſold the manor of Seile to William earl Ferrars. By the above deed of his ſiſter Agnes, he ſeems dead 8 Ric. I. In this ſame year, William de Rydeware, of Rydeware Hamſtall, co. Stafford (who bare Azure, a ſpread eagle Argent; a chief Vaire, Or and Gules; fig. 3; which chief he took from the arms of William de Ferrariis earl of Derby, his chief lord, to whom, and to his father earl Ferrars, he was ſeneſchal), appears to have gained a footing in the vicinity, probably in the manor, or pariſh at leaſt.

---

[1] All from the originals in poſſeſſion of the rev. William Greſley at Seile. [2] Omitted by Burton. [3] Two of theſe the uſual names at this day; the third remaining in Fi-lows lane, with a tumulus or two cloſe by. See p. 983*, col. 1. [4] This implies that her brother Radulph junior was now dead, 8 Richard I. [5] All from Seile, originals.

"Hec eſt conventio facta in comitatu Leyc', die Mart' prox' ante feſtum Sancti Laurencii, 8° anno regni regis Ricardi, coram Willielmo Daubeny tunc vic', & Gilberto de Segrave, & ceteris baronibus de comitatu, inter Willielm' de Ridwar, & Alex' fil' Jordani de Durandeſthorp; ſcilicet, quod predictus Alex' vendidit & quietclam' predicto Willielmo de Ridware, & hered' ſuis, de ſe & hered' ſuis, octo virg' terre cum pertin' in Durandeſthorp, id eſt, totum quod habuit in Durandeſthorp, pro tribus marc' argenti. Hiis teſtibus; Radulpho de Martivaus tunc ſeneſch' com' Leyc', Thomâ de Eſtleyeâ, Achard de Sprokeſtonâ, Ernaldo de Bartonâ, Willielmo de Charneles, Willielmo Wardâ, Willielmo de Strettonâ, Radulpho de Edeinghalle, & multis aliis [1]."

The deed No. 4. of the Seile Chartulary is a grant of the ſame quantity, 8 virgates, in Durandeſthorp, to the ſame perſon, from Bertram de Caldon. This Bertram, fil' Willielmi filii Radulphi, gave to Burton abbey [2] a toft of 7 acres in Caldon, which is a townſhip cloſely bordering on Alveton Caſtle, the ſeat of Verdon's Staffordſhire barony; and from this circumſtance, and that of a grant, in the Greſley Chartulary, by Bertram fil' Willielmi, "Waltero de Fentone cognato meo, in Angodeſthorpe," I take this Bertram to be a Verdon, and poſſibly the ſame who granted the chartre de Hoſgodethorpe [3]; though there is certainly a contrary probability of this laſt grantor being the Bertram, huſband (or father) to the foundreſs of Gracedieu, and made ſon of Norman de Verdon.

"Hec eſt finalis concordia facta in curiâ domini regis apud Weſtm', a die Sancte Trinitatis in xv dies, anno regni regis Johannis tertio, coram G' fil' Petri, Ric' de Her', Johanne de Geſtling, Henr' de Wecheton, Godefr' de Inſul', Waltero de Creping, juſtic', & aliis baronibus domini regis tunc ibi preſentibus, int' Willielm' comit' de Ferr' petent', per Willielm' de Rydewar poſitum loco ſuo ad lucrandum vel perdend', & Radulphum Grym tenentem, de duabus virgat' terre & de xv acr' boſci cum pertinent' in Sheile, unde placit' fuit inter eos in prefat' cur'; ſcilicet, quod predictus com' recognovit & conceſſit totam predict' terram & boſcum cum pertin' eſſe jus ipſius Radulphi, tenend' de ſe & heredibus ſuis in perpetuum per liberum ſervit' duor' ſolid' per annum pro omni ſervitio, reddend' ad duos terminos anni, ſcilicet, ad feſt' Sancti Mich' xii den', & ad Annunc' Beate Marie xii den' [4]."

In the above fine, William, created earl of Derby 1199, is ſtill ſtyled, even in a law proceeding, only comes de Ferrariis, and certainly ſeems to have not yet re-granted "totam terram Radulphi de Scheyle," to Rydewar then his attorney.

Carta originalis de manerio de Sceyle [5].

"Willielmus de Ferrariis comes Derbeye, omnibus hominibus ſuis & amicis, Franc', &c. Sciat' me dediſſe, &c. Willielmo de Rydwar', pro homag', &c. totam terram Radulphi de Scheyle, liberam & quietam ab omni ſervicio, &c. ſicuti Radulphus liberiùs, &c. except' ſervic' tenementi Luciani, quod teneo in manu meâ, ad tenend' de me, &c. per ſervicium dimid' militis. Hiis teſtibus; Roberto filio Walkelini, Johannes de Rochlvill' [6], Henr' filio Walkelini, Roberto filio ejus, Petro filio Walkelini, Roberto de Ferr', Henr' de Ferr', Rogero de Sumervill, Jordano de Toke, Henrico fil' Sewalli, Gilberto de Boſchevill', Willielmo de Sancto Leodegar', & multis aliis."

In the above deed, the earl is called Willielmus de Ferrariis "comes Derbeye," though the language of Agnes, in her quit-claim (No. 12), is "quam terram Willielmus comes de Ferrariis, fil' prefati Willielmi comit' de Ferr', dedit Willielmo de Rydware." So that no certain chronological inference can be made from the ſtyle, "comes de Ferrar'." We find in No. 67, "teſt' Galfr' de Greſele tunc ſeneſcall' comitis de Ferr'," above 30 years probably after the creation to the earldom of Derby, Greſele appearing to be ſeneſchal ſubſequently to Rad' fil' Nicholas, who was ſo about 1218—20, and continued ſo 1230 and 1232 circiter, Greſele then "conſtabular' de Peco [7]," and placed ſecond to the ſeneſchal. So "Hugo de Menill ſeneſcall' domini comitis de Ferrariis" teſt' cart' Henrici le Foun de Iveley [8]; and Menill was ſeneſchal as late as 1253 [9].

"Hec eſt finalis concord' facta in curiâ domini regis apud Wygorn', die Mercur' prox' poſt Aſſumptionem Beate Marie, anno regni regis Johannis ſexto, coram H' de Well' archidiac', Symone de Pateſhull, magiſtro Radulpho de Stok, Roberto Marmiun, Jacob' de Potn', J' de Well' juſtic', & aliis fidelibus domini reg' ibi tunc preſentibus, inter Angnetam filiam Radulphi de Scheyl, petent', & Willielm' de Rydewar tenent', de dimid' hydatâ terre cum pertin' in Scheyle, unde placitum fuit, &c. ſcilicet, quod predicta Agnes remiſit & quietum clamav' totum jus & clam' ſuum quod ipſa habuit in prefatâ dimid' hydatâ terre cum pertin' prefato Willielmo & heredibus ſuis, in perpetuum. Et pro hâc quietâ clam', fine, & comordiâ, predictus Willielmus dedit predicte Angneti tres marcas argenti [10]."

In 1200, "Inquiſitio facta fuit per legales milites & probos homines de viſn' de Seile, quod communia boſcâ de Seile pertinuit ad eccleſiam de Seile, die quo Radulphus Seile vendidit boſcum illud Stephano de Bellocampo, & quod communia boſci illius debet de jure pertinere ad eccleſiam de Seile [11]."

The Knights Hoſpitallers held in Seile two ſhillings a year, "de eleemoſinâ Radulfi de Seile [12]."

The Templars too had not only lands in Seile, but a ſeignory and court; in which, ſays Dugdale [13] (ex ipſo autogr. in Bibl. Cotton.), had been "a ſute betwixt Raphe Buche and Roger Fitz Hugh" (fil' Hugonis de Templo; both of them paſſim in the Seile originals). And a fine levied of the lands was confirmed by William de Ridware, chief lord, and recorded in the court of William earl of Derby at Tutbury.

Precedently to the ſaid fine of Aſſumpt. 6 Joh. (15 Aug. 1204,) muſt have been executed, as above ſtated in note 10, the two quit-claims [14] of Will' fil' Rogeri de Strettone & Agnes his wife, filia Radulphi de Scheyle; by the firſt of which they give up to William de Rydewar, inter alia, the fourth part of a virgate coming to them from the land of the Templars, recovered by the ſaid William de Rydewar from the ſame Templars in Scheyl; and by the ſecond, "partem que nos contingebat de ſervic' Galfr' Salvagii, ſcilicet, tres ſolid' quas ipſe Galfr' reddit pro tenemento de feud' Radulphi de Scheyle, & partem noſtram de duobus ſolid' quos Stephan' de Bello Campo reddit pro boſco quod tenet de eod' feodo, & partem noſtram de duobus ſolid' quos canonici de Greſeleye reddunt pro molend' de Scheyle, & partem noſtram de calcaribus que Willielmus de Gamvill' reddit pro boſco quod tenet de eodem feudo, & Radulphum Buche & terram ſuam & ſervic' ſuum, & partem noſtram de adquiſitione quam nos & ipſe facere poterimus de tenemento quod fratres Hoſpital' Jeruſalem tenent de eod' feudo. Pro hâc autem quietclam' dedit nobis predictus Willielmus de Rydewar duas marcas argenti. Hiis teſtibus; Willielmo clerico de Scheyl, Galfr' Salvano, Willielmo de Melburne, Waltero de Durandeſtorp, Radulpho de Edeinghalle, Ricardo fil' Gilberti, & multis aliis."

---

[1] Rydeware Chartulary, belonging to Mr. Greſley; the deed immediately following N° 48. See much of the moſt curious parts of this Chartulary, at large, pp. 999—1007.

[2] Chetwynd, from Burton Regiſter.

[3] See this charter in p. 1095*.

[4] Concord. following N° 134 in Rydew. Chartul.

[5] Rydew. Chartul. N° 3.

[6] Q. mis-written for Boſchevill?

[7] Rydeware Chartulary, N° 58. Which deed, from its mention of earl Ferrars's foreſters near Dieulacreſſe abbey, co. Stafford, ſeems poſterior to his ſucceſſion, 1232, to Ranulph earl of Cheſter's eſtate in thoſe parts. Deeds, 1221 and 1230, in p. *982.

[8] Seile orig.

[9] Rydeware Chartulary, N° 119. Even Prince Edmund, in 1279, (ſee p. 985*, col. 2.) is ſtyled "Comes de Ferrer."

[10] Rydeware Chartul. N° 48. At this period Rydeware was become lord of Seile; for Agnes is here ſole plaintiff; and Rydeware appears lord before her huſband's death, by three quit-claims from him and her jointly, N° 10, and N° 11 twice over, (the two firſt of them after-ſtated in this page.)

[11] Placita de anno 2 Regis Johannis de diverſis Rotulis in Receptu Scaccarii, Rot. 8. in dorſo.

[12] Dugdale, Mon. Angl. vol. II. p. 527.

[13] Orig. Jur. p. 94.

[14] Rydeware Chartulary, N° 10, 11.

Of the lands thus appearing held of the fee of Rad' de Scheyle, the firſt-named portion, belonging to the Salvages, lords of Newton Regis near adjoining, in Warwickſhire, ſeems to have been ſoon after confirmed to the priory of St. Thomas near Stafford by Galfrid ſon of Galfrid le Salvage, being the donation of his father Galfrid, "de totâ terrâ ſuâ quam habuit in Duranteſthorp [1]." Yet we ſhall ſee, in 4° Edw. III. not only the prior, but Herthul, heir to Salvage, holding each 4 virgates in the lordſhip of Seile.

The next portion, held by Stephen de Bello Campo, may be illuſtrated by the following remarkable deeds of his ſiſters, and of his nephew Fitz-Warin; with grants of the earl of Cheſter and others to the Segraves [2].

"Ego Iſolda de Bello Campo conceſſi, &c. coram domino H. rege Anglie fil' regis Johannis, Stephano de Segrave, & heredibus ſuis, totam terram & tenementum in Cotes, cum omnibus pertinenciis, &c. quod mihi contingebat de hereditate que fuit Stephani de Bello Campo fratris mei in eadem villâ, tenend' & habend', &c. de domino rege & heredibus ſuis, vel de quo dominus rex ſervicium predicti tenementi dedit. Pro hac conceſſione, &c. dedit 20 marcas argenti. Hiis teſtibus; domino R. Ciceſtren' epiſcopo, domini regis cancellar', dominis R. Dunholm' & J. Bathon' epiſcopis, domino W. Carleol' epiſcopo, domini regis theſaur', Hugone de Nevill, Rad' de Trublevill, Henr' de Braibroc, Radulpho Gernu', Ricardo Duket, Raun' le Breton, Hugone le Deſpenſer, Roberto de Lexentō, Barthol' Peche, & aliis. The like grant from Radulfus de Arderne, de voluntate & conſenſu Aline uxoris." Seal rather defaced; but, pretty plainly, a feſs, field chequy or undé. Theſe, by Dugdale's Baronage, vol. I. p. 672. a. were in 13 Henry III.

"Ego Willielmus filius Warini de Upton, conceſſi, &c. Stephano de Segrave, & heredibus ſuis, omne jus, &c. in villâ de Cotes, quam idem Stephanus tenet de domino rege de conceſſione & voluntate heredum Stephani de Bello Campo, ſororum ſcilicet ipſius Stephani, ſcilicet, Iſolde, Matillidis, Aline, & Idone, amitarum mearum. Teſtibus; Waltero de Beſeboſt, Ricardo abbate de Hales, Waltero de Bello Campo, Eudone de Bello Campo, Waltero fil' Radulphi de Hunſtaneſcote, Oſberto de Abbetoft, Roberto Pipard, Willielmo de Brimareton, Willielmo Eghe, Johanne de Baiocis, Adâ fil' Roberti de Trokemareſton, Hugone le Poyer, & aliis [3]."

"Rannulphus comes Ceſtr' & Lincoln' omnibus, &c. Relaxavi & quiet' clamavi domino Stephano de Sedgrava, & heredibus ſuis, omnes ſectas quas ipſi & homines ſui de Bretteby, Roſtlaveſton, & de Cotes, facere debuerunt & ſolebant ad wapentaca mea de Rapendon & Greſl'. Teſtibus; Willielmo de Vernon juſtic' Ceſtr', Willielmo de Cantelup, Fulcone filio Warin', Baldw' de Ver', Radulph de Bray, Johanne de Atyâ, Ricardo de Birun, Waltero de Byſebot, Ricardo de Vernon, Ricardo de Arden, Johanne clerico, & aliis [3]."

Grants in Roſtlaveſton to the ſaid Stephen, and to a Gilbert de Segrave, from Roger de Mohaut, or Montealto, ſeneſchal of Cheſter, Robert Maulovel de Roſtlaveſton (Rob' fil' Stephani Maulovel a witneſs), and from others; and in Scheyle and vicinity to dominus Nicholaus grandſon of Stephen, and dominus Johannes ſon and heir of Nicholaus. A ſhield of arms of Nicholaus ſeems incloſed between two ſmall ones; at leaſt one is plain, charged with a croſs. Another (as obſerved by Burton [4]) of John is between two garbs. "S' JOHANNIS DE SEGRAVE."

"Will' de Wav'e abb' de Miravalle & convent' remiſerunt domino Nicholao de Segrave communiam paſture in Grymiſwode & Rothlaſtonewode. Pro quâ remiſſione dominus Nich', de aſſenſu domini Johannis filii ſui & heredis, conceſſit 4 acr' boſci ſui vocat' le Hautboys in Scheyle propinquiores parco abbatis & convent' de Magnâ Scheyle per perticatam 16 pedum & dimidii. Etiam quod includere poſſint placiam terre inter parcum domini Nicholai de Cotes & parcum abbatis. Teſtibus; domino Galfrido de Greſele, Roberto de la Warde, Theobaldo de Nevyle, militibus, domino Hug' de Kave, tunc rectore eccleſie de Clyfton, Waltero de Stretton, Galfrido de Stretton in Clyfton, Radulpho Wychard de Scheyle, & aliis." Seal of dominus Nicholaus gone; that of John perfect, as before mentioned.

Hence it appears the abbot had a park in Seile, very near to the Segrave park of Cotes, ſtill called Coton park (though long incloſed), and adjoining Seile wood; but in the pariſh of Roſtlaſton, co. Derby.

Seile mill, we find above, was in the hands of the canons of Greſeley, in no long time after Rad. de Greſeley's purchaſe of it.

Ralph Buche, it appears by grants both of Ralph de Seile and Agnes, had been, like his father William, an object of favour. His ſervice is now, with the others in the above quit-claim of William and Agnes, transferred to Rydeware.

Walter de Ridware, ſecond ſon of William, but preferred by his father in Seile, conformably with the purport of an obſcure and imperfect deed in Erdeſwic's Staffordſhire, article Ridware, gave to Miravall paſture in all his Clifton and Cotes woods, and quitted all demands, "de purpreſturis & rebus aliis factis uſque ad Paſcha proximum poſt captionem caſtelli de Bitham, anno 1221." He alſo releaſed to Ralph abbot of Mirawalle "totum jus quod habui in ſex acris et dimidiâ acrâ prati in prato quod dicitur Vuer medowe in Magnâ Scheyle, anno 1230. Teſtibus; Radulpho filio Nicholai tunc ſeneſcallo domini comitis Derbie, Rogero de Rideware, & Rob' parſonâ de Riddewar', Jacobo de Sibeſdeſdon, Roberto de Grendon, Nicholao de Norton, Willielmo Cungeſton, Joh' Morel, Adâ parſonâ de Overton:" and in the latter deed are added "Rob' Selveyn, Henr' Bug', & multis aliis." Seal, the ſpread eagle with the chief, as in his father's arms; SIGILLV' WALTERI DE RIDEWARE. A leaſe for 12 years by the ſame Walter runs, "Hec conventio eſt primo hokeday poſt conſecrationem archiepiſcopi Edmundi de Abbadone" (Abendon), i. e. 1235 [5].

Of Walter's age are the following "grants; or the firſt of them perhaps a little older."

"Lucianus de Deſerto dedi, &c. abbacie de Mirevalle, & monachis ibidem Deo ſervientibus, ad domum infirmorum ſecularium, pro ſalute anime mee & Luciani ſeni's avi mei, & omnium anteceſſorum, &c. totum pratum meum quod habui ſuper aquam que vocatur Meis, ſub Magnâ Seylâ. Hiis teſtibus; Willielmo perſonâ de Seyla, Roberto de Appelbi, Walt' de Streton, Will' filio W. perſone de Seyla, Will' filio Rob' de Appelbi, Petro de Duranteſthorp, &c." In another grant to Miravalle, after "Luciani de Seylâ avi mei," he adds, "& Agathe uxoris mee;" and Oſbert his ſon and heir joins in warranty.

He grants to St. Mary and St. George of Greſele, and the canons there, part of his wood de Seile; his ſon (here written Oſbernus) confirms the grant; and Richard prior of Greſelea, with his convent, paſſes

---

[1] Chetwynd, vol. B. p. 49. from Regiſter of St. Thomas.

[2] All from Seile originals.

[3] Theſe two identical deeds are ſhortly noticed, from the Segrave Chartulary, in the Appendix to the Hiſtory of Leiceſterſhire, vol. II. p. 120. Thoſe of Iſolda de Bello Campo and her ſiſters in p. 119, mention, "ſervitium unius bracheti," whilſt the correſponding originals at Seile leave undecided both the ſervice and the perſon of whom Stephen de Segrave was to hold.

[4] See vol. III. p. 407.

[5] All three originals, in the poſſeſſion of the Rev. William Greſley, at Seile; and the oldeſt he has, of this ſpecific ſeries; for it is obſervable that in all his large collection there is no original to which the firſt William de Rydeware is a party: all the autographs of his or an earlier time concern Merevale, and owe their preſervation to its monks.

over

[To face Vol. III. p. *982.]

PEDIGREE of RYDEWARE, of EDINGHALE, HAMSTAL-RYDWARE, and SEILE; with the deſcent of DRAICOTE ſub NEEDWOOD; that of NETHER-SEILE and EDINGHALE, through PIPE and SWYNFEN, to VERNON; and that of HAMSTAL-RYDEWARE, BOYLESTON, &c. to COTTON; the STAFFORD lines, both of SANDON and that of CLIFTON and PIPE, &c. &c.

Atſorus, an Engliſhman, in favour of whom either the Conqueror or William Rufus iſſued a writ to = ...
N. de Eſtafford, that he ſhould hold his land of Edelinghal by the ſame ſervices his father had [1].

Aſſer Geun, or Junior, lord of Nethertoun, where he held = ... nine virgates of the honour of Wicchenor [2].

Thomas lord of Boyleſtone, co. Derby, and = . . . of Draicote ſub Nedwode, co. Stafford, a member (as ſtated) of Boyleſtone.

Ralph le Petit, the Venator to perform = Marjoria, de camerâ his brother's ſervice to the earl Ferrars for Draicote.
comitis.

1. Roger Geun; died at the abbey of St. Remigius, and deviſed to it
2 virgates in Nethertoun.

2. William Geun, ſeems called William de Rydewar, and to be the William in king Stephen's = . . .
writ for Edringhal land [3], and probably the ſame to whom Robert de Stapford, third baron, gave his fee of Rydewar, and confirmed his grant of Rydeware land to W. de Tanet with his daughter [4] (or Tanet's to him, for that point cannot be quite determined).

Reg. de Greſleg', 1ſt huſband; = Hawyſia, = Sir Radulf Peche, 2d huſband; probably ſon in 12 H. II held the two knights fees which Radulph
Parvus held t. Henry I. [5]

Hawyſia, ſole heir.

Sir Radulf Peche, 2d huſband; probably ſon or brother to Richard Peche, to whom Anſelm abbot of St. Eadmund's granted Ketleberſtoun, of which his father Robert Pecche had been enfeoffed by Godwinus de Ketleberſton [6].

. . . = Matild de Tichemers.

1. Roger Geun; died at the abbey of St. Remigius, and deviſed to it 2 virgates in Nethertoun.

2. William Geun, ſeems called William de Rydewar, and to be the William in king Stephen's writ for Edringhal land[3], and probably the ſame to whom Robert de Stapford, third baron, gave his fee of Rydewar, and confirmed his grant of Rydeware land to W. de Tanet with his daughter[4] (or Tanet's to him, for that point cannot be quite determined). = . . .

Reg. de Greſleg', 1ſt huſband; in 12 H. II held the two knights fees which Radulph Parvus held t. Henry I.[5] = Hawyſia, ſole heir. = Sir Radulf Peche, 2d huſband; probably ſon or brother to Richard Peche, to whom Anſelm abbot of St. Eadmund's granted Ketleberſtoun, of which his father Robert Pecche had been enfeoffed by Godwinus de Ketleberſton[6].

. . . = Matild de Tichemers.

William, ſon of William de Rideware[7]; grantee, in Lichfield, of biſhops Durdent and Richard Peche, and a knight before 1182[8], ſeneſcal to William earl Ferrars[9] and his ſon William earl of Derby. Had the whole land of Alex. fil. Jordani in Durandeſthorpe circiter 1196, and that of Rad. de Scheyle (except Lucian's ſervice) before 1204[10]. = . . . perhaps da. of W. de Tanet.

. . . = Robert, frater Willielmi de Rideware[11].

Edwynus.

William, "frater Willielmi de Ridewar,"[11] grantee in Burgo (Robert earl Ferrars's Novum Burgum de Agdareſley, now Newborough[12]). = . . .

Adam de Rydeware, more uſually Adam fil. Willielmi, leſſee in fee farm, at 42s. rent, of his couſin Roger's whole grant of Calengewood[13]; living 1253[14]. His heir in Calengewood was Rad. de Burgo (Novo Burgo), elſewhere de Novâ Villâ, who held of William de Rydewar, nephew and heir to the ſaid Roger, by 2s. rent only[15].

Reginald de Boyleſton, died ſ. p.

Sir Nicholas Peche, buried at Dunestaple priory, t. John. = Alic. de Syffrewaſt, relict[16].

. . . . . . de Jarpenvill. =

Rob. de Sydenham. = . . .

1. Roger de Rydeware, lord of Edenichale, & ſtyled dominus[17]; and of Rydewar[18]; grantee of the whole land of Calengewood, co. Stafford[19]. = Alicia[20]. Poſſibly daughter to Richard le Waleys, named directly after her.

2. Walter de Rydeware (de Rydeware-Hamſtal, in Ryd. Chart. ſub N°61); preferred in Seile, and grantor there 1221, 1230—4[21]; ſtyled dominus repeatedly; grantee, in Bromley, of Laurence abbot of Burton, St. Andrew 1240[22]. = Matild de Peche, ſole heir of Boyleſton, Fridleſham, & Ketelberſton; given with all her inheritance to Walter de Rydewar by Wm. earl of Derby; living 25 Nov. 1283[23]. = Sir Oliver D'eincourt, d. 30 H. III.[24] His relict Matild. endowed, ſecondly, in Hoveringham, Flintham, Radeclive, co. Nottingham, Haneworth, co. Lincoln.

1. Andrew de Jarpenvill, a knt. in 1281. = Matilda, coheir[25].

2. Simon de Jarpenvill, a kt. in 1281. = Johanna, coheir[26].

(All above from the narratio at head of Rydware Chartulary. And ſee Shaw's Staffordſhire, vol. I. p. 83.)

1. Willm. de Rydeware, uſually de Rydewar-Hamſtal, and ſtyled dominus; lord of Scheyl 1247; grants a wood to ſir Peter le Poter 1263[27]; agrees to arbitration with abbot Robert de Hocthorp 1273[28]; ſeems by Maveſyn Rydware deeds, N° 72, to leave a wife Matilda, re-married to ſir Robert de Stepilton.

2. Roger de Rydeware, leſſee of his mother's firſt dowry lands, and her grantee of Ketelberſton and Boyleſton, 1253; lord of Rydware Hamſtal 1274, of Scheyle 1275; dominus Rogerus 1279[29]. = Agnes; ſeems by ſaid Mav. Ridware deed a daughter of ſir W. Fitzherbert, of Norbury; re-married to Rad. de Burgo (living 1263, 1292); 3dly, to Edmund, brother of Nicolas baron Stafford; 4thly, to Ric. de Kaythorp, tenant with her in dower of a fifth part of Rideware-Hamſtal 1311[30].

3. Walter de Rydeware; in ſettlements of Ketelberſton and Boyleſton 1253; lord of Rydeware Hamſtal 1282[31]. = Elena Fitz-herbert, dau. to Will. of Northbury; unmarried, and her father's grantee in Roſſmtone and Northbury, Eaſter 1269[32]. = Thomas de Ardern, of Hanewell, c. Oxon; 2d huſband[33].

Thomas; called by ſir Thomas de Rydeware "fil. Thome de Ardern, frater meus," 3 Feb. 1312[34].

4. Nicholaus; dead 1270.

5. John; in the ſettlements 1253 circiter; dead 1270.

. . . . de la Launde = . .

At leaſt 1 other da. living about 1253. Alicia[35]; dead 1270. Margeria[36].

John de la Launde; in Boyleſton ſettlement 1253.

Thomas de Pipe, ſon and heir of ſir Robert (ſeneſcal of prince Edm.'s honour of Tuttebury), ld. of Draycote 1295; a knt. 1311; ſummoned among the barons 1 E. III.[37] = Johanna, ſole heir; 1ſt wi. of Th. de Pipe 1295, or before. = Margaret, dau. to Ralph ld. Baſſet of Drayton; 2d wife, and relict of ſir Tho. de Pipe; gave Pipe manor, &c. "the gift of her ſon James de Pipe," to her ſon Richard de Stafforde, knt. St. Mathew 1337[38]. = Edmund baron Stafford; d. 1309; 1ſt huſb.

Sir William de Stafford, of Sandon, Bromſhulf, and Amelcote[39], co. Staff.; grandſon to Wm. a younger ſon of Hervey Bagot baron Stafford. = Iſabella.

Roger de Rideware[40], "ſon and heir of the late ſir Roger, of the co. of Derby," ſells Boyleſton to John de Baſing, citizen of London, in 22 E. I.[40]

Margareta, 6 and 8 E. II. 1ſt w.[41] = Thomas de Rydeware, knt. in ward to Thomas earl of Lancaſter after 1296; compiler of the Chartulary in 2 E. II.; living 19 E. II.[42] = Iſabella, jointreſs in Sheyle manor in tail ſpecial 15 E. II. ſurviving ſir Thomas ſettled Edinghale lands, by fine, 1 and 6 E. III. on her own iſſue[43]. = 1. James de Stafford, kt. 2d huſband of Iſabella, & and lord of Seile, 1336; living 1349[44]. = Margaret[45].

Margaret, heir of Sandon and Bromſhulf[46].

Robert de Pipe, lord of Draycote 13 E. II. and of Parva or Pipe Rydware after his father's death; grants in Coton ſub Nedwode, 16 Edw. III. 1342, to his ſon William and latter's wife Johanna[47]. = Emma[45].

Sir Philip de Somervill, ld. of Whichnor, from Nativ. Dom. 1300 to 23 Jan. 1354, or 1355[48]. = Margaret de Pipe; had the manor of Tatenhull, co. Stafford, and a third part of Draycote; d. between 1339, & Ep. 1351[49].

James de Pipe, kt. gov. of Berw. 17 E. III. ſeneſcal of Aquitain in 26°; had Pipe, the paternal eſtate, which, 8 E. III. he demiſed to his mother the baroneſs[50]. = Eva[51].

1. Ralph earl Stafford. = Alianor, da. and coheir; ſiſter and heir of Margaret 10 R. II.

Margaret, d. & coheir 48 E. III.[59]

Iſabella, da. & coheir to W. Camvil, of Clifton, & relict of . . Vernon; living 1351[52]; 1ſt wife. = 2. Richard de Stafford, kt. ld. of Clifton in part; di. 13 Aug. 1380, ſeiſed inter alia, of Camvil wood, &c. held of Robert de Pipe, lord of Seile, below. (See p. 985*.) = Matilda, below; dau. of Stafford, and relict of Vernon; 2d wife.

Walter de Rideware, married very young, in Michaelmas term 1311; his father then and in 1312 ſettling on him in tail ſpecial Rideware-Hamſtal, Friddleſham, and Ketelberſton; knt. 23 E. III. dead 32[53]. = Johanna, on whom Walter & Johanna Waldeſhef, doubtleſs her parents, by fine of ſame Michaelmas term 1311, ſettled Boyleſton, of which Juliana de Baſing then held one third in dower[53].

John. Robert. Both in Sheyle ſettlement 15 E. II. 1321. (See p. 983*.)

Edmund. Thomas. Both in Edinghale ſettlement of 1327—1331.—Edmund, rector of Sheyle, 24 June 1349[54].

Johanna, heir in tail of Sheile, and ſucceeded to Edinghale alſo; wife of W. de Pipe, 1342, 1356. = William de Pipe, of Draycote, lord of Chirche Sheile and Pipe Rydeware, 1356, 1358[56].

Elizabeth[55]. Amya[55].

2. John de Stafford, knt. = Elizabeth, younger of two dau'rs; 1ſt wife[48]; dead 1355. = Margaret; 2d wife; tenant of Amelcote, 1374[45].

3. Walter[45].
4. Thomas[45].
5. William[45].

1. Humphry Stafford, anceſtor of Stafford lord Southwick, and earl of Devon.
2. Ralph Stafford, of Grafton, co. Worc.

1. Edmund de Stafford, bp. of Exeter and lord keeper; ſole lord of Clifton by exchange with Ric. Vernon and guardians 2 H. IV.[58]; di. 30 Sept. 1419 (or 1418), ſeiſed of Camvil wood, &c. held of Margaret, d. & heir of W. de Pipe.

Sir John Ardern, of Elford, c. Staff. = Katharine; whoſe deſcendant ſir J. Stanley became lord "de Pype, Clyfton Gaumpvyle, Elforde, and Stotfolde," and was anceſtor to both ſeller and purchaſer of Pipe manor 1800[59].

John, lord of Swynſen 1367. = ... coheir in tail to ſir John de Freford.

Edmund Vernon (ſon of John); living about 1355. = Matilda, coheir to her grandfather ſir P. Somervill, 1355; lady of Tatenhull 1391, and (by the ſtyle, "relict of ſir R. Stafford"), of a Nottinghamſhire piſcary of Trent, late ſir Philip's, 1393[57]. = Sir Richard de Stafford, above; 2d huſband.

Walter de Rideware, knt. grants Boyleſton to his mother Johanna, 32 E. III.[60] = ...

Wm. Cotton, 3 R. II. = Agnes, ſole heir, 3 R. II.

Thos. Swynfeyn, of Swynfeyn; refeoffed in Lichefeld, Pakynton, and Edholme, St. Mark 1415[61]. = Margeria, daughter of Rob. Stokley.

Robert Swinfeyn, eſq.; probably the Staffordſhire eſcheator, t. Ric. II. joint leſſee of Alicia Stafford in her 1ſt huſband Pipe's eſtates 1411 (See p. *985.) His ſon's grantee of the whole, Trinity Sunday 1415[62]. = Agnes; ſeems not yet married, Trin. t. 48 E. III.[45]

Robert de Pipe, knt. Marriage-ſettlement of Pipe Rydeware, firſt Monday in Lent 1358; had a manor in Ednynghale 1373; lord of Draycote and Sheyle 1377; living 13 Aug. 1380; firſt huſband[63]. = Alicia, d. of Alured de Sulny, kt. coheir to her brother ſir J. de S.[64] in 15 R. II. = 2. Thos. de Stafford, kt.; d. about 1397, ſeized of Seile, in right of his wife; 2d h. (See 985*.)

Wm. Spernore, living 2 H. IV; 3d h.[66] = 1ſt wi.

Thos. Stafford, of Pipe and Baginton, bo. 1388-9, heir to bp. Edmund 1419; ſon and heir of Alice 9 H. V. and releaſed right in ſome manors, part of Sulny's eſtate; died 11 Dec. 1425[65]. = Iſabella, d. and heir of ſir W. Bagot, of Baginton, c. War.[67]

William Swinfeyn, called couſin and heir of ſir Robert Pipe 1411, and lord of Waal (near Lichfield), in his own grant Trinity Sunday 1415; dead 1419, and ſeems by biſhop Edmund's Leiceſterſhire inquiſition to have ſtyled himſelf William de Pipe. = Jocoſa, younger of two coheirs[68].

Richard, aged 5 at St. Laurence (9 Aug.), 1426, died young.

Sir William Vernon, knt. of Haddon, knight-conſtable of England; died 30 June, 1467; buried at Tonge. = Margaret, ſole heir of Seile, Pipe Ridware, Draycote, and Edinghale, 1419; coheir of Spernore (Spernall), co. Warwick; wife of ſir W. Vernon in 1435; living, his relict, 12 June, 1471; buried at Tonge. (See p. *985; and all her iſſue by ſir William Vernon, in Shaw's Staffordſhire, vol. I. p. 404.)

NOTES on the RYDEWARE PEDIGREE.

[4] Ibid. 72, 73. But if, contrary to the above conjecture, it was William the ſeneſcal who was
[1] Rydeware Chartulary, N° 102. [2] Old French narrative preceding Rydeware Chartulary. [3] Rydeware Chartulary, 81. [5] T. Blore, from Liber Niger, p. 219.
Stafford's grantee, it ſhould then ſeem, by N° 74, ibid. that he had an eldeſt ſon, William, living at the making of this laſt deed.
[6] Rydeware Chartulary, 101. Not at all improbably the above grantees of Ketelberſton might be biſhops Robert and Richard Peche of Lichfield. Dugdale poſitively ſets down the one biſhop as father of the other, both in Baronage, article Peche, at the head of his Coventry archdeacons, and under Hampton in Arden; and in the latter place as unequivocally gives biſhop Robert another ſon, Gaufrid; (though his proof is not concluſive for that preciſe relation, of which he ſeems aware, attaching Gaufrid to Robert by dots only). Now it is very obſervable, both that a principal lay-witneſs to biſhop Richard's grant (N° 59 of Rydeware Chartulary), is Galfrid Pecche; and that the third and fourth of thoſe to another grant of the ſame biſhop in p. 15 of Greſeley Chartulary, are Galfrid and Radulph Peche. And this Radulph (ſay, a brother of biſhop Richard) would very well ſuit in point of time, as father of ſir Nicholas the father of Matilda. 'Tis poſſible too that the Richard le Waleys, who cloſes the liſt of ſouls in N° 97, and Matilda's correſponding grant, in Rydeware Chartulary, was the perſon Dugdale makes father-in-law to his Gaufrid Peche, inſtead of being ſo to the elder Roger de Rydeware; which would argue ſtrongly that Matilda ſprung from a brother or near relative of Gaufrid. [10] Rydeware Chartulary, 48. and 3.
[7] Mon. Angl. vol. I. p. 468. [8] Rydeware Chartulary, 59 [9] Mon. Angl. vol. II. p. 506.
[11] Erdeſwick, in Hamſtal-Rydeware. Greſley Chartulary, p. 9. “Walt. fr. W.” a witneſs to N° 73, Rydeware Chartulary, may mean brother of W. de Tanet; ſo too its firſt witneſs, “Julianus filius ſuus,” moſt probably ſon to the ſame.
And this laſt is an argument for Tanet, with a ſon at man's eſtate, being rather the father than ſon-in-law. “Robertus de Rydeware & Edwynus ſuus filius” both atteſt the above carta 73, and join in its grant of Rydeware land by Rydeware to Tanet, or Tanet to Rydeware. A later-ſeeming Robert atteſts nearly all the Calenge-wood deeds in Rydeware Chartulary, N° 66—71, and alſo the deeds N° 84, 85. In general, Adam de Rydeware ſtands next witneſs to him. This is probably the Robert de Ridewar who marries Sarah, daughter to Thomas le Brun, of Freford, and has with her, by a very remarkable original deed (Mr. Dyott's at Freford) one hide in Freford. Shaw, vol. II. Appendix, p. 14.
[12] Rydeware Chartulary, 14. [13] Ibid. 66. 69. [14] Ibid. 124. [15] Ibid. 68. [16] Page 8 after N° 121 of Rydeware Chartulary.
[17] Rydeware Chartulary, 85. In 87. he ſeems to ſtand before his brother Walter. But his ſeniority is found beſt decided in another Freford autograph, “His teſtibus, Willielmo de Rydeware ſeneſcallo, Rogero & Waltero filiis.” To whom, after ſeven others, follows, “Roberto de Rydeware.” See Shaw's above Appendix, p. 10, which (with p. 11) gives much-needed corrections of his vol. I. p. 359. [22] Burton Regiſter. Rydeware Chartulary, 88.
[18] Ibid. third printed deed after N° 129. [19] Rydeware Chartulary, 65. [20] Ibid. 97. [21] Seile originals, ſtated in p. 982.
[23] Rydeware Chartulary, 80, and third page after N° 121. [24] Not he in 3 John, as Dugdale and Thoroton. For the dower ſee page preceding, and firſt and fifteenth pages following, the ſaid N° 121.
[25] Wife of Andrew de Jarpenvill 27 Aug. 1272; and with her ſiſter held Draycote againſt Matild. de Peche. [26] Wife of Simon de Jarpenvill 27 Aug. 1272. [27] Seile original. [28] Rydeware Chartulary, 44, 49.
[29] Ibid. 124. 98. 56. ſub 61. 47. 129. [30] Ibid. 131, and ninth page following. [31] Ibid. 78. [32] Ibid. 114. [33] Maveyſyn Rydeware cart. 127. in Shaw, vol. I. p. 163. [34] Rydeware Chartulary, ſub N° 118.
[35] Ibid. 98, 97. [36] Living after majority of her nephew ſir Thomas and his grantee in Scheyl. Fragment near end of Rydeware Chartulary. [39] Erdeſwick, in locis, in his own pedigree.
[37] Lord Vernon's and Maveyſyn Rydeware originals, in Shaw, vol. I. pp. 83. 163. Dugdale, Baronage, II. 109; Simmons, 139. [38] Original, in poſſeſſion of Samuel Pipe Wolferſtan, eſq.
[40] T. Blore, from lord Leiceſter's evidences. This Roger, however, ſon and heir ſo late as 1294, ſeems not eaſily reconciled with his uncle Walter being lord of Seile 1282. Yet Boyleſton does appear aliened, by ſome one, to Baſing; and was become Waldeſhef's as early as 32 E. I. (Rydeware Chartulary, 133.) Can we ſuppoſe Roger, being a ſeller, to have paſſed Seile to his uncle, ſoon after his father's death? [44] Seile originals.
[41] Rydeware Chartulary, 134, and page after. [42] Laſt page but 3 of Rydeware Chartulary. Seile orig. [43] Laſt leaf of Rydeware Chartulary.
[45] From a record (given in Stafford MSS. XIII. 7, 8. and called Erdeſwic Plea, for the manor of Amelcote) of Trin. 48 E. III. (1374.) rot. 239; which, ſetting forth the whole then poſterity of ſir William Stafford, runs, “Emma que fuit nupta Roberto de Pype, de quibus Willielmus, de quo Robertus ſuperſtes & Agnes ſuperſtes,” &c. We have preſumed Agnes mother to William Swinfeyn; for her father William appears by this record to have no ſiſter; and it ſeems very unlikely (though poſſible) that Alicia de Stafford, demiſing to William Swinfeyn (ſee p. *985), would not, if he was her grandſon, ſay, “filio —— quæ fuit filia mea, ac conſanguineo & her. Rob. de Pipe.”
[46] This Margaret was the wife of Thomas Erdeſwic 12 Edw. III.; relict of ſir John de Hardreſhill, and demandant of Amelcote, 1374. [47] Lord Vernon's, Mr. Chadwick's, and Mr. Adderley's originals.
[48] Mr. Turton's Chartulary of the ſecond ſir Walter Griffith. [49] Griffith Chartulary; and lord Vernon's original. [50] Dugd. Baron. vol. I. p. 161. Chetwynd, B. p. 152. from Lockſley deeds. Cotton, Claudius, C. X.
[51] Staff. MSS. vol. XIII. fol. 66. 69. 71. [52] Dugdale's Warwickſhire, vol. I. p. 223. and Iſabella's ſeal in Shaw, vol. I. p. 394. [53] Rydeware Chartulary, 131, 134. Lord Leiceſter's evidences, ut ſupra. Chartulary, 132.
[54] Seile orig. [55] Ednynghale ſettlement, in p. 983*. [56] Seile and Maveyſyn Rydeware originals.
[57] Dugdale's Baronage, vol. II. p. 108. Griffith's Whichnor Great Court rolls and Chartulary. See in Shaw, vol. I. p. 394, a detail in proof of the three poſitions, that Richard Vernon married Matilda, a daughter-heir of William Camvil; that ſir Richard Stafford married a daughter-heir of the ſame William, relict of a Vernon; and that the ſame ſir R. Stafford married a Matilda, relict of a Vernon (Edmund); yet that theſe were three different women.
Accumulated coincidences of name and deſcription ſo little to be expected, that they may well excuſe Erdeſwick, who, happening only on the heir Matilda, marries her to both Richards, and thus makes all three wives but one perſon.
[58] Huntbach MSS. vol. II. p. 71. The biſhop's inquiſitio means that he held of Margaret Swynfeyn, heir of Seile above (ſee p. *985); and he muſt have held, at a prior period, of his younger brother ſir Thomas.
[59] Shaw, vol. I. pp. 353, 354. Plate XXXVI. and pp. 414. and facing *416. vol. II. Appendix, p. 10. [60] Lord Leiceſter's evidences, ut ſupra. [61] S. P. Wolferſtan's original.
The friend who drew out the Swynfen pedigree in Shaw, vol. II. pp. 28*, 29*. and alſo the Draycote article in vol. I. pp. 82, 83, 84, wiſhes to correct himſelf in both places; as alſo a paragraph in the firſt column of vol. II. p. 30 (but more eſpecially a period or two in column 1 of the ſaid page 84); being now perſuaded, from a ſupplement of Swynfen original evidences lately put into his hands, that neither William, nor even Robert his father, was the Swynfen de Swynfen, head of the houſe for the time being, and “anceſtor to the ſucceeding Swynfens of Swynfen, as well as of Leiceſterſhire;” but that theſe two were of a younger branch, and therefore the iſſue of their heir female, not being entitled, on the Swynfen ſide, to “the beſt kind of quartering” (as ſir Edward Coke has it in his prefatory account of Littleton), did not uſe their, the Swynfen, arms. The empty honour of heir to arms, though not to eſtate, was perhaps a rule in heraldry not yet eſtabliſhed, and it was probably “as common in thoſe days” to omit arms on the ground of not “having the eſtates” as to quarter them on the contrary ground. This is doubtleſs the true account to be given why the Vernons never quartered the Swynfen coat, and not the before-ſuppoſed circumſtance of Margaret Swynfen having a paternal half-brother, who (if he had exiſted) would have been apt to run away with not only her paternal arms, but her paternal grandmother's good eſtate. And indeed it ſtrikes as extremely probable that William Swynfen, conſidering biſhop Stafford's Leiceſterſhire inquiſition calls him de Pipe, did really in his latter years aſſume that name; and if the name, probably the arms too; and if ſo, then the Vernons, in placing the Pipe coat, with three more (Vernon, Stackpole, Pembruge), on a ſhield over the grand gateway, and in other conſpicuous ſituations about Haddon houſe, and elſewhere, would think themſelves exhibiting Margaret's proper paternal coat. Thomas Swynfeyn, placed in our Rydeware table here, in order to introduce the above corrections, and bring the caſe directly under the eye, is ſtyled “Swynfeyn de Swynfeyn,” Monday after St. Mark 1415, not two months before the very day when William, “lord of Waal, and heir of ſir Robert Pipe,” releaſes to Robert his father in fee all the eſtates of the late ſir Robert. Thomas too is re-enfeoffed of Ed-holme, Edithholme, a meadow ground which had been formerly the Swynfen's lands, had been paſſed (after 1300) to the Frefords, and had doubtleſs returned by marriage to the Swynfens, John lord of Swynfen appearing (by Freford evidences) entitled, in 1367, to a moiety of Freford's eſtate in right of his wife; which John ſurviving till 1375, Thomas Swynfeyn de S. re-enfeoffed of that meadow 1415, will be ſtrongly preſumed the direct deſcendant of that marriage, and chief of the houſe. And in the above ſupplemental evidences is a ſucceſſion of Swynfens, all of the name Thomas (the difficulty is to fix certainly the number), and with the addition in nearly every other inſtance of “dominus de Swynfen,” from the above period of 1415 to the ſettlement 31 Auguſt, 1502, on marriage of William, “ſonn and heir apparant of Thomas ſquier,” with Elizabeth Maſſy; from which William downwards the ſeries in Shaw is unbroken and perfect. Robert and William on the other hand are not found ſtyled of Swynfen: contrariwiſe Robert is a witneſs, 1410-11, to a Lichfield grant (entered at the College of Arms, “Ex chartis Ric. Swynfen de Swynfen 1619,”) to Thomas de Swinfen de Swynfen, if Mr. Shaw's tranſcript from ſome other copy be accurate; (for one by Mr. Lodge from the college-copy omits the re-duplication). And as witneſs to another Freford deed of 1393, Robert is preceded by Adomar and Roger Taverner, who were clearly Swynfens of a junior line, which had changed name, but not arms. See the ſaid firſt column of Shaw, vol. II. p. 30
[62] Ex chartis de Swynfen 1619, ut ſupra. [63] Maveyſyn Rydeware and Seile originals. Sir Richard Stafford's inquiſition. [64] T. Blore, from “Placita de Banco coram Roberto de Cherleton, 15 R. II.”
[65] Staff. MSS. vol. XIII. pars 2. p. 332. 339. Not recollecting this “ſon and heir of Alicia,” the concluſion of the above firſt column of Shaw, vol. I. p. 84. ſuppoſes William Swynfen's mother could be no iſſue of Alicia, on the [66] Naſh, vol. I. p. 460. “from Plac. de Banco, 9 Hen. IV.” [67] Dugdale's Warwickſhire, vol. I. p. 232. [68] Shaw, vol. I pp. 83, 84.
ground of his poſterity not having the Sulny eſtate or arms.

over to Miravalle the ſaid wood, "videlicet, a viâ que ducit ad Fiſlawe (called by Radulph de Seile "Fulleſlokh") verſus Linthon, & per ſemitam que ducit a dictâ viâ ex tranſverſo uſque ad Longeleyam, & ita uſque ad boſcum domini Walteri de Ridewar', cum terrâ arabili que extenditur in longitudine inter predict' boſcum & boſcum prenominati Walteri ex unâ parte & viam que ducit verſus Chotes ex alterâ." A fine "SIG' S'TI GEORGII DE GRESELE," with a ſmall one of Richard the prior on the reverſe [1].

Rad' Grym (elſewhere ſtyled knight) and Robertus de Mauluvell ("filius Stephani de Rampton," co. Notting. in another grant in Roſtleuſton wood) grant, by two deeds exactly alike, "abbati de Miravalle, pro ſalute, &c. paſturam in boſco meo de Seylâ. Teſtibus; domino Willielmo de Ferrariis comite Derbie, Willielmo de Ferr' filio ejus, Galfrido de Greſel tunc ſeneſchallo [2], Willielmo parſonâ de Seyl, Willielmo parſonâ de Stretton, Waltero de Stretton, Oſberto de Superiori Seyl, Willielmo de Appleby, Petro de Durandeſtorp, Rog' Templar' de Seyl, Ric' clerico, Johanne Buche, Serlone de Wytenton, & aliis [3]."

Walter's ſon and heir was William, lord of Seile in 1247. By an agreement with Robert abbot of Merevale in 1261, it appears that the ſaid William "clamabat habere communem paſturam in Stockwell Butts; & totum jus in Hawyſlenakede relaxavit. Teſtibus; Nicholao de Marenham, tunc ſeneſcallo de Tutteburi, domino Roberto de Bev'l', rectore eccleſie de Clifton, Roberto Selveyn, Henrico ..... Hugone le Cuylly, Johanne Morel, &c." [4]

In 1263, he grants to Peter le Poter, knt. the wood Peter had of the feoffment of Hamon Brun, called ſtill Potter's wood [5].

The following deeds appear of his time:

"Johannes Wiſchard abbati & conventui de Miravalle totum jus meum quod habui in boſcis utriuſque Seylle. Teſtibus; Willielmo de Greſell, filio Galfridi de Greſell, Radulpho Grim' [6]."

"Radulphus filius & heres Johannis Wiſcard de Majori Seile dedit Agneti de Welinton terras in Majore Sceyle, quarum dimid' acr' inter grangiam & berkeriam que vocatur Clatercote, &c. habend' & tenend' de Radulfo, Agneti & pueris ſuis de Willielmo perſonâ de Lullington procreatis, &c. Teſtibus, Willielmo tunc perſonâ de Stretton, Petro de Doranttḥorp, Galfrid', & Rob' (in three other deeds "Ric' & Rob',") filiis ſuis, &c." [7]

In 1247, Alan fil' Alani, Rad' fil' Radulf, Henry Fitz Roger, and Philip de Sheyl, recovered againſt the abbot of Mereval common of paſture in Little Sheyl, belonging to their free tenement in Great Sheyl [8].

In the Harl. MS. 5138. Great Seile is noticed as belonging to the honour of Tutbury; and among the records in the Chapter-houſe at Weſtminſter, called "Pedes Finium," or "Placita temp. Hen. III." in the cheſt marked B, are ſome deeds relative to Nether Seile, marked 34 [9].

In the Itinerary of 1280, Scheylle cum Hidd anſwered for an entire vill.

In 1308, Geoffrey de Camville, at his death, held two carucates of land and two acres of wood in Scheyle, of Thomas de Ridware (nephew of William above), by the ſervice of 6*d.* a year, to be paid on the feaſt of St. Michael; and William de Camville, his ſon and heir, was then of full age [10].

Thomas de Ridware, March 12, 1310-11, obtained from king Edward II. a weekly market on the Mondays, and a yearly fair on the feaſt of St. Margaret the Virgin, at his manor of Sheile; (and by a ſubſequent charter liberty of free-warren in all his demeſne lands there). "Teſtibus; venerabili patre W. Wigorn' epiſcopo, cancellario noſtro; Gilberto de Clare, comite Glouc' & Hertf'; Johanne de Warennâ, comite Surr'; Henrico de Percy; Roberto de Clifford; Willielmo de Roos de Hamelak; Radulpho filio Willielmi; Edmundo de Malo Lacu, ſeneſcallo hoſpitii noſtri; & aliis. Dat' per manum noſtram apud Berwick ſuper Tweede, xii° die Martii [11]."

In 1314, "die Veneris proximâ poſt feſtum Sancti Auguſtini Anglorum Apoſtoli, Thomas de Rideware, miles, dominus de Magnâ Sheyle, pro ſalute anime, & Margarete conſortis mee, &c. beate Marie de Mirevalle, in puram & perpetuam eleemoſinam, 15 acras boſci ante portam grangie in Magnâ Sheile. Teſtibus; domino Waltero de Baa, domino Ricardo le Vernun, domino Henrico de Applebee, militibus [12]."

In 1321, a fine was levied of the manor and advowſon of Sheyle to Thomas de Ridware Hamſtall and Iſabella his wife in tail ſpecial; remainder to John ſon of ſir Thomas in tail; remainder to Robert brother of John in tail; remainder to right heirs of ſir Thomas. And this grant Walter the ſon and heir of ſir Thomas confirmed in .. Edward III. And in 1 and 6 Edward III. another fine of ſeven yard-lands in Ednyghâle to Iſabella, widow of Thomas de Ridware, for life; remainders ſucceſſively to Edmund, Thomas, Joanna, Elizabeth, and Amya, ſons and daughters of Thomas [13].

Among the miſcellanies added at the end of the kalendered deeds in the Rydeware Chartulary are the following liſts:

1. "Fet a remembrer que l'abb' de Miraval tent en Chirche Scheyle del demiſe dame Iſabell de Ridewar' trente & une verge de terre pour leſquelis le dit abb' ad paye a la dite dame Iſabel' la renable eyde graunté al cont' de Lancaſtr' Hanr' pour ſa fille marier, en preſenc' le concel le cont' en Tottebur', S' Rob' le Foucher ſeneſchal', e S' Nichol' de Colſul

---

[1] Five originals at Seile. The particular expreſſion in the firſt of them, "Luciani ſenis," (and this beautiful ſpecimen of antient penmanſhip and ink is perfectly clear from the fainteſt trace of contraction for "ſenioris") gives an idea of the old man being yet alive. But that would ſeem to infer that this deed is older than N° 43. Rydeware Chartulary (where the ſole contracting power for Uver Scheyt is the grandſon, with W. de Meiſam), i.e. prior to 1205; and this will hardly ſuit the age of Peter de Duranteſthorpe, one of the witneſſes here.

[2] Probably after 1232. See p. *981, col. 2. Certainly after 1230, in which year, expreſsly, Fitz-Nicholas is named ſeneſcal, as in p. *982.

[3] Originals at Seile.

[4] Greſley Chartulary, in the public library at Mancheſter; copied by Dr. Pegge. The late colonel Chadwick had alſo this chartulary copied; and his copy was carefully collated with its Mancheſter prototype by Samuel Pipe Wolferſtan, eſq. in March 1801. The abbreviated deed above quoted is in p. 24 of colonel Chadwick's copy; but nearly his firſt ten pages being filled with prefatory matter of his own, any which may be cited in theſe notes will differ in about that proportion from the Mancheſter copy. The volume is a ſmall thin folio, which contains, inter alia, breviates of the evidences of the old Greſley eſtates, Drakelow and Lulington, co. Derby, Morton and Kingſton, co. Stafford, Norton juxta Twycroſs, co. Leiceſter; as alſo of thoſe which came by Gaſteneys, at Oſgathorpe in the laſt county, and Colton in Staffordſhire; together with moſt of thoſe Seile evidences, which had belonged to Merevale or the Segraves: of all theſe, with little claſſing or diſcrimination, from the time of Robert de Greſeley, ſon of William Fitz-Nigel, to the reign of Philip and Mary. It ſeems to have been written about the time of ſir George Greſley, bart. or perhaps a generation earlier; after Over Seile manor, or at leaſt much of the abbey lands, was in the ſame hands with Drakelow, &c. but before Nether Seile manor was ſo. The Mancheſter book is a bad piece of penmanſhip, the breviates ſometimes too ſhort and defective, and often quite incorrect.

[5] Original at Seile.

[6] Greſley Chartulary, p. 19.

[7] Four originals at Seile. In Fox's Martyrs, p. 1168, (edit. of 1583; another writer cites p. 1336; and p. 1181 of the Leiceſterſhire Collections cites vol. II. p. 1066.) are two more deeds of this ſame Radulf Wiſchard to the ſame parties, and of like effect; being produced, to prove the non-celibacy of the clergy in the 13th and 14th centuries, with 17 more, of which one happens to be a deed of William ſon of Walter de Ridware, another of William ſon of Henry de Appleby knight, a third a deed in Parva Ridware.

[8] Plac. Aſſiſ. coram Rogero de Thurkelby & ſociis ſuis, in termino Sancti Hillarii, anno regni Henrici filii regis Johannis 31°. Copied near the end of Rydeware Chartulary.

[9] The Repertorie of Records, p. 37.

[10] Eſch. 2 Edw. II. N° 75. Leic.

[11] Cart. 4 Edw. II. n. 36. Rydeware Chartulary, N° 2. Ibid. N° 1.

[12] Rydeware Chartulary, page after N° 134. And Greſley Chartulary, p. 25. Seal, a ſpread eagle. + SIGILLV' THOME DE RYDWARE. See fig. 4. Mr. Greſley has two originals on kindred ſubjects, one of them of the ſame date with this in the text, with ſeals perfect.

[13] Rydeware Chartulary, 2d and 5th pages after N° 134, and laſt article of the volume.

reſeyver le cont' adouns. L'an du R. E. t' ap' le C. quart' le Mercredi devant' le feſt' S' Georg'.

De dominio de Scheyle.

It' dominus de Clifton Caunvyle tenet de dominio de Scheyle xx virgat' terr', & tenet quend' boſcum continent' iii virgat' terre, & ſolvet ad rationabile auxilium.

It' dominus Ric' de Herthul tenet de eodem dominio iiii virgat' terr', & ſolvet filr.

It' dominus Edmundus de Appelby tenet de eodem dominio ii virgat' terr', & ſolvet filr, quas Willielmus Henry & Henr' Nel tenent.

It' prior de Greſleye tenet de eodem dominio vi virgat', & ſolvet filr.

It' prior Sancti Thome tenet de eodem dominio iiii virgat', & ſolvet filr.

It' dominus de Segrave tenet de eodem dominio iii virgat' terr' arabil', & unum boſc' qui continet vii virgat' terr'.

De eod' dom' de tenurâ dom' de Dor'.

It' dominus de Stretton tenet de eodem dominio vi virgat' terr' de tenurâ domini de Dorandeſthorp, & ſolvet [1].

It' dominus de Dorandeſthorp tenet de eodem dominio vi virgat' terr', & ſolvet filr.

It' Nicholaus d'Yngwardby dominus de Wyvleſleye tenet iii virgat' terr' & oct' partem unius molend'.

De feodo, vel tenurâ, de Beek.

It' Johannes fil' Ric' fil' Hug' de Stretton tenet de eodem dominio ii virgat' terr', de feod' del Beek.

It' domina Matild' [2] abbatiſſa de Polleſworth tenet de eadem tenur' Bek ii virgat', & Henr' le Fiz tenet i virg' terr'.

It' Ric' fil' Joh' Mold de Dorad' tenet de eadem tenur' Bek ii virgat', & Willielmus Phelip ten' ii virgat' de eod'.

It' Ric' Oky tenet de eodem i virgat' terr'.

It' Joh' fil' Gilberti un' dim' virgat' terr'.

Willielmus Attewod tenet un' virgat' terr' de eod' dominio, & Rob' de Brewode ten' dim' virgat' terre.

Joh' Wilkyn tenet Et Joh' Oky tenet ii virgat' terre de eodem dominio.

Ric' Molend' tenet de M'ro de Dalby de eodem dominio.

Rog' fil' Hug' atte Halle de Dorand' ten' un' virgat' terr'. It' in Appelby ix virgat' terre."

2. "Inquiſitio facta apud Totteburia in craſtino S'tor' Tiburtii & Valeriani, anno Domini millo ccc°xxxi° de omnibus terris & tenementis unius dimid' feod' milit' in Chirche Sheil per omn' tenent' conſenſum, anno regni regis Edwardi tertii poſt conqueſtum quinto.

Dimidium i feodi milit. in Chirche Sheil.

Dominus de Sheile cum tenentibus ix virgat' & dimid'.

Dominus de Segrave tenet tres virgat' terr' & boſc' q' vocat' Cotunwod & Grymmeſwod.

Abbas de Miravall cum tenentibus xxxi virgat'.

Dominus Edmund' de Appelby in Sheil iiii virgat'.

Dominus Rog' de Dorandeſthorp tenet xii virgat' terr', ſex ſine medio & ſex per med'.

Dominus Willielmus Caumvyle xii virgat'.

Tenentes de Bek.

Abbatiſſa de Polleſworth, dominus de Bromcote, Ric' de Stretton, & Johannes fil' Matild', & alii tenent' de Bek, de eadem viii virgat'.

Prior de Greſleye cum tenent' vi virgat'.

Prior de Sancto Thomâ iiii virgat'.

Prior Hoſpitalis in Sheil iii virgat' & dimid'.

Joh' Oky de Templo i virgat'.

Willielmus Wichard pro eccleſiâ iiii virgat'.

Hug' de Aulâ in Dorandeſthorp ii virgat'.

Willielmus de Igwardeby in Wyvleſleye iii virgat' terre & quart' partem unius molend' aquatici."

3. "Johannes de Beek domĩus de Durandeſthorp tenet in ead' vill' xviii virgatas terre de manerio de Neuton, in com' Warr', xii virgate ſine medio & ſex per medium, ac molendinum aquaticum de Okethorp.

Tenentes de Bek. (itidem.)

Domina Matilda abbatiſſa de Polleſworth, dominus de Bromcdte, Ric' de Stretton, Johannes fil' Matild', & alii tenent' de Bek de eadem tenent viii virgat' terre.

Hug' de Aulâ de Donaſthorp tenet de eadem tenurâ ii virgat'.

De ead' tenurâ & in eod' dominio.

Prior de Sancta Thomâ tenet de eadem tenura & in eodem dominio iiii virg'.

Dominus de Segrave tenet in eodem dominio iii virg' terre.

De feodo, vel tenurâ, de Bek.

Dominus de Stretton tenet per med' vi virg' terre.

Johannes fil' Ricardi fil' Hugon' de Stretton tenet ii virg' terre de feod' de Bek.

Ricardus fil' Johannis Molde tenet de eadem tenurâ de Beek ii virg'.

Willielmus Phelypp tenet de eodem ii virg' terre.

Will' atte Wode tenet eodem i virgat' terre.

Henr' le Fitz tenet eodem m° i virgat' terre.

Robertus Brewod tenet di' virgat' terre de eadem tenurâ.

Rog' atte Halle de Durandeſthorp tenet i virgat' terre.

Nicholaus Ingwardby tenet v acras terre & octavam partem molendini aquatici de Willuſley, & ſolr' ſilr' [3].

Johannes fil' Walteri de Greſley de Durandeſthorp tenet diverſas terras & ten' in eadem villâ de feodo predicto per medium."

4. "Anno regni regis Edwardi Tertii a conqueſtu xxi°.

Bek's fee.

Willielmus de Ingwarby, v acr' terre.
Rector de Stretton, i acr' terre.
Enot Dewolyn, i acr' terre.
Margar' uxor Ric' de Stretton, iiii acr'.
Johannes de Hulleye, iiii acr'.
Rob' Treſhour, dim' acr'.
Rob' Meleward, i rod'.
Joh' Treſour, i rod'.
Joh' Coke de Streton, i acr'.
Joh' fil' Joh' Berc̃re, i acr'.
Joh' Berc̃re ſenior, i dim' acr'.
Willielmus le Machoun, i acr'.
Joh' le Breſcher, i acr'.
Willielmus de Hulleye, i acr'.
Jankyn de Stretton, i dim' acr'.

Doraſſorp.—Bekus fee.

Ric' fil' Ricardi de Greſleye, x acr'.
Joħs Schepherd, viii acr' & dim'.
Joħs Seriant, ii acr'.
Ric' fil' Rog' de Chapelhous iiii acr'.
Rog' de Chapelhous junior, i acr' i rod'.
Alic' le Schepherd, i acr'.
Ric' de Aulâ, ii acr'.
Rob' Chapmon, i acr'.
Felic' de Wyfforde, i dim' acr'.
Rob' fil' Rob' Meleward, ii acr'."

In theſe liſts we find the ſucceſſors of nearly all thoſe who held of the fee of Ralph de Seile 130 years before, as in the above Rydeware Cartæ, N° 10, 11; the Templars (or thoſe who had their eſtate), Hoſpitallers, prior of St. Thomas and Herthul heir of Salvage, Segrave repreſentatives of Stephen Beauchamp, prior of Greſley, Camvil of Clifton; with the abbies of Miravall and Poleſworth, and the lords of Durandeſthorp, Wiveleſley, Stretton, Appleby (Magna), and Bromcote.

In 1336, James de Stafford, chevalier, in right of the aboveſaid dame Iſabell ſa femme, was owner of Sheile. And in 1346, the ſaid ſir James (on the aid then grantad for knighting Edward of Woodſtock, the king's eldeſt ſon) was aſſeſſed 20*s*. for half a knight's fee in Nether Sheile, parcel of the fee of Tutbury [4].

Nativity of St. John Baptiſt 1349, John Oky grants to Edmund de Ridewar, rector of Scheyle, and another, all his lands there, all held of the prior of the hoſpital of St. John. Teſt. ſir James de Stafford, &c.

In 1356, William de Pipe de Draycote [5] ſub Ned-

---

[1] Here, and in the Item of John fil. Ric. fil. Hug. alſo in that of Prior de S. Thomâ in liſt 3. dominium & tenura or feodum appear diſtinguiſhed. The dominus de Stretton ſeems the "Medius" by whom Roger lord of Dorandeſthorp (in liſt 2) held 6 of his 12 virgates.

[2] De Pipe; elected abbeſs 1322. Dugdale, Warwickſhire, in Poleſworth.

[3] The expreſſion ſeems to connect with liſt 1.

[4] Seile original; and Rot. Aux. 20 Edw. III.

[3] Draycote is ſaid, in the Rydeware Chartulary, to be a member of Boyleſtone: but ſee in Shaw's Staffordſhire, vol. I. p. 83. the event of a ſuit on that point, and how it came to Thomas de Pipe.

wode, and Joanne his wife (the above daughter of ſir Thomas de Ridware by Iſabella), appear to have bargained for 9 years their manor and advowſon of Chirche Sheile, to Hugh de Hopwas canon of Lichfield, and others, with liberty to let to Thomas de Hampton, knt.[1]

In 1377, Robert de Pipe, ſon and heir of William (as appears by Maveſyn-Ridware evidences) enfeoffs John de Bollowe, rector of Scheile, John Sulney, and others, of his manors of Draycote (with mill and appurtenances in Draycote and Moreton) and Sheile, and lands in Ednynghale[2].

In 1380, it was found that Richard de Stafford, of Pipe, knt. at his death (together with Maud his wife) held one place of land in Church Sheyle, containing 100 acres of barren land; and one parcel of wood, called Campvill wood, which lay common all the year; which place and wood were held of Robert Pipe, by the ſervice of 6d. a year; and that maſter Edmund Stafford[3], clerk, was the ſon and heir of the ſaid Richard[4].

In 1397, Thomas de Stafford was ſeiſed, in right of Alicia, jointreſs of ſir Robert Pipe (as below), of this manor, which he then held of the honour of Tutbury by the ſervice of half a knight's fee[5].

In 1401, it was found that Richard (ſon and heir of William) Wychard, who feloniouſly murdered John Ferrour of Sheyle, was ſeiſed of a certain yearly rent of 4*s.* ariſing out of one meſſuage and half a virgate of land, with the appurtenances, in Seile, which Joan Cartwright held of Richard Wychard by knight's ſervice; as alſo of a certain yearly rent of 6*d.* ariſing out of one meſſuage and half a virgate of land in Seile aforeſaid, which Joan Brawode held of the ſame Richard by knight's ſervice[6].

Nov. 25, 1411, Alicia late wife of ſir Thomas Stafford demiſes to Robert Swinfeyn, eſq. and his ſon William, couſin and heir of ſir Robert Pipe, the manors of Draycote ſub Needwood, Sheile in Leiceſterſhire, Pipe-Ridware, and lands in Edynghall, late of ſir Robert Pipe, for her life, reddend' £20. per annum[7].

In a book of fifteenths and tenths granted by the laity in 1416, Sheile cum Hidâ was rated at £5. 17*s.*; and in the ſubſidy of 1445, at the ſame ſum; but an abatement was then made of £1. 9. 4*d.*

In 1419, it was found that Edmund Stafford biſhop of Exeter died ſeiſed of one place in Church Sheyle, containing 100 acres of barren land, &c. (as in a former inquiſition); that the ſaid land and wood were held of Margaret daughter and heir of William de Pipe[8], by the ſervice of 6*d.* a year; and that Thomas Stafford was his couſin and next heir[9].

The manor came, with the above Margaret, to ſir William Vernon, of Haddon, co. Derby, the lineal repreſentative of that antient family, who had property in Over Seile ſo early as the reign of king John, in right of the lordſhip of Appleby Parva; this laſt having in that reign been given by Robert de Stockport to William de Vernon and his heirs; and, by an inquiſition taken in 1279, appearing to have been then the inheritance of Richard de Vernon, who was at that time a ward to Edmund Crouchback, the king's brother, then ſtyled comes de Ferrer, who held it in fee of the king, as part of the honour of Ferrars, by half a knight's fee[10].

By another inquiſition in 1323, Richard ſon of Richard de Vernon and Maud his wife (daughter and coheir of ſir William Camville) were found to be in like manner ſeiſed; and that William their ſon and heir was then 10 years old[11].

Great-grandſon to the laſt-mentioned William was ſir Richard Vernon, treaſurer of Calais, and ſpeaker of the parliament 1426; to whom and to his wife Benedicta, William Bullock, William Newburgh, and others, in 1427, conveyed the manors of Appleby Parva, Over Seile, and Harlaſton[12]; and in 1443, William Babthorpe died ſeiſed of one meſſuage and 10 acres of land in Sheyle, with the appurtenances in Shakerſton, held of ſir Richard Vernon, knt.[13] who ſurvived till 1451[14].

Sir William Vernon, knight, ſucceeded his father as treaſurer of Calais; and was alſo knight-conſtable of England. By marriage with Margaret de Swynſen (or Pipe, as above) he obtained both this manor, and all the eſtates of ſir Robert de Pipe. She, as early as 1419, by biſhop Edmund's above inquiſition, had her father's eſtate in Seile, and doubtleſs in Pipe Ridware, Draycote, and Edinghall; and was alſo in 1435 heir to her mother Jocoſa, younger daughter and coheir of William Durvaſſal (otherwiſe Spernore) ſenior; having in that year, together with her huſband under a different limitation, grants of a moiety (in all) of her grandfather Spernore's lands in Ruſhale and Walleſall, co. Stafford[15]. Sir William Vernon died in 1467, ſeiſed of the manors of Appleby Parva and Seile, held under George duke of Clarence, as of his manor of Tutbury; and which he gave to Henry Vernon, eſq. his ſon and heir, and to the heirs of the ſaid Henry and Anne his wife, daughter of Catharine counteſs of Salop[16]. His altar-tomb in the nave of Tonge church, Salop, on which are the portraits of a knight and his lady, and under them ſeven ſons and five daughters, is thus inſcribed:

"Hic jacent dn̄s Will'm's Vernon miles, quondam miles-conſtabularius[17] Anglie, filius et heres dn̄i Ricardi Vernon militis qui quond'm erat theſaurarius
Caliſie, qui quidem dn̄s Will'mus obiit ultimo die menſis
Junii, anno Domini mill'imo CCCCLXVII. Et Margareta uxor d'ci Will'i filia et hereditar' dn̄i Roberti Pypis et Spernores militis que quidem Margareta obiit . . . .
die menſis . . . . . . anno Dn̄i mill'imo CCCC°LX . . . . quorum animabus propitietur Deus. Amen[18]."

The date of his widow's death (who was an executrix to her huſband's will) is left blank on the tomb. She, dame Margaret, was living 12 June, 12 E. IV. See Robert Leegegood, baillie of Shehill, his bill endented of money received by William Vernon, ſquier[19].

Henry Vernon, ſon and ſucceſſor of William, married Anne daughter of John Talbot ſecond earl of Shrewſbury; and in 1467, William Cumberford, John Pennyſton, chaplain (the two other executors to ſir William),

---

[1] Seile original.

[2] Ibid.

[3] Biſhop of Exeter 1395; and in the ſame year lord chancellor.

[4] Eſch. 4 Ric. II. N° 51. Leic.

[5] Eſch. 21 Ric. II.

[6] Eſch. 3 Hen. IV. N° 60. Leic.

[7] Lord Vernon's original deed. See Shaw's Staffordſhire, vol. I. pp. 83 and 165*.

[8] An error; ſhe being daughter of William de Swynſen, though a deſcendant of Pipe, and ſucceſſor to his eſtate. See Shaw's Staffordſhire, vol. I. p. 83. Q. Whether (obſerving the above inquiſition) William de Swynſen, being heir to the Pipes, did not ſtyle himſelf Pipe?

[9] Eſch. 7 Hen. V. N° 22. Leic. Theſe lands of Biſhop Edmund were part of the Camvil inheritance; and have now for ages been deemed parcel of Clifton manor, and Stafford county, being that portion which is on the North or Seile ſide of the river Meyſe, which in general divides the counties.

[10] Eſch. 7 Edw. I.

[11] Eſch. 16 Edw. II.

[12] Harl. MSS. 5809. p. 41.

[13] Eſch. 21 Hen. VI.

[14] Eſch. 30 Hen. VI.

[15] Shaw's Staffordſhire, vol. I. pp. 83, 404. Dugd. War. vol. II. p. 757.

[16] Eſch. 7 Edw. IV.

[17] An officer who kept the conſtable-court. See the epitaph of ſir Sampſon Meverill in Gent. Mag. vol. LXIV. p. 1102. To which ſir Sampſon, perhaps, ſir William Vernon ſucceeded in the office.

[18] This epitaph is copied from Mr. Smyth's MS collection of Monumental Inſcriptions in my poſſeſſion, and corrected by Mr. Wolferſtan from the exiſting braſs at Tonge. But, by Mr. Gough's Sepulchral Monuments, vol. II. p. 266, it appears that a ſimilar tomb was alſo erected in the church of Vernon in Normandy, an engraving of which is given in Dr. Ducarel's Tour, p. 89. (Q. were they buried at Tonge, or at Vernon?) Sir William Vernon's will (in Cur. Prerog.) orders his burial at Tonge. All the copies of the Tonge epitaph omit the ſecond "miles" preceding "conſtabularius;" thus making ſir William lord high conſtable. The ſtrange language, "Roberti Pypis & Spernores militis," is ſome help towards accounting for the groſs error in calling Margaret (while probably yet alive) "filia," when ſhe was only great-grand-daughter or grand-niece; ſince it is evidence that neither the graver nor the employer knew a word of what they were about.

[19] Original at Seile.

and Thomas Ganſell, rector of Aylſton, confirmed to ſir Henry Vernon, knight, and Anne his wife, and to their heirs, the manors of Aylſton and Appleby Parva in Leiceſter, and of Baſſelow, co. Derby, the water-mill at Baſſelow excepted; dated 7 Edward IV. Teſtibus; Johanne Cockayne, Johanne Bradburn, & Willielmo Fildingario[1].—Jovis ante 25 Martii, 21 E.IV. Henry Vernon, eſq. makes his brother William Vernon his attorney, to take ſeiſin from Thomas Bradſhaw, of Tyddeſwall, of lands infra dominicum de Sheyle & Sheyle Hide[2].—In 2 Richard III. the ſame purchaſes from John Harcourt, eſq. and Margaret his wife, lands in Scheile, which 31—47 Edward III. had belonged to Hugh de Hopewas, the canon aforeſaid, and parſon of Clifton—(Arms, Ermine, on a bend three roundels, with Virgin and Child in place of a creſt;) and at St. Laurence, 15 Henry VI. were ſettled in tail ſpecial on John Brown and Alice Delves[3].—He was governor and treaſurer to prince Arthur[4], eldeſt ſon and heir apparent of king Henry VII; was knighted when that prince was created a knight of the Bath; and in 1500 ſigned the marriage articles with the princeſs Catharine of Spain. He died in 1515, and was buried at Tonge, in a chapel wherein he had founded a chantry, as appears by the following mural inſcription:

> "Pray for the ſowle of ſy: Harrie Vernon, knyght, and dame Anne his wyff, which ſyr Harrie . . . . off our lord MCCCCCXV made and fownded thys chapel and chauntry; > and the ſaid ſyr Harrie departyd the xiii day of Aprill, in the year aboveſaid. And of your charite for the ſoll of ſir Arthur Vernon, fifth ſone of the ſaid ſyr Harrie, on whos ſollys Jhu have mercy. Amen."

In the ſame chapel, on a large ſtone, is the portraiture of the ſaid ſir Arthur, rector of Whitchurch in Shropſhire, in the habit of an eccleſiaſtic, with a chalice over his head; and at his feet,

> "ORATE SPECIALITER PRO A'I'A D'NI ARTHURIS VERNON,
> IN ARTIBUS MAG'RI UNIVERSITATIS CANTABRIGIE, > QUI OBIIT X° DIE AUGUSTI AN'O MCCCCCXVII, > CUJ' A'I'E PROPITIETUR DE'."

Between the ſaid chantry and the church, under an arch, is an altar-tomb for the ſame ſir Henry, with the effigies of a knight in armour lying thereon, and his lady by him; about his neck a collar of SS. and his hand reſting on his creſt:

> "Hic jacent corpora Henrici Vernon, militis, et Anne Talbot, uxoris ejus, filie Joh'is comit' Salopiæ, qui quidam dñs Henricus obiit xiii die Aprilis, anno Domini mill'mo quingenteſimo xv. et dicta d'na Anna obiit xvi die menſis Maii, anno Dñi mill'o CCCCLXXXXIII quorum a'i'bus propitietur Deus. Amen."

Sir Henry Vernon gave to his ſon Richard and Margaret his wife the manors of Aylſtone, Appleby, and Sheyle[5]; and left by will a legacy of £10. to Richard Vernon, of Seile.

In the chancel of Bakewell church, co. Derby, on an alabaſter altar-tomb, is this inſcription;

> "Hic jacent Johannes Vernon, filius et heres Henrici
> Vernon, qui obiit xii° > die menſis Auguſti, anno Dñi MCCCCLXXVII, > cujus anime propitietur Deus. Amen."

31 March, 7 Henry VIII. Richard Vernon, ſon and heir of Henry Vernon, knt. lately deceaſed, had a releaſe of tenements in Nether Sheyll from John Wydderley of Chilcote, ſon and heir of Thomas, ſon of John[6].

Richard Vernon, eſq. of Haddon, died in 1517, ſeiſed of the manors of Little Appleby and Seile, and lands and tenements in Durandeſthorp, held of the king, as of the honour of Tutbury[7]. He was alſo buried at Tonge, where the effigies of himſelf and lady are placed on an altar-tomb, with this inſcription:

> "Hic jacent corpora Ricardi Vernon, de Haddon, armigeri, et Margarete uxoris ejus, filie Roberti Dymoke militis, qui habuerunt exitum quietum, verum; qui quidem Ricardus obiit in vigiliâ Annunciacionis Marie Virginis anno Dñi milleſimo v° decimo ſeptimo, et dicta Margareta . . . ."

At the eccleſiaſtical ſurvey in 1534, the abbot and convent of Merevale poſſeſſed £6. 6*s*. 4*d*. rent of aſſize in Over Seile; and £4. 0*s*. 4*d*. in Nether Seile; —34*s*. 8*d*. rent for lands and tenements in Over Seile; and £3. 6*s*. 8*d*. in Nether Seile.—And at that time a penſion of 13*s*. 4*d*. a year was payable from the prior to the rector of Nether Seile[8].

The prior and convent of Greſley, in Derbyſhire, at that time poſſeſſed alſo the following lands, &c.

"Nether Shelley, in com' Leic', parcell' poſſeſſionum nuper prioratûs de Greiſley, in com' Derby, valet in Firmâ unius meſſuagii cum certis tenementis ibidem, in tenurâ Ricardi Holland, reddend' inde per annum ad feſta ibidem uſual', equaliter, xviii s̃.

Firmâ alterius meſſuagii ibidem, cum omnibus terris & tenementis ibidem meſſuagio pertinentibus, ac cum molendino vocato Sheele mylne, dimiſſ' Nicholao Sherwyn per indenturam pro termino ſuo, necnon Margarete uxori ejus, & Willielmo Sherwyn filio ſuo, & alteri eorum diucius viventi; ſolv' ad feſta predicta xlviii s̃. Et predictus firmarius oneratur cum reparationibus, preter groſſ' maerem'; & ſolv' poſt mortem cujuſlibet eorum, nomine hariette, vi s̃. viii đ. prout in dictâ indenturâ patet.

Redd' Edwardi Hollys, pro terris ſuis ibidem per annum, ſolv' ad feſtum Sancti Michaelis Archangeli tantum, ii s̃. vii đ.

[[9]Repriſ' in redd' reſolut' domino Ferreys, exeunt' de molendino in Nether Shelley voc' Shelley mylne, parcell' nuper monaſterii de Greiſley, in com' Derbie, per ann' iiii đ.]

Et remanet clarè per annum lxviii s̃. iii đ.

There ys no more lands in Nether Shelley, parcell of the ſaid poſſeſſions, otherwiſe than ys above expreſſed.

The premiſſes dothe not adjoyne to any honour, manor, caſtel, foreſte, chaſe, or parke, reſerved for th' acceſſe of the kinge and quene's highneſs; nor be parcell of any thauncyent demeanes of the crowne, nor of the duchies of Lancaſtre or Cornewalle, nor parcell of the poſſeſſions belonginge to the late Hoſpital of St. John of Jeruſalem in Ingland.

What woodes or underwoodes be upon the ſame thawditor knowyth not; neyther what mynes of leade or coales be upon the ſame. The nombre of acres, nor the nature of the ground be not expreſſid in any record, nor any larger lre than is above declared.

Ex. per JOH'EM SWYFTE, auditor.

Tertio Julii, 1557. Rated for William Ford.

The clere yerely value of the premyſes lxviii s̃. vii đ. which ratyd at xxxii yeres purchaſe amountyth to cixl. xiiii s̃. viii đ.

The money to be paid in hand before the xvith of July next.

The king and quene's majeſties to dyſchardge the purchaſer of all things and incumbrances made or done by their majeſties, excepte leaſes.

The purchaſer to dyſchardge the king and quene's majeſties of all iſſues and repriſes goinge oute of the premiſſes.

The teanure in ſocage.

The purchaſer to have thyſſues from the feaſt of the Annunciation of our Lady laſt paſt.

The purchaſer to be bound for the woodes.

The leade, bells, and advowſon, to be excepted.

WILL'M PETRE. JOHN BAKERE.
FRAUNCIS ENGLEFELD. E. WALDEGRAVE[10]."

---

[1] P. Le Neve, MS. ex autographo. There is an error of Le Neve, or ſome one, in ſtating Henry as already a knight in 1467, ſince the Seile originals next quoted ſhew him eſquire in 21 Edw. IV. and 2 Ric. III. It is evident enough, both from the above confirmation, dated in the year of ſir William's death, and from the latter's will in the Prerog. Court, (Godyn, q. 9.) that Henry was his ſon and heir, not his grandſon by a ſuppoſed ſon William, inſerted by Collins, Edmondſon, &c. And indeed the Inquiſitio referred to in note 16, p. 985, finds Henry ſon and heir.

[2] Seile original.

[3] Ibid.

[4] There is a tradition that the prince frequently lived with ſir Henry at Haddon; and in an apartment called "The Prince's Chamber," his arms were cut in ſeveral places.

[5] Harl. MSS. 5809. p. 41.

[6] Seile orig.

[7] Eſch. 15 Hen. VIII.

[8] Firſt Fruits Office.

[9] The article within hooks is croſſed over with a pen.

[10] Harl. MSS. 607. p. 39. b.

Sir George Vernon, of Haddon, ſon and ſucceſſor to Richard, by his magnificence, his kind reception of all good men, and his great hoſpitality, acquired the name of king of the Peak. His immenſe property in Derbyſhire extended over 28 manors; and at his death, Aug. 31, 1567, he was ſeiſed, inter alia, of the manors of Nether and Over Seile[1]. He was twice married; and left two daughters, coheirs; Margaret, aged 26; and Dorothy, aged 21. On an altar-tomb at Bakewell, co. Derby, is the following epitaph:

"Here lyeth ſir George Vernon, knyght, deceaſſed the 31ſt daye of Auguſt, an° 1567; and dame Margaret his wyffe, daught'. to ſir Gylbert Taylebois, deceaſſed ye . . . . daye of . . . . an° 156 . .; and alſo dame Mawde his wyffe, daughter to ſ'r Raphe Langeford, deceaſſed the . . . daye of . . . . . an' 156 . .; whoſe ſoules god p'don[2]."

By Dorothy, the youngeſt daughter, the lordſhip of Haddon was brought in marriage to ſir John Manners, ſecond ſon of Thomas earl of Rutland; and by Margaret, the elder daughter, the two lordſhips of Seile (i. e. ſuch manerial right within the territory of Over Seile as might come to the Vernons with Appleby Parva, which is conveyed, 1427, as the manor of Over Seile; and by the ſame ſort of general comprehenſive expreſſion, Richard and ſir George Vernon are found ſeiſed of the ſaid manor) were brought in marriage to ſir Thomas Stanley, of Winwick, knight (ſecond ſon of Edward third earl of Derby); who died poſſeſſed of them, in right of his wife, Dec. 18, 1576[3]; and was buried at Walthamſtow; where, on the North ſide of the chancel a noble monument, with his effigies, is thus inſcribed:

"Thomas Stanley, knight, ſecond ſoone of Edward earl of Derbie, lord Stanley and Strange, deſcended from the family of the Stanleys, married Margaret Vernon, one of the daughters and coheirs of ſir George Vernon, of Nether Haddon, in the countie of Derbie, knight. By whom he had iſſue two ſons, Henrie and Edward. Henry died an infant. Edward ſurvived, to whom the lordſhip deſcended; and married the lady Lucie Percie, ſecond daughter to Thomas earle of Northumberland; by her he had iſſue ſeven daughters and one ſonne. She and her four daughters, Arabella, Marie, Ales, Priſcilla, are interred under a monument in the church of Walthamſtow, in the countie of Eſſex. Thomas his ſonne died in his infancie, and is buried in the pariſh church of Winwic, in the countie of Lancaſter. The other three, Petronella, Frances, and Veneſſie, are yet living.

Aſk who lies here, but do not weep;
He is not dead—he dooth but ſleep.
This ſtony regiſter is for his bones:
His fame is more perpetual than theſe ſtones.
And his own goodneſs, with himſelf being gone,
Shall lyve when earthlie monument is none[4]."

On an inquiſition taken at Tonge, Oct. 22, 1600, after the death of lady Margaret his widow, it was found that ſhe died ſeiſed of the manors of Appleby and Seile, and lands in Durandeſthorp, held of the queen as of the honour of Tutbury, parcel of the dutchy of Lancaſter, by the ſervice of half a knight's fee[5].

Dame Margaret Stanley muſt have died long before 1600, though the inquiſition might not be taken till 42 Eliz. She had taken a ſecond huſband, William Mather, eſq. living with her at Tong in 1584; when a grant was made, her ſon Edward Stanley (afterwards K. B.) joining in it, of a term in Sheale manor-houſe, with certain hereditaments, and the advowſon, to commence only on Jan. 1, 1607, for 60 years[6]. The intereſt in this was paſſed over, 1588, to Mather, who had perhaps procured ſome ſimilar grant, to take effect in poſſeſſion immediately on his wife's death; for he was already of Nether Sheale, when ſir Edward Stanley, now a knight (therefore at ſome time after 1599, at the end of which year he was only eſquire), in the courſe of his haſty dilapidations of his mother's fine inheritance, ſold him, for £960, the manor and lands. But dame Margaret could not have very long ſurvived the above year, 1584; for, 16 June, 1607, William Mather and his then wife Elionour, in conſideration of marriage already had between Ambroſe Mather their ſon and Elizabeth, daughter of Bartholomew Farmer, of Ratcliff Culey, gent. covenant to levy a fine of the manor, advowſon, and all Mather's hereditaments in Nether Seale (firſt inſtance poſſibly of the preſent ſpelling), to the uſe, as to advowſon, of Bartholomew Farmer in fee; as to meſſuages and lands in tenure of Auguſtyne Gente, Robert Batche, and Henry Halle, to the uſe of William and Elionour for life, remainder to Ambroſe and Elizabeth in ſtrict ſettlement; and as to reſidue of the manor and appurtenances, to the uſe, after certain intereſts to William and Elionour, of Ambroſe (and wife for jointure) in tail ſpecial, remainder to him in tail general, remainder to George Mather, one other of the ſons of William and Elionour, in tail general, remainder to William in fee[7].

About 11 or 12 Elizabeth, ſir William Greſley, knt. of Drakelow, co. Derby, the pleaſant manſion of his anceſtors, on the bank of the Trent, had made different purchaſes from the lord and lady Berkeley, of parts of Seile, inherited by the Berkeleys as coheirs of the Segraves, who had them, with other neighbouring poſſeſſions, from an early period, as before ſhewn.

Sir William Greſley died May 24, 1573, and (as the inqueſt finds) ſeiſed (inter alia) of the manors of Over and Nether Seile (worth £14. a year) held of the queen in capite, by the ſervice of a fortieth part of a knight's fee; leaving his ſon Thomas, then aged 20 years and a half[8]. But here is a manifeſt error as to Nether Seile, then ſir Thomas Stanley's, and the ownerſhip of which has been traced authentically to 1607. Nor is it likely that ſir William Greſley had that manor in Over Seile which the Vernons ſeem to have claimed as an appendage to Appleby Parva, this, Appleby Parva, like Nether Seile, not being ſold till ſir Edward Stanley's time. But ſir William did, it is extremely probable, as will be ſtated under Over Seile, become ſeiſed of another, and the chief, manor there; and this purchaſe, as well as thoſe from the Berkeleys, including perhaps much land within the adjoining Nether Seile manor, this laſt (the owners here, as the Vernons in the former caſe, wiſhing to claim enough,) ſeems to have gotten into his inquiſition.

It ſeems that Ambroſe Mather, who by the above ſettlement appears to have had it in the power of himſelf and wife to ſell the manor, and part of the lands, of Nether Seale, muſt have accordingly done it. In Seale regiſter is found the burial of Ambroſe Mather, 5th Nov. 1625. And on 9th April, 1628 (ſome years before John ſon of Ambroſe was of age to ſell), the after-mentioned ſeries of Court Rolls of Gilbert Morewood is ſtated to begin. And as Mr. Morewood kept his courts regularly, it is moſt probable he began to do ſo immediately upon his purchaſe; which purchaſe, if ſo, muſt have been made from ſome other who had bought in the life-time of Ambroſe Mather. This other is ſaid to have been ſir George Greſley (ſon and heir of ſir Thomas, the before-named ſon of ſir William), who would alſo probably have by inheritance that manor of Over Seile, above ſuppoſed to be bought by his grandfather. His conveyance from Mather has not been ſeen: it was perhaps of a later date than his creation of baronet, June 29, 1611; though he has been ſaid to have then held manors, both of Over and Nether

---

[1] Eſch. 9 Eliz.

[2] "The arms of Vernon on this tomb are ſupported with a black bear on one ſide, and a white lion on the other, being, as I think, the ſupporters of Grey lord Powis." Church Notes, 1611, in Harl. MSS. 5809, p. 386.—Sir George's two uncles, Thomas and Humphrey, might have pretenſions, in right of their wives, to lord Powis's inſignia; but ſir George himſelf not any.

[3] Eſch. 2 Sept. 19 Eliz. m. 24. [4] Strype's Stowe, Appendix, vol. III. p. 128. [5] Inq. at Tonge, 42 Eliz. fol. 45. a.

[6] Originals of late Philip Jervis, of Seale. [7] Ibid. The recital of ſir Edward Stanley's ſale omits the year.

[8] Cole's Eſcheats, vol. IV. (Harl. MSS. 757.) p. 135.

Seile, in capite, (as the inquiſition runs in his grandfather's caſe.) He was a gentleman of good parts, an encourager of learning, and ſir William Dugdale (in ſome meaſure) owed his riſe to him; for ſir George, being well-known to Thomas earl of Arundel, then earl-marſhal, introduced him to his acquaintance on his firſt coming to London [1]. He ſerved in parliament in 1627 for Newcaſtle under Line; and married Suſan, daughter of ſir Humphrey Ferrars, of Tamworth caſtle; by whom he had two daughters; and one ſon, Thomas Greſley, eſq. who died in the lifetime of his father.

By ſir George Greſley, not only Nether Seile, but the aforeſaid principal manor in Over Seile, is ſuppoſed to have been ſold to Gilbert Morewood, of London, merchant; whoſe Court Rolls for Over Seile, and for Nether Seile cum membris, from April 9, 1628, to 1640, are now in the poſſeſſion of the Rev. William Greſley.

Among the free tenants in theſe Court Rolls, under the manor of Nether Seile, in 1634, were,

Sir George Greſley, knight and baronet, for Potter's Wood; & reddere debet annuatim unam catapultam. So that he had not, then at leaſt, ſold his whole Seile eſtate to Morewood.

Sir Thomas Hutchinſon, for Coton Park, alias Gryme's Wood, 4*s.* a year.

Sir Thomas Pope Blount, for lands in Nether Seile. He being heir to the Wychards of Oſbaſton was probably ſo to thoſe of Seile; of whom we ſee ſomething in p. 983*. They appear early as conſiderable holders, with ſub-tenants, and as witneſſes to deeds in Rydware Chartulary nearly as old as Radulph de Seile ſenior. With Richard, in p. 985*. a. there might be an end of the Seile line; but ſettled lands might go to that of Oſbaſton, whoſe males however, according to Burton, were by that time extinct.

Sir Walter Heveningham, for lands called Snareſtone field, 4*d.* He was heir to Camvill and Stafford, through Stanley of Elford and Pipe.

Sir John Harpur, for his lands in Nether Seile, 12*d.*

Randolph Woodcock, clerk, for all his lands in Durandeſthorpe, 12 barbed arrows, and a rent of 12½*d.* See the tenure of Bertram de Caldon's grant, in Rydware Chartulary, N° 4 [2]. But the 12 arrows there were to be rendered, not to a lord of Seile, but by a lord of Seile to another man, for lands in Durandeſthorp. Had Rydeware re-granted, under the ſervice himſelf was bound to, with the addition of the 12½*d.* rent?

Rowland Shelton, for lands in Durandeſthorpe, a barbed arrow and a rent of one halfpenny.

Several other free tenants are enumerated; 39 reſident (20 of them "tenentes ſuper tenementa domini"); and Daniel Brandworth, gent. and two other tenants, were reſident in Duneſthorpe.

By the marriage of ſir Thomas Greſley, bart. (grandſon of ſir George,) with Frances one of the two daughters and final coheirs [3] of Gilbert Morewood (the purchaſer,) the latter's Nether Seile lands, or the greater part of them, returned to the Greſley family; and, on the death of ſir Thomas, June 5, 1699, became the property of Thomas Greſley his ſecond ſon; who, as executor to his father, erected to his memory, in Greſley church, a noble monument, with a buſt as large as life, kneeling in an arch, and all the matches of the family, according to the pedigree, in proper ſhields round it, and his offſpring and their matches underneath it; alſo the proper atchievements of the family, with the motto, Meliore fide, quam fortunâ; and this inſcription:

> "Sir Thomas Greſley, of Drakelow,
> in the county of Derby, baronet,
> died the 5th of June, 1699, aged 70."

By the ſame gentleman another handſome monument was placed in Greſley church: under a ſhield with Greſley's coat only; and on its ſides two other little ones, with thoſe of the two heireſſes, Gaſteneis and Morewood, is the following inſcription:

> "Here lie the bodies of Elizabeth Greſley, > who died the 10th day of Auguſt, 1693;
> Iſabella Greſley, who died the 16th of Auguſt, 1694;
> and Catharine Greſley,
> who died the 7th day of September, 1694;
> daughters of ſir Thomas Greſley, of Drakelow,
> in the county of Derby, baronet,
> by dame Frances his wife."

Thomas Greſley, of Nether Seile, eſq. married Elizabeth, daughter of John Lee, of Ladyhole, co. Derby, eſq. and heir to her brother William; and, after his death, Nether Seile came ſucceſſively to his ſons Lee Greſley and John Greſley; and from John to his eldeſt ſon the late Thomas Greſley, D. D. F. R. S. who, in addition to the above eſtate, was rector and patron of the church; and reſided here in an old ſtone manſion near the latter (till he bought Four-oaks Hall, co. Warwick); on whoſe death in 1785 his eldeſt ſon, the Rev. William Greſley, ſucceeded to the eſtate; and is alſo the patron and preſent incumbent of the valuable rectory.

Thoſe parts of Mather's lands, which by the deed of 1607 were limited in ſtrict ſettlement, were by John Mather (in all appearance the ſon of Ambroſe, baptized at Seile 1611) firſt mortgaged, and, finally, in 1648, ſold, including a manſion he had reſided in, to Zachary Johnſon, of Nether Seile, clerk, who died rector there 1669, and had been patron, but ſeems to have ſold the advowſon, probably to ſir Thomas Greſley, bart.—Zachary's nephew and deviſee, Richard Johnſon, gave by will, 16 Nov. 1697, the above property, with additions made to it, in Seile, to his nephew Richard Moore, ſon of Thomas rector of Elford, co. Stafford; giving alſo money and hereditaments, namely, the Friars, or Friary, in Lichfield, (bought by Zachary Johnſon from John Hill, of Little Pipe), to the lords of Stretton and Chilcote and miniſter of Seile for the time being, for building and endowing an hoſpital or almſhouſe at the latter place; which was accordingly done, and a comfortable ſupport is afforded by it to ſome aged men and women. Richard Moore died iſſueleſs in 1721. His relict Elizabeth, one of two daughters and coheirs of Walter Jennings, clerk, of Little Onn, in the pariſh of Church Eyton, co. Stafford, re-marrying, 1723, to John Jervis, eſq. of Darlaſton, in the ſame county, Mr. Jervis purchaſed from the heirs of Moore this Seile eſtate, in which his wife was jointured. By her he had no iſſue; but by Mary, only daughter and heir of the eldeſt branch of Swynfen, of Swynfen, co. Stafford, he had ſix ſons and a daughter [4]. Dying 5 Jan. 1746-7, he left this and other Seile purchaſes to his fourth ſon Thomas, whoſe only ſurviving ſon, Philip Jervis, died Feb. 18, 1797; and under the latter's will the eſtate has been ſold in parcels, the houſe and lands adjoining to major-general George Hewett, of the family once reſident at Stretton, co. Leiceſter.

By an award of July 23, 1756, the open and common fields of Nether Seile, containing about 1350 acres, were divided and incloſed. But it was not till March 21, 1799, that this was confirmed by an act of parliament, "For confirming a diviſion and incloſure of the open and common fields, &c. within the manors of Nether and Over Seile [5]," at the ſole expence of the eſtate of Philip Jervis, eſq. whoſe deviſees for ſale, Swynfen Jervis, Samuel Pipe Wolferſtan, and Charles Briſcoe, found themſelves obliged to obtain the act, in order to make good their contracts.

---

[1] Wood's Athen. Oxon. vol. II. p. 8.

[2] Page 1000 following. Mr. Woodcock ſhould ſeem to be the rector of Gilmorton mentioned p. 998. as lord of Durandeſthorp 1630.

[3] For a third daughter, Barbara, lived to be married (to ſir Thomas Rich, afterwards baronet), and to have a ſon Gilbert, but who died ſ. p. Kimber, vol. III. p. 477, and tablet in p. 994.

[4] See the concluding part of the Swynfen pedigree, Shaw, vol. II. p. *29. John, the junior of two ſons of Swynfen Jervis, barriſter at law, of Meaford, co. Stafford, who was the fifth of the above ſix ſons, is become famous among his contemporaries as earl St. Vincent. John Jervis, of Darlaſton, grandſon to the eldeſt of the ſix, died March 4, 1802, having deviſed an ample eſtate to the eldeſt ſon, now but ſix years old, of his ſecond couſin Swynfen Jervis, ſole ſurviving ſon of the above Philip, which laſt named Swynfen is now eldeſt male branch of the family of Darlaſton.

[5] Inaccurate; it ſhould have run Nether Seale only. Over Seale was incloſed long before 1756.

OVER SEALE, or UPPER SEALE, called alſo Little Seile and Spital Seile, was one of the lordſhips given to Nigel de Albini, who was ſeiſed of it at the time of the general Survey. It conſiſted of two or three manors, or ſmall ſeignories, all of which we ſoon find of the fee of Ferrers; one of them, ſometime the inheritance of William the ſon of Ralph de Meiſham; who in the time of king Henry III. gave part of it, probably the beſt, in frank marriage, with Godebouda his eldeſt daughter, unto William the ſon of Robert Appleby (together with a park, a mill, and a wood called Woodlondes[1]).

To the abbot of Merevale the ſame William de Meiſham afterwards gave "ſervitium & homagium Willielmi heredis Willielmi de Appelbi & heredum Oſberti filii Luciani Diſert de Parvâ Seyle. Teſtibus; domino Hugone de Meſnill, tunc ſeneſcallo Willielmi comitis de Ferrariis comitis Derbie, domino Willielmo de Greſell, Thomâ de Edneſorre, Serlone de Munſay, Henrico de Mavaſyne, militibus ejuſdem comitis[2]." This was about 1250, or nearly. For Meſnil, firſt witneſs here, witneſſes alſo, by the ſame ſtyle of ſeneſcal, two deeds in the Rydeware Chartulary (N°s 56, 119), one expreſsly dated 1253, and the other manifeſtly executed at the ſame time.

We ſee that Meiſham, beſides the ſervices of what he had beſtowed on Appleby, gives the abbot moreover (which ſhews he had not ſo beſtowed his whole manor) thoſe of the heirs of Oſbert Diſert, of Little Seyle. But Oſbert, or his father Lucian, was not merely a ſubordinate vaſſal of Meiſham. He had other Over Seile lands, held immediately from the earl; and, in the agreement with William the parſon before 1205[3], he appears throughout co-ordinate with Meiſham; the latter has merely precedence in the naming; they grant each two quadrigates out of their wood of Uver Scheyl, and the parſon releaſes to them and their heirs. And to the more curious agreement for reſidence of a chaplain at Scheyl Minor[4], the only parties are the ſame parſon William (who appears to have been long rector, perhaps near 50 years, for he had been ſo ſome time when the papal delegates made their award, before 1179, and he appears ſtill ſuch in the Matriculus of 1220,) and Lucian, ſon of Oſbert de Scheyl, who it ſeems muſt have been the perſon whom the above-named Lucian[5] calls "Lucian ſenex, avus meus," though he is not found elſewhere by the name of ſon of Oſbert, but uſually ſtyled Lucian de Seile, or ſimply Lucian. He had a ſon called Robert de Deſerto (poſſibly the Aſhby or Seile Would), or Robert Diſert, who appears dead before him, the grandfather and grandſon, Lucian de Seile and Lucian Deſert, being found co-teſtes, particularly in Rydware Chartulary, N° 20. This old Lucian in the laſt deſcribed agreement ſeems the ſole ruling power at Over Seile; his reſidence there indeed would make him more conſidered, and more intereſted, in the chaplain-matter, than the Meiſhams were; but no other perſon is ſo much as named, and he and the "homines ejuſdem ville de ſuâ terrâ," are to be the ſole contributors, in conjunction with the parſon's allowance, for ſupport of the chaplain "et clerici ſui." The earl of Derby, in his grant to William de Rydewar[6] of the "tota terra," the whole dominium or fee, both in lands and ſervices, of Rad. de Scheyle, excepts the "ſervicium tenementi Luciani, quod teneo in manu meâ," (the ſervice of what Lucian holds, which ſervice I reſerve to myſelf;) not adding whether Lucian's lands lay in Great or Little Seile, or in both. We may collect, from all the circumſtances, that on this grant being made, the whole, or the main, of the two Seiles, Magna & Parva, was held under the earl (that is, immediately, for of ſub-tenants we have ſeen Rydeware had many, and perſons of much note), by three principal vaſſals, Rydewar, Meiſham, and Lucian; with a fourth, who held that diſtrict where the Vernons, ſoon afterwards according to Burton, had the ſeignory they claimed as part of, or in the ſame right with, the manor of Little Appleby. We muſt keep in mind the entire diſtinction between this laſt Over Seile manor and that which we ſhall find called Appleby's manor in Over Seile, being the lands given in frank marriage to Appleby as above, and which, on Meiſham's transfer of his ſeignory, were held under the abbot, and gained the reputation of a ſubordinate manor, within that which we may denominate the Miravall manor of Over Seile.

The abbot having thus under him two ſuch vaſſals as Appleby and the heir of Diſert, obtaining too a multitude of ſmaller grants, from lords and from tenants, of lands in Magna and in Parva Seile, (many originals at Seile beſides thoſe above printed.) we may eaſily apprehend he was thenceforth chief man at the latter place, and his manor the manor of Parva Seile per eminentiam. It ſeems a miſtake in the Teſta de Nevill, &c. to record him as holding his half fee under Meyſham, when, the latter having given him his ſeignory, it ſhould ſeem the abbot from that time held immediately under the earl. This appears decided by the earl and his ſucceſſor prince Edmond both afterwards releaſing the ſervices, not to Meyſham, but directly to the abbots, ſo that they thenceforth held in capite. This laſt point will add light when we come to the times after the diſſolution.

In 1310, "Abbas de Miravalle per jurat' recuperat xli. dampnum verſus Thomam de Redware & alios, pro proſternatione foſſati dicti abbatis apud Overſeal, in ſeparali ſolo ipſius abbatis, in quodam loco vocato Shortwood, ubi dixerunt ſe debere habuiſſe communiam, &c.[7]"

In 1320, "Juratores dicunt, quod non eſt ad dampnum &c. ſi Rex concedat Waltero Jacob, quod ipſe unam acram terre, cum pertinentiis, in Bruntingthorp; & Matheo de Rodeley, quod ipſe tria meſſuagia, tres virgatas terre, & ſex acras terre, & unam acram prati cum pertinentiis, in eadem villâ, Over Sheyle, Magna Sheyle, & Wytinton, in com' Leic', dare poſſit abbati & conventui de Miravalle[8]."

"Juratores etiam dicunt, quod non eſt ad dampnum, &c. ſi Rex concedat Henrico de Appleby, quod ipſe l acras terre cum pertinentiis in Parvâ Sheyle; & Galfrido le Fitz, quod ipſe ſeptem acras terre, cum pertinentiis, in Magnâ Sheyle; & Roberto le Mouner, quod ipſe vii acras terre in eadem villâ; & Johanni Wyſchard, quod ipſe x acras terre, cum pertinentiis, in eadem villâ; & Willielmo Phelip, quod ipſe octo acras terre, cum pertinentiis, in eadem villâ; & Ricardo Oky, quod ipſe quinque acras terre, cum pertinentiis, in eadem villâ; & Johanni Overton, quod ipſe lx acras terre, cum pertinentiis, in Overton ſubtus Arderne; & Roberto de Stapleton, quod ipſe xx acras terre, cum pertinentiis, in eadem villâ; & Roberto Geffrey, quod ipſe xv acras terre, cum pertinentiis, in eadem villâ; & Thome Barwell, quod ipſe octo acras terre, cum pertinentiis, in eadem villâ; & Waltero Scot, quod ipſe vii acras terre, cum pertinentiis, in eadem villâ; & Ricardo de Boſeworth, quod ipſe iv acras terre, cum pertinentiis, in eadem villâ; & Ricardo Brun, quod ipſe vi acras terre, cum pertinentiis, in eadem villâ; & Roberto de Brantingthorp, quod ipſe l acras terre, cum pertinentiis, in Brantingthorp; & Waltero Jacob, quod ipſe iv acras terre, cum pertinentiis, in eadem villâ: & Galfrido Malpays, quod ipſe vi acras terre, cum pertinentiis, in eadem villâ; & Nicholao Temple & Joſepho Daniell, quod ipſi xx acras terre, cum pertinentiis, in Shepey, dare poſſint abbati de Miravalle, pro aliis terris in excambium in iiſdem villis: Et quod Henricus de Appelby tenuit predictas l acras terre in Parvâ Sheyle de abbate de Miravalle per forinſecum; & Galfridus de Fitz tenet VII acras terre, cum pertinentiis, in Magna Schele, de Henrico Appleby[1], per forinſecum ſervicium; & Robertus le Mouner tenet VII acras terre de priore de Greſeley; & Johannes Wyſchard tenet X acras terre de Nicholao Wyſchard[2], per ſervicium unius libre thuris; & Willielmus Phelip tenet octo acras terre de Henrico Appleby[3]; & Ricardus Okey tenet V acras terre de Thoma Ridware; & Johannes Overton tenet LX acras terre, cum pertinentiis, in Overton ſubtus Arderne, de . . .[4]."

---

[1] Cart. 34 Edw. I. n. 17.

[2] Greſley Chartulary, p. 23.

[3] Rydeware Chartulary, N° 43; and original at Seile.

[4] Ibid. N° 50.

[5] See p. 982*. Lucian ſenex appears to have been living after Will. de Rydeware had to do at Seile, as he atteſts the above ca. 20, which is a grant to the latter from William the parſon, and indeed mentions (as does alſo the 2d deed numbered 11.) Rydeware's recovering a wood from Lucian. But he ſeems to have died in or before 1204, a little ſooner than Will. fil. Rogeri de Stretton, who ſurvived to atteſt, by his other appellation of de Wyveleſley, Lucian the grandſon's above agreement with the parſon, N° 43.

[6] Rydeware Chartulary, N° 3.

[7] Plac. coram Rege, 3 Edw. II.

[8] Ad quod dampn, 14 Edw. II, N° 181. Leic,

In 1346, the abbot of Merevall (on the aid then granted for knighting Edward of Woodſtock, the king's eldeſt ſon) was aſſeſſed 20*s.* for half a knight's fee in Spital Sheile[5].

"Richard earl of Warwick and Saleſbury, grett chamberlayne of England, captain of Calleys, and cheff ſtuerd of the duchie of Lancaſter. We gyve you to witt, that we have ſene the evidence of our welbeloved the abbot of Mirevalle, wher it appeareth that one William of Meyſham gave to their predeceſſors lands and rents in Seyle, which lands the ſayd William held of William Ferrers earle of Derbie by knight's ſervice, with ſute at his court of Tuttebury; and after the ſaid William Ferrers releaſed and gave the ſaid ſervice unto the predeceſſours of the ſaid abotte; and lykwyſe Edmond the ſoon of the noble kinge Henry the Third, ſomtyme erle of Lancaſter, by his deed releaſed to the abott all manner of homages and ſervices, as appeareth. Gyven under our ſeale, the 12th of March, the third yeare of the rayne of king Edward the Fourth [1462][6]."

On their lands in Seile the abbot and convent built two granges, the High and the Spital Grange, one of them very early; ſee the grant of Radulph de Seile junior, "Sancte Marie de Miravalle & fratribus Grangie de Seilâ." And poſſibly the Spital may be diſcernible in that other, by Lucian de Deſerto, "monachis ibid' Deo ſervientibus ad domum infirmorum ſecularium." On the diſſolution, moſt, if not all, of their poſſeſſions came to Walter Devereux, lord Ferrers of Chartley. And in his bailiff's accompt, from Michaelmas 1545 to Michaelmas 1546[7], are theſe items: "Over Seile—Firma manerii ibid' vocat' le High Grange, & firma unius meſſuagii vocat' le Spittell Grange, & diverſ' aliarum terrar', &c. £11. 3*s.* 11*d.*—Nether Seile—Firma diverſ' terrar' & tenementor', &c. £4. 5*s.*"—Now the only Seile grange known at preſent, or of which tradition preſerves any trace, is in the heart of Nether Seile; in which manor alſo is the Grange wood, &c. And we may recollect that the abbot, beſides being lord at Parva Seile, held alſo in 4° and 5° Edw. III. no leſs than 31 virgates of the lady of Chirche Seile. So Sir Thomas de Rydewar in 1314 grants "ante portam grangie in Magnâ Seile. And to a Seile deed of Michaelmas 22° Hen. VI. is witneſs William Wytherley de Sheley Graunge (heading a liſt of gentry and clergy, whence it may be ſuppoſed to be then a gentleman's ſeat), without any addition or diſtinction as if there were any other Seile Grange. Of the Spital ſcite all memory ſeems now loſt; as alſo of Sheile Hide, mentioned in pp. 983*, 986*. Walter Devereux, then viſcount Hereford, died in 1559 ſeiſed of a diſtinct manor in Over Seile, held, in capite be it remembered, by knight's ſervice[8]. And this manor, with the reſt of the Devereux eſtate in Seile, there can hardly remain a doubt but Sir William Greſley aforeſaid bought from viſcount Hereford's ſucceſſor, probably his ſecond ſon ſir William Devereux, who had Merevale, and reſided at the ruined abbey. And if, before ſir W. Greſley's death in 1573, it were diſcovered that the High Grange, though a ſort of colony or cell to the monks, was by no means their manerial ſite, but on the contrary lay, with much of their lands, within the adjoining manor of Nether Seile, it may go far towards accounting for his inquiſition ſetting up a ſecond Nether Seile manor, actually in the life-time of dame Margaret Stanley and her huſband. Conveyancers and clerks were then probably more given (though not equally with modern ones) to redundancy and ſurpluſage than to correct diſcrimination; and it ſeems, in all times, to have been their maxim to loſe nothing for want of inſerting. But there is a ſufficient diſtinction, if we wanted evidence, between the deſcription here and that in the inquiſition after death of dame Margaret Stanley; for ſir William Greſley is found ſeiſed, as the ſucceſſor of Merevale abbey ought to be found, of manors held in capite; and dame Margaret of the manor of Seile held, as her predeceſſors held it, of the Honour of Tutbury.

The Miravall manor of Over Seile coming, as the real Nether Seile manor did (by ſome means, if not exactly in the courſe above pointed out,) to Morewood, on his death went (or rather ſeemingly an undivided moiety of his eſtate, of which ſome after-partition was made,) with another daughter Grace, (baptized at Seile, 26 Sept. 1632) to Simon Bennet, of Beechampton in Bucks, deſcended from a younger brother to the great-grandfather of John and Henry, brothers, lords Offulſton and Arlington, which lord Offulſton's ſon was made, after his wife's father, earl of Tankerville. Simon Bennet, eſq. occurs as a Seile owner in deeds of the late Philip Jervis. In 1679 he was of Calverton, co. Bucks, and died about 1682, leaving by the ſaid coheir Grace, daughters only. Of theſe, Frances, in 1698, being then relict of James earl of Saliſbury, in conſideration of love, attention, &c. ſhewn to her by Sarah Lee, daughter of Ralph Lee, made a ſettlement of a moiety of her grandfather Morewood's Seile eſtate in favour of the ſaid Sarah.

By an act paſſed in 1751, "for veſting the undivided moiety of divers lands and hereditaments, in the counties of Leiceſter, Stafford, and Derby, deviſed by the will of Sarah Frowde, widow, deceaſed, in Ralph Blois, clerk, in fee ſimple; and for ſettling an entire eſtate, in the county of Suffolk, of greater value, to the uſes limited by the ſame will," it appears that Sarah Frowde, of the pariſh of St. George, Bloomſbury, in the county of Middleſex (probably the ſame perſon with Sarah Lee), at the time of making her laſt will, dated Dec. 3, 1735, was poſſeſſed in fee ſimple of a moiety of the manors of Over Seile and Nether Seile, with divers meſſuages, &c. which in 1750 had been of the yearly rent of £.190. 17*s.* 11½*d.* The purport of the act was, to exempt the moiety, &c. of Over and Nether Seile from the truſts of Mrs. Frowde's will, on condition that lands in Suffolk, of greater value, ſhould be charged with the ſaid truſt; and to veſt that moiety in fee in Ralph Blois, his heirs and aſſigns for ever.

Ralph Blois and truſtees, 31 July 1751, ſold their eſtate in Seile to Iſaac Hawkins, of Burton on Trent, eſq. But it appears there had been another intereſt, partly in competition with lady Saliſbury's; and which Mr. Hawkins had previouſly ſecured to himſelf. For Grace, another daughter of Simon and Grace Bennet, who is ſtated by Collins (title Tankerville) to have married one of her own name, John Bennet of Cambridgeſhire, and long ſurvived her ſiſter lady Saliſbury, by will, 1730, deviſed her fourth part of her grandfather Morewood's eſtate to her [grand] nephew the hon. William Cecil. Of this William, who died at Aix la Chapelle 3 May, 1740, his elder brother James, then earl of Saliſbury, was both heir and deviſee. And the laſt-mentioned earl in 1747 ſold his intereſt in Seile to Thomas Webb, of Blakenhall, co. Stafford, a confidential friend of the ſaid Mr. Hawkins.

Iſaac Hawkins, the purchaſer of Over Seile, who died on or about 8 Feb. 1800, at the age of about 92, was the ſecond of three ſons of William Hawkins of Burton, by Catharine Giſborne of Derby, mentioned in an inſcription from Newport church, co. Salop, given in Shaw's article Burton (vol. I. p. 10, in note), but haſtily appropriated to a wrong family, or at leaſt wrong branch of the ſame family; which inattention is obſcurely corrected in another note to p. 79. of the ſame volume. He was long a practiſing attorney in Burton, and had alſo a good property (part of it in Seile) from his elder brother William, who, as well as Iſaac, and the younger brother Philip, died childleſs; and this, added to his other beginnings, he made, in the courſe of his long life, a vaſt one. He is generally believed to have made, in his latter years, very large gifts to ſome public charities, particularly of one ſum to the amount of 20 or 30,000*l.* to one of the ſocieties for propagation of the Chriſtian religion, which paſſed through the hands of his confidential friend, and probably relation, Iſaac Hawkins Browne, eſq. (whoſe great-grandfather Iſaac Hawkins of Burton, barriſter, mentioned in the text of the above pages 10. and 79. of Shaw, it is extremely likely was an elder branch to the family of the Iſaac Hawkins now in queſtion.) Intending to leave the main of his fortune to the like uſes, he had a will prepared and executed, which he meant ſhould avoid, and which probably, had nothing more been done, would have avoided, the operation of the Mortmain acts, by giving his fortune, the great bulk, (after handſome bequeſts, however, to his two coheirs at law, who were before, too, perſons of opulence), to Mr. Hawkins Browne juſt mentioned, and the rev. Thomas Giſborne, (who ought not to be named without adding that his writings, however excellent, are yet excelled by his life, and to whom Mr. Hawkins could boaſt a near relation by his above mother), and their repreſentatives for ever, without more ſaying; having given theſe two gentlemen his private and confidential directions antecedently. But, living to make a purchaſe poſterior to this will, and at the ſame time outliving his faculties and legal knowledge, and taking in his head to employ a clergyman (as ſaid), or other unprofeſſional character, who drew him a codicil deviſing the new purchaſe to the ſame two gentlemen upon the ſame truſts on which teſtator had before given them other eſtates by will, Mr. Hawkins utterly defeated and undid what his will had been doing. His two coheirs, Jane Moubray of . . . . . Brickhill, co. Bucks. relict of George Moubray, eſq. (and only daughter of . . . . Coghill, by Jane his wife, the only daughter of . . . . Holland, by the teſtator's ſiſter Jane,) and Joſeph Muckleſton of Preſcote, co. Salop, eſq. (eldeſt ſon of Richard Muckleſton by the teſtator's ſiſter Mary,) one or both of them, brought a bill for a diſcovery of thoſe private truſts, unnoticed in the will, but referred to by the codicil, and clearly contrary to the Mortmain acts; and the truſtees, after ſome length of proceedings, agreed to a termination, whereby the Seile and other lands (not ſpecifically deviſed to individuals for their own benefit) went to the ſaid coheirs; the mortgages on which, as ſavouring of the realty, in the law phraſe, the Mortmain acts would attach, (but which, being probably for terms only, would not be deſcendible to the heirs like freeholds,) to Mr. Muckleſton ſolely, as a degree neareſt of kin; and the money in the funds, and other property merely perſonal, to the ſaid truſtees for the purpoſes of the will. The two coheirs have ſince had a valuation and diviſion; by the terms of which Mrs. Moubray, lately re-married to Capt. Whyte of the navy, ſon to Gen. Whyte, takes in ſeveralty the lands in Over Seile, with the manerial rights, and Mr. Muckleſton, now generally reſident at his late uncle's Burton manſion (ſpecifically deviſed to him), another conſiderable eſtate lying in Nether Seile.

---

[1] and [3] Thus ſome Magna Sheyle lands appear held of Appleby's manor in Parva Sheyle. See too the deed of 1628, in p. 991.

[2] Of Oſbaſton probably. So that lands, ſir T. P. Blount's in 1634, p. 988, might come to the elder Wychard line, on the attainder hinted at, p. 985*, by ſettlement or by eſcheat.

[4] Peck, MSS. 4937. [5] Rot. Aux. 20 Edw. III. [6] Greſley Chartulary, p. 23. [7] Chetwynd, B. p. 25. [8] Eſch. 1 Eliz.

Of that manor in Over Seile which ſome of the Vernon inquiſitions find that family ſeiſed of, we hear little after that on the death of the king of the Peak. Whether it was noticed or not in his grandſon ſir Edward Stanley's ſale of Little Appleby, it ſeems to have ſunk into inſignificance, probably from want of ſufficient tenants to form a homage, and all memory of it appears long loſt.

Lucian's ſeignory in Over Seile diſappears from our view much earlier. It does not appear who were thoſe "heirs of Oſbert ſon of Lucian Diſert," mentioned by William de Meiſham in his grant to Miravall, nor who their ſucceſſors in the lands, (both thoſe held under the abbots, and thoſe immediately from the lords of Tutbury,) in all the long period of near three centuries to the diſſolution.

But the remaining Over Seile ſeignory, enjoyed by the Applebys, has preſerved ſomething like an exiſtence, though long in little more than name, to the preſent times. We are now therefore to ſtate the exiſting evidences of the ſucceſſion in it.

APPLEBY'S MANOR in OVER SEILE.

Henry de Appleby, knt. ſon of William, gave divers lands in this manor to the abbey of Merevale.

"Henricus de Appelby, filius Willielmi de Applebi, abbati de Mirevalle, acquietare eos verſus Margeriam Thochet, matrem meam, de rationabili dote ſuâ que eam contigit de molendino quod habui in Superiori Seyle. Teſtibus; Ricardo filio Hereberti, Ricardo filio Petri de Durandeſthorpe, Willielmo de Grimle [1]."

Oct. 21, 1305, the king granted to Henry de Appleby and his heirs liberty of free-warren in all their demeſne lands at Spitel Sheile. "Hiis teſtibus; venerabili patre W. Covent' & Lichf' epiſcopo; Henr' de Lacy com' Linc'; Thom' com' Lanc'; Humf' de Bohun com' Heref' & Eſſex; Adomaro de Valentia; Hugone le Deſpenſer; Rob' de Clifford; Rob' de la Ward, ſeneſcalto hoſpitii noſtri; Edmundo de Malo Lacu; & aliis. Dat' per manum noſtram apud Lauretoft, xxi° die Octobris [2]."

William de Leyceſtr', abbot of Miravall, St. Denis, 16 Edward III. made John de Lee and another his attornies to give ſeiſin to Monſ. Edmond de Appleby and dame Johne his wife of a place in Over Seile called Shertheth (Shortheath), and of all the chenes (oak trees probably) of the ſaid abbot, near the "vivarium" (q. Barrat Pool) of the ſaid Monſ. Edmond [3].

About a century afterwards, ſome of the Applebys ſeem to have made this Over Seile manor their reſidence. For the before-quoted deed of Michaelmas, 22 Henry VI. has for its other teſtes, Richard rector of Stretton, Thomas de Stretton of Stretton, Edmund Appleby of Over Sheley, and John Abney of Willeſley.

In 1529, . . . Appulby died ſeiſed of certain lands and tenements in Over Seile, held of the abbot of Merevale [4].

In 1560, George Appleby, eſq. ſold the manor of Over Seile to Anthony Forſter; who aliened it to ſir Rowland Heyward, knt. alderman, and after lord-mayor of London; who the next year paſſed it to ſir Edward Griffin, of Braybrooke, co. Northampton, knt.; who, in 1598, conveyed it to Edward Rous, of Rous-lench, co. Worceſter, eſq.; who (as I take it) bargained it to Mr. Bartholomew Farmer, not long ſince deceaſed [5].

21 Sept. 1628, William Holbech and Edmund Wheat, mortgagees, Urſula widow and adminiſtratrix of Bartholomew Farmer, gent. John Farmer, ſen. of Ratcliffe Culey, ſon and heir, and Edward of Anſley, co. Warwick, another ſon, of the ſaid Bartholomew, and Bartholomew Farmer, of Hinckley, gent. ſold the manor, capital meſſuage, &c. within the lordſhip of Over Seile, ſometimes Applebie's manor or lands, ſeveral parcels (in all 192 acres) of land, Wadlands [6] Wood, and chief rents in Over and Nether Seile, to the ſaid manor belonging, to George Farmer, of Lyon's-inn, gent. And, 27 March, 1718, John Spare, of Nether Seale, yeoman, ſells to John Burdett, of Doneſthorpe, eſq. all that manor, &c. within the lordſhip of Over Seale, (deſcribing it as in the laſt inſtance, only without mention of Applebie's), certain lands, and the ſaid chief rents; and covenants to produce his purchaſe-deeds from Edward Farmer, then or late of Stamford, co. Lincoln, eſq. [7]

John Burdett, of Doniſthorpe, married Anna, daughter of Mr. Mugleſton, of Packington [8], aunt to the Elizabeth Mugleſton in the epitaph p. 995. and deviſed his above purchaſe to the ſaid Anna in fee. Under her will it came to Richard Inge, of Over Seale, mentioned alſo p. 995, who was ſecond ſon of Elizabeth Mugleſton; and within about ten years paſt Mr. Denny (now of London) and his wife, ſurviving daughter of this Richard Inge, offered to ſale the eſtate, and at the auction mention was made of the manor in queſtion, though not as of a thing to ſay much upon. Of ſome ſort of manſion belonging to the property no ſale took place; and perhaps this gentleman may be ſaid to remain owner conſequently of Appleby's manor in Over Seale[1].

---

[1] Greſley Chartulary, p. 23.
[2] Cart. 34 Edw. I. N° 7.
[3] Seile orig.
[4] Eſch. 21 Hen. VIII.
[5] Burton, MS.
[6] See Meiſham's gift in frank marriage, p. 989.
[7] Originals in the poſſeſſion of the late Philip Jervis, now of Samuel Pipe Wolferſtan.
[8] Kimber, vol. I. p. 152.

In 1564, there were 62 families in Seale.

In 1655, there was collected in Seale, for the relief of the Proteſtants in Piedmont, the ſum of £1. 5s. 9d.

In 1722, 10 freeholders polled from Nether Seale; 6 from Over Seale; and 9 from Doniſthorpe. In 1775, we find 24 names from Nether Seale, 8 from Over Seale; and 12 from Doniſthorpe.

The Return made to Parliament in 1786, in anſwer to an enquiry reſpecting the charitable donations in this pariſh, may be ſeen in vol. I. p. 76.

By the return made to Parliament in 1801, Upper and Nether Seale contained 183 inhabited houſes, and 13 uninhabited; 190 families; 453 males, and 453 females; in all 906; of whom 253 were chiefly employed in agriculture, and 97 in trade, manufactures, &c.

	£.	s.	d.
Money raiſed for the poor of Upper and Nether Seile cum membris (including Doniſthorpe) within the year ending at Eaſter 1776, — — —	157	2	9
Expended in county rates, &c.	0	0	0
———— on the poor, —	157	2	9
Rent of workhouſe and habitations,	16	12	6
Expended in litigations, —	12	11	1
Money raiſed for 1783, —	275	1	10
———— 1784, —	200	0	5
———— 1785, —	224	8	5
Medium of theſe three years,	233	3	7
———— of county expences,	0	3	6
———— of expences not relating to the poor; repairs of the church, roads, &c.	1	18	11
———— of nett annual expences,	231	1	2
———— of attending on magiſtrates,	0	8	10
———— of entertainments at meetings,	0	1	0
———— of law expences, —	5	4	3
———— of ſetting the poor to work,	0	0	0

The ſituation of both theſe villages is pleaſant and healthy, the ſoil fertile, and the inhabitants opulent; agriculture being their principal ſupport.

The village of Nether Seale ſtands on a ſandy rock[2].

About two miles to the South-by-Weſt of Nether Seale is a ſpot called No Man's Heath, where the four counties of Leiceſter, Warwick, Derby, and Stafford, are ſuppoſed to meet in one point, though there is no poſſibility of Stafford reaching thither.

WILLIAM WIRLEY, Rougecroix purſuivant, was ſon of Auguſtine Wirley, of Nether Seile, by Mary his wife, daughter of Walter Charnells, of Snareſton, eſq. (which Auguſtine was ſecond ſon of William Wirley, of Handſworth[3], in Staffordſhire, eſq. of an antient family ſome time living at Rowley in that county, but for ages afterward at Hamſtead Hall, in Handſworth, which a century ago ended in two coheirs; the younger carrying the eſtate to the family of Birch, of Birch in Lancaſhire, theſe ſold their antient paternal eſtate in that county, and reſided at the Wirley ſeat in Staffordſhire, having aſſumed the name and arms of that family, till 1775, when on the death of John Wyrley, formerly John Wyrley Birch, the eſtate, by ſome bargain made in his life, went to its now owner George Birch, eſq. ſon of judge Birch, of quite another family). He was born in Staffordſhire, and educated in thoſe parts in grammar learning. Being early entertained in the houſe of the famous Sampſon Erdeſwick of Sandon, he there encouraged his natural turn to heraldry, and, making a wonderful progreſs there in ſtudies of that kind, publiſhed under his own name, "The true Uſe of Armory ſhewed by Hiſtory, and plainly proved by Example; the Neceſſity thereof alſo diſcovered; with the Manner of differings in antient Time, the Lawfulneſs of honourable Funerals and Monuments; with other Matters of Antiquity, incident to the advancing of Banners, Enſignes, and Marks of Nobleneſs and Chevalrye. By William Wyrley. London, 1592," 4to. Some aſcribed this book to Erdeſwick, who, as they ſaid, being an old man, thought it more proper it ſhould go under Wyrley's name. However, there is no reaſon to think Wyrley, who was an ingenious man, incapable of writing it; and Wood ſays the report was founded on ſomething dropped by Erdeſwick[4], who, he adds, was often crazed, eſpecially in his latter days, and would then ſay any thing that came into his head. It is certainly a valuable little work, not quaint and chimerical, but illuſtrative of hiſtory and antient manners; and ſir William Dugdale (who mentions a poem in print, 1592, by Wyrley, celebrating the exploits of ſir John Chandos and ſir John Grayllie, but does not ſay whether it is a ſeparate publication, or part of the ſame book) has republiſhed part of it in his "Ancient Uſage of bearing Arms, 1682." Soon after the publication of this book, Wyrley left Erdeſwick, and retired to ſtudy at Baliol College, Oxford, in which univerſity he was matriculated 1595, being then about 29 years old[5]. While there, he made great collections of arms, monuments, inſcriptions from various places in and about Oxford, and from leiger-books belonging to religious houſes thereabouts. Many of his collections and manuſcripts, exceeding 300 in number, beſides rolls, parchments, &c. were bequeathed by Ralph Sheldon, of Beoley, eſq. to the College of Arms, London[6]. Having for many years laboured in the ſtudy of heraldry and antiquity, he was upon the 15th of May, 1604, 2 James I. appointed Rouge-croix purſuivant of Arms; which office he held, without higher promotion, till the beginning of February, 1617-18, when he died in the Heralds college, and was buried in the burial-place belonging to that corporation in the church of St. Bennet, Paul's Wharf, London. Beſides the printed book, &c. he formed a conſiderable collection of arms and inſcriptions in and from ſeveral churches and gentlemen's habitations in his native county of Leiceſter; which conſiderably aſſiſted Mr. Burton; and from which the preſent Hiſtorian has derived much valuable information. He began the ſurvey of the churches in this county in 1589; and his original MS. containing alſo many churches in Warwickſhire and other counties[7], is now in the library of the Heralds college, bearing the mark V. 197. It appears alſo that he afterwards accompanied Burton in his ſurvey of the churches there, in the years 1603, 1608, &c.—In V. N° 127. in the ſame library, is a fair and beautiful copy of both their labours in this way, with the arms, monuments, and antiquities, well drawn[8].

---

[1] From information of the rev. William Inge, canon of Lichfield (elder ſon of Elizabeth Mugleſton), who has heard the above John Spare vulgarly ſpoken of by the name of "lord Spare," and of his receiving the above chief-rents, impounding, &c.

[2] A derivation has been fancied for Scheyle from the French "Ecueil"—a rock or ſand-bank. But the ſound ſeems too remote in pronouncing. Q. Is a rocky ſite the caſe with other Seales, as in Surrey near Farnham, another near Seven-Oaks, Sele priory in Suſſex, &c.?

[3] See Wyrley pedigree, Shaw's Staffordſhire, vol. II. p. 115.

[4] See, however, Dugdale's Uſage of Arms.

[5] Therefore born about 1566: Seile regiſter begins only on 23 April in that year.

[6] See Wood, Athen. Oxon. vol. I. p. 427.

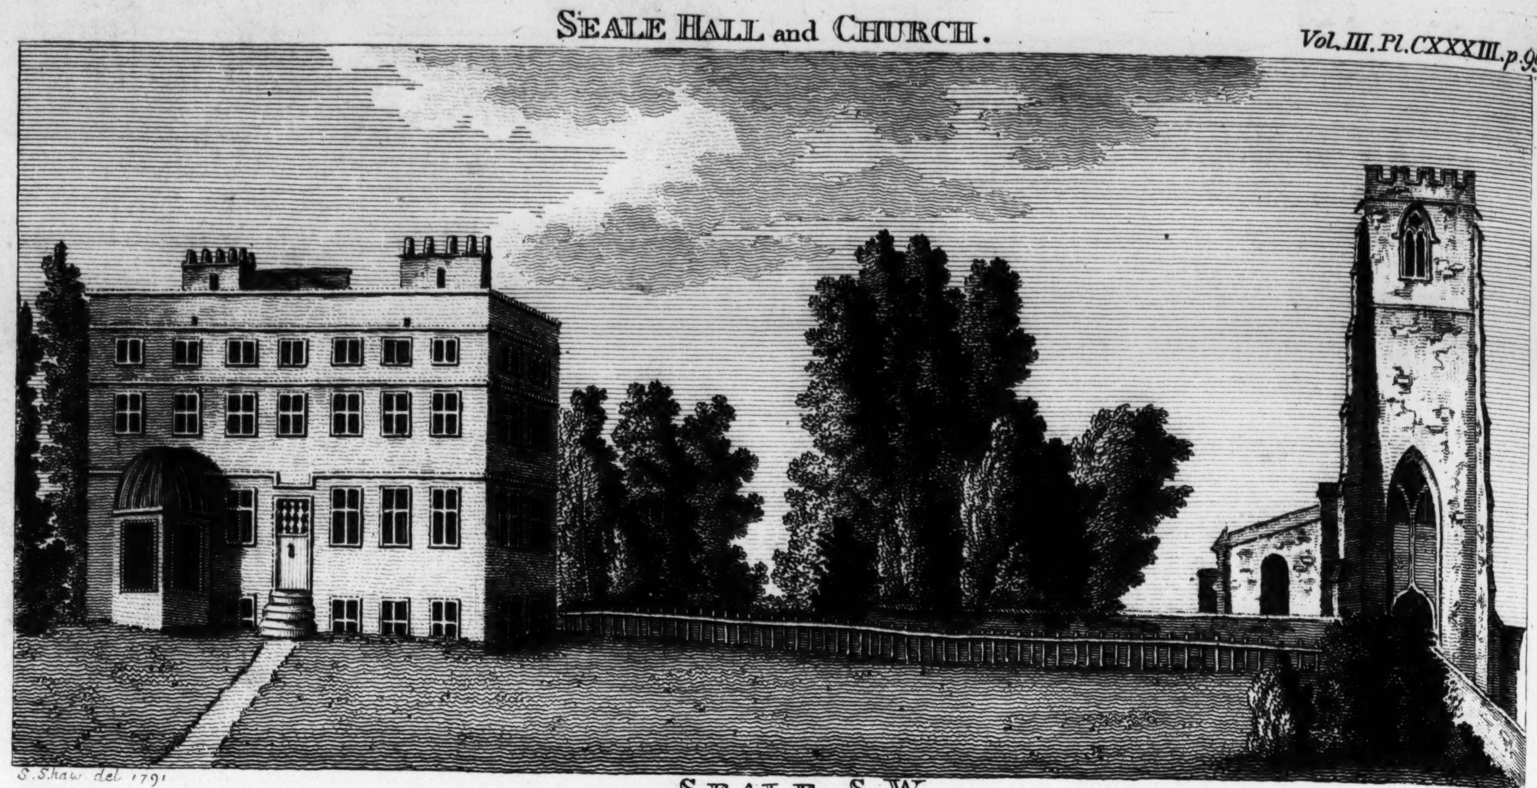
[7] A copy of Glover's Viſitation of Derbyſhire, in the Britiſh Muſeum (Harl. MSS. 6592.) has this note: "Finitus (26 die menſis Aprilis, quartâ die poſt feſtum Sancti Georgii) hic labor eſt, 1592, per me Gulielmum filium Auguſtini filii Willielmi Wyrley, de Hamſtede hall, in comitatu Staffordiæ, armigeri. Continet Codex hic Viſitationem Will'mi Glover (alias dicti Norroy) aſſociati Roberti Glover Heraldi Somerſett, cujus manu totam hanc originem conſcriptam fuiſſe dicimus."

[8] Lives of Heralds, vol. II. fol. 102. in MS. by the late John Charles Brooke, eſq. Somerſet Herald.

The

SEALE HALL and CHURCH.

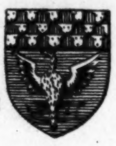
Vol. III. Pl. CXXXIII. p. 993.



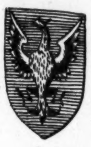
S. Shaw del. 1791

J. Cary sculp.

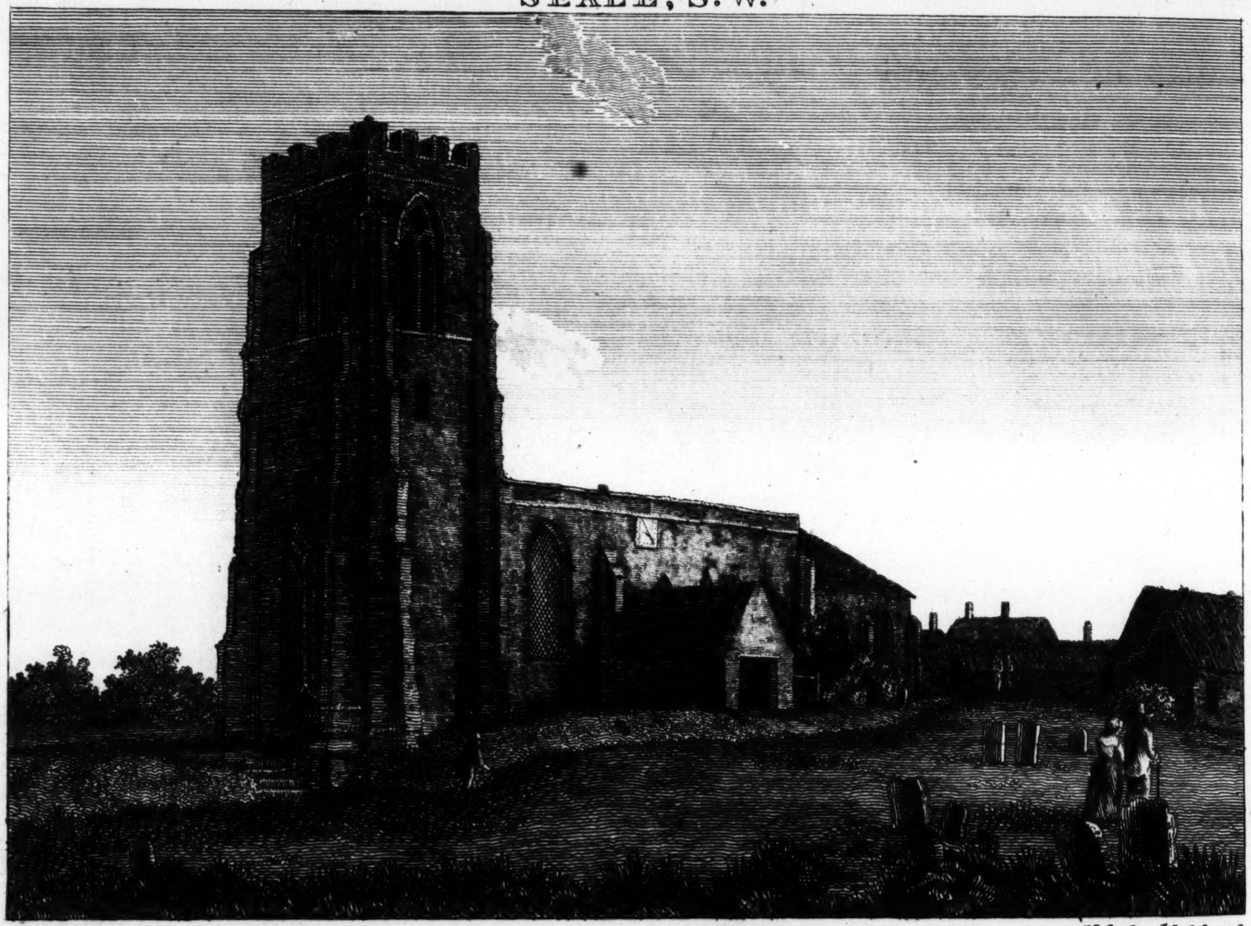
SEALE, S.W.



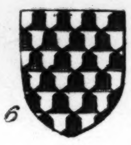
3



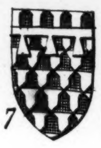
5



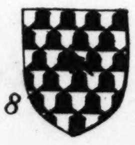
Malcolm del. et sc. 1792.



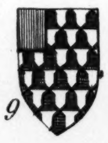
6



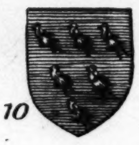
7



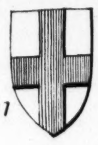
8



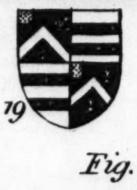
9



10



11



19

Fig. 1.

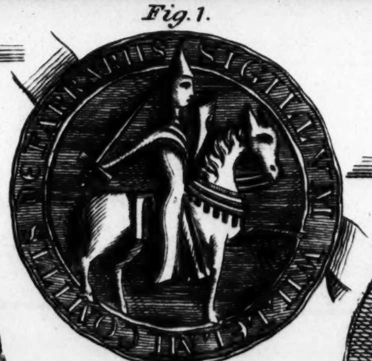


Fig. 2.

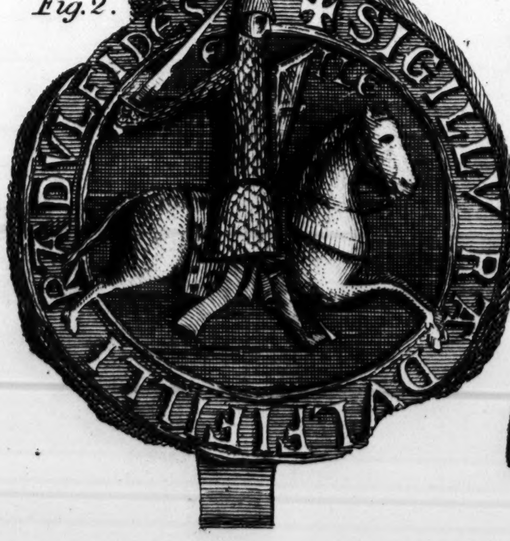

Fig. 4.

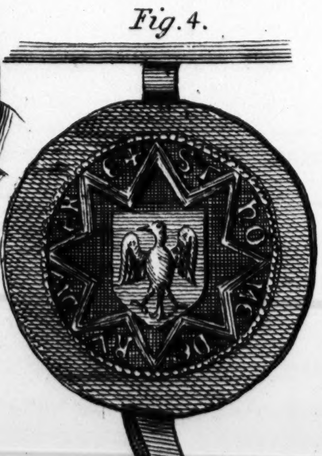
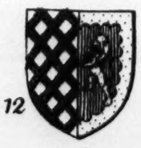
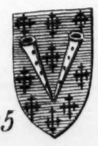
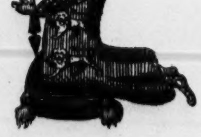




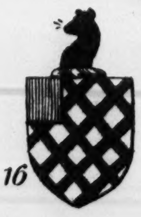
12



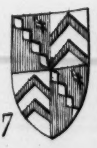
15



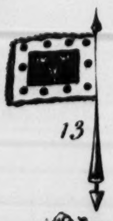
14



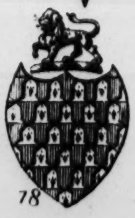
16



17



13



18

To the Rev. WILLIAM GRESLEY, M.A. Rector and Patron of SEALE, this Plate is inscribed by his very humble Servant
J. Nichols.

The CHURCH (ſee Plate CXXXIII.)

dedicated to St. Peter, conſiſts of a fine antient tower (in which are five bells), a chancel, nave, and a North aile, divided by four lofty pointed arches upon octagonal pillars; a lofty arch at the Weſt end of the large aile, now ſtopped up; and a ſimilar one leading into the chancel, which has a piſcina in the South wall, and ſmall antient windows. The North windows have two pillars, with ring capitals.

There is no font.

The whole has been new pewed with good oak; and the pulpit and deſk, of the ſame, ſtand at the Weſt end of the nave, where is alſo a neat veſtry.

By a deed without date (between 1175 and 1179), Adam abbot of Eveſham and Laurence prior of Coventry, declare that a controverſy between the monks of Wenlock and William the Clerk, relative to the church of St. Peter of Sheyle, referred to them as papal delegates, was thus amicably ſettled: That the ſaid William ſhould peaceably poſſeſs in future the church of Sheyle, on paying an annual penſion to the church of St. Milburg at Wenlock of 8*s*. 4*d*. by two equal half-yearly payments, at the Nativity, and on the feaſt of St. John the Baptiſt; and the monks of Wenlock agree to warrant the poſſeſſion of the church. Witneſſes; Simon abbot of Perſhore, Hugh de Coleham, and others.

By another undated deed, H. prior of Wenloc and the convent declare their aſſent to the above award. See theſe two deeds, at length, in p. 1001.

The church of Seile, among others, is confirmed to the priory of Dudley, a cell on the edge of Worceſter and Staffordſhires dependent on Wenlock, by a bull of pope Lucius, dated 1193, which recognizes Ralph de Seyle as the donor.

In the Matriculus of 1220, the church of Seile is ſtated to be in diſpute (in contentione.) William the chaplain, then rector, had been inſtituted by William formerly archdeacon, on the preſentation of Ralph de Seilâ, then patron; paying to the prior of Wenlock 8*s*. 4*d*. from the time of the firſt Lateran Council, by a certain compoſition made before the judges delegate. This church had a chapel in Minori Seile, which was to be ſerved three days in a week. The monks of Merevale paid to the church one mark annually for their grange which they had in this pariſh, by the authority of Walter de Conſtantiis, formerly biſhop of Lincoln; and 10*s*. more, for the tithe of five virgates of land which they held there, agreeably to a compoſition perpetual made with William the rector [1].

Walter prior of Dudley, in 1275, quitted all right in Seile church, for 20 marks, to Roger ſon of Walter de Rideware [2].

In 1344, the procurations for Scheile Major and Scheile Minor were 7*s*. 6¾*d*.; the rectory was taxed at 26 marks, and paid 4*s*. for Peter-pence.

In 1534-5, the value of the rectory was £13. 6*s*. 8*d*.

In 1552, the commiſſioners reported that the church of Seile contained,

In primis, a challice of ſylver.
It̃m, three belles, wyth a ſaunce bell.
It̃m, a cope.
It̃m, tow veſtmentes wyth albes and tunacles.
It̃m, foore towelles.
It̃m, a braſſe croſſe, and tow of wood.

Over Seile chapel was then deſecrata.

Oct. 3, 1576, ſir Thomas Stanley, of Tonge, co. Salop, knt. and dame Margaret Vernon his wife, granted the next preſentation of the church of Magna Seile to George Abell, of Seile, gent [3]. This grant is ſigned as well as ſealed by ſir Thomas and his wife; and the ſeals are the reſpective creſts of Stanley and Vernon.

Mr. Bartholomew Farmer, of Ratcliff Cuily, had the reverſion of this advowſon conveyed to him in 1607, as before mentioned. In Auguſt 1614, the aforeſaid 60 years term in the advowſon commencing from Jan. 1, 1607 (though granted, including too Nether Sheale manor houſe, the herbage and pawnage of Pipe Wood, and ſundry lands, on Jan. 31, 1584, by William Mather, dame Margaret his wife, and her ſon Edward Stanley, then of Perſhill, co. Stafford, eſq.), was aſſigned to Edward Farmer, of Ratcliff Culye, gent. And, 16 Dec. 1624, Bartholomew Farmer, of the ſame place, gent. granted this advowſon, among all his hereditaments in Ratcliffe Culey, Little Sheepie, Sibſdon, Applebie, Over Seile and Nether (Applebie's manor, Wadlandes, &c. included), to Edward Farmer, of Atterton, and Francis Shenton of Barwell, gents. Gregorie Kent, of Grindon, co. Warwick, clerk, and Bartholomewe Farmer, of Higham, gent. (as truſtees probably) [4].

How the advowſon afterwards became veſted in Zachary Johnſon has not been ſeen; but it ſeems to have been parted with before his death (probably ſold to ſir Thomas Greſley), from the expreſſions of his burial-entry, in Seile regiſter, of 28 July, 1669; "ſome tyme patron, and late rector of this church."

Mr. Burton, in 1622, noticed the following arms:

In the Eaſt window of the chancel:

Azure, an eagle diſplayed Argent; Plate CXXXIII. fig. 5. Ridware.

In the North windows of the chancel:

Vaire, Argent and Sable; fig. 6.
The ſame, with a label of three points Gules; fig. 7. } Meignell.
The ſame, with a martlet Gules; fig. 8.
The ſame, with a canton Gules; fig. 9.

[The laſt coat ſtill remains; as does, in the ſame window, a figure of David, in hair and gown, on a galloping lion, whoſe mouth he is tearing open.]

In a South window of the chancel:

Azure, ſix martlets; 3, 2, and 1, Or. Appleby; fig. 10.

[This coat alſo ſtill remains.]

Argent, a croſs Gules. St. George; fig. 11.

In another South window of the church:

Argent, fretty of eight pieces Sable, Vernon; impaling, Gules, a lion rampant within a border engrailed Or. Talbot; fig. 12.

On a ſquare banner, Sable, three fleurs de lis within a border Argent, charged with pellets; fig. 13.

In another South window:

The picture of a man armed in mail, kneeling, holding in his hand a lance; on whoſe ſurcote, Gules, three lions paſſant guardant in pale Or, a label of France. Lancaſter; fig. 14.

Azure, ſemé of croſs croſslets, two organ pipes erected in pale Or. Pype; fig. 15.

Argent, fretty Sable, a canton Gules. Creſt, a boar's head couped Sable, the mantle Argent fretty Sable. Vernon of Haddon; fig. 16.

Quarterly, 1. and 4. Gules, a bend fuſilly, Argent; a martlet in ſiniſter chief point Or, Frefod, afterwards Browne; 2. and 3. Argent, two chevrons Gules. Grendon; fig. 17.

"The coat of Gules, with the bend fuſilly and the martlets," Mr. Burton adds, "is the coat of ſir William Frefod, knight, lord of Frefod near Lichfield, and ſtandeth in St. Michael's church in Lichfield by that name. The heir-general was married to one Henry Browne; whoſe ſon John Browne, in the reign of king Henry VI, bare this coat of Frefod for his own, as is yet to be ſeen in St. Chad's church in Lichfield, in a North window, and here is ſet up for Browne, who had lands here in 1430, and dwelt here [5]."

In 1650, the rectory was returned worth £100.; and the incumbent as "weak."

A brief, dated Jan. 23, 24 Geo. II. deſcribes this church as "a very antient ſtructure;" and adds, that, "notwithſtanding the pariſhioners have within a few years paſt raiſed amongſt themſelves large ſums of money, and laid out the ſame in endeavouring to ſupport their ſaid church, yet the North ſide and Weſt end are very much bulged and decayed, ſeveral of the main beams, which ſupport the roof, have their ends entirely rotted off, and decayed ſeveral feet at each end, and are ſupported by props; the walls, both of the church and ſteeple, are cracked in many places; and the whole fabrick is in ſo ruinous a condition, that a great part thereof muſt be taken down and rebuilt. By an eſtimate of the charge of taking down, repairing, and rebuilding the ſame, upon a moderate computation, it will amount to the ſum of 1150l. and upwards."

---

[1] See vol. I. p. lviii. The "1ſt Lateran Council" was in 1123; the 3d in 1179, perhaps a little after that "compoſition before judges delegate" juſt mentioned above in this page.

[2] Previous agreement with the celerarius of the priory, Rydware Chartulary, page before the kalendar; the prior's deed on preceding page; and his fine, Nº 47. ibid.

[3] Mr Greſley's original.

[4] Originals of ſaid Mr. Jervis, in poſſeſſion of S. Pipe Wolferſtan.

[5] Burton, MS. But ſee a different account in Shaw, vol. II. p. 14 of Appendix.

The preſent value in the king's books is £17. 8*s.* 11½*d.* The epiſcopal procurations are, 5*s.* 3*d.*

On a tablet in the church:

"Foraſmuch as ſir Thomas Rich, late of Sunning, in the county of Berks, bart. deceaſed, in and by his laſt will and teſtament in writing, did give and deviſe to the pariſhyoners of Neither Seale, in the county of Leiceſter, as the proper guift of Barbara his then late wife, one of the daughters of Gilbert Moorewood, eſq. ſome times of this pariſh, deceaſed, the ſum of £200. for the purpoſes hereafter mentioned, and to the end that the names and memories of ſuch charitable benefactors, whoſe hearts God hath ſo diſpoſed and inclined to do good, may not with their bodies be buried in oblivion, but preſerved in ſome ſort to ſurvive them; that ſo ſuch other perſons of ability and eſtate may, by ſuch eminent examples, be happily moved and encouraged to the like charitable work; we have hereby thought fit, as well for the reaſons aforeſaid, as alſo in purſuance and performance of what we have elſewhere expreſt, to publiſh and declare ſo much of the ſaid will as toucheth or concerneth the ſaid bequeſt, which followes in theis words; that is to ſay, "I give unto the pariſhioners of Neither Seale, in the county of Leiceſter, where my dear wife Mrs. Barbarah Rich lies interred, as the proper guift of my ſaid wife, the ſum of £200. to purchaſe lande of the yearly value of £10. for ever, to be ſettled in feoffees names in truſt, for the uſe of the poor of the ſaid pariſh, to provide and buy weekly for ever 4*s.* in bread, to be for ever, every Sunday morning, after ſermon or divine ſervice ended, diſtributed to ſuch poor as the pariſhioners there ſhall appoint; provided the ſaid poor men or women come to church every Sunday morning to hear the divine ſervice appointed by the Church of England, unleſs ſome lawfull excuſe hinder them. And the ſaid Zachary Johnſon, clarke, who was once patron and rector of this place, did give unto the poor of the pariſh of Neither Seale £10.; viz. 40*s.* to the poor of Over Seale; and 40*s.* to the poore of Duniſthorp; and the reſt to the poore of Neather Seale.

Charitas præſtantiſſima politia. A. D. 1669."

On another tablet:

"Be it remembred to all poſterities, that John Ramſor and Elizabeth his wife have given unto the poor people of this town of Neather Seale four acres and three roods of arable land in the four common fields of Neather Seale, for the payment of 10*s.* yearly for ever, to be diſtributed on Good Friday to the pooreſt people in the towne by the rector, churchwarden, and overſeers of the poor there for the time being, as by their deed, bearing date the 19th day of July, in the 21ſt year of the raigne of king Charles II. doth more fully appear. Alſo the ſaid John Ramſor, by his laſt will and teſtament, dated the 4th day of December, 1675, hath given unto the poor of the town of Neather Seale the rents and yearly profits of one piece of ground, called Little-Margery Wall[1], to be diſtributed among the pooreſt people of the town of Neather Seale, at or upon the Annunciation of the Bleſſed Virgin Mary yearly for ever, at the diſcreſſion of the rector and churchwardens there for the time being.

"Alſo Rebecca Johnſon, ſpinſter, late of Neather Seale, hath given to the poor fatherleſs and motherleſs children in Neather Seale, in the county of Leiceſter, £50. by her laſt will and teſtament, bearing date the 24th day of April, A. D. 1678.

"To do good and to communicate forget not; for with ſuch ſacrifices God is well pleaſed."

RECTORS.	PATRONS.
Rogerius[2].	Ralph de Seilâ.
William[3], before 1179, and 1220.
Robertus[4], before 1228.
William[5], after 1232.
Robertus[6], 1247.	William de Rydeware fil' & heres Walteri.
Hugo de Florencia[7], circa 1300.	Sir Thomas de Rydeware.
. . . . 17 kal. Sept. 1305.
John de Horſeleye[8], St. Barnabas 15° Edw. III. 1341.
Edmund de Rydewar[9], Nat. of John Bapt. 23 Ed. III.
John de Bollowe, 1377. (See p. 985*, col. 1.)
Robert de Saloppeſbury.
Thomas White, Jovis ante 25 Mar. 21° Edw. IV. 26 Nov. 2 Ric. III.[10]
Roger Bayle, 12° Henry VII.[11]
Roger Douton, died 1500.
William Atkinſon, 1534.
——— Benſerow[12], 1566.
Robert Johnſon, 1640.
Zachary Johnſon, died in July, 1669.	Himſelf the patron.
Michael Hill, 1677; died in October, 1693, æt. 64.	Sir Thomas Greſley, bart.
George Gretton[13], Feb. 7, 1693.
Richard Inge, M. A. 1705, on reſignation of G. Gretton; died in May, 1748.	Thomas Greſley, eſq. Sir Robert Burdett, bart. William Inge, eſq.[14]
William Inge, A. M. 1748, now canon reſidentiary of Lichfield.	Lee Greſley, eſq.
Thomas Greſley[15], D.D. 1759, on reſignation of W. Inge; died 18 April, 1785.	John Wilcockſon and John Wall, gents. (Truſtees.)
William Greſley, B.A. 1785; the preſent rector, 1803.	Himſelf the patron.

---

[1] Properly Moninge's Well. Moninggeſwalle, in a deed of Henric' fil' Will'i quondam rectoris, at Seile.

[2] Rydeware Chartulary, cart. 42.

[3] Ibid. Cart. 40, Matriculus in vol. I. p. lviii.

[4] Ibid. 46.

[5] Grym's deed in p. 983*.

[6] Rydeware Chartulary, 44.

[7] Ibid. 86.

[8] Teſt. to original at Seile.

[9] Grantee in a ditto.

[10] Originals at ditto.

[11] Greſley Chartulary, p. 59.

[12] In the Certificate referred to under Allexton, p. 8, Mr. Benſerow is thus deſcribed: "Preſbyter, non conjugatus; competenter doctus; non reſidet; non hoſpitalis; capellanus domeſticus in ſervicio domini Salopienſ'; non licentiatus, nec prædicat; duo beneficia habet."

[13] Rector afterward of Stretton in the Field.

[14] Probably as truſtees, all or ſome of them, under the diſpoſitions of ſir Thomas Greſley, or dame Frances his wife.

[15] Of Hertford college, Oxford, M. A. May 11, 1758; B. and D. D. Nov. 11, 1768.

MONUMENTAL INSCRIPTIONS.

On a large altar-tomb, under a pointed arch, in the chancel, is cut in the ſlab the figure of a prieſt in his habit; his hands elevated; at his right ſide a Bible; at his left a chalice; his head on a cuſhion (Plate CXXXV. fig. 2.). Round the margin is an imperfect inſcription, with difficulty thus decyphered:

"Hic jacet Rogerus Douton quondam rector eccl'ie parochialis de Scheyle, qui quidem Rogerus obiit penultimo die Julii, anno Dñi m'l'o quingentiſimo.
Cujus a'i'e propicietur De'. Amen."

On a flat ſtone cloſe adjoining:

"HERE LIETH THE BODIE OF
ZACHARY JOHNSON, WHO WAS PATRON AND RECTOR OF THIS CHURCH . . . .
. . . . . THE . . . DAY OF JULY, 1669."

Near this is another flat alabaſter:

. . . . RY JOHNSON,
RECTOR OF THIS CHURCH, WHO DIED AGED
. . . ."

Further on is a more modern flat ſtone, inſcribed,

"THE LADY GRESLEY, 1711."

Below this, another, thus:

"Here lyeth the body of Elizabeth Greſley, wife of Thomas Greſley, eſq.
She died in her 53d year, on the 14th day of February, 1732."

Below this, is another thus inſcribed:

"HIC REPOSITI SUNT CINERES
MICHAELIS HILL, HUJUS ECCLESIÆ RECTORIS,
QUI, QUINQUE PLUSQUAM
SEXAGINTA NATALIBUS ACTIS,
QUINTO CALENDARUM OCTOBRIS, ANNO SALUTIS MDCXCIII.
TRANQUILLA MENTE
AD VERE ELYSIOS UT SPERAMUS HINC ABIIT.
IN CUJUS MEMORIAM
FILIÆ SUÆ SUSANNA ET ELIZABETHA.
HOC PIE POSUERUNT,
ET FUTURIS SACRUM ESSE VOLUNT."

Oppoſite this is another:

"Richardus Inge, A. M.
Hujus eccleſiæ quondam rector,
Gulielmi Inge, armig. de Thorpe Conſtantine,
Filius natu minor,
Suum obiit diem
6 idus Maii, anno Chriſti 1748, ætatis ſuæ 67.
Elizabetha conjux ſua,
Cujus propinqua humantur oſſa,
Edwardi Mugleſton, gen. de Packington, filia,
Obiit mortem
12 kalendas Januarias, anno Chriſti 1732,
ætatis ſuæ 31.
Hoc monumentum parentibus bene merentibus
Mœſtiſſimus poſuit filius
Gulielmus Inge."

On a marble monument in the chancel:

"Sacred to the memory
of Thomas Greſley, D.D. F.R.S. and rector of this pariſh,
who died April 18th, 1785,
in the 51ſt year of his age.
Alſo to Elizabeth his daughter, who died Nov. 28, 1792, aged 29."

In the nave, juſt below the chancel:

"Grace Inge, daughter of Richard and Eliz. Inge, of Overſeale, departed this life June the 7th, 1754,
in the third year of her age."

In a pew at the bottom of the North aile, on three flat ſtones (now boarded over):

1. " . . . .
Johanna Johnſon, nuper Richardi . . . . . .
de Nether Seale, generoſi, ...
Appoloniæ Johnſon, ſingulorum . . . .
L . . . . r, mater deſiderium.
Mulier affinibus viciniſque admodum urbana,
Indigentibus largiter ſubminiſtrans,
Omnibuſque propter morum ſuavitatem gratiſſima.
Ætatis meridie orbiſque expectationis
Ex hoc terreſtri agone rapta,
Reliquias hic placidè depoſuit die 24 Junii, anno ætatis 32do nondum . . . . . .
annoque Domini MDCLXXXIX."

2. "Here lyeth the body of Zachary and Apollonia Johnſon, the only children of Richard Johnſon, gent.
by his deceaſed wife Johanna,
who both dyed of the ſmall pox.
Zachary, aged 12 years, deceaſed 9th 9^{br}, } 1694.
Apollonia, aged 9 years, deceaſed 27th 8^{br}, }
The ſame hereditary pain that flew
My much lov'd wife, has made me childleſs too;
But ſtill this comfort in their deaths I have,
That though their corpſe went ſpotted to the grave,
Their ſouls remain'd immaculate and fair,
Nor was the ſmalleſt blemiſh harbour'd there.
And when at laſt the trumpet's piercing ſound
Shall call the ſleeping world from under ground;
Their bodies too ſhall riſe entire and whole,
Free from all ſpots, and fitted to the ſoul."

3. "The remains of
Richard Johnſon, gentleman, late of this towne;
a perſon
deſervedly valued for his honeſty, hoſpitality, and charity.
The two former were conſpicuous in his life;
the latter he teſtified at his death, by giving 150 pounds for the building of an almſhouſe in this towne, and endowing the ſame with lands to the value of 36 pounds per annum for ever, for the maintenance of ſix poore people of this pariſh.
He departed this life the 12 day of May,
and in the 58 yeare of his age.
Bleſſed is he that conſidereth the poor. Pſ. xli. 1."

In another pew to the left is this:

"Hic jacet Richardus Moore, gent.
Obiit Aug. 6,
Anno { ætatis 46.
Anno { Dom. 1721."

On a flat ſtone in the North aile:

"Here lieth the body of
Elizabeth Farnall, wife to John Farnall, of Overſeall, died May the 26, anno Domini 1709, and in the 28th year of her age.
Near this place lyeth the body of Mary, daughter of John and Elizabeth Farnell, dyed
September the 30th, anno Domini 1709,
in the 3d year of her age."

Alſo in a pew adjoining:

"Here lyeth interred
the body of John Farnell, gent.
of Over Seale, who departed
this life February the 12th, anno Domini 1719;
and in the 37th year of his age."

Alſo in the next pew:

"Here lieth interred the body of Mary, the (deſervedly) much-beloved wife of John Farnell, gent. who departed this life December the firſt, 1758, in the 45th year of her age.":

On a flat ſtone in the ſame aile:

"Here lieth interred
the body of Mary, the wife of William Wilkes, and daughter of John and Ann Farnell, who departed this life March the 11th, 1750, in the 31ſt year of her age."

At the lower part of the nave are theſe:

1. "Here lies interred the body of Elizabeth, wife of Joſeph Wilkes,
who departed this life April 8, 1762,
in the 58th year of her age."

2. "Here lieth the body of Mr. Reginald Newbold, who departed this life the 26th day of April,
in the year of our Lord 1750, aged 64."

3. "Here lieth the body of Zachary Gilbert,
who departed this life June 20, 1777, aged 82.
Plain in his form, but rich he was in mind;
Religious, honeſt, humble, meek, and kind."

4. "Here lies the body of Thomas Wilkes, late of Over Seale, eſquire,
who departed this life
the 7th day of November, 1796, aged 55.
No pompous praiſe which flattery can beſtow,
Could tell the worth of him who reſts below:
His life beſt ſpoke the merits of his mind;
In all relations faithful, firm, and kind.
Ah! if the wiſhes of the good could ſave
The man of virtue from the dreary grave,
A ſorrowing widow need not heave the ſigh
O'er the lov'd ſpot where Wilkes's aſhes lie:
But, tho' divided by this votive ſtone,
The ſad memorial of her grief alone,
A righteous Power will each to each reſtore
In better realms, where they ſhall part no more."

In the churchyard:

On a plain white marble againſt the North ſide of the chancel:

"Elizabeth, the wife of Thomas Greſley, and daughter of William and Hannah Vincent, died upon the nineteenth day of May,
in the year of our Lord 1769,
in the 37th year of her age, and is here interred.
The memory of her diffuſive charity, real humility, diſintereſted regard,
undiſſembled affection, tender love,
great underſtanding, and unbounded benevolence,
is engraved,
by her amiable behaviour and ſincerity of manners,
upon the hearts of the poor,
her neighbours, friends, relations, and family.
This truth is inſcribed, to excite in the reader, an earneſt endeavour to imitate ſo eminent an example of every active, ſocial, and Chriſtian virtue."

On a ſimilar marble, near this:
"Hannah Vincent, widow,
died May the 24th, 1772, and is here interred.
We never human nature perfect view,
Her virtues many were, her failings few."

On the South ſide is an altar tomb, thus inſcribed:
"Here lies the body of Thomas Farnell, gent.
who departed this life Dec. 26, anno Domini 1711,
in the 82d year of his age.
Near this place lyeth alſo the body of Mary, wife to the ſaid Thomas
Farnell, who departed this life June 30, 1701, and in the 51ſt year of her age."

Alſo on a head-ſtone at the Eaſt corner:
"Here was interred the body of John Spencer, of this pariſh, matt-maker,
who died Jan. 27, 1767, aged 93.
He was the happy father of that truly moral and religious poet John Spencer, author of Hermas, or the Acarian Shepherds[1]."

On various upright ſtones:
"Here lies the body of Anne Newbold, wife of William Newbold.
She was an affectionate wife,
a tender mother, and a valuable friend. She lived reſpected, and died lamented.
She died January 13, 1762, aged 58."

"In memory of Alice, the wife of John Atwood.
She departed this life Oct. 1, 1783,
in the 42d year of her age.
She was a dutiful daughter, an affectionate wife,
a tender parent, and a kind benefactreſs,
chaſte and undefiled.
She bore a long and painful illneſs with great fortitude, being wholly reſigned to the hopes of a happier ſtate."

"John Smith, of Doniſthorpe, died June 4, 1774,
aged 73.
Mary Smith, died April 13, 1767, aged 79."

"The Rev. Charles Cooper was buried here
the 12th of March, 1787."

"To the memory of Anne, relict of the Rev. Charles Cooper, who died July 18, 1791,
in the 78th year of her age."

"Sacred to the memory of Gilbert Clarke,
a very able and eminent mathematician, who fell aſleep the 26th of September, 1786, aged 82.
"I believe that my Redeemer liveth."

"Sacred to the memory of Sarah Clarke, wife of Gilbert Clarke, who fell aſleep June 5, 1776, aged 62.
"Weariſome nights were appointed to her."

"Here lies the body of Alice Clarke, wife of Robert Clarke, of Duniſthorpe.
She was an affectionate wife, a tender parent, and a kind miſtreſs; compaſſionate to the poor.
She lived eſteemed, and died lamented, Feb. 22, 1759,
aged 65."

On the ſame ſtone two of her children are mentioned:
William Clarke, died Feb. 21, 1759, aged 16.
Alice Clarke, died Nov. 12, 1742, aged 9.

On a flat ſtone in the chancel at Sherborne, co. Dorſet:

"Hic jacet Walſingham Greſley, filius Thomæ Greſley militis, de Drakelow, in com. Darby.
domini Jo. comitis Briſtol. apud exteras nationes domique, proſperis ac adverſis, amore ac fidelitate inſigni inſervivit, in cujus rei memoriam hoc monumentum poſuit.
Obiit 14to Novembris, anno D'ni 1633°, æt. ſuæ 48°."

B O O T H O R P E,

a ſmall hamlet, abutting on Blackfordby on the North, is partly within the pariſh of Seile, but principally in that of Aſhby de la Zouch. It conſiſts of about 143 acres, and contains ſix dwellings[2].

It is noticed in Domeſday under the name of Bortrod[3]; in the Teſta de Nevill it is called Boothorpe[4]; and in ſome antient deeds it is called Baxthorpe[5].

In 1346, the prior of Greſley (on the aid then granted for knighting Edward of Woodſtock the king's eldeſt ſon) was aſſeſſed 2*s.* for a twentieth part of one knight's fee in Baxthorp, parcel of the honour of Tutbury[6].

After the ſuppreſſion of religious houſes, it paſſed with Aſhby to the family of Haſtings; from whom it has deſcended to the preſent owner the earl of Moira.

In 1630, Henry French and William Beck were freeholders at Boothorpe.

This hamlet is not mentioned in the poll-book of 1722; but in 1775, Nicholas Joyce and William Joyce polled for lands there.

The principal land-holders at preſent are William Hill, eſq. Mr. Nicholas Joyce, and Mr. Toone.

---

[1] A Poem in ſixteen books, printed at Newcaſtle in 1772, 2 vols. 8vo; and containing many juſt reflections, evident marks of the author's piety and benevolence, and, in ſome places, a laudable ſpirit of poetry.

[2] See before, under Aſhby, p. 634; to which this article may be conſidered as ſupplementary.

[3] See before, under Seile, p. 979*.

[4] In more modern days Knight-thorpe had for ſome time the ſame name, from its owners the Booths.

[5] See p. 634.

[6] Rot. Aux. 20 Edw. III.

DONISTHORPE,

antiently called Durandeſtorpe, is a ſmall village, one mile South from Over Seile, and near four from Aſhby de la Zouch. "It ſtandeth on the confines of Derbyſhire, and is part in that county, and part in Leiceſterſhire; and is, as I am informed, in three pariſhes, Seile, Greſley, and Meaſham [1]." The houſes are in the ſeveral pariſhes intermixedly; and many ſingle incloſures lie, by ſpots, in all the three.

One ploughland in Durandeſtorp, which in the time of king Edward had been valued at five ſhillings, was worth but twelve pence at the general ſurvey, when it was held by Carle under Nigel de Statford, father of William de Greſley, who founded the priory and built the caſtle of Greiſley. The land was equal to half a plough, and lay waſte [2].

One ploughland in Durandeſthorpe, one in Stretone, and a third in Orton, which all lay waſte, yet were worth 2*s.* were held by Roger under Henry de Ferieres. Aluric and Leuenot held two of theſe freely; the third Cari held, but he could not leave the land, and diſpoſe of it [3].—The families of Appleby and Stretton had much at Doniſthorpe.

About the time of king Henry II. Geoffrey le Sauvage gave four yard-lands in Durandeſthorp to the priory of St. Thomas juxta Stafford [4]. Theſe lands were probably thoſe of the fee of Ralph de Seile, held as mentioned in Rydew. Chart, No. 11; ſince the prior is in the liſts of Seile holders 4° and 5° Edw. III.

Salvage himſelf was lord of Newton Regis, co. Warwick [5]. He ſeems to have made a later grant, of all his remaining land in Durandeſthorp; almoſt coeval with which are the two which follow it:

"Galfr' le Salvage, Deo & S'te Marie & S'to Thome martyri de Staford, totam terram quam habui in Durandeſthorp, ſcilicet unam carucatam, cum corpore meo, pro ſalute meâ & uxoris Letice. Hiis t's, Henrico del Bec, & Walt'o & Dioniſio ſacerdotibus, Will'o Duredent, Mag'ro Ric'o de Gnoueſhale, Rad' fil' Jordani, Hug' de Achovre, Rog'o de Bakepuz, Rad'o de Muttonâ, Gerardo fil' Brien, Steph' de Daveneport, Rad' de Hintes, Nigello fil' Radulfi, Galfr' de Achovre, Ric'o de Hoptune, Rob'to de Hintes, Rog'o de Appelby, Galfr' de Mapeltonâ, Ric'o de Travers, & aliis [6]."

"Thomas fil' Morini, eccl'ie S'ti Thome de Stafford, unum maſagium in Duranteſthorp. Teſtibus; Rob' Grim, Rad' fil' ſuo, Will' & Alured de Broct', Ric' de Hopt', Reinero de Heiwodo, Simone fil' Re . . . [6]."

"Rodb'tus de Bromkote, eccl'ie & canonicis S'ti Thome, maſagium in Duranteſthorp quod Thomas fil' Morini contulit eis, ſicud carte ejus & carta Will'i de Rideware teſtentur. Hiis teſtibus; G. Coventr' ep'o, Ric'o Lichef' eccl'ie decano, mag'ro Joh'e de Nowerch', &c. Rog'o decano de Colleſhul, Viviano de Stok', Will' Malveiſin, Poun cam'ario, Joh'e & Nichol' d'ni ep'i cam'ariis, Henr' Hoſtiario, & multis aliis [6]."

By Teſta de Nevill, or the Records which ſeem intermingled with that ſurvey, William de Bramcote held of Richard de Caunvile (who held of earl Ferrars) a half fee in Bramcote, Neuton, and Duranteſthorp.

In 12° Edw. I. the prior of St. Thomas had a grant of free warren in his demeſne lands of Duranteſthorpe, among other places [7].

The nuns of Poleſworth had alſo two yard-lands here, of the gift of Geffrey de Bec [8].

At the head of the third liſt given in p. *984. from the concluding pages of Rydeware Chartulary, we find Johannes de Beek (probably deſcended from Geffrey de Bec juſt mentioned; ſee too Salvage's deed above), "dominus de Durandeſthorp," holding "in eadem villâ" 18 virgates of the manor of [King's] Newton in co. Warwick. The fee or tenure of Bek is frequent too in the other liſts. This liſt has no date; but, from the names of almoſt every other holder it contains, it muſt be nearly contemporary with the other two of 4° and 5° Edw. III., and the "et ſol' ſitr" added to the Item of N. de. Ingwardby is ſome mark of its having been made on the ſame occaſion as the former of thoſe: yet that of 5° Edw. III. has Rog' "dominus de Dorandeſthorp;" or it may be "dominus Rog'," this laſt word being placed above the line. In the liſt of 4° Edw. III. the lord of Dorandeſthorp is without a Chriſtian or any name.

Did the family of Bec hold under the heirs of Bramcote? Or, poſſibly thoſe of Salvage; for, in the liſts circa 4-5 Edw. III. the dominus de Bromcote is twice placed with the "alii tenentes de Bek?" And were the Durandeſthorpe lands held again under Bec by the family ſurnamed de Durandeſthorpe, of whom we find ſo much both in Seile original evidences, and in the Rydeware and Greſley Chartularies, and who appear to have alſo held ſome conſiderable ſhare in Parva Rydeware, till it ſeems to have been finally paſſed by Peter de Durandeſthorpe to William (ſon of Walter) lord of Rydewar Hamſtall, by the deed Rydeware Chartulary, No. 125? Perhaps it is more likely that "dominus de D" was applied in common to the lords of parts, and that Bek's fee was a diſtinct portion of Durandeſthorpe; which in truth ſeems ſo divided a place, not only as to county and pariſh but manerial right too, that it is perhaps impoſſible to aſcertain its antient ſtate in this laſt reſpect: and the modern is little better determined.

Of the Durandeſthorpe name are found the following perſons:

Thomas de Duranſthorpe, witneſs to a grant to Rad' fil' Ormi (de Acovre) perhaps as early as 1160 circ. [9]

Will' fil' Rogeri de Durandeſthorpe, witneſs to Rad' de Seile ſenior's grant to William Norreis [10].

Will's de Durandeſthorpe, about 1196–7 [11]. = ...

Hamund de Durandeſthorpe.

Alex' fil' Jordani de Durandeſthorp, 1196 [12].

Walt' de Durandeſthorp had held three virgates in Durandeſthorp of Reginald de Wyveſle by knight's ſervice [13]. = ...

A ſon, whoſe ſervice Reginald de Wyveſle granted to William de Rydeware, teſt. Oliver (or Olmer) de Durandeſthorp; probably Peter de Durandeſthorp; a witneſs 1243, 1246, 1257; dead in 1263 [14]. = ...

Andrew de Duraſthorp [15]. Roger his brother [15].

Richard de Durandeſthorp, ſon and heir of Peter [16]; a witneſs 1263, 1275 [17]. = . . . | Galfrid [18]. | Robert [18].

Roger fil' Ricardi de Duranthorp, jurat. apud Bredon, eſch. 34° Edw. I. [19]—Rog' fil' Ric'i de Aula de Duranthorp, 1315.—Rog' de Aulla dominus de Duranthorp, 1324.—Roger lord of Dorenteſthorp, 1327. Alſo in 1331 [20]. = Cibilla, 1315 [20].

John, 1324-5.

Richard and Walter, ſons of Robert de Duranthorp, 1352.

Roger ſon of Robert de Donaſthorpe, 1411 [21].

---

[1] Burton, MS.

[2] "In Durandeſtorp [terrâ Nigelli de Statford] habet Carle 1 carucatam terræ ad geldam. Terra dimidiæ carucæ. Waſta eſt. Tempore Regis Edwardi valebat 5 ſolidos; modò 12 denarios." Domeſday, fol. 278. a. 1.

[3] "Rogerus tenet de H[enrico de Ferieres] in Stretone 1 carucatam terræ vaſtam, & aliam in Durandeſtorp ſimiliter vaſtam, & terciam in Ovretonâ ſimiliter vaſtam. Valent tamen 2 ſolidos. Aluric & Leuenot liberè tenuerunt duas harum; tertiam tenuit Cari, ſed cum eâ diſcedere non poſſit." Ibid. fol. 233. b. 1.

[4] MS. Chetwynd.

[5] See Dugdale in loco.

[6] Abſtracts from autographs found at Willeſley Hall 28 Nov. 1803, by S. P. W.

[7] Cart. 12 Edw. I. n. 8.; and Chetwynd, vol. B. p. 48.

[8] Pat. 21 Ric. II. per Inſpex. The prior of Rependon too, early in 13th century, had freehold in Durandeſthorpe. See p. 1000.

[9] Greſley Chartulary, p. 9.

[10] Seile original. See p. *980.

[11] Mav. Rydw. ca. 11. in Shaw, vol. I. p. 162.

[12] Ryd. Chart. ſub ca. 48.

[13] Ryd. Chart. 23.

[14] Seile originals. Ryd. Chart. N° 38. compared with 32.

[15] Will's fil' & heres Joh'is le Sauwage de Octherp. Teſtibus; Nicol' de Yng'rby, Will'o Mareſchall' de Meyſin, Walter de Stretton, Rog'o fratre Andree de Dorantiſth', &c. Ricard' de Chapelhous de Dorantiſth' &c. Hugone de Aula de eadem, & aliis." Ibid. and at Willeſley Hall.

[16] Greſl. Chart. p. 28.

[17] Seile original, ſtated in p. 983*, and Walter prior of Dudley's grant, Ryd. Chart.

[18] Seile original.

[19] Mon. Angl. I. 481.

[20] Two Seile originals. A third at Willeſley. Liſt of holders, p. *984.

[21] Willeſley and Seile originals.

It ſeems as if both the lords of Durandeſthorp (of that name) and ſome junior branches of their family, were ſome time after 1300 uſually ſtyled de Aulâ. (See note 4. below.) The above John, ſon of Roger, is taken from the following deed:

"Rogerus de Aullâ dominus de Durandeſthorp, Joh'i filio meo unam placeam gardini mei, vid' in illo cornario q' jacet in longitudine juxta altam viam in Durandeſthorp, cum tribus acris, &c. ad totam vitam ſuam. Hiis t's; Rog'o fil' Hugonis de Aulâ de Durandeſthorp, Joh'e fil' Matild', Rog'o de le Chapelhous, Rog'o Hauttel, Rob' fil' Hugonis de Aulâ. Mercur' ante Purific'm 11 Edw. I.[1]"

"Henricus de Colevill tenet manerium de Doniſthorp de domino per 1 par calcar' deaurat' vel 6đ. per annum; et Devill' tenet de comite de Warennâ per 1 par calcar' deaurat' vel 6đ. per annum, ut dicit Rubrus Liber; ſed carta dicit quod dominus tenet dictum manerium de dicto comite per 1 ſperuarium vel 2s̃. per annum[2]."

"This manor hath been for many years belonging to the Greſleys, a very antient family, who had in this tract of country very large territories, lands, and poſſeſſions, ſo early as the reign of king Edward I.; and who had long ſince a caſtle at Caſtle Greſley, and founded a priory at Greſley, dedicated to the honour of St. George[3]."

In 1346, Richard at Hill[4] (on the aid then granted for knighting Edward of Woodſtock the king's eldeſt ſon) was aſſeſſed 2*s*. for a twentieth part of one knight's fee in Durandeſthorp, parcel of the fee of Tutbury[5].

In 1411, William Leichfield, couſin and heir of Adomar Taverner, of Lichfield, releaſed all his right in his lands and tenements at Durandeſthorp, and at Okethorpe, Willeſley, Childcote, and Edninghall, co. Derby, to John ſon and heir of John de Finderne and his heirs[6].

In 1519, George Greſley gave to Robert Greſley the manors of Doniſthorpe and Oſkethorp (Oſgathorpe[7]), cum homagio.

By an inquiſition taken in 1523[8], it appears that Richard Vernon died ſeiſed of certain lands and tenements in Durandeſthorpe, held of the king, as of the honour of Tutbury[9].

On the diſſolution of religious houſes, the land which belonged to the priory of St. Thomas, together with the ſaid priory, were granted by the crown, in 1539, to Rowland Lee biſhop of Coventry and Lichfield; who gave them to Brian Fowler, his nephew[10].

Oct. 16, 1600, it was found that the lady Margaret Stanley died ſeiſed of certain lands in Durandeſthorp, held of the queen, as of the honour of Tutbury, by the ſervice of half a knight's fee[11].

In 1619, Thomas Howthell held in Doniſthorpe a capital meſſuage and lands in capite; and Walter Fowler, eſq. held alſo lands there in capite.

"The lord of the manor in 1630 was Mr. Woodcock, rector of the church of Gilmorton[12]."

By an inquiſition taken Nov. 13, 1632, it was found that John Dalman died June 29 then laſt paſt, ſeiſed of a meſſuage and lands in Doniſthorpe[13].

"The town ſtill moſtly belongs to the Greſleys; though John Burdett, eſq. a younger brother to ſir Robert Burdett, of Foremarke, has an eſtate and dwelling here (1712)."[14]

A chief-rent of 2*s*. for the Doniſthorpe lands of the late Philip Jervis, eſq. was paid to ſir John Danvers, bart. whoſe heir has again received it ſince 1796.

A remarkable fine ſpaw at Doniſthorpe, not far from Aſhby Woulds, is much frequented; and the water from it is often carried for medical purpoſes to a conſiderable diſtance.

The late much-regretted Hiſtorian[15] of Staffordſhire, in a letter with which he favoured me in 1792, ſays, "Having this morning walked from Seile about a mile to Doniſthorpe, a hamlet partly belonging to that pariſh, to ſee a ſalt ſpring there, I will give you ſome account of it while freſh in my mind. The counties of Leiceſter and Derby, and the pariſhes of Seile, Greſley, and Meaſham, being ſo intermixed hereabouts, it is difficult to aſcertain in which the ſpring is; but I believe it is in Leiceſterſhire. 'Tis in a ſmall meadow by the ſide of a ſtream called Hooborougb brook, which iſſues out of Barrat pool, a large mill-pond upon Aſhby Woulds, and is for a conſiderable diſtance between Doniſthorpe and Seile a boundary betwixt the two counties. This ſpring, which is of a very brackiſh flavour, has long been frequented by country people, who reſort here in great numbers every Sunday morning during the ſummer ſeaſon, and drink large doſes of this ſalutary water, for ſcorbutic and other diſorders in the blood. To make this ſpring more commodious, a large tub is placed in the middle as a reſervoir; and amidſt the flat graſs at a little diſtance below is a remarkable ring of about 12 yards diameter, the ſingular appearance of which at a time of year before the place begins to be frequented might baffle the ſkill of moſt antiquaries to find out its uſe, and the gentleman who ſhewed it me had ſeen it upwards of 25 years at different times without knowing what it meant. And ſo puzzled was I with it, that I had thoughts of ſending you a long and curious article for the Gentleman's Magazine upon fairy-rings, &c. But, upon enquiring of the farmer, Mr. Newbold (tenant to Francis Burdett, eſq. of Foremark), in whoſe land this ſpring is, he aſſured us it was made by the viſitors to this ſpring, who thus deſcribe the circle in their exerciſe after drinking the water; yet at preſent the bare track is not half the breadth of a man's foot, and has not the appearance of any ſuch marks; but I will ſatisfy myſelf more fully in the courſe of this ſeaſon."

---

[1] Willeſley Hall original. [2] Segrave Chartulary. [3] Burton, MS.

[4] Q. Hall? Richard de Aulâ de Duranteſthorp frequent in Seile originals, and particularly teſt. Nativ. of St. John Bapt. 1349. Alſo in the liſt of holders, 21 Edw. III. in p. *984. In the preceding liſts are Hug. de Aulâ, 1331, and Rog' fil' Hug' atte Halle, 1329. Hugo de Aulâ teſt' to Will' le Sauwage in p. 997. So, in p. 1000, Roger de la Sale de Durandthorp, ante Portam Latinam 6 Edw. II. (6 May, 1313.)—N. B. Sale, a reſpectable freeholder, and tenant of Doniſthorpe Hall, at this day.

[5] Rot. Aux. 20 Edw. III. [6] Clauſ. 13 Hen. IV. 33. & 8. [7] Greſley Chartulary, p. 60.

[8] This is the date of the inquiſition. But Q. whether not the ſame Richard who died 1517, as in page *986.

[9] Eſch. 15 Hen. VIII. [10] Pat. 31 Hen. VIII. m. 6. [11] Eſch. 42 Eliz. [12] Burton, MS.

[13] Inq. 8 Car. I.; Cole's Eſcheats, vol. III. (Harl. MSS. 758.) p. 143. [14] Wolley's MS Hiſtory of Derbyſhire.

[15] It has been my fate, in almoſt every period of the preſent laborious undertaking, to have cauſe to lament the loſs of able coadjutors; but not one of them has been taken off more unexpectedly, nor by me more ſincerely regretted, than the friend whoſe communication is above acknowledged. In this particular diſtrict I had looked forward with much pleaſure to his promiſed reviſal of the pariſhes of Seile, Stretton, and Swepſton, all of them in his own immediate neighbourhood. But "vain are the hopes of man." It pleaſed the Allwiſe Diſpoſer of Events to call him hence, in the prime of life, Oct. 28, 1802.—Mr. Shaw was born at or near Stone in Staffordſhire; educated at Repton ſchool; and in 1780 became a reſident member of Queen's-college, Cambridge, where he took the degree of B. A. 1784; M. A. 1787; B. D. 1796, after being fellow ſome years; became F. S. A. 1795; and in 1799 ſucceeded his father in the rectory of Hartſhorn, co. Derby. With a ſanguine, active bent to topography, Mr. Shaw poſſeſſed the advantage of a ready and accurate pencil; and to thoſe accompliſhments added a very great proficiency in muſick; and that perfect goodneſs of heart and ſingleneſs of manners which render his loſs a ſevere affliction to all his acquaintance. His warmth of friendſhip is indeed demonſtrable in whatever he wrote; of which the prefaces to his Staffordſhire, and many of his letters in Mr. Urban's Miſcellany, reporting progreſs, are ſtriking examples. His publications were, "A Tour, in 1787, from London to the Weſtern Highlands of Scotland, &c. with Deſcriptions of the principal Seats, &c." 1788, 12mo; "A Tour in the Weſt of England in 1788," 1789, 8vo. He was joint editor of "The Topographer," 4 vols. 8vo, 1789—1791; but is better known by his laſt valuable publication, "The Hiſtory and Antiquities of the County of Stafford;" vol. I. 1798; vol. II. part I. 1801. His vaſt treaſures of MSS, drawings, and engraved plates, remain; and ſome qualified perſon will, it is hoped, be found to continue his moſt valuable work. An affecting account of him was given in the Gent. Mag. vol. LXXIII. p. 11. by a very able aſſociate in his antiquarian purſuits, who ſays, "To the writer of this memoir, the loſs can never be recompenſed. An intimacy of two and twenty years, a ſimilarity of purſuits, and a thouſand aſſociations, contributed to make the ſhock inexpreſſibly afflicting to him. The leſſon too was awful. Taken away in the full vigour of his age; in the height of his enjoyments, with an eaſy fortune, a mind daily improving, with inexhauſtible materials and full leiſure for the indulgence of his favourite purſuits, with an acquaintance daily extended, and increaſing reſpect and reputation! Had I been called on but a few months before, to ſelect the perſon whoſe ſituation was moſt adapted to his wiſhes, I ſhould have named my departed friend!"

Contents of the Rydeware Chartulary.

Title: (In red, on 5th page; the preceding ones, and thoſe between it and the kalendar, being filled up with documents found ſeemingly after the body of the volume was written and the kalendar drawn up:)

> “Thomas de Rydeware, fiz & heyr Wauter de Rydeware, fit fere cete livre en le an de reigne le rei Edward fiz le bon rei Edward le ſecunde; de tus les tenemens qu' il tint en ſa mein, en Rydeware, en Scheyle, en Fridleſham, et en Ketelberſtone, e en Roſſingthone[1].”

The contents of theſe four or five leaves, preceding the kalendar, ſome of them highly curious, are to the following effect.

The grant of William de Rydewar Hamſtal (ſon and heir of Walter) to the convent of Cumbermere, of 80 acres of arable land, and 20 of paſture, in Moniahaſmedewe, in the pariſh of Hertindon, &c. paying annually 20*s.* 6*d.* on the feaſt of the Annunciation of the Bleſſed Virgin Mary; 1252.

His grant to Nicholas de Ingwardeby and Ceſily his wife of 3 virgates of land, with tofts, crofts, and appurtenances, infra villam de Wyveleſleye, and two parts of a fourth part of the mill there.

A memorandum, that Thomas, formerly lord of Boyleſton, was lord alſo of Draycot ſub Nedwode, a member of Boyleſton (though the latter is a town in Derbyſhire, near five miles diſtant, on the oppoſite ſide of the Dove); and that he held it of the earl de Ferrers by the ſervice of hunting; viz. that he ſhould find one huntſman with a horſe, and if his horſe ſhould die in the ſervice of his lord the earl, he the ſaid earl ſhould find him another horſe to ride[2]. Which Thomas left iſſue Hawiſe, his daughter and heir, whoſe iſſue by one huſband (Reg. de Greſley) was Reg. de Boyleſton, who died ſ. p.; and his next heir was Nicolas, ſon of Ralph Pecche, and brother to the laſt mentioned Reginald, by their mother Hawiſe, heireſs of both the above towns. Nicolas left iſſue Matilda Pecche[3], his daughter and heir, demandant of the town of Draycot as rightful heir. The aforeſaid Thomas had a brother called Ralph le Petit, who was his hunter, to perform the ſervice to his lord the earl, for the town of Draycote. He married a woman of the earl's chamber, named Marjoria, by whom he had a daughter called Matilda de Tichemers[4], who left a ſon called Robert de Sydenham; and this laſt left two daughters, Matilda and Joan, then tenants of the ſaid town of Draycote.

Subjoined is the king's writ to his ſon Edmund's bailiffs of Tuttebury, to do right to Matild Pecche of one meſſuage and one carucate in Draycot, which ſhe claims to hold of the ſaid Edmund by the fourth part of a knight's fee, and from which Andrew de Jarkenvill[4] and Matild his wife, and Simon de Jarkenvill and Joan his wife, deforce her. Teſte'd at Havering, Auguſt 27, 56 Henry III.

A verdict for lands in Draycote, between Walter Akard of Foſton, ſon of John, and Roger de Ridewar.

Another, between William de Ridewar, elder brother to Roger, and the ſaid Walter Akard; with a fine between the two brothers de Ridewar.

Then follows an article in old French, of which this is a tranſlation: “There was a man called Aſſer Geun, who was lord of the Netherton (le Neyerton), and held nine virgates of land of the honour of Wicchenor, and had two ſons. The elder was named Roger Geun, and the younger William Geun. Aſſer Geun their father died. Roger his elder ſon had his land in the Nethertoun. This ſame Roger went beyond ſea, to an abbey called St. Remy, and there fell ſick, and made his teſtament, and deviſed to the houſe two virgates of land at the Nethertoun, for God and for his ſoul, and died. The news came to England. William his younger brother took ſeiſin of the Nethertoun. The prior of Lappeley came and took ſeiſin of the two virgates of land in the Nethertoun by force of the deviſe made to their chief houſe. Then afterwards (or long afterwards, the word ſeems like deneapres, or deueapres), William Geun had a ſon, called William le Sage and William ſeneſcal. At this time there was a hermit and his brother dwelling in a wood called Hamſtal, and they held this wood and their manſion of the earl of Cheſter, rendering certain things, and moreover performing all the ſeignoralties (ſeynurages). Shortly after came William Geun, lord of the Netheretoun, and William le Sage his ſon, (and) gave the hermit and his brother two virgates of their land at the Nethertoun, for a “plate,” or “place,” of their wood in Hamſtal, whereon he might build and dwell. And thus came the lord of the Nethertoun to Hamſtal Ridewar. Then William Geun died, and William le Sage his ſon was his heir, and was ſeneſcal of the earl Ferrers, and a great lord; and was moved (mout), annoyed, and grieved, that the prior of Lappele had land and people dwelling in the Nethertoun among his people, and denied the prior's people paſture, and all manner of eaſements which they were entitled to in the Nethertoun for their beaſts, ſo that they cauſed the prior to know it. The prior came to William le Sage, and took un jour d'amour (dies amoris, a law phraſe, ſee N° 111); and they defended in a certain form, cum v'oiret. The prior gave his people and all the land which he had in the Netheretoun to William le Sage, ſeneſcal of the earl, and to his heirs; and abandoned the houſe of Lappele, with all the offices, to William le Sage and his heirs, that they might come with their meyne (q. many, retinue?), when it pleaſed them, on the eve of Chriſtmas, to Lappeleye, to eat, and receive all the offices of the houſe as lord, and remain there three days. William le Sage, from his chamber, to the houſe of Lappeleye, five ſhillings and four pence[5].

---

[1] An original charter of free warren in Byſhbury, co. Stafford, of this very year 2 Edward II. (in poſſeſſion of Peter Tichborne Hinckes, eſq. lord of that manor), is ornamented with exactly the ſame kind of pen-drawings as are ſcattered up and down in this Chartulary, which are not all ſo whimſical as thoſe at foot of carta N° 48, but often appropriate; for inſtance, that at the head of carta 52 (ſee p. 1002); alſo the Conqueror (as I take it) at the head of his writ, carta 102. Q. Are theſe ornaments common in original deeds; or was it merely the faſhion of 1309?

[2] With this ſervice compare that by which ſir Philip de Somervil, long afterwards, held his “Manoirs of Tatenhull and Drycotte”—Dugd. Baron. vol. II. p. 108, from an antient parchment, the Regiſtrum Cartarum ſecundi Walteri Griffith militis, belonging now, 1803, to John Turton, eſq. Alſo Plott, p. 443, and Shaw, vol. I. p. 106. The expreſſion is, that ſir P. held them “in parcenerye,” i. e. ſeemingly, in the words of his Inquiſitio in the ſame Regiſtrum, “conjunctim cum Margaretâ uxore ſuâ, de hereditate ipſius Margaretæ.” Or “parcenerye” may refer, however inaccurately uſed, to her having but a third part (as her deſcendant the ſaid ſir Walter had) of the manor of Draycote, her brother Robert de Pipe remaining lord of the reſt.

[3] This Matild Pecche, though here ſtyled by her maiden name, had been the wife ſucceſſively of the firſt Walter de Rydewar (ſon to William the ſeneſchal), and of Olyver de Eyncurt. By the laſt ſhe ſeems to have had no iſſue; but by Walter ſhe was the anceſtreſs of the ſucceeding Rydewares, to whom ſhe left, beſides Boyleſton (aliened 22 Edward I. by Roger, ſon and heir of ſir Roger de Ridewar her ſecond ſon, but regained in marriage by ſir Walter, ſon and heir of the above ſir Thomas, ſon and heir of Walter her third ſon), the above manors of Fridleſham, co. Berks, and Ketelberſton, co. Suffolk. The lands in Roſſingthone (now Roſton), co. Derby, came by Elena Fitzherbert, mother of ſir Thomas.

[4] Is not this connection of Jarkenvill and Tichemers traceable in the following deed of 12 Edw. II.? “Inter Joh'em de S'cto Mauro ex una parte et Thomam de S'cto Mauro fratrem ejus et Margaretam uxorem ejus ex altera; Joh'es dedit Thome et Margarete 53 acras terre in Feld (See Erdeſwic in Feld, corrected in Shaw's Staffordſhire, vol. I. p. 163.) nomine excambii, ſc' pro uno meſſuagio quod iidem Tho' et Marg' tenent in villa de Tychemerch juxta Thrapſton ex adquiſitione Will'mi Jarpenville.” Mr. Shaw, from Harl. MSS. 506. p. 273. Aſcelin de Sydenham too atteſts the deed N° 53 here, and another in p. 1006. b. the former in company with Herlewyn de Rande, now Raunds, near Tichmarſh and Higham Ferrars.

[5] See, in p. 1003, the writ to the prior, 47 Henry III.

On the oppoſite page backward is the following Latin, which has the appearance of one of the formal parts of a fine, the reſult of the dies amoris before mentioned; and gives more at length the terms of the agreement, which ends in the old French with the above broken and unintelligible ſentence.

"Tum partes venerunt, & concordati ſunt. Et eſt concordia talis, quod Willielmus de Ridewar cum ſe ſexto equite[1], una cum ſex equis, & ſex garcionibus, veniet ad prandium ſuum ad curiam prioris de Lappeleye vigiliâ Natalis Domini, & ibi moram facient uſque diem Sancti Johannis Evangeliſte poſt gentaculum. Ita quod prior predictus ſtatim in predictâ vigiliâ deliberabit predicto Willielmo omnes claves omnium officinorum infra prioratum. Et idem Willielmus tanquam ſeneſcallus plantabit ſuos in quolibet officino. Ita quod nullus miniſter prioris interſit niſi in coquinâ, ubi intererit unus cocus prioris una cum coco predicti Willielmi. Et idem Willielmus imperabit & miniſtrabit tanquam ſeneſcallus, tam per ſe quam per ſuos, in aulâ & in omnibus predictis officinis infra prioratum, in predicta vigiliâ Natalis Domini, & in die Natali Domini, & in die Sancti Stephani, uſque dum comederit; & ſtatim tunc poſt comeſtionem predictus Willielmus deliberabit predicto priori omnes claves predictorum officinorum quas receperit: ſet ibi comorabitur tamquam ſeneſcallus uſque in craſtinum dum gentaclaverit. Et Willielmus de Rideware ponet loco ſuo duos legales homines, & prior duos homines, ad vidend' tranſgreſſionem dicto Willielmo factam illam emend' ſi quam fecerit."

"[This thing was found in an huche[2], written on an old eſcroll; wherefore it is not credit-worthy, becauſe that it was written by two hands.]"

The prior of Rependon, Galf. de Greſeleñ, and Rad. Grim, ("qui tulerunt breve XXIIII^or de comitatu Leiceſtr', & aliud breve XXIIII^or de comitat' Derb', ad convincend' XII juratores aſſiſe nove diſſeiſ' cap'e coram juſticiar' ultimò itinerantibus apud Leyceſtr'," the prior querent, and Rog' de la Zuche impedient, "de comuniâ turbarie & bruerie ipſius prioris in Valdâ," as belonging to his freehold in Durandeſthorpñ; and the others claiming like rights for their freehold, one in Greſſeleg', the other in Swartlincote, Ethcote, and Linton,) withdrew their record, and made fine. Afterwards it was agreed that Roger de la Zuche ſhould allow the right of common to the prior, &c. "donec jus ſuum diſrationari poſſit, &c."

Agreement between the nuns of Browode and Blythebury, and William de Rydeware; the nuns to render to him all the land of Inlandes in Rideware which they had of Godefrid; he paying them on the feaſt of St. Giles yearly 2*s*. and letting them keep the meadow they before had. "Hiis teſtibus; Alfred de Canoch & Yone fratre ejus, Radulfo de Arſlega, Adam de Wrotteſlega, Rogero de Somervile, Willielmo de Bray, Radulfo de Edenyghale, & pluribus aliis[3]."

Walter prior of the church of St. James at Dudley, and his chapter, grant to Roger de Ridware, of Scheile, all their right in the church of St. Peter at Scheile, for which he had ſued them, and which they acknowledge to belong to him of right. Witneſſed by Geof. de Greſeleigh, &c. and ſealed with the priory ſeal. At the head of the deed a figure of St. Peter, or St. James, under an arch.

Mem. That a ſuit between Roger de Ridware, and the prior and convent of Dudley, about the advowſon of Sheile church, was ſettled thus: Brother Richard of Wyſtaneſtouwe, celerar of the priory, and appointed attorney for the prior and monks, quit-claimed to the ſaid Roger all right in the advowſon for 20 marks; and was to obtain him the convent's charter (which is that immediately before going), 1275.

Oky, ſon of Alexander le Broune, of Sheile, grants for 3*s*. to William lord de Rideware Hamſtall, an acre in Haſelfeld field, which he bought of Richard Bouche, in territorio of Sheile.

Thomas Rydeware, knight, releaſes to Ralph abbot of Mirevall all his right in two places of land, moor and waſte, one called the Shertwode in Little Sheyle, and the other place the Gore in Great Sheyle. Dated at Sheyle, Wedneſday after the feaſt of St. John ante Portam Latinam 6 Edw. II. Witneſſes; dom' Henr' de Appulby, Henr' de Norton, Oſbert de Stretton, Ric' fil' Herbert de Twycroſs, Rob' de Villers, Rog' de la Sale de Duranthorp, Walt' de Sheile clerico, &c.

KALENDAR: (including copies, or abſtracts, of ſeveral deeds concerning Seile church; and of ſome others.)

"En ceſt livere troveretz vos les chartres le ſeygnur de Rydewar' Hamſtal."

Carta 1. Magna carta de warrennâ; being a grant of free warren from Edward II. a. r. 6, to Thomas de Rideware and his heirs, in Ridware (Stafford), Sheile (Leic.), Friddleſham (Berks), and Cutelberſton (Suff.)

This charter is followed by a perambulation, unkalendared, in old French, which has been thus tranſlated: "The day of the Invention of the Croſs, in the year of the reign of king Edward, ſon of king Henry, the 13th, was a "purale" (quaſi "peramble" perhaps) made of certain bounds between Hamſtal and the Nethereton, by aſſent of the ſeignories (ſeignorages) of Hamſtal and of Phwychenor, by award of good and lawful people; that is to ſay, ſir Robert de Pipe, then ſeneſchal of Phwychenor, Robert Theuerey ſeneſchal le prior de Lappel', Henry de Colton, Richard le Clerk de Barton, Henry le Clerk de Alrewas, Robert le Palmer de Broml', Richard Bagot de [4]*F*ulverleye, Hervy de Ockleye, Jon de Bronteſton, Roger le fiz Walter de Ridewar, William Hamund de Rydewar, Jon Waleys de Longgedon, Hewe Frannceys, Thomas de Lynton, Roger Julian de Rydewar, Richard le Fener de Ridewar, Meſtr' Waltier le Carpenter de Rydewar Hamſtal, and Jon in the Moor, and many others. Which bounds begin at Trente at the head of Luttelmedewe, and extend by the courſe of the water of Blythe unto Bullockeſput, and from Bullockeſput through the Moore, to the gate of Robert de Couleye, and from that gate through the Merches to the Weſtlydyate of Petite Rydewar, and from Weſtlydyate, by a bound which extends unto the water of Trent, between the land of Petite Rydewar and the Nethereton.

2. Carta de Mercato; in which king Edward II. grants to Thomas de Ridware a weekly market in Sheile, and a fair on St. Margaret's day. See p. 983. At the head of this charter, the king on his throne, with a crown, globe, and ſceptre, and two lions under his feet. Under it is this memorandum: "Primum mercatum tent' apud Sheile, 10° . . . . . 1311."

3. Carta originalis de Sheile. Printed in p. 981.

4. Carta de perquiſ' 8 virgatarum in Duranthorp. Bertram ſon of William de Caldona gives to William de Ridware 8 virgates in Durandeſthorp, to be held by the ſervice of twelve arrows yearly[5].

5. Carta de terrâ que fuit Radi Camerar' de Rereſby[6] in Sheile. Dominus Ralph Chamberlain, of Rereſby, ſells to William de Rideware-Hamſtal lands which he bought of Remigius de Arundel, in Sheile.

6. Carta de terrâ que fuit Radi filii Enteyr. [In the body of the carta "fil' Goymer." Enteyr ſeems an agnomen.]

G. Quieta-clamatio de eadem.

7. Carta Remigii de Arundel.

G. 8. —— Gilberti de Etewell capellani.

---

[1] "Willielmus cum ſe ſexto equite."—Q. meaning (curious ſtructure of language!) "with 6 horſemen, including himſelf, and 6 other led horſes, with their grooms?"

[2] Hutch, or binn. Acroſs this Latin article lines are drawn by way of cancelling it.

[3] Compare the Blitheburie grant in Mon. Angl. vol. I. p. 468. The witneſs Adam de Wrotteſley, the donation in Hinier-ſiche, nearly a-kin to "pratum" here, "ſiche" being in daily uſe for a low moory ſtripe of ground alongſide a ſmall water-courſe or winter channel (Is not "ſedge" the ſame word in modern ſpelling?); both grants being for the ſouls of father and anceſtors, are ſtrong preſumptions that the ſame William de R. was grantor or confirmor in both. See too the ſame Ad' de Wroteſle, A. de Canoc, and (probably) Godeffrid, hereafter in ca. 82, and its note.

[4] The initial, after the moſt attentive compariſon, ſeeming an F. Where the place, Fulverleye?

[5] See p. 981. a. 988. a.

[6] Dereſby is mis-written in the Chartulary for "*R*eriſbi;" and in carta 8 alſo, of which latter Mr. Greſley has the original; as he has of all thoſe to which G is prefixed.

9. Carta Galfridi filii Rob' le Meſſer de 1 virgatâ in Sheile.

10. —— de terrâ quondam Will' filii Rog' [de Strettone] de 4ª parte unius virgate, &c.

11. Quieta-clamatio [de ſervitiis Galfridi Salvagii, St. de Bello Campo, & aliorum.] Printed in p. 981-2.

11. Carta W. filii Rogeri de quiet' clam' boſci de Sheile.

12. Carta quietclam' Agnetis filie Rad' de omnibus tenementis in Sheile.

13. —— Rog' le Calf de unâ acrâ terre.

14. —— Willi filii Radi de Keneſtam [in the deed Kineſtan] de terris in Burgo.

G. 15. Carta Rog' de Strettone & Agnetis ux' ſue de unâ virgatâ terre in Sheile. [Means Will' fil' Rog' being merely an error in title.] Mr. Greſley's autograph of this deed (a confirmation to Ralph Buche) has a large ſeal, bearing a tiger-like animal paſſant, queue-noueé, circumſcribed, SIGILLVM WILL'I FIL'I ROGERI DE STRETONIÆ.

G. 16. —— Ric' Bouche de Sheyle, de terris cum meſſuag' & aliis pertin' in ead' villâ & ext'.

17. Carta Johnis Bouche de Sheile.

18. —— Willi Bouche de 3 dimid' acr' terre in Sheile.

G. 19. Carta Radi filii Radi de Sheile de communiâ in boſco.

20. Carta Willi perſone de Sheyle, Willo de Rydewar, de parte dominici pomerii in Sheyle, & de communiâ in boſco. Teſtibus; Willo de Charnell, Baldwyn de Charnel, & aliis.

G. 21. "Wills fil' Henrici fil' perſone de Sheyl, Willo fil' Walteri de Rydewar, jus in meſuag' in Scheyl, ſicut Henricus pater Willielmi tenuit die quo obiit. Teſtibus; Roberto de Mauveyſyn Rydewar, Radulpho de la Bache, Roberto Selveyn, Rogero de Nortone, Willielmo de Rolveſtone, Willielmo de Stiniſton" (or Stiviſton, q.?[1] a very frequent witneſs), "Petro de Duronſthorp, Willielmo de Ginile, Radulpho Wichard de Scheyle, Henr' fil' le Clerc."

22. Carta Willi filii Henr' clerici de Sheile, de communiâ in boſco.

23. —— Reginaldi de Wyveleſle de 2 virgatis terre et dimidiâ.

24. —— Eadythe filie Will' de Wyveleſle de parte ſuâ in molendino, & 3 virgatis terre.

25. —— Agnetis filie Radi de unâ virgatâ terre in Sheile.

26. —— Will' filii Galfr' de Sheile de 3 acris terre.

27. —— Radi ad boſcum de Seyle de communiâ.

28. —— Will' Aleyn de communiâ in boſco de Sheile.

29. "Petrus de Durandeſthorp, &c. tenemur warantizare Willielmo fil' Brun terram, &c. que Alic' fil' Juliane de Wyle dedit pro homag' & ſervic' mihi & hered' faciendo. Teſtibus de Linacr'; Radulpho Boude, Adâ fil' ſuo, Joh' de Linacr', Rob' fil' ſuo, Hugon' Nonemon, Rob' fil' ſuo, Symone clerico."

30. Carta Radi Coppe de ſervitio unius virgatæ terre.

31. "Robertus Haſting de Scheyl, Willielmo domino de Rydewar-Hamſtal, totam terram in Magnâ Scheyl. Teſtibus; domino Rob' de Poynton, Roberto Mauveyſyn, Ricardo Bagat, Rogero de Norton, Roberto Selveyn, Petro de Durandeſthorp, &c."

32. Carta Rici de Duranthorp de ſervicio Radulphi ad Nemus.

G. 33. Carta Will' filii Philippi Ruffi de communiâ in boſco de Sheyle. A quit-claim, in conſideration whereof William lord of Rydeware-Hamſtal grants that he will not make diſtreſs in Scheyle "pro uno eſpervario ſibi debito in Appelby."

34. Carta Henrici de Gardino. An agreement to pay a rent to William lord of Rydeware-Hamſtal, who grants (as in No. 33.) "pro niſo ſibi debito in Appelby de firmâ."

35. "Will's prior de Greſſele Will'o filio Walteri de Rydware, meſſuagium, cum edificiis, orto, & gardino, &c. Teſtibus; Rob' Mauveyſyn de Rydewar, Rob' Selveyn, Rogero de Nortone, Willielmo de Rolviſton, Willielmo de Stininton, Petro de Durandthorp, Willielmo de Ginel, Rad' Wichard, Henr' fil' le Clerc."

36. Carta Walt' de Rydeware de 1 virgatâ terre.

37. "Galfr' de Greſel', Rogero de Rydeware, Walterum fil' Pagani de Lintone, cum totâ ſequelâ."

38. Concordia inter dom' Will' de Rydewar & Rad' ad boſcum de Sheyle, 47 Hen. III.

39. Carta Pelag' quondam ux' Willi le Haſtyng.

G. 40. Conventio inter priorem de Wenlock & Willielmum clericum de eccleſiâ de Sheile[2].

"Univerſis ſancte matris eccleſie filiis A. Dei gratiâ Eveſhamenſis & L. eadem gratiâ Conventrienſis prior, illam que eſt in Domino ſalutem. Ad univerſitatis notitiam volumus pervenire controverſiam que vertebatur inter monachos de Wenlac & Willielmum clericum, ſuper eccleſiâ beati Petri de Scheyle, nobis à domino papâ delegatam, hujuſmodi amicabili compoſitione eſſe ſopitam; videlicet, quod prefatus Willielmus prenominatam eccleſiam de Scheyl liberè & quietè in perpetuum poſſidebit, ſolvendo eccleſie beate Milburge de Wenlac octo ſolidos & quatuor denarios annuatim, nomine penſionis, iiiis. & iid. die Circumciſionis, & quatuor ſolidos & duos denarios in Octabis Sci Johannis Baptiſte; nec aliquid amplius ab eo exigere preſument. Preterea predicti monachi jam ſepedictum clericum ut ſuum contra omnes in omnibus warantizabunt & manutenebunt. Et, ut hec tranſactio rata habeatur & firma, ſcripto noſtro confirmavimus, & ſigillorum noſtrorum appoſitione communivimus. Hiis teſtibus; Simone abbate de Perſuor, magiſtro Hugone de Coleham, Ricardo de Ambeſleg', magiſtro Ernaldo de Bukingham, Willielmo Frumentino, Willielmo clerico de Uttoc . . . .[3] [varied to Utokeſhal, and Vatekeſhale,] Matheo clerico, Luciano de Scheyle, Rogero de Strettone, Roberto de Scheyl, & multis aliis."

Item inter predictum priorem et Rad' de Sceyle de eccleſia de Sceyle. A confirmation of the above award [un-kalendared]:

"Omnibus ſancte eccleſie filiis tam preſentibus quam futuris, H. humilis prior de Wenlac & totus ejuſdem loci conventus ſalutem. Noverint univerſi ad quos preſentis ſcripti recitatio pervenerit, quod cauſa que vertebatur inter nos & Radm de Scheyle & Willielmum clericum, ſuper eccleſiâ beati Petri de Scheyle, ſub hâc formâ coram judicibus ſuper hâc cauſâ terminandâ à domino papâ delegatis, A. videlicet abbate Eveſhamenſ', & L. priore Conventrienſ', conquievit. Ex precepto ſiquidem domini pape vocatus in cauſam Radus de Scheyle à predictis judicibus, advocationem donationis memorate eccleſie de Scheyle, quam nobis longe ante fecerat, & nobis cartâ ſuâ confirmaverat, veritati ſatisfaciens, in preſentiâ predictorum judicum recognovit, & nobis reſignavit; redd' ſcil' abſolutè, & abſque omni retentione, donationem jam dicte eccleſie in manu judicis, & judex in manu noſtrâ. Inſtituti itaque hâc ordine in predictâ eccleſiâ prenominatum Willm ut perſonam in perpetuum in eâ liberè & quietè remanere concedimus; & eam illi hâc cartâ noſtrâ confirmamus; hac interveniente tranſactione, ſcilicet, quod ipſe Wills reddet nobis annuatim,

---

[1] Stiniſton (in ca. 35. and others, Stininton) is probably the word; meaning a Derbyſhire townſhip, adjoining or nearly ſo to Swyneſen (now Sinfin), and that again to Swarkeſton, in which two latter places the family of the laſt preceding witneſs, Rolveſton, were very long ſeated. Among the "Homines" of Robert comes junior de Feraris, in the Tutbury charter, Monaſt. Ang. vol. I. p. 355, Willielmus de Rolveſton gives "duas partes decimæ dominii ſui de Swyneſen." Ulfius the like from his dominium "de Tuiford & de Steineſton." And in Swarkeſton chancel is an altar-tomb, with remains of an inſcription importing that John Roiliſton eſquier, lord of Swerkiſton, died 3 Dec. 1482, and Sicill his wife 23 Dec. 1475. Two Williams de Rolviſton, ſenior and junior, (one of them probably the witneſs here in ca. 21. and 35.) atteſt the quit-claim of Sheile church, 1275, the heads of which are printed in p. 1000.

[2] Between 1175 and 1179.—Adam was prior of Eveſham 1161—1191; Lawrence was prior of Coventry 1149—1179; and Symon abbot of Perſhore 1175—1198.

[3] The original at Mr. Greſley's ſeems "Uttocchaſh." In an original contemporary deed of William earl Ferrars, written "U-to-cha-ſhare." Yet a teſtis to the ſame deed is written "Will' clerico de Hu-te-cha-ſhel."

nomine penſionis, octo ſolidos & quatuor denarios, dimid' in Circumciſione, & dimid' in Octabis Sc̃i Johannis Baptiſte; nec aliquid amplius ab eo exigemus; ſed eum ut clericum noſtrum in omnibus & contra omnes warantizabimus pro poſſe noſtro & manutenebimus, nec ob aliquam cauſam que preceſſerit hanc tranſactionem ei gravamen generari ab aliquô pro poſſe noſtro permittemus. Hiis teſtibus; Alano de Buldewâs, &c. Willo fil' Rogeri, &c. Alano filio Alani, Robto de Scheyl, Willo Burnel, Walto venerabili abbate de Lileſul, Henrico canonico ejus."

41. Carta prioris de Dudeleg' de eccleſia de Sceyl. The prior and convent of Dudley (ſubordinate to Wenlok), "quia quidam de populo, nomine Tirricus, ex adverſo veniens, ſeſe in eccleſiam de Scheyle abſque preſentatione & voluntate noſtrâ intruſit," as they had once a claim to the patronage, notified, in 1275, that the ſaid Tyrricus had no entrance by their means or conſent ("in contravention of their releaſe to Roger de Rideware" the inſtrument ſeems to have gone on; but ſome lines have been left out in the copy).

42. Carta Radulphi de Sheyle de dono eccleſie. Ralph de Scheyle's gift of the church to St. Mildeburg, and St. James de Dudeley; "ſalva tenuta perſone que (i. e. perſona) modo tenet & dicitur Rogerius:" witneſſed by Huttrdus prior, Baldewynus ſcriptor, &c.

G. 43. Concordia inter Will' perſonam eccleſie de Sheile & Will' filii Radulphi de Meyſham.

"R. abbas de Gereldone, & P. abbas Sancte Marie de Prato Legre[1], & magiſter A. de Wilna, univ' sc̃e matris eccleſie filiis, &c. Cauſam inter Willielmum perſonam eccleſie de Scheyle, & Will' fil' Radi de Meiſam, & Lucianum fil' Roberti Diſert, nobis à domino papâ commiſſam, conquieviſſe ſub hâc formâ." The parſon claimed in their wood of Uverſcheyl huſbote and haybote, as belonging to his church; in lieu of which they each granted him and his ſucceſſors "duas quadrigatas lignorum ad ardendum," to be taken yearly at Chriſtmas. Witneſs, Robert preſbyter of Suopeſton, Ric' de Haſtinges, clerk, Will' filio Petr' chaplain of Scheyl, William clerk of Utokeſhal, William de Charneles, Rob' de Bromcote, Will' fil' Walkel' de Stretton and Walt' his ſon, Warin de Snipeſtun, Will' de Wyveleſley.

44. William de Rideware grants and confirms to the church of Sheyle, and Robert its rector, tithe of all his wood in the pariſh cum aliquid de boſco vendidero, with houſbote and haybote; all ſuits being ſet at reſt before the dean of Leyceſtre and official of the ſame place, 1247. Witneſs, Henry Mauveyſin, Alexander Blundus canon of Lichfield, Robert parſon of Ridware Hamſtal, William parſon of Cliffton, William parſon of Rydeware Mauveyſyn, Robert Peſcher chaplain, &c.

45. Ralph de Scheyl confirms his gift of the advowſon to Wenlok, being compelled by the pope, in preſence of abbot Adam before-mentioned; Henry the prior permitting William clericus to remain in the church, for an annual penſion of 8*s*. 4*d*.

46. W. prior of Sondwall, and T. chaplain, canon of Wolvrenehampton, were ordered by S. archbiſhop of Canterbury[2], and cardinal, to enquire into an annual penſion which the monks of Dudley claimed of long time from the church of Scheyle, which, by order of the biſhop of Lincoln, Robert the rector had withheld. The prior of Dudley and Robert's proctor William the chaplain appeared in the church of Wodinſbr'. The proctor confeſſed the rector's fault, and the penſion was decreed to be reſtored.

47. Carta prioris de Duddeleg', de quietâ clamatione eccleſie de Sheile. It is a fine, t. Hil. 4 Edw. I. 1275, in the king's court at Weſtminſter. The prior of Dudley acknowledged the right of preſentation to the church of Churche Scheyle to be in Roger ſon of Walter de Ridware.

48. Concordia apud Wygorn', die Mercurii prox' poſt Aſſumpt. 6 Joh. inter Agnetam filiam Radulphi de Scheyl, & Will' de Rydewar, de terris in Scheyl; printed in p. 981.

Conventio (un-kalendared) in comitatu Leyc', 8. Ric. I. printed alſo in p. 981.

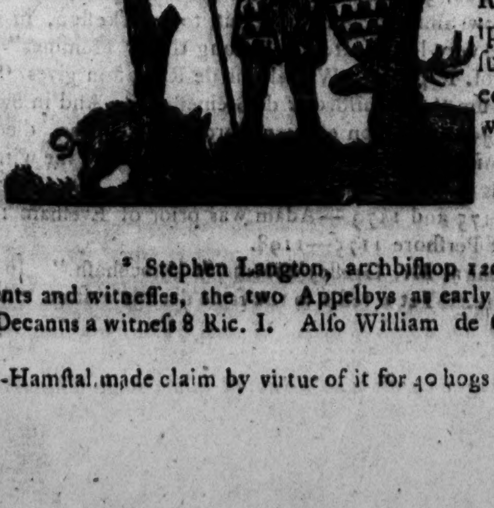
(At the bottom of this page a hare carrying a hound on a battle-axe; another hare blowing a horn and holding a mace; a fox carrying a cock on a lance and leading a brace of greyhounds; a bear riding a band-dog; and a hare carrying a bow and arrow.)

49. Robert de Hocthorp, 1273, 1 Edw. I. abbot of Miravalle, having diſputes with William de Rideware, William parſon of Ov'tone and Henry Oweyn were appointed arbitrators, to proceed on the oath of the parties and of 12 jurors of Scheyle; who awarded that 10 buttæ, called Stocwallebuttes, which the ſaid abbot had ploughed, ſhould be for ever paſture; the then crops being aſſigned for the repairs of the church of Scheyle, and the light of the Bleſſed Virgin Mary. At Stocwallſiche the water ſhould run as it did antiently: that the abbot had made no purpreſture at Wyteleyes, "nec marlerium in viâ verſus boſcum levâſſe, nec foragium ad nocumentum alicujus, nec ſpinas inter ſelliones dictorum abbatis & Willielmi creſcentes exſtirpando pro parte dimidiâ, nec etiam foſſando apud Waterfalleheyes," done any damage to the ſaid William, &c. &c.

50. Agreement between William parſon of Scheyl and Lucian ſon of Oſbert de Scheyl, touching the reſidence of a chaplain at Little Scheyl: That Lucian recognizes all the antient right of the church of Scheyle in Little Scheyl, for the celebration of maſs three days in the week at Little Scheyl; and the ſaid William, at the petition of his friends, grants, for the ſupport of a reſident chaplain, all that belongs to the ſaid antient right, and moreover all the tithe of Lucian's mill and pool, and volatar' (I ſuppoſe flights from his dovecote), and all the oblations in money offered by Lucian and his wife with their own hands to the chaplain in celebrating maſs in the chapel; ſaving all other rights of the mother church, and W. parſon thereof, ariſing in tithes, oblations, and obventions. But, as this would not be ſufficient for the honeſt maintenance of the chaplain and his clerk, the ſaid Lucian gives for that purpoſe to the ſaid parſon William the virgate he formerly held, with all liberties in and out of the town, and 2*s*. a year collected from his land, and from the men of the ſaid town, as they uſe to collect other 2*s*. belonging to the aforeſaid antient right. This agreement is for the life of theſe two; ſo that, on the death of either, each ſide ſhall receive what was its own before this agreement, to wit, the mother church its old right, without finding a reſident chaplain, and Lucian or his heir the ſaid land on which the preſbiter reſided, and be quit of the payment of the ſaid 2*s*. Witneſs, Roger official of Leyceſter, Hugo dean of Leyceſter, Hugh dean of Twicros, Rob' de Suopeſton, Magiſtro Anton', Will'o de Charneles, Radulpho de Meyſham, Rob'to de Appelby, Will'o de Utokeſh', Matheo de Appelby[3].

51. Carta Johannis Oky de communiâ in boſco de Sheile, 2 Edw. II.

52. Carta de paſturâ in Nedwode[4].



"Omnibus hoc preſens ſcript' viſuris vel audituris, Willielmus de Ferariis, com' Derb', ſalutem. Noverit univerſitas veſtra me conceſſiſſe, pro me & heredibus meis, Willielmo filio Walteri de Rydewar, quod ipſe & heredes ſui, & homines eorum de Rydewar, habeant in perpetuum communiam

---

[1] P. abbot of Leiceſter 1186—1205. See vol. I. p. 275.

[2] Stephen Langton, archbiſhop 1207-1228.

[3] See, in the firſt deed in p. 980, ſo curious both for its contents and witneſſes, the two Appelbys as early as the firſt Rad' de Seile's time; and in the laſt deed but one, ſame page, Hugo Decanus a witneſs 8 Ric. I. Alſo William de Charneles, ſame 8th year, p. 981.

[4] Introduced by a Memorand. that Thomas lord of Rydeware-Hamſtal made claim by virtue of it for 40 hogs quit of pannage, in the time of Thomas earl of Lancaſter.

paſture in herbagio in foreſtâ de Nedwode per has metas; ſcilicet à partibus dicte foreſte verſus Rydewar' uſque in Swerburn, & ſic de Swerburn uſque Blakeputtes-forde, & ſic ab inde per terram que fuit Bartholomei de Audewyncle[1] uſque ad paliciam parci de Rughel (Rugheley), cum omnibus dominicis averiis ſuis, exceptis porcis & capris, cùm ſufficienti introitu & exitu ad eandem paſturam. Conceſſi etiam eidem Willielmo & heredibus ſuis quietanciam pannagii ad quadraginta porcos infra eaſdem metas, cum eorum procurſu, ſine occaſione; ita ſcilicet quod liceat mihi & heredibus meis aſſartare & commodum noſtrum facere pro voluntate noſtrâ infra predictas metas, ſine aliquâ perturbatione, &c. predicti Willielmi & hominum ſuorum, &c. Dum tamen ſatisfaciemus predicto Willielmo & ſuis, ut predictum eſt, ad valentiam tante paſture ultra metas predictas in foreſtâ predictâ prout propinquiùs & magis ad ayſiamentum predicti Willielmi, &c. poterit provideri. Salvo tamen mihi & heredibus meis uno manſo infra predictas metas competenti, ubi edificium noſtrum pro voluntate noſtrâ poterimus edificare extra clauſum parci noſtri. Et ſciendum eſt, quod predictus Willielmus & heredes ſui facient & ſuſtinebunt paliciam vel racionabilem hayam parci mei de Rughel, ad feras beſtias retinendas, per has metas; ſcilicet, de Wetenetſtalles uſque ad ductum qui venit de vivario de Rughel, per ſepties viginti & octo perticatas. Præterea conceſſi & quietclamavi, &c. eidem Willielmo & heredibus ſuis totum jus, &c. in totâ illâ placiâ terre & boſci que vocatur Ayſemor, extra parcum noſtrum de Rughel, unde perambulatio fieri debeat per breve domini regis, inter ipſum Willielmum & me; ſcilicet, de Thevenetherd uſque le Rededych. Pro predictis autem communiâ paſture, quietanciâ pannagii, & quietâ clamacione, predictus Willielmus de Rydewar & heredes ſui reddent mihi & heredibus meis per annum viginti ſolidos ſterlingor' ad duos, &c. pro omnibus; ita tamen quod nec predictus Willielmus nec heredes ſui, neque homines eorum, infra manerium de Joxale, ſeu infra foreſtam de Nedwod, aliquid [juris] vel clamii plus habere vel exigere poterunt in aliquibus aliis communiis, libertatibus, vel ayſiamentis, quam quod tenor iſtius ſcripti perportat; omnibus aſſartis, purpreſturis, clauſis, ante diem iſtius conceſſionis factis, in illo ſtatu quo eo tempore fuerunt remanentibus ſine aliquâ contradictione, &c. Teſtibus; domino Matheo de Haverſeoghe, Hugone de Mednyl, Thomâ de Edneſover, Radulpho de Grendene, Nicholao Meverel, Pagano de Sancto Philberto, Nigello de Langeford, Petro de Bakpuz, Roberto de Piru, Ricardo de Mortuomari, Roberto de M'cintone, Roberto de Strettone, Radulpho de la Bache, & aliis. Apud Tuttebur', in Sept. Paſche, Hen' fil' Joh' 37."

53. "Sciant tam preſentes quam futuri, quod ego Willielmus de Ferar' com' Derbeye conceſſi & hâc meâ cartâ confirmavi Willielmo de Rydewar vivaria ſua de Rydewar in Haliwelle ſiche, habenda & tenenda ſicut carte patris mei comitis Willielmi quas de illo habet teſtantur. Inſuper conceſſi eid' Willielmo de Rydewar ut ipſe ſuperius vivarium majus faciat & emendet quantum poterit. Hiis teſtibus; Herlewyno de Rande, Rob' de Ferar', Henr' de Ferariis, Johanne de Roſâ, Aſcelino de Sydenh', Willielmo de Stantone, Gaufr' Hanſelyn, Hugone de Melbur', Roberto Principe, Hug' de Morl' (Morley,) & pluribus aliis."

54. "Johannes filius Herberti, Willielmo de Rydewar, herdewycum meum de Crudekote in Peco cum pertinent'. Teſtibus; Rob' fil' Walkl', Jordano de Toke, Hug' de Acur', Willielmo de Stanton, Willielmo Malveyſyn, Hug' de Melbur', Johanne Capellano, Rob' de Alveleg', Nigell' de Preſtevud', Thom' de Edeneſhovr', Hamone clerico."

55. Carta Willielmi de Ferrariis, de predicto tenemento de Croudecote.

56. —— Matilde Peche [to her ſon Roger de Ridware] de dono de Boyleſton.

57. —— Will' de Ferrariis de manerio de Boyleſton, 38 Henry III.

The following writ relates to the article in p. 1000. a.

"Henr' Dei gratiâ rex Anglie, dominus Hibernie, & dux Aquitanie, priori de Lappele ſalutem. Precipimus tibi quod ſine dilatione plenum rectum ten' Willielmo de Rydewar de duobus meſſuagiis, & 22 acris terre cum pertin', in Hamſtal Rydewar, que clam' tener' de te per liberum ſervicium triceſime partis[2] quinque ſolidorum & quatuor denariorum per annum pro omni ſervicio; unde Henr' de la Mor, unum meſſuag' & treſdecim acras, & Robertus le Rus unum meſſuag' & novem acras terre ei deforc'. Et niſi feceris cuſtos pacis in com' Stapford faciet, ne amplius inde clam' aud' pro defectu recti. T. me ipſo apud Weſtm', XVII die Oct', anno regni noſtri XLVII."

58. Carta Will' de Ferrariis de le Rutindeclyff.

59. "Ricardus[3] Conventr' epiſcopus, Willielmo de Rydewar militi, ſoppam Briani in Lichefeld, quam Walterus predeceſſor noſter dedit, tenend' ſequendo ſingulis annis curiam noſtram tribus vicibus ad placita noſtra tenenda & curiam noſtram ad forciand' quando à ballivis, &c. pro omni ſervicio & auxilio. Concedimus in incrementum burgagium Criſterd. Teſtibus; Rogero archid' Salop', Haymo Lichefeldenſis eccleſie decano, Willielmo de Leiâ, Magiſtro Terri, Nigello Capellano, Rob' fil' Galf', Elia fratre ejus, Galfr' Pecche, Roberto de Ondeſacre, Rob' de Thomenormâ, Waltero Camerario, Gilberto Butellar'."

60. Carta Gauf' de Canceys de terr' in Bradeburne.

61. —— Gauf' de Canceys de ſervic' Gauf' de Beck[4].

(At the back.) Carta Rog' fil' Walt' de Rideware de terr' in Hertingdon. Not numbered.

62. Confirmatio Willielmi de Ferrariis de le Wodehous.

63. Carta Willielmi de Ferrariis de aſſart' pertin' ad le Wodehous.

"64. Wills de Ferar' com' Derbye Willielmo de Rydewar, quinque acras in Hertindone, ſuper fannam ſidam ſupra Crankeſdone[5]. Teſtibus; Rob' de Ferar' fratre comitis, Willielmo Malveyſyn, Herberto de Merl', Hug' de Meleburn', Rob' de Acour', Johanne Capellano, Nigell' de Preſtevude, Thom' de Edneſour."

65. "Willielmus de Ferr' com' Derbey Rogero de Rydewar, totam terram que vocatur Boſcum Calumpniatum. Preterea 60 acras de aſſarto in foreſtâ de Nedwod ex utraque parte de Holegrff ſuper Balke juxta viam verſus Maydinleg'. Teſtibus; Henr' de Ferr', Henr' fil' Walkel', Jordano de Toke, Rob' fil' Walkel', Herberto de Murle, Galf' Hanſelyn, Willielmo Mauveyſyn, Willielmo de Stanton, Johanne capellano comitis, Galf' clerico de Lichifeld."

---

[1] "Audewyncle," Aldwinkle, co. Northamp. It ſeems, by this and other local names, as if the earls de Ferrars had transferred many of their vaſſals from the vicinity of their lordſhip of Higham-Ferrars to the confines of their barony-ſeat of Tutbury. See the names Tichmers and Rande, in p. 999, and its note 4.

[2] "Triceſime partis," probably an interpolation. This identical ſum of 5*s.* 4*d.* ſeems to ſhew, that the broken concluding ſentence of the obſcure detail in the latter part of p. 999-1000, meant in effect to deſcribe an agreement to pay the prior a rent for lands held; and on the whole of this writ we learn that, notwithſtanding the major-domo parade which was to take place at the priory, and though a preceding ſentence tells us the prior gave even all his land in the Nethertoun to William le Sage, yet William's grandſon in 1263 profeſſedly held of the prior, and that in (ſome or other part of) Hamſtal Rydewar.

[3] R. Peche, biſhop, 1162—1182.

[4] Grants to William de Rydeware, with Bec's aſſent, the latter's ſervices "de tenementis in Hultone & in Chaleford, faciendo mihi de Hulton' nonam partem ſervicii unius militis, & de Chaliford forinſecum ſervicium quod inde pertinet ad denam." In the oft-quoted Tutbury charter, Mon. Ang. vol. I, p. 355, Ernulf de Bec gives "duas partes decimæ dominii ſui de Hilton & de Sumerdeſton." Hilton, co. Derby, lies among a number of places named in that charter. Chaleford has not been found. For dena, a portion of land, eſpecially woodland, ſee Spelman.

[5] Q. the meaning of "fannam (or faunam) ſidam." William's grandſon Roger de Rydewar re-grants, by the above deed following carta 61, in theſe words: "quinque acras terre, illas ſcilicet quas Willielmus de Ferar' quondam comes Derbeye dedit Rogero de Rydewar avunculo meo [ſeems an error] inter Cronkeſdon & tunc temporis faunam ſidam in manerio de Hertingdon."

66. [Counter-part to N° 69; by the grantee Adam to dominus Rogerus.]

67. "Radulphus de Novâ villâ, domino meo Rogero de Rydewar, 22 acras in Boſco Calumpniato quas tenui de predicto domino, ſcil' 12 acras quas Edwynus Alvad tenuit, & 10 quas Rob' Carbonarius tenuit. Nullum clamorem habebimus in predictâ, nec in tenentibus illam terram predictam. Pro hâc autem dedit 10 ſolid'. Teſtibus; Galf' de Greſele tunc ſeneſcall' comitis de Ferar', Galf' Selveyn, Galf' de Bec, Rob' de Beufey, Willielmo fil' Herberti, Radulpho de Buſchervil, Rob' de Rydewar, Adâ de Rydewar."

68. "Radulphus de Burgo—me teneri Willielmo de Rydewar in 2 ſolidis annuis, pro toto jure & clamio in homag' & ſervic' hered' Ade de Rydewar, de toto tenemento quod de ipſo tenere debuerat in Boſcho Calumpniato, pro quibus homag' meum dicto Willielmo feci. Teſtibus; dominis Petro de Tok, Rob' de Herthul, Henr' Oweyn, Willielmo de Boſco Calumpniato, Willielmo fil' ſuo, Willielmo Coco."

69. Convencio inter Rog' de Rydeware & Adam fil' Will' de Boſco Calumpn'. "Rogerus de Rydewar, Ade fil' Willielmi, totam terram de Boſco Calumpniato quam habuit de dono Willielmi comit' Derbeye, reddendo 42 ſolidos. Teſtibus; Galf' de Bec, Roberto de Rydewar, Ad' de Edneſowr, Galf' fil' Galf' de Greſele, Ricardo de Lee, Willielmo de Eſſeby, Rogero de Norton, Waltero Perdu, Radulpho de Nevill."

70. "Rad' de Novâ villâ, Rogero de Rydeware, totam terram quam de eo tenui in Boſco Calumpniato. Pro hâc autem dedit 20 ſolidos. Teſtibus; Galf' de Greſel', Galf' de Bec, Roberto de Kanſcy, Roberto Selveyn," and the four laſt teſtes to N° 67.

71. "Miiiſent' filia Willielmi Brid, Rogero de Rydewar, 20 acras in villâ Boſci Calumpniati. Teſtibus; domino Galf' Selveyn, domino Rob' de Tatunhull, Roberto de Rydewar, Radulpho de Wyhtmar, Roberto Meverel, Rob' le Fletcher, Ad' Coppe, Rob' Coppe, Radulpho le Ingler, Radulpho de Nevill."

72. "Robertus de Staphord omnibus hominibus ſuis & amicis necnon & fidelibus ſalut'. Notifico vobis me dediſſe Willielmo de Rydewar feud' meum de Rydewar pro ſuo ſervic' in feodo & hereditate. Hiis teſtibus; Radulphus fil' Bryen, Ulferus de Copehal', Willielmus filius ejus, Ricard' de Celle, Rob'tus filius Herberti, Hug' Mareſcallus, Joh' conſtable, Ricardus de Strepton', Wluriz camerarius, pluresque alii ſui homines qui hic non memorantur."

73. "Robertus de Stapfordiâ omnibus hominibus ſuis Anglicis & Gallicis ſalutem. Sciat' me fuiſſe int' W. de Tanet & W. de Rydewar, quando dedit terram de Rydewar ei cum fil' ſua in feod' & in hereditate ſibi & ſuis hereditatibus ſervicio faciente ſcilicet quartam partem militis, & concedo & inde teſtis ſum, & Julianus filius ſuus, & W. Malus clericus, & Edricus preſbit', & Walt' fr' W. & Hugo de Maneſton, & Bernard dapifer', & W. Croc, & Godefrey Bras de Serdun, Nicholaus, Robertus Colf, & Edwynus prefectus, & Robertus de Rydewar conceſſit, & Edwynus ſuus filius, & teſtes ſunt."

74. "Robertus de Stapford omnibus hominibus ſuis & amicis Francis & Anglicis ſalutem. Singnificetur vobis quod Robertus Cappe & Symon frater ſuus poſt-genitus ſponte ſuâ venerunt in curiam meam, & ibi ante me & ante curiam quietum clamaverunt Willielmo de Rydewar & heredibus ſuis calumpniam quam habuerunt ſuper Rydewar de eis & heredibus eorum & hoc fide ſuâ confirmaverunt; & propter prenominatam calumpniam predictus Willielmus dedit predicto Roberto unam marcam argenti, & predicto Symoni dimidiam marcam argenti; & Willielmus [filius] & heres predicti Willielmi dedit predicto Roberto quemdam runcinum ſorum[1], cum ſellâ & freno, & cum cappâ ſuâ troſſatâ; & predicto Symoni dedit pallium ſuum & tunicam ſuam; & hoc totum propter ſupradictam calumpniam ſibi & heredibus ſuis de eis & heredibus amborum; & hoc conceſſu meo & Avicie uxoris mee & Roberti filii mei & hered' meor'. Et inde teſtis ſum ego Robertus de Stapford, & Avicia uxor mea, & Robertus filius meus, & Walterus de Sumervill, & Petr' de Brimigham, Herveus de Strettona, Thom' filius Ricardi, Herveus Bagot, & Herveus & Rogerus filii ſui, Willielmus Bagot, Robertus Bagot, Willielmus & Ricardus filii Johannis Bagot, Robertus de Blor', Godefrid Bras, Helyas de Copehale, Geffray de Weſtenays, Holgot filius Wyd, Willielmus filius Radulphi, Robertus de Standone, Robertus filius Alani Horn de Nortune, Willielmus & Robertus filii Willielmi de Waſtenays, Robertus filius Haymoni, Rogerus de Hamton', Hug' de Rydewar & Rogerus fil' ſuus, Robertus de Sallowe; & T. tota curia Roberti de Staffordiâ."

75. Carta Hugonis filii Joh' Cote de terrâ in Parvâ Rydewar.

76. —— Will' Brun de Linacre de terris in feodo de Parvâ Rydeware.

77. —— Will' de Rydewar de excambio in Sceile & Parvâ Rydeware; with Peter de Durandeſthorp; of the homage of Ralph Atwode[2] and his ſuit, for the homage, &c. of others.

78. —— Walteri Carpentar'. "Waltero domino de Rydeware Hamſtal, 1282."

79. —— Ricardi filii Johannis Molendinarii de recognitione villenagii.

80. —— Will' de Ferrariis com' Derb' de maritag' Matilde [daughter of Nicholas Peche to Walter Ridware.]

81. Precepta dominorum regum Stephani & Henrici II; 1. that William Ridewar ſhould hold the lands of Edringhal, as his predeceſſors had done. 2. "H. rex Angl', & dux Norm' & Aquit', & com' Andeg', vic' Stafford & miniſtris ſuis ſalutem. Precipio quod Willielmus de Rydewar teneat terram ſuam de Rydewar benè & in pace, & quietè & juſtè. Et prohibeo ne ſuper hoc injuſtè ponatur inde in placitum; nec nove conſuetudines inde ab eo injuſtè exigeantur. T. Man' Biſet' dapif' apud Rademoram."

82. Hec eſt conventio inter Juhetam, aſſenſu et voluntate Will'i Bagot heredis ſui, et aliorum heredum ſuorum, et Will'um de Rydeware, de xxx acris terre in Rydeware, quarum nomine placitavit in curiâ d'ni Regis in comitatu de Stapford predictus W. contra predictam Juhetam; ſcil' quod Juheta recognovit Will'o de Rydeware jus ſuum de prefatis xxx acris, et reddidit ei medietatem harum xxx acrarum quas habuit in dominio ſuo quietè, et warantizare debet contra omnes; et ad aliam medietatem xxx acrarum purchaciandam debet Juheta Will'o juvamen ſuum legitimum preſtare, et ad alias terras purchaciandas in eadem villâ que deforciate ſunt antedicte Juette debet ipſa Juetta cum Will'o ſicut cum homine ſuo ſtare pro poſſe ſuo legitimo; et hanc terram Will'us et heredes ſui tenebunt in feudo et in hereditate de Juetta et heredibus ſuis liberè et quietè in boſco et plano cum omnibus ayſiamentis ejuſdem ville, reddendo annuatim pro omni ſervitio unam libram piperis in vigiliâ S'ti Thome apoſtoli memorate Juette ſive heredibus ſuis; et pro hâc terrâ Juhetta accepit homagium ſepedicti Will'i; et hec conventio fide firmata eſt utrinque in comitatu de Stapford. Hiis teſtibus; A. de Canoc, Henr' Swynfen, Ad' de Wroteſle, Henr' Bagot, Alano de Hetleg', Will'o Urſo, Rogero Bagot, et multis aliis[3].

---

[1] A ſumpter horſe. (Spelman, in Runcinus & Saumarius.) So "Eſpernarius ſorus," a 'ſore ſpar-hawk," a very frequent quit-rent. "Niſo ſoro" too in p. 1006, col. 1, ſeems ſome ſpecies of hawk. "A nias hawk, qu'on prend au nid" (Boyer's Dictionary). Sorus denotes colour; "cheval ſaure," or ſore, a ſorrel nag. Sore, and ſorel, are alſo terms applied to a buck, of four, and three, years old; but even there they may perhaps originate in the colour uſual at thoſe ages. See Nos. 33, 34.

[2] Frequentiùs, ad Nemus, ad Boſcum, de Boſco.—Atwood of Nether Seale at this day.

[3] This deed is curious both for ſtyle and antiquity; the latter appears from the age of A. de Canoc, Henr' Swinfen, and Adam de Wroteſle. See Shaw, vol. II. Appendix, p. 13. And from the name, æra, and other circumſtances, there is ſtrong appearance of the grantor being the perſon printed in Shaw, vol. I. p. 156. (from a Maveſyn-Rydeware deed), by the name of Ivette Meverel. A note (once ſeen) by colonel Chadwick, calls this laſt daughter of Richard Meverel circa 1196, and as ſomewhat connected with the "unam libram piperis." Joeta, in the next title (N° 83.), is called in the deed "filia Ricardi filii Godeff de Hamſtal," and one is much inclined to think all three the ſame woman; an aged one, if ſo, for the grant N° 83. is to William ſon of Walter, grandſon of the grantee in N° 82. The poſterior grant runs "Domino meo—tenendum de me."

83. Carta Joete, or Jeote, filie Ricardi de Rydewar.

84. "Robertus Hamund Willielmo domino de Rydewar-Hamſtal, pro homagio, &c. pticlam terre in Swetecroft—unum capud extendit ſuper terram Hugonis Cote, & aliud ad vicum quod vocatur Vicum Thome de Stalecroft. Teſtibus; domino Rob' de Poynton, Rob' Selveyn, Ricardo Bagot de Bromleg, Rob' de Rydewar, Willielmo de Eſſeby, Hug' de Colton, Willielmo Griffino, Willielmo de Stinintone."

85. "Robertus filius Willielmi Edeninch', Henrico congnato meo, in curiâ domini Rogeri de Rydewar, totum jus in 3 virg' in Edenich', que fuerunt Ricardi avunculi mei de Cinglee; & ſi contigerit quod non habuerit hered' de uxore, jus meum Rob' fratri ſuo relaxavi. Et pro hâc Henricus dedit mihi 2 bovatas in Torbur'[1], quas tenuit de Roberto de Mucſtine (q.?) cum aſſarto quod tenuit in eadem villâ de Galf' de Greſel'. Teſtibus; Galf' de Greſele, Galf' Selvano, Galf' de Bec, Roberto perſonâ, Symone capellano, Petro de Durandeſthorp, Galf' de Lee, Roberto de Rydewar."

86. Carta Thome de Rydeware, de dono unius cotagii in Sceile, "Waltero de Strettone et Margerie uxori," with bounds and meaſurements.

87. "Petrus de Durandeſthorp, Waltero filio Johannis de Hamſtal, meſuag' & totam terram quam Ricardus Chettles de me tenuit in Parvâ Rydewar. Teſtibus; Rogero de Rydewar, Waltero de Rydewar, Henr' Mauveyſyn, Waltero de Hondeſhacr', Rob' fil' Thome, Gervaſio Muverel, Rob' fil' Hamund, Johanne de Linacre, Willielmo fil' Willielmi."

88. Carta abbatis de Burton de 30 acris terre in Bromleye. This is a fine to Walter de Rydeware, 5° H. III. The year, by the names of the judges and the abbot, muſt be wrong; and Burton regiſter, as cited in Shaw, puts it 25°.

At top of the page, in ſmall hand, In no'i'e Trino hoc opus incipio. Amen.

89. "Nicholaus le Buteylier de Redinges & Juliana ux' ded' & conc' domine Matilde Peche totam terram noſtram, tam edificatam quam non edificatam, in villâ de Frideleſham, vocatâ la Hyde."

90. Carta de terrâ que fuit Nicol' del Hicche de Frideleſham.

91. —— Matildis Peche.

92. —— Walteri de Rydeware, aſſenſu Matildis uxoris ſue.

93. —— Nicholai de Sifrewaſt, de paſturâ.

94. —— Johannis Flavel in Frideleſham.

95. —— Johannis le Waleys.

96. —— Nicholai Peche in Boyleſton.

97. "Univerſis ſancte matris eccleſie filiis, &c. Robertus Dei gratiâ abbas de Reding & ejuſdem loci conventus ſal' in Chriſto. Noverit univerſitas veſtra nos unanimiter dilectam nobis in Chriſto dominam Matildam Pecche, ſuis meritis exigentibus, & pie devocionis affectu quem ad domum noſtrum ſe habere oſtendit, participem conſtituiſſe omnium beneficiorum ſpiritualium que fiunt, & de cetero, Deo dante, fient in eccleſiâ noſtrâ de Reding. Et eidem, & liberis ſuis & anteceſſoribus & ſucceſſoribus ſuis, plenariam participationem & ſpecialem concedimus communionem. Preterea, propter ampliorem ſpecialitatem, majorem caritatem, & ſpecialiorem familiaritatem, quâ ipſam unanimiter in Chriſto arctius complectim', tale orationum eidem conceſſimus & fideliter promiſimus ſuffragium pro nobis & ſucceſſoribus noſtris, videlicet, quod nos per totam vitam dicte domine, pro ſalute ipſius, & pro animabus Nich' Pecche patris ſui, Alicie Pecche matris ſue, Olyveri Eyncurt & Walteri de Rydeware viror' ſuor' defunctor', & pro animabus Radi Pecche, Hawyſie ux' ſue, Nich' & Joh'is filior' dict' Matilde, Alicie filie ſue, Rogeri de Rideware, Alicie ux' ſue, & Ricardi le Waleys, & pro animabus omnium anteceſſor', ſucceſſor', liberor', & benefactor' predicte domine Matild', & cunctis fidelibus Dei defunctis, qualibet die in eccleſiâ noſtrâ de Reding per aliq' de canonicis noſtris vel per aliq' alium capellanum, unam miſſam faciemus ſpecialiter celebrari; & per x annos continuos, pro animâ dicte domine Matilde Pecche, & pro cunctis fidelibus, poſtquam de ejus obitu veraciter ſciverimus. Conceſſimus etiam & fideliter promiſimus, pro nobis & ſucceſſoribus noſtris, quod nomen ſupradicte domine Matilde, & nomina amicorum & liberorum ſuorum ſupraſcriptorum, in perhennem ipſor' commemor', in noſtro inſerantur Martirologio, & nominatim in perpetuum annuatim in anniverſario ſuo in noſtro ſolempniter abſolventur capitulo. In cujus rei fidem has literas ſigillo noſtri conventûs ſignatas ſupradicte Matildi fecimus patentes. Dat' die Lune prox' poſt feſtum Sancti Jacobi Apoſtoli, anno Domino millimo cc° ſeptuageſimo" (54 Hen. III.)

Writ (un-kalendared) of Henry III. a. r. 49. granting to Matilda Peche his protection.

98. Matild Pecche, in her widowhood, grants to her ſon Roger de Rydewar her land in Ketlebereſtone, with remainders to his brothers Walter and John, and to their ſiſters[2].

99. Concordia inter Matildam Peche & Reginald de Hildeſle, quod predictus R. faciet ſectam curie de 3 ſeptimanis in 3 ſeptimanas, 35 Hen. III.

Reſpice in ſecundo numero.

100. Carta originalis comitis de Ferrariis de Frideleſham.

101. Anſelm abbot of St. Edmund gives Ketleberſtoun to Richard Peche in fee and inheritance.

102. Carta de Edeinghale (of the Conqueror, or at leaſt Rufus; and probably the very oldeſt evidence in the volume). "W. Rex Angl. N. de Eſtafford ſalutem. Permitte huic Atſoro Englico terram ſuam de Edelinghale juſtè habere, & inde ut honorificè eam teneat; & tale ſervicium inde faciat quale pater ſuus inde faciebat; & nullus ei injuriam faciat inde. Teſte, Rogero Bygoto apud Merleſbergiam, &c." At the head, the king on foot, with drawn ſword and ſhield.

103. Carta originalis de terrâ de Roſſington.

104. —— Walteri filii Juliane de Roſſington.

105. Carta Ranulfi Geylin de Roſſington.

106. —— Johannis Juvenis de Roſſington.

107. —— Radi Geylein de Roſſington.

108. —— Radi Geylin de Roſſington.

109. —— Johannis Juvenis de redditu XII denariorum in Roſſington.

110. —— Roberti Fabri de Roſſintone.

111. Dies amoris inter dominum de Northbur' & Walt' de Rydware.

"Anno Domini M° CC octogeſimo. Die Dominicâ prox' poſt gulam Auguſti, apud Northbur', ita convenit inter dominum Henric' fil' Herberti ex parte unâ, ac Walt' de Rideware & Helenam ux' ejus ex altera; videlicet, cum diſcordia & lis inter eos eſſet exorta, conquievit fide mediâ in hunc modum; videlicet, quod dicti Walt' & Helena pro ſe & heredib' ſuis, & Henr' predict' pro ſe & heredib' ſuis, quod ad certos diem & locum citra feſtum Nativit' Beate Marie, anno predicto, venient & ſtabunt conſiderationi & arbitrio octo probor' viror' per predictas partes elector' de omnibus contentionibus inter eos. In cujus rei teſtimonium ſigilla partium preſentibus literis in modum cyrographi confectis alternatim ſunt appenſa. Dat' ut ſupra."

112. Concordia inter dominum Henr' filium Herbert & Walt' de Rydewar. 9 Edw. I. 1281.

113. Carta Henr' fil' Herbert de terris de Roſſinton.

114. Concordia facta inter Elenam filiam Will' de Northbur' & Will' fil' Herb'. 53 Hen. III.

115. ———————— Walterum de Rydeware & Henr' filium Herberti. 9 Edw. I.

116. ———————— Matild' Peche & Hug'

---

[1] Torbur', with the aſſarts there held of Galfr. de Greſele, is perhaps meant for Tutbury. Le Wodehouſes, in carta 63, appears to be Tutbury Wood-houſes; and aſſarts there are ſtated to be held by William de Rydeware of William de Greſele (father to Galfr.) Which William's grant to Rydeware of the ſaid Wodehus is in this Chartulary, following the three park-grants printed in page 1006.

[2] In this deed Matilda places her huſbands in the contrary order to that in carta 97. granting Ketlebereſton, "ſalvo mihi clamio meo in terris, homagiis, redditibus, que de dominico meo ſunt alienata per defectum cuſtodum meorum, ſcilicet, domini Walteri de Rydeware & domini Olyveri de Deyncourt.' And ſheriff Puieleſtone's precept to his Offlow bailiff, following ca. 120, p. 1006, decides the point of priority. The language too of carta 80. is ſtrong.

de Morlegh de 2 acris terre in Ketelberſtone. 35 Hen. III.

117. Carta Johannis le Waleys de dono terre & prati in Frydeleſham.

118. Concordia inter Matild' Peche & Galf' Peche de terr' in Ketelberſton. 35 Hen. III.

On the leaf after carta 118 are two un-kalendared deeds; one a grant by Matilda Peche, in Fridleſham, to the monks of Reding, (ſtating it as the conſideration for carta 97); the other a grant in Ridewar Hamſtal, by ſir Thomas de Ridewar Hamſtal, to his (half-) brother Thomas, ſon of Thomas de Ardern.

119. Carta Willielmi de Ferrariis.

120. De preſentatione eccleſie de Friddleſham. 1267. 51 Hen. III.

"R. de Puieleſtone [1], ballivo de Ofelawe, ſalutem. Mando tibi quatinus viſis literis ſeyſiri facias Olyverum de Eyncourt & Matill' uxorem ejus de tertiâ parte 18*s*. redditûs cum pertin' in Kelingworthe quod recuperavit verſus Adam de Rydewar', & de tertiâ parte 8 denarior' redditûs quod recuperavit verſus Rogerum de Norton', & de tertiâ parte unius meſſuagii & decem virgatar' terre cum pertin' in Rydewar', & de tertiâ parte duarum virgatarum terre & dimid', & vii ſolidor' redditûs cum pertin' in Ederinghal, & de tertiâ parte duar' partium duar' acrar' prati cum pertin' in Wychendich, quum mandat' domini reg' ind' recepi; & iſtud facere nullo modo obmittas. Valete [2]."

121. Concordia inter Matildam Peche & Hug' de Morleyâ de ten' in Ketelberſton. 35 Hen. III. A duplicate of N° 116.

Eight leaves ſucceeding carta 121, are unnoticed in the kalendar. Their contents relate entirely to Matilda Peche; and conſiſt chiefly of writs, pleadings, and other tranſactions, between her, in her ſecond widowhood, and various parties, Eadmund de Eyncurt, the prior of Turgarthon, abbot of Redingge, but moſtly by far her couſin-german Galfrid Peche, and his ſons, from 35 to 55 Henry III. One of the quaint old legends (ſo like ſeveral in this volume), giving the origin of ſome of theſe diſputes, runs thus: "Contingit in tempore regis Johannis quod Nicholaus Peche leſus erat in uno brachio ſuo apud Frideleſham. Citò poſt venit ad Duneſtaple. Locutus erat cum quodam medico ad brachium ſuum ſanandum. Idem medicus poſuit ſua medicamenta ad brachium ſuum, per que medicamenta plaga ſua crevit, & ſanguinavit tantum quod nemo eum eſtanchiare potuit; & quam citò vidit quod deberet mori, mandavit propter uxorem ſuam Aliciam de Syffrewaſt, ut ad eum veniret apud Duneſtapel de Frideliſham. Et uxor ſua ad eum venit ibid', & Radulphus frater ipſius Nicholai cum dominâ. Quando Radulphus vidit fratrem ſuum in extremis laborare, petiit ut ipſe ſibi daret terram, vel aliquid aliud unde ſe ipſum auſiliari poſſit. Dictus Nicholaus frater ipſius Radulphi conceſſit ei unam virgatam terre ſue in Frideliſham, illam ſcilicet quam Johannes le Statem' tenuit ſicud conſuetudinarius, redd' annuatim inde viiis̃. & omnes alias conſuetudines, pro uno niſo ſoro annuatim ſolvend' de pretio iis̃. Incontinenti dictus Nicholaus ibid' obiit, & ſepultus fuit in prioriâ de Doneſtapel. Incontinenti poſt ſepulturam ipſius Nicholai redierunt, ſcilicet domina & Radulphus, apud Frideleſham, & ibid' fecerunt ſigillari unam cartam de prefatâ terrâ à dicto Nicholao prefato Radulpho conceſſâ in moriend' ſuo, de quâ terrâ id' Radulphus ſtatim ſe in ſeyſinam poſuit, & tenuit per annos & dies, abſque homag' & ſine ſervic'. Contingebat poſtea quod dictus Radulphus perrexit apud Suff', lite emergente inter ipſum Radulphum & armigerum domini Willielmi de Medlinges, ita quod dictus armiger ipſum Radulphum occidit. Venit Ricardus Pecche frater Nicholai, qui erat perſona, & poſuit ſe in terram illam que fuit Radulpho fratri ſuo qui occiſus erat, & moram in illa terra fecit per annos & dies. Venit Walterus de Ridewar, qui filiam Nicholai Pecche, Matildam nomine & heredem ejus, duxerat in uxorem, audient' quod Ricardus Pecche in illa virgatâ terre intratus extiterat injuſtè, & eum expulſit. Venit idem Ricardus Pecche, & petiit breve domini regis de Novâ diſſeiſ', & recuperavit ſeyſ' coram Roberto de Lexinton, tunc juſtic' exiſtent' apud Redinge, & ſociis ſuis itinerantibus, per ſacramentum vii virorum; & ita intravit & tenuit. Galfridus filius ejus eod' [modo] poſt ipſum illam tenuit terram."

122. Concordia inter priorem de Thurgarton & Olyverum Deyncourt.

123. ———————— Matildam Peche & Nicholaum le Botiler in Fridleſham.

This leaf cut out.

124. Convencio facta inter dominam Matildam Peche & Rogerum filium ſuum.

125. Carta de redd' in Parvâ Rydeware.

126. —— de terrâ que fuit Roberti de Meleburne del Horecros.

127. —— Joete, or Jeote, filie Ricardi.

128. —— Walteri de Pateſhull, de tenement' de Hertingdon.

129. "Robertus Olyf (alias Oly) de Rydewar-Hamſtal, domino Rogero filio domini Walteri domino de Rydewar-Hamſtal, jus in meſuag' meo, &c. cum meſuag' quod Alicia de Sonbarowe de me quondam tenuit, & cum crofto quod extendit à viâ molendini uſque ad Ogghefordelone, & in latitudine à curſu aque molendini uſque ad la venele qui ducit verſus Robertum le Rous; ſalvis 2 ſolidis annui redditûs domine de Cowle ad totam vitam ſuam ſolvend'. Teſtibus; domino Willielmo de Hundeſacr' milite, &c. &c. in feſto Tyburtii & Valleriani, 1279 [3]."

"Willielmus de Ferrariis, comes Derb', omnibus hominibus, &c. dediſſe Willielmo de Rydeware ſeneſcallo meo licenciam claudendi parcum ſuum de Falday. Et preterea dedi 3 acras de incremento de Levenodheſhay juxta Haliwelleſiche, ſcilicet preter hoc quod pater meus dedit illi cum vivario, illi & heredibus ſuis tenend' de me, &c. reddendo annuatim unam libram piperis, &c. Teſtibus; Roberto de Ferrar' de Lockeſley, Roberto fil' Walkelin', Johanne de Brehus, Galfr' Halſelin, Willielmo de Stanton', Hanr' de Huhenhul, Rogero Venatore, Roberto Sirecht, Eliâ clerico, Hug' de Meleburne, & multis aliis."

"Sciant, &c. quod ego Willielmus de Ferrariis com' Dereb' dedi, &c. 2 acras de boſco meo in Levenatheſh.[ay] videl. 4 perticatas de lato, & de longo quod pertinet ad 2 acras, Willielmo de Rydewar & heredibus, &c. tenend' de me, &c. juxta parcum ſuum de Rydewar [4], ad augmentum ejuſdem parci qui antea clauſ' fuit, reddend', &c. pro omni ſervicio unum luceum & unum bredunum in Quatrageſim'. Teſtibus; Henrico de Ferrariis, Roberto fil' Wachl', Aſcel' de Sidinh', Hugone de Melebur', Rogero Venatore, Roberto Syrat, & multis aliis."

"Sciant preſentes & futuri quod ego Willielmus de Ferr', comes Derbie, dedi, conceſſi, & hâc preſenti cartâ meâ confirmavi Rogero de Rydewar, & heredibus ſuis, pro homagio & ſervitio ſuo, tres acras terre, in augmentum parci ſui, juxta decurſum torrentis qui exit de Roweleie, tenendas & habendas illi & heredibus ſuis, de me & heredibus meis, in feodo & hereditate, liberè pacificè & ſolutè, reddend' inde annuatim michi & heredibus meis quatuor capones in Maio pro omnibus ad me vel ad heredes meos pertinentibus. Hiis teſtibus; Rad' fil' Nich' tunc ſeneſcallo, Rob' de Campay', Reginaldo de Karl', Gaufr' Selvein, Johanne capell', & aliis."

A grant from William de Greſleya to William de Rydeware of all his land "apud Wodehus," rendering 2*s*.

"Alicia ux' Walteri Ka de Joxale, manens in paroch' de Ridewar-Hamſtal, ex concenſu ejus & in meâ legitimâ poteſtate, Symoni Tylie de Staundon, le Holm ex hereditate patris mei in Ridewar-Hamſtal." The like grant, nearly verbatim, from the huſband Walter Kaa: "Teſtibus; dominis Rob' de Stepelton, Johanne Waſteneys, Rob' de Somerville, militibus, Henr' Mau-

---

[1] Roger de Puywelleſdone, as occurring repeatedly in Shaw's copy of Teſta de Nevil, though mis-read and mis-printed N. de Pineleſtone in his page *153, vol. I.

[2] Q. When R. de Puyleſton was ſheriff? Not in Shaw's imperfect liſt. And where Kelingworthe, and Wychendich, in his county and Offlow hundred?

[3] N. B. The greater part of the evidences from N° 129. to the end of the volume are of date poſterior to its title.

[4] The ſame with Falday, (now Fowley) clearly, on inſpection at the ſpot.

veyſyn, veyſin, Rob' de Pipâ, Rado de Burgo, Henr' de Colton, Magiſtro Waltero Carpent' de Ridewar-Hamſtal, Rob' le Rous de ead', Rob' le Rous juniore de ead'. Dunſtani, 12 Edw. (19 May, 1284.)" Theſe two deeds are preceded by one from the ſame Simon, (now ſtyled de Couleye,) of the ſaid lands, to Thomas lord of Rideware-Hamſtal, 4 E. II.; and followed by two life-grants in Rideware from the ſaid Thomas, one to Richard le Coupere, the other to the above Simon in exchange.

130. Concordia inter Simonem Tylie & Walt' Kaa.

131. Finis inter dominum Willielmum le Burdeleys & Thomam de Rydeware.

132. ——— Willielmum le Burdeleys & Walterum Waldeſhef in Boyleſton.

133. ——— Ricardum de Bloundeſham & Walterum Waldeſhef de manerio de Boyleſton.

134. ——— Thomam de Rydeware & Willielmum le Burdeleys de maneriis Fridleſham & Ketelberſton.

Carta Willielmi comitis de Ferr' de firmatione ſtagni vivarii ſui, & adſartand' tres parchatas terre de foreſtâ in longitudine vivarii; reddendo 1 libram piperis. [The carta anſwering to this title of the kalendar has by ſome means been omitted in the book. Both the next carta and carta 53 plainly refer to it, or ſome ſimilar one of the earl "pater meus."]

The titles of the three park-grants, printed above, p. 1006, as they ſtand in the volume, after carta 129.

Queret au comencement du liver' les covenaunts entr' les Noveyns de Brewode Blythebur' & Will' de Rydewar, pur ceo quil ne ſount pas en kalender.

Aſſiſa venit recogn' quis advocatus tempore pacis preſentavit ultimam perſonam que mortua eſt ad eccleſiam de Rydewar' Hamſtal, cujus advocationem Will' de Rydewar' in curia noſtrâ cor' juſticiariis noſtris clamat verſus Thomam de Ferr'; & unde dicit quod ſpectat ad eum preſentare ad eandem eccleſiam, eo quod ipſemet ultimò preſentavit quemd' Rob'[1] clericum ſuum ad eandem eccleſiam, qui ad ſuam preſentationem fuit admiſſus, & in eadem inſtitutus, & ultimò obiit perſona in eadem. Et Thomas de Ferr' non venit. Ideo capiatur aſſiſa verſus eum per defalt'. Juratores dicunt quod Will' de R. ultimò preſentavit quemdam Rob' clericum ſuum, qui ad ſuam preſentationem fuit admiſſus & inſtit', & ultimò obiit perſona in eadem. Ideo conſideratum eſt quod predictus Will' recuperet preſentationem ſuam ad predictam eccleſiam; & Thomas in miſericordiâ. This entry cloſes the kalendar.

To the deeds at large are ſubjoined:

The fine 3 John, between earl Ferrars and Ralph Grym, as printed in p. *981.

G. An award between ſir Thomas de Rydeware and the abbot of Murivall, of ſame date with ſir Thomas's releaſe immediately preceding the kalendar.

His releaſe to the ſame, 1314, ſtated in p. *983.

G. An agreement between them, of date with the laſt.

His fine and ſettlement of Sheyle on his ſecond wife Iſabella and family, 15 Edw. II. Abſtracted in p. *983.

"Philippus de Somerville, miles, dominus de Whychenore. Cum dominus Thomas de Rideware, miles, teneat de me omnes terras, &c. in Ednynghale, per ſervitium xx ſolidor' & xx denarior', & faciend' 2 adventus ad duas magnas curias noſtras de Alrewas; Noveritis me confirmâſſe, &c. Teſtibus; domino Johanne de Arderne, domino Rob' Mauveyſyn, militibus; Willielmo de Freford, Willielmo de Curſoun, Willielmo de Tymmore, Willielmo de Thomenhor', Hugone de Tymmore, Willielmo de Waltone, Nicholao de Alrewas, Johanne filio Willielmi de Freford, Johanne de la Bache, Ricardo Auſtyn, Johanne de Thamworth. Gregorii Pape, 18 Edw. II." (12 Mar. 1324 5.)

"Rogerus le Gardyner de Yoxhale, domino Thome de Rydewar, militi, domino de Rydewar Hamſtal, omnia tenementa de dono predicti Thome in Rydewar-Morhay, juxta terram Roberti de Banecroft, & ex utrâque parte le Blakelake, cum toto boſco ſupercreſcente. Teſtibus; domino Philippo de Somerville, milite, Roberto Mauveyſyn, Henr' Mauveyſyn, Rob' de Pipe de Parvâ Rydewar, Gilberto Henry de Yoxhale, Thomâ Kaa, Johanne de Thamworth. Georgii, 17 Edw. II." (23 Apr. 1324.)

Confirmation of Sheyle ſettlement, by Monſ. Walter, ſon and heir of ſir Thomas, . . Edw. III.

The Tutbury Inquiſitio of holders in Chirche Sheile, 5 Edw. III; printed in p. *984.

"Dominus Thomas de Rydewar, miles, Waltero Waldeſchef, manerium de Frideleſham, in com' Barkſhyre, ad totam vitam domini Thome; reddendo xvi marcas. Et ſi Walterus filius domini Thome & Johanna uxor ejus, quibus Walterus Waldeſchef pro ſuſtentatione ſuâ in x marcis annuis de predicto manerio tenetur, ſine herede obierint, liceat domino Thome predictum manerium ingredi, & ut liberum tenementum ſuum retinere. Teſtibus; dominis Hugone de Meignel, Philippo de Somerville, militibus; Johanne de Myners, Rob' Mauveyſyn, Willielmo de Walton, Henr' Mauveyſyn, Johanne de Tamworth. Mathei, 1323."

The judgement, 1247, for Alan fil' Alani and others, againſt the abbot of Miravall; noticed in p. *983.

A writ, 32 Edward I. on the ſtatute de Religioſis, againſt Richard de Caythorp and domina Agnes de Stafford his wife (who held Sheyle in dower), and others; with a fragment of a hiſtory of the forfeiture mentioned in the ſaid writ.

A grant by William clericus de Scheyle, of two virgates in Scheyl, to be held of the church of St. Peter of Sheyl; reddendo a pound of incenſe.

The Tutbury liſt of holders under Iſabella de Ridewar, coutributors to the rationabile auxilium for the marriage of Henry earl of Lancaſter's daughter, 4 Edward III.; as printed in p. *983-4.

The fine and ſettlement of Ednyghale by Iſabella de Ridewar, 1 and 6 Edward III. Abſtracted in p. *983.

The 3d and 4th liſts printed p. *984.

Copies of Seile original deeds noticed in p. *980, col. 1, taken too late for inſertion there at large.

1. Deed of Ralph de Greſele, alias de Hethre, together with ſuch parts of another autograph (meant for a grant of the ſame thing from and to the ſame parties), as differ at all in the expreſſion or in the witneſſes, and in one particular material indeed, the forgetting to name Miraval abbey the grantee. The monks might well indorſe, "Iſta melior eſt," and "Carta ſine titulo," a deed conveying no title.

"Dei gratiâ, Lincolnienſi epiſcopo, & omnibus Sancte matris eccleſie filiis preſentibus & futuris, Radulfus de Greſeleiâ ſalutem. Sciatis me dediſſe, & hac preſenti cartâ meâ confirmâſſe, pro ſalute anime mee & uxoris mee, & pro animabus patris & matris mee, & omnium fratrum meorum, & ſororum, & parentum, & amicorum, & anteceſſorum meorum, & pro animâ Roberti comitis de Ferrariis, Deo & eccleſie Sancte Marie Mirevall', & monachis ibid' Deo ſervientibus, unam carucatam[2] terre quam habui in Seile, cum pratis & paſcuis, & ceteris omnibus libertatibus eidem terre pertinentibus, in puram & perpetuam elemoſinam, tenendam & poſſidendam in perpetuum, liberè & quietè, abſque omni ſeculari ſervitio & calumpniâ & vexatione & exactione ſeculari. Hiis teſtibus; Roberto de Greſeleiâ, & Henrico fratre ſuo, Roberto de Curcun, Willielmo de Muntgumeri, Roberto filio Walkelini & Henrico fratre ſuo, Henrico de Tuſchet, Luciano de Seile, Henrico de Ferrariis, Johanne de Boſchvile, Thomâ de Curcun, & multis aliis."—Indorſements, "Iſta melior ē," and "Rad' de Hethre d' 1 carrucata t'."

---

[1] A witneſs to carta 44. in 1247. Alſo to ca. 126, accompanied (int. alios) by Robert his ſon; and, in both inſtances, by ſir Henry Malveyſyn and his brother William, parſon of Rydeware-Mauveyſyn. From the ſame ſet of witneſſes to ca. 127, (alſo Adam Mauveſyn; only Adam not yet "dominus" as in ca. 126, and "p'a de Hortingdone, Rob'to filio ſuo" in lieu of "de Rydeware-Hamſtal,") it would ſeem this Robert was promoted ſhortly before 1247 from Hartington to Rydeware-Hamſtal.

[2] The ſame quantity, it may be preſumed, which Ralph de Seile in p. 979* calls 4 virgates.

"Sciant omnes me dediſſe, & hâc cartâ meâ confirmâſſe, unam carucatam terre quam̃ habeo, &c. quietam ab omni ſeculari ſervicio, ſicut carta Radulfi de Seile teſtatur, ſcilicet per ſervicium duorum ſolidorum annuatim reddendo Radulfo de Seile & heredibus ſuis; & hanc donationem facio pro ſalute anime mee & fratrum̃ meor' & uxoris mee, &c. Rodberto filio Walchali, &c. Rodberto de Ferr', & Henrico de Ferr', & Johanne de Boſchervile," &c.—Indorſements, "Carta ſ̄n' titulo," and R' d' Hetthre d' 1 carr̃t' in Seilâ."

Each of the two laſt deeds has a mutilated ſeal; a man on foot, brandiſhing a long and large ſword, with ſhield, the latter reſting its point on the ground, or nearly; the word Greseleia juſt legible.

2. "Dei gratiâ, Lincolnienſi epiſcopo, et omnibus filiis ſancte eccleſie tam preſentibus quam futuris, Radulfus de Seila ſalutem. Sciatis me conceſſiſſe donationem illam quam Radulfus de Greſeleiâ dedit eccleſie Mirevall, de quadam carrucatâ terre quam tenebat de me in Seilâ, liberam et quietam ab omni ſeculari ſervitio pro duobus ſolidis annuatim reddendo. Et ego ipſe Radulfus de Seilâ, concedente domino meo Will'o comite de Ferrariis et Radulfo herede meo, do et cartâ meâ confirmo Deo et Sancte Marie, et monachis Mirevałł ibidem Deo ſervientibus, in perpetuam elemoſinam, predictam carrucatam terre, cum toftis et pratis que predictus Radulfus de Greſeleiâ tenebat de me, liberam et quietam ab his duobus ſolidis quos Radulfus de Greſeleiâ mihi reddere ſolebat, et ab omni ſeculari ſervitio. Et pro libertate terre hujus concedo eis paſturam centum ovium et XII animalium, excepto numero ovium et animalium quem antea habebant in elemoſinâ meâ in Seilâ. Et hanc donationem facio pro ſalute anime mee, et omnium heredum meorum, et pro animâ domini mei Roberti comitis de Ferrariis, et pro animabus omnium anteceſſorum meorum, ut Deus tribuat nobis omnibus pro hoc beneficio vitam eternam. His teſtibus; Will' comite de Ferrariis, Philippo priore de Lentonâ, Rob'to et Henrico de Greſel', Philippo clerico et Waltero capellano, Henrico filio Fuch', Thomâ de Auchevill, Sawalo filio Fuch', Will'o filio Herberti & Johanne fratre ejus, Will'o filio Hugonis, et multis aliis."

A broken oval ſeal, of a man on foot, with weapons, &c.

3. "Dei gratiâ, Lincolnienſi epiſcopo, et omnibus filiis &c. Will'mus comes de Ferrariis ſalutem. Sciatis me conceſſiſſe et hâc cartâ meâ confirmaſſe donationem illam quam Radulfus de Seilâ et Radulfus de Greſeleiâ dederunt Deo et Sancte Marie et monachis Mirevall', de quadam carrucatâ terre quam Radulfus de Greſeleiâ tenebat de Radulfo de Seilâ, liberam et quietam ab omni ſeculari ſervitio, ſicut carta predicti Radulfi de Seilâ eis teſtatur. His teſtibus; Henrico filio Fuch', Thoma de Auchevill, et Philippo clerico, Will'o filio Herberti, Roberto de Greſeleiâ et Henrico fratre ejus, Will'o filio Hugonis, et Hugone de Thorendonâ, et multis aliis."

Seal gone.

4. "Robertus, Dei gratiâ, epiſcopus Lincoll', univerſis catholice eccleſie filiis ſalutem. Cum ex injuncto nobis officio juſtis religioſorum deſideriis noſtrum prebere debeamus aſſenſum, dilectis filiis noſtris monachis abbatie que nominatur Mirevall' ſexies viginti acras terre, cum boſco, prato, et paſturis, et communione paſture, ex donatione Radulfi de Seilâ, ſicut ejuſdem carta teſtatur, in perpetuam elemoſinam confirmamus, et ſigilli noſtri ateſtatione communimus. T' Magiſtro Roberto de Bur̃nam, Mag' Peko, Magiſtro Radulfo, Will'o Clement' capellano, Will'o de Bugend' capellano, Rogero filio Will'i, et Laurentio."

A damaged ſeal; the biſhop, with a branch in right hand, ſtaff in left.

The autograph referred to in note [17] of p. 1009, and in its correſpondent paſſage in that pedigree, is thus tranſlated by Lewis (on Seals, p. 30), from Dugdale:

"Be it known unto all Chriſtians, that I John Greſeley have not had the power of my ſeal for one whole year laſt paſt; which I do now notify, being in good memory and ſound mind; and do gainſay and deny the writings ſealed with my ſeal, in all things from the time aforeſaid to the day of its reſtoration; in teſtimony of which I have put the ſeal of the deanery of Repingdon."

Deed referred to in p. 1009, note [11]:

"Sciant preſentes & futuri, quod ego Wiłłs de Greſeleiâ dedi & conceſſi, & preſenti cartâ meâ confirmavi, Walt'o Leveriz de Coſinthoñ, pro homagio & ſervicio ſuo, conſilio & voluntate Galfridi de Greſeleiâ patris mei, duas virgatas terre in villâ de Coſinthoñ, cum omnibus pertinentiis ſuis infra villam de Coſinthoñ & extra, illas ſcilicet duas virgatas quas Hugo le Berker & Herbertus Giſun tenuerunt, habendas & tenendas de me & de heredibus meis, ſibi & heredibus ſuis vel ſuis aſſignatis, liberè & quietè, integrè & hereditariè; reddendo inde annuatim mihi & heredibus meis pro omnibus ſerviciis ſecularibus viginti ſolidos argenti, ſalvo forinſeco dñi regis, ad quatuor anni terminos; ſcilicet, ad feſtum S^ti Martini quinque ſolidos, ad Purificationem Beate Marie quinque ſolidos, ad Hokeday quinque ſolidos, ad feſtum S^ti Petri ad Vincula quinque ſolidos. Et ego Wiłłs de Greſeleiâ & heredes mei warantizabimus & adquietabimus & defendemus predicto Walt̃o & heredibus ſuis, vel ſuis aſſignatis, dictas duas virgatas terre, cum omnibus pertinentiis ſuis, contra omnes homines & feminas. Predictus vero Walt̃us Leveriz & heredes ſui defendent duas virgatas terre de forinſeco dñi regis quas Wiłłs de Greſeleyâ dedit cum Agnete ſorore ſuâ in puram & perpetuam elemoſinam Deo & eccleſie Beate Trinitatis de la L . . . [a monoſyllable], juxta villam de Belethoñ [ſee "domus Gracia-Dei de Belton," in p. 1009]. Ut autem hec mea donatio rata ſit & ſtabilis in poſterum, preſenti . . . . . o ſigillum meum . . . . . dño Galfridode Greſeleyâ, dño Wiłł Burded, dño Wiłł de Martivaus, ... e Badenhał, ... Henr' Wiſchard perſonâ de Sileby, magr̃o Petro ejuſdem ville, Ric' fratre ſuo, ... Ineye, Henr' de Honlep, Thomâ clerico de Leic', & aliis pluribus [1]."

[1] The beautifully-written deed above copied ſeems older than 1243; becauſe by another of Mr. Greſley's, dated in that year, ſir William Greſley appears to have then ſucceeded to his father ſir Geoffrey's lands in Norton juxta Twycroſs, while by the preſent he ſeems poſſeſſed as yet of his maternal inheritance only. On the injury by fire happening to it, a re-ſealing has evidently taken place, and that ſo early after its firſt execution as while a ſeal was in being of one of the ſir Geoffreys (the father and the ſon of ſir William); but 'tis moſt likely, of the two, that it was done with a ſeal of the ſecond ſir G. (who was living as late as 1298) though the impreſſion is very different from other ſeals of his. The fact of the re-ſealing is clear, from the original ſlits in the label or turn-up, juſt in its centre, and from the ſilk-cord paſſing through the doubled parchment as near to that centre as the damaged materials would poſſibly bear it (the parchment behind the central ſlits being burnt away).

When I firſt examined Mr. Greſley's large collection, as long ago as in Spring 1790, I had found looſe in the bag an uncommonly perfect old ſeal, a fleur-de-lys, the legend SIGILL': WILELMI: DE: GRESELEE ✠. I had repeatedly noted its freſhneſs and beauty, and often peruſed the injured deed. Only on 11th June laſt I obſerved the particular ſituation in which the other ſeal, Greſley coat, circumſcribed SIGILL' GALFRIDI DE GRESELEIA ✠, has been affixed; and at the ſame time, that the parchment ſlip paſſing through the looſe ſeal in the uſual way (the other ſeal alone having a ſilk cord), both bore the plain marks of the fire which had juſt divided it in two and ſet it at liberty, and was alſo actually a fragment of a former grant, between the ſame parties, ſurrendered no doubt in conſideration of a larger one, ſince it diſtinctly exhibits theſe broken expreſſions, "Sciant tam preſentes quam . . . quod ego W . . . . preſenti cartâ meâ confirmavi, Walt'o Leveriz et . . . heredibus . . . . infra villam et extra, illam virgatam . . . . ." (the poſterior grant being, as we ſee, of two virgates). Through what circumſtance, or by what change of property, this ſecond grant, thus re-ſealed to make it valid to the grantee, got back to the family of the grantor, I have at preſent no ground for conjecture.

The above two remarkable particulars affording demonſtration that the looſe ſeal was the original one, I have re-attached it, by ſewing on, after a ſeparation of probably five centuries, to the damaged deed, ſo as to anſwer in ſituation, as nearly as now may be, to the ſecondary one ſo long its ſubſtitute. S. Pipe Wolferſtan, 23d Dec. 1803.

See an engraving of this ſingular curioſity in Plate *CXXXIII. in p. *1011.—Mr. Greſley's autograph of the deed N 43 of Rydeware Chartulary has remaining one oval green ſeal, with, SIGILL' MAGISTRI ALANI D' W' ✠.

Pedigree of GRESLEY, of Drakelow and Nether Seale.

Arms: Vairè, Ermine and Gules. Creſt, on a wreath, a lion paſſant Ermine, armed, langued, and collared Gules; Plate CXXXIII. fig. 18.

Nigell de Toeni, in Domeſday of Derbyſhire called de Stafford, but afterwards took the name of Greſley[2]. = ...

William de Greſley, founder of the priory there. = ...

Nicholaus de Greſeleia, temp. Roger biſhop of Cheſter, ante 1148[1]; anceſtor to the Longfords. = Margareta, heireſs of Longford, co. Derby[1].

Robert fil. Nigel; mar. Leticia de Ferariis[1].

Engenulph de Greſley[2], ante 1148. = Aliva, lady of Darlaveſton, co. Staff d. and heir of Rob. fil. Ormi.

Robert de Greſley[3]. = Baſilia.

Nigell[4]. Henry de Greſley.

Ralph, ſtyled de Hethre[5]. William.

Siſters, mentioned in Ralph de Hethre's grant to Miravall.

Sir William de Greſley, knight. = Baſilia.

Henry[5]. = ...

Nicholas de Norton, 1221 and 1230[6], ſon of Henry de Greſelegh[7].

Henry, rector of Lullington. = ...

Galfrid de Lullington[10]. Henry de Lullington[10].

Sir Geoffrey de Greſley, kt. conſtable de Peco 1232 or later; afterwards ſeneſcal to W. earl of Derby[8]. = Margaret, dau. of Maud de Somervile, lady of Coſſington, co. Leiceſter.

Galfrid Bec[9]. = Agnes[9].

Sir William de Greſley, knt ſon and heir of Geoffrey 28 H. III.[11] = Domina Elizabeth, dau. of John Backpuz, lord of Barton Bakepuis, c. Derby, by Royſia his wife; ſir W. Greſley's relict, and grantee of Nigel de Langford, 53 H. III.[12]; alſo grantee in Norton juxta Twycroſs.

Agnes, with whom Will. de Greſleya her brother gave 2 virgates in Coſinthon, "ecclefie Beate Trinitat' de la L juxta villam de Belethon[11]." Agnes de Greſſeley prioriſſa domûs Graciâ-Dei de Belton, Jovis ant. Port. Latin. 1262[11]:

Geoffrey[13].

Sir Geoffrey de Greſley, knt 1270; lord of Morton; and, 1283, chief lord of Tamenhorn[11]; living 21, 26, E.I.[14] = Agnes.

Sir Peter de Greſley, 20, 30 E. I. and 33 ejuſdem; knight in 1 E. II.; dead 3 E. II.[15] = Johanna, d. of Robert lord Stafford, of Egington and Mogington, c. Derby; wife of P. de G. 23 E. I.[15]; re-married to ſir Walter de Montgomery; living 4 E. III. lady of Drakelow and Lullington[16].

Robert de Greſeley. = Iſolda, relicta 26 E. I.[14]

John 26 E. I.

Geffrey de Greſley, 5 E. II. ld. of Morton 10 ejuſd and of Kingeſton; living 1 E. III.[17] = Margaret, dau. of ſir John Gernon, of Lavington, kt. relict 7, 16 E. III. lady of Morton, 26 ejuſd.[17]

Thomas; Peter; Edmund, living 31 E. III. had a ſon Geoffrey[18]; Robert of Edinghale, kt. 27, 31 E. III[18]; and Roger; } 11 E. II. and had then, all 5, life eſtates in Morton[17].

Thomas Greſeley, of Edinghale, 1373[19]. = Katherine, relict, 7 H. IV.[20]

Thomas of Edinghale, 7 H. IV.

Johana, 26 E. III. ſiſter of Thomas and Edmund Toly, both named 2 R. II.[17] Edmund proves her will 5 kal. July, 1393[17]; to be buried at Braſſingborough, c. Linc.; 2d w. = Sir John de Greſley, knight, 14 E. III. uſes the ſeal of Repton deanry 18 R. II.[17] = Alice, 20, 22 E. III.[21], dau. of . . . . Swynnerton, of Swynnerton; 1ſt wife.

Sir Nicholas de Greſley, knight in 46 E. III. of Colton in right of his wife, 1380; died v. p. = Thomazin (wife of Nicholas in 38 E. III.[17]), da. and heir of ſir Thomas Gwaſtnes, knt. of Colton, co. Stafford, by Joan, dau of John Toly, of Wymondham[22] (wife of ſir T. Gwaſtnes 2 and 18 E. III.)—Thomaſia, re-married to ſir Hamo de Peſhale 18 Ric. II.[24] lady of Colton and Braſſingborough 22 ejuſd.[17]

Roger de Greſley, of Church Greſley, co. Derby[23]. = Iſabel.

Margaret, dau. and heir. = William Babthorpe, of Ayleſton, co. Leic. 1447.

Elizabeth, d. and heir. = Thomas Eſſex, of Walden Green.

Sir Thomas de Greſley, of Caſtle Greſley, knt. 1413; lord of Drakelow 1 H. IV. lord of Colton, Oſgathorp, Braſſinburgh, 6 H. IV. 9 H. V. 9 H. VI. and till 27 ejuſd. = Margaret, wife of ſir T. Greſley in 18 R. II.[24] da. of Thos. Walſhe, of Wanlip, co. Leic. = ...

Margaret, 2d wife; relict 27 H. VI.[25] = Sir John Greſley, a knight, 1 H. V. died v. p. = Elizabeth, dau. of Thomas Clarell, of Yorkſhire, kt. wife of J. Greſley, 15 Oct. 11 H. IV.[5]; 1ſt wife.

Geoffrey Greſley, eſq. co-feoffee[25] with ſir T. and ſir J. 11 Hen. VI. alſo 17.

Sir John Greſley, kt. 34 H. VI. lord of Colton, 4 May, 36 H. VI. di. Jan. 31, 1486-7. = Anne, wife of ſir J. Greſley in 21 E. IV. dau. of ſir Thomas Stanley, of Elford, kt.

Nicholas, 34 H. VI.[25]

Sir Thos. Greſley, kt. born 1445, a knight, 15 Feb. 1491. = Anne, dau. of . . . . Ferrars, of Tamworth caſtle.

1. A daughter, married to Simon de Montford, of Coleſhill.
2. Alice, wife of John Egerton, of Wrinhill, ſon and heir of Hugh. Contract 18 E. IV.[26]
3. A daughter, married to Thomas Darrell.

Alice Tawke, 10 Feb. 1509. ∽ 1. Sir William Greſley, knt. m. Benedicta, da. of ſir Henry Vernon, of Haddon; died ſ. p. March 10, 1520.

Anthony, Thos. Humph. Edw.

Margaret, dau. of John Mulſho, of Northamptonſhire, firſt wife. = 2. Sir George Greſley, of Colton, knt. di. April 21, 1547. = Katharine, da. of Edmund lord Dudley of Dudley, 2d wife.

Katharine. = Edw. Winter, of Leiceſterſhire, eſq.

See their deſcendants in p. 1010.

3. John, a clerk.
4. Robert, a feoffee in Snareſton, named by his brother W. G. eſq. 10 Feb. 1509[27].
5. James.

---

[1] Mon. Angl. vol. II. pp. 119. 511.

[2] Greſley Chartulary, p. 7. Tranſcript of Biddulph deeds, in Chetwynd, B. p. 293.

[3] Original deeds at Seile. See pp. *979. *1007.—Baſilia wife of Robert, and Baſilia wife of William cloſe after, are cauſe of ſuſpicion. Here we want records.

[4] Monaſticon, vol. II. p. 511.

[5] Greſley Chartulary, p. 15.

[6] Teſt. to Walter de Rydeware's deeds, printed p. *982.

[7] Chetwynd, B. p. 81.

[8] Rydware Chartulary, 58. 24. 67.

[9] Greſley Chartulary, p. 30, and Rydeware Chartulary, 61. 66. 67. 70.

[10] Greſley Chartulary, p. 29.

[11] Originals at Seile. See p. *1008, and Plate *CXXXIII. on p. *1011.

[12] Chetwynd, B. 35. 49.

[13] Rydeware Chartulary, 66. 69. Greſley Chartulary, p. 28.

[14] Ibid. p. 32.

[15] Ibid pp. 32. 36. 37.

[16] Ibid. p. 45.

[17] Originals at Seile; and in particular the autograph copied in Dugdale's Warwickſhire, vol. II. p. 922. Margaret's ſeal 8 Edw. III. is three lozenges meeting in point; 1, Paly wavy, Gernon; 2. ſix annulets, 2, 3, and 1;—3. Greſley. See p. 1095*.

[18] Greſley Chartulary, p. 41, 42.

[19] Shaw, vol. I. p. 165*.

[20] Greſley Chartulary, p. 49.—In Dugdale's Warwickſhire, vol. I. p. 82, a Robert Greſley, by Helen, coheir of Revell, has Robert, ſ. p. and Joane, married to Richard Boteler in 6 Richard II. And, in the ſaid p. 49 of Greſley Chartulary, William Wale, of Northampton, and Johanna ux', 8 H. IV. claim lands deſcending from her father Robert de Greſley kt. in Lullington and elſewhere.

[21] Greſley Chartulary, pp. 39. 42.

[22] She had three brothers, Walter, John, and Thomas, who all died ſ. p. Pedigree of Gwaſtnes, in Le Neve's MS Pedigrees of Baronets, in my poſſeſſion, vol. I. p. 28. See a fourth brother, Edmund, above; ſhe being the perſon who was ſecond wife of ſir John Greſley.

[23] I cannot at all believe this ſtory of the head of the family at the church, and the ſecond ſon, a knight, at the caſtle (both the ſame ſpot in a manner; and Drakelow, which has ever from the time of Domeſday been the chief ſeat, is ſome miles from either). Sir John, in Greſley Chartulary, p. 47, gives to Thomas, ſon of Nicholas, and to Margaret his wife, all his manors in co. Derby, Stafford, Leiceſter, Lincoln, Northampton, and York, 18 R. II. I ſee no trace of this Roger of Church Greſley, and his line, but in a MS addition to the Staffordſhire Viſitation of 1583, copied by Wotton and Kimber. S. P. W.

[24] Greſley Chartulary, p. 47.

[25] Seile originals. Greſley Chartulary, pp. 49. 52.

[26] Greſley Chartulary, p. 55.

[27] Seile originals. Greſley Chartulary, p. 60.

Sir George Greſley.=Katharine Dudley, continued from p. 1009.

1. Sir William Greſley, of Colton, a knt. in 2 and 3 Phil. and Mary, died May 24, 1573[2]. = Katharine, wife of W. Greſley, eſq. 2 E. VI. da. to ſir Edward Aſton, of Tixhall, knt.

2. Edward[1], d. 1593; buried at Alrewas[3]. = . . .
Charles. Arthur. William.
Thomas. = . . .
Anne. Simon. Edwd. Eliz.

Elizabeth. = Charles Somerſet.

3. Thomas[1]. = . . .
Edward. G.[1] K.
Charles. = . . . Charles. Grace.
S.
Arthur. = Iſabella Greaſeley, widow (probably of this Arthur), bu. Feb. 19, 1645.
Sarah. Judith. Kath[1]. Thomas[1]. = Mary (probably wife of this Thomas).

Frances, "d. of Tho. Greaſley, of Lullington, c. Derby," bapt. (at Penkridge, Staff.) Jan. 1, 1630.
Anne, bapt. Feb. 11, 1632.
Thomas, bapt. July 20, 1635.
Mary, bapt. Dec. 18, 1637.
George, bapt. July 29, 1639.
William, bapt. Apr. 7, 1644.

Elizabeth, dau. of James Harby, citizen and ironmonger, first wife. = Katharine, dau. of ſir Tho. Walſingham[4], kt. of Beadhay, Kent. by Dorothy, dau. of ſir John Guilford, knt. and Barbara his wife, dau. of Thomas Weſt lord Delawarr; 2d wife; buried (at Greſley) 18 Dec. 1585. = Sir Thomas Greſley, of Drakelow, knt. born 1553; bur. (at Greſley) Sept. 5, 1610. = Mary, dau. of ſir Richard Southwell, of Woodriſing, Norfolk, knt.; and relict, firſt, of Henry, ſon and heir of ſir Thomas Paſton, knt.; ſecondly, of ſir Will. Darcy; thirdly, of . . . Freer; third wife.

2. Haſtings.

3. Simon, ma. 1. Anne, eldeſt da. to T. Wood, of Growtey, eſq. died 21 Apr. 1591[5]; 2dly, Anne, da. and coheir of Hu. Dixwell, of Church-Over, co. Warwick, and relict of Edw. Broughton, of Longdon, c. Staff. eſq. by whom (living 1610) Simon Greſley had two ſons, George, and William[6].—Simon Greſley marrying firſt into Worceſterſhire, might be the anceſtor of a family of the name, which appears of good conſideration in that county at this day[7].

1. Jane.
2. Mary.
3. Elizabeth.
4. Grace.

1. Henry, died ſ. p. buried (at Greſley) 16 Sept. 1598.

2. Sir George Greſley, knt. and baronet, 1611. = Suſanna, da. of ſir Hu. Ferrars, of Tamworth caſtle, knt.

3. John, married Joan, dau. of Jaſper More, of Larden[8], Salop; d. ſ. p.
4. Walſingham, di. ſ. p. 14 Nov. 1633, æt. 48. (See p. 996.)

1. Katharine, married, 1ſt, Francis Dethick, of Newhall; 2dly to Bartholomew Hales[8], of Somerfield; 3dly, to Henry Gibbs.
2. Katharine, 1ſt w. of ſir Richard Harpur, of Swarkſton, kt.
3. Dorothy, married to ſir Alexander Barlow, of Barlow-moor, Salop, knt.

Thomas Greſley, eſq. married 1622; died in his father's life-time; bur. (at Greſley) 16 Dec. 1642. = Bridget, da. of ſir Thos. Burdett, of Foremark, bart. bur. (at Lullington) 25 Nov. 1685.

1. Elizabeth, d. unmarried.
2. Dorothy, m. 1ſt, to Rob. Milward, of Bradley, or Broadlow, Aſh, eſq.; ſecondly, to Edward Wilmot, D. D.

1. Henry,
2. George, died infants.
4. George, mar. (at Lullington) 11 May, 1669, Jane, dau. of Tho. Nelſon, of Northampton, eſq. d. ſ. p.; bur. (at ditto), Jane 23 Jan. 1701, George 14 Oct. 1704.

3. Sir Thomas Greſley, of Drakelow, bart. died June 6, 1699. = Frances[9], dau. and coheir of Gilbert Morewood, of London, merchant, and of Nether Seale; baptized 16 March, 1630; buried 1711 (at Seale).

1. Jane, died an infant.
2. Frances, marr. to John Whitehall, of Pipe Ridware, eſq. (at Lullington) 20 June, 1666.
3. Bridget, married to Thomas Brome, next brother to Rob. Brome, of Woodlow, co. War. eſq. (at Lullington) 30 Dec. 1657.
4. Katharine, married to Richard Dyott, eſq. of Lichfield (at Lullington), 7 Feb. 1664.
5. Elizabeth, ma. to Philip Trafford, eſq. of Swithamley, co. Stafford (at Lullington), 18 Sept. 1672.
6. Mary, marr. to John Harpur, clerk, of Little Over, rector of Morley, c. Derby, (at Lullington) 14 Feb. 1669.

1. Sir William Greſley, bart. (whoſe deſcendants are given in p. *1011.)

2. Thomas Greſley, of Nether Seale, eſq. = Elizabeth, dau. of John Lee, of Ladyhole, co. Derby, gent. and heir to her brother Wm.; d. 14 Feb. 1732, aged 53. (See p. 995.)

Several other children (ſee p. *1011.)

1. Lee Greſley, eſq. barriſter-at-law, di. unm.
2. Thomas, d. an infant.
3. William, d. an infant.

Dorothy, dau. of John Wilcockſon, of Wirkſworth, co. Derby; 1ſt w. = 4. John Greſley, ſucceeded to his brother Lee Greſley's eſtate[10]. = Mary Bradley, relict of . . . . Toplis, ſecond wife.

5. James Greſley, clerk[11].

6. Robert, bapt. Oct. 6, 1717, (at Seale.)

1. Frances, died an infant.
2. Elizabeth.

Elizabeth, da. of Rev. William Vincent, d. May 19, 1769, aged 37; firſt w. = 1. Thomas Greſley, D. D. patron and rector of Seale; died April 18, 1785. = Elizabeth Wilkes, relict of Wm. Pycroft; of Over Seale, 1804; 2d wife.

Charles, died a child.

2. John Greſley, fellow of Emanuel Coll. and rector of Auler, c. Somerſet, reſided of late at Wenſley, c. Derby; died in 1795, aged 58, unm.

Elizabeth, marr. Sam. Ball, heretofore of Tamworth, and had iſſue; died 13 Nov. 1802, aged 56.

1. Charles Greſley, died ſ. p.
2. James Greſley, died unmarried.
3. William Greſley, late of Tamworth; 1803, of Liverpool; marr. firſt, Anne Watkins, only da. of Richard late rector, and ſiſter to Richard now lord, and John now rector, of Clifton Camvill; d. Oct. 1781, ſ. p.; 2dly, Mary, only daughter of . . . . . Anningſon, eſq. of Twickenham; d. ſ. p. Mar. 27, 1797.
4. Robert Greſley, dead, leaving iſſue.
5. Walſingham Greſley, died unmarried.

1. William Greſley, B. A. patron and rector of Seile; ma. May 5, 1798; living 1804. = Louiſa-Jane, d. of ſir Nigel Greſley, of Kniperſley.

Louiſa-Elizabeth.

2. Thomas Greſley, rector of Hinton, co. Glouc. 1797; vicar of Poleſworth, co. Warwick, 1802; reſident there 1804.

3. Richard Greſley, of Kenilworth, c. Warwick, barriſter-at-law, living 1804. = Caroline, daughter of the late Geo. Grote, eſq. of London, banker.

William.

1. Elizabeth; di. Nov. 28, 1792, aged 29.
2. Mary, of Tamworth, 1804.

---

[1] The children and grandchildren of Edward and Thomas (ſecond and third ſons of ſir George Greſley, knt.) are taken from an entry by the late colonel Chadwick, ſtanding detached, among a number of fragments at the head of his copy of the Greſeley Chartulary. He has left no trace of the authority he took them from. But the following entries, with the additions to thoſe two deſcents, and the whole third ditto, on this page, all (ſave the daughter Frances) from Lullington regiſter, ſeem (as far as they go) to tally with him entirely:—"Richardus Kerke, cler', & Katherina Greſley, nupt. licent. 16 Aprilis, 1630."

"Arthurus Greaſeley ſepult. Mar. 13, 1644."

"M'ris Kirke, widdowe, was buryed Decemb. the twelveth day, 1671."

Alſo a George Greaſley was buried, at Greſley, Oct. 8, 1591.—Q. if the colonel's G. above?

[2] Son by Margaret Mulſho. Kimber; and Staffordſhire viſitation 1583.

[3] Shaw, vol. I. p. 135.

[4] Son of ſir Thomas Walſingham, knt. lieutenant of the Tower, and Alice his wife, daughter and heir of John Gunter.

[5] Monument, which calls Simon ſecond ſon, in Naſh, vol. II. p. 373.

[6] Originals of Francis Cobb and Samuel Pipe Wolferſtan. Kimber, vol. II. p. 183. Simon had alſo (by the Harpur pedigree, printed in p. *884.) a daughter Iſabel, ſecond wife of ſir Richard Harpur, who marries her couſin-german above.

[7] Naſh, vol. II. pp. 345, 346, 347, has a Henry Greſley, born about 1615, and dead 1678; rector of Severn-Stoke, prebendary of Worceſter, a tranſlator and a poet: who by Eleanor, daughter of Gervaſe Buck, of Worceſterſhire, had John, who died 1718, aged 49. Philip Greſley, of Salwarp, eſq. is among the late ſheriffs of Worceſterſhire.

[8] Miſprinted Larder by Kimber. But the Viſitation, 1584 (of Salop), ſets it right. A John Greſley was married to Frances Wakefield May 27, 1600; and buried Nov. 18, 1623 (at Greſley).

[9] Her ſiſter, Grace, was married to Simon Bennet, of Bechampton, Bucks.

[10] In his latter years of Sandybrook, near Aſhbourn, co. Derby.

[11] See the monument to him and wife at Appleby.

The BARONET BRANCH of the GRESLEYS, continued from p. 1010.

Sir Thomas Gresley, bart. died 1699.=Frances Morewood, died 1711.

1. Sir William Gresley, of Drakelow, bart. died Oct. 17, 1710.=Barbara, da. of John Walcot, of Walcot, esq. co. Salop, & relict of Richard Okeley, esq. di. 1711.

2. Thomas Gresley, of Nether Seale, (of whose descendants see p. 1010.)

3. Charles Gresley, of Dunstal, c. Stafford, bo. about 1668, m. (at Tatenhill) 23 Oct. 1695; d. June 29, 1724[1].=Anne, dau. and coheir of John Bott, of Dunstal, by Eliz. Wolferstan, of Statfold; d. Sept. 20, 1720, aged 44.

1. Frances, mar. to Will. Inge of Thorpe Constantine, co. Stafford, esq.; buried (at Thorpe) 29 April, 1712.
2. Bridget, died an infant; bur. (at Gresley) 21 Oct. 1652.
3. Elizabeth, d. unmarried, 10 Aug. 1693[3].
4. Dorothy, married to Thomas Ward[4].
5. Mary, born 14 April, 1657[5], mar. to Dan. Watson, of Burton, co. Staff. esq.
6. Grace, married to Robert Roby, of Castle Donington.
7. Anne, died unmarried.
8. Katharine, died unmar. 7 Sept. 1694.
9. Lettice.
10. Isabella, died August 16, 1694.
11. Sarah, married Paul[4] Balladon, esq. of Stapenhill, co. Derby.

1. Elizabeth, m. 1st, to Thos. Bott, her mother's cousin-german; 2dly, to S. Beardsley, of Tamworth, gent. d. 1775[2]; s. p. aged nearly 79.
2. Frances[1], died unmarried, at Tamworth, Jan. 26, 1748, aged 50.
3. Anne[1], m. to Edw. Mathews, gent. of Coventry, d. s. p. Jan. 18, 1739, aged 38.

Gertrude, dau. and coheir of John Grammer, esq. of Pledwick, co. York[6], long survived sir Tho.; died at Lichfield; second wife.=1. Sir Thos. Gresley, of Drakelow, bart. of Baliol Col. Oxford, 1716; m. 1719; di. 1746[6].=Dorothy, da. and coheir of sir Will. Bowyer, of Knipersley, co. Staff. bart. di. July 31, 1736; first wife.

2. William, d. an inf.

Bridget, ma. to Ad. Ottley, of Pichford, Salop, esq.

Geffrey Gresley.=...

Thomas, s. p.

Jane-Grammer, heir to Mrs. Grammer of Lichfield (surviving sister and heir of dame Gertrude), became second wife, Jan. 21, 1795, to Rob. Willoughby, esq. of Cliff, in Kingsbury, c. Warwick; died Sept. 9, 1803, as did Jane Charlotte her only daughter on the 15th; left 1 son, John, aged near 8.

1. Sir Thomas Gresley, bart. di. Dec. 13[7], 1753.=Wilmot, dau and heir of Mr. Hood, of Leicester, di. in Hertfd-st. June 11, 1797.

2. Sir Nigel Gresley[8], bart. of Knipersley, co. Stafford, died at Bath, Apr. 23, 1787.=Elizabeth, daughter of .... Wynne, of Congleton, c. Chester[9], clerk; and heir to her last surviving brother ... Wynne, esq. Her eldest brother was Bowyer-Leftwich Wynne, the younger Bowyer-Wm. or William-Bowyer. She was married in 1753; di. at Lichfield May 13, 1793.

Wilmot, only da. and heir, mar. (by special licence, at Croxall, co. Derby) Jan. 26, 1776; died at Bristol, æt. 41, Dec. 5, 1790; 1st wife.=Sir Nigel-Bowyer Gresley, bart. of Drakelow, 1804.=Maria-Eliza Garway, of Worcester; m. June 25, 1796; 2d w.

Dorothy, d. an inf.
Anne, late wife of sir John Edensor Heathcote, of Longton, co. Stafford, knt.
Elizabeth.

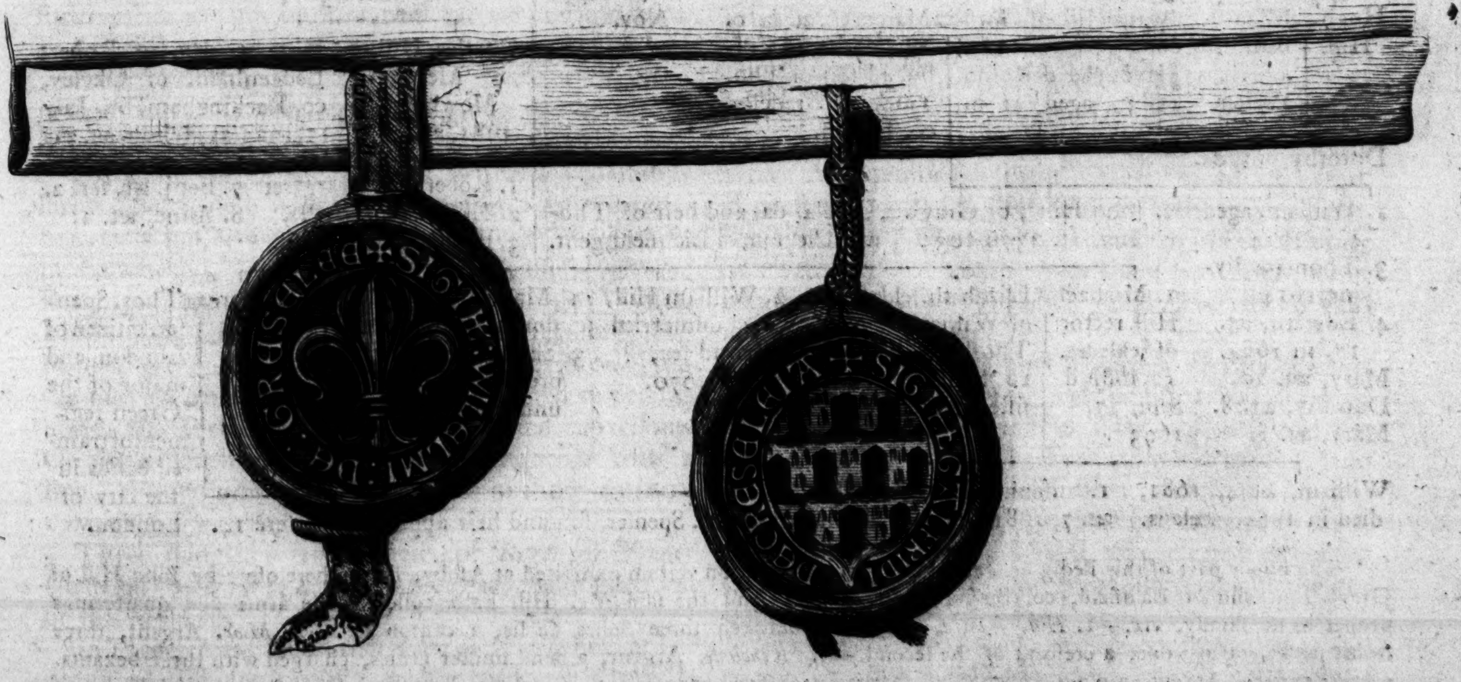
Frances.
Louisa-Jane, m. to Rev. W. Gresley, of Seale.
Harriett.
Mary-Susanna, mar. to Rev. Baptist Proby, eldest son of the dean of Lichfield.

1. Maria-Wilmot, m. Sept. 21, 1802, to Rev. Thomas Levett, 2d son of T. L. esq. of Packington, co. Stafford.
2. Emma-Sophia.
3. Augusta-Elizabeth.

1. Louisa-...
1. Roger.
2. Nigel.

---

[1] Monuments at Tatenhill, co. Stafford. [2] Floor of Trinity church, Coventry.
[3] See the inscription, p. *988. [4] Kimber. [5] Gresley Register. [6] Kimber. [7] Ib. "Dec. 23."
[8] See a character of him, by Governor Thicknesse, Gent. Mag. vol. LVII. p. 238.
[9] Either the father Wynne, clerk, or his wife, was the child of one sister and coheir of Dorothy Bowyer, sir Nigel Gresley's mother. The others were Mrs. Adderley, ancestor to Charles-Bowyer Adderley, now of Hams, co. Warwick, and lady Bellot, married, 2dly, to Mr. Port. Sir Nigel Gresley, in addition to Knipersley, his mother's share of the Bowyer estate, got his aunt lady Bellot's, at Apedale, co. Stafford.



✠ SIGILL: WLELMI: DE: GRESELEE
✠ SIGILL: GALFRIDI DE GRESELEIA

Seal of William de Gresley, disjoined by fire from its deed during probably five centuries; and another of Geoffrey de Gresley, substituted for it early in that period; the former re-attached to the instrument remaining among Seale evidences, Dec. 23d 1803, by

S. Pipe Wolferstan, Esqr.

To whom,

In remembrance of the curious circumstance, and of friendly zeal shewn for this Work and its Author,

This sketch is inscribed by

His much obliged and faithful Friend J Nichols

P. *988, b. l. 40. Other hereditaments were given beſides the Friary; int. al. lands at Seale, in lieu of which were allotted, by award 1756 (confirmed by act of parliament 1799), to Godfrey Clarke, John Cave Browne, and William Inge, the lords and miniſter marked out by the will, in truſt for the hoſpital of Nether Seale, 34 acres, 2 roods, 5 perches, part of the then late open fields.

By the ſame award were allotted to the chaplains and poor of the hoſpital of William Wigſton 70 acres, 1 rood, 13 perches, parcel of the ſame open fields.

A leaſe, dated May 17, 1681, was granted by the maſter and poor brethren of Wigston's Hoſpital to Reginald Newbold, of a meſſuage and 52 acres of arable land, meadow, and paſture, in Nether Seale, in the tenure of Reginald Newbold or his aſſigns (except all timber trees); habend' to Reginald Newbold during the lives of the ſaid Reginald Newbold, and of Elizabeth and Anne, daughters of the ſaid Reginald; Elizabeth being of the age of 7 years, and Anne of 4 years; rent per annum £2. 10s. at Michaelmas and Lady-day, and one couple of fat capons, or 2s. at New-year's-day, with a clauſe of re-entry for non-payment at 20 days; worth per annum £20.

Aug. 28, 1686, this leaſe was ſurrendered; and a new leaſe granted to Reginald Newbold ſenior, or his aſſigns, of the premiſes in the former leaſe contained (except as is therein excepted); habend' to the ſaid Reginald Newbold ſenior, his heirs and aſſigns, during the lives of himſelf and his ſon Reginald Newbold junior, and of his daughter Elizabeth Newbold, and of the longeſt liver of them; Reginald Newbold junior being aged 1 year; and Elizabeth 10 years. Rent as in the former leaſe.

The preſent leſſee under Wigſton's hoſpital is believed to be the relict of Nathaniel Curzon, late of Bredon, eſq. or her eldeſt ſon, attorney in Derby.

PEDIGREE of HILL, of NETHER SEALE; entered at Aſhby, 16 March, 1681-2, by Michael Hill and Charles Hill[1].

Arms: Quarterly, 1. and 4. Azure, a chevron between three fleurs de lis Argent, a canton Or. 2. and 3. Argent, on two bars Gules, ſix bezants. Plate CXXXII. fig. 19.

Nicholas dell Hull, alias Hill, of Gorſecot, co. Stafford, 10 Edw. IV. and 22 Hen. VII. = Alice, daughter and heir of John Martin, of Gorſecot.

Iſabel, da. of Thos. or John Ellis, of Yorkſhire; died April 1559, ſ.p.[2] = 1. John Hill, of Little Pipe, co. Staff. 16 H. VII. and 1 and 2 Ph. and Mary; died March 4, 1573, æt. 78. = Jane, da. of John Frances, of Formark, co. Derby; 2d wife.

2. Rich. Hill, of Chorley, co. Staff. = . . .

Thos. Hill. = . . .

John Hill. = ...

3. Nicholas Hill. = . . .

Jane.

4. Michael Hill, of Pipe, co. Stafford. = . . .

Robert Hill, of Lichfield. = . . .

Michael Hill, of Lichfield. = Iſabel, dau. of . . . Robinſon.

Margaret, wife of . . . Dyot[3].

Richard Swynſen, ſon and heir apparent of T. Swynſen of Swynſen, c. Staff. = Anne, da. of John Hill, of the Pipe; marriage articles July 2, 1552[4].

1. Hugh Hill[5], of Gorſcote, 18 Hen. VIII. and 16 Eliz.; living, & ſigns Viſitation 1583. = Conſtance, dau. of Rich. Oglethorpe, of Oglethorpe, co. York, eſq.

2. Robert Hill.

Rich. Hill, of Norton by Twycroſs; died 1590; whoſe deſcendants will be given in p. 1144.

1. John Hill, of Pipe, 1 and 2 Philip and Mary, and 40 Eliz. aged 32 1583 = Dorothy, da. of Rob. Fitzherbert, of Tiſſington, c. Derby, eſq.

2. Richard Hill, citizen of London, = . . .

Lambert. John. Eleanor.

Jane, wife of Will. Lea, of Swinſen.

1. Simon Hill, of Lichfield, living at Seale in 1681, æt. 83; died in Oct. 1684; b^d^ (at Seale) Nov. 10. = Margaret, d. of John Hamerſley, of the Bothom, co. Stafford.

2. Robert Hill, of Oxford, M. A. d. about 1662, æt. 45. = Elizabeth, d. of John Creſwell, of Kingſthorp, co. Lincoln, living 1681; died at Bromley in Kent, Jan. 10, 1684.

Hugh Hill. = Elizabeth, d. of . . . . Walter.

Dorothy, only da.

Edward Hill, of Gorſcote, 25 Eliz. and 6 James; eldeſt ſon 1583; aged 31 in 1614. = Margery[5], 2d da. of W. Yarde, of Coſby, 3d ſon of Tho. Yarde, of Bradeley, co. Devon.

Charles Hill, of Melton Mowbray, 1681, æt. 35. = Margaret, dau. of Robert Ledgenham, of Okeley, co. Buckingham, bu. July 17, 1723, at Melton, æt. 71.

1. Robert. 4. Margaret. 7. Benj. æt. ferè 2.
2. Elizab. 5. Charles. 8. Anne, æt. 1.
3. Hudſon. 6. Richard.

1. William, aged 4, in 1614.
3. Thomas; living 1614.
4. Edward, æt. 17, in 1634.
Mary, æt. 20.
Dorothy, æt. 8.
Mary, æt. 5.

2. John Hill[6], of Gray's Inn, æt. 23 in 1634. = Urſula, da. and heir of Thomas Cleyton, of Lichfield, gent.

1. Michael Hill, rector of Seale, æt. 52, 1681; d. Sept. 27, 1693[7]. = Elizabeth, eldeſt da. of William Inge, of Thorp Conſtantine, co. Staff. eſq. and ſiſter of W. Inge, eſq.

2. William Hill, died unmarried beyond ſea, about 1670.

1. Mary, living in London, unmarried 1681.
3. Sarah, living with her brother at Nether Seale, unmarried 1681.

2. Margaret. = Thos. Spenſer, citizen of London, and major of the Green regiment of trained bands in the city of London.

William, æt. 4, 1681, died in 1684, cœlebs.

1. Suſanna, æt. 7, 1681.

2. Elizabeth, æt. 2, & amplius.

Thos. Spenſer, ſon and heir apparent, æt. ferè 14.

---

[1] The upper part of this Pedigree was taken from a deſcent on vellum exhibited at Aſhby, drawn heretofore by John Hill of Gray's Inn, and of Lichfield, co. Stafford, eſq. 1634. And the ſaid Mr. Hill hath collected the arms and quarterings proper to his family, viz.—1. Hill. Azure, a chevron between three fleurs de lis, a canton Or.—2. Moor. Argent, three ſwans necks eraſed Sable, a creſcent of the ſecond.—3. Kynchale. Argent, a bend ſiniſter Gules, charged with three bezants.—4. Reachulle. Argent, a plain croſs Sable, charged with five bezants.—5. Redehulle. Party per feſs, Argent and Gules, a pale counterchanged, three fleurs de lis Sable, a creſcent for difference.—6. Martin. Argent, a lion Gules, charged with ſix bezants, a creſcent for difference.—7. Yarde. Gules, a chevron between three yard-wands Or, an eſtoile of the firſt.—8. Buſhell. Argent, a chevron Gules, between three waterbudgets Sable.—9. Ferrers. Or, a bend Sable, charged with three horſe-ſhoes proper.—Creſt, on a wreath Or and Azure, a lion rampant Argent, wounded with a broken lance proper, armed and langued Gules.

[2] Monument and pedigree (latter from a Staffordſhire Viſitation 1614) in Shaw, I. 355.—Glover's Staff. Viſitation 1583; S. Pipe Wolferſtan's copy.

[3] Shaw's Dyott pedigree calls Margaret wife of John Dyott, younger brother to Anthony, daughter of Robert Hill of Lichfield. Baptiſms of John Dyott's children are regiſtered at St. Mary's, Lichfield, from 1599 to 1615.

[4] Original at Swynſen. Shaw, II. 29*.

[5] The firſt Hugh Hill, in the Viſitation 1583, enters his ſon John (alſo other children, Thomas, Richard, Francis, Elizabeth, Iſabell, Johanne,) with Edward, eldeſt, and a ſecond un-named, (probably unbaptized, for by Edward's age in 1614 the younger could be but very lately born in 1583,) ſons of John by Dorothy Fitzherbert. Mr. Shaw's copy of Viſitation 1614 makes Edward enter his three elder ſons as above inſerted, but no wife of his own (a very unlikely thing), and deſcribe his mother to be the above Margery Yarde, a ſecond wife to John his father. Hence it is probable that the contradiction to his grandfather's entry as to the mother of Edward is a miſ-copying, and that the Viſitation of 1681-2 rightly makes Margery wife to Edward himſelf.

[6] Sold his reſidence, the Friary in Lichfield, his wife Urſula's eſtate, (ſee Shaw, vol. I. p. 321.) to Zachary Johnſon, rector of Seale, ſhortly before the date of the latter's will, April 27, 1667. See p. *988. Original Will in poſſeſſion of S. Pipe Wolferſtan.

[7] Monumental inſcription in p. 995.—"quinto kalend. Oct."

SHEPESHED,

antiently called Schepeſhede, Schepeſheved, &c. a very conſiderable village, containing many more houſes and inhabitants than any other village in the county, is ſituated 10 miles from Leiceſter, and 4 from Loughborough. The pariſh is 6 miles in length, and 3¼ in breadth; bounded on the South by Whitwick and Beaumanor; on the Eaſt by Garendon; on the North by Hathern and Long Whatton; and on the Weſt by Belton and Gracedieu. In the eccleſiaſtical diviſion of the county, it is within the deanry of Akeley.

At the time of the general ſurvey, Godvin held of the king in fee two hides and a half in Scepeſhede, and four ploughlands; which he found waſte, and which Oſgot had held with ſac and ſoc. He had two ploughlands in demeſne, and two bondmen; and thirty villans, with twelve bordars, and fifteen ploughs; and twenty ſocmen, with two knights, and ſix villans, and four bordars, and twenty-one ploughs. There were fifty acres of meadow; a wood a mile long, and four furlongs broad; and a mill of five ſhillings value. Out of this land ſix pounds were paid, by order of the Biſhop of Baieux, for the ſervice of the Iſle of Wight [1].

Alwin, at the time of the ſurvey, claimed the fee of one ploughland, affirming that it belonged to the king's fee in Shepeſhed [2]. To the lordſhip of Shepeſhed alſo belonged four houſes in the town of Leiceſter [3].

In the Itinerary of 1280, Shepeſhed and Hathern anſwered collectively as one vill.

This lordſhip, which was originally a member of Whitwick, became very early the property of the earls of Leiceſter; for Robert Boſſu earl of Leiceſter, the founder of Leiceſter abbey, gave thereto the church of Shepeſhed, as appeareth by the Legierbook, fol. 209. b. "Habemus, ex dono fundatores noſtri, eccleſiam de Schepeſhed, & ex confirmatione regis Henrici Secundi; cum omnibus eccleſiis illius Soche; ſcilicet, Dixley, Hawtherne, Whatton, & Lockington. Et ſciendum eſt, quod non habemus cartam dicti fundatoris noſtri ſuper dictis eccleſiis, niſi tantùm hec verba; Eccleſiam de Schepeſheved, cum omnibus eccleſiis illius Soche [4]."

From the earl of Leiceſter the lordſhip of Shepeſhed came by marriage to Roger de Quency earl of Wincheſter, from whom we find the following grant:

"Rogerus de Quency, comes Wintonie, conſtabularius Soche, dedi Alano de Shepeſhed, pro homagio & ſervicio ſuo, tres acras terre arabilis cum pertinentiis in Sepeheved, &c. Hiis teſtibus; dominis Johanne Berard, Johanne de Cranford, Ricardo de Wykes, Philippo de Chetwynd, & Roberto de Hereford, militibus, &c." Sealed about three inches broad; on the one ſide himſelf on horſeback, a dragon under his horſe, the ſeven maſcles in his ſhield and capariſons. On the other ſide himſelf on foot, fighting with a lion, circumſcribed, SIGILLVM ROGERI DE QUINCY COMITI DE WINTONIE [5]."

Three daughters and coheirs of Roger de Quency (married to Ferrars, Zouch, and Comyn) made partition of this lordſhip.

In 1296, it was found that Elen la Zouch held at her death 58 different lordſhips in England and Scotland; amongſt which was the third part of the manor of Shepeſhed of the king in capite by the ſervice of the third part of a knight's fee; and that Alan la Zouch, ſon of Roger, ſon of the aforeſaid Elen, was her next heir, and was then aged 24 years [6].

Johannes Comyn, comes de Boghan, pro monialibus de Gratiâ Dei, Whitewike & Shepeſhed 100 acre de vaſto ibidem [7].

Alanus La Zouche, pro priore de Charley, Shepeſheved 1 meſſ', Milneleghes juxta Charley & 30 acre terre ibidem [8].

In 1320, Robert Holand and Alice his wife had the king's licence to alienate a third part of the manor of Shepeſhed, with the appurtenances; which third part was then held of the king in capite by the ſervice of a twentieth part of one knight's fee [9].

In 1309, Maſter William Comyn of Boghan, having obtained in fee of John Comyn of Boghan, his brother, then deceaſed, two parts of the manor of Shepeſhed, the villatæ of Markenfield, Whetenby, Bochardeſton, and Shroton, with a moiety of the villa of Rothley, the villata of Whitwyke, and park of Bowden, without the king's licence, had the king's pardon for the ſame [10].

By a feoffment made in 1320, chiefly of land in Northamptonſhire, it appeared that Robert de Holland and Maud his wife at that time poſſeſſed one third part of the manor of Shepeſhed; and in the following year they levied a fine of the ſame third part [11].

In 1324-5, the following petition occurs: "A ñre Seigneur le Roi & a ſoun Conſeil prie Henry de Ferrers, qe come William de Ferrers ſon aiel leſſa cent acres de waſt en Shepeſheved a dame Eleyne la Souch, rendant per an' xxxiis̃. a treis termes de l'an par oweles porcions, de laquele rent le dit William fuſt ſeiſi, & moruſt ſeiſi, & apres lui William de Ferrers ſon fiz fuſt ſeiſi tut le temps dame Eliene la Zouche, & Alain la Zouch ſon fiz, & Robert de Hoylaunde, & Maud ſa femme, file & une des heires le dit Aleyn, taunt qe Robert de Hoilaund forfiz, par qi forfaiture ceo waſt eſt en la meyne noſtre Seigneur le Roi, & iſſint ceſte rente arrere puis qe noſtre Seigneur le Roi fuſt ſeiſi par la dite forfaiture. Si vous pleſt qe il puiſſe, ſolom ley & reſon, come ſiz & here le ſecound William de Ferrers, ſa rente avoir. Aſſignentur fideles in Cancellariâ ad inquirend' in preſenciâ cuſtodis, &c. de contentis in petitione, &c. veritatem; & retornetur inquiſicio in Cancellariâ; quâ retornatâ, ſi comperiatur quod petitio ſupponit, mandetur cuſtodibus manerii, quod de exitibus vaſti ſolvant redditum, &c." [12]

In 1325, it appeared that William de Ferrars (grandſire of Henry de Ferrars) had demiſed 100 acres of waſte land in Shepeſhed to Elen la Zouch and her heirs; and that Henry de Ferrars held the ſaid land as parcel of his manor of Groby; which manor was held of the king by the ſervice of half a knight's fee [13].

Richard de Schepeſheved was elected abbot of Croxton, co. Stafford, in 1335; and rebuilt the abbot's chamber there [14].

In 1340, it was found that Henry de Beaumont earl of Boghan, deſcended from the Comyns, held Shepeſhed as a member of Whitwick [15].

---

[1] "Goduinus tenet de Rege in feudo 2 hidas & dimidiam in Scepeveſde, & 4 carucatas terræ. Oſgot tenuit cum facâ & focâ. In dominico habuit 2 carucas & 2 ſervos; & 30 villani, cum 12 bordariis, habent 19 carucas; & 20 ſochmanni, cum 2 militibus & 6 villanis & 4 bordariis, habent 21 carucas. Ibi molinum de 5 ſolidis, & 1 acra prati. Silva 1 leucæ longitudinis, & 4 quarentenarum latitudinis. Hauc terram vaſtam invenit. De hâc terrâ exeunt 6 libræ ad præcepta epiſcopi Baiocenſis, pro ſervitio Inſulæ de With." Domeſday, fol. 230. b. 2.

[2] "Aluuinus calumniat ſocam unius carucatæ hujus terræ, dicens eam ad Scepeſhefde Regis pertinere." Ibid. 233. a. 2. The word Regis is interlined in the original record.

[3] "In Ledeceſtre ſunt 4 domus pertinentes ad Scepehefde." Ibid. p. 230. a. 2.

[4] Burton, MS.

[5] Roper, from the original, penès prænob. Rob. Cotton, baronettum. See in vol. I. Plate XII. fig. 12.

[6] Eſch. 24 Edw. I. N° 58. Leic.

[7] Eſch. 34 Edw. I. n. 180.

[8] Idem, n. 187.

[9] Ad quod dampnum 14 Edw. II. N° 148.

[10] Pat. 2 vel 3 Edw. II. pars 2. m. 5.

[11] Fines diverſ. com. 15 E. II.

[12] Petitiones in Parliamento 18 Edw. III. Rot. Parl. vol. I. p. 426.

[13] Eſch. 19 Edw. II. N° 130. Leic.

[14] Willis, Mitred Abbeys, p. 216.

[15] Eſch. 14 Edw. III. N° 24. Leic.

In 1346, Alice de Beaumont (on the aid then granted for knighting Edward of Woodſtock, the king's eldeſt ſon) was aſſeſſed 39*s*. for a moiety, and a fifth part and a fortieth part of one knight's fee in Whitwick and Shepeſhed; and Maud relict of Robert de Holland (on the ſame occaſion) was aſſeſſed 3*s*. 4*d*. for a twelfth part of one knight's fee in Shepeſhed; all parcel of the honour of Winton[1].

In 1349, it was found that Maud the wife of Robert de Holland, and one of the daughters and coheirs of Alan la Zouch, held at her death a third part of the manor of Shepeſhed of the king in capite, by the ſervice of half a quarter of one knight's fee; and that Robert de Holland, her ſon and heir, was then aged 20 years[2].

In the ſame year Alice relict of Henry de Beaumont held at her death two parts of the town of Shepeſhed of the king in capite, by the ſervice of a quarter of one knight's fee; and Thomas de Beaumont was her ſon and heir[3].

In 1358, Maud de Holland, from whom Nicholas father of John de Glenfeld was deſcended (which Nicholas, heir of the ſaid John, was then deceaſed) held the third part of the manor of Shepeſhed, by knight's ſervice[4].

In 1362, it was found that it would be no damage to the king, or any other, if the king granted licence to ſir Henry de Beaumont, knight, to give two parts of the manor of Shepeſhed to ſir Thomas Beaumont, knight; and that they were held of the king in capite by the ſervice of half a knight's fee[5].

In 1373, it was found that ſir Robert Holland, knt. held at his death certain lands and the third part of the manor of Schepeſhed of the king in capite by knight's ſervice; and that Maud, his ſole daughter and heir, was then married to ſir John Lovel, knt.[6]

In 1382, Thomas de Sutton, "pro prioratu de Ulveſcrofte," held in Shepeſhed one meſſuage and one virgate of land[7].

Sir John de Beaumont died in 1396, ſeiſed of two parts of the manor of Shepeſhed, with the appurtenances, held of the king in capite, as parcel of the honour of Winton[8].

In 1402, John Lovell, knt. who married Maud, daughter of Robert, ſon of Robert de Holand, and couſin and heir of the ſaid Robert, held this manor in her right, in capite, with the manors of Brakley and Halſo in Northamptonſhire, and other lands, being the third part of the moiety of her lands in the county of Leiceſter[9].

In 1407, it was found that ſir John Lovel, knt. died ſeiſed of a third part of the manor of Shepeſhed, held of the dutchy of Lancaſter[10].

In 1413, it was found that Henry de Beaumont, knt. died ſeiſed of two parts of the manor of Shepeſhed, with its appurtenances, held of the king in capite, as parcel of the honour of Winton[11].

In a book of fifteenths and tenths granted by the laity in 1416, Shepeſhed was rated at £3. 14*s*.; and in the ſubſidy of 1445, at the ſame ſum; but an abatement was then made of 15*s*.

In 1422, it was found that Maud (who was the wife of John Lovel, knt.) died ſeiſed of a third part of the manor of Shepeſhed, held of the king in capite by the ſervice of a twentieth part of one knight's fee; and of half a knight's fee in Shepeſhed, which the abbot of Leiceſter held; and that William Lovel was her couſin and next heir; being the ſon of John Lovel, knt. deceaſed, ſon of the aforeſaid Maud[12].

In 1454, it was found that ſir William Lovel, knt. died ſeiſed of half a knight's fee in Shepeſhed, which the abbot of Leiceſter held[13].

The property which the abbot and convent of St. Mary de Pratis at Leiceſter held in this lordſhip is thus entered in their Regiſter:

"Habemus in Shepiſhed, ex dono fundatoris noſtri, eccleſiam de Shepiſhed, & ex confirmatione Regis Henrici II. &c. cum omnibus eccleſiis illius Soche; ſcilicet, Dixle, Hawtherne, Whatton, & Lokyngton. Et habemus eam in propriis uſibus, cum decimis garbarum, bladorum, feni, lini, & canabi, pannagii, & venditionis nemorum, &c. unde matriculus epiſcopi:

'Eccleſie de Shepyſhed patronus abbas Leyc', habens eam in proprios uſus ab antiquo. Gilbertus vicarius inſtitutus per H. nunc Lincolnie epiſcopum.'

Ordinatio vicarie per eundem H. epiſcopum:

'Vicarius in eccleſiâ de Shepyſhed habebit, nomine vicarie ſue, totum altaragium in eadem; & ſolvet abbati Leyceſtrie & conventui xxvis̄. viiiđ. per annum pro pencione ſuâ. Et de ſinodalibus reſpondebit. Et ſolvet vicarius pencionem ad iſtos terminos, ſcilicet, ad terminos Michaelis & Paſche.'

Mem' quod iſta pencio recuperata fuit per ſententiam latam à judice ordinario, in eccleſiâ Sancti Martini, die Veneris poſt feſtum Sancti Marci Evangeliſte, anno Domini M°cccxix°, à domino Willielmo vicario de Shepiſhed, ſicut patet in libro placitorum.

Nota taxationes decimarum, & ſententias diffinitivas pro iſtâ pencione, & condempnatione.

Habemus ibidem quatuor virgatas terre de glebâ, continentes $\overset{\text{xx}}{\text{iiii}}$ viii acras; quarum una duntaxat, ſecundum conſuetudinem manerii, uni de tenentibus noſtris, ſcilicet, modò Johanni Alyn.

Et habemus vi acras prati pro decimâ feni jacentis extra borealem de Alyn forth, inter prata Bartholomei Keyndal ex utraque parte.

Et recepimus de abbate de Geraldon, pro decimâ de Dixle, vis̄. per annum.

Mem' quod Rogerus comes Leyceſtrie attornavit abbati & conventui Leyceſtrie, ad capiend' decimas denariorum de firmâ ſuâ de Schepiſhed & Lokyngton, ſcilicet, xliiiis̄. vđ. per annum, ad ſcaccarium ſuum in Leyceſtriâ, ſicut patet in primâ cartâ de Schepiſhed.

Habemus communam pro omnimodis averiis noſtris per totam foreſtam de Charnwood, ſicut patet in cartâ Henrici Regis VII.

Habemus ibidem, ex dono Saeri de Quency, comitis Wintonie, cum conſenſu & aſſenſu Margarete comitiſſe ſue, unam virgatam terre, quas Henricus Telion tenuit, cum tofto & crofto, cum omnibus pertinentiis. Item molendinum de Shepiſhed in eadem cartâ, cum omnibus pertinentiis, cum omni libertate in terris, aquis, pratis, cum emendatione ſtagni, cum viis & ſemitis ad predictum molendinum tendentibus, cum alvetâ adjacente, & cum totâ multurâ de Shepiſhed & Hathurn, &c. & cum multurâ proprie domûs ſue de Shepeſhed; ita quod nec ipſe vel aliquis heredum ſuorum aliquid molendinum infra territorium de Shepiſhed vel Hathurn nunquam in poſterum facient.

Margareta Quency confirmat eandem cartam.

Habemus cartam Rogeri Quency, in quâ mandavit miniſtris ſuis ponere abbatem Leyc' in plenam poſſeſſionem de houſbot & heybot, &c. ad ſuſtentationem molendini ſui de Schepeſhed.

Habemus ibidem, ex dono Rogeri de Quency, totam decimam boſcorum ſuorum de Okeley & de Wyſſeley, quotienſcumque contigerit in eiſdem boſcis per ſe vel per heredes ſuos venditiones fieri, ſcilicet, per manus venditorum vel receptorum earundem venditionum, quicumque pro tempore fuerint, &c.

Mandatum dicti comitis ad ballivos ſuos pro dictis decimis ſolvendis:

'Rogerus de Quency, comes Wintonie, &c. dilecto & fideli ſuo Ricardo de Malton, ſeneſchallo ſuo, & omnibus ſeneſchallis ſuis & ballivis, &c. Quia dilectis noſtris abbati Leyceſtrie & conventui, &c. (ut in predictâ cartâ); vobis mandamus quatenus dictos abbatem & conventum, & eorum attornatos, quicumque pro tempore fuerint, in perceptione dicte decime, ſine impedimento, contradictione, &c. manuteneatis & protegatis, ita ut dicta decima plenariè eiſdem perſolvatur, non permittens eis aliquam injuriam, moleſ-

---

[1] Rot. Aux. 20 Edw. III.
[2] Eſch. 23 Edw. III. pars 1. N° 58.
[3] Eſch. 23 Edw. III. pars 2. N° 157.
[4] Eſch. 32 Edw. III. N° 1. Leic.
[5] Ad quod dampnum 36 Edw. III. pars 2. N° 15.
[6] Eſch. 47 Edw. III. N° 19. Leic.
[7] Eſch. 15 Ric. II. p. 2. n. 47.
[8] Eſch. 20 Ric. II. N° 14. Leic.
[9] Hillar. Fin. in Scaccario 3 Hen. IV.
[10] Eſch. 9 Edw. IV. N 29. Leic.
[11] Eſch. 1 Hen. V. N° 45. Leic.
[12] Eſch. 1 Hen. VI. N° 51. Leic.
[13] Eſch. 32 Hen. VI. N° 28. Leic.

tiam, vel gravamen, ſuper prediɛ̃tis decimis inferri.'

Habemus à Rogero Quency, comite Wintonie, per eſcambium pro totâ terrâ noſtrâ arabili quam habemus in landâ parci de Okeley, xvi ſeliones in campis de Shepiſhed, in Medwefarlong, que extenditur pro tribus acris & dimidiâ acrâ & quintâ parte unius rode & unâ perticatâ in longitudine & latitudine, ſecundùm metas & bundas, ſicut ſunt in cartâ.

Item habemus ab eodem comite, per eandem cartam, vi ſeliones in eodem campo, pro decimis xxviii acrarum terre in landâ parci ſui in Okeley.

Item habemus ab eodem comite, per eandem cartam, dextrum humerum cujuſlibet fere capte in eodem parco de Okeley.

Item habemus decimam vaccarum & videntium in eadem landâ, ſi fortè ſint ibi hujuſmodi animalia unde decime debeant provenire per eadem cartam.

Habemus ab eodem Rogero comite Wintonie, per eſcambium, quandem placeam terre, cum omnibus pertinentiis ſuis, in villâ de Shepeſhed, que placea terre continet inter ſe quinque perticatas & ſex pedes terre in latitudine juxta viam ex oppoſito fabrici Galfridi Fabri, & ſe extendit per eandem latitudinem uſque ad gardinum magiſtri Edwyn.

Habemus confirmationem multorum prediɛ̃torum & diverſorum aliorum, ex conceſſione Alani la Zouche, per cartam ſuam. Et per eandem cartam habemus, ex dono ejuſdem, houſebote & heybot ad domos noſtras in Shepiſhed, & meremium ad eorum ſuſtentationem communem & molendini noſtri ibidem de foreſtâ ſuâ de Charnwode & boſcis manerii ſui de Shepiſhed ubique, quociens opus fuerit, per viſum foreſtariorum ſuorum, &c.

Habemus, ex conceſſione ejuſdem Alani Zouche, totam decimam venditionis boſci ſui in Wiſſeley.

Et habemus, in eadem cartâ, quietam clamationem de advocationibus eccleſiarum; ſcilicet, Sanɛ̃ti Petri de Brakley, cum capellâ de Halſo & aliis capellis ſuis.

Item habemus quietam clamationem, pro nobis & hominibus noſtris, ſuper viſu franciplegii, ſeɛ̃tis curie, & aliis in feodo ſuo conſtitutis, in Lokynton, Schepiſhed, &c.

Habemus ibidem, ex dono Johannis Godberd, i toftum & croftum, & duas ſeliones, inter Brokes, cum pertinentiis ſuis; illas duas ſeliones jam tenet Robertus Walkar.

Habemus ibidem, ex dono Stefani filii Amabile, i acram terre, cum pertinentiis.

Habemus ibidem, ex dono Johannis filii Walteri le Wales, unum croftum, quod jacet extra villam de Shepiſhed ſubtus Henle, modò in tenurâ Henrici Browne.

Habemus ibidem, ex dono Willielmi Walenſis, filii Willielmi Walenſis, unum toftum cum pertinentiis, & unam acram terre, per cartam ſuam, in quâ ſcribuntur bunde & mete ejuſdem tofti & acre terre.

Habemus ibidem, ex dono Ricardi filii Willielmi de Pecco, unum toftum quod ipſe tenebat de nobis priùs per ſervitium xii đ. per annum.

Habemus ibidem, ex dono & feoffamento Johannis Spondon vicarii de Lokynton, & Willielmi Wimbleſton vicarii de Shepiſhed, unum meſſuagium, cum cotagiis & aliis pertinentiis ſuis in Schepiſhed; & duas virgatas terre cum pertinentiis, que modò ſunt in tenurâ Nicholai Coſby, & que quondam fuerunt Roberti Adam de Schepiſhed. Et mem' quod habemus cartam domini regis Edwardi de mortizatione iſtius meſſuagii, cum cotagiis, & ii virgatis terre.

Habemus ibidem unam virgatam terre & unum meſſuagium, cum pertinentiis, que vocatur Frotlande, ex perquiſitione abbatis & conventûs, in tenurâ Simonis Roby.

Mem' quod in participatione feodorum militum de heredibus Rogeri Quency comitis Wyntonie, &c. ſic ſcribitur:

'Tenentes abbatis Leyc', qui aſſignantur in parte comitis de Bowgan & domine comitiſſe de Ferrariis, & quorum quilibet debet per annum ii gallinas & v ova, &c."

Reſolutiones.

Mem' quod quilibet cotarius de ix cotariis ſolebat reddere ii gallinas, & facere certa opera.

Mem' quod abbas & conventus de Garendon debent facere propriis ſumptibus pontem competentem ultra duɛ̃tum molendini, & illum cum neceſſè fuerint competenter reparare, ita quod equi & careɛ̃te cum oneribus ſine dampno & periculo poſſint pertranſire.

Nota placitum inter placita antiqua in Rentali Geryn pro reparatione pontis de Schepiſheyd; id eſt, quod abbas Leyceſtrie non tenetur ad reparationem prediɛ̃ti pontis.

Decima reddebat xxiiii li.; modo reddit vii li. x s̃.

Terre dominicales reddebant viii li.; modò xl s̃.

Habemus ibidem quandam placeam prati que vocatur Cranford medow, vel Dykun medow, jacentem ex parte boreali in prediɛ̃tâ villâ inter Landwordmedo ex parte unâ, & quandam placeam terre domini de Bewmont ex parte alterâ, ex dono & feoffamento Katerine de Cranford, modò in tenurâ Nicholai Coſby. Habemus ibidem weyf & ſtreyf.

Edwardus Rex, &c. Conceſſimus & licentiam dedimus, &c. Johanni Spondon vicario de Lokynton, & W. de Wimbleſton vicario de Schepiſhed, quod ipſi i meſſuagium & croftum, & ii virgatas terre, cum pertinentiis, in Schepiſhed, poſſint dare & aſſignare abbati & conventui Leyc', &c.

Mem' quod Saerus de Quency & Margareta de Quency contulerunt nobis diverſa dona & privilegia in Schepiſhed; videlicet, houſbot & heybot, & meremium ad domos noſtros, & meremium ad earum ſuſtentationem, & molendini, de foreſtâ de Charnewod & boſco ſuo de Schepiſhed, in recompenſationem lx s̃. pro decimis Leyc'; & pro decimis denariorum reddituum de utrâque Socâ de Schepiſhed & Brakley, vii li. vii s̃. i đ. Summa denariorum pro decimis x li. vii s̃. i đ. ſicut patet in Leyc'.

Nota quod quietè clamavimus nobili viro domino Rogero de Quency, comiti Wyntonie, &c. terram dominicam ejuſdem prati ſui in territorio de Schepiſhed; ſcilicet, inter terram de Schepiſhed & molendinum noſtrum aquaticum.

Nomina locorum de quibus prior de War' petit decimas de foreſtâ & de aſſartis de Charnewode nomine firme abbatis & conventûs Leyc', &c. require poſtea in Thornton.

Require terrarium de dominicis in terrario fratris W. Charyte.

Mem' quod abbas & conventus de Garadon conceſſerunt abbati & conventui Leyc' communem paſturam in campis ſuis & pratis de Henle, Garadon, & Dixle, tempore aperto, &c. ut in compoſitione ſuâ in Garadon.

Firmarii noſtri & tenentes ad voluntatem.

Nicholaus Coſby tenet ibidem capitale meſſuagium, ii virgatas terre, pratum vocatum Cranforde medow, vel Dykun medow; & reddit xxxii s̃.

Item ſolvit Domino de Lovel ii s̃. pro nobis.

Ricardus Mooll tenet i cotagium, vi rodas terre; & reddit v s̃.

Thomas Mylnys tenet i cotagium & i croftum; & reddit v s̃.

Johannes Alyn tenet i meſſuagium & i virgatam terre de glebâ eccleſie, & ii crofta; & reddit xiii s̃. iiii đ.

Robertus Paynt' tenet ii cotagia & i rodam terre propè tribus ſelionibus vicarii ſubtus Litelhaw; & reddit viii s̃.

Symon Baly tenet i meſſuagium, i virgatam terre, que vocatur Froſtland; & reddit nobis xiii s̃. iiii đ. & domino de Chamburleyn vi đ. liberè.

Robertus Walker tenet i cotagium & viii ſeliones ad finem gardini ſui, & ii rodas inter Brokes; & reddit v s̃.

Henricus Brome tenet i cotagium & gardinum, & i croftum terre arabilis, ſub Henley, vocat' Sparocroft, & reddit vi s̃. viii đ.

Thomas Lambart tenet iii toſta in Cranford lane, & i virgatam terre; & reddit x s̃.

Summa reddit\^us iiii li. xviii s̃. iiii đ.

Johannes Yrlande tenet ibidem reɛ̃toriam cum glebâ eccleſie, continentem $\overset{xx}{iiii}$ acras terre; videlicet, iiii virgatas terre, quarum una dimittitur Johanni Alyn pro conſuetudine manerii; & quatuordecim acras prati. Et tenet i cotagium juxta ſcitum eccleſie, & i columbare. Et reddit xl s̃.

Nicholaus Coſby tenet ibi decimas garbarum, & feni, lini, & canabi, creſcentium in campis ibidem; que tradidimus eidem Nicholao ad firmam pro certis annis, reddend' nobis vii li. x s̄. per annum.

Johannes Plat' tenet ibi molendinum noſtrum, i meſſuagium, ii croſta juxta molendinum, & ii placeas prati in Thakholme; & reddit lx s̄.

Mem' quod abbas Leyc' percipiet decimas totius boſci infra parochiam de Shepiſhed per quoſcunque infra dictam parochiam venditi, tam in Ocley quam in Litullhawe, quam in aliis boſcis infra dictam parochiam.

Mem' quod habemus ibi totam decimam feni de haddys & leys; &, pro decimâ feni pratorum, vi acras prati nobis aſſignatas, ut ſupra notatur.

Fenum inde proveniens eſtimatur ad xii carectas; que, cum decimâ feni de hadys & leys, valent per annum xv s̄.

Summa totalis redditûs, cum pencione & communi fyn, xviii li. xvi s̄. Summa omnium virgatarum ſunt octo & ſex rode, x ſeliones, preter tota prata.

Mem' quod quelibet virgata continet xx acras terre; & quelibet virgata terre reddit xiii s̄. iiii đ.

Mem' quod ſolebamus habere unum gregem arietum paſcentem in campis de Schepiſhed.

Mem' quod habemus ibi decimam feni in boſco qui vocatur Letulhaw.

Reſolutiones. Archidiacono Leyc' vii s̄. vi đ. ob̄.q̄.
Domino de Lovel ii s̄.
Domino Chamburleyn [1] vi đ.

Abbas Leyc' recipiet totam decimam pannagii de Ocley; ſcilicet i đ. ad x đ.; & vicarius de Schepiſhed recipiet decimas pannagii de omnibus aliis locis.

Nomina locorum & boſcorum in quibus abbas Leyc' debet habere decimam, que ſunt in campis de Shepiſhed; ſcilicet, in Okeley, Wyſeley, Lytulhawe, the Leyſaw, the Armeyt clowſſe, Tope clowſſe, & in multis aliis locis; ſicut patet infra.

Omnes tenentes noſtri de Shepiſhed debent habere communem paſturam in toto vaſto de Charnewode ex antiquo.

Habemus in Schepiſhed viſum franciplegii, & quicquid ad viſum franciplegii pertinet; & commune fyn, & xii đ. cum conſuetudine.

Mem' quod, virtute hujuſmodi libertatis & privilegii, habuimus bona Johannis Fullonis de Schepiſhed, ſicut patet in Rotulo curiali cujus datum eſt anno regni Henrici Sexti xxv°.

Et mem' quod tenens noſter de Whatton debet venire ad viſum noſtrum franc' de Schepiſhed, & ſolvere ad commune fyn ii đ.

Limites parochie de Schepiſhed.

Incipiendo ad barcariam de Loutherburg', & inde uſque le hyweye, & inde uſque Charleſton . . . . . & sb̄ per medium clauſi de Charley. Et inde per medium antique aule de Charley que vocatur Erleſhall. Et inde uſque Rohay well. Et inde Cōſton cros. Et inde uſque le Reynſtones. Et inde uſque Tyntemedowe, dimittendo Grenewode in ſiniſtrâ parte. Et idem uſque Clepſton. Et idem uſque Fayrewey. Et idem uſque le Erleſdyke juxta Beltonwode, ſequendo le Erleſdyke uſque inter Walhyrne inter Belton wode & Deryntonhaw. Et inde uſque Wytonylde. Et inde uſque Lonelyrene. Et idem uſque Oldedyke forde. Et inde uſque Mydelſlecheds. Et inde uſque Gothous lydyaw. Et inde uſque le Gonhull. Et inde uſque Thorp Lydyate, ſequendo ✠ [2].

Inquiſitio facta die Mercurii, in vigiliâ Sancti Andree Apoſtoli, anno Domini milleſimo cc°lxxxſimo, & anno regni regis Edwardi octodecimo, coram domino Radulpho de Laſſehei & domino Thomâ le Meynel, militibus, domino Wyllielmo de Hemington de Gerendon monacho, apud Wytewyk, ſuper decimas bladi & venditiones boſci de boſco de Schepehevid & parco de Acle, & decimas pannagii eorundem, per Serlonem de Thorp, Wilhelmum Nauntel de Hatherne, Johannem de Raveſton de Schepiſhed, Nicholaum Branche de Markinfeld, Robertum Burſand de Schepiſhed, Johannem Lonchamper de Beacharſton, Johannem Liner, Wilhelmum Michell, Rogerum Connor, Willielmum Albany, Galfridum Biſett, & Thomam Branche, liberos; & Rogerum de Waldâ, Ricardum Beton, Johannem Bonde, Ricardum de Huntebach, Adam de Branſton, Alexander de Roteby, Galfridum in the Myr', Willielmum de Stokes, & Ricardum Sampſon, nativos; qui ſuper ſacramentum ſuum dicunt, quod decime venditionis boſci, pannagii, & bladi, de boſco de Schepiſhed & parco de Acle, cum dextrâ ſcapulâ cujuſlibet fere capte a dicto parco de Acle, pertinent ad abbatem Leyceſtrie, & hoc per feoffamentum comitis Leyceſtrie, & pro ratione eccleſie ſue de Schepiſhed, in cujus parochiâ dicti loci exiſtunt, qui non ſunt de foreſtâ de Charnewode. Item dicunt ſuper ſacramentum ſuum, quod boſcum de Schepiſhed incipit apud Beltonſyk atte Feyreweyarde, & vadit uſque ad viam de Whitewyk ex oppoſito del Cleperſton uſque ad le Shebrokyſmedowe; & ſic tranſit per medium le Symkindemes uſque ad le Reyneſtones, & ſic tranſit inter Cymberwode & Newwode uſque ad Coniſtonyes, & ſic per le ſikes inter Birchwode & Tymberwode uſque ad Charleye; & ita per medium curie de Charley uſque ad Charleyſtonam, & ſic uſque Nettilbuſh, & ſic per viam regiam uſque ad boſcum de Loutherburgh.

Inquiſitio facta apud Lindeneford, Dominicâ in craſtino Tranſlationis Sancti Thome Martyris, anno regni regis Edwardi xiii°, per breve domini, ſuper limitibus parochiarum eccleſiarum abbatis Leyceſtrie, per Johannem de Aneſly, Robertum Curther de eadem, Thomam Dannet de eadem, Robertum le Sawere de eadem, Robertum filium Johannis de Groby, Robertum Molendinarium de eadem, Henricum Gea de Bradgate, & ceteros; qui dicunt ſuper ſacramentum ſuum, quod Haldelneſhay, Wormingys, Tenterwode, Middelraken, le ſyke uſque Halywule, Lawedykeforde, & idem uſque Hyweyeſide que eſt ad barcariam de Loughteburg predictam, Sryebrokiſhe ride, & Calange, Oxele, tota warda Godeberti, Srymtoneſhawe, Crophyrſt, Birchwode, Milneleys, parcubus de Acley & Litlehawe, ſunt infra limites parochie eccleſie predicti abbatis Leyc' in Schepiſhed. Et in teſtimonium omnes predicti ſigilla appoſuerunt.

Evidencie ſuper jure perceptionis decimarum, & poſſeſſione earundem, in parochiâ de Schepyſhed.

In cartâ Roberti fundatoris ſic continetur: “Et quicquid Oſbertus capellanus de me tenebit in Sochâ de Schepiſhed & in Sochâ de Halſou; omnes videlicet eccleſias de utrâque Sochâ, &c.”

Et poſt dicitur ibidem, “cum terris, decimis, & omnibus pertinentiis ſuis, & decimis denariorum meorum de utrâque Sochâ, & de pannagio.”

In cartâ Roberti filii ejuſdem, & in cartâ Roberti comitis filii Petronille, continentur eadem verba.

In aliâ cartâ ejuſdem Roberti filii Petronille, inter cetera, ponuntur hec verba: “Notum ſit, &c. me attornâſſe abbati & canonicis Leyc' ad capiend' decimas ſuas ad ſcaccarium meum de Leyc' de firmâ meâ de Schepiſhed.”

In cartâ Margarete de Quency, comitiſſe Wyntonie, inter cetera verba, hec ponuntur: “Conceſſi etiam dictis canonicis houſbote & haibote ad domos ſuas in Schepiſhed & meremium ad earum ſuſtentationem, & molendini ſui ibidem, de foreſtâ meâ de Charnewode, & de boſco meo de Schepiſhed, & de Lokyngton,” &c. Et poſtea ſequitur, “ſalvis decimis predictorum canonicorum de pannagio & venditione nemoris in Schepyſhed.”

In cartâ Rogeri de Quency comitis Wintonie, inter cetera, continentur hec verba: “Preterea conceſſimus dictis canonicis houſbote & haybote in Schepiſhed, & meremium ad ſuſtentationem molendini ſui de Schepiſhed, de boſco noſtro de Schepiſhed.”

Et in aliâ cartâ & tertiâ cartâ ejuſdem Rogeri continentur eadem verba.

Et in cartâ Alani le Zouch ponuntur hec verba: “Conceſſi dictis canonicis houſbote & haybote ad domos ſuas in Schepiſhed, & meremium ad ſuſtentationem earum & molendini ſui ibidem de foreſtâ de Charnliwode, de boſco manerii mei de Schepiſhed, ubique,” &c. Item ſequitur: “Conceſſimus canonicis totam decimam de pannagio & venditione nemoris utriuſque Soche de Schepiſhed, Brackley, & Halſo.

---

[1] Altered, in Charyte's Rentale, to “Domino de Haſtyngs.”

[2] Here ſomething is wanting in the Original.

Forma litere Willielmi de Ferrariis ad ballivos ſuos: "Willielmus de Ferrariis fidelibus ſuis, venditoribus boſci ſui de Charnewode, ſalutem, &c. Quia, pro ſalute anime mee, &c. mandamus quatenus decimas totius venditionis boſci noſtri in Wymyngs, Tymberwod, Chalangys, Oxle, vel alibi in parochiâ eccleſiarum de Schepiſhed, Baro, vel Thornton, facti, vel in poſterum faciendi, abbati & conventui Leyc' in firmâ denariorum, vel certo eorum pretio, plenè & liberè ſolvetis, &c."

Solutio vel proportio locorum & aliorum patet per condemnationem Ade Tebbe & ſociorum, in decimâ de Chalangs, & per proceſſum habitum contra illos in conſiſtorio Leyc', &c.; & per receptum rotulorum antiquorum, ut patet hic poſtea.

De decimis boſci de Oxle, per rotulum computûs abbatis, CXI s̃. V đ. ob. q̃.

De decimâ de Haſtklif, tota decima recepta fuit in boſco, & ſic in pluribus aliis locis, & cariata apud Schepiſhed.

De decimis boſci de Wormynges, anno M°CC° octogeſimo tertio, per quos XX s̃.

De decimâ pannagii & boſci in boſco de Schepiſhed, anno Domini M°CC° octogeſimo quarto, per rotulum abbatis, CV s̃. VII đ.

De decimâ boſci, pannagii, & feni ibidem, anno M°CC° octogeſimo quarto, per rotulum abbatis, CV s̃. II đ.

De pannagio boſci de Schepiſhed, anno M°CC°LXXXIX, XVIII đ.

Decima pannagii de boſco de Schepiſhed percepta fuit per rectores de Schepiſhed ante tempus fundationis abbatie Leyc'; & poſtea per abbates ejuſdem abbathie uſque nunc; ſicut patet per rotulos noſtros, & per rotulos ballivorum de Schepiſhed.

De decimâ boſci de Deryntonhawe, & pannagio, anno M°CC° nonageſimo II°, XXII s̃.

De decimâ boſci de Thyrkil, anno M°CC° nonageſimo quarto, IIII li.

De buſtâ & cortice venditâ de decimâ ibidem, anno M°CCC° primo, VI li. XVI s̃. X đ. [1]"

In the terrier of Leiceſter abbey, referred to under Barkby, p. 45, Shepeſhed fills three pages.

In 1463, it was found that William Beaumont viſcount Beaumont, attainted of high-treaſon, was ſeiſed of the manor of Shepeſhed [2]; and Oct. 26, 1464, king Edward granted this manor to William Haſtings, his chamberlain: "Rex conceſſit Willielmo domino Haſtinges in feodo quamplurima caſtra, maneria, &c. que fuerunt Willielmi Beaumont ac Jacobi comitis Wilteſ'; inter alia, Shepeſhed manerium [3]."

Aug. 9, 1467, king Edward IV. granted two parts of the manor and lordſhip of Shepeſhed, and divers matters there (late parcel of the poſſeſſions of William lord viſcount Beaumont) to William lord Haſtings, to hold of the king and his heirs by homage only, in lieu of all ſervices [4].

In 1472, Joan wife of John Lovel, knt. died ſeiſed of the manor of Shepeſhed, held of William Haſtings, knt. as of John Bourchier, knt. in right of Elizabeth his wife, as of the honour of Winton [5].

"In 1483, William lord Haſtings (who was beheaded) died ſeiſed of two parts of the manor of Shepeſhed, held of the king [6]; after which, Francis lord Lovel (ſon to John lord Lovel by Joan his wife, ſiſter and heir to the before-named William viſcount Beaumont) obtained a grant of them from king Richard III. immediately after his coming to the crown; and, being a great friend and favourite to that king, was created viſcount Lovel, and advanced to the office of lord chamberlain of the houſehold. But he being attainted in 1485, and ſlain at the battle of Stoke the next year, they fell back to the crown.

Two parts of this lordſhip were granted by king Henry VIII. in 1527, with the manor of Loughborough and the advowſon of the churches, to Thomas Grey marquis of Dorſet, in exchange for the manors of Grafton and Hartwell in Northamptonſhire, as hath been elſewhere declared [7].

In this pariſh the monaſtery of Garradon had lands to the value of 5*l.* a year held in the occupation of the abbot and convent. Theſe lands they obtained from Thomas marquis of Dorſet, in lieu of other lands adjoining to his park called Brodegate Park [8].

To this Thomas ſucceeded Henry Grey duke of Suffolk his ſon; upon whoſe death and attainder, 1533-4, they again reverted to the crown.

Theſe lands were purchaſed from queen Elizabeth, in 1561, by Henry Manners earl of Rutland.

Francis earl of Rutland died poſſeſſed of them in 1632; after which they paſſed with Garendon to George Villiers, the ſecond duke of Buckingham [9]."

One-third part of Shepeſhed was granted by king Henry VII. to ſir John Savage, of Clifton, co. Cheſhire, knt. (anceſtor of the earl Rivers); who commanded the left wing at the battle of Boſworth field, wherein Richard III. was ſlain, Aug. 22, 1485; for which king Henry VII. gave him, "cum aliis, manerium de Shepeſhed, in comitatu Leiceſtrie, &c. que fuerunt Franciſci Lovel militis, nuper vicecomitis Lovel [10]."

In 1564, there were 103 families in Shepeſhed.

Sir John Savage, grandſon of the John above noticed, ſold Shepeſhed to Thomas Duport, eſq. who had a grant of lands in Leiceſterſhire, in 1572 [11]; and in the following year we find a record, "De man' regine amovend' de manerio de Shepeſhed, ſcitu nuper monaſterii de Garrondon, grangiâ de Dicheley, & rectoriâ de Bottesford; & illis quibus pertinent liberandis [12]."

A letter occurs, from Henry Du Port to the earl of Shreſbury, dated Sepſhed, Sept. 1603, on diſputes between the Corporation of Derby and Mr. Baylies concerning incloſures [13].

This Henry Duport, eſq. was owner of Shepeſhed in 1619. His arms were, 1. and 4. Per chevron embattled Azure and Sable, in chief a creſcent Argent and a mullet Or, and in baſe a lion rampant of the laſt; within a border Gules; 2. and 3. Argent, three trefoils in feſs Gules, between three pellets. Creſt, on a rock Vert, a raven Sable. Supporters, two ſavages, wreathed about the waiſt and temple with ivy proper, their clubs held up. Motto, INVITIS VENTIS; fig. 2.

At the ſame time, Duport of Leiceſter bore, Gules, on a chevron between three portculliſſes Or, three roſes; fig. 3.

The freeholders here in 1630 were, William Nauntell, Richard Peale, William Aulſop, Richard Michell, and William Boyer.

A ſon of Thomas Duport, who was rector of Huſband's Boſworth [14] and Medbourn, is thus noticed by Dr. Fuller: "John Duport, D. D. was born at Shepeſhed in this county; bred fellow, then maſter, of Jeſus college in Cambridge, once proctor, and thrice vice-chancellor of that univerſity. He was one of the tranſlators of the Bible, and a reverend man in his generation, who beſtowed the perpetual advowſance of the rectory of Harſton on the college. Men generally in Scripture are notified by their fathers, ſeldom by their ſons, as Simon of Cyrene [15], father of Alexander and Rufus; perſons, no doubt, of ſignal worth in that age. Thus this Doctor is remarkable for his ſon (by Rachel, daughter to Richard Cox biſhop of Ely) James Duport, D. D. fellow of Trinity College, anu lately Greek profeſſor; happy in the education of many hopeful pupils of worſhip and honour, as they more happy in ſo able a tutor. His father, Mr. John Duport, deceaſed 1617 [16]."

Dec. 24, 1647, Henry Barrodale, of Shepeſhed, was fined £118. 2*s.* 4*d.* for delinquency, having been in arms againſt the Parliament. His eſtate in fee was £59. 1*s.* 4*d.*; and he rendered before December 1, 1645 [17].

---

[1] Charyte's Rentale, fol. cxxv. b.—cxxviii. a.

[2] Eſch. 3 Edw. IV. N° 30. Leic.

[3] Pat. 4 Edw. IV. pars. 2. m. 18. 30.

[4] Pat. 7 Edw. IV. pars 1.

[5] Eſch. 12 Edw. IV. N° 7. Leic.

[6] Eſch. 1 Ric. IV. N° 32. Leic.

[7] See before, under Loughborough, p. 886.

[8] Bailiff's Accounts in the Augmentation Office.

[9] See before, p. 799.

[10] Sir Peter Leyceſter, p. 232.

[11] 3 Pars Original, 14 Eliz. Rot. 12.

[12] Trin. Record. 15 Eliz. Rot. 45.

[13] Unpubliſhed Talbot Papers in the Herald's College, vol. M. p. 108.

[14] Where ſee an account of him; and ſee alſo Bentham's Ely, p. 16.

[15] Mark xv. 21.

[16] Fuller's Worthies, Leiceſterſhire, p. 134.

[17] Journals of the Houſe of Commons, vol. V. p. 401.

In 1655, 9*s.* 6*d.* was collected in Shepeſhed, for the relief of the poor Proteſtants in Piedmont.

In 1695, the following decree occurs reſpecting the cuſtom of the manor of Shepeſhed:

"Jovis, 6° die Junii. Whereas George Bramley, and Richard Bramley an infant by the ſaid George his guardian and next friend, did heretofore (that is to ſay), in Michaelmas term laſt, exhibit their Engliſh bill into this honourable Court, againſt ſir Ambroſe Philipps, knt. and Edward Biddle, defendants, thereby, amongſt other things, ſetting forth, that the defendant ſir Ambroſe was ſeiſed of the manor of Shepſhead, in the ſaid county of Leiceſter, which manor conſiſteth of a large demeſne and ſeveral freeholds of inheritance, and alſo of ſeveral copyhold eſtates for lives or life, and ſeveral rents and ſervices ſeverally due thereupon; that one Richard Bramley, late of Shepſhead aforeſaid, the plaintiff Richard's uncle, was in his life-time, and at the time of his death, ſeiſed, and in actual poſſeſſion, of a copyhold cottage, with the appurtenances, and one acre and a half of copyhold land thereunto belonging, in Shepſhead aforeſaid, which he and his anceſtors held of the ſaid manor by copy of court roll; that, by cuſtom of the ſaid manor time out of mind uſed within the ſaid manor, any copyhold tenant, for life or lives, of any cuſtomary or copyhold eſtates within the ſaid manor, may change any of his life or lives; or, if any of his lives be dead, may fill up his copy, by adding of one or two lives to that life in being, for which the copyhold tenant muſt pay to the lord a reaſonable fine, to be ſet by the lord or his ſteward; that if a copyholder for three lives ſhould have two of the lives in his copy deed, yet, by the cuſtom of the ſaid manor time out of mind there uſed, ſuch copyholder may, in open court held for the manor, ſurrender his copyhold eſtate into the hands of the lord of the ſaid manor by the hands and acceptance of his ſteward, to the uſe of himſelf, or to the uſe of any other perſon or perſons that will purchaſe the ſame of him, during the lives of three other perſons, or during the life of himſelf and two other perſons, or during the ceſtique uſes life (in caſe of a ſale), and of the lives of two other perſons; or elſe ſuch copyhold tenant may, out of court, ſurrender his copyhold eſtate into the hands of two copyholders of the ſaid manor to the like uſes, which is to be preſented at the next court to be held for the ſaid manor, and found by the homage; or elſe copyhold tenants, by the cuſtom either in open court or out of court, may ſurrender their copyhold eſtates to the uſe of three lives, to take ſucceſſively, or any three lives, omitting their ſurrenders; and alſo the laſt tenant for life of the three lives, when they are by their copy to take by way of remainder ſucceſſively for their lives, may, in or out of court, ſurrender to two copyhold tenants to the uſe of any three lives, to take ſucceſſively, whereof his own life may be one; and in caſe ſuch ſurrender be made out of court, it muſt be preſented at the next court; and that in ſuch caſes the lord or his ſteward ought to accept of ſuch ſurrender, and to admit ſuch perſon or perſons to whoſe uſes the ſaid ſurrender is made, according to the purport of ſuch ſurrender; and after the ſaid perſon or perſons are admitted, then, according to the intent of the ſurrender, he or they are to pay to the lord ſuch reaſonable fine or fines as ſhall be ſet by the ſaid ſteward, according to the cuſtom of the ſaid manor: That he the ſaid Richard Bramley, uncle to the plaintiff Richard, being the laſt ſurviving life in the copy, did, in his life-time, deſire to ſurrender the ſame to the uſe of himſelf and the plaintiff; but it was not accepted in court; and thereupon, out of court, according to the ſaid cuſtom, he did ſurrender the ſaid copyhold cottage and premiſes in queſtion into the hands of Robert Wootton and Robert Bentley, two cuſtomary tenants of the ſaid manor, for the uſe of the ſaid Richard the uncle for his life, and after his death to the uſe of the ſaid plaintiff George for his life, and after his death to the uſe of the plaintiff Richard for his life; and died before any court was kept in the ſaid manor: And that the defendant Philipps having (as the plaintiffs and other copyholders believe) a deſign to break through all the ſaid cuſtoms, and ſuffer the copyholds to fall into hand, and extinguiſh them, which are of the value of £300. per annum (although he purchaſed them according to the value of the cuſtomary chief rent and cuſtomary fine upon renewals, according to the cuſtoms of the manor), neglected to keep any court for the ſaid manor, and hath brought his ejectment at law in the name of the defendant Biddle, and, at the laſt Summer aſſizes held for the ſaid county of Leiceſter, obtained a verdict in the ſaid ejectment for the copyhold cottage and lands in queſtion, which, as the caſe was, could not be avoided, and intended to get judgement thereupon, and to ouſt the plaintiff George of his poſſeſſion, and to deſtroy the plaintiff Richard's expectation, although the plaintiffs have applied themſelves to the ſaid defendant Philipps, and deſired him to hold a court, and to admit them tenant according to the ſaid ſurrender, and were ready and willing to pay ſuch reaſonable fine as the lord or his ſteward ſhould have ſet for ſuch their admittances: Therefore, that the defendant might anſwer the premiſes, and that the defendant Philipps might be compelled to hold a court for the ſaid manor, and ſeverally admit the plaintiffs tenants of the ſaid cottage and lands, according to the true intent of the ſaid laſt ſurrender, they paying a reaſonable fine for the ſame, according to the cuſtom of the ſaid manor, which is the ſcope of the plaintiffs' bill: Unto which bill the ſaid defendants, being duly ſummoned by proceſs of this honourable Court, appeared, and anſwered: And the plaintiffs put in exceptions to the ſaid defendant Philipps's anſwer; unto which anſwers the plaintiffs replied, and the defendants rejoined: And thereupon iſſue being joined, divers witneſſes were examined on both ſides, and publication being duly paſſed, and this cauſe being put into the paper of cauſes, came on this day to be heard in the Exchequer chamber, before the right honourable ſir Nicholas Lechmere, knight, ſir John Turton, knight, and ſir John Powell, knight, the barons of this Court; where, upon opening the matter of the plaintiffs' bill by Mr. Hawkins, of counſel with the plaintiffs, and the anſwers of the ſaid defendants by Mr. Mulſo, of counſel with the ſaid defendants, and upon reading the depoſitions of divers witneſſes taken in the ſaid cauſe, whereby it appeared, that the ſaid ſurrender made out of court by Richard Bramley, deceaſed, was preſented at the next court, and the plaintiffs found next court tenants of the ſaid copyhold in queſtion, and that they then were and are willing to pay to the ſaid lord a reaſonable fine for their admittance thereunto; and upon hearing Mr. Stanhope, Mr. Attrick, Mr. Bridges, Mr. Carter, and the ſaid Mr. Hawkins, on behalf of the ſaid plaintiffs, and of ſir Edward Ward, knight, his majeſty's attorney general, ſir Thomas Trevor, knight, his majeſty's ſolicitor general, ſir Francis Winnington, knight, the honourable Mr. Finch, ſir Thomas Powys, knight, Mr. ſerjeant Wrighte, Mr. Dodd, and Mr. Mulſo, on behalf of the defendants; and upon long debate of the matter; it is this day ordered by this Court, that a trial at law ſhall be had at the next aſſizes to be holden for the ſaid county of Leiceſter, in a feigned action, to be brought in the office of pleas of this court, wherein the plaintiff George Bramley ſhall be plaintiff, and the defendant ſir Ambroſe Philipps ſhall be defendant, wherein the iſſue to be tried ſhall be, whether there be a cuſtom in the ſaid manor of Shepſhead, that in caſe the laſt ſurviving life in a copyhold eſtate held of that manor hath ſurrendered (by deed in writing under his hand and ſeal, out of court, into the hands of two copyhold tenants of the manor, to the uſe of himſelf and two other perſons for life, to hold ſucceſſively, according to the cuſtom of the ſaid manor, or after the other, and the ſurrenderer dieth before the next court, and the ſurrenderer be after preſented at the next court), then, if the lord of the ſaid manor, or his ſteward, be obliged by the cuſtom of the ſaid manor to admit ſuch perſons tenants to whoſe uſe the ſurrender is made, according to ſuch ſurrender, the perſons to be admitted paying to the lord a reaſonable fine, according to the cuſtom of the ſaid manor, or not; unto which action the ſaid ſir Ambroſe Philipps is forthwith to name an attorney of the ſaid office to appear, and plead to iſſue, ſo as a trial may be had as aforeſaid; and the depoſitions of ſuch witneſſes as ſhall be then dead, or not able to travel, ſhall be read, and allowed as evidence at the ſaid trial; and the injunction formerly granted in this cauſe ſhall be, and is hereby, continued in the mean time, and until further order; and this cauſe ſhall be continued in the paper of cauſes to be further heard after ſuch trial had as aforeſaid. The ſaid defendant Philipps by his anſwer ſaid and confeſſed, that he was lord of the manor of Shepſhead, having purchaſed the ſame of the truſtees of the late duke of Buckingham; and that the ſaid Richard Bramley, deceaſed, the plaintiff George's brother, was in his life-time poſſeſſed of the copyhold cottage and premiſes in the bill by grant from the ſaid duke of Buckingham to Richard Bramley and Bridget his wife, and the ſaid Richard (the plaintiff George's brother) their ſon, to hold for their lives ſucceſſively; that, by cuſtom of the ſaid manor, the lord of the ſaid manor may, as often as copyholds fall into his hands, grant the ſame to one, two, or three perſons, to hold for their lives ſucceſſively; and that, in all caſes where any tenant would ſurrender, and have a new grant, and add one or two lives in being, in thoſe caſes the tenant ought to make application to the lord, or his agent, to agree what fine he ſhall pay for ſuch renewal or alteration; and if it be only an alteration of lives, then a leſſer fine is taken; but if it be to add one or two lives, or to renew in three lives, in thoſe caſes the lord will not agree under a greater fine, as the lives may be worth; and if all the three lives die, then the lord may retain and diſpoſe of the ſame at his pleaſure, and make a new grant thereof, at ſuch fine as he eſteems three lives to be worth; and that all ſurrenders by the cuſtom muſt be with the lord's conſent and acceptance in court, or out of court into the hands of two copyholders, paying ſuch fine as the lord and tenant can agree; and every ſurrender out of court muſt be preſented to the ſteward found by the homage at the next court; and ſuch ſurrender, either in court or out of court, muſt be with acceptance and conſent of the lord or his ſteward, and upon the tenant's agreeing for and paying ſuch fine as ſhall be ſet and agreed for, or elſe ſuch ſurrender is, by the cuſtom of the ſaid manor, of no avail: And the ſaid defendant Philipps ſaid, that, ſince his ſaid purchaſe, he had agreed with the tenants for granting new eſtates, and for renewals, at moderate rates, according to the value of the lives intended to be added; and ſtill intended ſo to do: And the ſaid defendant Philipps, by his anſwer, further ſaid, that Richard Bramley, the plaintiff George's brother, being the laſt life in his copy, and neglecting to make application to renew until October 1693, when he was in a conſumption, of which he died in December after, and being in ſuch ſickly condition, applied to the defendant, by one John Bramley, to renew his copy for the lives in the bill; which the defendant offered to do for four years purchaſe of the improved value, the lives in remainder being really worth more; which the ſaid John Bramley refuſed: And the ſaid defendant confeſſed it might be true, that afterwards, in November following, the ſaid Richard Bramley, deceaſed, might, at a court then held for the ſaid manor, offer to ſurrender, as in the bill; but that, the ſaid Richard having not agreed with defendant Philipps for a fine, the ſaid ſteward of the ſaid manor refuſed to accept of the ſaid ſurrender, and to grant any new admittance, without the defendant's conſent: And the ſaid defendant Philipps denied that he knew that the ſaid Richard Bramley, deceaſed, did make ſuch ſurrender to Wootton and Bentley as in the bill; nor was ſuch ſurrender preſented at the court held for the ſaid manor, or found by the homage: And the ſaid defendant Philipps confeſſed that ſuch ejectment was brought, and ſuch proceedings had, as in the bill, which (as adviſed) was lawful ſo to do, for that, all the grantees in the ſaid copy being dead, the defendant is become entitled to the poſſeſſion of the premiſes in queſtion; and inſiſted that he is not obliged to make any new grant thereof to the plaintiffs; and denied that the lord of the ſaid manor is obliged to make any admittance, or new grant, according to the ſurrender of the tenant, or otherwiſe than as the lord ſhall think fit; and ſaid, that the fine for any new grant or admittance to any copyhold tenement within the ſaid manor has always been accuſtomed to be ſet before the tenant's admittance to ſuch copyhold lands.

"This cauſe was tried at Leiceſter aſſizes, by a ſpecial jury; when a verdict was given for the defendant ſir Ambroſe Philipps, that there was no ſuch cuſtom within the ſaid manor as is mentioned in the ſaid iſſue directed as aforeſaid; and, on the 3d of May, 9 William III. it was finally ordered and adjudged by the Court, that the ſaid defendants ſhall be, and are hereby, diſmiſſed of and from the ſaid plaintiffs' bill, and the matters and things therein contained [1]."

In 1722, 46 freeholders polled from this pariſh; and in 1775, we find 61 names.

By an act, paſſed in 1777, for dividing and incloſing, within the pariſh of Shepeſhed, ſeveral large open fields and meadows, and ſeveral parcels of common or waſte ground, within the ring-fence of the ſaid fields, and adjoining thereto, within the ſame pariſh, and alſo ſeveral cloſes of land and ground called The Carrs, and Michaelmas grounds, within the ſaid pariſh, containing about 2000 acres, part whereof are freehold lands, and the other part copyhold lands, held under the lord of the manor of Shepeſhed, under grants for life or lives renewable; ſir William Gordon, Knight of the Bath (in right of dame Mary Gordon his wife), is deſcribed as lord of the ſaid manor and patron of the vicarage and pariſh of Shepeſhed; Joyce Beaumont, widow, as impropriator of, and entitled to, the tithes of all corn, grain, and hay, and other rectorial tithes, to all rectorial dues and payments ariſing within the ſaid open fields, meadows, commons, or waſte grounds, carrs, and Michaelmas grounds (except the great tithes of a cloſe called the Butthole Cloſe, and of five lands in Kirkhill Furlong, in Little Hawfield, and the great tithes of ſome other parcels of land in the ſaid fields which are tithe-free), and alſo to the great tithes of certain old incloſures within the ſaid pariſh of Shepeſhed, called the Oakley Cloſes; William Farnham, clerk, as vicar of Shepeſhed aforeſaid, entitled to certain glebe lands in the ſaid open fields, and to the great and ſmall tithes ariſing out of the ſaid lands called the Butthole Cloſe, and out of the ſaid five lands in Kirkhill Furlong, in Littlehawfield, and to all the ſmall tithes and ſurplice fees ariſing within the ſaid pariſh. Sir William Gordon is deſcribed as ſeiſed of the freehold of all the copyhold lands within the ſaid pariſh; and, together with the ſaid Joyce Beaumont and William Farnham, alſo John Alt, John Bramley, Thomas Weſt, Joſeph Smalley, William Harris, Robert Bentley, and others, as the owners and proprietors of, or entitled to, all the lands, grounds, and eſtates, lying within the ſaid pariſh of Shepeſhed. To ſir William Gordon, as lord of the manor, a merc or free-board is directed to be ſet out along the ſide of Piper Wood, in the ſaid open fields, the length of the wood, and as wide as the commiſſioners ſhould think fit; or they are empowered to make, if neceſſary, a public highway along the ſide of the wood. To the impropriatrix, a ſeventh of the common field to be allotted, with the proportion of a tenth for old incloſures, in lieu of all tithes whatever; out of which allotment a compenſation to be made by the impropriatrix to the vicar for his ſmall tithes, to the full annual value of £20. A farther allotment to be given to the vicar for the value of his glebe; and a ſeventh part of the Butthole Cloſe, and five lands in Kirkhill Furlong, in lieu of all great and ſmall tithes thence ariſing; and his right to mortuaries, Eaſter offerings, and ſurplice fees, is reſerved. This act not to extend to Charnwood foreſt, or Charley chace; but all right of common to continue as heretofore.

---

[1] From the MSS of the rev. Samuel Catte.

Remarkable Events, chiefly from the Regiſters.

“ There appeared in the years of our Lord 1715, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, unuſual lights in the Northern parts of the heavens, ſometimes inclining to the Eaſt, but oftener to the Weſt. They uſually aſcended or ſtruck up to the very zenith, in ſpiral ſtreams or columns, ſometimes in ſtrong vibrations or dartings. At firſt theſe phænomena ſtruck great terror into many people, but the frequency of them at length made them leſs frightful; the learned pretended to account for them in the natural way; but all their hypotheſes fell ſhort for that fund of fire or light, that ſupplied ſuch a prodigious quantity of ſtreams or pillars of light as frequently appeared. The firſt appearance we had of them was March the 6th, 1715; the fund of which appeared ſome degrees above the horizon, and ſeemed to be a great houſe on fire at a diſtance. This was juſt after a very long and great froſt we had had that winter; and the learned pretended (particularly Mr. Whiſton) that that occaſions ſuch a collection of nitrous and other inflammable particles, which, by their mutual affriction and ſtruggling one with another, left themſelves on fire, and formed that appearance. But the after-appearances in mild winters, when there had been little or no froſt, and even in May and later, proved there could be nothing in that. I think, without ſuperſtition, and with more piety, theſe appearances may be reckoned preludes and ſigns of the approaching end of the world, and the general conflagration of all ſublunary things; for, according to a very antient tradition, long before our Saviour's time, and, as ſome think, as old as the patriarchal age, and which was received by many of the antient fathers of the Chriſtian Church with great veneration and reſpect, the world draws very near its end: for, according to that, two or three centuries or more will put a final end to all things. Even ſo! Lord Jeſus, come quickly! Domine, miſerere noſtri.

Thomas Heath, vicar.”

“ July 18, 1727, half an hour after 4 in the morning, there was perceived in theſe parts the ſhock of an earthquake, which was repeated in half a minute or leſs. The wind ſtood at Eaſt at the time of the earthquake, and before there was a great calm. I did ſcarcely perceive any wind at all to blow; but in about 8 or 10 minutes afterwards there blew a pretty freſh gale, like one of thoſe hollow winds which goes before a ſtorm; this continued for about a quarter of an hour, then ceaſed; ſo all was ſtill again for about half an hour, till the common breeze begun to blow.

N. B. We had very cool weather for three days; but the weather before was exceſſively hot and ſultry.

Thos. Heath, vicar.”

The murder of William Warner, by John Harris of Shepeſhed, 1729-30, has been already ſtated under Garendon, p. 803, from this regiſter.

“ July 10, 1738, about 4 o'clock in the morning, there was a ſhock of an earthquake. The weather had been exceſſively hot for 10 or 12 days; but, for about 24 hours immediately preceding the earthquake, the wind had ſtood full North, and the temperature of the air much altered. I have felt three of theſe ſhocks within theſe 10 or 12 years; and what is remarkable, they have all happened pretty near the ſame hour of the day. Thomas Heath, vicar.”

John Flawn was condemned for ſigning Mr. Grey's will, of Kegworth. He was executed at Leiceſter Auguſt 15, and buried at Shepeſhed Auguſt 16, 1741.

“ Sept. 30, 1750, this day (Sunday), while I was adminiſtering the Sacrament, between the hours of 12 and 1 o'clock, I and the congregation were very ſenſible of the ſhock of an earthquake.

Thos. Heath, vicar.”

A great fire began at Sheepſhead, June 30, 1753, at one in the afternoon; 85 bays of buildings were conſumed. By what means it was occaſioned was never with certainty known. Some little time after the fire had begun, a piece of building was ſet on fire 150 yards diſtant from the main place of it; and ſo unexpectedly did the accident happen, that ſeveral perſons were buſy in aſſiſting their unfortunate neighbours, when at the ſame time their own houſes, &c. were conſuming. The damage is ſuppoſed to have amounted to £.2000. Several pigs and a calf were burnt, but no human lives were loſt. Some were great ſufferers, ſo far as never to recover their former circumſtances[1].

“ 1783, July 10, there was a great ſtorm of thunder and lightning; two houſes in Shepeſhed were ſtruck, in one of which a man, James Robinſon by name, was killed. The lightning entered the houſe by the outſide of the chimney, into a room up two pair of ſtairs: it made a hole through the floor, which was plaſter, not unlike one made by a ſmall muſket bullet; from thence it deſcended along a bird-cage, thence into the inſide of the chimney, and down thence where the poor man ſat who was killed; over his head were ſome fire irons, which it was ſuppoſed attracted the lightning; it then went right acroſs the houſe to a dreſſer, and threw ſome pewter off it; it then entered a parlour through the wall, being attracted by an iron hold-faſt, by which the dreſſer was faſtened; it burſt open the parlour door, and by this time its ſtrength was ſo far ſpent, that no more miſchief was done, except its burſting open a window. In the other houſe that was ſtruck it entered likewiſe by the outſide of the chimney; it then entered the inſide thereof, and went down to the fire-place, near which ſtood the fire-ſhovel, againſt the top of which was a cupboard, into which the lightning entered through a ſmall niche, and in its paſſage out broke a braſs hinge. What was remarkable, juſt over the niche by which the lightning entered the cupboard, lay an almanack, one corner of which was cut off with as much regularity as if done by a ſharp inſtrument; it then went round the jamb of the chimney, behind which was the houſe door, through one of the poſts thereof it forced a paſſage into an entry, a crack was made in the poſt, and it there ended; by the houſe ſide without lay a dog, which was killed.

“ There was an oak tree in a wood, about a mile diſtant from the town, the head whereof was torn from the trunk, and thrown to a conſiderable diſtance. A horſe was killed by it in Charnwood Foreſt, and near the body were found round holes made deep in the ground by the lightning; but there were no wounds to be ſeen on the horſe.

“ In the ſaid Foreſt ſeveral ſheep were killed; and, what was very ſurprizing, a rock, under which the ſheep ſeemed to have taken ſhelter from the ſtorm, was rent, and ſeveral ſtones thrown therefrom.

“ 1785, July 29, was another ſtorm of thunder and lightning, when the ſpire of Shepeſhed church was ſtruck; a number of ſtones with pieces of mortar were torn from it, and the ſteeple was much cracked and damaged. The dial-plate belonging to the church clock was alſo ſtruck, and it appeared as if it had been ſcorched.”

The annual wake or feaſt held at Shepeſhed is on the Sunday next before Old Midſummer-day. There is an annual perambulation alſo (though now often omitted) on Aſcenſion-day, to aſcertain the pariſh boundaries, and to ſee what encroachments have been made therein. This perambulation the antient bounds deſcribed in p. 1014, compared with thoſe of Barrow, p. 61, may in future in ſome degree aſſiſt.

The general appearance of the country hereabout is hills and vallies, and tolerably well watered. The inhabitants reckon a great portion of Charnwood Foreſt to belong to the pariſh, and ſome part of Garendon Park.

There are many woods in the neighbourhood; and the land, which is chiefly arable and paſture, with a ſmall part meadow, is principally ſound, dry, and tolerably fertile, moſtly loamy, with ſome part clay, and ſome ſandy; but that part of the pariſh which lies in Charnwood Foreſt is in general very rocky.

There is no common or quantity of waſte land in this pariſh, except the part of Charnwood Foreſt may be ſo accounted.

---

[1] Communicated, in 1791, by Mr. William Leſter.

The air is very dry and ſweet; and, owing to its vicinity to the Foreſt, it is a very ſalubrious healthy place.

The manure uſed here is horſe and cow-dung. Some few ploughs of the wheel kind, but moſt of the common ſort are uſed, and the mode of cultivation is chiefly in the common way. The kind of grain produced is the ſame as in the neighbourhood; wheat, barley, oats, rye, peas, beans, &c. &c.

A few ſheep are kept here for feeding; but a great number are raiſed upon Charnwood Foreſt, of a middling ſize, chiefly for their wool.

The land in this pariſh at a medium is let at about £.1. 4*s.* per acre per annum; and the poors rate is generally 3*s.* 4*d.* per pound, communibus annis.

The price for copyhold land is £26. per acre, freehold £38. per acre.

A very large ſtocking manufactory is carried on here, which, excluſive of combers, ſpinners, &c. is ſuppoſed to employ 400 perſons in framework-knitting only.

The uſual fuel is pit-coal, which is brought from Coleorton, chiefly at about 6½*d.* per hundred weight, reckoning 120 pounds to the hundred.

No conſiderable roads paſs through this town, except a turnpike road from Loughborough to Aſhby-de-la-Zouch, which is not much uſed; the common turnpike road going through the foreſt about three quarters of a mile diſtant from Shepeſhed; and another road, from Coleorton to Rempſton in Nottinghamſhire, which, like the former, can hardly be called conſiderable.

A ſmall quantity of land was allotted, at the incloſure of this pariſh, in lieu of the ſmall tithes; and the preſent owner of the land allotted in lieu of the great tithes (which includes the ſaid allotment for ſmall tithes) is Mr. William Norman. The yearly value is ſuppoſed to be about £.220.

In the middle of the town ſtands a hexagon croſs, whoſe baſe is compoſed of 4 rows of circular ſteps; above which there tapers a column, the whole height of which is about five yards; (ſee Plate CXXXVI.)

There are three meeting-houſes in this town; one for Mr. Weſley's followers, one for Anabaptiſts, and one for Quakers. The two former are very numerous. There is alſo a ſchool here, in part free; the ſalary of which is at the option of, and given by, Mr. Philipps, being £.10 per annum.

Shepeſhed has been, and ſtill is, famous for its choir of ſingers; being eſteemed the beſt in the county for more than 30 years paſt.

A token of Joſeph Ruxby, at the Ram's Head, Sheepſhed, 1667, is engraved in Plate CXXXIV. fig. 7.

BENEFACTIONS.

Thomas Palmer gave, out of his lands in the precincts of Loughborough, to the town-born poor people of Shepeſhed, 40*s.* a year for ever; three parts of it to be diſtributed amongſt the aged in money, and the fourth part to be beſtowed in Bibles, and given to ſuch as can and will read them.

In the year 1718, the ſum of £.200, being the bounty of her late moſt gracious Majeſty Queen Anne, of bleſſed and pious memory, was obtained; and the ſame (together with the contributions of lady Philipps, William Philipps, eſq. and his lady, and ſeveral of the principal inhabitants of Shepeſhed,) was laid out in the purchaſe of freehold lands, of the yearly value of £.20. lying at Melton Mowbray in this county; the ſaid lands and eſtate ſo purchaſed being annexed to this vicarage of Shepeſhed, as an augmentation to the ſame for ever.

To the Governors of the Bounty of Queen Anne, for the augmentation of the maintenance of the poor Clergy.

We, the underwritten commiſſioners for enquiring into the nature and value of the eſtates propoſed to be purchaſed, for a perpetual augmentation of the vicarage of Shepeſhed, in the county of Leiceſter, and dioceſe of Lincoln, do hereby certify, that we the ſaid commiſſioners did, on the 24th day of this inſtant November, 1718, perſonally view the ſaid eſtate, and uſe our utmoſt endeavours to enquire into the nature and value thereof, purſuant to the form of the printed queries to the ſaid commiſſion annexed. To which queries we return the following anſwers:

To the 1ſt and 2d queries, we anſwer, That the ſaid eſtate lies in the pariſh and lordſhip of Melton Mowbray, 12 miles diſtant from the village of Shepeſhed; and is a freehold eſtate, not liable to any outgoings of chief rents, duties, heriots, or other ſervices whatever.

To the 3d, 4th, and 5th queries, we anſwer, That the ſaid eſtate conſiſts in lands, cloſes, and meadows, in the fields and lordſhip of Melton Mowbray, as follows: A meadow in the Weſt field, in the lordſhip of Melton Mowbray, in the tenure of one R. Cope, containing, per eſtimation, 2 acres, called Stanſey meadow; two lands in Weſtern, on the Fenſike ſide in the ſaid Weſt field, in the tenure of the ſaid Cope, and containing, per eſtimation, one acre; three lands in the Whalley field, in the furlong beyond Stake hades, and butting upon Parſley frith, containing, per eſtimation, one acre; in Burton field one thorough land in Monk's houſe furlong, and one other thorough land in the furlong beyond Netherſike, and abutting upon Sunhades, each land containing, per eſtimation, half an acre. In the tenure of R. B. gent. in Whalley field, a cloſe called Organ leyes, containing, per eſtimation, $\frac{5}{6}$ acres; and one other cloſe, called Spinney cloſe, containing, per eſtimation, 10 acres. In the tenure of A. J. in Whalley field, a cloſe of leys, called Berkmill, and containing, per eſtimation, 4 acres. In Weſtern field, a cloſe of leys, called of Leyer, and containing, per eſtimation, 20 acres; and one other cloſe, with a ſmall piece of land at the lower end, ſhooting down to a little rivulet in the Weſtern field, and containing, per eſtimation, 10 acres.

To the 6th we anſwer, That the uſual annual value per acre of lands in the ſaid fields, as the ſame now are uſed, according to the cuſtom of the ſaid lordſhip, upon a leaſe of the ſame for three years, is as follows; viz. of arable 6*s.* 8*d.* per acre, ley ground 6*s.* 8*d.* per acre, and ſometimes more or leſs, according to the nature and goodneſs thereof, of meadow ground 30*s.* per acre.

To the 7th we anſwer, That the particulars abovementioned to be in the tenure of the ſaid R. Cope, are now leaſed to him, by verbal agreement, for the term of three years, ending at Lady-day 1720, at £4. per annual rent, viz. Stanſey meadow, at 3*s.* annual rent, and three ſelions or ridges of arable land, at 20*s.* yearly rent; and that the ſame have been let at the ſaid rent for 20 years. That the fences belonging to the ſaid particulars are now in ſufficient repair, and that the tenants are obliged to keep and maintain the ſame in good repair; that the duties chargeable for the ſame are, to the church, poor, conſtable, and all other parochial duties and levies, all which are borne by the tenant, except the land-tax, which, by agreement, is allowed by the landlord to be deducted out of the tenant's rent.

That the particulars above mentioned to be in the poſſeſſion of Mr. R. B. are, by verbal agreement, leaſed to him at 5*s.* rent for one year, ending at Lady-day next. That the ſame, for two years before, were leaſed to others at the ſame rent.

That the particulars above mentioned to be in the tenure of A. J. are, by verbal agreement, leaſed to him for three years, ending at Lady-day next, at the yearly rent of £6. 13*s.* 4*d.*

That the ſame have for ſix years laſt paſt been let at the ſame rent, viz. Berkmill cloſe at £4. 2*s.* 6*d.* yearly rent, and the two cloſes called Twenty Acres and Ten Acres, together with the parcel of ground thereto adjoining, at £6. 13*s.* 4*d.* yearly rent.

That we do not find that the ſeveral eſtates are like to be much better when out of leaſe than they are at preſent; but we are of opinion, that the annual value thereof, if duly managed and huſbanded, will not decreaſe after the expiration of the leaſes, but will at leaſt continue as it is at preſent, if not advanced.

We further certify, that there have been, and now are, belonging to the ſaid three acres of arable land, eight ſheep commons; but, the ſame not being offered to ſale, we have not taken notice of them in any of our anſwers to the ſaid queries.

Imprimis, in the tenure of Richard Cope; viz.

In the Weſt field:

A meadow, called Stanſey meadow, containing, per eſtimation, 2 acres.

Two ſelions or ridges of arable land, in the Weſtern furlong, lyeing on the Fenſike ſide, containing, per eſtimation, 1 acre.

In the Whalley field:

Three ſelions or ridges in the furlong beyond Stakehades, containing, per eſtimation, one acre.

In the Burton field:

One thorough ſelion or ridge of land in Monk's-houſe furlong, containing, per eſtimation, half an acre.

One other ſelion, &c. in the furlong beyond Hitheſike, and abutting on Sun-hades.

2d Item, in the tenure of Mr. R. B.

In the Whalley field:

One cloſe of ley ground, called Organ Cloſe, containing, per eſtimation, ⅚ acre.

One other cloſe of ley ground, called Spinney cloſe, containing, per eſtimation, 10 acres.

3d Item, in the tenure of A. J.

In the Whalley field, on the Weſtern ſide:

A cloſe or meadow called Berkmill cloſe, containing, per eſtimation, ⅕ acre

In the Weſtern field:

A cloſe of ley ground, containing, per eſtimation, 20 acres.

One other cloſe and piece of ground adjoining thereto, and extending from thence to a little rivulet in the ſaid field, containing, per eſtimation, 10 acres.

	£.	s.	d.
Money raiſed for the poor within the year ending at Eaſter 1776,	346	0	0
Fxpended in county rates, &c.	7	15	8
——— on the poor, —	247	13	2
Rent of workhouſe[1] and habitations,	17	8	6
Expended in litigations, —	10	17	11
Money raiſed for 1783, —	334	2	11
——— 1784, —	296	17	10
——— 1785, —	316	19	8
Medium of theſe three years,	316	0	1
Medium of county expences,	6	3	9
——— of expences not relating to the poor, repairs of church, roads, &c.	33	6	3
——— of nett annual expences,	276	10	1
——— of attending on magiſtrates,	10	10	1
——— of entertainments at meetings,	2	7	0
——— of law expences, —	12	5	9
——— of ſetting the poor to work,	0	16	8

The Return made to Parliament in 1786, in anſwer to an enquiry reſpecting the charitable donations in this pariſh, may be ſeen in vol. I. p. 77.

By the Return to Parliament in 1801, Shepeſhed contained 478 inhabited houſes, and 17 uninhabited; 511 families; 1353 males, 1274 females; total 2627; of whom 235 were chiefly employed in agriculture, and 1493 in trade, manufactures, &c.

The CHURCH (ſee Plate CXXXVI.)

dedicated to St. Botolph, has a tower (in which are five bells) and a ſpire; part of it is built of freeſtone, and part of a ſort of ſtone brought from Charnwood Foreſt. The dimenſions are, 66 feet from North to South, 45 from Eaſt to Weſt.

The chancel is 39 feet long, and 22½ broad.

The ſteeple at the bottom is 16½ feet long, and 19¾ broad.

It conſiſts of a nave, ſeparated from two ailes by tranſepts, and chancel, North and South porches, three pointed arches on cluſtered hexagon columns, over which are clereſtory windows.

The communion-table is brown marble, full of ſhells.

In the wall on the South ſide of the church there is cut in freeſtone a ſmall piſcina.

In the church is a neat freeſtone font.

The altar-piece is neatly wainſcoted and painted; and the Ten Commandments are written thereon.

There is a ſilver ſacramental cup, with the year 1689 engraven thereon; alſo two pewter ſalvers, with the ſame date; and there are inſcriptions on all three, importing them to be the gift of lady Philipps of Garendon.

The South window of the chancel is ſtopped up.

A remarkable old poors box is engraved fig. 5.

In the Matriculus of 1220, Shepeſhed is deſcribed to be under the patronage of the abbot of Leiceſter, who had it in proprios uſus; Gilbert, the then vicar, having been inſtituted by Hugh then biſhop of Lincoln.

In 1344, the procurations were 7*s.* 6¾*d.*; the rectory was taxed at 12 marks, the vicarage at 6*s.* and paid 2*s.* for Peter-pence.

In 1534-5, the ſynodals were 3*s.* 6*d.*; the abbot of Leiceſter's penſion 1*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*; and the value of the vicarage 10*l.*

In 1552, the commiſſioners reported, that the church of Shepeſhed contained,

In primis, a challice of ſylver.

It̃m, three belles.

It̃m, tow copes, one of old ſylke, and another of red velvet.

It̃m, tow red veſtments.

It̃m, one whyte veſtment of fuſtion.

Sir John Beaumont, of Gracedieu, was patron of this church in 1626. His arms were, Quarterly, 1. and 4. Azure, ſemée and a lion rampant Or, with the arms of Ulſter, Beaumont, bart.; 2. Argent, a maunch Sable, with a creſcent for difference; 3. . . . . a bend engrailed . . . . . an eſcutcheon of pretence, quarterly, 1. and 4. an eagle diſplayed within a border engrailed; 2. Argent, a chevron between three birds Sable; 3. . . . . . lozengy . . . . . . Creſt, on a chapeau Azure, turned up Ermine, ſemée of fleur de lis Or; fig. 5.

"April 12, 1648. Whereas this Committee, the 14th of June, 1647, graunted 50*l.* a yeare out of the proffitts of two parts of the impropriate rectorie of Sheapeſhead, in the county of Leiceſter, ſequeſtered from ſir Thomas Beamont, papiſt and delinquent, to and for increaſe of the maintenance of Robert Palmer, miniſter of the pariſh church of Sheapſhead aforeſaid, it is ordered, that the tenants of the premiſſes for the tyme beinge doe from tyme to tyme paie the ſaid 50*l.* a yeare to the ſaid Mr. Palmer, according to the purport of the ſaid order. And, for the arreares of the ſaid 50*l.* a yeare unpaid, it is ordered, that the ſame be paid by the tenants of the ſaid impropriation for the tyme then alſo beinge to the ſaid Mr. Palmer[2]."

In 1650, Shepeſhed was valued as an impropriation; the rectory worth 50*l.* the rectory 20*l.*; and the incumbent as "no preacher, and ſcandalous."

The heir of ſir John Beaumont was ſir Thomas Beaumont; and the patronage of this church came afterward to Robert Beaumont, eſq. who married one of the coheirs of ſir Thomas Beaumont, and ſold it to ſir Ambroſe Philipps.

The preſent patron is Thomas March-Philipps, eſq.

In the king's books it is called a diſcharged living, worth, decimis majoribus & minoribus, cum manſ' & aliis proficuis, communibus annis, 8*l.* 10*s.* 10*d.*

Certified value 30*l.*

The epiſcopal procurations are, for the rectory 2*s.* 1*d.*; the vicarage 1*s.* 5*d.*; the archidiaconal 3*s.* 6*d.*

There is a ſmall parochial library in the parſonage.

---

[1] There were 80 perſons in the workhouſe in 1776.

[2] From the original minute-books of the Committee of Sequeſtrations, preſerved in the Bodleian Library.

VICARS.	PATRONS.
Gilbert, 1220.	Prior and convent of St. Mary de Pratis at Leiceſter.
Simon de Reyleſton, 1252.
William de Wivelſton, 1334.
John Hutchinſon, 1534.
Peter Ollerinſhaw, inducted June 18, 1569; buried October 10, 1621.
Robert Palmer, 1647; buried Sept. 30, 1658.	Committee of Sequeſtration.
Edmund Lawrance, miniſter, was buried Dec. 30, 1664.
Robert Port, April 16, 1665; buried Jan. 26, 1671.	Sir Thomas Beaumont, bart.
William Roſe, Feb. 14, 1670.
Thomas Barradaile occurs vicar 1689.
John Robinſon, March 13, 1698.	Sir Ambroſe Philipps, knt.
Richard Kay, March 19, 1701.
William Antill, Sept. 21, 1703.
Gervaſe Bradgate, Sept. 21, 1713.	William Philipps, eſq.
Wall Parker, Nov. 26, 1717.
Thomas Heath, M. A. Feb. 2, 1735.
William Farnham, Oct. 3, 1765.	Samuel Philipps, eſq.
Charles Alſopp, June 12, 1777.	Sir William Gordon, K. B.

MONUMENTAL INSCRIPTIONS.

On a braſs plate againſt the North wall are the figures of a man and wife kneeling at a deſk, with three ſons and four daughters, as repreſented in the plate, fig. 8.

THOMAS DUPORT, ARMIGER, & CORNELIA[1] VXOR EIVS, EX ANTIQUA BELKNAPPORVM FAMILIA ORIUNDA; QVI QVINQVAGINTA PLVS MINVS ANNOS IN SACRO CONIVGIO VNANIMES VIXERVNT. ILLE
PRISCÆ SEVERITATIS EXEMPLAR; HÆC MODESTIÆ ET CASTITATIS MATRONALIS; UTERQ; RARÆ PIETATIS & PRVDENTIÆ, ET TUM BONORUM OMNIVM TUM PRESERTIM PAUPERUM &
LITERATORVM SEMPER OBSERVANTISSIMI. EX LIBERIS VERO TRESDECIM, MARES TRES, FŒMINAS QUATUOR (QUOS IN ÆRE DESCRIPTOS VIDES) AD CONFIRMATAM VSQ; ÆTATEM IN OMNIBUS
PIÆ ET LIBERALIS EDUCATIONIS EXERCITIIS ET OCCVPATIONIBVS STVDIOSISSIME INSTITVERUNT.
ILLE OBIIT 5to DIE SEPTEMB^{s} A^{o} DN'I 1592, ETATIS SUÆ 78. HÆC . . . . DIE . . . . A^{o} D'NI . . . ."

At the top, in an arch under a Death's head, DEVS IN MISERATIONE MULTA NOS RESPICIT.

Over the ſons the arms of Duport; over the daughters, Norton.

In the chancel:

At the Eaſt end, on the North ſide of the window, at top two cherubs and urn; at ſides cherubs heads and lamp; at bottom 3 cherubs heads. Arms: Azure, a chevron between three falcons cloſe Argent, Philipps, impaling, on a bend, three eſcutcheons, between two garbs, fig. 9.

"To the memory of ſir Ambroſe Phillipps, late of Garenton, knight, and ſerjeant at law,
who was educated at Wincheſter ſchool,
and for ſome time was fellow of New colledge in Oxford. Afterwards he applied himſelf to the ſtudy of the Law; which having practiſed about 30 years with great ſucceſs and commendation, he then retired into the country, where he made himſelf uſeful by compoſing differences and preventing law-ſuits amongſt his neighbours;
and ſpent much of his time in building, planting,
and other improvements.
He died the 16th of June,
anno Dom. 1706, in the 69th year of his age.
This monument was erected by dame Mary his wife.
Dame Mary Phillipps died October 17, anno Dom. 1736, æt. 88."

On a monument on the North ſide, two cherubs, with hour-glaſs and ſcull, and a black urn. Arms: Quarterly, 1. and 4. Philipps; 2. and 3. Gules, a bend Vaire, between two garbs, fig. 10.

"Subtus jacet AMBROSIUS PHILIPPS,
Filius natu max' et perdilect'
AMBROSII PHILIPPS, de Garenton, mil',
& D'NÆ MARIÆ uxor^{s} ſuæ.
Obiit 5to Aug.
Anno Domini 1696.
ætatis 25."

On another monument on the North ſide; a weeping cherub at top, three heads of cherubs below. Arms: Philipps; impaling, Argent, on a feſs double cotiſed Gules, three griffins heads eraſed Or; Daſhwood. Creſt, on a wreath, a demi griffin; fig. 11.

"Near this place lieth the body of William Philipps, of Garendon, in the county of Leiceſter, eſquire, ſon and heir of ſir Ambroſe Philipps, king's ſerjeant at law.
He was born in the year 1672; and,
being firſt bred to merchandize, reſided ſome years in the Engliſh factory at Conſtantinople;
but was called home, upon the death of his elder brother Ambroſe, after having gained abroad the character of an able merchant, and made a very good improvement of the fortune his father gave him.
In the year 1703, he married Jane, daughter of ſir Samuel Daſhwood, then lord mayor of the city of London, and by her had iſſue two daughters, Mary and Ann, which latter died young;
and three ſons, Ambroſe, Samuel, and William.
He was many years an acting juſtice of the peace, in which ſtation he made himſelf very uſeful to his country, by compoſing of differences, and by keeping up a good harmony and friendſhip amongſt his neighbours.
He lived the maſter of all deſirable good qualities, a loving huſband, an indulgent father, a good friend; and died much lamented, on the tenth day of June, in the year 1729.
To his memory,
at the ſole expence of his moſt loving wife and executrix, this monument is erected.

On a monument at the Eaſt-end of the chancel, on the South ſide of the window; at top, two lamps; below, cherubs heads and hour-glaſs. Arms: Philipps; impaling, Argent, on a bend Sable, three roſes Argent, Cary, fig. 12.

"In Chriſtian hope of a bleſſed immortality, near this place lyeth interred the body of Elizabeth, late the endeared wife of Charles Philipps, ſon of ſir Ambroſe Philipps, knt.
She was daughter to Nicholas Cary, of Hackney, in Middleſex, eſq.
and left iſſue two daughters.
Her generous diſpoſition, and exemplary virtue, made her univerſally eſteemed; and her early death lamented, being in the eighteenth year of her age, the 2d of March, 1709."

---

[1] In the Regiſters are the following notices of this family:
"1591. Francis Duporte, buried June 30.
"Oulde Miſtres Cornelia Duporte, buried the 24th of Januarie.
"1618. Feb. 25, Margaret Duporte, al' Barradale, buried.
"1623. Anne, the wife of Henry Duport, eſq. buried 10 April."

On the South wall in the chancel:
Arms of Philipps ſingle.
"Here lieth the body of
Charles Philipps, eſq.
of Low-Layton, in Eſſex,
Turkey merchant,
and one of the ſons of
ſir Ambroſe Philipps, of Garenton,
who departed this life
Sept. 13, 1754, aged 71.
Here alſo lieth Elizabeth his wife, who died the 2d of March, anno 1709."

On a flat ſtone againſt the wall on the North ſide:
Arms of Philipps ſingle.
"Here lieth the body of John Philipps, eſq.
of Low-Layton, in Eſſex,
Turkey merchant,
and one of the ſons of
ſir Ambroſe Philipps, of Garenton,
who departed this life
Jan. 17, 1756, aged 80.

On the North ſide of the chancel, an urn on a black cenotaph, boys on the pediment, and at the top the arms of Philipps, fig. 13. inſcribed:

"Siſte paululùm, Viator, & humanæ ſortis miſerere.
Pretium erit lacrymarum, cùm ſcias ſub hoc tumulo reliquias eſſe conditas
AMBROSII PHILLIPPS,
Viri optimæ indolis, eximiæ formæ, variæ eruditionis,
ingenii florentiſſimi,
Summo Regni Concilio
incorruptis Leiceſtriæ Comitatûs ſuffragiis iterùm delegatus,
munus ſenatorium, licet in hoc ævo venali,
Credite, poſteri!
honeſtè, liberè, fideliter adminiſtravit:
neque inter graves Reipublicæ curas levioribus etiam ſtudiis vacare indecorum exiſtimavit;
verùm, intervalla negotiorum otio eleganti diſtinguens, Picturam, Architecturam, libros, hortoſque, cum dignitate coluit.
Ex Italiâ reverſus,
inſpectis antiquorum ædificiorum reliquiis,
Artes Romanas in patriam tranſtulit;
et inter principes viros qui jam Architecturam in Angliâ reſtituere & perpolire cœperant, enituit penè primus.
Inter ſpes & plauſus amicorum, in ipſo juventutis flore, morbi pertinacis tædio confectus, fato conceſſit,
rarum adoleſcentibus exemplar;
quos per omnem vitæ beneactæ tenorem per patientiam in valetudine ferendâ, per miram in morte tranquillitatem,
& vivere docuit & mori.
Obiit apud Garenton, 6to Novembris, anno Salutis
1737, ætatis 30."

An urn, with a man and woman in a Roman dreſs, ſupporting each other, againſt a brown pyramid. Arms: Philipps impaling Daſhwood, fig. 14.

"NEAR THIS PLACE LIE THE REMAINS OF
JANE PHILIPPS, RELICT OF WILLIAM PHILIPPS, ESQUIRE, OF GARENTON, AND
SECOND DAUGHTER OF SIR SAMUEL DASHWOOD,
K^{t}, AND LORD MAYOR OF LONDON
IN THE YEAR 1703. SHE DEPARTED
THIS LIFE THE 30th JANUARY, 1761, AGED 77.
AND OF
MARY PHILIPPS, ELDEST DAUGHTER OF THE SAID
WILLIAM AND JANE
PHILIPPS, WHO DYED THE 19th APRILL, 1766,
IN THE 61st
YEAR OF HER AGE.
THIS MONUMENT WAS ERECTED TO THE MEMORY OF HIS MOTHER
AND SISTER, BY SAMUEL PHILIPPS, ESQUIRE,
THE PRESENT
POSSESSOR OF GARENTON, 1767."

On a white marble pediment, an urn, charged with Faith, Hope, and Charity; and on its top Religion, with a croſs and palm, and a ſcroll in her right hand, fig. 15:

"SACRED TO THE MEMORY OF
SAMUEL PHILIPPS, LATE OF GERENDON, ESQ.
WHOSE UNFEIGNED LOVE OF TRUTH AND JUSTICE,
UNBLEMISHED HONOUR, AND INTEGRITY, RENDERED
HIM RESPECTABLE IN THE PUBLIC ESTEEM;
WHILE HIS PARTICULAR CARE AND TENDERNESS FOR THE INTERESTS OF HIS DEPENDANTS, FAMILY, AND FRIENDS, WERE THE FAVOURITE DISTINCTIONS OF HIS PRIVATE CHARACTER.
HE DELIGHTED IN THE ELEGANCE AND IMPROVEMENTS OF HIS NATIVE SEAT; BUT PARTICULARLY CHERISHED ITS MOST DISTINGUISHED
ORNAMENTS, PLENTY AND HOSPITALITY.
BY THE DEATH OF HIS ELDER BROTHER HE BECAME POSSESSOR OF GERENDON;
AND, BY HIS OWN DEATH WITHOUT ISSUE,
CONCLUDED THE TOO SHORT-LIVED RACE OF A
MOST RESPECTABLE AND WORTHY FAMILY.
HE DIED MARCH 16, 1774, AGED 65.
TO THE MEMORY ALSO OF SOPHIA HIS WIFE,
DAUGHTER OF FRANCIS LEWIS, OF STANFORD,
IN THE COUNTY OF NOTTINGHAM, ESQ.
WHO, AFTER THE DISPLAY OF MANY VIRTUES AND AMIABLE QUALITIES, DURING THE WHOLE
MORNING OF HER LIFE,
WAS CUT OFF ABOUT THE NOON OF IT,
IN THE 39th YEAR OF HER AGE,
19 JAN. 1766."

At bottom, Philipps; impaling, Gules, three hawks volant; Alſop. On an eſcutcheon of pretence, on the man's coat Argent, on a feſs Azure, three boars' heads cloſe coupt Or, in chief a lion paſſant Gules; Lewis, of Stanford. Creſt, on a wreath, a demi griffin[1]; fig. 16.

On a tablet on the ſame tomb:
"Here lie the remains of Lady GORDON.
She was the wife of Samuel Phillipps, of Garendon Park, eſq.
who, in gratitude to her merit, left her in poſſeſſion of his large eſtate during her life,
on the 6th of July, 1776.
She was again married to ſir William Gordon, knight of the moſt honourable order of the Bath;
in whoſe tender and grateful remembrance the loſs of an ample fortune is totally abſorbed,
in that of the moſt chearful companion,
the moſt warm and ſincere friend,
the moſt tender and affectionate wife,
and
the moſt charitable and exemplary woman.
In memory of her virtues,
and in teſtimony of his great regret,
he placed this tablet.
She died the 5th of Auguſt, 1796, aged 59."

Slabs within the rails for,

Gul' Philipps, 1729.

Mary, wife of ſir Ambroſe Philipps, æt. 88, ob. Oct. 17, 1736.

Ambroſe Philipps, eſq. died Nov. 6, 1737, aged 31.

William Philipps, died November 1753, aged 41.

Jane Philipps, relict of William Philipps, of Garendon, eſq. died Jan. 30, 1761, aged 77.

Without, on ſlabs:

Ambroſe Philipps, died Auguſt 5, 1696.

Ambroſe Philipps, of Garendon, died 16 June, 1706, aged 69.

Anne, daughter of William Philipps, eſq. of Garendon, died April 18, 1711, aged 6.

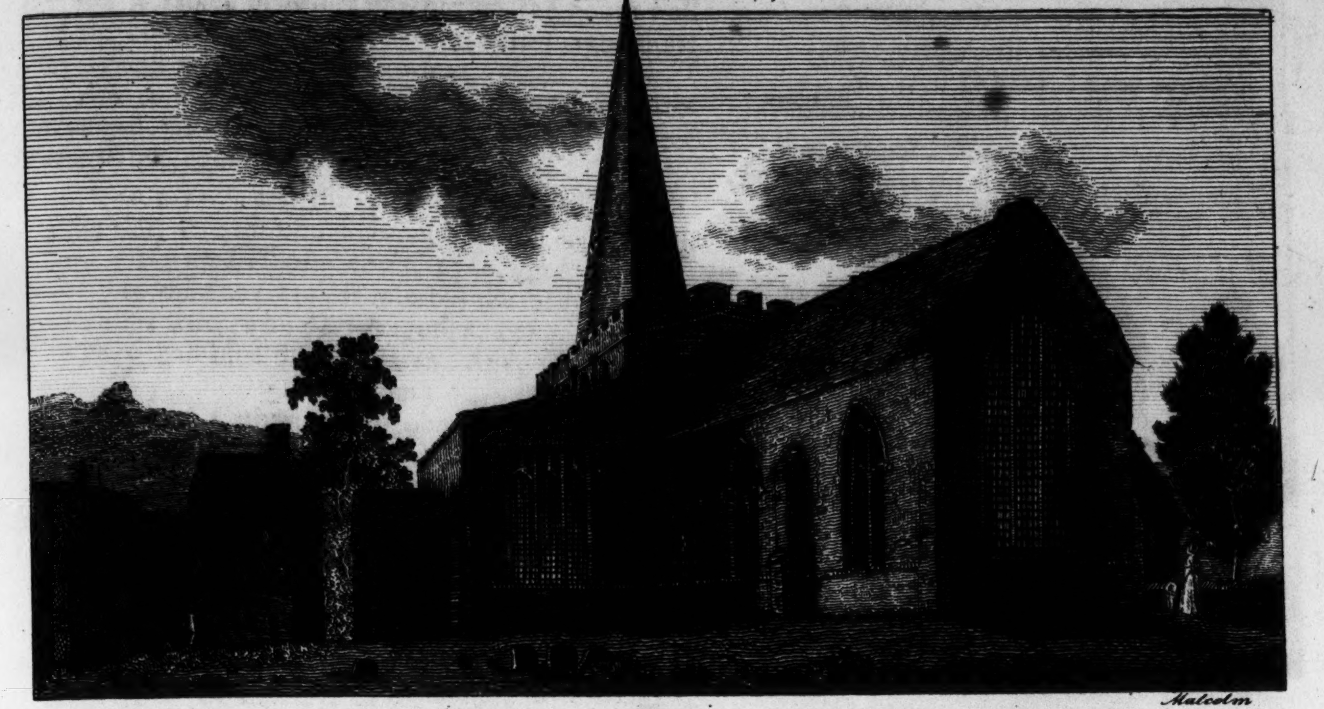
Mary, eldeſt daughter of Charles Philipps, merchant, died July 14, 1716, aged 8.

Before the ſteps:

Mrs. Mary, eldeſt daughter of William Philipps, eſq. died April 19, 1766, aged 61.

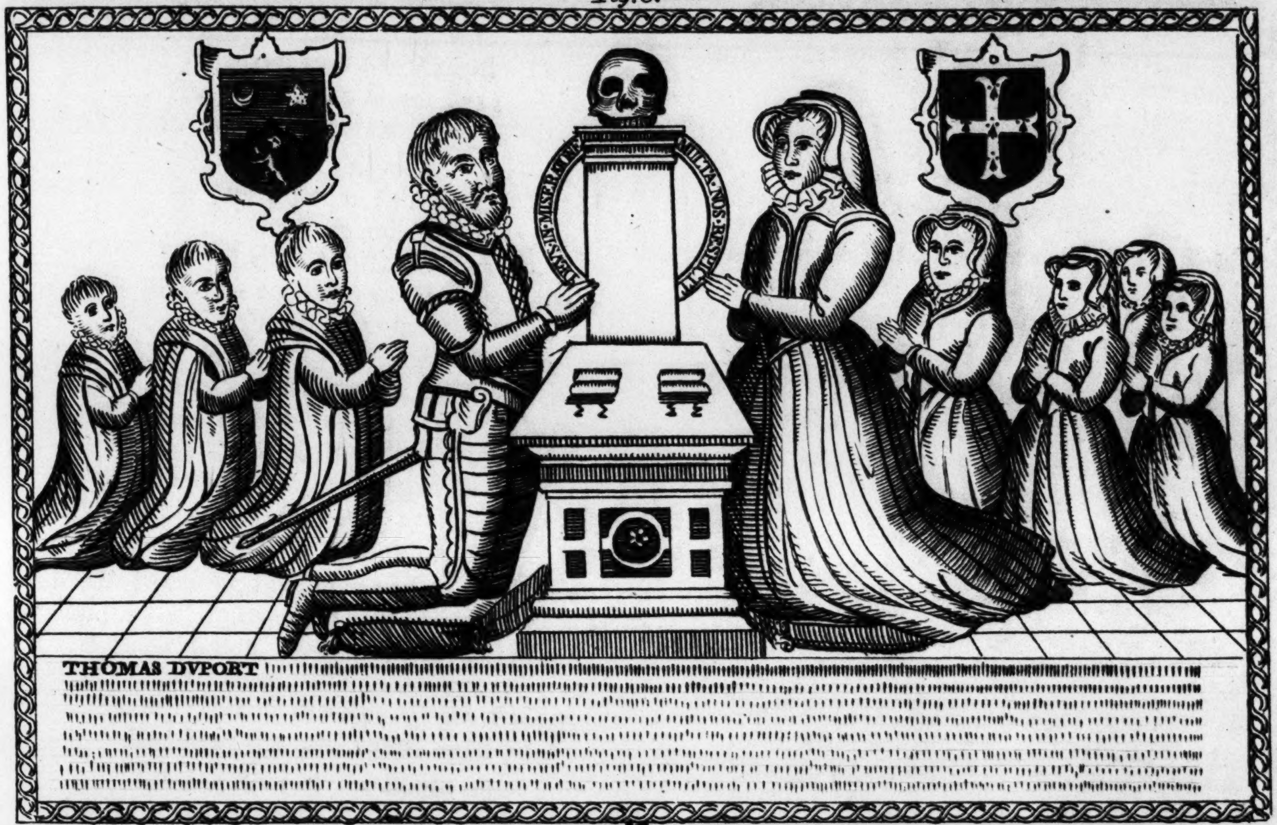
---

[1] Theſe arms are alſo on an eſcutcheon on the North ſide of the chancel.



Malcolm

Fig.8.



THOMAS DVPORT

3

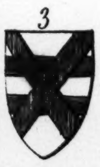


Fig.6.

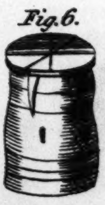
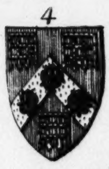


4



16

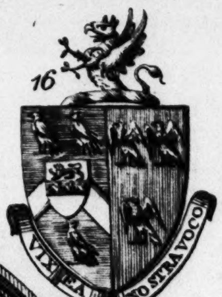


Fig.2.

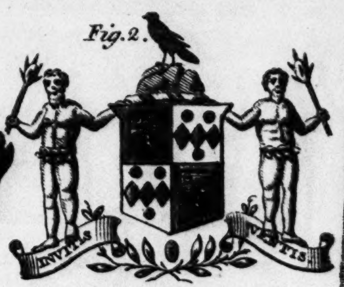
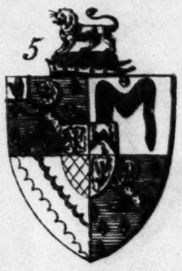
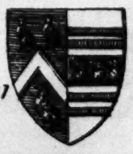


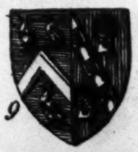
5



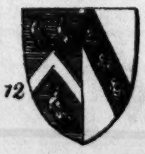
11



9



12



10

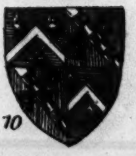


Fig.7.

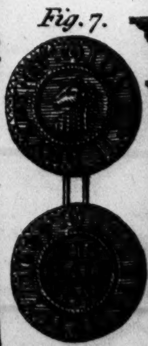
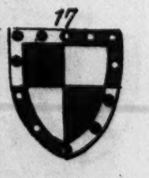


17



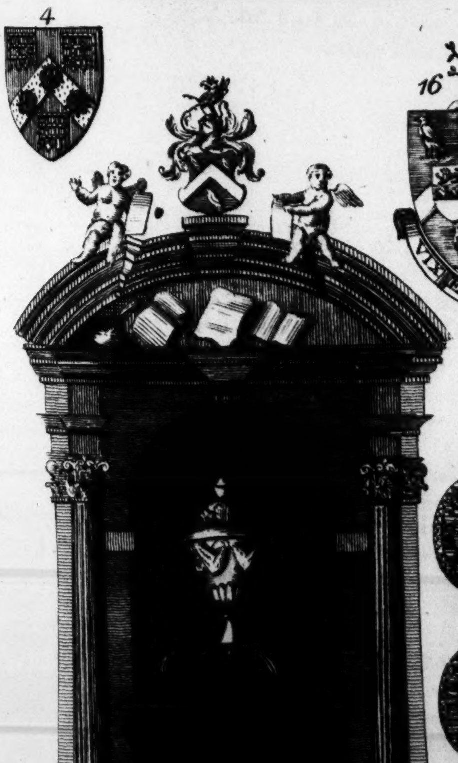


Fig.13.

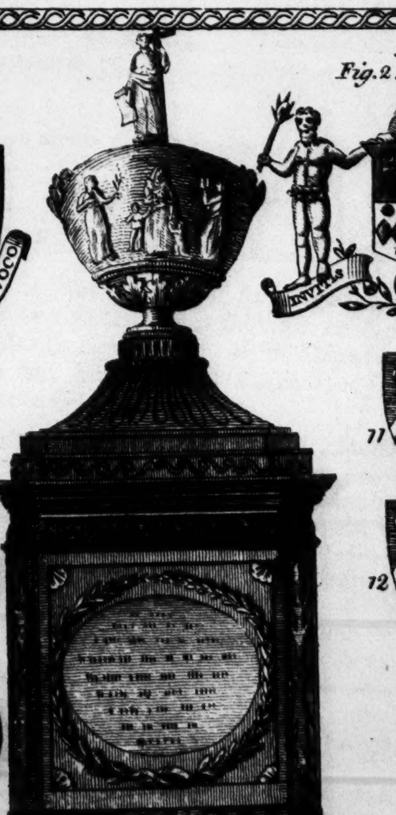

Fig.15.

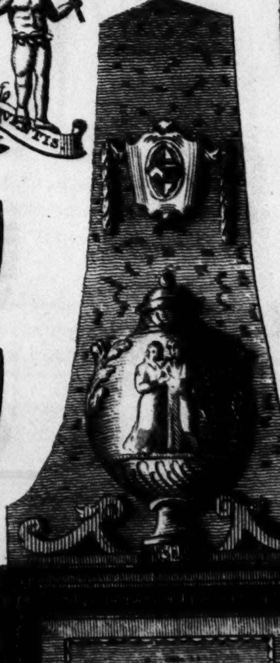

Fig.14.

On a tablet of white marble on the South wall of the church, a white marble urn, with ſnakes round it, againſt a pediment of brown:

Arms: Quarterly, Gules and Argent, counterchanged, in a border of annulets and croſſes pateé alternately counterchanged; fig. 17.

"In a vault near this place lie the remains of John Alt, late of Loughborough in this county, eſq.
He died December 22, 1732, aged 59.
In the ſame vault is interred the body of Ann his wife, who died Auguſt 8, 1783, aged 87.
They had iſſue three children, Ann, Catharine,
and John;
of whom Catharine and John are here buried.
Their only ſurviving daughter Ann,
the wife of Thomas Borrow, of Caſtlefields,
in the county of Derby, eſq.
erected this monument, July 18, 1785."

On a ſtone lying in the body of the church:

"Here lyeth the body of
Mr. William Antill, rector of Lamley, in the county of Nottingham, and formerly vicar of this church, who departed this life Auguſt
the 17th, anno Dom. 1713,
in the 36th year of his age."

In the nave:

"Mr. Thomas Ainſworth,
the huſband of
Dorothy Ainſworth, departed this life, the 10th day of January, 1737,
aged 43 years.
Here lieth the body of
Dorothy Ainſworth, relict of Thomas Ainſworth (of Long Whatton, and daughter of John Souter, of Sheepſhead). She departed this life the 9th day of January, 1764, aged 68."

In the South aile:

"Juxta hic remanent variolarum ſpolia
Wallei Parker, hujus eccleſiæ vicarii, flebiles reliquiæ.
Ob. prid. non. Decemb^{r}, anno ætatis 35, vicariatus 7°, anno X^{ti} 1725.
Sarah, relict of the Rev. Wall. Parker, died May the 9th, 1769, aged 78."

On the floor of the South aile [*]:

"Mr. John Alt, ſteward at Gerendon near 40 years, died the 22d of December, anno ætatis 59,
anno Dom. 1732."

"William Balſer and Ann his wife,
who died April 17, 1743, aged 84.
She died Oct. 23, 1753, aged 74.
William Balſer died Dec. 11, 1722, aged 20."

Upon a tomb, near the North-eaſt corner, in the church yard, is the following inſcription:

"Here lieth the body of the Reverend Thomas Heath, A. M.
vicar of this pariſh,
and rector of Hathern.
This truly worthy and learned Divine, after the faithful diſcharge of his paſtoral office
in this pariſh
for almoſt forty years together, and a life ſpent in the regular and uniform exerciſe
of all Chriſtian virtues, died the 18th of October, 1765,
in the 72d year of his age."

In the church-yard:

On upright ſtones againſt the Eaſt wall of the church:

1. "Here lieth the body of Thomas Warren, late butler to Samuel Philipps, eſq.
He died at Gerondon, July the 30th, 1763,
in the 60th year of his age,
and the 44th year of his ſervice.
Alſo to the memory of Jane,
the wife of the ſaid Thomas Warren.
She died February the 14th, 1778,
in the 69th year of her age."

2. "Here lyeth the body of Giovanni Modena, a native of Linos, one of the iſlands of the Archipelago,
and ſervant of Samuel Philipps, eſq.
He died the 20th day of June, 1739, aged 27 years."

3. "Here lyeth the body of Charles Bromley, late ſervant to Samuel Philipps, eſq.
He died the 11th day of April, 1740, aged 27 years."

On other upright ſtones:

"Joſeph Cheſter, late of Gracedieu,
died June 16, 1782, aged 70.
Hannah, wife of Joſeph Cheſter,
died March 8, 1782, aged 60."

Elizabeth Alt, died Jan. 13, 1739, aged 36.
John Alt, died March .., 1770, aged 74.
Edward Alt, died May 15, 1771, aged 90.
Richard Merriman, died Dec. 27, 1741, aged 75.
Thomas Cheſter, died Nov. 21, 1776, aged 73.
Catharine Cheſter, died April 19, 1792, aged 82.
William Henderſon, died June 18, 1769, aged 73.

---

[*] Under this aile is a vault belonging to the family of Alt.

PEDIGREE of DUPORT, of SHEPESHED.

From the Viſitation of 1619; where it is thus entitled, "La Genealogie, armories, & ſupporteurs fort anciens de Monſieur DUPORT, jadis demorrant aprez la riviere ou port du Caen en Normandie, de la quelle ilz print leur nom, & a et heure ſont reſiant en le comte de Leceſtre en Angleterre. N. B. Deux ſavages, defendants leur teſtes avec leur batons, furent donnez à l'anceſtre de Guillaume a ſon retour de Normandie avec Guillaume le Conquerant aprez le Conqueſt d'Angleterre, comme il appert par une vielle Genealogie."

Duport de la ville de Caen in Normandie. = ...
Robert de Montague, vivant 8 Ric. II. = ...

Guillaume Duport, venit in Angliam en le temps de Hen. IV. = ... fille de Claremont, de l'Iſle de Gerneſey.
Jean de Montague fitz de Robert, moruſt 10 Hen. V. = Agnes, fille de .... Atmore, vivant 10 H. VIII.

Guillaume Duport, filz de Guillaume. = ... fille de Galliarde.
Guillaume de Mountague, vivant 20 Hen. VII. = ...

Jaques Duport, fil 3 de Guillaume. = ... fille de ... Cartier.
Guillaume de Mountague, fitz de Guillaume. = ... Peverell, en le compte de Dorſet.

Jaques Duport, fil de Jaques. = 2. Emme, fille & coheretiere.
1. Eleanore, coheretiere, & femme de Jean de Bevin.
3. Jean, femme de Jean Molin.

Alexander Duport, moruſt ſans enfant.
Tho. Duport, filz de Jaques. = Cornelia, fille de ... Norton, en le compte de Kent.

Jean Duport, preſident du College de Jeſu en Cambridge. = Rachel, fille de Ri. Cox, eveſque de Ely.
Maria, femme de Jean Plumbe.
Hen. Duport, de Shepeſhed, in le compte de Leiceſtre. = Anne, fille de Thomas Higate.
Catherine, femme de Guillaume Higate.
Frances, femme de Anth. Cave, de Queniborough.
Jaques Duport, en le compte de Oxon. = ... filia Willielmi Vincent, de Peckleton, co. Leiceſter.

Ricardus. Eudochia.
Thomas Duport.
Anne, femme de Alexander Polſon.
Cornelia, femme de Rafe Segrave.
Margarette.
Thomas Duport.

Signed, GUILLAUME SEGAR, Jartiere Roy principal d'armes.

STRETTON EN LE FIELD,

So called to diſtinguiſh it from Strettons Magna and Parva in this county, from Stretton Parva in Scarſdale on the Icknield ſtreet, from the two in Staffordſhire on that and the Watling, and from the four in Warwickſhire, three of them on the Foſs, can but in part be accounted a member of this county; the church, manor houſe, and full one half of the lordſhip, lying in Derbyſhire; two entire farms, however (or what lately were ſuch), with interſperſed parts of others, and ſome ſay even the manor ſtables, are in Leiceſterſhire. The Derbyſhire part of Stretton forms one conſtablewick with Willeſley and the Derbyſhire part of Ravenſton. The Leiceſterſhire parts of the pariſh, and ſome portion of Appleby, are in Seale conſtablewick. It is two miles from Appleby; five from Aſhby-de-la-Zouch; about 19 from Leiceſter; and, in the eccleſiaſtical diviſion of Derbyſhire, is within the deanry of Repington, and in the dioceſe of Coventry and Lichfield.

The late Rev. Dr. Pegge, in his MS Derbyſhire notes, ſays, "The name of Stretton muſt be derived from the ſituation of the towns ſo called on ſome of the ſtreet-ways, or viæ ſtratæ, paved ways, of the Romans; this Stretton being near the Watling-ſtreet way, as Stretton upon Dove in Staffordſhire is near Icknield-ſtreet; as without doubt is alſo Stretton in Scarſdale, if that way lead to Cheſterfield, as cannot be doubted, though after Little Cheſter we cannot find any certain traces of it [1]." The learned Doctor, however, is totally wrong in what he ſays of Stretton en le Field; Watling-ſtreet, at its neareſt point, being ſcarcely within ten miles of it. In fact, Icknield is rather nearer of the two. Perhaps the ſource of a confuſed idea in the Doctor will ere long appear. Meanwhile it is to be noted that there is but one road paſſing through or very near the village of Stretton, which has been, at any period, a formed line or ridge, ſuch as could ever have been denominated a Via ſtrata. This is the preſent turnpike-road from Burton on Trent, along the ſhorter of the two branches into which it divides in this part (that by way of Stretton and Appleby, re-uniting with the older or Meaſham branch at Twycroſs) towards Atherſton. The ſaid branch to Meaſham, and the turnpike-road from Tamworth to the ſame place, leave Stretton village (though to the lordſhip the latter is a boundary for ſome length) far in the midſt, at nearly a mile's diſtance from either. Two other mere waggon-tracks through incloſures in a manner, one from the village of Childecote, the other a nearer route from the Tamworth road at No-Man's-Heath, point into Stretton; but there they ſtop, the body of the village, which lies on the other, that is on the Eaſtern, ſide of the Burton road, being not even a thoroughfare. The Burton road here ſpoken of as what alone could have conferred the name Street-town, may be conjectured to have been made by the Romans, to cut off the right or perhaps ſomewhat acute angle, formed by the Ikenild and Watling ſtreets at Wall, near Lichfield. Though by no means ſo lineal as their grand ways, being poſſibly the work of a period ſomewhat after them, and leſs equal to great performances, it is as ſtrait as moſt of our exiſting roads of the ſame length; and in ſeveral parts is a high ridge. It comes from Burton bridge in a general courſe of about S. by E. On the eminence between Appleby and Twycroſs it falls in with another road of antient name, though poſſibly not ſo antient as the Roman times. This name is Salter's-ſtreet, the appellation of various portions of road in this part of England; and Salter's is the denomination of a bridge which croſſes the Tame a little above its conflux with Trent, and which, being the direct courſe from this our Salter's-ſtreet in particular towards the North-weſtern ſalinæ, both Shirley-wich in Staffordſhire, and the three Wiches in Cheſhire, may ſeem, with the ſeveral tracts of road juſt mentioned, to derive their common name from being the uſual antient route for the conveyance of ſalt, that great article of abſolutely neceſſary uſe, into the South-eaſt of the kingdom. The courſe from Salter's bridge would be through Harlaſton [2] and Clifton to No-Man's-Heath [3]; and on leaving this laſt ſmall common the name Salter's-ſtreet is conſtantly applied to the road at this day. The latter, joined in the courſe of another mile by the Stretton road, proceeds in its own direction, (that is, about one point more Eaſtward than the other,) which carries it forward beyond the point of re-union with the Meaſham branch; the turnpike road, quickly after that re-union, bearing to the right, with a conſiderable circuit before reaching Atherſton. Near Temple Hall our ſuppoſed Via ſtrata turns almoſt due South, and paſſes through Sibbeſdon, Atterton, and Drayton, into the Watling-ſtreet [4], 1½ mile S. E. from the oblong-ſquare agger, which ſtill diſtinctly marks the antient works of Manduesſedum. And this miſſing of that well-fixed ſtation will perhaps be thought a main argument, that this Stretton road, after all, muſt claim no origin from the Romans.

"At this town (as the tradition goes) was the ſeat of Edric de Stretton, by ſome writers called Streone (that is, treacherous or covetous [5]), ſometime a duke of Merchland [Mercia], who, by command of king Canute, was in 1017 ſtrangled, and flung out of a window into the Thames [6]." (This tradition may

---

[1] Dr. Pegge's MS Collections for Derbyſhire, in my poſſeſſion, by the gift of his benevolent ſon.

[2] The road from this village, directly South towards Tamworth, was called The Portway, a term applied to very many roads, and ſeemingly to ſuch as were the moſt direct and ſtraiteſt great highways, appearing ſynonymous with Via ſtrata, a road formed into a high ridge, the middle filled with hard materials. The open field through which this led was called Portway field, and Portway farm-houſe yet ſtands by this road-ſide. Proceeding on, ſtill in the ſame line towards Tamworth, the next portion of the road takes the name, to this day, of Salter's-ſtreet. Here we ſeem to have a branch out of the above antient ſalt-road, and called, indifferently, Portway or Salter's ſtreet. Not that it is ſuppoſeable there was not, at any the earlieſt period we can aſſign to this ſalt-trade, another and ſhorter communication for it towards Tamworth, from ſome point in the ſaid road nearer to the ſalt country, and perhaps nearly in the preſent direction, by way of Lichfield city; eſpecially as the intervening country is in great part a natural gravel, little in want of Viæ ſtratæ.

[3] That part of the road (about a half-mile), leading to this bit of waſte from the late Clifton Heath, gave an opening for common of vicinage; hence probably the notion (grown into firm belief from the old cuſtom of renewing the croſs in the turf) that Staffordſhire, in which Clifton lies, comes up to No-Man's-Heath. The lords of Clifton and their tenants probably kept up a claim, by means of the ſaid croſs, to ſome right of common: but the grounds on the one ſide of the juſt-named road are in Childecote, Derbyſhire; and thoſe on the other in Newton, Warwickſhire; as is doubtleſs the ſoil of the road itſelf, which is repaired by Newton.

[4] Its courſe here, proceeding ſtrait onward acroſs Watling-ſtreet, points to Nun-Eaton and Coventry. And this Stretton road is the horſeman's neareſt, and perhaps (at all times, even in its preſent ſtate,) his beſt, from Derby and Burton to that city; accordingly, a part of it, North of Nun-Eaton, has the name of Derby-lane. A turnpike-road from Twycroſs to Nun-Eaton, with the eſtabliſhment of a poſt-ſtage at the Twycroſs inn, would render this the beſt and moſt commodious carriage-route. And if to ſuch road were added a branch, from Sibbeſdon by Upton and Stoke to Hinckley, there would be two eaſy ſtages from Burton to that town alſo, and a road would be given to a quarter much in want of it.

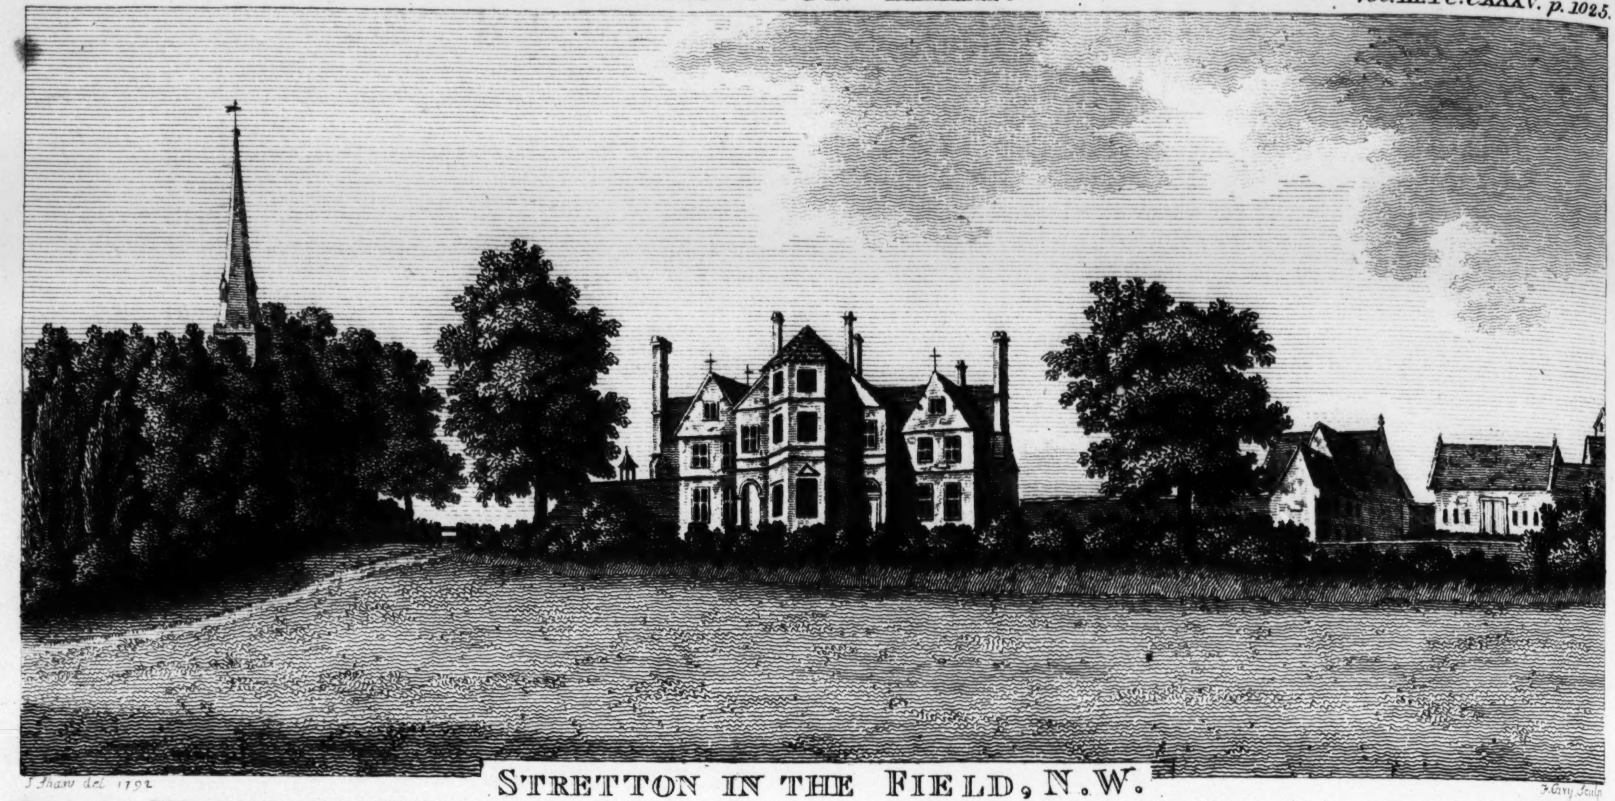
[5] Sꞇꞃeon in Saxon ſignifies treaſure: thence applied to the "accumulation of treaſure." Ed*red*, in the inſcriptions on glaſs here mentioned, is ſuppoſed by Burton to mean the ſame perſon with Edr*ic*. But if this latter really bore, contrary to Saxon uſage, the addition "de Stretton" as a ſurname, we ſhall ſee reaſon to think it taken from another place of the name.

[6] For the particulars of Edric's hiſtory, ſee before, under Eaſt Goſcote, p. 523; where this paſſage has been inadvertently applied to another of the Strettons in this county.

alſo

STRETTON HALL.

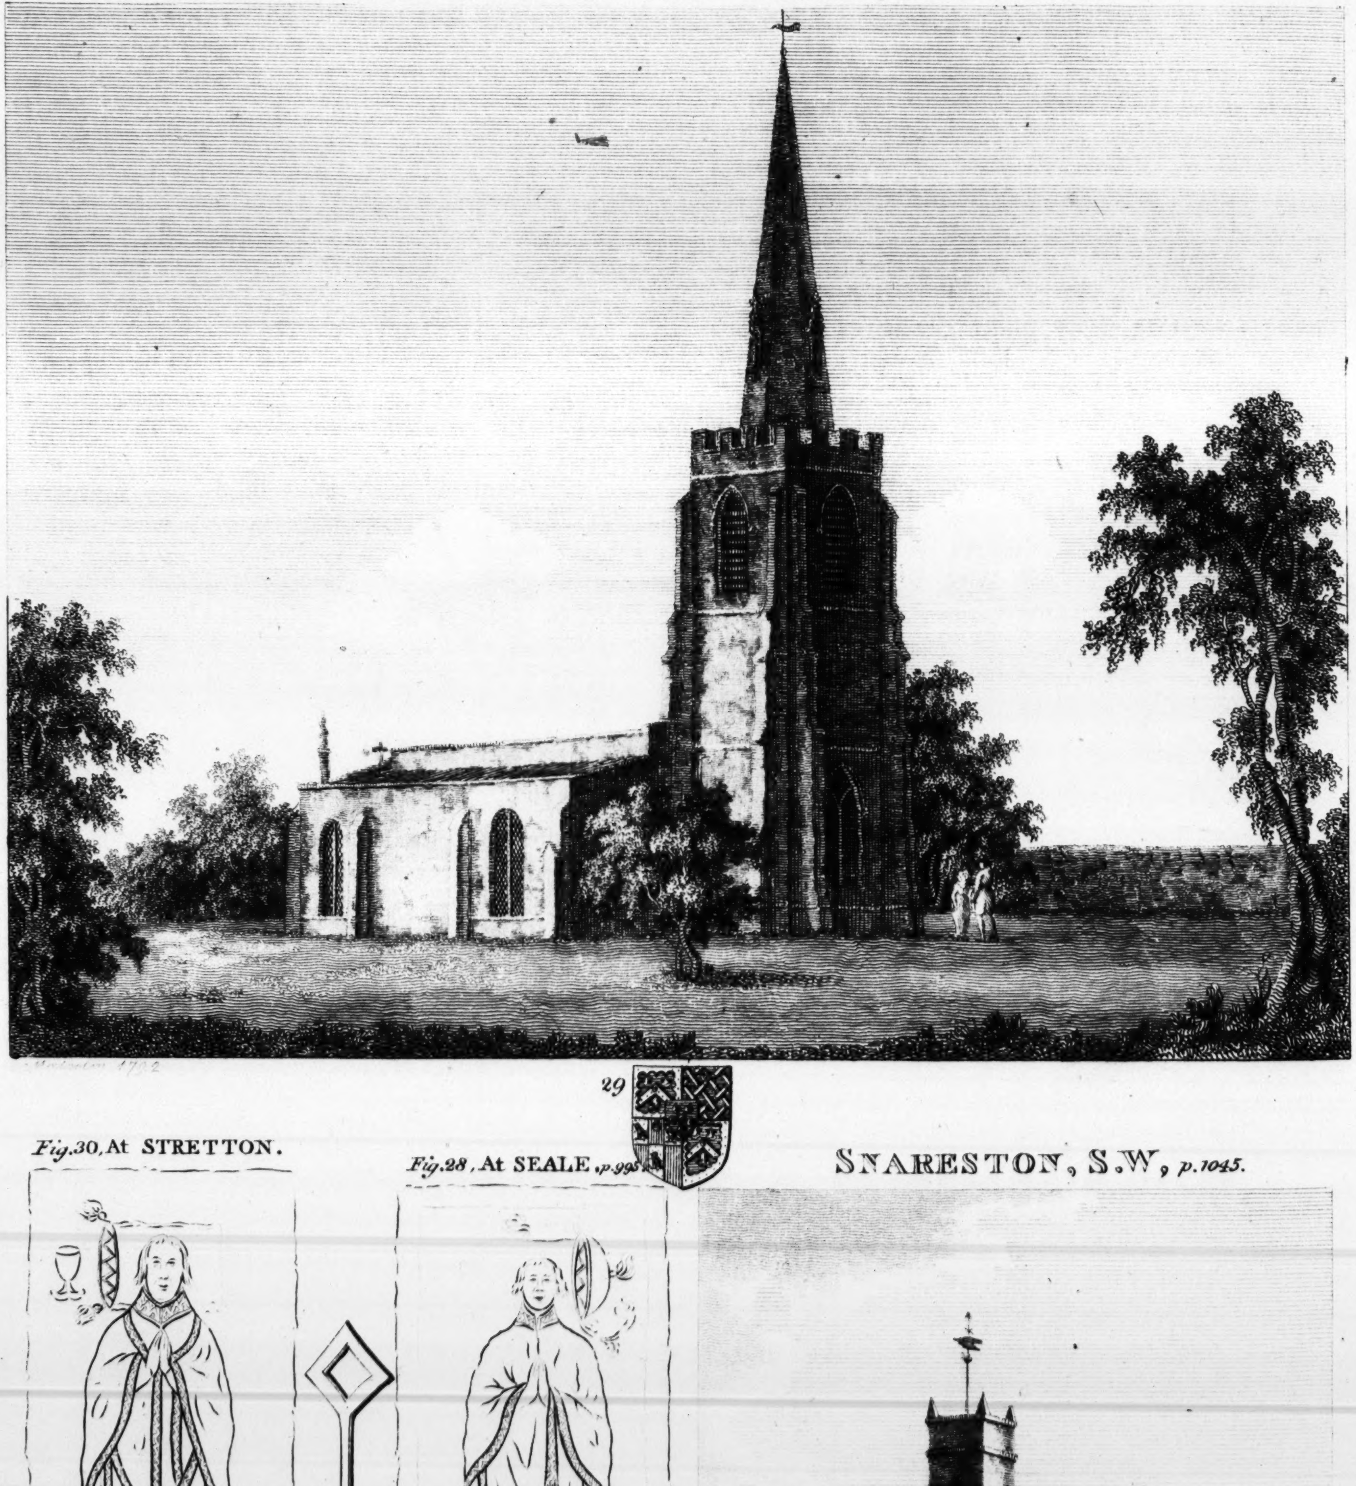
Vol. III. Pl. CXXXV. p. 1025.



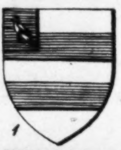
J. Shaw del. 1792

J. Cary Sculp

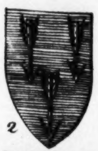
STRETTON IN THE FIELD, N.W.



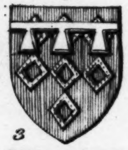
[illegible] 1792



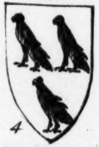
1



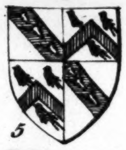
2



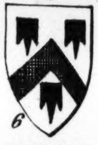
3



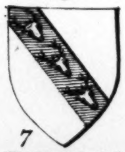
4



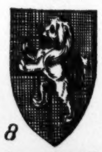
5



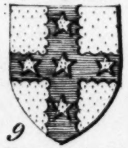
6



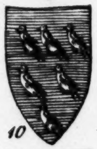
7



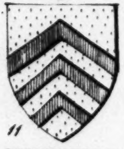
8



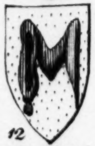
9



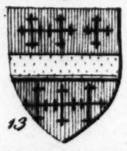
10



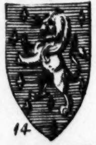
11



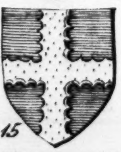
12



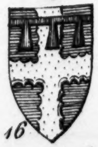
13



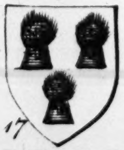
14



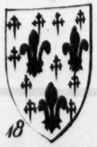
15



16



17



18

19 20

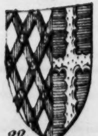
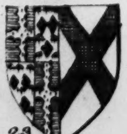
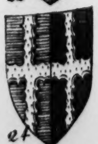
21



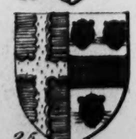
22



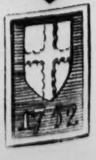
23



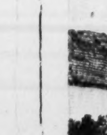
24



25

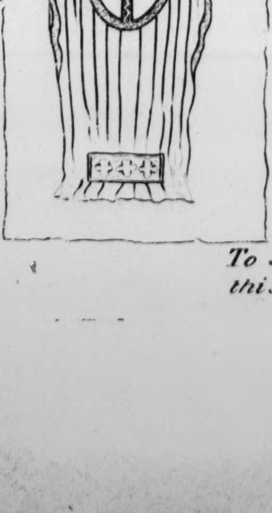


26



29

Fig. 30. At STRETTON.



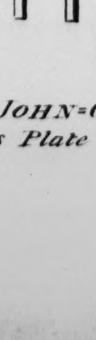


Fig. 27.

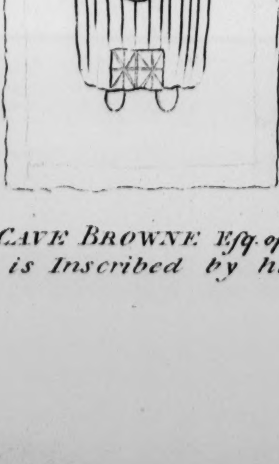
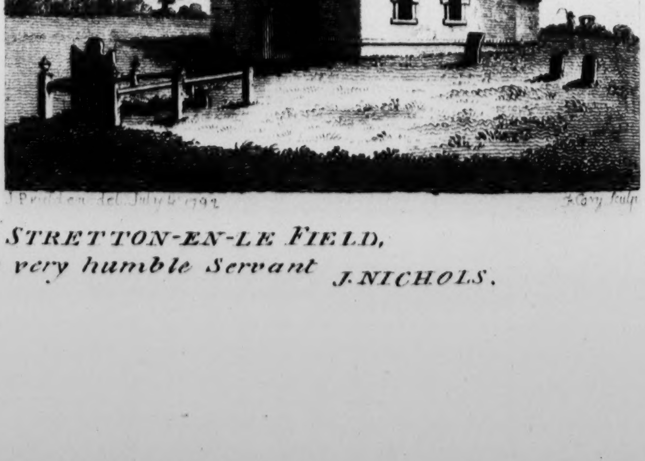
Fig. 28. At SEALE, p. 998.



SNARESTON, S.W. p. 1045.



J. Pridden del. July 6 1792

J. Cary Sculp

To JOHN-CAVE BROWNE Esq. of STRETTON-EN-LE FIELD, this Plate is Inscribed by his very humble Servant J. NICHOLS.

alſo be ſupported by a compariſon of Matthew of Weſtminſter and Hoveden with the will of Wlfric Spot, the founder of Burton Abbey.) "The name of Stretton continued here long after; for, on the North window of the church, I have ſeen under the pictures of men on the old glaſs theſe Saxon names written, EDREDUS DE STRETTON, and OSBERTUS DE STRETTON. And at this preſent there is yet remaining one freeholder, and ſome others of that name, but of yeoman rank [1]." This, call it tradition or a notion of Burton, ſeems deſtitute of any ground. To omit the utter diſſimilarity in ſound between Streone and Stretton; there is a wide gap of 300 years between the ſuppoſed Edred or Edric in 1017 and the real Oſbert in exiſting autographs. Allowing Edric the addition de Stretton, on what grounds do we appropriate to him this in particular out of the ſcores of Strettons within the bounds of Mercia? We ſhall ſee by and by, on actual record, an Edric, of the Confeſſor's time, and at another Stretton "in ley Field."

One ploughland in Streitun was held ad geldam by Æluric under Henry de Ferieres. The land was equal to one plough; four villans had two ploughs, a mill of five ſhillings value, and ten acres of meadow. Roger was tenant to Æluric[2]. This part of the lordſhip, which in the time of king Edward had been valued at twenty ſhillings, was worth but fifteen ſhillings at the general ſurvey.

One other ploughland in Stretone, one in Doniſthorpe, and one in Orton, which all lay waſte, but were worth two ſhillings, were held, at the general ſurvey, by Roger, under the ſame Henry de Ferieres[3].

In the Teſta de Nevill, compiled about 1240, we find "In Stretton dimidium feodum quod heres Radulphi Exnei [Extranei] tenet de eodem Johanne [fil. Alani];" and alſo, "In Stretton dim' feodum quod heres Willielmi le Bretun tenet de Radulpho de Tormey [4]."

It may be a queſtion, whether Roger de Stretton and his ſon William, of whom, eſpecially the latter, (with his wife Agnes, the ſiſter and heir of Ralph de Seile junior,) ſo much has been ſeen under Seale article, were not ſucceſſively the lords of the place which gave them name, and anceſtors to the Strettons of ſucceeding times. Againſt this idea ſtands, not only a memorandum of the antiquary S. Roper (the ſame who is mentioned in pages 74 and 1114 of Dugdale's Warwickſhire, ed. 1730, and by Dr. Thoroton, end of Preface, as having helped him with evidences,) in theſe words, "Iſte Walterus [dominus de Strettone 1304] fuit filius Willielmi filii Walklini domini de Stretton, ſicut extat apud me;" but alſo an inquiſition, in 1457, which traces the inheritance diſtinctly and particularly up to the ſaid Will' fil' Walclini and beyond. This copy of a record muſt have its weight; Mr. Roper's fragments, here and ſubſequently quoted, are un-authenticated, and in ſome parts incorrect enough. Both Roger and his ſaid ſon are in the long liſt of landholders, lords of the ſurrounding manors and chief vaſſals of Will' earl Ferrars, who atteſt his notable confirmation, "coram totâ curiâ," of the grant (poſſibly 'tis the grant itſelf and confirmation all in one; ſee it p. 979*,) of Seile mill; and are alſo among ſome witneſſes of eminence to the curious grant to William Noreis in p. *980. Roger de Stretton too atteſts the one, and Will. fil. Rogeri the other, of the Wenlok Prior's remarkable conventions with the parſon, and with the once patron, of Seale, in p. 1001; and William de Stretton in particular is continually met with in his own deeds, or thoſe of others, throughout the Seile autographs and the Rydeware Chartulary. (See his SIGILLVM deſcribed in N° 15, p. 1001.) While in neither of thoſe collections is found the name either of Will' fil' Walkelin or Walter his ſon, ſave in the ſingle inſtance of their atteſting the parſon's compoſition with the two Over Seile co-lords, printed p. 1001-2. At the ſame time, that William fil' Rogeri had a ſon Walter, though not (at the time) his eldeſt, ſeems ſhewn by this deed, the 2d No. 11 of the Rydeware Chartulary, p. 1001:

"Sciant tam preſentes quam futuri, quod ego Wiłłs fil' Rogeri de Stretton & Augnes uxor mea conceſſimus & quietam clamavimus Wiłło de Rydeware & heredibus ſuis, de nobis & noſtris heredibus, partem noſtram quam habuimus in Boſco de Scheyl, de illo Boſco quem Wiłłs comes de Ferrariis dedit predicto Wiłło de Rydeware, & aliam partem noſtram quam habuimus de Boſco illo quod predictus Wiłłs de Rydeware recuperavit ſuper Lucianum de Scheyle. Pro hâc vero conceſſione & quietâ clamatione dedit mihi predictus Wiłłs de Rydeware unam marcam argenti, & Augneti uxori mee unam marcam argenti, & Thome filio meo duodecim denarios. Hiis teſtibus, Rob' filio Walkeł, Rob[illegible] fil' ſuo, Joh'e de Boſchevill, Wiłło de Greſele, Henr' de Ferr', Henr' fil' Sewałł, Stephan' de Cur[illegible]', Alano de Sumervill, Rad'o de Edeingħ, Ric'o fr[illegible]uo, Wiłło Albo, Walt' fil' Wiłłi fil' Rogeri, & multis [illegible]iis."

The following piece of pedigree ſeems tolerably eſtabliſhed by the Seile evidences, either originals or in the Rydeware Chartulary, with the help of one or two from Willeſley and Caldwell, co. Derby.

Roger de Stretton, before 1179 [5]. = ...

Radulphus de Seile, ſeems dead 1181. = Anneis de Oilli [8].

William de Stretton, ſtyled by his relict William de Wiviſle [6]; living 10 Aug. 1196, alſo after William de Rydeware's acquiſition of Seale, about 1201; dead 15 Aug. 1204 [7]. = Agnes, heir to brother 8 R. I. [8] relict of William de Stretton, and ſole plaintiff in fine, 15 Au. 1204.

Matheus, fil. Rogeri, witneſs to grant of William and Agnes to Ralph Buche; Matheus de Stretton to a ditto of Hen. fil. Will'i quondam rectoris de Seylâ [9]. = ...

Radulf. de Seile, grants to Miravalle 1181 [8]; dead 8 R. I.

Conſtantia, confirms father's and brother's Miravalle grants [8].

Thomas, ſeemingly heir [10] apparent 1201, or after.

Walter, ſeemingly junior, poſt 1201 [10].

Reginald de Wyveſle [11]. = Editha, or Eda [11], daughter of William, ſon of Rog. de Wiſeleſle.

Hugo fil. Mathei de Stretton 1275 [12]. Hugo Matheu de Strettun. = ...

Ric. de Stretton 1308, 1326, 1331 [13], 11 Jan. 1337 [15]. Ric. fil. Hug. de Stretton. = Margaret, daughter of Margeria (relict of Ralph de Kyrkeby of Erdynton, dau. and coheir of William lord of Caldewell), Jan. 1337 [15]; living 1347 [16].

John fil. Ric. fil. Hug. de Stretton, 23 Apr. 1330 [14].

Margeria, Jan. 1337 [15].

---

[1] Burton, MS. between 1622 and 1640.

[2] "In Streitun [terrâ Henrici de Ferieres] habet Æluric 1 carucatam terræ ad geldam. Terra 1 carucæ. Ibi 4 villani habent 2 carucas, & 1 molinum 5 ſolidorum, & 10 acras prati. Tempore R gis Edwardi valebat 20 ſolidos; modò 15 ſolidos. Rogerus tenet," Domeſday, fol. 274. a. 2.

[3] Domeſday, fol. 233. b. 1. See before, under Doniſthorpe, p. 997.

[4] Vol. I. p. liii. But this paſſage, at leaſt as to the Stretton Radulphi Extranei, belongs to Stretton on Dunſmore, co. Warwick, adjoining Lawford and Wolſton, placed here with it in Teſta de Nevill. And (on turning to Dugdale's Warwickſhire, vol. I. p. 33.) William le Bretun's muſt ſeemingly be the ſame Stretton; for he ſtands there in the ſame pedigree with Rad. Extraneus as coparcener. But Dugdale afterwards (ibid. p. 599.), though perhaps by miſtake, puts Will' le Bretun and Ralph de Todneye in Stretton ſuper Foſſe.

[5] P. 1001. [6] Rydeware Chartulary, Nº 12. [7] P. *981. [8] P. *980.

[9] Rydeware Chartulary, Nº 15; its autograph at Seale, and another ibid. [10] Deed above.

[11] Rydeware Chartulary, Nº 23, 24. [12] Teſt. to prior of Dudley's releaſe, p. 1000; and to Seale original.

[13] Rydeware Chartulary, Nº 51. Willeſley original. P. *984. [14] P. *983. [15] Caldwell original. [16] P. *984.

Among William earl of Derby's witneſſes to his Carta de paſturâ in Nedwode, printed in p. 1002, is Robert de Strettone, Eaſter 1252-3.

William parſon of Stretton, followed by Walter de Stretton, (contemporary deeds, of Robert Maulovel fil. Stephani de Rampton and Henry fil. Wiłłi quondam rectoris de Seyla[1], write them "Walter de Stretton, Wiłłus perſona frater ſuus" and "Wiłłus frater ſuus rector eccłie de Stretton") is co-teſtis, in p. 983*, with Galfr' de Greſele, then ſeneſchal (who ſeems dead before date of his ſon ſir William's deed, Purific. 1243[2]), and with William de Appleby: and in the preceding p. *982, Walter is found with both William de Appelbi and Robert his father. This might perhaps be the ſame Walter lord of Stretton a witneſs to the prior of Dudley's releaſe, 1275, ſhortly ſtated in p. 1000, and to the abbot of Miravalle's nearly contemporary one (conſidering five of its witneſſes out of ſeven are among thoſe of the other) abſtracted in p. *982, where he is followed by a Galfr. de Stretton in Clyfton. But it ſeems not poſſible he could be the "Walterus dominus" who atteſts a deed by ſir Thomas de Rydeware, probably after 1300[3], (a cottage-grant in Scheyl to another Walter de Stretton and Margery his wife in tail ſpecial,) and the following deed, 1304; or his brother William the rector the ſame "Wiłłus perſona" who appears with Walterus dominus, as it ſeems, in both this laſt and the enſuing one of 1326:

"Die Dominicâ proximâ ante feſtum Sancti Gregorii Pape, anno regni regis Edwardi triceſimo tertio, fuit hec conventio facta inter Letitiam quondam uxorem Radulphi Cementarii de Wyveleſley ex parte unâ, & Oſbertum[4] filium Walteri domini de Strettone, capitalis domini mei, ex alterâ; videlicet, quod dicta Letitia feoffaret dictum Oſbertum de omnibus terris & tenementis ſuis, pratis, boſcis, & paſturis, cum ſuis pertinentiis, que ipſa unquam habuit, vel in poſterum habere vel vendicare poterit, in villâ vel campis de Wiveleſley, &c. Hiis teſtibus; Waltero domino de Strettone, Willielmo fratre ejus, Roberto Develin, Henrico de Norton, & aliis. Datum apud Stretton, die & anno ſupradictis[5]."

"Johannes fil' Willielmi Elys de Qkthorp, Elizabethe filie Walteri domini de Stretton, meſſuagium & tres acras in Okthorp, ad totam vitam Elizabethe; remaneant domino Willielmo perſone eccleſie de Stretton & heredibus. Teſtibus, Rogero de Durandiſthorp, Rogero del Chapelhous, &c. Ricardo de Stretton, & aliis. Dominicâ ante Michaelis 20 Edw. II."[6]

So that there is great appearance of two ſucceſſive Walters, lords of Stretton, with each a rector-brother William. The elder of ſuch Walters might be the ſon of William fil. Walkelini, which ſon atteſts in Rydeware Chartulary No. 43, rather before 1205[7], (or ſon of William fil. Rogeri, as the truth may be.) But Walter, the father of Oſbert, in 1304 and perhaps ſtill later, could never be the ſon of either William: in that part, both Mr. Roper's note before-quoted, and the inquiſition of 1457, hereafter ſtated, muſt be wrong. Oſbert appears to have ſucceeded his father Walter, and to be lord in February 1320 and Auguſt 1323[8].

Among the fragments already mentioned is preſerved this deed:

"Sciant preſentes & futuri, quod ego Johannes de Stretton, dominus de Stretton, dedi, &c. Johanni de Lee, domino de Stotfold, & Thome de Marnham, totum manerium meum de Stretton, cum advocatione eccleſie ejuſdem ville, cum omnibus ſervitiis tam liberorum quam nativorum, pro termino vite, &c. Hiis teſtibus; domino Edmundo de Appelbi, Egidio Meynil, Roberto de Greſleye, militibus; Johanne Humfrey, & Johanne Arnold. Datum apud Streton, anno . . . Edw. III.[9]"

In 1412, Margery daughter and coheir of John de Stretton releaſed all her title to this manor and the advowſon of the church to John the ſon of John de Finderne, of Finderne, co. Derby; theſe being witneſſes, John de Lathbury, William de Ingwardby, William Mareſchall of Stretton, Thomas de Witherley of Chilcote, Roger de Montgomery, and Henry Holland of Scheile, eſqs. Within the ſame year, her huſband Adomar Taverner's couſin and heir, William Leichfield, made a like releaſe to the ſame John for lands in a number of neighbouring townſhips[10].

In 1441, Walter de Stretton died ſeiſed of the manor of Stretton in le Field, together with the advowſon of the church there; held of the king, by the ſervice of one knight's fee[11].

The relation of the Walter, here ſaid to die ſeiſed 1441, to the family, appears not. But Margery his predeceſſor, niece it will appear to one who was lord as early as 1320, could ſurely not very long ſurvive her releaſe to John de Finderne in 1411-12; and not improbably much litigation, with alternate ſeizins and diſ-ſeizins, might take place in the interval between her death and the following proceeding:

On an inquiſition taken in 1457, it was found, that William de Ferrariis, late earl of Derby, was ſeiſed in his demeſne as of fee of the manor of Stretton in le Field, and of the advowſon of the church; and, being ſo ſeiſed, the ſaid premiſſes, by the name of 15 bovates of land, cum pertinentiis, in Stretton, were granted to Richard de Mortuomari[12], and the heirs of his body begotten, to hold of the earl and his heirs for ever, by the fourth part of a knight's fee.

That Richard was thereby ſeiſed, and died ſeiſed; whereupon it deſcended to William, ſon of Walclin de Stretton, and of Margaret, late wife of the ſaid Walclin, of the bodies of the ſaid Margaret and ſaid Walclin begotten, as couſin and heir of the ſaid Richard, viz. as ſon of the ſaid Margaret, daughter of Richard.

That William ſon of Walclin was ſeiſed; whereupon the premiſes deſcended to Walter de Stretton, as ſon and heir of the ſaid William ſon of Walclin.

That Walter was ſeiſed, and died ſeiſed; whereupon the premiſes deſcended to Oſbert de Stretton, as ſon and heir of the ſaid Walter.

That Oſbert was ſeiſed, and died ſeiſed; whereupon the premiſes deſcended to Margery de Stretton, que fuit uxor Adomari Tavener, as couſin and heir of the ſaid Oſbert, viz. as daughter of John, brother of the ſaid Oſbert; for Oſbert died without iſſue.

And that Margery was ſeiſed, and died ſeiſed, without iſſue; and that John Bate clerk, ſon of Alice, daughter of Elene, daughter of Hugh ſon of Lettice, one of the daughters of the ſaid Walter, and John Kendale, ſon of Elizabeth, daughter of Richard, ſon of John, ſon of Agnes, another daughter of the ſaid Walter; and Thomas Stretton, ſon of William ſon of William, ſon of Richard, ſon of Idone, the third daughter of Walter, were couſins and heirs of the ſaid Margery de Stretton, and of full age.

That there were in the ſaid manor, in the town fields of Stretton in le Field, 11 meſſuages, one orchard, one croft, one garden, one cottage, and . . . virgates of land, value per annum ult. repriſ. 9*l.* 12*s.* 8*d.*; that the church aforeſaid was worth per annum 20 marks; and that the manor aforeſaid was held of the king by one knight's fee[13].

Mr. Roper's fragments afford alſo the following memoranda:

"Agnes filia Oſberti[14] de Strettun maritata fuit Ricardo Fitzherbert domino de Twicroſſe, qui habuerunt exitum inter eos Johannem Fitzherbert, qui quidem Johannes habuit exitum Ricardum, qui quidem Ricardus habuit exitum Elizabetham nuptam Thome Kendale, qui quidem Thomas & Elizabetha habuerunt exitum Johannem, qui quidem Johannes habuit exitum Bartholomeum Kendale (de manu meâ propria ita; S. Roper). Iſte Oſbertus fuit filius Walteri domini de Stretton in le Field, Willeſley, Donneſthorp, &c. qui vixit tempore reg. H. III. E. I. E. III. ſicut luculenter patet in rotulo apud me, S. Roper [1]".

---

[1] Seile originals.

[2] Seile original.

[3] Rydeware Chartulary, N° 86.

[4] Iſte Oſbertus nupſit Agnetam filiam Willielmi de Tinmore & Elizabethe uxoris ejus, filie & coheredis domini Roberti de Stafford de Egginton, co. Derby.

[5] Iſte Walterus fuit filius Willielmi filii Walklini domini de Stretton, ſicut extat apud me, S. Roper.

[6] Willeſley original.

[7] See note 1 in p. 1002.

[8] Seile originals.

[9] From the original formerly in the poſſeſſion of Mr. Roper. See the ſeal, Plate CXXXVI. fig. 43.

[10] Burton; and p. 998.

[11] Eſch. 20 Hen. VI. Leic.

[12] An after Ric. de Mortuomari is witneſs to the carta de Nedwode, 1252-3. Rydeware Chartulary, N° 52.

[13] Inq. in feſto Sancte Priſcille Virginis, 36 Hen. VI. before John Gatford, eſq. eſcheator.

[14] Rather "Walteri," agreeably to the inquiſition immediately before printed.

On obſerving Dugdale's Warwickſhire, 1730, p. 50, it is found that the place there treated of, Stretton-Baſkerville, was both poſſeſſed, in the Confeſſor's time, by an Edric; and, after the Conqueſt, by Raph de Mortimer; and farther, that one-fourth of a fee there was held in 20 Edw. III. under Tutebury. Theſe are circumſtances, which, compared with the above inquiſition and Burton's quoted tradition, immediately incline one, not only to believe that, if any duke Edric was ſurnamed de Stretton at all in Mercian times, it was probably from this Warwickſhire Stretton; but alſo to ſtrongly ſuſpect, that a like confuſion of names has prevailed, even as far back as the making up of the inquiſition 1457, and that any R. de Mortuomari may in truth have had no more to do with the ſubject of the preſent article, than Edric had: eſpecially when we note too, in the ſame Dugdale's pages 49, 51, both that he, juſt before beginning the article Stretton-Baſkerville, calls it "a depopulated place, known by the name Stretton fields," and that Dr. Thomas inſerts, in an after-note, "otherwiſe called" (inter alia) "Stretton in ley Feild [2]." And when we perceive ſuch various cauſes of doubt, it ſomewhat ſhakes our reliance on the deſcent found from William ſon of Walkelin. It may be thought another inconſiſtent and ſuſpicious circumſtance, that the inquiſition, after finding this our Stretton granted to Rich. de Mortuomari to hold by a quarter of a fee, concludes with finding the ſame manor held by a whole fee. Another point which muſt be wrong, is the making Margery immediate heir to her uncle Oſbert, when we ſee, by her father John's own deed in page 1026, that himſelf lived to be lord.

It muſt be owned however, that, independent of what regard may be due to the inquiſition, there are two particulars connected with the portion of a pedigree above drawn out, which make againſt the ſuppoſitions of William ſon of Roger being the lord of Stretton, and of a deſcent of the Strettons from him. In the firſt place, he has been ſuppoſed, in a note to p. *988, to be the ſame perſon with the laſt witneſs to the deed No. 43. in p. 1002. Certainly Agnes his relict expreſſly ſtyles him, in No. 12, William de Wiviſle; and the deed in No. 43. is fixed to his age nearly, by that of the delegate P. abbot of Leiceſter. And, granting him to be the perſon, it does ſeem unlikely that he, if lord of Stretton, ſhould be preceded (with Warine de Snipeſtun between) by a William and his ſon Walter, denominated from that place; the rather, as there is no crowd of witneſſes, only four clerks with ſix laics, all of ſeeming note. The ſecond particular is, that the two following deeds ſhew a daughter of William, (ſtill by the deſcription "ſon of Roger de Wifeleſle,") his ſucceſſor (and there might be more, coheirs) in a certain portion of lands and tenements in Wyveleſle; a prima facie argument againſt his being anceſtor to a male line of Strettons.

"Ego Regin' de Wyveſle dedi & conceſſi, & hâc meâ cartâ confirmavi, aſſenſu & voluntate Edithe uxoris, Wil̄l̄o de Rydeware & heredibus ſuis, duas virgatas & dimidiam virgatam terre in villâ de Wyveliſle, ſcilicet, unam virgatam quam Oſbertus tenuit, & aliam de dominico meo quam ego tenui in manu meâ ſine tofto, & dimidiam virgatam juxta fluvium cum tofto. Et quartam partem molendini de Wyveleſle, cum ſectâ & pertinentiis que adjacent illi quarte parti molendini, & ſervicium filii Walt̄i de Durandeſthorp de tribus virgatis terre in Durandeſthorp, quas predictus Walt̄us tenuit de me per miliciam. Hec omnia, cum omnibus pertinentiis, dedi predicto Wil̄l̄o de Rydeware & heredibus ſuis, tenenda de me & heredibus meis, in feodo & hereditate, liberè, quietè, & integrè, reddendo inde annuatim mihi & heredibus meis ſex denarios pro omni ſervicio, ſalvo forinſeco. Hujus nunc tenementi prefatus Wil̄l̄us de Rydeware eſt meus affidatus. Hiis teſtibus; Wil̄l̄o clerico de Scheyl, Wil̄l̄o de Greſſet, Rad̄o Grym, Oliv̄o de Durandeſthorp, Rad̄o de Hedenighat, Wil̄l̄o fratre ſuo, Rob̄to Haſard, Robt̄ fil' Suan', & multis aliis."

"Ego Eda [in the title "Editha"] filia Wil̄l̄i filii Roḡi de Wifeleſle, in viduitate meâ, dedi & conceſſi & hâc preſenti cartâ meâ confirmavi Walt̄o de Rydeware & heredibus ſuis, pro homagio & ſervicio ſuo, totam partem meam molendini de Wyveleſle, & in eadem villâ tres virgatas terre, quarum Hamo Prencheval tenet unam virgatam & dimidiam, Wil̄l̄us Capellanus unam virgatam, & Jacobus dimidiam virgatam, habenda & tenenda de me & de heredibus meis ſibi & heredibus ſuis, liberè, quietè. & pacificè poſſidenda, cum omnibus pertinentiis & libertatibus & ayſiamentis; reddendo inde annuatim mihi & heredibus duodecim denarios ad duos anni terminos pro omni ſervicio conſuetudine & ſeculari demandâ, ſcilicet, ad feſtum, &c. Pro hâc autem donacione, &c. dedit mihi predictus Walt̄us tres marcas ſterlingorum. Et ego Eda & heredes mei predicto Walt̄o & heredibus ſuis predictam partem molendini, & predictas, &c. ut prediviſum eſt, contra omnes homines & feminas warantizabimus. Et ut hec mea donacio & conceſſio & carte hujus confirmacio rata & inconcuſſa permaneat, preſens ſcriptum ſigilli mei impreſſione roboravi. Hiis teſtibus; Galf' de Greſeleye tunc ſeneſc', Roḡo de Rydeware, Wil̄l̄o pa. de Scheyl, Walt̄o de Stretton, Wil̄l̄o p'a de Stretton, Sim' capellano de Luck̄, Rad̄ de Buſchevil, Petr' de Durandeſthorp, Roḡo Templario, Henr' de Scheyl, & multis aliis [3]."

A ſuppoſition may be made (which would obviate the latter of the above arguments) that William fil. Rogeri left ſurviving male iſſue, by another wife than the mother of his daughter or daughters, which mother being a Willeſley heir, or coheir, might occaſion his fixing at that reſidence, and finally acquiring the name. (As to Agnes de Seile, ſhe perhaps left no iſſue, as the above deed, the 2d No. 11, ſays "Thome filio meo," not "noſtro.") And it ſeems not unlikely, from William de Rydeware's grant to Nicholaus and Ceſily de Ingwardeby, towards 1270 [4], of the Willeſley property acquired by his grandfather and father under the two laſt-printed deeds, (in which grant the ſhare in the mill which Reginald deſcribes as a fourth, and Eda his relict in general terms only as "totam partem meam," paſſes from Rydeware as only two-thirds of a fourth, ſo that the mill was divided into twelfths,) and from grants of like import as yet but barely ſeen among Willeſley archives, that the inheritance of this laſt lordſhip was ſplit among coheirs, even before William de Stretton had to do there.

But, on conſidering the deed of Eda, a third preſumption may be obſerved againſt a Stretton deſcent from William ſon of Roger. For among its witneſſes are the two firſt Stretton brothers, Walter and William perſona; who, if of the aforeſaid William's line at all, muſt almoſt to certainty have been his ſons, half-brothers to the grantor Eda; and this laſt would ſurely, in that caſe, have been very apt ſo to name them.

What authentic genealogy we can collect of this ſeries of the Strettons, from whichever of the two Williams originating, will ſtand thus:

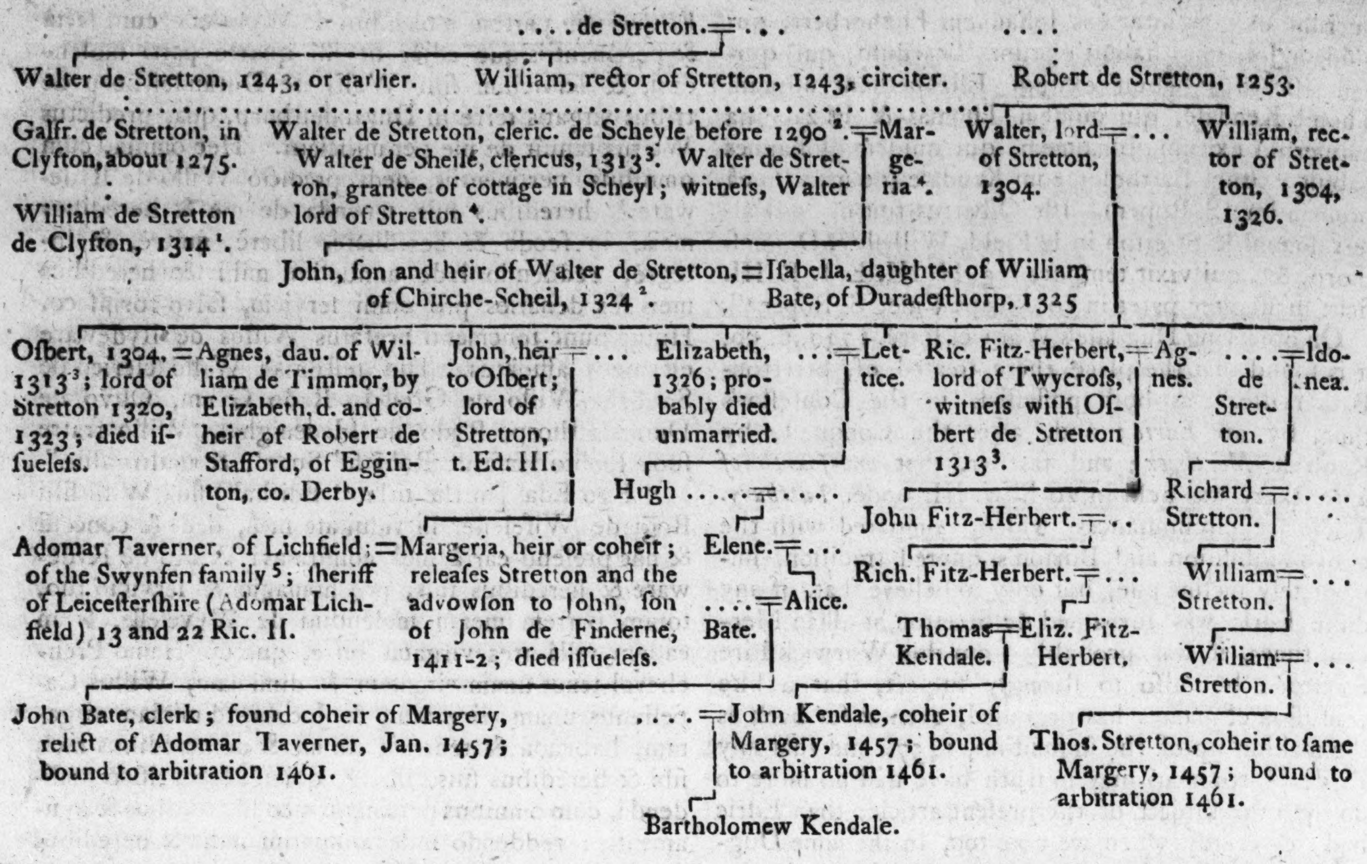
---

[1] In quodam parvo rotulo in pergameno ſcripto penes S. Roper.

[2] Another thing; this Stretton in ley Feild lies on Watling ſtreet; which may help to account, if any thing will, for Dr. Pegge's erring ſo widely in placing ours. It is conceivable that this name and this ſituation might come under his notice, but unaccompanied by the mention of their proper county, Warwickſhire; and if, in looking for the Stretton en le Field of Derby and Leiceſter ſhires, and its diſtance from any Roman road, he happened to take no better guide than old county maps, not pretending to be from actual ſurvey, he might eaſily be under a confuſion of ideas, for that ſort of authorities can never be relied on to two, three, or four miles. Still it is extraordinary that even with the worſt map before him he ſhould talk of nearneſs to the Watling-ſtreet, when almoſt the neareſt part of its line would be found in the High ſtreet of Atherſton.

[3] Rydeware Chartulary, N° 23, 24.

[4] P. 999.



. . . . de Stretton. = ...

Walter de Stretton, 1243, or earlier.

William, rector of Stretton, 1243, circiter.

Robert de Stretton, 1253.

Galfr. de Stretton, in Clyfton, about 1275.

William de Stretton de Clyfton, 1314[1].

Walter de Stretton, cleric. de Scheyle before 1290[2]. Walter de Sheile, clericus, 1313[3]. Walter de Stretton, grantee of cottage in Scheyl; witneſs, Walter lord of Stretton[4]. = Margeria[4].

Walter, lord of Stretton, 1304. = . . .

William, rector of Stretton, 1304, 1326.

John, ſon and heir of Walter de Stretton, of Chirche-Scheil, 1324[2]. = Iſabella, daughter of William Bate, of Duradeſthorp, 1325

Oſbert, 1304, 1313[3]; lord of Stretton 1320, 1323; died iſſueleſs. = Agnes, dau. of William de Timmor, by Elizabeth, d. and coheir of Robert de Stafford, of Egginton, co. Derby.

John, heir to Oſbert; lord of Stretton, t. Ed. III. = . . .

Elizabeth, 1326; probably died unmarried.

. . . = Lettice.

Hugh . . . . = ...

Elene. = . . .

. . . = Alice. Bate.

Ric. Fitz-Herbert, lord of Twycroſs, witneſs with Oſbert de Stretton 1313[3]. = Agnes.

John Fitz-Herbert. = . .

Rich. Fitz-Herbert. = . . .

Thomas Kendale. = Eliz. Fitz-Herbert.

. . . . de Stretton. = Idonea.

Richard Stretton. = ...

William Stretton. = . . .

William Stretton. = . . .

Adomar Taverner, of Lichfield; of the Swynſen family[5]; ſheriff of Leiceſterſhire (Adomar Lichfield) 13 and 22 Ric. II. = Margeria, heir or coheir; releaſes Stretton and the advowſon to John, ſon of John de Finderne, 1411-2; died iſſueleſs.

John Bate, clerk; found coheir of Margery, relict of Adomar Taverner, Jan. 1457; bound to arbitration 1461.

. . . = John Kendale, coheir of Margery, 1457; bound to arbitration 1461.

Bartholomew Kendale.

Thos. Stretton, coheir to ſame Margery, 1457; bound to arbitration 1461.

In the laſt-named year, 1461, John Bate, clerk, John Kendale, and Thomas Stretton, were bound to ſtand to the award of William Vernon and John Stanley, knights, William Comberford and Robert Staunton, arbitrators as well of their part as of the part of Nicholas Finderne, eſq. and Margaret his wife, John Finderne, ſon and heir of the ſaid Nicholas, and Alice his wife, Henry Kniveton the elder, eſq. and of all heirs claiming any right in the manor of Stretton and the advowſon of the church there, and all other lands (of Margaret, ſometime the wife of Adomare Taverner of Lichfield, daughter and coheir of John Stretton) in Stretton, Okenthorpe, Willeſley, Gopſhall, and Twycroſs, Appleby, Aminton, Edninghale, and elſewhere, in the counties of Leiceſter, Derby, Stafford, and Warwick, dated 2 Edward IV.[6]

Nicholas Finderne, by indenture dated 1465, covenanted to ſell this manor to Walter lord Mountjoy; which he afterwards did accordingly[7].

In 1474, Walter Blunt, knight, lord of Mountjoy, died ſeiſed of the manor of Stretton in the Field, held of John Babington, as of his manor of Meyſham. His grandſon Edward was his heir[8].

For above a century from 1474, we are at a loſs, after many vain endeavours to obtain a ſight of family evidences, for the hiſtory of Stretton; and, in particular, are quite in the dark both as to its continuance in the Blount family, and as to its firſt coming into that of Browne.

William and Joyce Aſtley in 1494 ſuffered a recovery of the manors of Stretton, Shepey, Sheynton, Nailſton, &c. and of divers lands in the counties of Stafford and Salop[9]. But it appears not whether this Stretton was Stretton en le Field.

The ſeiſin of Stretton in John Browne 12 Hen. IV. reported by Burton, a note by Mr. Roper has long ago remarked to have been as feoffee in truſt only. And we ſee that it could not poſſibly have been but in ſome ſuch capacity, from Margery de Stretton's grant, in the very year following, of this her paternal inheritance, and from the ownerſhip thence to 1474, above deduced.

Brownes there were, if not in Stretton, yet in its immediate vicinity, at a period much earlier than that mentioned by Burton. In the Rydeware Chartulary[10] we have "Terra Rogeri le Brune," and "Oky ſon of Alexander le Broune" a grantor, both in Sheile, as early at leaſt as 1273. Richard Brun held lands in Overton ſubt. Arden, 1320[11]. Henry Broun, of Lichefeld, was enfeoffed in meſſuages, &c. at Nether Sheyle 1392[12], in all appearance the perſon whoſe ſon John is ſaid by Burton to have dwelt there 8 Hen. VI. Which John too was probably the above feoffee of Stretton in 12 Hen. IV.

In 11 Hen. VI. Hugo Broun was parſon of Stretton, and a joint feoffee of the manor of Caldewall, co. Derby[13]. The ſame year, 9th Feb. 1432, John Broun of Shayll had, with ſir Richard Vernon, a bond for their enjoyment of Donaſthorpe lands, late of Thomas Caleys[14]. In 1437 the ſame John, apparently, and Alice Delves, were enfeoffed as mentioned under Seale[15]. In 1438 or 9, Galfr. Greſley, eſq. with aſſent of co-feoffees, granted lands in Wynſhull, near Burton on Trent, formerly of John Broun, ſon of William Broun of Pontefract[16]. And in 1484, Thomas Broun was rector of Appleby[16].

Juſt a century after the ſettlement on John Broun of Sheyle and the above Alice, another John Browne of London, eſq. and Alice his wife, were tenants in a recovery, Paſch. 28° Hen. VIII. of lands in Willyſley; the uſes, apparently, to George Abney, eſq.[17]

As this gets nearer to the time when the preſent Browne family is found to certainty ſettled at Stretton, it may be thought likely that this laſt-mentioned John, a land-holder in Willeſley, a neighbour townſhip and in ſome reſpects connected, was a progenitor. But in this and the other caſes, conjecture, for want of the evidences alluded to, is all that is left us. In the inſtance of John Browne 1430, the arms ſet up in Seile church argue a contrary way. Burton indeed ſpeaks of this coat as only a maternal one, borne "for his own;" ſo that, on this idea, his paternal one might, for aught appearing, be that of the now Brownes. But grounds have been ſtated for at leaſt ſurmiſing, that the Freford coat might be properly and paternally John Browne's, on the ſuppoſition that Brun, or le Brun, de Freford was the original name of the family afterwards ſtyled, in the elder line, ſimply de Freford[18].

Mr. Charles Browne, who reſided here at the beginning of the ſeventeenth century, was about that period the founder of the preſent reſpectable brick manſion-houſe, Plate CXXXV.—"On digging the foundation for this houſe, there were found, deep in the ground, the remains of an antient building of ſtone,

---

[1] Rydeware Chartulary, 2d page after ca. 134.
[2] Seile originals.
[3] P. 1000.
[4] Rydeware Chartulary, N° 86.
[5] Shaw's Staffordſhire, vol. II. p. 30. Burton, liſt of Sheriffs.
[6] Peck, MS.
[7] Roper, MS.
[8] Eſch. 14 Edw. IV. N° 34. Leic.
[9] 9 Hen. VII. See Shaw's Staffordſhire, vol. II. p. 283.
[10] N° 6. and the deed following it. P. *1000.
[11] P. 989*.
[12] Seile original.
[13] Original late at Caldewell Hall.
[14] Seile original.
[15] P. *985.
[16] Seile originals.
[17] Willeſley original.
[18] Shaw's Staffordſhire, vol. II. Appendix, p. 14.—And ſee p. 993.

of

PEDIGREE of BROWNE, of

Charles Browne, of Stretton en le Field; builder of Stretton House about

Wynefred, daughter of ſir John Harpur, of Swarkſton, knt. married (at Swarkſton) June 26, 1611. = John Browne, of Stretton, eſq. born about 1592[1], being aged 72 at the Viſitation 1664; died 17, bur. 18[2] May, 1669. = Magdalen, Elizabeth, bap. (at Swarkſton) March 19, 1611.

John, bu. (at Lullington) Dec. 1, 1614.
Barbara, bapt. (at Swarkſton) Aug. 4, 1616.
Ann, bapt. (at Swarkſton) March 21, 1618.

John Browne, of Stretton, eſq. born about 1619, being æt. 45, in 1664. = Dorothy, da. of T. Brudenell, of Staunton Wyvile, eſq. m. (at Staunton Wyvile) July 4, 1648; b. Oct. 17, 1660. = Mary ….. bu. Feb. 24, 1672; 2d wife. = Ellen Poudrell, of Stretton en le Field; m. (at Scale) May 27, 1673; 3d wife.

Henry, bu. Sept. 21, 1652[3].
Iſabell, bu. Nov. 8, 1655[3].
Charles, bu. Dec. 15, 1662[3].

1. Dorothy, wife of George, of
2. Sarah, wife of Haſlewood, of
died May 5,
3. Anne, buried
1668.

Dorothy, living 1664.

2. John Browne;
3. Wm. Browne;
4. Henry Browne;
5. Arth. Browne; living 1664.

Thomaſin, dau. of John Fitzherbert, eſq. of Sumerſall, co. Derby, by Mary his wife; bapt. (at Sumerſall-Herbert) Dec. 30, 1650; ma. (at ditto) Oct. 13, 1670. = 1. Thomas Browne, eſq. bapt. (at Staunton Wyvile) April 10, 1649; reſided laſt at Appleby; bu. Sept. 11, 1705. = Lucy, bapt. (at Plumtre) 1648; ſurvived her huſb.

Anthony, and Benjamin, bapt. (at Plumptre) 1650, 1659; ſup. to die y.[5]

Simon Harcourt, bapt. (at Plumtre) 1653; clerk of the crown[4]; died March 30, 1724. =

Lucy, bapt. Oct. 30, bur. Nov. 4, 1671;
Mary, bu. March 12, 1679;
Charles, bu. Jan. 1, 1684;
(all at Sumerſall Herbert.)
Anne, d. Nov. 2, …. (at Stretton).

William Browne, of Stretton, eſq. in his latter years of Hilcote, co. Staff.[12] buried Jan. 18, 1744. = Katharine, d. and heir of Zouch Tate, 2d ſon of the De-la-pré family; buried Dec. 27, 1736.

…… Allſopp, of Allſope in the Dale, co. Derby. = Thomaſine, buried Nov. 27, 1751. = …. Hardeſtie; 2d hu.

Vere Browne[6].

Iſaac Newby, vicar of Abkettleby; died Sept. 1, 1728, æt. 56. = Suſanna[7] d. Oct. 16, 1757, æt. 71.

Elizabeth, bapt. 1692;
Simon, buried 1694; (at Seale.)
Vere, ba. and bu. 1695 (at Tamworth).
Mary, bapt. 1697;
Thomas, ba. 1698;
Baſil, bapt. 1699; buried 1700;
Sarah, bapt. 1702;
John, bapt. 1703;
(at Appleby.)

Roger Cave, eſq. (younger ſon of ſir Roger Cave, bart.) of Eydon, co. North'ton, afterwards of Ravenſton, co. Leiceſter; died March, 1741. = Katharine, eldeſt child; married (at Sandon, co. Stafford[12]) 1721; died Ma. 6, 1772, æt. 69 (bu. at Loughb'ro).

Anna-Maria, bapt. Ma. 21, 1705; buried Ma. 14, 1739.

James Chambers, LL. B. patron and rector of Higham and of Croft 1740. = Matilda, bapt. Jan. 17, 1707.

Frances, bapt. and buried 1708.
William, bapt. 1711, bur. 1714.
Clementina, died young.
Charles, bapt. Dec. 25, 1717; bur. Jan. 18, 1737.
Louiſa, buried Jan. 18, 1755, æt. 37.

Thomas Allſopp, attorney in Loughborough, di. Mar. 4, 1757, æt. 57 (buried at Loughborough). = Anne, da. of Thos. Ayre, of Tilton, eſq. 1ſt wi.

William-Bromley Cave, bu. (at Loughborough) July 12, 1788, ſ. p.
Francis, died a minor.

Frances, da. of Theodore Wm. Inge, eſq. ma. (at Thorpe Conſtantine) Dec 6, 1757; bu. Oct. 25, 1758, ſ. p. = John Cave Browne, eſq. adopted heir to his maternal grandfa'r's Stretton eſtate and name; di. Oct. 2, 1798. = Katharine, bo. Oct. 26, 1744, ſurviving child of Thomas Aſtley, of Weſtminſter, gent. and heir to the Aſtleys of Wood Eyton, co. Stafford, formerly of Aſtley, co. Salop; living at Lichfield 1804.

James Chambers, M. A. bap. (at Higham) Aug. 1, 1733; rector of Stretton & Barwell; died May 9, 1790. = Anna-Maria, living at Derby 1804.

John Wood. = Elizabeth.
Cave Wood, died Jan. 9, 1782, æt. 21.
Two more ſons, died minors.
(Buried at Loughborough.)

Thomas Mould. See above. =

Sarah, 2d dau. of Tho. Prinſep, of Croxall, c. Derby, eſq. marr. Oct. 13, 1788; d. ſ. p. = William Cave Browne, eſq. born Feb. 19, 1765, of Stretton 1804; heir preſumptive to the Cave title of baronet. = Louiſa, 4th d. of ſir Robert Mead Wilmot, bart. married Jan. 4, 1793.

Katharine.

John, rector of Stretton; reſident there 1804. = Margaret, dau. of R. Haymes, of Great Glen, married May 1, 1798.

Frances.
Elizabeth.
Charles.

Lebbeus-Charles Humfrey, rector of Laughton. =

Harriot, Louiſa, John, born about July 6, 1795. Sept. 11, 1796. May 10, 1798.

William-Aſtley, born Aug. 4, 1799.
Thomas, born June 21, 1801.
Wilmot, born Dec. 5, 1802.

Robert, born July 17, 1799.
Katharine, born June 11, 1800.
Mary-Anne, born Sept. 4, 1803.

---

[1] Not by his graveſtone, but his own certificate in the Viſitation-entry; which laſt (a ſtrange omiſſion ſurely, not to be ſkreened by the name of Dugdale, or Dugdale's clerk) records, ſo far from anceſtors, not even the enterer's parents, but merely himſelf, his wives, and deſcendants then living; ſo that an incidental expreſſion in Burton's MS. is the ſole authority for Charles the head of our pedigree.

[2] At Stretton; whence, from either regiſter or monuments, are taken the dates in general of this pedigree (except where ſomething is ſpecified to the contrary), down to the generation now living.—N. B. The proper body of the mangled old regiſter volume (the entries of prior years being interſperſed in diſtant pages) begins with the following title: "A juſt and true Account of the Births, Marriages, and Burials, of all the inhabitants in the pariſh of Stretton le Field, upon the Account of the Windmill-Act, commencing May the 1ſt, 1695." This deſignation of rector Bereſford, or his clerk's, beſtowing, ſeems to refer to the act 6 and 7 William, c. 6, which laid a tax on marriages, burials, and chriſtenings, and ordered miniſters to regiſter them, with the births alſo, and to enter too the degree of the perſon, the name of the party to pay the tax, and his abode. This act was only for five years, and ſeems to have been little complied with; the ſingle inſtance (and that only a partial purſuance of the proviſions) S. P. W. has ſeen, is in the regiſter of Appleby.

[3] Theſe three perſons are attached by dots to both lines of the elder J. Browne's iſſue, the regiſter, our only guide in the dearth of materials, not naming their mothers; indeed the firſt of them is deſignated only by "Mr. Henry Browne," might therefore not be ſon at all, but brother, &c. to J. B.

[4] Perhaps a preferment through lord chancellor Harcourt, who was ſon of Simon's couſin-german ſir Philip, and alſo married, to his ſecond wife, the relict of Simon's brother-in-law Richard Anderſon. A ſecond ſon too of Simon, Richard Harcourt, married a half-ſiſter of the chancellor.

[5] "Mrs. Sarah (q. a miſnomer?) Harcourt, buried (at Appleby) March 3, 1710." Q. Who was the Mrs. Maria Harcourt, married (at Plumtree) June 1, 1675, to Mr. Muckloe, of Nottingham? Could ſhe be a daughter, before unheard-of, to Dr. Vere Harcourt?

[6] Vere Browne, and his mother, are put down from oral information only of the dowager Mrs. K. Browne, who had hers in good meaſure from Lucy wife of William Browne Allſopp. This latter remembered the widow Lucy on Houſe about 1600.=. . . . .

=Magdalen, daughter of Anthony Grey, rector of Buſbach, afterward earl of Kent; bapt. (at Burbach) May 8, 1598, married (at ditto) June 1, 1626; bur. Sept. 15, 1668.

Margery, bur. July 9, 1638.
Mary, buried Feb. 20, 1639.

Dorothy, wife of Edw. George, of Salop; living 1664.
Sarah, wife of Anth. Haſlewood, of Burbach; died May 5, 1666.
Anne, buried July 31, 1668.

4. Chriſtian, wife of Henry Adams, of Stretton en le Field; living 1664.
5. Mary, wife of Daniel Chadwick; living 1664.

Vere Harcourt, D.D. younger ſon of Robert Harcourt, eſq. archdeacon of Nottingham, and rector of Plumptre, co. Notts; died (by monument there) July 4, 1683, æt. 77.=Lucy, d. to ſir Roger Thornton, of Cambr.-ſhire, knt.; died Oct. 9, 1682, æt. 62.

Wm. Sherman, patron of Higham, and above 60 years rector; died Jan. 9, 1719 (bu. at Higm) æt. 97.=Mary; died Nov. 1, 1711, aged 83.

arcourt, t Plum-3; clerk rown[4]; arch 30,=Elizabeth, da. of ſir R. Anderſon, of Pendley, Herts, bart. to whom her eldeſt ſon was heir, died v. p. Mar. 29, 1694.

Anne, bapt. (at Plumtre) 1655.

Clifton Harcourt, bapt. (at Plumtre) 1664.=Suſanna . . . .[5]

Nathaniel Sherman[8], 3d ſon.=Mary[9], d. Oct. 20, 1727, æt. 78.

Eliz. youngeſt da. d. May 29, 1764, æt. 100.

James Sherman[10], LL.B. 5th ſon.=Anne[11], died July 26, 1739, æt. 78.

Joſeph Chambers, rector of Croft.=Mary.

n, bapt. 1692; buried 1694; Seale.)
. and bu. 1695 amworth).
bapt. 1697;
, ba. 1698;
apt. 1699;
d 1700;
bapt. 1702;
bapt. 1703;
(at Appleby.)

Cornelius Harrold, vicar of Auſtrey, co Warwick; mar. (at Newton) Nov. 6, 1721; 2d huſb.=Mary, only child and heir.=Samuel Chambers, M. A. rector of Croft; married (at Newton) Aug. 20, 1711; died Feb. 20, 1717-18 (bu. at Croft), æt. 34.

Nathaniel, died a child, Sept. 11, 1703.
All buried at Higham.

Thos. Chambers, B. A. third ſon; d. April 23, 1709, æt. 24.

Samuel Chambers, eldeſt child; died in his 12th month May 15, 1713.

Thomas Mould, 2d maſter of Appleby ſchool; miniſter of Meaſham and of Greſley.=Penelope Chambers; 1ſt wife.

Thomas Mould, of Appleby, curate of Meaſham 1804.

Allſopp, y in rough, , 1757, uried at rough).=Anne, da. of Thos. Ayre, of Tilton, eſq. 1ſt wi.[13]=Elizabeth, d. of And. Glenn, rector of Hatherne, d. June 18, 1782, æt. 83; 2d wi.[14]

Mary, firſt wife of Thos. Dockſey, of Snelſton, co. Derby, afterward of Lichfield, eſq. died ſ. p.
Martha, died unmarried.

Robert Bakewell, of Swepſton.=Jane.=Charles Allen, rector of Tugby.

Will.-Browne Allſopp, vicar of Abkettleby 1728, rector of Stretton 1750; died March 26, 1773, æt. 69.=Lucy, died Mar. 18, 1770, æt. 61.[15]

. . . . . Farnell, ſurgeon, &c. in Appleby.=Suſanna[16].

Thomas Mould. See above.=Penelope Cave, bapt. (at Ravenſton) Nov. 26, 1736; mar. April 15, 1776; living (at Eaſt Retford) 1804; 2d wife.

William Mould, clerk, bo. Aug. 12, 1777; maſter of Retford ſchool of . . . m. Nov. 2, 1803, a da. Blackburn, of York.

Robert Bakewell, barriſter at law, ſometime of Greſley Hall; d. Nov. 4, 1793 (buried at Swepſton), æt. 63.=Harriott, the other and y'ger da. of T.-W. Inge; died Jan. 22, 1762 (bur. at do), æt. 19.

Frances-Harriott, ſole heir.

Anna-Maria, di. Dec. 1, 1743 (bu. at Loughborough), æt. 9.
William, di. unmarried.

Samuel Chambers, B. A. bap. (at Higham) Oct. 21, 1736; rector 1765, v. p. alſo of Croft, & patron of both; died (buried at Higham) ſ. p. Feb. 18, 1788.=Katharine, 2d d. of T. Fiſher, of Caldecote, co. War. eſq. m. (at Higham) Nov. 12, 1787; d. (bu. at ditto) May 31, 1792, æt. 35.

Matilda, mar. (at Higham) to Wm. King, of Stoke Golding, March 23, 1756.
Joſeph Chambers, born (at Higham) Aug. 30, 1741; married (at ditto) Dec. 23, 1766, to Elizabeth-Margaretta Vanham, ſettled in London.
Charles Chambers, bapt. (at Higham) Feb. 25, 1744, rector of South Kilworth.
Ann, bapt. (at Higham) Jan. 20, 1745, and buried July 10, 1746.

beus-arles nfrey, tor of ughon.=Anna-Maria, marr. Jan. 10, 1797.

Thomas, an army officer, aid-de-camp to general Rooke 1804.

William-Haymes, of Kibworth, eſq.=Louiſa, married Nov. 6, 1799.

Edwd. army officr.
Henrietta.
Selina.

Edwd.-Sacheverel Wilmot, 2d ſon of ſir R. Md. Wilmot, rect. of Langley, c. Derby.=Anne, ſole hr; mar. May 17, 1797.

9.
1800.
1803.

Charles-Lebbeus, born Jan. 5, 1798.
William-Cave, born Feb. 22, 1800.

Louiſa, born Oct. 15, 1800.
Harriet, born Aug. 17, 1803.

Edward, born June 9, 1798.
James, born Aug. 6, 1799.
Ann, born July 6, 1800.
Cave, born June 7, 1802.

ormerly Harcourt), removed to ſome place remote from Stretton, with her ſon Vere, and the maiden ſiſter Anne uch reſident with her. And the name Vere, with various particulars which may be obſerved, tallies perfectly with e narrative.

[7] Lucy Newby is ſaid to be deſcended, like her huſband, from the Brownes; and one poſitive oral account calls her other Suſanna daughter to one of Thomas Browne's younger brothers. But it ſtrikes ſtrongly, as no marriage has en met with of any ſuch brother, that the truth may rather be "daughter to his brother-in-law," viz. to Clifton arcourt and his wife Suſanna. Lucy Newby, born about 1709, received her name, in baptiſm, from the relict ucy Browne; which was ſtill more natural if the mother Suſanna was Lucy Browne's own niece, than if only her te huſband's. And as we muſt ſuppoſe, from the non-appearance of Clifton Harcourt's ſon Simon among Seale ptiſms, that this child was born at ſome prior reſidence of the father, ſo might alſo a daughter Suſanna, to wit out 1686, to anſwer in age to Mrs. Newby. What became of Clifton Harcourt and his five or more living chilen, after the date of the Appleby entry 1710, has not been ſeen.

[8] He was 42 years rector of Newton-R. co. Warwick; and died Jan. 2, 1729 (buried at Newton), æt. 75. rms, emboſſed on the ſlab at Newton: a lion rampant between three oak-leaves; impaling, a bend between ſix reſlets. Creſt, a ſea-lion ſeiant.

[9] Daughter of Thomas Baddeley, rector of Eccleſhall, co. Stafford; 42 years wife to N. S.

[10] Rector of Higham; died Dec. 13, 1739, æt. 70.

[11] Daughter of Power Brecknock; relict of Francis Laking.

[12] From information of Mrs. Katharine Cave Browne.

[13] Among others, Thomas, alſo attorney in Loughborough, died May 22, 1777, æt. 49 (buried at Loughborough).

[14] Among others, Mary, married, 1ſt, to Samuel Phillips, eſq. of Garendon; 2dly, to ſir William Gordon, K. B.

[15] Among others, Charles Allſopp, rector of Aſhby Parva, and vicar of Shepſhead.

[16] Beſides theſe two daughters of Iſaac and Suſanna Newby, it ſhould ſeem that Henry, who appears in vol. II. pp. 3, 14, as ſucceeding William Browne Allſopp in Abkettleby vicarage, was their ſon (who had only two daughters, at died young), and that William Browne Allſopp had the living only during Henry's non-age.

of great bigneſs and proportion, which extended to a great plot of ground; and were ſuppoſed to be parts of the ſeat of Edric de Stretton[1]."

Mr. Charles Browne was ſucceeded by his ſon John, who in 1630 was lord of the manor and patron of the church. He had for his ſecond wife Magdalen, one of the daughters of Anthony earl of Kent; and died May 17, 1669, at the age of 77.

Thomas Browne, eſq. died lord of this manor Sept. 8, 1705, in his 56th year.

The late William Browne, eſq. (who married the daughter and heireſs of Zouch Tate of Delapré[2]), having no iſſue male ſurviving, bequeathed his eſtate to his grandſon, John Cave, eſq. who took the name and arms of Browne by act of parliament; and married Catharine, daughter and heir[3] of Thomas Aſtley[4], gent. of the city of Weſtminſter, by whom he left a numerous family, as may be ſeen in the Pedigree here annexed. To the North ſide of his houſe he made a handſome ſtone addition.

The family of the Moores had in 1712 a good eſtate here, and the patronage of the living.

A venerable yew tree at Stretton was mentioned in an advertiſement in 1792.

The lordſhip contains pretty near 1050 acres of land, principally of old incloſure; 900 or more belonging to the manor, 90 to the rev. John Bakewell, 40 or 50 to the rectory; and is rated to the land-tax with Willeſley and Raunſton[5].

By the Return to Parliament in 1801, Stretton le Field contained 55 houſes, and the ſame number of families; 106 males, and 106 females, in all 212; of whom 47 were uſually employed in agriculture, and 13 in trade, manufactures, &c.

	£.	s.	d.	Okethorpe. £.	s.	d.	Meaſham. £.	s.	d.	Willeſley. £.	s.	d.
Money raiſed for the poor of Stretton, within the year ending at Eaſter 1776, — —	43	0	11	53	17	11	172	10	6	17	8	9
Expended in county-rates, &c.	6	15	2	0	0	0	0	0	0	3	12	1
——— on the poor, —	36	5	10	47	3	6	156	6	2	14	6	8
Rent of habitations and workhouſe,	2	8	0	2	13	0	17	15	0	0	19	1
Expended in litigations, —	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	3	2	1
Money raiſed for 1783, —	84	13	4	59	10	11	151	4	3	20	2	0
——— 1784, —	56	2	6	65	5	5	143	11	11	20	2	0
——— 1785, —	69	12	2	56	12	5	178	8	7	15	1	6
Medium of theſe three years,	70	2	8	60	9	7	159	8	3	18	8	6
——— of county expences, —	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	4	0	4
——— of expences not relating to the poor; repairs of the church, roads, &c.	0	7	0	2	2	8	0	0	0	0	0	0
——— of nett annual expences,	69	15	8	60	9	7	159	8	3	14	8	2
——— of attending on magiſtrates,	0	0	0	0	15	11	4	11	0	0	10	2
——— of entertainments at meetings,	0	0	0	1	1	10	1	8	7	0	0	5
——— of law expences, —	5	10	1	0	1	4	1	13	11	0	0	6
——— of ſetting the poor to work,	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	2	8	0	0	0

The Return made to Parliament in 1786, in anſwer to an enquiry reſpecting the charitable donations in the Leiceſterſhire part of this pariſh, may be ſeen in vol. I. p. 78.

The CHURCH, (ſee Plate CXXXV.)

dedicated to St. Michael, is pleaſingly ſituated on an eminence by the manor-houſe of William Cave-Browne, eſq. and pictureſquely wooded, forming a delightful groupe to the country around[6]. It conſiſts of a nave, with three ſmall clereſtory windows, a chancel, and a North aile, with three pointed arches, and two windows enlarged within modern times.

The embattled tower at the Weſt end, very taper, having in it three bells, ſupports a ſlender ſpire.

The chancel South door and window are ſtopped up, and the church North door.

Inſtead of a font, is a baſon like a porringer in a drawer in the reading deſk.

In the South wall is a locker, the cavity probably of a piſcina.

In the Eaſt window of the chancel Mr. Burton deſcribes theſe arms; fig. 1—14:

Argent, two bars Azure, on a canton of the ſecond, a martlet of the firſt. Lathbury.

Azure, three arrows Or, 2 and 1. Archer.

Gules, ſeven maſcles conjoined, voided Or, a label Argent. Quincy.

Argent, three falcons Gules. Falconer.

Quarterly, 1. and 4. Argent, on a bend Azure, three bucks heads caboſſed Or, Stanley; 2 and 3, Or, a chevron Gules, between three martlets Sable, Stafford.

Argent, a chevron between three croſſes formée fitché Sable. Finderne.

Argent, on a bend Azure, three bucks heads caboſſed Or. Stanley.

In a South window of the chancel:

Sable, a lion rampant Argent. Stapleton.

Or, on a croſs engrailed Azure, five mullets Or. Abbey of Burton upon Trent.

Azure, ſix martlets Or, 3, 2, and 1. Appleby.

"Stretton is a parſonage, legally worth 60*l.* a year, lying part in Derbyſhire, part in Leiceſterſhire; Mr. Trigge miniſter[7]."

It is in the deanery of Repingdon, in the dioceſe of Lichfield and Coventry.

The preſent value, in manſ' ibidem, cum gleb' adjacent' per ann' 1*l.* 3*s.* in decimis, &c. 4*l.*

It is rated in the king's books at £9. 10*s.* 5*d.*

---

[1] Burton, MS.

[2] See his pedigree in vol. II. p. 888.

[3] Her brother William Aſtley was accidentally drowned, bathing in the Trent, while at Repton ſchool under his uncle; to whom, in conſequence, his ſiſter became heir.

[4] Younger brother to Walter and William Aſtley, who both died unmarried, the latter well known as maſter of Repton ſchool, where he had been preceded by his ſiſter's huſband George Fletcher. Mr. Thomas Aſtley, who is believed to have been for ſome years publiſher of the London Magazine, died July 14, 1747.

[5] Wolley's MS Hiſtory of Derbyſhire.

[6] Topographer, vol. I. p. 521.

[7] Rev. Samuel Carte, MS.

RECTORS.	PATRONS.
Will. frat. Walteri de Stretton (teſt. cartæ Henrici filii Willielmi quond. rectoris de Seyla), about 1240.
Dominus Willielmus, 1326[1].
Nich. de Lichefeld, poſt Luc. Evang. 1352[1].
Hugo Broun, 1432-3[2].
Ric. Haſord, St. Dionyſ. 28 H. VI.[3]
Walter Savage, died May 24, 1518[4].
Henry Aberley, buried Feb. 4, 1642.
Matthew Trigge[5]; buried Oct. 17, 1676.
John Beresford, Nov. 19, 1676; buried April 18, 1704.	Henry Beresford.
George Gretton[6], April 9, 1705; died March 29, 1750.	Richard Moore, and Margaret Prieſt widow, pro hâc vice.
William-Browne Allſopp, June 8, 1750; died March 26, 1773.	Wrightſon Mundy, eſq. (as guardian to the following.)
James Chambers[7], M. A. Aug. 6, 1773.	John Cave-Browne, eſq.[9]
Thomas Greſley[8], M. A. June 30, 1790.
John Cave-Browne, 1792; preſent rector 1804.

MONUMENTAL INSCRIPTIONS.

Under an arch in the North aile, with finials ſurmounted by a bouquet, or beaſts foreſhortened (or rather where ſuch an arch is deſtroyed by a window) is an antient monument, with a croſs emboſſed upon it, fig. 27; probably for the founder.

Cloſe alongſide this are the two following inſcriptions:

1. Here lies interred the body of Elizabeth Richards, the wife of James Richards of Aſhby-de-la-Zouch, gent.
and widow of Stretton Allen, gent.
She died May 18, 1739, aged 76 years.

2. Here lies the body of Thomas Allen, youngeſt ſon of Mr. Stretton Allen and Elizabeth his wife. Obiit 18 Maii, A.D. 1712, ætatis ſuæ 24.

A little Weſtward, is a flat alabaſter, with the figure of a prieſt, as at Seale, ſtrait hair, head on cuſhion; on its right ſide a chalice, on left a book; (fig. 28.)

Round the margin is the following:

"Hic jacet D'nus Walterus Savage, quondam rector hujus eccleſiæ de Stretton; qui obiit xxiiii die Maii, anno D'ni mill'mo cccccxviii.
Cujus a'i'e propitietur Deus. Amen."

In the chancel, within the communion-rails, on a flat ſtone is the following:

"HERE LIETH THE BODY OF JOHN BROWNE, ESQ.
WHO DEPARTED THIS LIFE MAY Y^{e} 17, AN' DÕ 1669, ANNO ÆTATIS SUÆ 74.
Sibi maturè obiit,
Aliis citò."

Cloſe adjoining is the following ſimilar one:

"HERE LYETH THE BODY OF SARAH, DAUGHTER OF JOHN BROWNE, LORD OF THIS MANNOUR, ESQ. BY LADY MAGDALENE, ONE OF THE DAUGHTERS OF THE RT. HON. ANTHONY LATE EARL OF KENT, WHO DEPARTED THIS LIFE MAY THE 5, AN' DÕM 1666, ÆTATIS SUÆ 36.
POSUIT TRISTISSIMUS
A. H.[10]
ALSO THE BODY OF ANNE, DAUGHTER OF THOMAS BROWNE, ESQ. BY THOM . . . SHE DIED NOV. 2 . . ."

In the aile below:

"HERE LYETH THE BODY OF THOMAS BROWNE, ESQ. LORD OF THIS MANNER, WHO DIED THE 8th OF SEPTEMBER 1705, AND IN THE 56th YEAR OF HIS AGE."

In the corner of the North aile is a neat mural marble, thus inſcribed:

"Near this place lyes interred the bodyes of Katharine Browne, wife of William Browne, of Stretton le Field, eſq. and daughter of Zouch Tate,
a ſecond ſon of the Tates of Delaprie, by Northampton;
and four of her children, viz.
Frances, William, Clementina, and Charles.
This monument was erected in the year 1739."

Arms: Quarterly, Azure, a chevron Or between three eſcallops Argent, within a bordure engrailed Sable; Browne. On an eſcutcheon of pretence, party per feſs Or and Gules, a pale counterchanged, in each part of the firſt a bird cloſe Sable; Tate.

On a flat ſtone below:

"Here lieth interred the body of Louiſa Browne, daughter of William Browne, eſq. and Catherine his wife. She departed this life 13th January, 1755, aged 37."

On a marble tablet againſt the North wall of the chancel:

"George Gretton, M. A.
rector of this church 44 years[11],
and vicar of Marſton upon Dove 64 years, departed this life March the 29th, 1750,
aged 92.
He was an orthodox Divine,
a ſincere profeſſor, and reſolute defender of the doctrine,
and a regular obſerver
of the diſcipline
of the CHURCH OF ENGLAND;
exemplary in his life,
for charity, piety, and ſobriety.
Anne his wife departed this life
October the 18th, 1734, aged 79.
She was a good Chriſtian,
an obliging neighbour,
and an uncommon friend to the poor."

---

[1] Willeſley originals. See p. 1026. [2] Originals of Hans Winthrop Mortimer, eſq. [3] Seile original. [4] Epitaph.

[5] See before, under Diſeworth, p. 756, an epitaph on Mr. John Trigge, ſon of the rector of Stretton and of Joan his wife; and in St. Peter's church, Nottingham, is a marble monument for alderman Thomas Trigge, grocer, another of their ſons, who died March 20, 1704-5, in the 53d year of his age; and gave by will 50*l.* to buy land for ever, the rent to be laid out in bread, to be diſtributed to the poor of that pariſh. By Elizabeth his wife (who was daughter of William Parker, and widow of Benjamin Richards) he had ſix children, of whom five ſurvived him. Dering's Nottingham, vol. I. p. 39.

[6] Rector of Seile the preceding 11 years, while Richard Inge under age. And ſee his epitaph above.

[7] Rector alſo of Barwell. [8] Now rector of Hinton on the Green, co. Glouceſter, and vicar of Poleſworth, co. Warw.

[9] Dr. Browne Willis, in his Hiſtory of Cathedrals, 1727, vol. I. mentions Mr. Browne twice as patron of Stretton en le Field, pp. 491, and 494; but in one of them he evidently confounds this place with Sutton in le Field.

[10] The initials (it appears by the Viſitation-entry, certified under her father's hand) of her huſband, Anthony Haſlewood; whoſe modeſty, or ſome other cauſe, has left poſterity to ſuppoſe his wife never married.

[11] His hand-writing in the regiſter begins Feb. 28, 1704; his predeceſſor Beresford having been buried, as above, on the foregoing 18th of April; ſo that Mr. Gretton was rector above 45 years. On the 1ſt of March 1804 (ſays the Derby Mercury) died, aged 87, the rev. John Edwards of Repton. This Mr. Edwards ſucceeded G. Gretton as vicar of Marſton; ſo that the two held it 118 years. And 'tis ſaid (but the authentic particulars not yet obtained) that Gretton's predeceſſor was vicar about 50 years.

On a flat ſtone below the rails:

"Near this place
lies the body of
the Rev^d^.
William Browne Allſopp,
rector of this church.
He died
March 26, 1773,
aged 69.

Here
lies the body of Lucie the wife of William Browne Allſop.

She died
March 18, 1770,
aged 61.

At the feet lies the body of Elizabeth, daughter of William Browne Allſopp and Lucie his wife [1].
She died April 15, 1770, aged 20."

Cloſe to the laſt is this:

"Here lieth the body of Suſanna Newby, widow.
She died Oct. 16, 1757, aged 71."

In the church-yard:

"In memory of Thomas Newbold, builder, who died Oct. 29, 1784.
He laid the foundation of a good character in early life, and ſubſtantially finiſhed it in the 82d year of his age.
Elizabeth his ſecond wife died four days before him,
and in the ſame year of her age.
She lived an example worthy of imitation in every ſocial and conjugal virtue.
They were in their years equal, in their lives lovely;
and in their deaths not far divided."

"Thomas Hartill, died Feb. 8, 1748, aged 83.
Margery Hartill, died Dec. 9, 1761, aged 89.
John Hartill, of Doniſthorpe, Aug. 5, 1772, a. 7[illegible]."

"Joſeph Elton, of Oakthorp, died Oct. 28, 1785,
in the 76th year of his age.
Mary his wife, died May 13, 1787, aged 76."

There is a ſtone-walled pound without the church-yard to the Eaſt, but no way remarkable.

P. 1029. In a Stretton ſettlement preſerved at Willeſley (in which James Abney is a truſtee) the firſt John Browne's daughter Barbara is found with a huſband, Anthony Woode, clerk, Sept. 9, 16[illegible]1.—The Croft Regiſter records, "Rev. James Chambers, rector (he who was LL. B.), buried May 6, 1777."—"Matilda his wife, aged 79, buried Feb. 8, 1787."—Their ſon "William, baptized Oct. 15, 1738;"—daughter "Matylda, born Oct. 20, baptized Nov. 23, 1739."—And from Newton Regiſter, "Mary, daughter (and heir, afterwards wife of Samuel Chambers) of Nath. and Mary Sherman, born Feb. 14, baptized 23, 1689."

OKETHORPE,

antiently called Achetorp, a ſmall village, partly in the pariſh of Stretton, ſtanding about a mile from it, partly in Meaſham, and partly in Greſley, is almoſt wholly (if not quite) within the county of Derby; but Burton gives it as a part of the hundred of Weſt Goſcote. It is ſeparated from Aſhby Woulds by Doniſthorpe, and is but ordinary land.

Six oxgangs in Achetorp, which in the time of king Edward had been valued at five ſhillings, were worth but four-pence at the general ſurvey, when they were rented by Ernuin under Nigell de Statford. The land was equal to half a plough, but lay waſte [2].

John Savage was lord of this manor about 1200.

The abbey of Burton had a large portion of lands here, by the grant of the earl de Ferrariis, held of the honour of Tutbury, by the fourth of a knight's fee.

The abbot and convent of St. Mary de Pratis at Leiceſter had alſo ſome houſes and lands here.

"Habemus in Okethorp, ex dono Thome Lathbury, & ex feoffamento W. Moton & Thome Bytſwell, omnia terras & tenementa, prata & paſturas, cum omnibus pertinentiis ſuis, que ipſe habuit in predictâ villâ ex dono & feoffamento Elizabethe Moton matris ſue.

Item dedit nobis predictus Thomas Lathbury, in teſtamento ſuo, omnia tenementa ſua in Okethorp. Et hec ſunt verba teſtamenti: "In Dei nomine, amen, &c. Item do & lego omnia tenementa mea de novo perquiſita in Cateby, Okethorpe, & in campis de Naneby, abbati & conventui Leyc' in perpetuum. Item do & lego capelle beate Marie ejuſdem monaſterii lampadem durantem in perpetuum, vel magnum cereum ardentem, coram beatam Virginem Mariam.

Ricardus Glover tenet ibidem v meſſuagia iiii tofta, iiii virgatas terre; redd' xxviii š. viii đ. Inde ſolvuntur ii š. đno regi pro ſectâ curie.

Habemus ibidem mineram carbonum MARMORUM [3], que valet per annum .... [4].

Thomas Lathbury dedit nobis ibidem i meſſ' cum tofto, iiii virg' terre & dimid'; redd' xxxviii š. viii đ.

Item dedit nobis omnia tenementa ſua de novo edificata, in villâ de Cateby.—Reſolutiones; ſcilicet ii š. domino regi pro ſectâ curie [5]."

By the terrier referred to under Barkby, vol III p. 45, where Okethorp fills three pages, it appears that they had four virgates of land in the tenure of Richard Glover, conſiſting of the Weſtfelde in the leys, Medulfelde, Santetyfelde; and a meadow extending to the river Meys, and abutting on the meadow of J. Greſley; another meadow, bounded by the meadows of Philip Stokes, J. Greſley, and a meadow of Appleby; and a third called Stoni-meadow. Richard Glover held alſo half a virgate of arable land near Appleby [6]."

In 1346, the abbot of Burton (on the aid then granted for knighting Edward of Woodſtock the king's eldeſt ſon) was aſſeſſed 10*s*. for a quarter of a knight's fee in Okethorpe, parcel of the fee of Tutbury [7].

Okethorpe came afterwards to the Greſleys; and in 1518, George Greſley, eſq. was ſeiſed of it, as appears by a deed dated that year [8]; and "in this family Okethorp partly continues (1712), though the Alleyns of Greſley have ſome lands; and captain William Barnes, of Newhall and Derby, has a chief rent [9]."

In 1642, Henry earl of Huntingdon was lord of the manor of Okethorpe; and it is now the property of the earl of Moira, as repreſentative of that family.

By the Return made to Parliament in 1801, Okethorpe contained 61 inhabited houſes, and 1 uninhabited; 61 families, conſiſting of 138 males, 143 females; total 281; of whom 60 were chiefly employed in agriculture, and 37 in trade, manufactures, &c.

Nicholas de Ingwardeby de Octhorp (Willeſley deeds, p. 1034, N° 30.) = ...

William de Barton de Octhorp. = Alicia, daughter and heir; relict 1377.

John de Ingwerby (N° 25.) = ...

John de Ingwerby, Ambr. 1345.

William de Schevl, de Okthorp, 1349, 1377 [10] (N° 26, 30.) = Alicia, daughter and heir, Laurent. 1349; relict 1392-3 (N° 32.)

John de Sheyle, ſon and heir, 1349, 1398 (N° 33.)

---

[1] Lucinda Allſop, third daughter of the rev. William Browne Allſop, rector of Stretton, and Lucy his wife, died Dec. 23, 1791, æt. 46. See her epitaph at Aſhby, p. 624.

[2] "In Achetorp [terrâ Nigelli de Statford] habet Ernuin 6 bovatas terre ad geldam. Terra dimidiæ carucæ. Waſta eſt. Tempore Regis Edwardi valebat 5 ſolidos; modò 4 denarios." Domeſday, fol. 275, a. 1.

[3] Poſſibly hence the term ſtone-coal, uſed (I think) in oppoſition to ſoft coal or culm. S. P. W.

[4] The ſum is left blank in the original.

[5] Charyte's Rentale, fol. cxiiii. b.

[6] Cotton MSS. Galba E. III. 13.

[7] Rot. Aux. 20 Edw. III.

[8] Burton, p. 215. But Q. if this were not the "Oſkethorp" mentioned under Doniſthorpe, p. 997, from a deed in Greſley Chartulary, p. 60?

[9] Woolley's MS Hiſtory of Derbyſhire.

[10] Yet, though William de Scheyl the huſband is plainly living, a grantee, 1377, the deed of Alice 1349 is worded "quæ fui," and a counterpart "quondam" uxor.

MEASHAM,

a village, ſaid once to belong to the biſhop of Lichfield, in which are many coal-mines, is placed adjoining the North-weſt angle of Leiceſterſhire, but within the county of Derby.

Oct. 5, 9 Edw. III. free warren was granted to Edward de Bereford, for his lands at Meaſham [1].

Sir Francis Anderſon (ſon of ſir Edmund Anderſon, knt. chief-juſtice of the common pleas, by Magdalen his wife) died Dec. 22, 1616, ſeiſed of the manor of Meaſham, in the counties of Leiceſter and Derby, worth 10*l.* a year; leaving two ſons, Edmnnd and Stephen. His wife Judith died May 4, 1608 [2].

Meaſham is now become a populous village; and the preſent condition of the place exhibits great improvements. The coal-works ſtill exiſt, and the inhbitants derive further advantage from the cotton-mills, and other aids to induſtry, recently eſtabliſhed there by the Wilkes's, a family whoſe genius and activity have obtained them much wealth, and much credit in theſe parts. Joſeph Wilkes, eſq. who purchaſed this eſtate from the late William Wollaſton, eſq. and reſides here, has alſo lately erected a curious corn-mill, which bids defiance to the capricious aids of wind or water, having ſubſtituted a more powerful and never-failing aſſiſtant, ſteam, which anſwers remarkably well.

A ſmall market-houſe has been recently built by Mr. Wilkes, though there is no regular market.

William Abney, eſq. had likewiſe conſiderable property here, and built a good houſe at a ſmall diſtance from the village, called Meaſham Field [3], where he died Auguſt 2, 1800.

By the Return to Parliament in 1801, Meaſham contained 210 inhabited houſes, and 5 uninhabited, 540 males, 596 females, in all 1136; of whom 76 were chiefly employed in agriculture, and 616 in trade, manufactures, &c.

The church, which formerly belonged to the priory of Greſley, has a modern tower re-built upon an antient body; and within the church is one eſcocheon of the Beauchamps earls of Warwick.—Quarterly, 1. and 4. Gules, a feſs between 6 croſs-croſſlets Or; 2. and 3. Chequy, Or and Azure, a chevron Ermine; Plate CXXXVI. fig. 33.

The living is only a donative curacy, of which Mr. Wilkes has the patronage.

John Carey was curate in 1715.

Humphrey Jackſon, curate, reſigned 1752.

William Williams, A. B. licenſed 25 June, 1752, on the nomination of William Wollaſton, eſq.

Thomas Mould, ... one of the maſters of Appleby ſchool, who alſo held the donative of Greſley.

Thomas Jones, 1791—rector of Appleby, 1792-3.

WILLESLEY,

This lordſhip, at the time of the Conqueror's ſurvey, was part of the lands of Henry de Ferrieres, under whom it was held by Aluric. In the reign of king Edward the Confeſſor it was valued at twenty ſhillings, but at the ſurvey was worth only fifteen. The land was equal to one plough, but it then lay waſte. Three villans had there five oxen trained to the plough [4]. "It lies on the edge of the counties of Leiceſter and Derby, about a mile South-weſt of Aſhby-de-la-Zouch, and full 3 North-eaſt of Stretton, being in that pariſh; but has a chapel of eaſe. It is middling land, moſtly incloſed [5]."

In the reign of Henry IV. John Abney held lands here, who married a daughter and coheir of Ingwardby; who had George [6]; who had James, married to Mary Milward [7]; who had George, married to a daughter of Lowe; who had James [7], married to a daughter of Mainwaring of Whitmore, co. Stafford; who had, 1. ſir Edward Abney, knt. Doctor of Civil Law, who married a daughter and coheir of Peter Barr, merchant in London; by whom he had two ſons. He was living in 1712; and had then a good ſeat here. 2. Sir Thomas Abney, knt. lord mayor of London in 1701, who married a coheir of Joſhua Gunſton, of London, merchant, by whom he had [two ſons [8] and two] daughters [9]."

Edward lord Sheffield died Aug. 1, 1546, ſeiſed of the manors of Willeſley and Meaſham, worth 11*l.*; leaving John lord Sheffield his ſon and heir, then aged 12 [10].

By the Return to Parliament in 1801, Willeſley contained 9 houſes, inhabited by 34 males and 28 females, in all 62; of whom 52 were chiefly employed in agriculture, and none in trade or manufactures.

Mr. Orme was the incumbent in 1738.

The laſt miniſter was Mr. Prior of Aſhby; the preſent his ſon, of Aſhby alſo.

In the hall-window, and on a church-atchievement: Quarterly. 1. Ermine, on a croſs Sable, five bezants. Abney. 2. Sable, a chevron between three owls Argent, crowned Or. 3. Gules, a lion rampant Or. 4. Gules, a chevron engrailed Or; fig. 34.

On the church-floor:

An alabaſter, moſtly covered by pew—

"John Wilkyn."

On the chancel-floor, a ditto, covered as before—

"Decembris mill'mo CCCCmo quinto."

Man and wife; at feet 6, or 7, children.

A broken ſlate—

"Damaris eldeſt daughter of ſir Edward Abney, . . . October, 1677."

EXTRACTS from WILLESLEY DEEDS, moſtly relative to the Family of INGWARDBY.

1. Micahel de Wivelist pater Micahelis de Wivelist, Alicie filie mee, duas virg' in Wivelist, quas Lecia ſoror mea aliqñ habuit; Reddendo mihi Micahel̃i vel dño feuodi octodecim denarios, ad feſtum S'ti Martini ix, & Beate Marie in Marc̃o ix. Pro iſtâ vero donac̃oe dedit duas marcas argenti pre manibus in meâ maximâ nec̃c̃itate. Teſtibus; Rad' de Labache, Will̃o de Hayener, Joh̃e de Herteſhorn, Rob' de Herteſhorn, Rad' pinc̃nã de Pakint', Helyâ de Actorp, Rog̃o le Peſcher de Appylby, Hñr' fil' Jacoby de Wivelyst, & Rog̃o fre ſuo, & aliis.

2. Iſabel de Kareltonâ quond' ux' Radulfi de Brochton, in viduit', Alicie filie mee unam virgat' in Wiveleſleyâ, & tres rodas ſuper gardinam Rog̃i de Somervile, & dimidietatem totius holmi molendini, & dimidietatem totius Croſſemede, & octodecim denarios redditûs a Michahele fil' Mich̃ de Wiveleſleyâ recipiend', ad feſtum S'te Marie Martialis ix, & ad feſtum S'ti Martini ix; cum huſbote & haibote in boſco Ede de Wiveleſleyâ. Hiis teſtibus; domino Galfrido de Appelbi, domino Radulpho Grim, Waltero de Stretton, Henrico de Herteſhorn, Rad' de Tykenhale, Petro de Durandeſthorp, Oſberto de Seyl, Rogero Peſcher de Appelby, Rogero Graſſo de

---

[1] Cart. 9 Edw. III. n. 44.

[2] Inq. 15 Jac. I; Cole's Eſcheats, 759, p. 187.

[3] Topographer, vol. I. p. 521.

[4] "In Wiveleſlei habet Aluric 1 carucatam terræ ad geldam. Terra eſt 1 carucæ. Waſta eſt. Ibi 3 villani habent 5 boves arantes. Tempore Regis Edwardi valebat 20 ſolidos; modò 16 ſolidos." Domeſday, fol. 274. a. 2.

[5] Wolley's MS Hiſtory of Derbyſhire.

[6] So Mr. Wolley's MS Hiſtory of Derby. But ſee the annexed Pedigree of the Abney family.

[7] James Abney's will, 1690, has a ſeal, Quarterly, 1. and 4. Abney modern; 2. On a chief a demi-lion iſſuant; 3. A chevron between three heads of leopards, &c.

[8] In the annexed pedigree, Edward Barr Abney (an elder brother of the Judge) is omitted. He was under a commiſſion of lunacy, Oct. 27, 1719.

[9] Wolley's MS Hiſtory of Derbyſhire.

[10] Inq. at Derby, 16 April, 4 Edw. VI. Cole's Eſcheats, vol. V. (Harl. MSS. 760.) p. 29.

PEDIGREE of ABNEY, of WILLESLEY and NEWTON BURGULAND.

(From Vincent's Copy of the Viſitation in 1619; and a Pedigree entered at Aſhby by THOMAS ABNEY, of Newton Burguland, 16 March, 1681-2.)

Arms: Or, on a chief Gules, a lion paſſant Argent (the antient arms of Ingwardby). Plate CXXXVI. fig. 53.—Now Arms: Ermine, on a croſs Sable, five bezants. Fortiter et honeſtè; fig. 54.

John Abney, of Willeſley, gent. with Thomas Stoke, of Tamworth, eſq. enters into agreement with the prior of Repton, for their occupying poſſeſſions in the manor of Potlock, co. Derby, in right of their wives; Aſcenſion 1419; alſo of Willeſley 1424, 1429, 1444. = ... daughter and coheir of .... Ingwardby.

William Abney, lord ex parte of the town of Willeſley; Purific. 1471. = ...

John Abney, of Willeſley, re-enfeoffed, with wife, in ſpecial tail, of tenements in Willeſley, by Richard Ruggeley, eſq. and John Charneles, Wedneſday after Bartholomew 1490; a witneſs at Okethorp 1496. = Margaret.

George Abney[1], plaintiff with John Wolſeley, eſq. and others, in fine Octav. Martin, 27 H. VIII. 1535, Ric. Temple and wife Eliz. and R. Temple, jun. deforciants, of lands in Willeſley[2]; purchaſer in Newton and Swebſton, from William Devey, of Littleton, co. Glouceſter, 1558[3]; died March 1, 1578[4]. = Ellene (either ſhe, or a former wife, ſaid to be daughter of John Wolſeley[5]), died 19 Dec. 1571[4].

1. James Abney, of Willeſley. = Mary Milward.

2. Robert Abney, had Newton lands from his father 1571, and reſided there[6]; buried March 8, 1602. = Autherin[6], da. of Rob. Howe, of Hertfordſhire, relict and executrix; buried Dec. 7, 1642.

3. Edward Abney, of the Borough of Leiceſter, probably he of Willeſley 1601, when named overſeer of will by Robert of Newton[6]; buried Sept. 9, 1645. = Katharine, dau. of W. Ludlowe, a burgeſs of Leiceſter.

..... 1ſt wife. = 4. John Abney. = Eliz. Trowell, m. Oct. 28, 1583; 2d wife Iſabel, bapt. April 2, 1581. John, bapt. Feb. 2, 1588.

5. Thos. Abney.

6. Walter Abney, father's grantee for life, of meſſuage and yard land in Packington, Epiph. 1570[7].

George Abney, bo. 1551, living 1619; di. May 12, 1645, aged 94. = Margaret, dau. and coheir of Michael Lowe, of Tymmore, co. Stafford, by Margaret Biddulph[8].

1. Thomas Abney, of Newton Burguland, bapt. Aug. 18, 1585, died about 1650, æt. 63. = Anne, dau. of Robert and Margaret Smith, of Lockington, died in June 1678.

2. John Abney, of Loughborough, bapt. Dec. 22, 1596, living 1619.

1. Anne, bapt. Sept. 4, 1586, wife of Edward Beale, of Swebſton, clerk.
2. Elinor, bapt. June 25, 1591, wife of John Glen, of Bilſton.
3. Elizabeth, wife of ...... Dutton, of Winſell, co. Derby.

1. Paul Abney. = ... daughter of George Brokeſby, of Stapleford.

1. Frances. 2. Eliz. 3. Joan.

2. Dannett Abney.
3. Mary, wife to J. Colley, of the town of Nottingham.

Michael, bapt. (at Elford, c. Stafford) Jan. 2, 1592.

Suſan, bur. (at Tatenhill, co. Stafford) Jan. 24, 1594.

Philip, bur. July 16, 1595; Michael, bap. June 26, 1603; Nathaniel, bapt. April 21, 1605; (at Tatenhull.)

James Abney[9], eſq. high ſheriff of Derbyſhire 1656. = Jane Mainwaring, of Whitmore, co. Stafford; firſt wife.

1. Robert Abney, bapt. March 25, 1621, of Newton Burguland, died ſ. p. about 1658, æt. circa 36[10]. = Anne, d. of Joſ. Carver, of Hether, per Viſit.; but by authorities below Anne Ullocke[11].

Anne, daughter of George Ullock, of Meaſham, c. Derb. gent.; firſt w. = 3. Thomas Abney, bapt. July 10, 1632, of London, grocer, after his brother's death of Newton[12], heir to his brother, æt. circa 50 in March 1681-2; b. May 29, 1714. = Suſanna, d. of Geo. Swindale, of Aſhby de la Zouch, living 1681; bu. Jan. 10, 1731-2;

2. George, bapt. Sept. 21, 1628; buried 26th.
1. Ellen, bo. 1615, bapt. April 22, 1616, marr. Feb. 2, 1633, to Richard Bate, of Nailſton.
2. Anne, bo 1617, bapt. Nov. 2, wife of Thomas Derby, of Lullington, co. Derby.
3. Rebecca, bapt. Nov. 23, 1623; died unmarried.
4. Mary, bapt. May 28, 1626, wife of William Sarſon, of Shakerſton.
5. Sarah, bapt. Sept. 27, 1629; died unmarried.

1. James, di. ſ. p.
2. George, died ſ. p.

Damaris Andrews; firſt w.; a releſſor in Snareſton 1670; buried June 9, 1687. = 3. Sir Edward Abney, of Willeſley, born Feb. 6, 1631; doctor of the Civil Law, knighted at Whitehall Ap. 2, 1673[13], M.P. for the borough of Leiceſter 1690 and 1695; died Jan. 3, bur. 9th, 1728, aged near 97. = Judith, dau. and coheir of P. Barr, merchant of London; bu. Jan. 23, 1718, aged 58; ſecond wife.

4. Sir Tho. Abney[14], knight, born in January 1639-40; lord-mayor of London 1701; died Feb. 6, 1721-2. = Mary, ſiſter and coheir of Joſhua Gunſton, eſq. of Stoke Newington; ſecond wife; died Jan. 12, 1749-50.

Thomas Abney, æt. 21, 1681.

Mary, 2d da. of W. Webb, of Hamſtal-Ridware, co. Staff. gent.[15] = 7. Robert Abney, bap. Mar. 1, 1672; bur. April 26, 1745.

1. Anne, bap. June 30, 1663. = Arth. More, of Shakerſton.
2. George, bapt. May 18, 1665; bu. April 14, 1666.
3. Elizabeth, bapt. Dec. 6, 1666; married, Jan. 1702, to Robert Shipton, of Tamworth, mercer; bur. Feb. 14, 1726-7.
4. Suſanna, bapt. Sept. 14, 1669; buried Aug. 12, 1671.
5. Prudence, bapt. Nov. 20, 1670; buried Aug. 27, 1683.
6. Edward, bapt. Jan. 10, 1671.
8. Edward. bapt. April 23, 1674; buried Jan. 17, 1701.
9. Mary, bapt. May 15, buried 27, 1676.
10. Samuel, buried Aug. 26, 1677.
11. Joſeph, bapt. Oct. 6, 1678.
12. George, bapt. July 14, 1680.

Damaris, bur. (at Willeſley) Oct. 30, 1677.
Ann, bu. Dec. 1, 1692.

Sir Thomas Abney, bapt. April 30, 1691, chairman of the quarter ſeſſions for the county of Middleſex; one of the judges of his majeſty's palace in Weſtminſter; ſerjeant at law, and a baron of the Exchequer, 1740; a judge of the common pleas 1743; died in 1750[16], bur. May 29. = Frances, died April 1, buried 7, 1761.

1. A ſon, di. an infant.
2. Sarah, died unmarried March 20. 1732.
3 Mary, mar. to Joſeph Pickard, of Bloxworth, co. Dorſet, eſq.; but died ſ. p.
4. Elizabeth, at length ſole heireſs; died unmar. Aug. 21, 1782, æt. 78; and lady of the manor of Newington.

Thomas, born 1, bapt. 6, Jan. 1704, bur. 5 Ap. 1728. Joſeph, bo. and bap. 14, bur. 15, Jan. 1705.

Robert, born 29 Dec. ba. Jan. 7, 1706, of Oldbury Mill, near Birmingham. = ...

George, born 26 Dec. bapt. 6 Jan. 1707. = ..

Suſanna, b. Feb. 23, bap. Mar. 10, 1708[17]. James, bap. Oct. 30, 1711; bu. July 15, 1729. Edward, bapt. Oct. 24, 1712; bur. April 18, 1730.

William, bapt. Dec. 29, 1713[18]; died at Meatham field 1800, æt. near 87. = Katharine[19], bur. at Swepſton May 15, 1790.

Mary, bapt. 28 Dec. 1714; bur. Jan. 16, following.

Thomas Abney, eſq. born 2, bapt. 18, ... æt. 65. = Parnel Villiers[20]; ... 27, 1798.

Suſanna, da. and heir, 2d w. of Rog. Holmes, of Walſall, living at Lichfd 1803.

1. Thomas Abney, of the Moat, Bir... maker; died .... = Suſanna Broderip.

2. Robert Abney, of Milk-ſtreet, London, thread-... his brother, afterwards of Coventry.

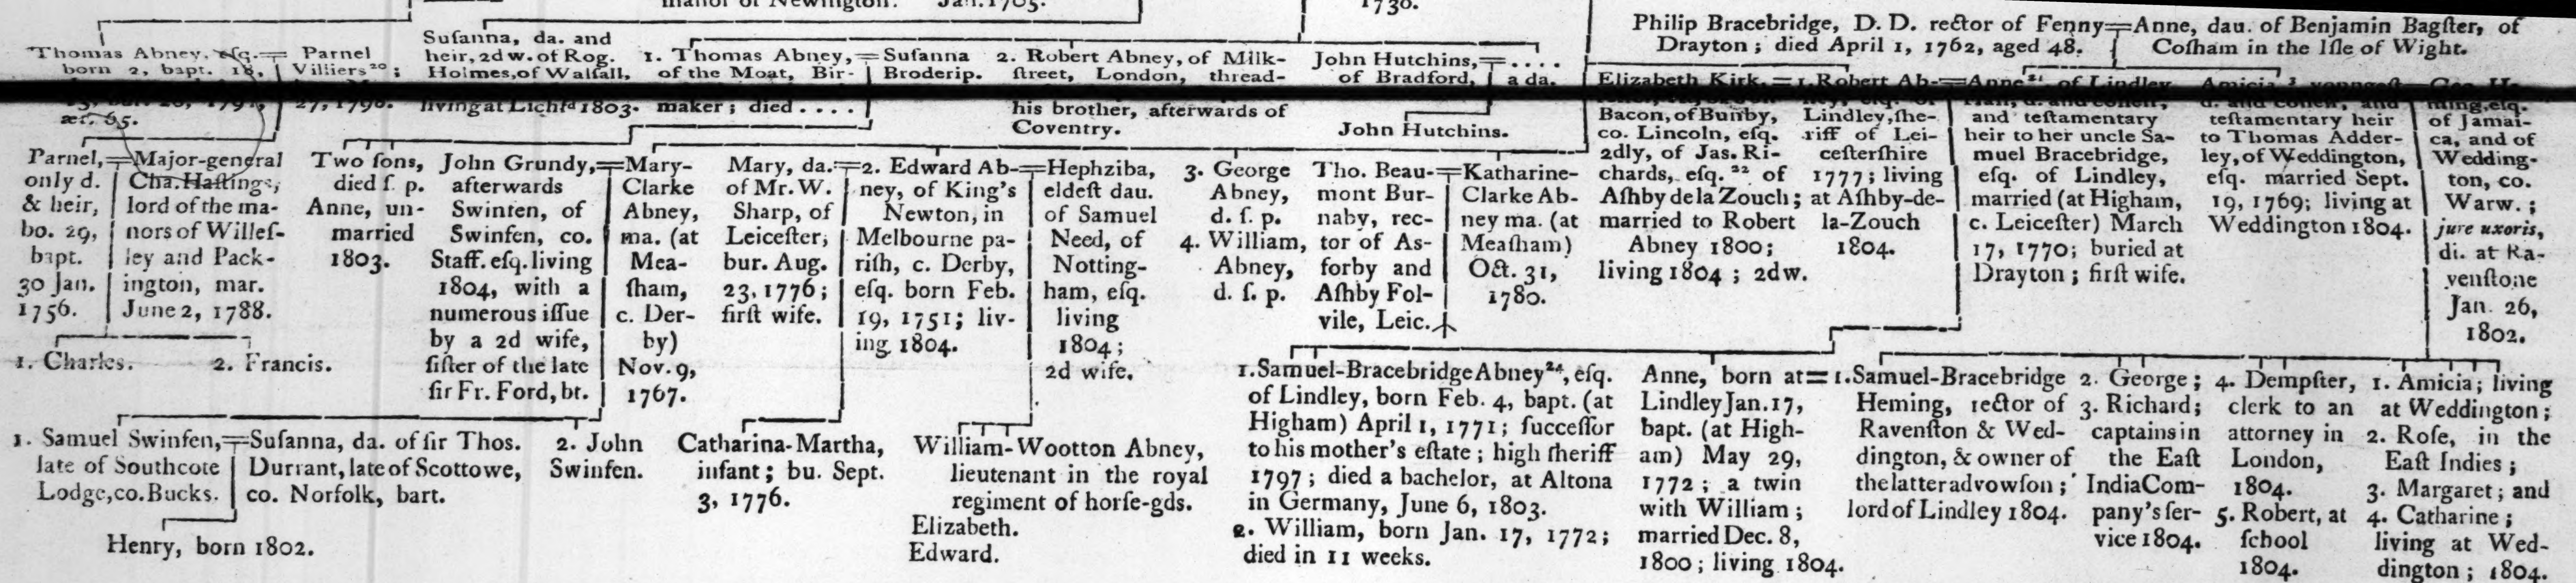
John Hutchins, of Bradford, = ... a da.

John Hutchins.

Philip Bracebridge, D. D. rector of Fenny Drayton; died April 1, 1762, aged 48. = Anne, dau. of Benjamin Bagſter, of Coſham in the Iſle of Wight.

Elizabeth Kirk, ... Bacon, of Bunby, co. Lincoln, eſq. = 1. Robert Abney, eſq. of Lindley, ſheriff of Lei... = Anne[21], of Lindley, ... and teſtamentary heir to her uncle Sa...

Amicia[3], youngeſt ... and coheir, and teſtamentary heir to Thomas Adder... = Geo. H... ing, eſq. of Jamai...



manor of Newington. Jan. 1705.
1730.
Thomas Abney, esq. born 2, bapt. 18, æt. 65.
Parnel Villiers[20]; 27, 1790.
Susanna, da. and heir, 2d w. of Rog. Holmes, of Walsall, living at Lichfd 1803.
1. Thomas Abney, of the Moat, Bir- maker; died . . . .
Susanna Broderip.
2. Robert Abney, of Milk-street, London, thread- his brother, afterwards of Coventry.
John Hutchins, of Bradford,
. . . . a da.
John Hutchins.
Philip Bracebridge, D. D. rector of Fenny Drayton; died April 1, 1762, aged 48.
Anne, dau. of Benjamin Bagster, of Cosham in the Isle of Wight.
Elizabeth Kirk, Bacon, of Bunby, co. Lincoln, esq. 2dly, of Jas. Richards, esq.[22] of Ashby de la Zouch; married to Robert Abney 1800; living 1804; 2d w.
1. Robert Abney, esq. of Lindley, sheriff of Leicestershire 1777; living at Ashby-de-la-Zouch 1804.
Anne[21], of Lindley Hall, and testamentary heir to her uncle Samuel Bracebridge, esq. of Lindley, married (at Higham, c. Leicester) March 17, 1770; buried at Drayton; first wife.
Amicia[3], youngest d. and testamentary heir to Thomas Adderley, of Weddington, esq. married Sept. 19, 1769; living at Weddington 1804.
Geo. Heming, esq. of Jamaica, and of Weddington, co. Warw.; jure uxoris, di. at Ravenstone Jan. 26, 1802.
Parnel, only d. & heir, bo. 29, bapt. 30 Jan. 1756.
Major-general Cha. Hastings, lord of the manors of Willesley and Packington, mar. June 2, 1788.
Two sons, died s. p. Anne, unmarried 1803.
John Grundy, afterwards Swinfen, of Swinfen, co. Staff. esq. living 1804, with a numerous issue by a 2d wife, sister of the late sir Fr. Ford, bt.
Mary-Clarke Abney, ma. (at Measham, c. Derby) Nov. 9, 1767.
Mary, da. of Mr. W. Sharp, of Leicester; bur. Aug. 23, 1776; first wife.
2. Edward Abney, of King's Newton, in Melbourne parish, c. Derby, esq. born Feb. 19, 1751; living 1804.
Hephziba, eldest dau. of Samuel Need, of Nottingham, esq. living 1804; 2d wife.
3. George Abney, d. s. p.
4. William, Abney, d. s. p.
Tho. Beaumont Burnaby, rector of Asforby and Ashby Folvile, Leic.
Katharine-Clarke Abney ma. (at Measham) Oct. 31, 1780.
1. Charles.
2. Francis.
1. Samuel Swinfen, late of Southcote Lodge, co. Bucks.
Susanna, da. of sir Thos. Durrant, late of Scottowe, co. Norfolk, bart.
Henry, born 1802.
2. John Swinfen.
Catharina-Martha, infant; bu. Sept. 3, 1776.
William-Wootton Abney, lieutenant in the royal regiment of horse-gds.
Elizabeth.
Edward.
1. Samuel-Bracebridge Abney[24], esq. of Lindley, born Feb. 4, bapt. (at Higham) April 1, 1771; successor to his mother's estate; high sheriff 1797; died a bachelor, at Altona in Germany, June 6, 1803.
2. William, born Jan. 17, 1772; died in 11 weeks.
Anne, born at Lindley Jan. 17, bapt. (at Higham) May 29, 1772; a twin with William; married Dec. 8, 1800; living 1804.
1. Samuel-Bracebridge Heming, rector of Ravenston & Weddington, & owner of the latter advowson; lord of Lindley 1804.
2. George;
3. Richard; captains in the East India Company's service 1804.
4. Dempster, clerk to an attorney in London, 1804.
5. Robert, at school 1804.
1. Amicia; living at Weddington;
2. Rose, in the East Indies;
3. Margaret; and
4. Catharine; living at Weddington; 1804.

[1] Swebston register begins 4 March, 1561. A Frances Abneye baptized July 25 that year.

[2] Hitherto from originals at Willesley Hall.

[3] Notes by the late William Abney, esq.

[4] Alabaster at Willesley, on the church floor.

[5] Kimber, vol. I. p. 340.

[6] Mr. W. Abney's notes.

[7] Willesley original. George Abney's seal, a lion rampant debruised with a fess. Among the witnesses, Edmond and Thomas Abney.

[8] Mrs. Margery Abney, buried Oct. 24, 1608 (at St. Michael's, Lichfield, the parish church of Tymmore).

[9] Baptized (at Tatenhull) Jan. 31, 1599; died aged about 93 and a half, buried June 12, 1693. He married, 2dly, Frances . . . . . a releffor in Snareston, June 28, 1670, who was buried April 20, 1687; mother probably to Frances, daughter of James Abney, of Willesley, esq. buried (at Stretton) March 5, 1666.

[10] A captain in lord Grey's horse; purchased in Newton from Clement Fisher, of Wilnecote, co. Warwick, 1653: died s. p. devising his estate, 1657, to his brother, and leaving a widow, formerly Anne Ullock.

[11] The concluding words of the last note, "formerly Anne Ullock," are those of a sheet of notes by the late Mr. William Abney, of Measham-field, intituled, "An incorrect account of the pedigree of the Abneys of Newton." It is in effect incorrect in some smaller particulars, differing from Swepston register in the seniority of the elder Thomas Abney's issue; and may be wrong in omitting any first wife of his son Thomas. Nor is it certain that Mr. W. Abney had actual inspection of the original evidences, as the estate went to his eldest brother and daughter Holmes. But his account is fortified by Lullington register, where, on a page containing scattered entries of various distant years, but followed in the next page by a regular series commencing with 1657, we find "Robert Abney and Ann Ullock connubio juncti July 25°." (Agreeing with which, as to probable age, the Gresley-register has "Ann Ullocke filia Georgii & Ann. baptiz. 29 Apr. 1632.") Wrong names are too often entered in registers; and in this particular instance we see every token of carelessness and disorder. But, on the other hand, herald-clerks have been sometimes not more exact than parish-clerks: it cannot be supposed that Thomas Abney in 1681-2 did not give in his own and his brother's wives rightly; they might however be transposed in transcribing into the books.

[12] Purchased from lord Cullen in 1657, and in Newton and Shakerston from Robert Burgaland 1663.

[13] Le Neve's MS Pedigrees of Knights, Harl. MSS. 5802. p. 113. b.—N B. Wonderful series of longevity in sir Edward's grandfather, father, and self!

[14] Elected sheriff of London and Middlesex 1693; alderman of Vintry ward, and knighted, 1694; lord-mayor 1701; M. P. for London 1710; father of the City, and alderman of Bridge Ward Without, 1716. He was also a director of the Bank from its first institution in 1694, and president of St. Thomas's hospital; and is justly famed for having been the kind friend and patron of the celebrated Dr. Watts.

[15] Baptized (at Hamstal Rideware) Feb. 26, 1684; married (at ditto) June 19, 1701; buried Aug. 23, 1716; daughter of W. W. by Mary James, of the county of Derby.

[16] See before, p. 616.

[17] Married to Mr. Matthew Ironmonger, of St. Albans, Jan. 3, 1734-5; buried Feb. 8, 1763, s. p.

[18] Barrister at law. Sometime of Winson Green, co. Warwick. In 1752, of the Moat Hall (bought from Stanford Wolferstan, esq. See a view and description in Shaw's Staffordshire, vol. I. p. 415, 422.) in Tamworth, and an acting magistrate for Warwickshire. In 1767, of Measham Field House, co. Derby, built by himself, where he died Aug 2, 1800, aged near 87.

[19] Daughter and heir of Thomas Wootton, of Canons, co. Herts, esq. buried (at Swebston) May 15, 1790.

[20] Of the branch of that family, formerly seated, and still (I think) possessing lands, at Hanbury, co. Stafford; see Shaw, vol. I. p. 74, 75; and particularly, in the latter page, the name Parnel, a frequent one in the Horton family there mentioned.

[21] To this lady Samuel Bracebridge, esq. (her uncle) bequeathed for the term of her life his estates at Lindley and elsewhere; remainder in the first place to her son; and then to her daughter, who now enjoys the property. See a full Pedigree of the Bracebridge family, pp. 1145, 1146.

[22] Whose elder brother, Thomas, died in 1788. See p. 624.

[23] Thomas Adderley, of Weddington, co. Warwick, esq. (whose mother was Lucy Savage, sister to the mother of Dr. Bracebridge), by his will, dated March 20, 1753, and codicil thereto, dated March 21, 1753, gave his manor or lordship of Weddington, advowson, messuages, lands, and real estates, in Weddington and Nuneaton, in the county of Warwick, and elsewhere in England, to trustees; to the use of the first and other sons of his body on the body of Mercy his wife begotten, successively in tail; remainder to his daughter and daughters by said Mercy as tenants in common in tail; remainder to his sister Elizabeth, wife of Thomas Liptrott, clerk, for life; remainder to the use of the first and other sons of said Elizabeth Liptrott; remainder to her daughters; remainder to his cousin Philip Bracebridge, clerk, D. D. for life; remainder to trustees, to preserve contingent remainders; remainder to the first and other sons of said Philip Bracebridge; remainder to Amicia Bracebridge, the then second and youngest daughter of said Philip Bracebridge, and the heirs of her body lawfully begotten or to be begotten; remainder to the right heirs of said Philip Bracebridge for ever. Mr. Adderley and Mrs. Liptrott died without issue. Dr. Bracebridge had male issue, but they all died infants; and therefore his daughter Amicia took under the devise; and, with her husband George Heming, esq. in 1770, barred the entail created by Mr. Adderley's will and codicil.

[24] On the death of his mother, this gentleman became entitled to Lindley Hall and estate; which, and all his other real estates, he devised to his cousin, the Rev. Samuel-Bracebridge Heming, who now enjoys them.

Appelby, Mich̄ de Wivelesleyâ, & aliis. S' DISABEL FIL' WILELMI. A ſort of fleur de lys.

3. Willielmus de Meyſam (indorſed "miles.") Nicol' fil' Johannis de Ynguereby in liberum maritag' cum Ceciliâ Wychard, omnes terras, &c. quas emi à Willielmo de Hautyncot milite in villis & campis de Wyveliſley & Pakynton; faciendo viceſimam partem unius feodi militis cum contigerit pro omni ſervicio, ſalvo forinſeco. Et ſi contingat dictos Nicol' & Cecil' in fata diſcedere ſine herede vel aſſignato, volo quod poſt diſceſſum utriuſque illorum omnes terre, &c. remaneant heredibus quos Nicol' Wychard fil' Henr' Wychard procreavit de dictâ Cecil'. Hiis teſtibus; domino Ric' de Harecurt, Henr' Wychard, Rob' de Stapilton, Ad' de Weliſberue, Henr' de Hertyſhoryn̄, Petro de Dorantiſtherp, Ric' de Naneby, Rad' de Tykinhale, Witt Wychard, Johanne Wychard, Witt de Meyſam, Rog' le Blund' de Wyveliſley, &c. S' WILL' D' MEIS . . M. On a ſhield a lion rampant.

4. Dominus Willielmus de Haſtencoſ-t, Petro de Sanford in libero maritagio cum Aliciâ que fuit filia Michael' de Wyfleſleye unam virgatam in Wyfleſt, exceptis quatuor rodis que date fuerunt eccleſie ejuſdem ville. Reddendo mihi & heredibus unam roſam, & Luminar' predicte eccleſie octo denarios. Teſtibus; Nich' de Yngwelleby, Rogero le Blunt, Willielmo de Meyſħm, Eliâ de Ockthorp, Petro de Durandeſthorp, Rogero de Somervile, Abel de Smitheſby, & aliis.

5. Robertus de Ferr', fil' & heres Willielmi de Ferr' quond' comitis Derbeye, Nich̄o de Ingwareby pro ſervicio ſuo redditum quinque ſolidor' quos mihi reddere tenebatur pro tenemento ſuo in Wyveleſleg' & Pakinton, quod de feodo meo tenet in eiſdem villis. Hiis teſtibus; dominis Johanne de Suleny, Roberto de Meleburn, Willielmo de Meyſħm, militibus, Roberto de Stretton rectore eccleſie de Duffeld, Rogero de Lovetot, Stephano de Myners, Rogero de Somervillâ, Willielmo Haunſelin, & aliis. Dat apud Tutteſbs̄, Sancti Martini anno H' fil' Joh' 46°. A horſeman ſeal; ſhield and capariſons Vairé. ROB'S FIL' & HERES D'NI WILL'I DE FERRAR' Q . . . . Reverſe, the ſhield Vairé. (Beautiful, but broken.)

6. Alicia filia Michael' de Wiveliſle in viduit', Nicol' de Iguereby & Cecilie ux' ſue tres virg' terre in Wiveliſle, duas quas Michael pater meus mihi dedit, & illam virg' quam Will' de Havtincot mihi dedit, except' toft' & croft' & quatuor acris ejuſd' virgate, quarum una acra data fuit quondam per Editham le Lavedi ad capell' de Wiveliſle, & alie tres quas dedi Michael' fil' Will' molendinarii in dictâ villâ. Teſtibus; domino Will' de Meyſam milit', Joh' Grim, Rog' de Somervil, Will' fil' Henr' de Hertyſhorin, Will' Bertram de eadem, Will' fil' domine de Meyſam, Milone de Meilt̄, Rad' le Botiler de Pakynt', Ric' de Dorantytheirp, Rog' Blund' de Wiveliſle, Hugon' de Stretton, Will' le Pouerous de Outheirp, &c.

7. Lecia filia Micahel de Wyfeleſle in viduit', Nicholao de Ingwerebi & Cecilie tertiam partem quarte partis de molend' aquatico de Wyfileſle, illam partem que mihi accedit hereditariè poſt mort' dicti Micaelis patris mei. Teſtibus; domino Willielmo de Meiſham, Rog' de Somurvile, Will' de Meiſham, Rog' Blundo de Wyfelet, Rad' le Botilir de Pakyeintun, Rog' ad Gardinum, Adâ Bercario, Willielmo fil' Rogeri Blund' de Wyveliſle, & aliis.

8. Rogerus Blund' de Wyveliſle, de volunt' & conſenſu Nichole uxoris, Nichol' de Ingueriſbi & Cecilie, tertiam partem quarte partis in molend' aquat' de Wyveliſle & ſtagno, &c. illam ſcilicet quam habui de dote dicte Nichle uxoris mee. Habend' totâ vitâ dicte Nichole uxoris mee; & ad majorem ſecuritatem dictis Nichol' & Cecilie fide mediâ nos obligavimus. Hiis teſtibus; domino Will' de Myeiſam, Rog' de Somurvile, Will' de Myeiſam, (and the others in laſt deed.)

9. Galfrid' de Wodecote & Henr' de Pakinton, aſſenſu Lecie & Yſabelle uxorum, Willielmo fil' Rogeri le Blund' de Wiveliſleg' fratri uxorum noſtrarum quoddam toftum cum edific', in Wiveliſleg'. Teſtibus; domino Willielmo de Meyſam, Nicholo de Yngwarby, domino de Wyveleſleg', Willielmo fil' Willielmi de Meyſam, Willielmo fil' Elye de Octhorp, Johanne le Sauvage de ead' &c.

10. Galfridus de Wyodecote, conſenſu Lecie ux', Henr' de Pakinton' & Yſabelle ux' tert' partem de holmo quod fuit Michael fil' Michael de Wyvelſle que jacet propinquiùs molendin' ex unâ parte & holmum predicti Henr' & Yſabelle ex alterâ. Teſtibus; domino Will' de Meyſam, Nich' de Yngwardiſby domino de Wyveliſleg', Rog' le Blund' de eadem, &c.

11. Galf' de Wodecote in Wyveliſleg' & Lecia uxor, Henr' de Pakynton' tert' partem quarte partis molendini aquatici de W. & tertiam partem Holm' dicti molendini quas partes Nicole mater dicte Lecie quond' tenuit nomine dotis. Teſtibus; Willielmo de Meyſam, Nicolao de Wyveliſleg', Hugon' fil' Math'i de Streſtonâ, &c.

12. Henr' de Pakynton, voluntate Iſabell ux', Nicholao de Ingwarby & Cecilie ux' tert' partem quarte partis de molendino, & tert' partem dimid' Holm', que partes hereditar' decenderunt dicte Iſabell', etiam tert' partem dimid' Holm' quam emi de Galfr' de Wodecote & Leciâ ux', & totum jus quod' Galfr' & Lecia habuerunt in tert' parte quarte partis molendini & ſtagni. Teſtibus; domino Willielmo milite de Meyſham, Rog' de Somervile, Willielmo fil' domine de Meyſham, &c.

13. Galfr' de Wodecote, aſſenſu Lecie, Nicholao de Ynguareby & Cecilie, toſtum & croſtum que dicte Lecie poſt mort' Alicie filie Michael in hereditate deſcenderunt. Teſtibus; Roberto de Crumbwelle in Meyſam, &c.

14. Galfr' de Wodecote, voluntate Lecie, Nicol' de Yngwerby & Cecil', duas dimidias acras, &c. Teſtibus; domino Willielmo de Meyſam mil', Willielmo fil' domine de ead', Johanne Grym de Heccote, &c.

15. Johanna que fuit ux' Nicholai de Wermndeworthe, Nicholao de Inguerby, & Cecil' Barnab' 14 Edw. I.

16. Henr' de Pakynton in Wyveleſle & Iſabella ux', Willielmo le Mazun de Norton fil' Ricardi de Davyntre in lib' maritag' cum idoyn' fil' noſtrâ. Teſtibus; Nicholao de Ynguerdeby, Willielmo filio ſuo, &c.

17. Nicholaus de Hinguerby & Cecilia ux', Willielmo filio noſtro & Albred' uxori ſue & heredibus prædicti Willielmi, placeam & terram quas Thomas Muriel tenet in Wifliſley, & boſchum propi quius brueram de Meyſham quod Galfr' de Wodecote & Lecia ux' habuerunt, & molendinum noſtrum aquatic', cum curſibus aque, & holmis, & totâ ſequelâ hominum noſtrorum de Wifliſley & Pakinton liberor' & vilnor'. Teſtibus; Willielmo de Meyſham, &c. Galf' de Wodecote, &c.

18. Rad' Haſard' & Alicia ux' Willielmo de Ingwerby & Albreyde ux' jus in boſco de Wyteliſle quod Alicie potuerit diſſendere de hereditate Iſabelle matris ſue.

19. Oſbertus de Stretton, Willielmo de Ingwardeby & Roberto filio ejus, unum toftum & mediet' unius virgate, &c. Teſtibus; Johanne Grym de Heccote, Johanne de Burſyngcote, Willielmo de Meyſħm, &c. Ricardo fil' Hug' de Stretton, &c. Mich. reg. Edw. fil. Edw. 11°.

20. Johannes le Sawage de Octhorp, Willielmo de Hyngwerby & Albrede uxori ſue & Nicholao fil' eorund', & heredibus dicti Willielmi ſive aſſignatis, placeam vaſti in Octhorp. Teſtibus; Johanne de Snipiſton, &c. Galfr' de Wodecote, &c.

21. Will' de Ingwerby ex unâ, & Will' Adam de Weveluſleye ex alterâ. Teſtibus; Willielmo de Meyſħm, Johanne Grym, &c. Katerine, Edw. tertii 4to.

22. Johan' Wyſchard ſeign' de Oſberſton, attorne Richard le fitz Johan' Wyſchard de Oſberſton, a deliverer, &c. Tranſlation de Thom. Mart. Edw. terce 6te.

23. Willielmo de Ingwardebi, Nicholao de Ingwardebi patri meo, & Iſabelle uxori ſue, totum jus in manerio de Wifleſl', ac in quinque virgat' in Pakynton, ad totam vitam eorum. Teſtibus; domino Willielmo de Staunton milite, Willielmo de Bredon, Willielmo de Hirland, Roberto de Schepeye, Willielmo de Meiſ̄m. Luc. Evang. Edw. tertii 7°.

24. Robertus de Overâ, vicar' eccleſie de Overâ, domino Roberto de Touk militi & Edithe uxori ejus manerium de Sydenſen, quod habui de dono, &c. ad term' term' vite eorum; & poſt deceſſum, Johanni filio & heredi dicti domini Roberti & heredibus de corpore; & ſi obierit ſine herede, Waltero fratri Johannis & heredibus de corpore; rectis heredibus domini Roberti revertatur. Teſtibus; Johanne de Staunton Harald, Roberto de Fyndern, Viviano de Verdon, Johanne Fraunceys de Oſmundeſton, Willielmo de Ingwardby, Ricardo de Ireton, Johanne fil' Roberti de Fyndern, & aliis. Grego. Edw. tertii 11mo.

25. 26. Teſtibus; Johanne fil' Johannis de Ingwerby, Ambroſ. 19 Edw. III. Alicia fil' & heres Johannis Ingwardby que fui uxor Willielmi Scheyl de Okthorp, & Johannes filius dicti Willielmi inter ipſum & me procreat'. Laurent. 23° Edw. III.

27. Will' de Ingwardeby dominus de Wueleſleye, teſt' Paul. 24° Edw. III.

28. Finalis concord', apud Ebor', in craſt' Purif' anno Edw. tertii . . (indorſed 1350), de manerio de Potlok. Johannes de Touk conceſſit Roberto de Touk manerium, &c. habend' totâ vitâ Roberti; & poſt deceſſum ipſius Johanni filio ejuſdem Roberti & Katerine filie Willielmi Curteys & heredibus de corporibus; remanebit rectis heredibus Roberti.

29. Willielmus de Ingwardeby de Willeſleye dedi Johanni Charnels de Snarkeſton & aliis omnes terras, &c. in com' Derbeye. Teſtibus; Ammorio Taverner de Stretton, &c. Thom' de Wyderdleye de Childecote. Botulf. Edw. tertii 43°.

30. Alicia fil' & heres Nicholai de Ingwardeby de Octhorp, quond' ux' Willielmi de Barton de Octhorp, Willielmo de Scheyl de Octhorp & Alicie uxori ejus & heredibus, totum jus in terris, &c. poſt mortem Nicholai patris mei, quas Galfrid' Elys & Johannes de Ingwardeby de Octhorp quond' tenuerunt. Teſtibus; Edmundo de Appulby, Johanne de Appulby fil' ſuo, militibus, Willielmo de Ingwardeby, Willielmo Charnelles de Snarkeſton, &c. Botulph. abbat. Edw. tertii 51°.

31. Teſt'; Will' Ingwardeby dominus de Weuleſleye. Barnab. Ric. Secundi 7°.

32. Alicia Ingwardby, que fui uxor Willielmi Schelle, in purâ viduit', & Johannes filius noſter, dedimus, &c. Marie in Quadrageſimâ, Ric. Secundi 16°.

33. Johannes de Sheyle, filius & heres Willielmi de Sheyle de Octhorp & Alicie uxoris, Willielmo Inguardeby domino de Weullyſley omnia que habeo in Octhorp. Teſtibus; Edmundo Appulby juniore, &c. Egid. epiſc. Ric. Secundi 22°.

The Eda de Wiveleſleya named in the deed No. 2 above ſeems the ſame with Eda filia Will' filii Rogeri, the grantor in Rydeware Chartulary No. 24, which laſt deed is given at large in Stretton, p. 1027. Iſabel de Kareltonâ (perhaps Carlton, chapelry to Boſworth) ſeems, by her reference to Eda's wood, to be a contemporary, and her ſeal legend, FIL' WILELMI, is no weak preſumption that ſhe was a ſiſter of Eda. And there is a farther appearance as if ſhe was lady of the fee, in ſome portion of Willeſley; for ſhe grants to her daughter a rent, to be received from Michael ſon of Michael de Wiveleſleya, of the very ſame ſum, payable at the ſame terms, which Michael the father, in the grant to his daughter (therefore marked No. 1, as perhaps prior to No. 2), had reſerved to be paid, to him Michael, or to the lord of the fee. This rent might poſſibly be paid afterwards to Michael the ſon as heir of his father, and be paid over by Michael the ſon to the lady of the fee.

It ſeems impoſſible to aſcertain from theſe evidences, though numerous, the exact ſhares into which the fee of Willeſley, with the mill as a main part of it, was divided; or how all were re-united in Nicholas de Ingwarby. Perhaps a conſiderable portion was included in the gift in frank marriage, No. 3; by each of the deeds No. 7, 8, a third part of a fourth appears to have paſſed to him, either in fee-tail or for life of a dowreſs; and by that No. 12 perhaps two ſuch third parts. The deed of William de Rydeware, ſhortly noticed in p. 999* and afterwards, grants to him two other ſuch thirds of a fourth, with two virgates which had been held by Robert Hamund, and one virgate by Peter de Salford and Alice his wife. (See No. 4 above.) Witneſſes; ſir Will' de Meiſham, ſir Rob' de la Ward, Will' fil' Henry de Hertyſhorn, Will' Bertram of the ſame place, Will' de Meyſham, Ric' de Duranthorp, Milo de Melton, Walter and Hugh de Stretton, Rog' Blund of Weveleſleye, Henry de Sta Mora of the ſame, Adam de Octhorp, Rog' Rotewynd of Pakynton, and others. However, he is ſtyled lord of Wyveleſley in the deeds No. 9, 10, of which the latter at leaſt, Wodecote's transfer to Pakinton, muſt have been prior to No. 12. And by No. 17, Nicholas and Cecilia give to their ſon William and wife, their mill, with the water-courſes, holms, and ſuit both of Wifliſley men and Pakinton, as an intirety.

It is curious to ſee the firſt 21 of the above extracts which mention the family-name, ſpell it 19 different ways!

. . . . . = Nicola de . . . . = Roger Blund, of Wyveliſle; ſecond huſband.
By N° 8 held a third of a fourth of Willeſley mill, &c. in dower from a 1ſt huſband.

Galfr. de Wodecote. = Lecia; who, and her ſiſter, by N° 12 ſeem to have inherited each a third of a fourth.
Henry de Pakynton. = Yſabel.
William; grantee in N° 9.

John de Ynguereby (N° 3.) = ...

Nicholaus de Ingwareby; Martin. 1261; living Barnab. 1286 (N° 5, 15.); lord of Wyveliſley. = Cecilia[1]; ſeems daughter or near relative of ſir William de Meyſham; living 1286. = Nicholaus, ſon of Henry Wychard; firſt huſband.

William de Ingwardeby; Mich. 1317 (N° 19.) = Albreyda.

Rob. de Ingwardeby, 1317.
Nicholaus de Ingwardebi, lord of Wifliſley for life; Luc. 1333. = Iſabel, 1333.

William de Ingwardebi, grants the manor to his father and wife Iſabel for their lives, 1333; witneſſes a re-grant to Touks, Greg. 1336; lord of Wueleſleye, Paul. 1349-50 (N° 23, 24, 27.) = ...

William de Ingwardeby, Botulf. 1377; lord of Weuleſleye, Barnab. 1384, and Egid. 1398 (N° 30, 31, 33.) = . . .

Two daughters; the one married to John Abney, the other to Thomas de Stoke[2]; who, beſides Willeſley, ſeems to have inherited the manor of Potlok, co. Derby, from the Touk family, who poſſeſſed it 1337—1350.

---

[1] In his copy of the Greſley Chartulary ſo often cited under Seale, colonel Chadwick has placed a grant (but not ſaying whence taken, and in a hand ſcarcely legible), by William, ſon of Ric. de Meiſham, with conſent of wife Cecilia, for ſouls of his father and mother Benec (q. Benedicte?) to the church of St. Giles of Kalck and the canons there, of 12d. rent out of his land held by Robert Brun in Stanton, to maintain the middle lamp before St. Giles's altar. Teſtibus; Rad' de Tiketi, Petro de Wrthinton, Joh'e de Ceſtre, Henre Picoth. Alan de Stanton, &c. This William and Cecilia ſeem likely for the parents of Cecily the Willeſley donee.

[2] See vol. II. p. 461; where the deſcendant of this Thomas, William de Stoke, ſon of Robert (which laſt died 1531), is ſaid to ſell Willeſley, i. e. his moiety of it. The ſame pedigree makes Thomas ſon of another Thomas, by Alice de Lee, heir of Stotfold. But this it is likely is a miſtake, both from its contradiction to Dugdale's Warwickſhire, vol. II. p. 760, as to Alice leaving iſſue, and from the dates mentioned; and it is very probable that this Thomas himſelf, not a father of the ſame name (the deed firſt referred to under the Abney pedigree ſhewing that the ſon, huſband of Ingewarby's daughter in 1419, was then of Tamworth) might marry to his ſecond wife the heir of Stotfold juſt by, and by her leave no iſſue. She was living 1435 (Dugdale, p. 760, ut ſupra, note h). Her ſecond huſband, Richard Archer, lived till April-June 1471. See his will in the Prerogative Court of Canterbury, Wallis, p. 5.

SWEPSTON,

SWEPSTON, OR SWEBSTON,

antiently called Scopeſtone, Suopeſtone, and Sweppeſtone, is bounded on the North by Normanton; on the Weſt by Meaſham in Derbyſhire; on the Eaſt by Hether; and on the South by the two large hamlets of Newton Burguland and Snareſton. It is 14 miles from Leiceſter, 13 from Hinckley, and five from Aſhby; and, in the eccleſiaſtical diviſion of the county, is within the deanry of Akeley.

Ten ploughlands in Scopeſtone, which in the time of king Edward employed ten ploughs, and were valued at twelve pence, were worth forty ſhillings at the general ſurvey, when they were held by Nigell under Henry de Ferieres. Two ploughs were in the demeſne; and fifteen villans, with a prieſt and three bordars, had ſix ploughs. There were twelve acres of meadow. Of this land, in the time of king Edward, Sbern held two ploughlands, and might remove whitherſoever he pleaſed, [without alienating the land.] The reſt of the land Leuric held; and his land Oſmond[1] the biſhop held, at the ſurvey, of the king[2].

Swebſton is not noticed in the Teſta de Nevill, which was compiled about the year 1240; but in the Itinerary of 1280, Swebſton and Newton Nethercote anſwered collectively as one vill.

In the Harleian MS. 5138, Swebſton is noticed as belonging to the honour of Tutbury.

This town was long ſince the inheritance of the very antient family of Charnels, held, as will appear, of the Haſtings family, as of the manor of Snareſton, parcel of that of Barwell in this county.

In the reign of king Henry III. William de Charnels gave his mill at Swebſton to the nuns of Poleſworth, co. Warwick[3]; and, after his death, it was found that he held certain lands at Swebſton of Henry Haſtings in ſocage, paying 20*s.* a year rent to the ſaid Henry for all ſervice[4]. This Henry Haſtings was governor of Kenilworth-caſtle, which he held for young Simon de Montfort, in 1265, againſt king Henry III. and all his forces; upon the ſurrender of which caſtle, he was adjudged to be impriſoned ſeven years[5].

In 1296, the town of Swebſton was held in fee of the honour of Winton; and Roger ſon of Roger de Trumpington held ſix virgates of land there of the heirs of the earl; and the heirs, of the king[6].

In 1313, John de Langvile held half a knight's fee in Swebſton and Newton of John de Haſtinges ſenior, deceaſed; and John de Haſtinges junior, ſon and heir of the aforeſaid John, was then aged 26[7].

In 1346, Nicholas Charnels (on the aid then granted for knighting Edward of Woodſtock, the king's eldeſt ſon) was aſſeſſed 20*s.* for half a knight's fee in Swebſton, parcel of the fee of Cheſter[8].

At the ſame period, Verdun's lordſhip here was in the poſſeſſion of Elizabeth de Burgo.

Feb. 3, 1363-4, king Edward III. granted to John de Charnels, clerk, and his heirs, liberty of free-warren in all their demeſne lands at Swebſton and Nethercotes[9].

In 1375, John de Haſtings earl of Pembroke, at his death, had the moiety of one knight's fee in Schepſton, Swebſton, and Newton, which John de Longville held[10].

In 1376, Edward Prince of Wales, at his death, held the manor of Swebſton, with the advowſon of the church there, of William la Zouch, as of the heir of William Maureward[11].

In 1378, the following petition occurs among the Parliamentary Records:

"A tres noble Conſeil ñre Sr̃ le Roy en ceſt p̃ſent Parlement ſupplie John Charnels, q̃ come une Maud Charnels ſoit perſuant ꝑ Breve de Scire fac' en Com̃e Banc vers Johan Marchal, de recoṽer les Mañs de Aylmỹſthorp, Buelton, & Swepſton, en countes Leic' & Warr', ꝑ makement parentre le dit John Marchal & Sire Rauf Feres, a l'entent de deſereter le dit John Charnels en temps a ven', uncore eſteaunt les ditz Man' es mayns ñre Sr̃ le Roy: Par q̃ vous pleſe, en ſalvac̄on de l'eſtat ñre dit Sr̃ le Roy, d'apeler le dit John Charnels d'oyer la purſuit la dit Maud en cele ꝑtie, iſſint q̃ ñre dit Sr̃ le Roy, ne le dit John Charnels, ne ſoient mys a perd ne deſereteſon en abſens le dit John Charnels, & nomement la ou les ditz Mañs ſont en les mayns ñre Sr̃ le Roy."—Reſponce eſt, "Fait ſur la bille de la ꝑtie adṽſere, ent miſt avant en Parlem'."[12]

In 1443, William Babthorp, at his death, was ſeiſed of three meſſuages, five virgates of land, and 20 acres of meadow, in Swebſton and Newton Burgulon, with the appurtenances in Raunſton and Normanton[13].

In a book of fifteenths and tenths granted by the laity in 1416, Swebſton was rated at 2*l.* 11*s.* and in the ſubſidy of 1445 at the ſame ſum; but an abatement was then made of 5*s.* 4*d.* Newton Botiller was rated at 1*l.* 2*s.* 10*d.* and 4*s.* abated; and Snareſton at 2*l.* and 7*s.* abated.

In 1533, it was found that —— Graye, deceaſed, was ſeiſed of certain lands and tenements in Swebſton, held of the prior of Coventry by knight's ſervice[14]. This muſt have been Launceline Grey, who died, by Burton p. 34, in 1532, and whoſe family's ſucceſſion to the ſuperior manor, Barwell, their exchange with ſir John Harrington, and the latter's ſale to ſir William Roberts, are ſtated in his preceding page 33; as alſo that Barwell was held, temp. Burton, of the king, as of the priory of Coventry. The inquiſition therefore ſhould have run, that Launceline Grey was ſeiſed of the manor of Snareſton with its members of Swepſton, &c. parcel (as expreſſed in an after-conveyance to Charnell, 1662) of that of Barwell, held as above.

By an heir female of the Charnels, the lordſhip held under Haſtings and his ſucceſſors paſſed to the Truſſells; whoſe heir-general brought it in marriage to John earl of Oxford; from whom, or his ſon, it came to the Humfreys; for earl John the father died only on 21 March, 31 Hen. VIII, his ſon not till 4 Eliz.[15]; and at the View of Frank-pledge (for Snareſton manor N. B.) cum M' Curiâ of Thomas Grey, eſq. (ſon to Launceline) in 36 Hen. VIII. it was preſented that Richard Humfrey of Barton (together with George Greiſley, knt. Walter Charnell, gent. for Stake's land, and others) was a freeholder, and ought to appear. The like at ſeveral ſucceſſive courts, of the ſame ſtyle, to 1 Mariæ included; (at moſt or all of which N. B. preſentments appear alſo for Oddeſton, Shakerſton, Congeſton, as well as for Swepſton and Snareſton itſelf.) And at the court-baron (ſtill for Snareſton manor) of the ſame Thomas Grey 5 and 6 Phil. and Mary, (October or November 1558,) it was found by verdict that Richard Humfrey of Barton, who held of the lord the manor of Swepſton and appurtenances by a whole knight's fee, died ſince the preceding court; that William was his ſon and heir;

---

[1] Oſmund, biſhop of Saliſbury, lord chancellor, and earl of Somerſet.

[2] "Nigellus tenet de H[enrico de Fericres] 10 carucatas terræ in Scopeſtone. Tempore Regis Edwardi erant ibi 2 carucæ. In dominico ſunt 2 carucæ; & 15 villani, cum preſbytero & 3 bordariis, habent 6 carucas. Ibi 12 acræ prati. Valuit 12 denarios; modò 40 ſolidos. De hâc terrâ tempore Regis Edwardi tenuit Sbern 2 carucatas terræ, & quò voluit ire potuit. Reliquam terram tenebat Leuricus, cujus terram tenet Oſmundus epiſcopus de Rege." Domeſday, fol. 233, b. 1.

[3] Pat. 20 Ric. II. p. 3. m. 22.

[4] Eſch. . . Hen. III. N° 24. Leic.

[5] Dugdale, Baron Angl. vol. I. p. 758, 759.

[6] Inq. 24 Edw. I. in Scaccario.

[7] Eſch. 6 Edw. II. N° 56. Leic.

[8] Rot. Aux. 20 Edw. III.

[9] Cart. 38 Edw. III. N° 20.

[10] Eſch. 49 Edw. III. pars 1. N° 40.

[11] Eſch. 50 Edw. III. N° 70. Leic.

[12] Rot. Parl. 2 Ric. II. vol. III. p. 54. This ſuit is mentioned, with particulars which ſeem to vary, in Dugdale's Warwickſhire, vol. I. p. 28.

[13] Eſch. 22 Hen. VI.

[14] Eſch. 25 Hen. VIII.

[15] Dugd. Bar. Ang. vol. I. p. 199.

and that a relief of 100*s.* was due. At the ſame court, day was given to enquire of the death of William Deydike. In a court-roll of 26 Oct. 17 Eliz. the ſtyle is varied thus: "Snareſton ſc^{t}. Viſ' Franc' Pleg' đne Regine Eliz. pro & ex parte Joħis Gray armig', coram Humfredo Pureſey armig', tam ſeneſcallo dicte đne Regine curie ſue predictę, quam pred' Joħis Gray curie Baronis ſue"—and William Humfrey of Barton, co. Northampton, eſq. is preſented, as holding freely of the lord of Barwell certain lands, &c. in Swepſton by 3*s.* rent and ſuit of court: and at the ſame court Humphry Dethick of Newhall, co. Derby, eſq. as holding of the lord "de Barwell & hujus manerii" by ſuit of court, "ſcitum m[anerii doubtleſs, but the roll is torn] "in Snarſton" and 6¾ yardlands, formerly Greſeley's land. In 32 Eliz. the ſtyle notices not the queen: "Viſ' franc' pleg' cum curiâ baronis Johannis Grey armigeri[1]." There is alſo a roll of the "Viſ' Franc' cum Curiâ Benedicte Grey vidue," for Snareſton, but date torn off.

William Humfrey died in 1591, having in 1579, with his eldeſt ſon Richard, levied a fine of the manor and advowſon[2] to the uſe of his ſecond ſon Thomas Humfrey.

About the year 1594, Mr. Wyrley, whoſe mother was a Charnell, deſcribes the following arms as then recently placed in the manſion-houſe at Swebſton:

"Hæc omnia pelta Beauchampi[3] ex impenſis Thomæ Humfreydi facta fuerunt, cujus Swepſton eſt jam habitatio. At olim ad Charnellos ſpectabat, qui magni fuerunt domini in his Leyceſtrienſibus regionibus."

1. Quarterly, 1. and 4. Azure, a bend between four leopards faces Or, Humfrey; 2. and 3. Gules, a croſs botoné Argent, pierced of the field, charged with twelve eſcalop ſhells Sable, Humfrey alſo. Creſt: a harpy Argent, face proper, crined Or, wings expanded of the laſt; Plate CXXXVI. fig. 37.
2. Humfrey impaling Vaulx.
3. Trafford impaling Humfrey.
4. Malory impaling Humfrey.
5. Paget impaling Humfrey.
6. Aſhfeld impaling Humfrey.
7. Babington impaling Humfrey.
8. Humfrey impaling Patſell.
9. Humfrey impaling Meringe.
10. Humfrey impaling Canfield.
11. Humfrey impaling Rouſe.
12. Humfrey impaling Lyne.
13. Humfrey, the bend and leopards' faces Or.
14. Humfrey, the croſs botoné.
15. Sir Francis Leake, knight.
16. Gules, a feſs Or, between three martlets Sable.
17. Chequy, Argent and Gules, a bend ſiniſter.
18. Nevyle.
19. Quarterly, 1. and 4. Paly; 2. and 3. Ermine; Knightley.
20. Vaulx.
21. Aſhley.
22. Purefoy.
23. Devereux.
24. Cave.
25. Beaumont.
26. Charnells.
27. Gray.
28. Vincent.
29. Bradſhaw.
30. Smith.
31. Berkeley.
32. Babington with the label.
33. Burton.
34. Paganel.
35. Haſtings.
36. Everard.
37. Burrowe.
38. St. George.
39. Humfrey impaling Knightley.

Mr. Thomas Humphrey was high ſheriff of Leiceſterſhire in 1602[4]; was knighted by king James I. July 23, 1603; and of him, and of the lordſhip, the following letter ſpeaks:

"My commendations being remembered: This is to certefy you, that one of my acquaintaunce went this laſt weecke to London with ſir Thomas Humfrey of Swepſton, which is from Leſter 9 miles. And the ſaid ſir T. Humfrey told him, that he, being olde and in dete, wolde ſell his lordſhipe after his life for reaſon now in hand, ſavinge one yeare he wolde reſerve after his death. The ſaid lordſhipe is worth nine hundred pound a yeare. You may have it for leſſe than haulfe the purchis is now worth; and ſo fine a thing as is poſſible, with fiſhe pondes and all commodities belonginge to it. My next neighbour, being well acquainted with him and the matter, will drive it through if you will, and will know of the bely juſtly what it is worth a yeare, for he breke it to him. This ſir Humfrey hath no childe nor friendes, he ſaid himſelfe, to give it to. Your loving brother in what he may.

THOMAS HERICK.

To the worſhipeful and his very good brother ſir William Herick in Wood-ſtreet give this, againſt the Counter in London." (No date[5].)

The lordſhip was purchaſed in 1621, July 14, from ſir Thomas Humphrey[6], by ſir William Cockaine, knt. lord mayor of London. Yet at the "Viſ' Fr' Pleg' đni Regis" (the ſtyle once more changing) "cum cur' Baronis Wilłmi Roberts milit'" for Snareſton cum membris, "ib'm ſeparatim tent' 14 April, 1° Car. (1625) coram Joħe Onebye gen'," was found ſir T. Humfrey's death, his ſon Thomas's baptiſm, and that his "ſaid lands, with the manor of Swepſton," were holden of ſir W. R. "as of the manor of Barwell, by a knight's fee, 3*s.* rent, and ſuit of court[7].

In 1636 and 1639 was held, at Swepſton, the View of Frank-pledge and Court Baron of Mary counteſs of Dover[8] and her co-feoffees William Cokayne, Mathew Cradock, and James Price.

Charles Cockaine, viſcount Cullen in Ireland, ſon to ſir William, was lord of Swepſton in 1641; and with Bryan, his ſon and heir apparent, conveyed, in 1657, certain lands, and in 1660 the manor, to Thomas Charnell of Swepſtone, gent. to whom Bryan viſcount Cullen and Elizabeth his wife levied fine, Hil. 14 Car. II. of manor and advowſon, 30 acres of land, 6 meadow, 20 paſture, 30 furze, &c. And Jan. 20, 1662, William Roberts of Sutton Cheney, eſq. and Elizabeth his wife, Beaumont Dixie of Market Boſworth, eſq. Jane widow of Chriſtopher Hales, of Coventry, eſq. and John Oneby of Barwell, gents. in conſideration of 17*l.* to William Roberts and 3*l.* to his wife, granted to the ſame Thomas Charnell the ſeignory paramount, by the deſcription of their two manors of Snareſton and Swepſton, and all commons, &c. courts leet, &c. a rent of 10*d.* out of lands in Snareſton, and another of 3*s.* out of lands in Swepſton; all which were to be enjoyed and taken within the towns and precincts of Swepſton and Snareſton, and were parcel of the manor of Barwell[9].

The only reſident freeholder here in 1630 was Dionyſius Dudley; and in the civil war Richard Dudley, of Swebſton, paid £160, as a compoſition for his eſtate.

In 1655, there was collected in Swebſton and Newton Burguland, for the relief of the poor Proteſtants in Piedmont, the ſum of 1*l.* 8*s.* 6*d.*; and in Snareſton, 1*l.* 8*s.* 11*d.*

---

[1] Court-rolls of Snareſton, belonging to the lords of that place and Swepſton, 1804.

[2] Schedule of the evidences of the late Nicholas Charnell, made in November 1779 by Mr. Dudley Baxter, p. 2.

[3] Wyrley's MS. p. 62. It does not appear why theſe are called Beauchamp ſhields.

[4] Harl. MSS. 1113, p. 72.

[5] Written probably about 1620. See the autograph in Plate CXXXVI. Sir Thomas Humfrey afterwards married a ſecond wife, and had, among other iſſue, two daughters, who lived to be married. See p. *1050.

[6] Schedule, ut ſup. p. 2.

[7] Snareſton court-rolls.

[8] Swepſton ditto. Dugd. Bar. vol. II. p. 398, has John Carey earl of Dover married, ſecondly, to Abigal daughter of ſir William Cockayne, and their iſſue a daughter Mary, wife of Heveningham; but which Mary, if ſhe had ſucceeded to the title of counteſs, would ſurely have been ſo enumerated.

[9] Mr. D. Baxter's Schedule before quoted, pp. 3, 4, 5.

In the Heraldic Viſitation of 1681, the following arms were noticed on three eſcutcheons at Mr. Gery's at Swebſton.

1. Argent, a lion rampant, within a border engrailed Sable, Harpur; impaling, Or, fretty Azure, Willoughby. Plate CXXXVI. fig. 30.

2. In a lozenge, Argent, a maunch Sable, Haſtings; impaling, Sable, a feſs Ermine, between three cinquefoils Argent; Davys. Creſt, an earl's coronet; fig. 31.

3. Willoughby; impaling, Azure, a lion rampant, and a chief Or; Dixie. Creſt, a buck courant; fig. 32.

In 1722 ſeven freeholders polled from Swebſton; and in 1775 we find three names.

The rev. Dudley Charles Ryder, in right of his wife, with her two unmarried ſiſters, as nieces and coheirs of Nicholas Charnel, became poſſeſſed, in 1779, of the latter's eſtates, which compriſed the manors of Swepſton and Newton, as well as that of Snareſton, in which laſt the lands moſtly lay. Family ſettlements of Mrs. Ryder's undivided ſhare having put difficulties in the way of a partition directed by the wills of her ſiſters (who had appointed S. Pipe Wolferſtan of Statfold, co. Stafford, and the Rev. John Moore of Appleby, truſtees for that purpoſe,) it was found requiſite to go to Parliament. By an act in 1796, the whole eſtate was allotted in three parts, each valued at 12,327*l.* 17*s.* 6*d.* and each having in addition one of the three manors. A few ſcore acres have been, or are to be, ſold for diſcharging incumbrances; ſubject to which, the third allotment, 300 acres and a fraction, with the manor of Swepſton, is now under the ſaid act, grounded on the will of Anna-Maria Charnel, the property of Ann wife of Charles Powell Leſlie, eſq. (See the Pedigree, p.*1048.)

Swebſton lordſhip conſiſts of about 1150 acres of old incloſure.

The Return made to Parliament in 1786, in anſwer to an enquiry reſpecting the charitable donations in this pariſh, may be ſeen in vol. I. p. 78.

By the Return to Parliament in 1801, Swebſton and Newton Burguland contained 84 inhabited houſes, and 7 uninhabited; 216 males, 196 females; in all 412; of whom 157 were chiefly employed in agriculture; and 69 in trade, manufactures, &c.

Extracts from the Regiſter of Baptiſms:

Maria filia Johannis Onebye, baptized 13 of September, anno 1583.

John Onebye, filius Johannis Onebye, 12 of March, anno 1585.

Humfreye filius Johannis Onebye, bapt. 13 October, anno 1588.

Thomas filius Johannis Onebye, bapt. the 18 Julye, anno 1593.

Robert Bakewell, eſq. barriſter at law, a ſenior member of the honourable ſociety of the Middle Temple, and recorder of the borough of Leiceſter 1763—1766, died Nov. 4, 1793, at his houſe at Tempè[1] in Swebſton, in the 63d year of his age. He poſſeſſed the largeſt property in this townſhip (about 460 acres), but had no manor. He had, for many years, retired from public employments and the active purſuits of his profeſſion, but continued to ſerve his country to the laſt day of his life as a magiſtrate in the commiſſion of the peace; for the diſcharge of which office honourably to himſelf, and uſefully to his fellow-citizens, his profeſſional knowledge and liberal and independent mind qualified him in an eminent degree. He derived from nature a brilliant imagination, and an admirable facility of elegant expreſſion, which was cultivated and improved by a claſſical education, a courſe of travel, and an habitual intimacy with the moſt celebrated men of genius and eminent ſpeakers at the bar, and in the ſenate, of his own ſtanding. He had, for a long time paſt, been afflicted with an aneuriſm, which, latterly, brought on an extreme difficulty of breathing. This complaint he knew, from the opinion of the late celebrated Mr. John Hunter, whom he had conſulted, muſt be fatal to him. He, however, endured his diſorder, and expected diſſolution with great reſignation; and, after taking leave of an only daughter, as uſual, and walking to bed, expired, as he had often wiſhed he might do, without a groan.

An uncommonly old couple were lately living at this town, Robert and Alice Jarvis; having at the death of Alice (daughter of Thomas Wallies, baptized at Blackfordby Nov. 16, 1702, and buried at Swepſton Jan. 25, 1799,) been married very nearly 68 years. Robert, the huſband, buried at Swepſton, Dec. 16, 1802, after enjoying his faculties to the laſt, always aſſerted that himſelf was born in 1700, about St. John's day (27 Dec.); but his baptiſm is not found in the regiſter of Smithſby, co. Derby, his birth-place, the moſt wretched, torn, defective paper-book a pariſh ever was provided with. And Alice, a few months before her death, told her ſon Thomas Jarvis, now living at Ibſtoke, in full poſſeſſion of his memory, that ſhe was full a half year ſenior to her huſband. Man and wife were uſed to deſcribe themſelves as not marrying till the age of 30. On this point the aforeſaid Thomas, their firſt child, ſpeaks poſitively to his own birth on April 3, 1732, at Swepſton; but that his baptiſm is not in the regiſter, being performed by Mr. Baddeley, a miniſter of the parents' perſuaſion, then living in the Charnells family. He adds that their marriage was early in the preceding year, 1731, and at Swepſton; having often heard them ſay it took place juſt before a noted Lichfield fair, held on Aſh-Wedneſday; which day that year ſeems to have fallen on Feb. 7. But this marriage too, from whatever cauſe, is not in Swepſton regiſter. By Alice's own account, ſhe muſt have been about two years and a half old when baptized as above. Such a circumſtance does happen occaſionally, from various cauſes, of which in this inſtance the Diſſenting perſuaſion might be one. But a year or two, after all, in the ages of this venerable pair, muſt be left to reſt on the accuracy of their own memories.

	Swebſton and Newton Burguland.			Snareſton.
	£.	s.	d.	£.	s.	d.
Money raiſed for the poor, within the year ending at Eaſter 1776,	44	11	10	28	1	7
Expended in county rates, &c.	3	4	0	3	1	8
——— on the poor, —	41	7	10	28	1	7
Rent of workhouſe and habitations,	2	1	0	3	10	0
Expended in litigations, —	0	0	0	0	0	0
Money raiſed for 1783, —	91	11	5	81	13	9
——— 1784, —	79	3	4	81	4	9
——— 1785, —	95	8	0	86	1	6
Medium of theſe three years,	88	14	3	83	0	0
——— of county expences,	8	0	4	4	0	10
——— of expences not relating to the poor; repairs of the church, roads, &c.	1	4	5	2	14	10
——— of nett annual expences,	80	13	11	76	4	4
——— of attending on magiſtrates,	0	9	11	4	3	8
——— of entertainments at meetings,	3	12	11	0	8	8
——— of law expences, —	0	0	0	0	7	10
——— of ſetting the poor to work,	0	0	0	0	0	0

---

[1] A name given it by himſelf, on adding ome rooms to a farm-houſe.

The CHURCH (ſee Plate CXXXVI.), dedicated to St. Peter, conſiſts of a tower (in which are four bells), a large South porch, a chancel, nave, and two ailes, each ſeparated by four arches.

The font is round, and antient.

In the Matriculus of 1220, Swebſton is deſcribed to be under the patronage of William de Charnels; William de London having been inſtituted to the rectory by D. the archdeacon during the vacancy of the ſee of Lincoln (between 1206 and 1208). To this church belonged a chapel at Snarkiſton; in which Robert de Swepſton was inſtituted vicar by the ſame archdeacon; paying to the mother church a pound of incenſe, by way of penſion, at the recommendation and preſentation of William the patron[1].

Both Wyrley and Burton deſcribe theſe arms in Swebſton church:

Beauchamp earl of Warwick, Plate CXXXVI. fig. 3.

Gules, three lions paſſant guardant in pale Or, a label of France; duke of Lancaſter, fig. 17.

The ſame without the label; England.

18. Azure, ſemé de fleur-de-lis Or; France antient.

19. Azure, on a croſs engrailed Or, an annulet Sable; Charnels of Elmſthorpe.

The ſame, with a label Gules; Charnels.

The ſame, without the annulet; Charnels.

20. Barry of ſix, Or and Azure; Pembruge; "ut in aliis vidi," ſays Wyrley.

21. Barry of ſix, Or and Azure; in chief two mullets Gules; Pembruge, impaling Charnels. On this Mr. Wyrley noticed, Dominus Johannes Charnels, dominus iſtius ....

22. Barry of ſix, Or and Azure, in chief two mullets Gules; Pembruge.

23. Pembruge, with mullets; impaling, Sable, five eſcalops in ſaltire Or; Eſcot.

24. Gules, a croſs Argent; St. John of Jeruſalem.

25. Gules, a lion rampant, double-tailed Argent; Atwood.

26. Argent, a croſs formé fleury Gules; Truſſell.

27. Per pale, Gules and Sable, a lion rampant Argent, crowned Or; Beler.

This coat, Mr. Burton adds, ſtandeth very old, Gules, ſemé of trefoils ſlipped Argent, a feſs dancetté Ermine; fig. 28.

In a window the picture of one of the family of Charnels kneeling; on whoſe ſurcoat, Azure, the engrailed croſs Or, with the annulet as in fig. 19. This is thus deſcribed by Wyrley: "Unum monumentum cum flexis genibus in vitreo, hâc inſcriptione,

"Robert' Charnels et Johana uxor ejus, eſt armatus ſuo ſcuto."

In 1344, the procurations were 7*s*. 6¾*d*.; the rectory was taxed at 18 marks, and paid 2*s*. 6*d*. for Peter-pence.

In 1534-5, the procurations and ſynodals were 9*s*. 7*d*. and the value of the rectory was 18*l*. 13*s*. 4*d*.

In 1552, the commiſſioners reported that the church of Swebſton contained,

"In primis, one chalice, three veſtments, and one cope.
Itm̄, foore aulter clothes and three towelles.
Itm̄, foore belles, one of them a ſaunce bell.
Itm̄, a croſs, a pyxe, and two crwettes."

In 1650, the rectory was returned worth 80*l*. and the incumbent as ſufficient.

The preſent value in the king's books is 21*l*. 18*s*. 4*d*.

The epiſcopal procurations are 4*s*.; the archidiaconal, 13*s*.

RECTORS.	PATRONS.
William de London rector Robert de Swepſton vicar } 1220.	} William de Charnels.
. . . . 1280.	Dn̄s Nicholaus de Charneles[2].
John Charnells, 1350[3].
John Marſhall, 1365[3].
Thomas White, reſigned 1424.
Richard Lee, 1424.	Sir Ralph Shirley.
John Hammond, 1534.
Francis Standiſh[4], about 1640.	Charles lord Cullen.
Henry Watts, ejected 1662.	Parliamentary Sequeſtrators.
John Gery[5], LL.D. Oct. 9, 1662; died 1722.	Thomas Charnel, gent.
Robert Billio[6], M. A. Auguſt 27, 1722.	Thomas Charnel, eſq.
Thomas Billio[7], LL. B. June 8, 1754; died 1782.	Nicholas Charnel, eſq.
Michael Baxter, Sept. 16, 1782. John Oliver, July 19, 1787.	} Rev. Dudley Charles Ryder and Elizabeth-Catharine his wife.

MONUMENTAL INSCRIPTIONS.

Mr. Burton ſays, "There lieth in the North ſide of the church a monument of ſtone of a woman, whereon is cut the coat of Charnels, fig. 19, and Truſſell, fig. 26."

This ſtill remains. It is an altar-tomb under a North-aile arch, the ſecond from the chancel (ſee fig. 39); and is very antient. There is no appearance of an inſcription. The face is much injured by time; but the drapery of the robe (which is of the funereal kind) is neat and perfect. The head is cloſely covered with a ſhroud-like cap, hiding the chin. At her feet a lion. On both the fronts of this tomb are the arms of Charnels and Truſſell ſingle, and Truſſell and Charnells impaled; ſee fig. 29.

On another altar-tomb, in the body of the church, between the pulpit and the chancel lies the alabaſter figure of a knight in full length in half mail; his ſword on the left ſide, his gloves on the right; at his feet a lion. His hair is in ringlets curled; and round his neck is a double chain. His hands are joined in prayer; with this inſcription (ſee fig. 40, 41.):

Here lyeth the bodie of Wyllm Humffrey[8], of Swepſton, eſquier, which deceaſſed the 3 of March, anno Dom̄i 1591.

On a mural tablet in the chancel. Arms above; Gules, a chevron engrailed between three eſcalops Argent, Bedell; impaling, Gules, a croſs botoné Argent, Humfrey; fig. 38.

1. "HERE LIES ELIZABETH,
ELDEST DAUGHTER OF SIR
THOMAS HUMFREY, KNIGHT,
THE LATE WIFE OF HENRY
BEDELL, OF GREAT
CATWORT, IN THE COUNTY OF HUNTINGTON, GENT. WHO,
HAVEING ISSUE TWO DAUGHTERS, DEPARTED THIS LIFE

---

[1] See the Introductory Volume, p. lviii.

[2] Dugdale's Warwickſhire, vol. I. pp. 24. 28.

[3] Reg Sutton, epiſc' Lincoln', ann. 1.

[4] "He was, with his wife and children, turned out of the parſonage, and reduced to great ſtreights. He died before the Reſtoration; and was, as I have been informed, a very ingenious man." Walker's Sufferings of the Clergy, p. 366.

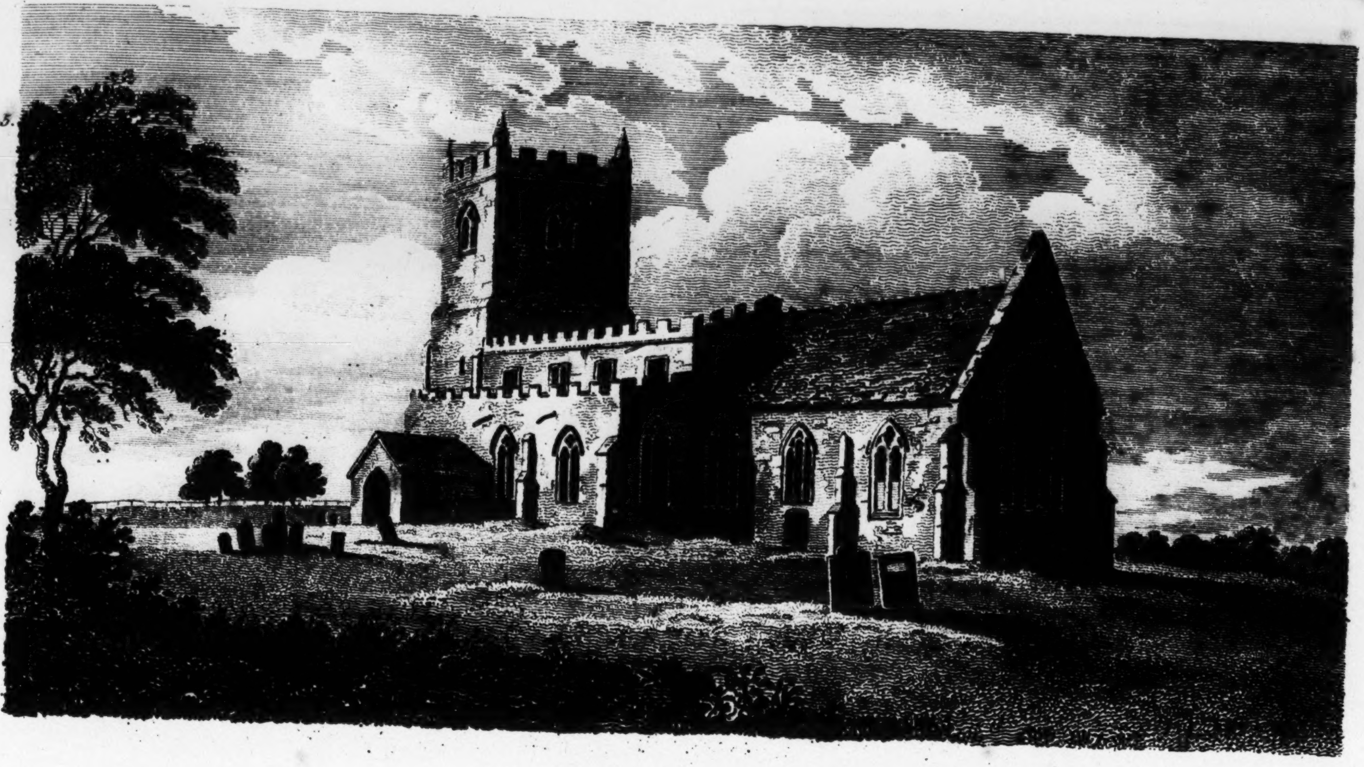
[5] Archdeacon of Bucks 1684, prebendary of Lydington in the church of Lincoln 1688. He married Anne daughter of Richard Morrice of Burbach. She died Jan. 8, 1680, and was buried at Swebſton. He was aged about 44 in 1681. His ſon George was then a ſtudent in Queen's College, Cambridge.

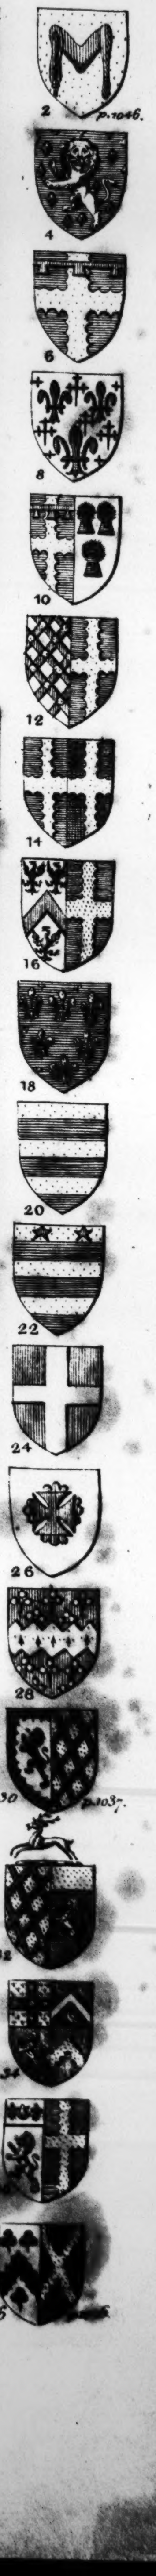
[6] He had a diſpenſation, in April 1742, to hold this rectory with Nuneaton vicarage, co. Warwick, on the advancement of Dr. Ryder to the biſhoprick of Killaloe. Gent. Mag. vol. XII. p. 219.

[7] He was alſo rector of Lutterworth. His library was ſold, by Mr. Samuel Paterſon, Jan. 27, 1783.

[8] This gentleman was probably godfather to Humphry Onebye, p. 1037.

1 p.1045.
3
5
7
9
11
13
15
17 p.1038.
19
21
23
25
27





2 p.1046.
4
6
8
10
12
14
16
18 20
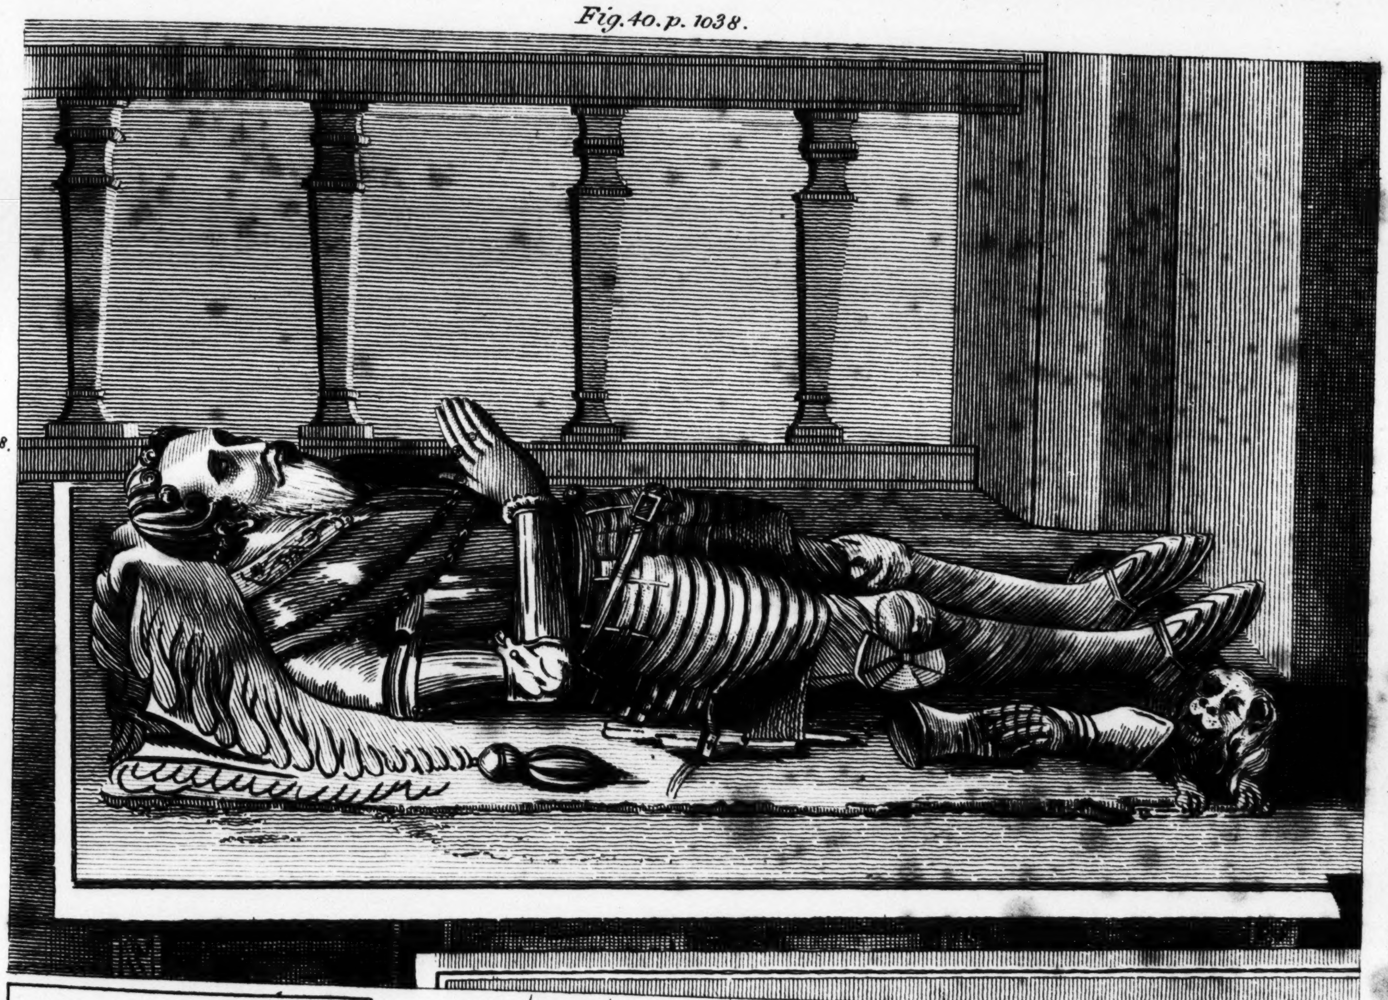
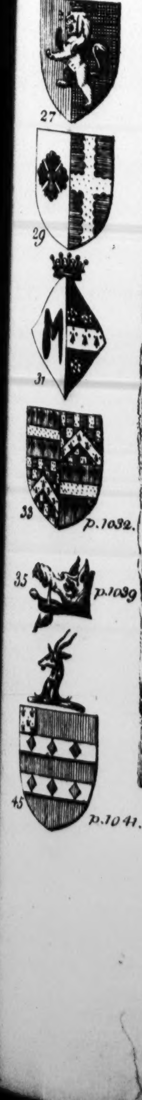
22
24
26
28
30 p.1037.
32
34
36
46

Fig. 40. p. 1038.



Thomas : Herick
p. 1036.



29
31
33 p.1032.
35 p.1039
45 p.1041.

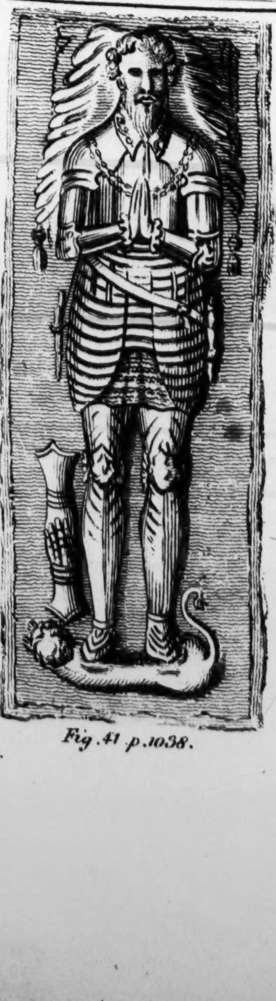


Fig. 41 p. 1038.

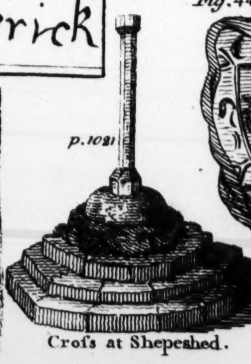
p. 1021



Cross at Shepeshed.

Fig. 44. p. 1147.

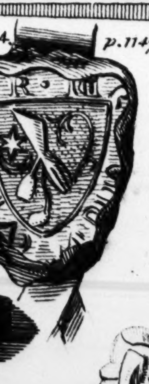


Fig. 43. p. 1026.

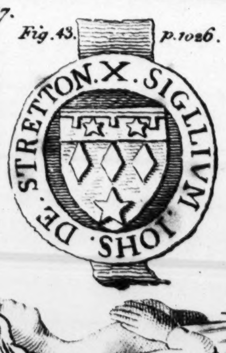
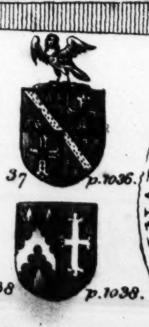
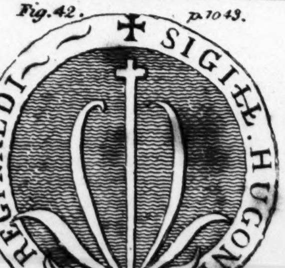


STRETTON. X. SIGILLIUM. IOHS. DE.

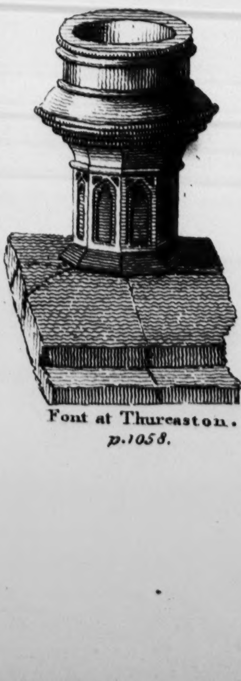


37 p.1036.
38 p.1038.

Fig. 42. p. 1043.

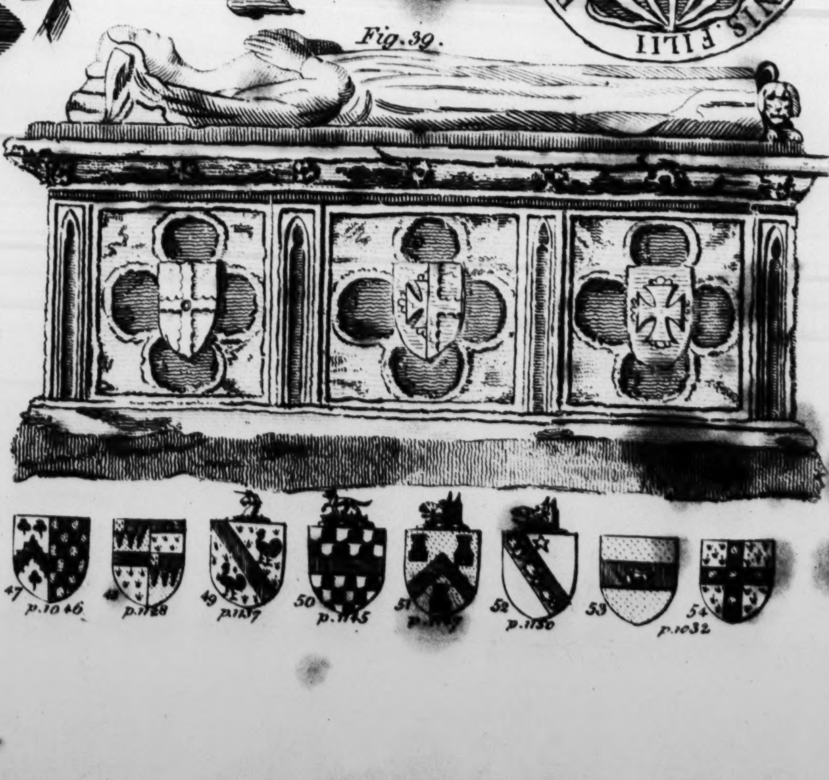


SIGILL. HUGONIS. FILII REGINALDI

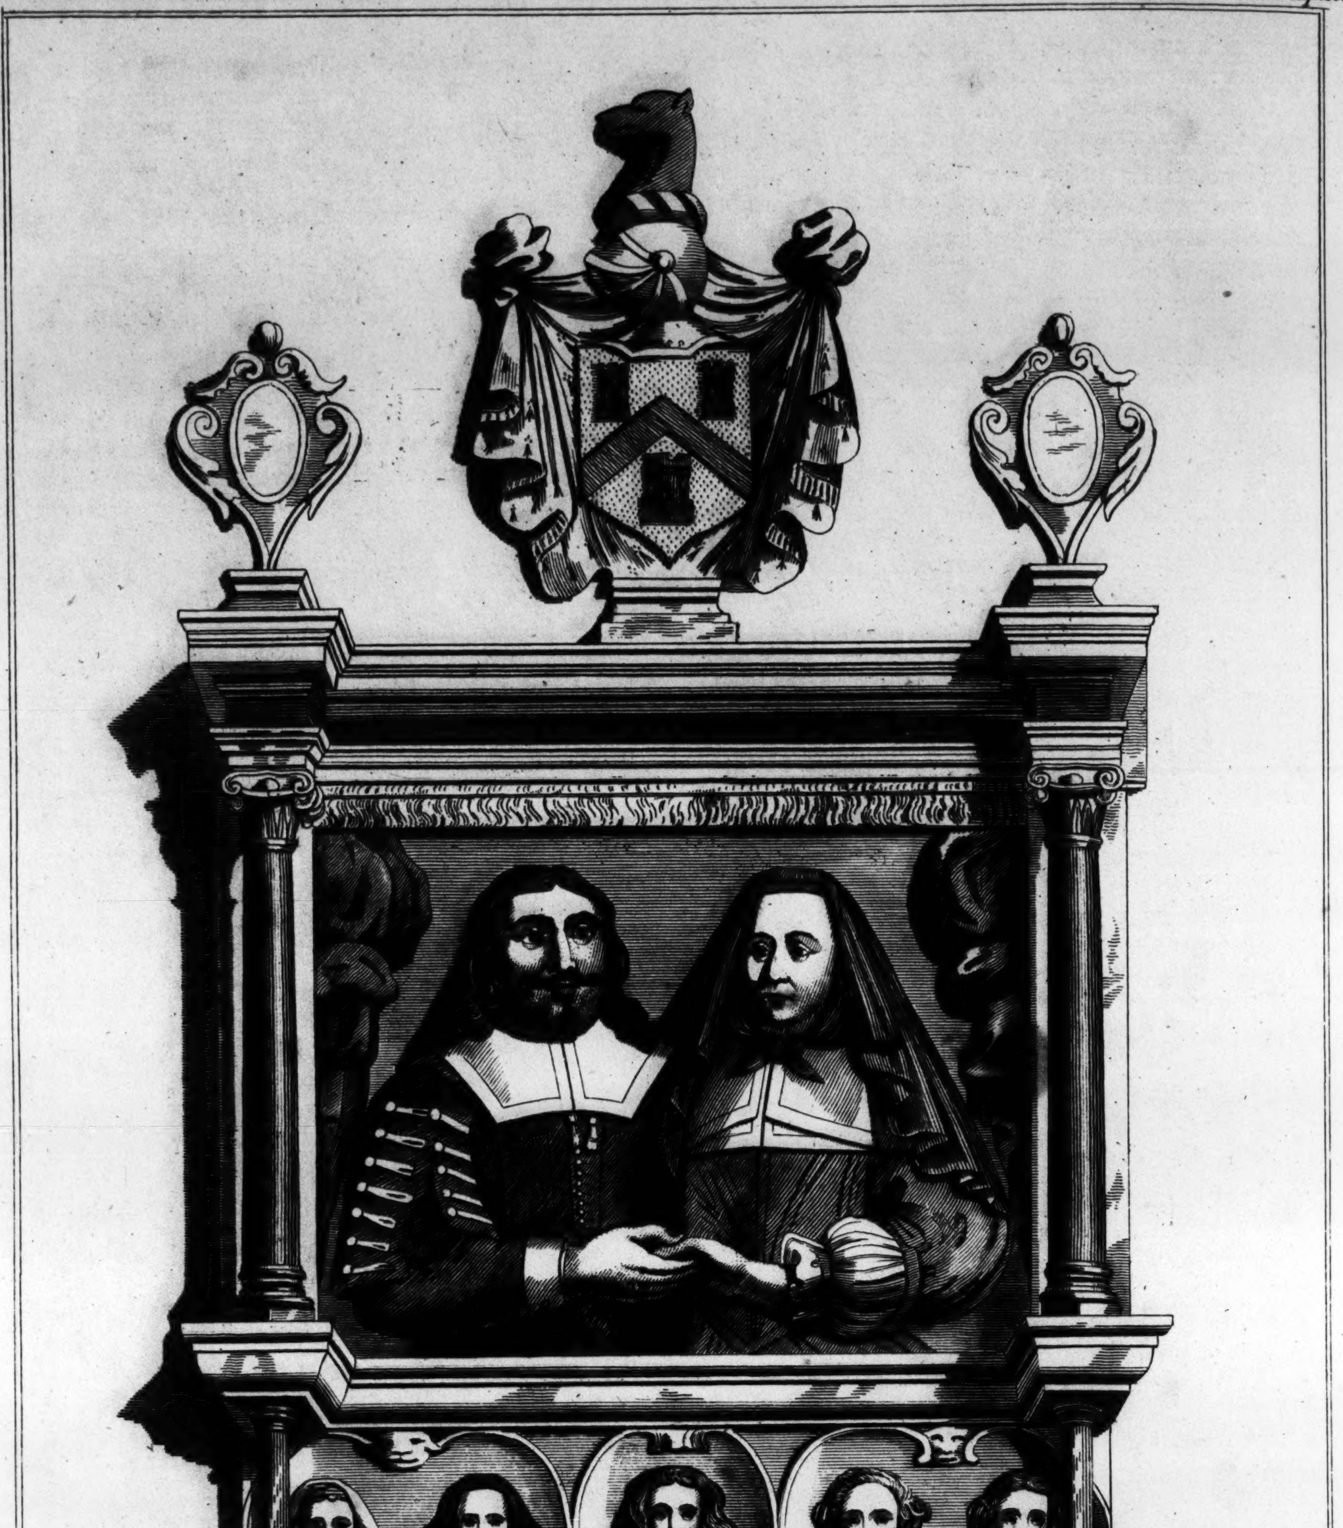


Font at Thurcaston.
p. 1058.

Fig. 39.



47 p.1046.
48 p.1128
49 p.1137
50 p.1145
51 p.1147
52 p.1150
53
54 p.1032



A.D. MDCCLXXXVI.
ANNA ET SARAH NICHOLS
ROBERTI ONEBYE.
JURE ET EX TESTAMENTO
HAEREDES.

Basire Sc.

From Regard to the Memory of a much lamented MOTHER;
and from sincere Respect to a kind and affectionate FATHER;
this PLATE is contributed, by ANNE PRIDDEN and SARAH NICHOLS, 1803.

THE 24th OF JANUARY, IN THE YEAR OF OUR LORD 1650,
AND OF HER AGE THE 27TH.

This ſtone need ſay noe more; this Swebſton witneſs can
How good to poore ſhe was, how meek a Chriſtyan.
Both when ſhe liv'd and dy'd ſhe was the Lord's;
She had what Earth, ſhe has what Heav'n, affords."

2. "M. S.
ANNÆ
UXORIS CHARISSIMÆ JOAN. GERY,
HUJUS ECCLESIÆ RECTORIS;
QUÆ OMNIGENIS ORNATA FUIT VIRTUTIBUS;
ERGA VIRUM IN AMANDO MIRE CONSTANS,
IN PARENTES PER OMNIA OBSEQUENS,
PATIENTIÂ INVICTA, LIBERALITATE DITISSIMA,
ET IN PRIMÆVA PIETATE DEO PATRUM NOSTRUM
RELIGIOSE SERVIENS (ADMODUM DESIDERATA)
OBIIT VIII° JAN. ANNO MDCLXXX.
MŒSTISSIMUS MARITUS.
H. M. C'.
H. M. D. M. A."

3. A Creſt; boar's head (ſide-fac'd), having an open mouth with ſide-tuſk, a turn-up ſnout, &c.; fig. 35.

"H. S. E.
In ſpe reſurrectionis ad vitam æternam depoſitum quod mortale fuit viri reverendi Johannis Gery, LL.D. eccleſiarum de Swepſton & Stanton in agro Leiceſtrienſi rectoris,
Lincolnienſi prebendarii,
Buckinhamienſis archidiaconi, et annos per plurimos
munere Juſtitiario, quod ad pacem attinet, functi;
qui obiit in Chriſto Anno { Salutis MDCCXXII, ætatis ſuæ LXXXV.
F. H. I. V."

4. " MAR. FEC.
Juxta ſepelitur Saræ Billio cadaver,
Roberti conjugis,
hujus eccleſiæ rectoris,
ob. 7 kal. Apr. æt. 63. A. D. MDCCXLIX.
In vitam cœleſtem I præ, ornatiſſima mi Matrona,
favente Deo & vocante, ſequar.
Robt Billio, hujus eccleſiæ rector, ob^t
Feb. 8, anno Salutis 1754, ætatis 70."

5. "To the memory of the Reverend Thomas Billio, who was for 30 years rector of this pariſh.
He was religious without bigotry, charitable without oſtentation, and learned without pedantry.
In the conſtant practice of benevolence, he lived a zealous aſſertor of the rights of mankind;
and died, univerſally regretted,
the 13th day of June, 1782."

On the floor of the chancel:

1. "Here lies interred the body of Robert Bakewell, the ſon of Mr. Thomas Bakewell, of Normington de Heath,
who departed this life the 16th day of June,
anno Domini 1707, in the 29th year of his age.
Here alſo lies interred Katherine,
the widow of the ſaid Robert Bakewell,
who departed this life Dec. 4, 1746, aged 61."

2. "Here lieth the body of Robert Bakewell, gent.
the only ſon of Robert Bakewell, of this town, gent.
by Kath. his wife,
who departed this life the 18th day of June,
anno Domini 1737, in the 32d year of his age."

In the nave:

"Here lies interred the body of Henry Bakewell, gent.
who departed this life the 17th day of Sept. 1718,
in the 86th year of his age.
Alſo the remains of Elizabeth, wife of the above Henry Bakewell, gent.
who departed this life the 25th of Jan. 1733, aged 78."

"Near this place are depoſited
the remains of Henry Bakewell, gent.
who departed this life the 9th of June, 1770,
aged 75 years.
Likewiſe the remains of Margaret,
widow of the above Henry Bakewell, gent.
She died the 31ſt of Oct. 1772,
in the 79th year of her age."

On a monument at the Weſt end of the South aile:

"To the memory of John Chiſwell, gent.
who died April 18, 1765, aged 45 years."

On a mural tablet in the North aile:

"Near this place are depoſited
the remains of Thomas Muxloe, gent.
who departed this life July 19, 1752, aged 70.
He married Dorothy,
daughter of Thomas Charnell of Snareſtone, eſq.
by whom he had iſſue two ſons and ſeven daughters.
Alſo the remains of Dorothy,
wife of the abovesaid Thomas Muxloe, gent.
who departed this life Oct. 6, 1754,
in the 73d year of her age."

Arms below; in white marble, uncoloured: A lion rampant, on a chief an eſcalop between two fleurs de lis; impaling Charnells; fig. 36.

In the floor of the North aile:

"Here lies the body of Dorothy Muxloe, ſecond daughter of Thomas Muxloe, gent.
by Dorothy his wife,
who departed this life the 28th day of Auguſt, 1716,
in the 8th year of her age.
Here alſo lies the body of Barbara Muxloe, ſixth daughter of Thomas Muxloe, gent.
by Dorothy his wife,
who departed this life the 23d day of April, 1740,
in the 17th year of her age."

"Here lies the body of Elizabeth Muxloe, eldeſt daughter of Thomas Muxloe, gent.
by Dorothy his wife,
who departed this life the 27th day of July, 1720,
in the 15th year of her age.
Here alſo lies the body of Thomas Muxloe, eldeſt ſon of Thomas Muxloe, gent.
by Dorothy his wife,
who departed this life the 11th of November, 1721,
in the firſt year of his age."

"Here lies the body of Edward Muxloe, the ſecond ſon of Thomas Muxloe, gent.
by Dorothy his wife,
who departed this life the 25th day of June, 1732,
in the 12th year of his age."

"In memory of Martha Muxloe, youngeſt daughter of Thomas Muxloe, gent.
by Dorothy his wife,
whoſe remains are interred beneath this ſtone, and, by her own requeſt, near thoſe of her much-reſpected and beloved parents.
She was born June 29, 1726,
and died October 4, 1765."

"Here lies interred, April 16, 1691, the body of Mrs. Ann Clare, ſpinſter;
whoſe exemplary piety in her life, diffuſive kindneſs to her relations, and laſting charity to the poor of this pariſh at her death, will embalm her name to future ages.
The righteous ſhall be held in everlaſting remembrance."

In the churchyard.

On a large double altar-tomb, with iron rails:

"Here lie the remains of
Robert Bakewell, eſq.
He died on the 4th of November, 1793,
in the 63d year of his age.
His life was an example of the moſt extenſive benevolence, joined to the practice of every religious and ſocial duty. As a guardian and director of the poor in the extenſive Hundred for which he acted as a magiſtrate near forty years, he was uniformly the favorer of thoſe whom age or infirmity had neceſſitated to apply for relief; but ſevere in his ſtrictures on the idle profligate. His death was a leſſon of that compoſure and reſignation which the hope of immortality, grounded on a well-ſpent life, could alone inſpire."

2. "Here lies interred the body of Harriott Bakewell, wife of Robert Bakewell, of Greſley-hall,
in the county of Derby, eſq.
and ſecond daughter of [Theodore] William Inge, of Thorp Conſtantine, in the county of Stafford, eſq.
who departed this life Jan. 22, 1762,
in the 19th year of her age."

On another altar-tomb, with iron rails:
"Beneath are depoſited
the remains of Mr. Benjamin Breward; who reſted from his labours
the 19th day of February, 1797, aged 57 years."

On other grave ſtones:
"William Brabſon,
being a ſtranger and ſojourner here,
departed this life at Newton on the 17th day of April, 1730."

"Matthias Scott, of Newton, died 27 Nov. 1795, aged 63."

Henry Seddans died Feb. 7, 1789, aged 81.
Sarah Seddans died June 24, 1789, aged 78.
Four ſons and five daughters.

James Lago died July 17, 1768, aged 83.
Sarah Lago died April 9, 1770, aged 84.

In memory of John Till Adams[1],
who departed this life the 29th of November 1801,
in the 84th year of his age.

Henry Watts, of Sidney college, Cambridge, took his degree of M. A. in 1651; and was ejected from Swebſton in 1662, having ſeveral children. Mr. Standiſh, who was ſequeſtered in the Parliament times, died before the Reſtoration. Mr. Watts was ſucceeded by Dr. John Gery, and maintained a very friendly correſpondence with him to the day of his death; and the doctor upon all occaſions uſed to expreſs a great eſteem and value for him. Mr. Watts, when he left Swebſton, removed to Weddington, a little village in Warwickſhire, where he lived above 20 years, being upon very friendly terms with Mr. Armſtead the public miniſter. Every day, excepting Sunday, Mr. Watts went in the morning about 11 to viſit Mr. Armſtead, and he returned his viſit in the afternoon about 4; each viſit being of about an hour's length. Mr. Watts conſtantly went to church on Sunday morning; and in the afternoon (when there was no ſermon in public, Mr. Armſtead preaching at another village in that neighbourhood) he preached to his own family, admitting a few neighbours, but keeping within the number allowed by act of parliament. At length he removed from hence to Barwell in Leiceſterſhire; and, upon his removal, Mr. Armſtead uſed to ſay, "he had loſt the beſt friend and neighbour ever man had." A legal toleration being granted to the diſſenters, he, at the requeſt of many inhabitants of the neighbouring towns, preached publicly at Hinckley, on the Sunday in the afternoon; and was well pleaſed with ſuch an opportunity of exerciſing his miniſtry. He had ſome hundreds of hearers, to whom he conſtantly preached; not being hindered by badneſs of ways, or weather, or the infirmities of age, or any thing elſe but ſickneſs. He ſettled a congregation of ſober ſerious Chriſtians, among whom he beſtowed his labours without any acknowledgement from them, except a few inconſiderable preſents, and continued with them till he was removed by death, Feb. 2, 1690, in the 63d year of his age; when the people choſe another to ſucceed him. He was buried in the church at Barwell, and his funeral ſermon was preached by the rev. Mr. Thomas Paget, rector of that pariſh, who gave a very handſome character of him; mentioning "his obliging temper and gentlemanly behaviour; his great friendlineſs, and uſefulneſs in reconciling differences, to the ſaving great expences in law; his exemplarineſs in relative duties, and particularly in the management of his family, which was attended with a remarkable bleſſing from Heaven; his great moderation and charity, which recommended him to all the gentlemen in the neighbourhood, who treated him with great reſpect; ſignifying withal, that he did not know any one that had more real friends and fewer enemies than he; and that he was ſuch a religious, conſcientious, uſeful perſon, that not only his numerous family, but the publick alſo, had a great loſs by his deceaſe." Many wondered at his Nonconformity, conſidering his increaſing family; but that was not the leaſt temptation to him to act againſt the ſenſe of his own mind, though he had good preferment in the church offered him. He truſted Providence; and God remarkably bleſſed and proſpered him. Ten of his thirteen children lived to be men and women; and he educated them well, and comfortably provided for their ſubſiſtence in the world[2].

Mr. Watts, as we find by the above account from Calamy and Palmer, was the firſt regular Preſbyterian miniſter of Hinckley. His ſuccceſſor, it is believed, was a Mr. Bilbie; and as this was before the building of the preſent meeting-houſe, their aſſembly was at that time held in a part of the miniſter's dwelling-houſe. The next in order was Mr. Jennings, who had the care of building the meeting-houſe in 1722; the building being begun juſt before, or immediately upon, his coming to Hinckley. He kept an academy, and had many young gentlemen under his direction. He was at Hinckley but a ſmall time; for, taking an occaſional journey to London, he caught the ſmall-pox, and died on his return to Hinckley, about 1724 or 1725[3].

---

[1] Till-Adam; a native of Glouceſterſhire, who claimed to be deſcended from the Ap-Adams of that county. (See Rudder, in Beverſton and elſewhere.) One of whom, Thomas, a warrior under Hen. VIII. (by a MS account in poſſeſſion of John Till-Adam,) was permitted, but why is not ſaid, to change his name to Till-Adam.

[2] See the epitaphs at Burbach, in Sparkenhoe Hundred.

[3] Of his ſucceſſors, an account will be given under Hinckley.

PEDIGREE of GERY, of Swebston (entered at Leiceſter by Rev. John Gery, 23 March, 1681-2.)

Arms: Gules, two bars Argent, charged with three maſcles of the field; a canton Ermine. Creſt, on a wreath, an antelope's head erafed quarterly, Argent and Sable, charged with four maſcles counterchanged, attired Or [1].

Motto, Cautè, non callidè; Plate CXXXVI. fig. 45.

William Geary, ſuppoſed to be the ſon of Thomas. = ...

John Geary, or Gery, of Bedfordſhire, died about 1607; ſecond ſon, as it is conceived by his bearing the arms [2] with a creſcent. = Alice . . . .

1. Henry Geary, reſided in or about London, and died without iſſue, circa 1647.

. . . dau. of . . . Terry; 1ſt wife. = 2. John Gery, of the city of Coventry, ob. circa 1653. = Anne, da. of Rich. Butler, of the Charterhouſe, near Coventry, co. Warwick, eſq. 2d wife.

3. Edward Gery, citizen of London. = ...

4. George Gery, of Great Packington, co. Warwick. = Elizabeth . . . .

Joyce, died unmarried, 1627; made her will Sept. 6 that year; & bequeathed ſeveral gold rings and other things of value to her relations; and particularly a gold ſeal ring of the arms of Gery, which came to her from her father 17 years before.

Elizabeth, Joyce, and Henry, died without iſſue.

John Gery, of Pembroke College, Cambridge, M. A. 1672, LL.D. 1684; rector of Swebſton and Stony Staunton; died 1722, æt. 85. = Anne, daughter of Richard Morrice, of Burbach, co. Leiceſter; di. Jan. 8, 1680; bu. at Swebſton.

Henry Gery, died unmarried.

. . . . wife of . . . Creſwell.

Elizabeth, only child. = John Smyth, of Corley, c. Warwick.

Joſeph Smyth. = Judith Barlow.

1. George Gery, a ſtudent in Queen's College, Cambridge, æt. 19, 1681; B.A. 1684; M.A. 1688.

2. John, æt. 15, 1681; died unmarried, about 1684.

Richard Smyth. = Anne, da. of Wm. lord Pawlett.

William-Pawlett-Pawlett Smyth.

---

[1] Whereas it did appear by ſeals and writings produced to us, Thomas May Cheſter, and Gregory King Rougedragon, at Leiceſter, 23 March, 1681-2, that this branch of the family of Geryes of Bedfordſhire hath uſed theſe arms for 75 years or upwards laſt paſt, with a filial diſtinction only of a ſecond brother: At the inſtance of Mr. John Gery, Maſter of Arts, &c. that a more due and proper diſtinction might be aſſigned him, to be uſed by him and his poſterity hereafter, we have thought fit to convert the canton charged with a leopard's head, into a canton Ermine.

[2] See the arms of Gery, in the Viſitation of Bedfordſhire, 1634, marked C. 31. fol. 10. b. together with the deſcent.

PEDIGREE of GERY, of Bedfordshire.

Thomas Gery, of Royſton, Herts, gent. ſheriff for Cambridgeſhire 1509. = ...

William Gery, of Buſhmead, Royſton, and Barkway [1], gent. died in Dec. 1592; buried at Over, co. Cambridge. = Barbara, daughter of . . . . Hyde, of Throcking Herts.

1. William Gery, of Buſhmead, co. Bedford, gent. died May 1593; bu. at Little Stoughton. = Rebecca, dau. of Richard Shaw, of Chickſands, co. Bedford, by Elizabeth his wife, da. of . . . Cavendiſh, aunt to the old counteſs of Shrewſbury.

2. Richard Gery. = Elizabeth, da. of Thomaſin W. Frith, of Newington, c. Midd. eſq.

1. Richard Gery, of Buſhmead Priory, gentleman of the privy chamber to king Charles I. 1634; died 1638; buried at Little Stoughton. = Anne, da. of George Franklin, of Maverne co. Bedford, gent. died in December 1630; buried at Little Stoughton.

2. William Gery, eſq. of Gray's-inn, eſq. counſellor at law, born 1589.

1. . . . . m to Dr. Nicholls.
2. . . . . m. Nic. Franklin, eſq.
3. . . . . m. John Spencer, eſq.
4. Elizabeth, m. James Taber, of Eſſex, eſq.

1. William Gery, of Buſhmead Priory, eſq. born 1613; died . . . . = Anna, dau. of ſir Wm. Dyer, and ſiſter of ſir Lodovick Dyer, of Great Stoughton, co. Hunts, born 1611, died 1684; buried at Colmworth, co. Bedford; had four children living after 1650.

2. Richard Gery, born 16 5, a ſtudent in Cambridge 1634.
3. George Gery, of Gray's-inn, gent. born 1613; died 1683, buried at Little Stoughton.
4. Oliver Gery, born 1621; living 1689.

5. Sir Thomas Gery, of Bloomſbury, knt. born 1623; died in November 1689, ſ. p. = Heſter . . . . d. 1694.

1. Anne, bapt. Jan. 1, 1617, living, unmarr. 1638.
2. Elizabeth, m. to ſir Ric. Stone, of Ruſhden houſe, Herts, kt.

1. William Gery, died an infant before 1634.

Mary, dau. and coheir of John Salmon, of Shillingford, c. Oxon; 1ſt wife. = 2. William Gery, of Buſhmead, in the pariſh of Eaton Socon, c. Bedford, eſq. d. Nov. 1686, buried at Little Stoughton. = ... dau. of . . . . Boſden, and widow of Rich. Taylor, of Clapham, co. Bedford.

3. Richard, living 1638.
1. Katharine, bo. Nov. 1634; marr. to Nicholas Hare, of Harpham, eſq.
2. Mary, mar. about 1671, to . . . . Metcalfe, eſq.

3. Ann. = John-James Dartiquenave.

Charles Dartiquenave [2], eſq. 1689.

1. Katherine.
2. Anne.

3. Elizabeth, wife of . . . . Bladwell, 1689.

4. Phillis.

Anne, dau. and heir of James Sawyer, of Caldecot, co. Northampton, eſq.; firſt wife. = Charles Gery, of Buſhmead, eſq. born Sept. 2, 1664; died April 1713; bur. at Little Stoughton. = Heſter, dau. and heir of Thomas Benyon, of the city of Ely, clerk; died May 1728; buried at Little Stoughton; ſecond wife.

Elizabeth, unmarried in 1693; afterwards wife of . . . . Llanden, of Dalby, co. Lincoln.

William Gery, of Buſhmead, eſq. died Oct. 1755; buried at Little Stoughton. = Eleanor, dau. of Richard Welby, of Denton, co. Lincoln, eſq. (who died in 1713;) married 17 . .; died 1796; buried at Little Stoughton.

1. William Gery, of Buſhmead, eſq. died 1802; buried at Little Stoughton. = Mary, dau. and ſole heir of Richard Bell, of Bedford, eſq. died 1795; bu. at Little Stoughton.

2. Charles Gery, clerk, living 1803 at Grantham, co. Lincoln, ſ. p. = Philip, youngeſt daughter of Sam. Preſton, of Boſton, co. Lincoln, eſq.

Mary, and Eleanor, died unmarried.

William, died an infant.

1. Mary-Selina. = John Milnes, eſq. of Beckingham, co. Lincoln, 2d ſon of James-Andrew Milnes, LL.D. of Newark.

One ſon and three daughters.

2. Eleanor. = Rev. Thos. Milnes, eldeſt ſon of Rev. Dr. Milnes, of Newark.

One daughter.

3. Heſter. = Rev. Hugh Wade, of Newark, fellow of Emmanuel College, who took the name and arms of Gery, by the king's licence, in addition to thoſe of Wade, on his marriage, 1792.

1. A ſon, ſtill born, at Buſhmead, Nov. 1, 1793.
2. William-Hugh, born at Newark Aug. 24, 1794.
3. Charles, born at Newark Oct. 9, 1795.
4. Hugh, born at Newark Jan. 8, 1797.
5. George, bo. at Buſhmead Mar. 14, 1798; d. Oct. 2, 1798.
6. Heſter, born at Buſhmead April 24, 1799.
7. George-Richard, born at Buſhmead July 31, 1800; died Auguſt 18 following.
8. Thomas, born at Buſhmead Sept. 26, 1801.
9. Robert, born at Buſhmead Dec. 15, 1802.

---

[1] Had a grant of Barkway from Henry VIII. See Chauncey.

[2] See Swift's Works, ed. 1803, vol. XXI. p. 171.

NETHERCOTE

is ſtyled "a village" by Mr. Burton[1]; and is ſtill diſtinguiſhed, by ſuch as diſcriminate accurately, from the very nearly adjoining one of Newton Burguilon; elſe a cuſtom has been prevailing, and an inſtance will ſoon be given above two centuries old, of blending the two names into the appellation Newton-Nethercote.

In 1364, William de Charnells had liberty of free warren in Nethercote[2].

Nov. 22, 1611, ſir Thomas Humfrey, of Swepſton, conveyed to alderman William Cockayne the manor of Nethercote, with all lands, courts, &c. to it belonging, and all other his hereditaments in Nethercote and Newton, except a chief rent of 2*s.* out of lands of Robert Burgerland, of Newton[3].

In 1631, Mr. Burton deſcribed it as "belonging to Mr. Charles Cockaine[4]." And in June 1656, the ſaid Charles, then viſcount Cullen, conveyed to Bryan his ſon and heir apparent the manors of Swepſton and Nethercote, with every thing comprized in his purchaſes from ſir T. Humphrey of 1611 and 1621[5].

The act mentioned in p. 1037, for diviſion of the Charnells eſtate, ſtyles the three manors Snareſton, Swepſton, and Newton-Nethercote, or Newton ſimply.

NEWTON BURGUILON, OR BURGULAND; NEWTON BOTILER, ſo ſtyled from the Burguilons and Botillers, its early lords, and ſometimes alſo called Newton juxta Swebſton, is a conſiderable hamlet belonging to the pariſh of Swebſton.

Half a ploughland in Newtone was held by Gledwin under Henry de Ferieres. One plough was in the demeſne, with one bordar, and two acres of meadow. Roger held one ploughland of Henry in the ſame manor. This was worth two ſhillings[6].

In the Teſta de Nevill, compiled about 1240, we find noticed, "In Newton Botiler una carucata, in Newbolt Botiler[7] una carucata[8]."

In 1277, on an inquiſition then taken, it appeared that the holders of lands and tenements in Newton ought to come to the view of frank-pledge at the court of Congeſton, by reaſon of their lying in that liberty; and that they withdrew themſelves of their own accord, in the time when William Moton was under age[9].

In 1312, John de Langvile held half a knight's fee in Swebſton and Newton of John de Haſtinges ſenior, deceaſed; and John de Haſtinges junior, ſon and heir of the aforeſaid John, was then aged 26[10].

In 1315, John de Harecourt held the moiety of one knight's fee in Newton of Guy de Beauchamp earl of Warwick, deceaſed[11].

In 1346, John Burgelon and Ralph le Botiller (on the aid then granted for knighting Edward of Woodſtock, the king's eldeſt ſon,) were aſſeſſed 10*s.* for a quarter of one knight's fee in Newton Botiler, parcel of the honour of Tutbury[12].

In 1348, Laurence de Haſtings, at his death, held the moiety of one knight's fee, with the appurtenances, in Newton and Swebſton (which Nicholas Charnels held), value 100*s.* of the earl of Pembroke[13].

Feb. 3, 1363-4, king Edward III. granted to John de Charnels, clerk, and his heirs, liberty of free-warren in all their demeſne lands at Newton Boteler[14].

In 1375, John de Haſtings earl of Pembroke, at his death, held the moiety of one knight's fee in Schepſton, Swebſton, and Newton, which John de Langvile held[15].

In 1443, William Babthorpe, at his death, was ſeiſed of certain lands in Newton Burgulon[16].

The poſſeſſions of the abbot and convent of St. Mary de Pratis at Leiceſter are thus noticed in their Regiſters:

"Habemus ibidem, ex dono Willielmi filii Willielmi de Charneles, quoddam meſſuagium, cum omnibus pertinentiis ſuis, in villâ de Newton juxta Swepſton; illud ſcilicet quod Thomas le Champiun aliquando tenuit; & IX acras terre, quorum III acre jacent in culturâ que vocatur Wudelondes, III acre in culturâ que vocatur Othul, & III acre in culturâ que vocatur juxta Wudeweye; que reddebant xis̃.

Robertus Cer' tenet in Nethercote[17] unum meſſagium & 1 virgatam terre.

Johannes Humfrey tenet in Newton[17] 1 toftum & 1 cotagium & 1 acram terre into ye Wodwey[18].

Dominus Nicholaus Charnel tenet unam culturam in dominico, ex occidentali parte de Newton, que vocatur Coupe Wodlandes.

Item tenet aliam culturam que vocatur Croft furlong, & jacet juxta campum de Snarſton prope brueram, & eſt in manu tenentium de Snarſton.

Et ſciendum quod illi qui antiquitùs tenebant omnia predicta reddebant abbati Leyc' xis̃. per annum[19]."

John Oneby, ſon of John Oneby, of Oadby, was ſettled at Newton Burguland in or before 1585; in which year his eldeſt ſon's baptiſm is entered in the Swebſton Regiſter; and I truſt that I ſhall be pardoned for introducing a copious genealogy of his deſcendants[20].

May 23, 1594, George Purefoy, eſq. at his death[21], was ſeiſed of the manor of Whelleſborough, with its appurtenances in Newton, Nethercote[22].

March 12, 1596, Jocoſa Pureſoy, widow, at her death, was ſeiſed of certain lands in Newton[22] Nethercote[23].

By an inquiſition taken at Lutterworth, Sept. 17, 1603, it was found that Robert Abney, at his death, was ſeiſed of one meſſuage and 80 acres of land, meadow, and paſture, in Newton Burguland, held of the king in capite, by knight's ſervice; that he died Dec. 20, 1602; and that Thomas Abney, his ſon and heir, was then aged 18 years[24].

A family of the name of Saliſbury ſeem to have reſided and had lands here many years ago. Richard Saliſbury, who married Elizabeth daughter of Robert Burgiland (or Burguilon), of Newton Burguland, was living here, and had many children, in 1619; whoſe pedigree and arms were allowed by Camden, Clarenceux king at arms[25].

The freeholders at Newton Burguland in 1630 were, George Clare, Thomas Abney, gent. and Henry Biddle.

By the act mentioned p. 1037, the manor of Newton, with 257 acres, 3 roods, 26 perches, of the lands late of Nicholas Charnel, eſq. belong now, in purſuance of Alicia-Dorothea Charnel's will, to the daughters of Samuel Madden, eſq.

Newton, with Nethercote, contains full 1100 acres.

---

[1] P. 196.

[2] Cart. 38 Edw. III. n. 20.

[3] Mr. D. Baxter's ſchedule, p. 2.

[4] Burton, MS.

[5] Schedule, ut ſupra, p. 3.

[6] "Gleduuinus tenet de H[enrico de Ferieres] in Neutone dimidiam carucatam terræ. In dominico eſt 1 caruca, cum bordario, & 2 acris prati.—Rogerus tenet de H. 1 carucatam terræ in eadem villâ. Valet 2 ſolidos." Domeſday, fol. 233. b. 1.

[7] Burton has no Newbold Boteler.—Newbold in Weſt Goſcote and Newbold Verdon are neither of them far off Newton Boteler; about ſix miles each. And as, in Teſta de Nevill, Neubolt Butiler is followed by Wodeſcote, the Houtons (Quatremars, and Saucee), Wo'rinton, Staunton Harel, Bredon, all (ſo Mr. Wolferſtan conceives, but ſee p. 1130. as to Wodeſcote) adjoining, it ſeems likely to be the firſt of thoſe two Newbolds, which lies in the midſt of, at leaſt, the five laſt places, and forms a part of the pariſh of Bredon. See p. 702. This, from the near vicinity of Overton Saucey, might have been thought to be what was ſometimes called Newbold Saucey, had we not already found the village ſo diſtinguiſhed under Ouſton pariſh in Gartre.

[8] See vol. I. p. xlvii.

[9] Eſch. 6 Edw. I. N° 98. Leic.

[10] Eſch. 6 Edw. II. N° 56. Leic.

[11] Eſch. 9 Edw. II. N° 71. Leic.

[12] Rot. Aux. 20 Edw. III.

[13] Eſch. 22 Edw. III. N° 47. Leic.

[14] Cart. 38 Edw. III. N° 20. Leic.

[15] Eſch. 49 Edw. III. pars 1. N° 40.

[16] Eſch. 22 Hen. VI.

[17] Here Nethercote and Newton are diſtinguiſhed.

[18] The Wodland, a hamlet of Over Seale. See p. 1131.

[19] Charyte's Rentale, fol. cxiii.

[20] See their Pedigree, pp. 1037, 1038; that of Maſon, p. 1039; and the Cradocks, pp. 1149, 1150.

[21] Eſch. 36 Eliz.

[22] Here the names are conjoined.

[23] Eſch. 39 Eliz.

[24] Eſch. 1 Jac. I.

[25] See before, under Ravenſton, p. 940.

SNARESTON,

antiently called Snarkeſton, ſtandeth upon the edge of Derbyſhire, 9 miles diſtant from Atherſton, 11 from Burton, 10 from Tamworth, 7 from Market Boſworth, 15 from Hinckley, and 16 from Leiceſter. It is in the hundred of Sparkenhoe; and part of the lordſhip is within the pariſh of Swebſton, and part in Shakerſton.

Robert Deſpenſer held, at the general ſurvey, one ploughland in Snarchetone, which lay waſte. The ſoc of this land belonged to the manor of Shakerſton[1].

William de Cantalupe about the year 1240 gave 20*s*. of yearly rent to the priory of Studley, in Warwickſhire, iſſuing out of certain lands in Snarkeſton, held of him by Ralph de Charnells[2]. This indicates as if the Haſtings family had Barwell, with its dependency, Snareſton, by their match with Cantalupe. Burton, who had good means of knowing, ſays they had their neighbour-manor, Dadlington, before that match, even in Henry the Second's time.

William de Appleby about 1260 gave certain lands in Snarkeſton, together with his body for ſepulture, to the nunnery of Poleſworth in Warwickſhire; and the lands were confirmed to them by William Charnells and Clementia his wife[3], who inherited to Appleby.—[The very circumſtance of confirming Appleby's grant is in itſelf a ſtrong proof of what the next deed directly aſſerts, that Clementia was ſiſter to a William de Appelby. It was probably a William de Charnells at leaſt one generation later who married Bereford's heir, whoſe name too in Burton is Petronilla. And in the oppoſite column Edward (q. Edmund?) Bereford, under the earl of Pembroke, is the Snareſton owner as late as 1346, while William and Clementia are parties to this ſuit, (ſee note 5,) in 44 Hen. III. 1260.]

Robert de Motun gave alſo to the ſame nunnery ſome other lands in this lordſhip[4].

"Willielmus de Appelby, frater Clementie, uxoris Willielmi de Charnells, nihil capit pro aſſiſâ ſuâ verſus abbatiſſam de Polleſworth, de unâ virgatâ & quintâ parte terre in Snareſton. Et poſtea venerunt predicti Willielmus & Clementia, & offerunt domino regi unam marcam pro habend' juratores xxiv, ad convincendum xii^{m} priores. Et recipitur per plegium Hugonis Charnell, & Mathei de Sadington. Poſt venit predictus Willielmus & retrãvit ſe. Ideo ipſe committatur gaole & plegii in omnia. Poſt venit predictus Willielmus, & finem fecit pro ſe & plegiis pro 20s̃. per plegium Ricardi de Eſſeby & Roberti de Brentingthorpe[5]."

"Sciant preſentes, &c. quod ego Hugo filius Reginaldi de Snarketonâ, dedi, &c. Roberto filio Roberti Wimundi de Snarketonâ, cum Roeſiâ filiâ meâ, in liberum maritagium, unum toftum in Snarketonâ; illud ſcilicet quod Lecca filia Ede tenuit; & in crofto adjacente unam rodam terre, ſcilicet tertiam partem totius crofti; & in Brevi Forlong unam acram, & in parvo campo juxta viam de Boreſworthe unam dimidiam acre, & apud Wakelone unam dimidiam acre in eodem campo; & in magno campo unam dimidiam acram juxta viam molendini, & unam dimidiam acram in illâ culturâ que vocatur Underbenche; & unam dimidiam acram in aliâ culturâ que vocatur Upebenche; & unam rodam que ſe extendit in croftum Henrici Nicol. His teſtibus; dño Leodegario ſacerdote, Willielmo filio Ricardi de Meaſham, Nicholao de Norton, Adâ Staake de Snarkeſton, Warino Buche, & multis aliis[6]."

"Sciant, &c. Matildis de Snarkeſtonâ, filia Walteri de Snarkeſtonâ, in liberâ viduitate meâ, dedi, &c. Simoni de Bereford & heredibus ſuis, paſturam in campis de Snarkiſton Suthewell, quam etiam dñs Philippus de Snarkiſtonâ, frater meus, de me tenuit; & quandam culturam ad capud ville verſus Meiſham, vocatam Welleflat, & totam illam terram quam habuit de Philippo fratre meo. Teſtibus; dño Radulfo de Ray, Roberto de Barton, Olivero Stake, Hugone Concheſton, Ricardo de Pickford, Waltero de Bereford, Rogero de Campo clerico, & multis aliis[7]."

In the Itinerary of 1280, Snareſton, Shakerſton, Newton, Appleby Parva, and Oddeſton, anſwered collectively as one vill.

This manor, held of the honour of Tutbury, did ſometimes belong, either all, or the greateſt part, to the antient family of Bereford, who bare, Argent, cruſuly, fitché, three fleurs de lis Sable. They therefore do wrong that uſurp this coat, and bear it by the name of Beresford. They perhaps will ſay, that Bereford and Beresford is all one name; and that the s in the middle of the word is left out euphoniæ gratiâ: but it is not ſo; for Bereford taketh his name of a manor in the county of Warwick called Bereford; and bare this coat, as by their antient ſeals, glaſs windows, and monuments, will be proved. But Beresford, commonly called Basford, took the name of a town in Nottinghamſhire[8], near unto Derbyſhire, antiently written Beresford, but commonly called Basford, who bare, Sable, three dancing bears Or, as appeareth by a Viſitation made by Robert Glover, Somerſet, in 1583. Of this houſe of Bereford was William de Bereford, one of the juſtices of the Common Pleas, 34 Henry III. and ſir William de Berefotd, knight, chief juſtice of the Common Pleas 18 Edward II.

In 1312, it was found that ſir Simon de Bereford held one quarter of a knight's fee in Snarkeſton of John de Haſtinges, ſenior, deceaſed; that Geoffry Stak and others his partners held a quarter of a knight's fee there of John de Haſtinges, ſenior, deceaſed; and that John de Haſtinges, junior, was the ſon and heir of the aforeſaid John, and then aged 26[9].

In 1346, the earl of Pembroke and Edward Bereford (on the aid then granted for knighting Edward of Woodſtock, the king's eldeſt ſon) were aſſeſſed 10*s*. for a quarter of a knight's fee in Snarkeſton, parcel of the fee of Tutbury[10].

In 1354, William de Clynton earl of Huntingdon, at his death, held the view of frankpledge at Snarkeſton in right of Julian his wife, and of the inheritance of Laurence de Haſtings late earl of Pembroke[11].

"It appeareth by an inquiſition taken 30 Edw. III. after the death of ſir Roger Hillary, knt. chief juſtice of the common pleas, that the ſaid ſir Roger then died ſeiſed of ſix meſſuages, two carucates of land, and 32 acres of meadow, within this manor, held of John Charnells of Snarkeſton, by the delivery of a roſe yearly[12]. Whereby I ſhould gather that the anceſtors of ſir Roger Hillary, who bore, Argent, cruſuly fitché three fleurs de lis Sable, a border Gules, had theſe arms from Bereford lord of Snarkeſton (whoſe heir was married to Charnels), who bore the ſame coat without the border. This ſir Roger Hillary and his ſon ſir Roger lie buried in Walſall church, co. Stafford, where in the year 1613 I ſaw both their monuments. That of ſir Roger Hillary the father ſtandeth between two pillars betwixt the North aile of the church and the chancel; it is of blue marble, raiſed from the ground, inlaid and compaſſed with plates of braſs, whereon is graven the coat of Hillary, and, Argent, two talbots paſſant Gules, with this epitaph circumſcribed,

---

[1] "Robertus Diſpenſator tenet 1 carucatam terræ in Snarcheſtone. Hæc. vaſta eſt. Soca jacet ad ſupraſcriptam villam [i. e. Sacreſtone.]" Domeſday, fol. 234 b. 1.

[2] Dugdale's Warwickſhire, vol. II. p. 745

[3] Vid. autog. penes Fr. Netherſole, mil. Dugdale's Warwickſhire, vol. II. p. 1108.

[4] Pat. 21 Ric. II. p. 2. m. 10.

[5] Placita apud Leic', anno 44 Hen. III. coram Johanne de Verdon & Gilberto de Preſton, in Receptu Scaccarii, Rot. 1.

[6] From the MS collection of Mr. Roper. See the ſeal, Plate CXXXVI. fig. 42.

[7] From the ſame collection.

[8] Burton, p. 262. On this paſſage Mr. Picard, of York, has quoted in his copy of Burton, "Bernardus non vidit omnia (a phraſe of Mr. Burton, p. 317). The family of Beresford of Derbyſhire took the name from Beresford, a townſhip in the pariſh of Alſtonefield in Staffordſhire, near Aſhbourne in Derbyſhire, of which they were lords in the time of William the Conqueror, alſo of Newton and Bentley. Beresford was ſold in the year 1724, or thereabouts, to Oſborne, who ſold it to my lord Aſton. Bentley and Newton continued in the family in 1770."

[9] Eſch. 6 Edw. II. N° 56. Leic.

[10] Rot. Aux. 20 Edw. III.

[11] Eſch. 28 Edw. III. N° 59. Leic.

[12] Eſch. 30 Edw. III. n. 53.

"Icy ſont entoumes monſieur Roger Hillarye jadis cheif juſtice del Cōmon Bank, et Katherine[1] ſa feme jadis noſme, Dieu de lour almes eit mercy et piete.
Che pur lour almes Pater Noſter, et Ave Marie dira, ſiz vint jours de pardon avera."

"The tomb of ſir Roger Hillary the ſon (who died 1403, 4 Hen. IV.) ſtandeth between two South pillars in the body of the church, whereon is his proportion in armour, neatly cut out, leaning his head on one of his hands lifting upward on his elbow, with one of his legs riſing anſwerably thereto. Upon his ſhield on the left arm, and on his body, are the arms of Hillary painted, whereon there is no epitaph or writing.

"I have been the willinger to expreſs this monument, to vindicate it from an error of the inhabitants there, who term it to be of one ſir Hillary Moſley; which began upon this occaſion, for that one Mr. Moſley, a gentleman ſometime dwelling in that pariſh about the reign of Henry VI. (as I take it) gave a dole to the inhabitants of the pariſh, to be diſtributed yearly amongſt them in this manner, viz. to every perſon (as I remember) of every houſehold within the ſaid pariſh a penny, which yet continueth and is performed to this day, and is called Moſley's dole. And this tomb of ſir Roger Hillary the younger they would have to be of this Moſley[2]."

That theſe Hillarys were a younger branch of the Bereſords ſeems very probable, both from their arms and the tenure of their lands here; to which may be added the following deed for a further confirmation[3]:

"Omnibus, &c. Henricus de Bereford, parſona eccleſie de Corſon, ſalutem. Sciatis me relaxâſſe Edmundo de Bereford, militi, totum jus, &c. quod habeo in maneriis de Langley & Wiſhaw, & in certis terris in Wiginehill & alibi, in comitatu Warwic', &c. In cujus, &c. ſigillum meum appoſui. Et quia ſigillum meum pluribus eſt incognitum, ſigillum Rogeri Hillary nepotis mei apponi procuravi[4]. Teſtibus; dominis Simone de Bereforde, Milone de Beauchampe, Jacobo de Audeleigh, militibus; Rogero Hillary, &c. Datum apud Chaucombe, 1 Edw. III." 1327[5].

In 1375, John de Haſtings earl of Pembroke, at his death, held a quarter of a knight's fee, with the appurtenances, in Snarkeſton, which Simon de Bereford had held; alſo a quarter of one knight's fee in Snarkeſton, which Geffry Stake and his partners had held[6].

In 1387, Baldwin Frevill, knight, at his death, held divers lands at Snarkeſton, which the earl of Pembroke had held[7].

In 1402, Roger Hillary, ſon and heir of the chief juſtice, died ſeiſed (jointly with Margaret his wife then living) of ſix meſſuages, two carucates of land, and 32 acres of meadow, with the appurtenances, in Snarkeſton, held of the heir of John Charnels, by the ſervice of one roſe per annum[8]. He left two daughters, coheirs; Elizabeth, married to William de la Planche; and Joan, the wife of Rochford; whoſe heirs, in 1411, making partition of his eſtate, all his land here and at Barrow and Sutton (with much more in other counties) were allotted to Elizabeth lady Clinton (daughter to William de la Planche and Elizabeth his wife), who was widow to John lord Clinton, and died without iſſue[9].

In 1418, Baldwin Freville, knight, died ſeiſed of certain lands in Snarkeſton, which the earl of Pembroke ſome time held[10].

In 1420, Thomas Corbet, of Legh, died ſeiſed of certain lands in Snarkeſton[11]; of which Roger Corbet and Amicia his wife had made a ſettlement, together with the manor of Sibbeſdon, and that of Arley, co. Warwick, in 2 Edw. III.[12]. And it was probably theſe, or a part of them, that William Greſley, eſq. afterwards knight, ſettling them on his four natural ſons 10 Feb. 1509, calls his rents and ſervices in Snareſton, bought by him from John Corbet of Lee, co. Salop[13]. Theſe lands might be included in that Greſeley's land which Humphry Dethick held in 17 Eliz.[14]; but John Greſley, knt. appears a landholder in a Snareſton court-roll of 49 Hen. VI.

In 1423, Elizabeth lady Clinton died ſeiſed of three meſſuages and three carucates of land, with the appurtenances, in Snarkeſton and Barwe upon Sore, held of the abbeſs of Poleſworth[15].

In 1458, it was found that Thomas Ferrers, eſq. died ſeiſed of a third part of three knights fees and an half in Snarkeſton, Conynſton, Shakerſton, Odleſton, Barton, Sutton juxta Boſſeworth, Stapleton, Leyre, Wyſtowe, and Flekney, which the heirs of the earl of Pembroke held; that the ſaid Thomas held the ſame of the heirs of Thomas Ferrers, junior, eſq. ſon and heir of Elizabeth, one of the ſiſters and heirs of Baldwin Freville, junior, &c. wife of the ſaid Thomas,

---

[1] She was daughter to ſir William Breton, knt. of Wolvardington, now Wolverton, alſo of Wolſton, Baſcote, Stretton ſuper Foſs, all in co. Warwick, who bore for his arms the ſaid talbots. Dugd. War. vol. I. pp. 35, 347, 599; and vol. II. p. 655.

[2] Burton, MS. In Mr. Shaw's Staffordſhire, vol. II. p. 78, only one of theſe tombs is noticed; and there is a ſlight variation in the inſcription.

[3] Cart. 1 Edw. III. per Inſpeximus.

[4] If a man or woman had not his or her ſeal in readineſs, or no ſeal of their own, they would ſometimes cauſe the ſeal of ſome other perſon to be affixed to their deed. So in a charter referred to by Du Freſne, 1117, "ſed quia nondum comes Galfridus proprium habebat ſigillum, hoc nobis in ſigillo comitis Stephani confirmavit." And in another, 1226, "Et quia miles non eram, et proprium ſigillum non habebam quando hanc conceſſionem fecimus, autoritate ſigilli domini patris mei cartam iſtam ſigillavimus." Thus here at home, Reginald Fitz-Ethew, of Eſthall, teſtifies, that becauſe he had not his own in readineſs, he had borrowed a ſeal from ſir Pagan de Mubray, with which he had ſealed that preſent writing. If their own ſeal was either wholly unknown, or not well known, or the grantor's quality or condition mean and obſcure, the conveyances were uſually ratified under the authentic ſeal of ſome public officer or corporation thus: "Quia ſigillum meum penitùs eſt ignotum, ſigillum Officialis de N. apponi procuravi." "—Sub ſigillo Caſtro Norwici, quod eſt ſigillum vicecomitis comitatûs predicti perpetuum, et auctorizatum et cognitum per totam comitatum *."—At the time of the foundation of Corpus Chriſti college (commonly called Ben'et), in the Univerſity of Cambridge, we find them in that year requeſting the mayor of the corporation to ſet his ſeal for them, as better known †. If they thought it more ſecurity and a better confirmation of what they did, they would ſometimes alſo uſe their own ſeal, and ſome other ſeal that was better known, which was commonly the ſeal of ſome public office, as of a Rural Deanery, Officiality, &c. or of ſome Corporation, with an atteſtation of the officer, mayor, &c. that it was his ſeal of office. Thus Margery Shakyll, 1449, atteſts her releaſe of the manors of Borſtal, &c. "In cujus rei teſtimonium preſenti ſcripto ſigillum meum appoſui; et quia ſigillnm meum quampluribus eſt incognitum, ideo ſigillum majoratûs ville Oxon. preſentibus apponi procuravi." (And then follows the mayor's atteſtation, &c.) ‡—Mary Fountaine, of Melroſs, within the pariſh of Roxborough, in that part of Great Britain called Scotland, widow, makes a letter of attorney to Charles Wilkinſon, writer, dated April 2, 1746, under her hand and ſeal. "And becauſe my ſeal to many is unknown, I have therefore procured Doctor John Rotherford, of Faldonſide, one of his majeſty's juſtices of the peace for the ſaid ſhire, to certify the execution thereof under his hand and ſeal." And he makes his certificate accordingly.—Sometimes one ſeal was ſet for two perſons; and ſometimes the witneſſes have ſet their ſeals, as they uſed heretofore to put the ſign of the croſs, to their names. The order in affixing the ſeals generally was, that the ſeal of the perſon named firſt in the charter was placed next to the beginning of the lines, and ſo the other ſeals of the ſeveral parties in order, from the left to the right; though ſometimes this order was not exactly obſerved. If there were three ſeals, that of the worthieſt perſon is ſometimes placed in the middle §.

[5] Dugdale, Warwickſhire, vol. II. p. 921; ex autographo, penès Geo. Pudſey, de Langley, co. Warw. gen.

[6] Eſch. 49 Edw. III. Pars 1. N° 40.

[7] Eſch. 11 Ric. II. N° 27. Leic.

[8] Eſch. 4 Hen. IV. N° 36. Leic.

[9] Eſch. 3 Hen. VI.

[10] Eſch. 6 Hen. V. N° 47. Leic.

[11] Eſch. 8 Hen. V. N° 45. Leic.

[12] Leiceſterſhire Collections, p. 1185, ex Ped. Finium diverſ. com. Edw. III. L. 1. n. 22. Dugd. Warw. vol. I. pp. 103, 104.

[13] Seile original. Greſley Chartulary, p. 60.

[14] See p. 1036.

[15] Eſch. 2 Hen. VI. N° 36. Leic.

* Madox, Firma Burgi, p. 155.

† Maſters's Hiſtory of C. C. C. C. p. 8.

‡ Kennett's Parochial Antiquities, p. 662.

§ Lewis's Diſſertation on the Antiquity and Uſe of Seals in England, 1740; and Madox's Diſſertation, p. xxviii.

[ſenior,] as parcel of the caſtle and manor of Tamworth, co. Warwick[1].

"In this town was antiently another manor and a court-leet, which in the time of Henry III. belonged to Henry lord Haſtings. It is now (1630) the inheritance of Mr. Thomas Falconer, a true lover and ſearcher of Antiquities[2]."

When Burton ſpeaks of "another manor" (meaning, we may ſuppoſe, another than that which ſometime belonged to Bereford), antiently belonging to Haſtings, he is not maſter of the ſubject. It is plain from what appears in theſe pages, 1043, 1044[3], as well as from the court-rolls quoted under Swepſton, that there was no other, principal, manor in Snareſton but that of the Haſtings family, a member of that of Barwell, and the paramount ſeignory under which both Bereford and all the reſt held. Stake's ſhare came to the Charnells family; and at the Views of Frank-pledge cum M' Curiâ, for Snareſton, of John Stareſmore, eſq. by reaſon of non-age of Thomas ſon of Launceline Grey, 33 and 34 Hen. VIII. Walter Charnell, gent. for Stake's land is preſented as a freeholder. The like (as ſaid in Swepſton) at Thomas Grey's own court in 36 Hen. VIII.; and at the before mentioned court-baron in 1558, the verdict finds that the ſaid Walter, who held of the lord Stake's land by a fourth part of a fee (the exact quantity found in 1312 and 1375), died ſince the preceding court, and that a relief of 25*s*. is due[4]. Bereford's quarter of a fee coming alſo to the Charnells by marriage, that family, at an early period probably, exerciſed manerial privileges, but ſtill in ſubordination to thoſe of Haſtings; for the words "Roll' curie Jocoſe Charnells vid', 19 Edw. 4^{ti}"—followed by extracts from ſuch rolls, appear on the back of a paper which has for title, "Snarkeſton Mannor. Rentale Thome Falconer gen' & Elizabethe uxoris ejus, relicte Ed̄ri Charnells armig', in jure Thome Charnells filii & heredis dicti Ed̄ri in cuſtodiâ d̄ni Regis ratione minoris ætatis, manerii ac cert' terr', &c. fact' & renovat' 29 Oct. 4to Caroli[5]." Agreeably to which, William Charnell, eſq. in Oct. 1581, after his marriage with Merryall daughter of Edward Arden of Park Hall, ſettles on the ſaid Merryall, and on Edward his ſon and heir apparent, his manor of Snareſton[6]. Some court-rolls of rather earlier date than thoſe above-named of Jocoſa Charnells have this ſtyle, "Vis Franci Pleg' cum parvâ Curiâ tent' apud Snarkeſton," but without the lord's name. At one of theſe courts, 7 Edw. IV. Margeta Charnell is eſſoigned; and in 9 and 10 ejuſd. and 49[7] Hen. VI. William Charnels, eſq. with John Greſley, knt. Thomas Shyrley, eſq. and others. The earlieſt extant court-roll of the Greys is that of the "Snareſton Viſ' Franc' Thome Grey armig', 20 Nov. 23 Hen. VII.[8]

The title to the manor and court leet, which Burton ſays was in 1630 the inheritance of Falconer, is derived in the following way. The eſtate of the Dethicks of Newhall, who were found (ſee p. 1036) to hold of the lord of Barwell and Snareſton, in 17 Eliz., the ſite of the manor in Snareſton, with Greſeley's land, came to the D'arcys. Edward ſon and heir of ſir Robert D'arcy of Kent, knt. April 1, 1632, conveyed the manor of Snarkeſton, with the appurtenances, and divers lands, to Henry Ireton of Addenborough, co. Notts. gent. Henry Ireton and Jane his mother enfeoffed Thomas Falconer Nov. 26, 1637[9].

Jan. 1, 1634, Thomas Falconer enfeoffed Samuel Mould and Anne his wife, and the heirs of Anne, of a meſſuage and croft in Snareſton, in the pariſh of Shackerſton, and of lands parcel of the ſaid premiſes, in Snareſton in the pariſh of Swepſton, to be holden, the meſſuage and croft of ſir Richard Roberts, knt. as of his manor of Barwell, by knight's ſervice, and the lands, commons, &c. of the king, in ſocage, by fealty only, and not in capite, and by the rent of 4*d*.[10] After his purchaſe from Ireton, Falconer exerciſed the manerial juriſdiction mentioned by Burton; and on Oct. 25, 1641, was held, for Snareſton manor, the View of Frank-pledge and Court-baron of Thomas Falconer, gent.[11]

April 30, 1647, Oſwold Randoll and Rachael his wife, in conſideration of 50*l*. conveyed to Thomas Charnells the manor of Snarkeſton, capital meſſuage late in poſſeſſion of Elizabeth Falconer, widow (who however lived 30 years longer), and all their lands, &c. in Snareſton; and William Falconer of Glaiſton, co. Rutland, gent. Sept. 22, 1648, releaſed to the ſame the equity of redemption[12]. And Thomas Charnells, as we have ſeen, buying-in alſo lord Cullen's manerial rights in Swepſton 1660, and the paramount-claims of the lord of Barwell 1662, his family ſeem ever ſince to have been conſidered as undiſputed lords of the manors throughout the pariſh.

At the end of the ſchedule of evidences repeatedly quoted, is noted a "Bundle of deeds relative to the manor of Ruſhall, Mr. Varnham's eſtate." This, with our preſent information, is not very intelligible.

The freeholders at Snareſton in 1630 were, William Biddle, John Sharpe, and John Orton.

In 1722, nine freeholders polled from Snareſton, and eight in 1775.

Nicholas Charnell, eſq. who died in 1779, poſſeſſed of the manor of Snareſton, and of the greater part of the lands within the lordſhip, left three nieces, coheirs; 1. Elizabeth-Catharine, married to the Rev. Dudley Charles Ryder, ſecond ſon of the archbiſhop of Tuam; 2. Alicia-Dorothea Charnel; 3. Anna-Maria; of whom the youngeſt died in January 1793, the ſecond in January 1794, and Mrs. Ryder March 1795. By the ſettlements and act mentioned p. 1037, Snareſton manor, and upwards of 215 acres of the lands, belong now to Samuel Madden, eſq. and Mrs. Leſlie equally. By an after-agreement, colonel Leſlie took the old manor houſe, Snareſton Hall, though he has never reſided there. Mr. Madden meanwhile enlarged a farm houſe into a very commodious manſion, which he called Snareſton Lodge. Its demeſne contains about 100 acres of choice land, in capital condition, well watered and fenced; the houſe in perfect repair; with a productive garden-ground, and neat ſhrubbery.

That part of Snareſton in Swepſton pariſh is about 650 acres.

By the Return to Parliament in 1801, Snareſton contained 62 inhabited houſes, and 2 uninhabited; 163 males, 161 females; in all 324; of whom 71 were chiefly employed in agriculture, and 35 in trade, manufactures, &c.

The CHAPEL (ſee Plate CXXXVI.)

is dedicated to St. Bartholomew.

In the Matriculus of 1220, the church of Snarkeſton is deſcribed, under the deanery of Sparkenhoe, as a chapel of Swebſton. It then paid to Simon rector of Cateby [the rural dean of Sparkenhoe] two ſhillings at Michaelmas; had a reſident chaplain, ſupplied from the mother church; and was entitled to chriſma & oleum as being within the deanery of Sparkenhoe; and had the privilege of ſepulture, & omnia ſacramentalia[13].

"Hæc ſcuta 1580 in eccleſiâ Snarkeſton manebant; ſed paucos poſt annos evaneſcebant[14]."

Or, three chevrons Gules; Clare earl of Glouceſter. Plate CXXXVI. fig. 1.

---

[1] Eſch. 37 Hen. VI.

[2] Burton, MS.

[3] See particularly the quoted inquiſitions of 1312, 1375.

[4] Snareſton court-rolls.

[5] Among ſaid court-rolls.

[6] Mr. D. B's Charnells-ſchedule, p. 1.

[7] The 49 Hen. VI. (extending from about 6 Oct. 1470 to about 11 April, 1471,) co-inciding with the laſt five months of the 10th and the firſt month of the 11th of Edw. IV. See, among other inſtances, the date of the ſealed inſtrument of Baldewyn Mountford, knt. & preſt, Dugdale's Warwickſhire, vol. II. p. 1011.

[8] Snareſton court-rolls.

[9] Charnells-ſchedule, pp. 18, 13.

[10] Ibid. p. 33.

[11] Snareſton court-rolls.

[12] Charnells-ſchedule, p. 14.

[13] See the Introductory Volume, p. lviii.

[14] Wyrley, MS. Theſe arms, Mr. Burton tells us, were almoſt all beaten down in 1622.

2. Or, a maunch Gules; Haſtings earl of Pembroke.

3. Gules, a feſs between ſix croſs croſslets Or, 3. and 3. Beauchamp earl of Warwick.

4. Azure, ſemé de fleur de lis, a lion rampant guardant Argent; Holland.

5. Azure, a croſs engrailed Or; Charnells of Elmſthorpe.

6. The ſame, with a label Gules; Charnells of Snareſton.

7. Argent, three garbs Azure; Sheveſby.

8. Argent, cruſuly fitché, three fleurs de lis Sable; Bereford.

9. Charnells, impaling Gules, two bars Or; Harcourt.

10. Charnells of Snareſton (with the label); impaling Sheveſby.

11. Charnells of Snareſton (with the label); impaling, Ermine, a feſs checquy, Or and Azure; Arden.

12. Argent, fretty Gules, on each joint a bezant; Truſſel; impaling Charnells.

13. Quarterly, Charnells and Bereford; impaling, 1. Argent, a ſaltire Sable; 2. Argent, an annulet Gules, between three martlets Sable; Caverſham.

14. Charnells; impaling, Sable, a croſs engrailed Or; Ufford.

15. Charnells; impaling, Argent, a feſs between three leopards' faces Sable.

16. Argent, a chevron between three eagles diſplayed Gules; impaling Charnells.

The old chapel was in 1747 become ruinous; the eſtimate for re-building was 1145*l*.

The preſent chapel is a ſmall, but neat, brick building; with two bells.

Over the Weſt-door, on the outſide, are the arms of Charnells, and the date 1752.

The ſame arms are alſo on glaſs in the altar-window: the like in the next North one, only in this laſt the croſs is formé, not engrailed, and does not extend to the limb of the ſhield.

A ſmall neat font ſtands on a ſlender wooden pillar.

The Regiſter begins in 1665; when in five years the baptiſms were 9, the burials 8. Theſe numbers are now more than doubled.

MONUMENTAL INSCRIPTIONS.

Mr. Wyrley's MS. preſerves theſe inſcriptions:

"Hic jacent corpora Johanis Charnels armigeri et Margaretæ uxoris ejus et quoque Jocoſæ ſecundæ uxoris; obiit anno Domini 1425, anno quarto Hen. VI. Idem Johannes fieri fecit tectum eccleſiæ, et locum ubi imago Chriſti ſtetit."

On this tomb were the arms above deſcribed in fig. 13; and alſo, Quarterly, Charnells and Sheveſby; impaling Arden.

"Ora pro Johanne Charnell et Johanna uxore ejus."

Charnells impaling Ufford, as in fig. 14.

"Hic . . . . Will'us Charnells, armig' et Jocoſa uxor ejus, anno 1476." 16 Edw. IV.

Charnells with the impalement as fig. 15.

In the preſent chapel are three neat mural tablets:

1. "To the memory of Nicholas Charnell, eſq.
who departed this life Sept. the 15th, 1779,
aged 94 years.
Alſo Anne his wife,
who died March the 7th, 1772, aged 69."

2. "Near this place lieth the body of Anna Maria Charnel, youngeſt daughter of Robert Charnel, of Newton in the county of [Warwick [1].]
She died the 17th day of Jan. 1793, aged 55 years.
Alſo the body of her ſiſter Alicia Dorothea Charnel, ſecond daughter of the ſaid Robert Charnel.
She died the 3d day of January, 1794, aged 60 years [2].
The virtues which adorn retir'd life, and diſtinguiſh
the Chriſtian profeſſion, were eminently poſſeſſed and carefully practiſed by theſe ladies.
Their elder and only ſurviving ſiſter and coheireſs, Eliz. Cath. Ryder, has erected this monument to their memory."

3. "A tribute of affection and gratitude to the memory of Katherine Madden,
wife of Samuel Madden, eſq.
who departed this life
March 7, 1800, aged 40."

Three large ſlabs (beyond which the old chapel extended) in the burial-ground, near the Weſt door, are thus inſcribed:

1. Suſanna, wife of Thomas Charnells, eſq. died 1673.
2. T. C.
3. Elizabeth, wife of Thomas Charnells, eſq. died 4 May, 1696.

On various upright ſtones:

"Beneath this ſtone lieth the body of William Varnam, ſon of George and Hannah Varnam, who on the 16th day of January, 1766,
in the 24th year of his age,
after a moſt ſevere trial of human fortitude,
by the afflicting hand of his heavenly Father,
ſubmitted to Fate;
and, through the power of his redemption,
was tranſlated to the ſaints above.
Surviving friends, lament for me no more;
I'm ſafe arriv'd on the celeſtial ſhore;
Free from all earthly troubles, fears, or pains,
Where everlaſting joy and comfort reign."

"Beneath are depoſited the remains of

Thomas Stevenſon,	Ann, the wife
who departed this life	of Thomas Stevenſon.
the 16th of July, 1793,	She died the 3d of July,
aged 75 years.	1778, aged 59.

Admiring Readers look on tombs, to know
The names of thoſe who lie interr'd below:
Here lie the father, mother, and five ſons,
Whoſe nimble ſand betwixt them ſwiftly runs:
Tho' ſhort their time, yet longer is their reſt;
God, only wiſe, diſpoſes all things beſt.
From earthly trouble now their ſouls are freed,
For whoſe redemption our dear Lord did bleed.
Their wearied limbs no more with fever burn;
From duſt we came—to duſt we muſt return."

"To the memory of Daniel Rice.
It was by his own deſire;
A ſon of Adam, was he not?
The greateſt can't go higher.
What tho' I take my pedigree
From Adam the firſt man;
I hope I ſhall my Saviour ſee,
And ſit at his right hand.
He died Oct. 25, 1786, aged 75."

{ Richard Sharp, died Dec. 14, 1775, aged 67.
{ Elizabeth Sharp, died Sept. 13, 1772, aged 63.

George Varnam, died Jan. 4, 1784, aged 74.

Hannah Varnam, died Oct. 7, 1778, aged 58.

John Wilſon, gent. died June 23, 1738, aged 59.

A ſecond Mr. John Wilſon was buried (by regiſter; no grave-ſtone,) May 21, 1739.

On a ſtone (for a third); John Wilſon died 25 Dec. (Mr. John W. buried 28th, by regiſter) 1748, aged 46.

George Gadſby, died Dec. 22, 1748, aged 70.

At Crich, near Matlock, Derbyſhire: "Hic jacent corpora Johannis Clay & Mariæ primæ uxoris (quondam uxoris . . . . .[3] Charnells de Snareſton), & Margaretæ ſecundæ uxoris, relictæ Germani Pole de Wakebirge, filiæ Edvardi filii Johannis Ferrers de Tamworth militis."

Arms: 1. Argent, a chevron engrailed between three trefoils Sable, Clay; impaling, Sable, a ſaltire engrailed, between four croſs croſslets Or, Calton; fig. 46.

2. Clay, impaling Vairé, Or and Gules, Ferrers of Tamworth[4]; fig. 47.

---

[1] Warwick is the truth; but Stafford is on the marble.

[2] See Gent. Mag. vol. LXIV. p. 91.

[3] Harl. MSS. 6592. 88. The original inſcription, once on a large alabaſter altar-tomb in Crich chancel, of which the above is an epitome, (corrected from the errors of the Harl. MS.) is 'very long, in verſe, from which it appears that' J. Clay's firſt wife Mary was 'daughter of William Calton, eſq. of Calton near Chatſworth, chief cockmatcher and keeper of the hawks to Hen. VIII. and widow of —— Charnell of Snareſton, that he had iſſue by' her 'five children; that he died in May 1602, and Mary 31 Aug. 1583. The inſcription on German Pole and wife, now in the North aile of Crich church,' and dated 1592, ſhews that G. P. died April 19, 1588, and that his wife Margaret Ferrers had no iſſue by either him or Clay. (Adam Wolley, Matlock, to S. P. Wolferſtan, Statfold, 7 May, 1804.)

[4] The Harl. MS. gives the name Nicholas.

PEDIGREE

PEDIGREE of CHARNELLS of SNARESTON.

From the Viſitation of 1619; and another, entered at Boſworth, by Thomas Charnells, March 17, 1681-2.

1. Nicholas Charnells, of Elmſthorpe, &c. (See p. 1049*.)

2. William Charnells, knt. in ſir Nicholas's intail of Bilton, beginning of Edw. I.; of Snareſton, c. Leic. lord of Bedworth, co. Warwick, 28 and 34 E. I. held lands at Sheveſby 1292, at Elmſthorp in 1296. = Clementia, ſiſter of W. de Appleby, had lands in Snareſton, wife to W. Charnells, 1260[1].

3. Ralph Charnells. = . . .

4. Roger Char[s].

William Charnells, of Snareſton, 9 E. II. = Petronell, daughter and heir of ſir Simon de Bereford, of Snareſton.

Henry Charnells, of Bedworth, co. Warwick, 9 Edw. II. = . . .

John[4] Charnells, of Snareſton, 30 Edw. III. from whom Hillary held.

William Charnells, of Snareſton, 20 Edw. III. = Margaret, d. and heir of Sheveſby.

William Charnells, of Bedworth, 20 E III. knt. 23 ejuſd. = Margaret, her ſon's grantee in Bedworth and Corley, in exchange for her manor of Oldcotenhale, 7 R. II.[2]

Margaret Caverſham[5]; 1ſt wife. = John Charnells, died 1425[5], probably ſucceeded by John, heir apparent of Bramcote. = Joice Arden; 2d wi.

1. William Charnells, 46 E. III. 16 R. II. = Margaret, da. and heir of Thos. Grendon, of Bramcote, co. Warwick; in 1411 wife of Thomas Malory; in 7 H. VI. his relict[6].

2. Edmund, died 45 Edw. III.

John Charnells, of Bedworth[3]. = Eliz. a widow 4 H. IV.

John Charnells, of Snareſton, eſq. ſon and heir, his mother's grantee of Bramcote 1428 and 1429[6]. = Joice, da. of Wm. Grevill.

William Charnells, ſold Bramcote 1466[6]; died 1476. = Joice Wood[7], held Snareſton court 1479[8].

Ralph. Richard. Edward. Alice. Joan. Elizabeth. Agnes. Margaret.

. . . . . da of Walter Arden; 1ſt wife. = John Charnells, of Snareſton, 1490, 1496[9]; ſold Sheveſby in 1511.[10] = ...; 2d wife.

John Charnells. = ...

John Charnells = Joan, dau. of T. Walker.

Thomas Charnells.

William Charnells, of Snareſton, ob. 1525[12]. = Joice, daughter of William Grevile[12].

Mary[11]. Dorothy. Agnes.

Walter Charnells, of Snareſton, 33 H. VIII.; died between Oct. 21, 1557, and Oct.-Nov. 1558[3]. = Joan (da. of John Lambert and Joice Sedgwick his wife in a ſettlement), of Oct. 21, 1557[13].

William Charnells, ſon and heir, lord of Snareſton, October 1581[13], ob. circa an. 1620. = Muriell, d. of Edw. Arden, of Parkhall, co. Warwick, eſq.; living June 19, 1613[15].

1. Maria Charnells, wife Oct. 2, 1557[14]; relict, of Hamſted, Nov 9, 1608[15]. = Auguſtine Wirley, younger ſon of W. W. eſq. of Hamſted, co. Staff.[23]; of Nether Seile, c. Leic. 1566; of Harlaſton, c. Staff. Oct. 27, 1567[15].

2. Joice. = John Jaques, of Oddeſton.

George Jaques.

William Wirley, Rougecroix purſuivant at arms, ob. ſ. p. = Dorothy, relict of Gilbert Leighe, of Middleton, co. York[16]; wife of W. Wirley 1608-9[15].

Elizab. da. of Richard Francis, of Tickenhall, co. Derby, 1ſt wife, mar. 1608, ob. ſ. p. = 1. Edward Charnells, of Snareſton, ob. circa an. 1621. = Eliz. da. of Thos. Roper, of Heanor, c. Derby, bu. (at Snareſton) Mar. 28, 1677 2d wife.—Re-married to Tho. Falconer, gent. purchaſer of a manor in Snareſton 1637; dead April 30, 1647.

2. Rob. Charnells, of Aſhby-de-la-Zouch, co. Leiceſter. = . . .

1. Wm. Charnells.

2. John Charnells.

3. Goodyer Charnells, ob. cœlebs.

Frances, married . . . Allen, rector of Botteſford, about 1650.

Grace, married Gabriel Heyward, of Tickenhall, co. Derby.

Muriell, married . . . . Heyward.

Anne, ob. cœlebs.

Nicholas Wilmot, knt. = Dorothy Harpur.

1. Thomas Charnells, of Snareſton, æt. 64, anno 1681, purchaſed all the manors in Snareſton, and that of Swebſton[17]; bu. Jan. 13, 1690. = Suſanna, d. of Nathaniel Hallows, of Derby; di. in 1673, bu Feb. 3.

2. Edward Charnells.

Anne, married Thomas Muxloe, of Snareſton.

Robert Wilmot, eldeſt ſon. = Elizabeth, da & heir of Eardley.

John Wilmot, 4th ſ. = Katharine Barker.

Elizabeth, 3d da. of ſir Nich. Wilmot, of Oſmaſton, c. Derby, kt. by Dorothy his wife, dau. of ſir H. Harpur, of Calke, c. Derby, bart. æt. 7 an. 1662; married April 21, 1681; died in 1696; bur. May 7; 1ſt wife. = 1. Thos. Charnells, of Snareſton, eſq. lord of the manors of Snareſton, Swebſton, and Newton Nethercote, all in the county of Leiceſter; born Nov. 28, 1651, ætat. 30 an. 1681; died 1727; bur. at Snareſton Nov. 21. = ... da. of . . . . Taylor, of . . . . relict of . . . . Cheſelden, M. D. ob. ſ. p. by T. C. 2d w.[18]

2. Nath. Charnells, of Nottingham, æt. 29, an 1681; m. a da. of . . . Gamull, of Nottingh.

3. Edw. Charnells, æt. 27, anno 1681; bur. July 14, 1694.

4. Samuel Charnells, of Emanuel Coll. Camb. B. A. 1676; ob. cœlebs; buried April 1, 1678.

6. William Charnells, æt. 20, anno 1681.

5. John Charnells, æt. 25, anno 1681, of Quarendon, co. Leic. and married there, July 3, 1697, Eliz. Wolferſtan, of Quarendon[19].

Thos. Charnells, bapt. (at Quarendon) Aug. 2, 1698; d. ſ. p.[20]

1. Maria, m. Abr. Bracebridge, of Atherſton, co. Warw. (at Snareſton) June 10, 1672.

2. Eleanor, unm. 1681; b. (at Tamw'th) May 21, 1687.

3. Suſanna, unm 1681, bu. Mar. 6, 1696.

Alice, 2d daughter. See [A] p. *1048.

4. Robert Charnells, of Newton-in-the-Thiſtles, co. Warw. gent. attorney at law, born May 27, 1687; died in Ireland 1744; buried at Killaloe, in that kingdom. = Catharine, you. d. of John Wilmot, of Oſmaſton, co. Derby, by Kath. Barker his wife, ob. July 1738, æt. 27; buried at Newton-in-the-Thiſtles, July 31.

Three daughters. See [B] p. *1048.

1. Dorothy Charnell; bo. 15 May, 1682, mar. Oct. 31, 1704, to T. Muxloe[21], of Swebſton, gent. He died July 19, 1752, æt. 70; ſhe d. Oct. 6, 1754, æt. 73.

2. Thomas Charnell; bo. Jan. 22, 1683; died young; bapt. Feb. 2, buried 25, ſame year.

3. Nicholas Charnel, of Snareſton, eſq. eldeſt ſurviving ſon and heir; born Oct. 2, 1685; lord of the manors of Snareſton, Swebſton, and Newton-Nethercote; marr. Anne, d. of Samuel White, of St. Ives, co. Hunts, who d. March 7, 1772, æt. 69, buried 23, at Snareſton. He died without iſſue Sept. 15, 1779, æt. 94; buried at Snareſton; his three nieces being his heirs.

5. Elizabeth Charnell, b. Mar. 19, buried 20. 1687-8.

6. Samuel Charnells, bo. 9 Dec. bapt. 19, 1689; died unmarried.

7. Edward Charnells, bapt. April 26; bur. May 2, 1692.

1. Thomas, died an infant, 1721.

2. Edward, d. 1732, æt. 12.

Thomas Clare, of Atherſtone, c. War. = 1. Mary Muxloe.

2. Elizabeth, died 1720, æt. 15.

3. Dorothy, died 1716, æt. 8.

4. Barbara, died 1740, æt. 17.

5. Frances, wife of Joſ. Boyer, of Loughboro'.

6. Anne, m. John Everard, of Hether, c. Leic.

7. Martha, died unmarried, 1765, æt. 39

Thomas Clare, M. A. vicar of Manceter, co. Warwick.

Elizabeth, who died young.

Dorothea, wife of Rchard Milnes, of Mancheſter, co. Lancaſter.

Mary, died an infant.

[A]
John Ryder, abp. of Tuam. = Alice Wilmot.

Dudley-Charles Ryder, clerk, of Streamston in Ireland, 2d son of John lord archbishop of Tuam in that kingdom; living 1804. = 1. Elizabetha-Catharina Charnel[22], coheir; b. at Packington, co. Leicester, Oct. 1731; died March 31, 1795.

[B]
Robert Charnells, died 1744. = Catharine Wilmot, died 1738.

1. Elizabetha-Catharina Charnel[22], coheir; b. at Packington, co. Leicester, Oct. 1731; died March 31, 1795.
2. Alicia-Dorothea Charnel, coheir; born at Packington, 19 Feb. 1733-4, d. Jan. 3, 1794, æt. 60; bu. at Snareston.
3. Anna-Maria Charnel, coheir; born, and privately bapt. at Newton-in-the-Thistles, c. Warwick, July 24, 1738; died Jan. 17, 1793; buried at Snareston.

Samuel Madden, of Hilton, in the county of Monaghan in Ireland, esq. living 1804. = 1. Katharine Ryder; born Jan. 7, 1760; married in Ireland Feb. 3, 1781; d. March 7, 1800, æt. 40.

2. Anne Ryder, bo. Apr. 30, 1772; living 1804. = Charles Powell Leslie, esq. of Glasslough, c. Monaghan, M. P. for the county, and colonel of its militia, 1804.

Patrick Brady Blackwood, esq. = Katharine Madden, born Dec. 2, 1781.
John Madden, born Dec. 12, 1782.
Charles Dudley Madden, born Jan. 12, 1784.
Anne. Charlotte.
Alicia-Maria.

Two daughters.

A daughter, 1804.

---

[1] P. 1043, note 5.

[2] Madox, Formul. Angl. N° 209. From N° 214. ibid. it ſeems extremely probable that Margaret wife of ſir William lord of Aſtley was the heir of John Charnells of Bedworth.

[3] In 13 Ric. II. died Maud wife of John Charnells, ſeiſed of Wardbernes, co. Warwick, leaving her daughters (by Henry de Stanidelf), Joane de Aſton and Catherine de Rodburne, her heirs. Dugd. Warw. vol. II. p. 1142.

[4] P. 1043.

[5] Wyrley's monumental inſcriptions and arms; ſee p. 1046. Burton, p. 263. And ſee an engraving of their tomb, Plate CXXXVI. fig. 40. In the church of Cunſton alſo, in painted glaſs, was the figure of this John Charnells kneeling, and this inſcription, "Orate pro bono ſtatu Johannis Charnels, armigeri, & Margaretæ uxoris ejus." In this church alſo were theſe arms: Charnell, impaling Bereford. 2. Quarterly, Charnells and Shevesby, impaling Arden. 3. Quarterly, 1. and 4. Charnells; 2. Bereford; 3. Shevesby, impaling, Argent, an annulet Gules, between three martlets Sable; 4. the ſame as 3. impaling, 1. Argent, a ſaltire Sable; 2. the annulet, &c. as in 3.

[6] Dugd. Warw. vol. II. p. 1122. Dr. Thomas inſerts, from Le Neve, a warranty of Bramcote againſt the heirs of Jocola [Jocoſa]; which would ſtrongly lead to think that William, a junior branch perhaps, married Jocoſa, a couſin, heir of a Bramcote line, or (conſidering that John, her anceſtor in this caſe, is ſtyled in his mother's Bramcote-grant, "of Snarkeſton eſquire") heir of both Bramcote and Snareſton. But on the whole, with the very different arms of Jocoſa given by Wyrley and Burton from the monument, this ſeems a miſtake either in Thomas or Le Neve.

[7] Wyrley's inſcriptions and arms.

[8] Court-roll, noticed in p. 1045.

[9] Willeſley originals.

[10] Burton, p. 249.

[11] At the diſſolution of the nunnery of Poleſworth, Mary Charnells was a nun there; and living 1553. Dugdale's Warwickſhire, vol. II. p. 1110.

[12] Roper's MS. who cites Erdeſwick.

[13] Court-rolls, quoted in p. 1045. Charnell's-ſchedule, p. 1.—William, lord in 1581, is made by the viſitation 1619 ſon to another William, ſon of Walter. But this is againſt evidence, negative and poſitive; for, firſt, no deed or other trace of ſuch a prior William is among the exiſting family evidences in the Schedule, though they begin in the time of his father Walter; and, ſecondly, William, in 1581, expreſsly ſettles all hereditaments in Snareſton or elſewhere, co. Leiceſter, which deſcended to him from his father Walter. The authority of the viſitation is proved a bad one, from its putting Walter's death in 17 Hen. VIII. and calling his daughter Maria (Wirley) Catharine. And from Burton adding his, that a Charnells (though not a Walter), and one who had a wife Joice, did die 17 Hen. VIII., there can be little doubt that the whole is a tranſpoſition in the viſitation of the names William and Walter. A ſhadow of heſitation may remain, from the Mary Calton (in the Crich inſcription, p. 1046) relict of a Charnells of Snareſton. Walter's wife, within the year of his death, was Joan. And it is unlikely that Mary, if widow (a ſecond wife after the juſt-ſtated Joice) to a Charnells who died 17 Hen. VIII., ſhould live, re-married to Clay, till 1583; and indeed too that a daughter of Henry's maſter of hawks ſhould be a widow ſo early as 1525. But we had better ſuppoſe a younger brother Charnells, of Snareſton, for her firſt huſband, than a William, father of William, againſt all probabilities. N. B. The Chetwynd MS. has a John, elder brother of Walter, diſinherited.

[14] Walter her father, on ſaid 21 Oct. 1557, ſettles on her and her huſband Wirley, after his own and wife Joan's lives, all his lands, &c. in Snareſton, Norton, or elſewhere in co. Leic. Which might cauſe the before-mentioned verdict, at Thomas Grey's court-baron 1558, to find, erroneouſly, that Mary Wurley was heir. But probably that ſettlement had ſome flaw, as we ſee William complete owner in 1581, and reciting the deſcent from his father. However, ſome land in Snareſton and Norton did remain to Mary Wirley, which ſhe and her ſon William ſold, by fine Mich. 1609, to George Abney, Thomas Comberford, and Simon Jaſſon or Jeſſon (in 1610 ſtyled of Drakelow, gent.)

[15] Charnells-ſchedule, pp. 11, 7.

[16] Shaw's Wyrley pedigree.

[17] Seems to have paſſed his latter years, probably after marrying his eldeſt ſon, at Tamworth, of which place he is deſcribed Oct. 5, 1689. (Charnells ſchedule, p. 27.) He is a truſtee in ſeveral ſettlements made by ſir Edward Littleton of the Moat there, in poſſeſſion of S. P. W.

[18] This ſecond wife of Thomas is not in a roll emblazoned for his ſon Nicholas in 1738, though ſhe is in the copy which came from Mr. D. Baxter.

[19] Seems daughter of Humphry Wolferſtan and Margaret, then late of Quarendon. Humphry might deſcend from Sampſon, Humphry, John, or Simon, ſons of Humphry of Newbold-Verdon, born 1602—1611.

[20] Vellum roll of 1738.

[21] Son of Edward, ſecond ſon of Thomas Muxloe and Anne Charnells above. N. B. A Mr. Thomas Muckloe of Nottingham was married to Mrs. Maria Harcourt of Plumtree (Q. whoſe daughter?) at the latter place June 1, 1675.

[22] In the Viſitation of Leiceſterſhire 1681, K. 2. p. 77. Thomas Charnells, of Snareſton, eſq. ſigned his name Charnells; but Nicholas his ſon, obſerving in various antient evidences that the name had formerly been written de Charnel, re-aſſumed the name of Charnel, and his nieces followed his example.

Illuſtration of the PEDIGREE of CHARNELLS, from the WILLESLEY DEEDS.

William Charnells, of Snareston, 20 E. III. = Margaret, heir of Sheveſby.

John Charnells, 30 E. III. (1356), and of Snarkeston 1369.

William Charnells, of Snarkeston, 1377, by Willeſley deeds. = ...

Margaret Caverſham; Two coats; the ſaltire and the annulets. 1ſt wife. = John[1] Charnells, died 1425. [Clearly the Charnells of Snareston pro tempore, made the church roof, &c.] = Joice . . . . [Poſſibly an Arden.] 2d wife.

William[2] Charnells, dead 1411. = Margaret, heir of Grendon, remarried to Malory, 1411.

John Charnells, ſon and heir of Margaret; and of Snarkeston, esquire, before ſhe gave him Bramcote in 1428. = ...

William Charnells, ſeller of Bramcote. = Joice [Wood, by Wyrley's monumental arms.]

†‡† The Charnells deſcent, from about 1296 to 1557, muſt for the preſent be accepted as in great meaſure conjectural, from the great variance of MSS, and want of original evidences which may poſſibly be diſcovered hereafter.—A Pedigree of Charnells of Muston has been given in vol. II. p. 295.

[1] Dugdale's Warwickſhire, vol. II. p. 1122. note k.

[2] Willeſley deeds.

PEDIGREE

PEDIGREE of CHARNELLS, of Elmsthorpe, Swebston, &c.

William de Charnells, temp Henry I. = ...

William de Charnells. = Agnes, da. of Lucas Quadramaris, lord of Godeby and Coleorton, temp. Henry II.; had a ſuit in 1193 with Ernald de Bois for the manor of Elmſthorpe, which he obtained in 7 Ric. I.[1] a witneſs 8 Ric. I.[2]

Nicholas de Charnells. = ...

William de Charnells, of Elmſthorpe, patron of Elmſthorpe and Swepſton 1221; held lands under Henry Haſtings; and died 1240[3]. = Beatrix, a widow 1250.

1. Nicholas Charnells, of Elmſthorpe, Swebſton, Bilton, and Merwe, in the counties of Leiceſter, Warwick, and Surrey, knt. temp. Edw. I. = Cecilia.
2. Wm. Charnells[4], kt. of Snareſton (ſee p. 104, *.)
3. Ralph Charnells.
4. Roger Charnells.

George Charnells, of Elmſthorp, patron of that church in May 1302; knight, 2 E. II. knight for the county of Warwick, 6 ejuſd. = Lucia, widow 13 Edw. II.

John Charnells, rector of Bilton, 16 Edw. II.; canon of Lichfield, and prebendary of Colwych, 11 E. III.[7]; had free warren at Elmſthorp 1363.

Warin Truſſell. = . . .

Nicholas Charnells, knt. 16 E. II. and 30 E. III. patron of Bilton 1349. = Joanna, wife to Nicholas in 2 Edw. II.[6]

Margaret, married Thomas de Aſtley, of Melton, father of Ralph Aſtley, of Hillmorton; and, 2dly, ſir Edm. Truſſell[5].

Thomas[6] Charnells, knt. = ...

Frances, married, firſt to ſir Robert de Saule, knt. of Oxnede, in Norfolk, killed by the rebels in the reign of Richard II.; re-married to ſir William Clopton, of Wykham Brook, in Suffolk. She died ſ. p.[8]

Laurence Truſſell, of Cubleſdon, co. Stafford, kt. ſon and heir of Warin Truſſell, of Billeſley, 6 R. II. = Maud, dau. and heir of Thomas Charnells, knt. 1 and 9 Ric. II.

William Truſſell, of Elmſthorp, knt. patron of that church 1424; living 1454. = Margery, dau. of John Ludlow, knt.

Sir Thos. Truſſell, of Elmſthorp, kt. 6 E. IV. = Eliz. da. of W. de Burley, by Helen, da. and coheir of John de Grendon, jun.[9]

William Truſſell, knt. ob. 21 Edw. IV. = Margaret, daughter of . . . Kene.

Sir Edward Truſſell, knt. ob. 18 April, 14 Hen. VII. = Margaret, daughter of ſir John Dun, knt.

William Truſſell, ſon and heir, ob. cœlebs 20 Dec. 15 Hen. VII.

Elizabeth, only ſiſter and heir. = John Vere, earl of Oxford, died 1540.

---

[1] Burton.

[2] Rydeware Chartulary, immediately after N° 48.

[3] Not till 1250, by Dugdale's Warwickſhire, vol. I. p. 26. In 1240, the heir of William de Charnel held half a knight's fee, and Willielmus de Charnel a tenth part of a knight's fee, in Wymundham and Thorpe, of the earl de Ferrariis. Vol. I. p. lii.—N. B. Dugdale, in Bedworth, though not in Bilton, introduces another William, 55 Hen. III. father to Nicholas and William; and (ſuppoſed) ſon to William and Beatrix.

[4] Dugdale, Warwickſhire, vol. I. pp. 27. 120.

[5] Ibid. vol. I. pp. 19, 21.

[6] Ib. pp. 27, 28. vol. II. p. 715.

[7] Greſley Chartulary, p. 42.—Mr. Wyrley, in his MS. p. 68, notices a ruinous monument of a prieſt of the Charnell family at Elmſthorpe.

[8] In the 34th year of the reign of king Henry VI. ſir William Truſſell, knt. nepos et hæres Franciſcæ quæ fuit uxor Willielmi Clopton, remiſit jus in manerio et eccleſiâ de Oxnede, quæ quondam fuere Roberti Salle, militis. Clauſ. 34 Hen. VI. m. 11.

[9] Com. Banc. Rot. 451. Mich. 28 Hen. VI. Eſch. 15 Hen. VII. (as quoted in Chetwynd MSS. vol. B. 274.)

P. 1060. PEDIGREE of ALFOUNDER, of Thurcaston.

Arms: Argent, on a croſs Azure, between four Corniſh choughs Sable, five paſſion nails Or (Plate CXI. fig. 12.)—The vellum emblazonment is ſubſcribed to the following effect: "The arms of John D'Alfounder, ſonne of Henry D'Alfounder, ſervant to Henry earl of Richmond in the battell of Boſworth. Theſe arms were confirmed by Thomas Wriotheſley, Garter Principal King of Armes, anno 1503."

Robert Alefounder, of Dedham, co. Eſſex; died April 1630, æt. 78; married four wives. = ... da. of . . . .; 2d w.

Martha, daughter of John Shardelow, of Shimpling, c. Norfolk; firſt wife. = John Alefounder, of Dedham, co. Eſſex; d. March 1672-3, æt. 63. = Prudence, da. of Tho. Ruſhbrooke, of Fakenham, co. Suffolk, widow of Joſ. Ruſt, of Burſton, c. Norf.; 2d w. = Alice, dau. of . . . . . Gardiner, of Eſſex or Suffolk, widow of R. Gooday, of Penlow, Eſſex; 3d w.

Thomas, died an infant.

Matthew, anno 1646; jam ſuperſtes [i. e. 1682.]

John Alefounder, of Shotley, co. Suff.

Robert Alfounder, of Emanuel College, Cambridge, B. D. 1683; 32 years and 10 months rector of Thurcaſton, where he died March 12, 1700-1, æt. 69, and was buried in the chancel[1]. = Mary, dau. of Benjamin Billers, of the Borough of Leiceſter, gent.; m. Sept. 5, 1682; died March 11, 1693, in her 38th year; buried at Thurcaſton[1].

Matthew; John; Anne; } died y.

Martha; died unmarried.

Anne, wife of Edw. Woodthorp, of . . . .

Mary, wife of C. Crouch, of Stratford, Suff.

1. Robert Alfounder[2], born at Thurcaſton Feb. 19, 1684; of Emanuel Coll. Camb.; B. A. 1706; M. A. 1710; B. D. 1717; rector of North Luffenham, Rutland, 33 years; died March 24, 1755, aged 71, and was there buried.
2. John Alfounder, born at Thurcaſton May 28, 1686; died June 3 following; and was there buried[1].
3. William, born at Thurcaſton March 23, 1687-8; ſuppoſed dead, having been abroad ſince 1722.
4. Benjamin Billers Alfounder, born at Thurcaſton Nov. 27, 1693; di. Mar. 16, 1693; and was buried there[1].

1. Mary, born Aug. 26, 1683; married 1705; died Oct. 18, 1754. = Rich. Hill, of Leiceſter, gent. died Dec. 1, 1739.

See pp. *1012. 1144.

2. Jane, born at Thurcaſton Apr. 22, 1687; died at Leiceſt. Aug. 18, 1768, æt. 81[1].
3. Martha, born at Thurcaſton Apr. 17, 1689; d. May 6, 1691; bur. there[1].

---

[1] See their ſeveral epitaphs in p. 1060.

[2] On an altar-tomb in the church-yard of North Luffenham is the following inſcription:

"Here lie the mortal remains of the Rev. Robert Alfounder, B. D.
thirty-three years rector of this pariſh.
He was religious without hypocriſy;
charitable without oſtentation;
a kind relation, a good maſter, and a ſincere friend;
who eminently exemplified in his practice that Goſpel of Peace which he preached:
By an univerſal benevolence, and moſt inoffenſive behaviour, he acquired the eſteem of all who knew him.
He lived beloved; and died lamented,
March 24, in the year of our Lord 1755, and of his age 71.
Reader, would'ſt thou improve by this afflicting accident, remember that thou art alſo mortal;
and go and do likewiſe."

PEDIGREE of HUMPHREY, of BARTON SEGRAVE and SWEBSTON.

(From Vincent's Viſitation of Northamptonſhire, 1619, in the College of Arms, 114. p. 81.)

Arms: See p. 1036; and Plate CXXXVI. fig. 37.

Sir Peter Humfrey, of Cirenceſter, co. Glouceſter. = ...

. . . . = Peter Humfrey, of Cirenceſter. = Elizabeth, widow to Henry Gaiſtange, of Barton Segrave, co. Northampton, who gave Barton, with the arms of her family, to her ſon John.
first wife.

John Humfrey, of Barton Segrave, 26 Hen. VI. = Eleanor, daughter to ſir William Vaux, of Harrowden.

1. William Humfrey, of Barton Segrave. = Maud, da. to R. Knightley, of Fawſley.
2. Edward, d. 6 E. VI.
3. Richard.

1. Mary.
2. Anne, wife to Thos. Pagett, of Worceſterſhire.
3. Eleanor, wife to William Stafford, of Totton, Bucks: 2dly, to ſir Edw. Aſhfeild, of Ewelme, kt.
Iſabel, da to . . . . Staveley, of Bygnell, Bucks, widow to Wm. Canfield, of Gayton; 1ſt w. = 1. Richard Humfrey, of Barton Segrave 2 Hen. VIII. d. Jan. 31, 1556[1]. = Jane, da. to Rob. Patſell, of Bedford; 2d w.
2. John Humphrey, of Iſham.

Eleanor, mar. Tho. Babington, of Temple Rothley, was buried at Coſſington June 7, 1578[2].
1. William Humphrey, eſq. of Barton Segrave, and of Swebſton; died March 3, 1591, at Shenton, co. Salop, and was brought to Swebſton, and buried May 6, 1592[3]. = Jane, da. to Thos. Lynne, of Baſingborne, co. Cambridge[4].
2. John Humfrey, = Margaret, d to . . . . Rous, of Worc'ſh.

1. John Humphrey, died Apr. 30, 1596.
2. Edward Humphrey. = Mary Whetell, of London.
. . . . . = Mallory, of Huntingd'ſh.

Edward, ſon and heir, 1619.
1. Dorothy, ma. Henry, ſecond ſon of James Calthorp, of Calthorp, co. Norfolk, kt.
2. Eleanor, m. R. Pickes, of Crayford, Kent.

Audrey, wife to Richard Harnage, of Shenton, co. Salop.
1. Richard Humfrey, of Barton, di. Sep. 13, 1612. = Mary, da. to ſir W. Lane[4], of Hoton, knt.
Mary, da. to Wm. Meringe, of Meringe, c. Northampton; bur. Oct. 27, 1618. = 2. Sir Thos. Humphrey, of Swebſton, knt. buried Feb. 5, 1624. = Suſanna . . . bu. Sept. 12, 1664.
3. Humphrey, d. Nov. 7, 1550.
4. Edward.
Eliz.
Mary.

1. John.
2. Edwd.
3. Thomas, bapt. Sept. 21, 1623.
1. Elizabeth, bap. Aug. 26, 1621; d. Jan. 24, 1650. = Henry Bedell, of Great Catworth, c. Hunt. gent.
2. Mary. = . . . Mallory.
3. Liddia, bapt. Oct. 1, 1624.

Two daughters.

1. Nathaniel Humphrey. = Joan Tuder.
2. Zacheus.
3. Raphael Humfrey[5], gent. of Thorpe Mandeville, co. Northampton; died Aug. 31, buried Sept. 2, 1681. = Ann, dau. of John Winſton, of Canons Aſhby, co. North'ton, clerk; d. Nov. 25, 1711, aged 98.
Anne.
Theodoſia.

1. Elizabeth Humphrey, daughter and coheir[6]; d. Aug. 31, 1656, aged 36[7]. = Thomas Brudenell, eldeſt ſon of T. B. of Stanton Wyvile.
2. Dorothy, d. and coheir, d. ſ. p. 1644.
. . . . . .
Raphael Humfrey, of the Inner Temple, eſq.; d. Nov. 29, 1680. = Dorothy, da. and coheir of W. Collins, of Nailſey, co. Somerſet (alias of London), eſq.; died Dec. 29, 1717, aged 80.
Elizabeth; died March 5, 1719, aged 71.

Nathanael, bo. June 3, 1674; d. Aug. 13, 1675.
Raphael, and Cole, born Aug. 27, 1676; Cole died July 2, 1679; Raphael, Ap. 14, 1681.
Nathanael Humfrey, ſon and heir; rector of Thorpe Mandeville, and LL. D.; died March 3, 1744, aged 68. = Abigail, daughter of Thos. Pargiter, D. D. of Gritworth, co. Northampton; d. Aug. 10, 1752, aged 70.

Nathanael-Pargiter Humfrey[8]. = Sarah . . . . died Nov. 22, 1765, aged 34.

---

[1] Snareſton court-roll of Oct.-Nov. 1558. [This court-roll does not ſhew that R. H. died Jan. 31, 1556: but only that he died ſince the preceding court.]

[2] See before, p. 228.

[3] Regiſter.

[4] William Malorye, John Lynne, eſq. and Richard Purefey, are plaintiffs in the fine of William, Jane, and Richard Humfrey, 1579, mentioned in p. 1036. And ſee Malory, Lyne, Purefoy, among the arms in ſame page, N° 4, 12, 22.

[5] This Raphael and his deſcendants are from Gent. Mag. vol. LXI. p. 111, taken (by the late Mr. Henry Henn, of Appleby) from Thorpe Mandeville church. The arms, Gules, a croſs botoné Argent, ſame as at Swepſton; and the repeated name Nathanael argues for a conſanguinity. The firſt Raphael here might be, as far as the point of time, either brother or nephew to the Nathaniel of Barton Segrave.

[6] Her epitaph deſcribes her, "filia et ſola relicta Nz hanielis." And her deſcendants appear to have poſſeſſed Barton. See Bridges, vol. II. p. 221.

[7] Monument at Great Catworth. See this Hſtory, vol. II. p. 811.

[8] A rector Humfrey, of Thorpe Mandeville, died 1787, leaving a widow, four ſons, and a daughter.

SWITHLAND.

SWITHLAND,

a conſiderable lordſhip, containing about 1080 acres, two miles from Mountſorell, five from Loughborough, and ſix from Leiceſter, is bounded on the North by Woodhouſe; on the Eaſt by a detached part of Newton Linford, i. e. the South-eaſt end of Rothley Plain; on the South by Thurcaſton and Cropſton; and on the Weſt by Charnwood Foreſt; and, in the eccleſiaſtical diviſion of the county, is within the deanry of Akeley.

"At the Weſterly[1] corner of the Foreſt," ſays Mr. Wyrley, "is ſeated Swithland, by a little brook that runneth toward Rodley[2]."

This lordſhip is not ſeparately noticed in Domeſday Book, or in the Teſta de Nevill; but muſt have been included in the general ſurvey under ſome one of the adjacent lordſhips of Hugo de Grentemaiſnell, by whom the church of Swithland was given to the abbey of St. Ebrulph.

From Hugo de Grentemaiſnell this lordſhip deſcended regularly, through the earls of Leiceſter, to Margaret ſiſter and coheireſs of Robert de Bellomont, the laſt earl of that race; who brought it in marriage to Saer de Quincy earl of Winton; though we find that the right to it was afterward conteſted by the repreſentatives of his ſiſter.

"Aſſiſa venit recognitura ſi Robertus comes Leic', frater Margarete uxoris comitis Winton', ſeiſitus fuit in dominico ſuo ut de feodo de centum acris terre, cum pertinentiis, in Swithland, die quo obiit; & ſi predicta Margareta propinquior heres ejus ſit; quam terram Willielmus Falconer tenet: Qui venit, & dicit aſſiſa inde non debere, quia predicta Margareta habet ſororem, que adeo magnum jus haberet in terrâ illâ ſicut ipſa Margareta, de quâ non fit mentio in brevi, &c."[3]

This manor was in the time of king Henry III. the inheritance of William le Walleis; in whoſe poſterity (ſet down in the following pedigree) it continued till the reign of king Richard II. when it paſſed by marriage to ſir John de Walcote, knt.

In 1270, Roger de Quincy, earl of Wincheſter and conſtable of Scotland, granted divers liberties and privileges to Robert Waleys, of Swithland[4]; who (with William le Waleys of Wanlip, John Falconer of Thurcaſton, and others) occurs as truſtee to a deed without date (temp. Edw. I.) of William de Ferrariis[5].

In the Itinerary of 1280, Swithland, Rothley, Anſty, Bradgate, Cropſton, and Newton Linford, anſwered collectively as one vill.

June 26, 1314, king Edward II. (at the inſtance of Roger le Brabazon) granted to Oliver Waleis (ſon of the above Robert), and his heirs, liberty of free warren in all their demeſne lands at Swithelounds[6].

In 1343, it was found that Henry de Ferrers, at his death, was ſeiſed of the twentieth part of one knight's fee, with the appurtenances, in Swithlond, which John Waleys held[7].

In 1346, John de Wayleis (on the aid granted for knighting Edward of Woodſtock, the king's eldeſt ſon) was aſſeſſed 2*s.* for a twentieth part of one knight's fee in Swithland, parcel of the honour of Winton[8].

In 1371, it was found that William de Ferrers of Groby, at his death, was ſeiſed of 27 virgates of land in Switheland, which the heirs of John Waleys, knt. held[9].

In 1387, it was found that Henry de Ferrers of Groby, knt. at his death, was ſeiſed of 27 virgates of land in Switheland, which ſir John Walcote, knt. held[10].

In a book of fifteenths and tenths granted by the laity in 1416, Swithland was rated at 17*s.*; and in the ſubſidy of 1445, at the ſame ſum; but an abatement was then made of 1*s.*

In 1444, it was found that William de Ferrers of Groby, knt. at his death, was ſeiſed of 27 virgates of land in Swithelond, which the heirs of ſir John Walcote, knt. held of the ſame William[11].

In 1457, it was found that Edward de Grey, knt. lord Ferrers of Groby, at his death, was ſeiſed of 27 acres of land in Swithelond, which the heirs of ſir John Walcote, knt. held of the ſame Edward, by the ſervice of one twentieth part of a knight's fee[12].

Pedigree of WALLEIS, of Swithland.

Arms: Argent, a lion rampant double queué fourché Gules, the one returning from betwixt his legs.
See Plate CXXXVIII. fig. 2.

William le Walleis, of Swithland.=....
William le Walleis, of Swithland, 1 Edw. I.=....
Robert le Walleis, 6 Edw. I.=....
Oliver le Walleis, of Swithland, 9 Edw. II.=....
John Walleis, lord of the manor of Swithland, 17, 20 Edw. III.=....
John Walleis, of Swithland, 45 Edw. III.=....
.... daughter and heir.=John de Walcote, knt ſon of Geoffrey Walcote[13], of Miſterton.

Elizabeth, daughter and coheir.=John Danvers poſſeſſed a moiety of Swithland, in right of his wife, 3 Henry VI.

Alice, daughter and coheir, a widow in 3 Henry VI.=John de Shepey, third huſband, poſſeſſed the other moiety of Swithland in right of his wife.

In 1530, Thomas marquis of Dorſet died ſeiſed of certain lands in this town, which was then acknowledeed to be a member of Groby, and to be held of the honour of Wincheſter.

John Danvers, eſq. who, by marrying Elizabeth, eldeſt daughter and one of the two coheirs of John de Walcote, became poſſeſſed of a moiety of this lordſhip, was a deſcendant of a family long ſeated at Froleſworth and Shakerſton in this county; a younger branch of the Danvers's of Culworth in Northamptonſhire; and poſſeſſed of conſiderable property in ſeveral other counties. For one of the Wiltſhire branch of the family (whoſe property came eventually to the owners of Swithland) we find the following funeral certificate:

"Memorand'm that ſir John Danvers, knt. deceaſed on the XIXth daye of December, in the yeare of our

---

[1] It is rather Eaſterly. Mr. Marſhall, however, calls it Southern; ſee p. 1050.

[2] It runs to Quorn.

[3] Plac. de temp. Ric. II. in Recept. Scacc. Rot. 6.

[4] This appears from a note in the Viſitation of 1619.

[5] Leiceſter bag, inter cartas P. Le Neve, Norroy.

[6] Cart. 9 Edw. II. N° 2.

[8] Eſch. 17 Edw. III. N° 57. Leic.

[8] Rot. Aux. 20 Edw. III.

[9] Eſch. 45 Edw. III. N° 22. Leic.

[10] Eſch. 11 Ric. II. 1387. N° 26. Leic.

[11] Eſch. 23 Hen. VI.

[12] Eſch. 36 Hen. VI.

[13] See hereafter, under Miſterton, in Guthlaxton hundred.—Alice the other daughter and coheir was thrice married; firſt, to Richard Hubard; after whoſe death, ſhe married John Barker, who leaſed half the manor of Swithland to the Danvers family in the reign of Henry VI.; after which ſhe married John de Shepey.

Lord 1594, at his mannor howſe of Dauntſey, in Wiltſhire, and was worſhipfully buryed in the pariſh churche thereof the xxth of January following; whoſe funerall was ſolemnized by Will'm Stayeh, alias Somerſet, and Thomas Lant, alias Portcullis, officers of armes. The ſaide ſir John Danvers marryed Elizabeth, one of the daughters and heires of John Nevill lord Latymer, by whome hee had iſſue three ſonnes and ſeaven daughters, viz. ſir Charles[1], ſir Henry, and John. Anne, the firſt daughter, married to Mr. Arthur Porter, ſonne and heire of ſir Thomas Porter, of Neweworke, in the countye of the citye of Glouceſter, knt.; Lucye, ſecond daughter, marryed to Mr. Henry Baynton, ſonne and heire of ſir Edward Baynton, of Bromegam, in com' Wilts, knt.; Elioner, Elizabeth, Katheren, and Dorothy, as yett remayne unmarryed; Marye, one of the daughters, dyed younge. In witneſs whereof we under-named have ſubſcribed our hands the xxiſt daye of January, in the xxxviith yeare of the reigne of our ſovraigne lady Elizabeth, by the grace of God queen of England, France, and Ireland, defender of the faith, &c. GYLES DANVERS. RICHARD ATWOODE. RIC' DANVERS. JOHN PHILIPPES."

As it will be neceſſary to notice the earlier parts of the Danvers family hereafter under Froleſworth, it may be ſufficient here to refer to the pedigree and epitaphs in Swithland church, pp. 1052, 1053, which were placed there partly by the laſt and partly by the firſt baronet; and briefly to obſerve, that

John Danvers, gent. a native of Leiceſterſhire, was maticulated at Lincoln-college, Oxford, May 19, 1615, at the age of 19; and was elected a burgeſs in parliament for that Univerſity May 29, 1621.

Francis Danvers, eſq. was owner of the principal part of Swithland in 1619; when he entered a pedigree of his family at the Heraldic Viſitation. He died in 1631; and was ſucceeded by William Danvers, eſq. who died in 1686; and whoſe ſon Henry died in 1687, and grandſon Samuel in 1693.

Joſeph Danvers, eſq. ſon of Samuel, was elected repreſentative in parliament for Boroughbridge, in Yorkſhire, Nov. 6, 1722; was choſen for Bramber 1727; and for Totneſs 1734, 1741; one of the court of the Royal African Company 1729; advanced to the dignity of a baronet July 4, 1746; and, dying Oct. 26, 1753, was ſucceeded by his eldeſt ſon,

Sir John Danvers, bart. who ſerved the office of high ſheriff of the county of Leiceſter in 1755. He married Mary, the eldeſt of the two daughters[2] and coheirs of Joel Watſon, eſq. of London, merchant; by whom whom he had four ſons and two daughters. He died Sept. 21, 1796; and bequeathed the greater part of his landed eſtates and perſonal property to his only ſurviving child Mary, wife of the Hon. Auguſtus-Richard Butler (ſecond ſon of the late earl of Laneſborough[3]), who has ſince taken the name of Danvers. The real eſtates in the ſeveral counties of Leiceſter, Northampton, Oxford, Bedford, and Middleſex, amounted, in old rents, to about £4000 per annum; and contained a conſiderable quantity of timber. By a former will, a family of the male branch of the Danvers were made ſole heirs; but this the baronet had revoked not long before his death. His remains lay in ſtate at the Crowns Inn at Leiceſter on the evening of the 3d, and morning of the 4th of October, ſurmounted by a magnificent plumage, decorated with eſcocheons, and all the paraphernalia of funeral pomp. The body was afterward removed to Swithland, and interred in a grave lined with brick, over which a magnificent monument was erected in his life-time, with the inſcription which is printed in p. 1052.

Sir John Danvers was the principal land owner in Swithland, where he poſſeſſed ſeveral manorial rights and privileges, and formerly almoſt conſtantly reſided. But the four laſt years of his life were ſpent at Bath. Previouſly to that period he uſed to be now and then at his town-houſe in Hanover-ſquare.

The old family-manſion of Swithland hall, as has been obſerved by an ingenious but unfortunate writer[4], is "impriſoned near the moſt noble, grand, and ſtriking objects in the Midland Counties of England (the views on Charnwood Foreſt). The annexed plate is characteriſtic of the delightful ſcenery exhibited to the ſpectator's view, who traverſes the rugged paths of this Foreſt[5]. The ſmall repreſentation of the ſeat (Plate CXXXVIII. fig. 3.) is little better than an elevation of it. "I have been twice in the Foreſt," adds Mr. Throſby, "to view Nature in its primitive ſtate; for I have a delight therein; and both times have endeavoured to find an eligible ſpot to take ſir John's houſe—in vain [he might have eaſily found one]: it is ſo beſet with barns, ſtables, and ſomething like outhouſes; eight-feet-high ſtone walls one within another; pigeon-houſes and high gates; in ſome places lofty trees, and a variety of other obſtacles which are mortifying in the extreme to a picture-maker. If this ſeat had been leſs the object of the pencil than it is, its ſituation is ſufficient to create pictureſque beauty. The ſtreamer at the top of the long flag-ſtaff was ſet up on the days when ſir John was in the country."—Under the clock over the coach-houſe and ſtables are theſe lines:

"Each day you ſee me turn about,
Time fleeth, and the lamp burns out."

Some time after the baronet's death, in the gloomy month of November, 1798, a ſale of the houſehold furniture, books, prints, paintings, and 150 dozen of old wine, of the hon. Auguſtus-Richard Butler-Danvers attracted the notice of the neighbourhood for 15 days.

Among the articles of furniture, were many ſingular curioſities; particularly a ſuperb piece of machinery from Cox's Muſeum ſix feet high, ſtanding on a ſolid braſs frame with twiſted glaſs pillars; the machinery ſupported by two oxen of caſt braſs, elegantly gilt and adorned with pearls and precious ſtones; and containing a capital ſet of chimes, a ſpring clock, and an infinite variety of movements. The whole was a prize of £.1500. in Mr. Cox's Lottery, which had been won by two or three of the Swithland ſlate-men, and purchaſed from them by ſir John Danvers.

Among the principal paintings in this houſe were,

A noble whole-length, by Vandyck, of Henry earl of Danby[6] (a loyal adherent of king Charles the Firſt, and an anceſtor of ſir John Danvers) with a wound in his temple; and of his family.

---

[1] This ſir Charles Danvers loſt his life by partaking with Robert earl of Eſſex in an inſurrection againſt the Queen in 1601. But ſir Henry, his next brother, was created earl of Danby in 1603; and, by a ſpecial act of parliament, was reſtored in blood as heir to his father, notwithſtanding the brother's attainder. Dugdale, Bar. Angl. vol. II. p. 416.

[2] The other daughter married Mr. Delaval, of Sutton Delaval; but, having no family, left her property to her ſiſter.

[3] Jane counteſs of Laneſborough was daughter of Robert late earl of Belvidere. Her ſecond huſband is John King, eſq.

[4] Mr. John Throſby, whoſe name I cannot record without commiſeration, died, whilſt this article was preparing for the preſs, March 5, 1803, after a lingering illneſs, which he ſupported with patient fortitude and pious reſignation. He was a man of ſtrong natural genius; had a tolerably good taſte for drawing; was many years pariſh clerk of St. Martin's, Leiceſter; and, during the viciſſitudes of a life remarkably chequered, attempted many expedients for the maintenance of a numerous family, few of which anſwered his purpoſe; and his laſt days would have been ſhaded with penury and diſappointment, but for the aſſiſtance of thoſe friends who knew his worth, and juſtly appreciated him as a man of honeſty, integrity, and merit. His publications were, 1. "The Memoirs of the Town and County of Leiceſter, 1777," 6 vols, 12mo. 2. "Select Views in Leiceſterſhire, from original Drawings, 1789," 4to. 3. "A Supplementary Volume to the Leiceſterſhire Views, containing a Series of Excurſions, in the Year 1790, to the Villages and Places of Note in the County, 1790," 4to. 4. "The Hiſtory and Antiquities of the antient Town of Leiceſter, 179[illegible]," 4to. 5. "Letters on the Roman Cloaca at Leiceſter, 1793," 8vo. 6. "Thoughts on the Provincial Corps raiſed, and now raiſing, in Support of the Britiſh Conſtitution at this aweful Period, 1795," 8vo. 7. "Thoroton's Hiſtory of Nottinghamſhire, re-publiſhed with large Additions, and embelliſhed with Pictureſque and Select Views of Seats of the Nobility and Gentry, Villages, Churches, and Ruins, 1797," 3 vols, 4to.

[5] This alludes to ſome ſmall views on the Foreſt, by Mr. Throſby; of which ſeveral others on a more extenſive ſcale have been given in the former part of the preſent volume.

[6] Of this reſpectable nobleman, to whom the phyſic-garden at Oxford is a monument of muniſicence, and the repairing and beautifying the church of Stowe an inſtance of piety, ſee Dugdale, Bar. Angl. vol. II. p. 416. He died, unmarried, at his ſeat at Cornbury, Oxfordſhire, Jan. 20, 1643-4.

Three of king Charles the Firſt's children, and a dog (only a copy).

Queen Anne and child.

King George II.

An original of ſir Robert Walpole; not valuable, being very ſtiff and hard.

Sir Joſeph Danvers and his family.

Sir John Danvers, his lady, and two children; by Penny.

St. Peter, contemplating a human ſkull.

A group of three cottage nymphs.

A good battle-piece.

A ſcarce print of Cromwell on horſeback, with his 45 victories, 1650; and many other good prints of the ſeveral commanders under the Commonwealth, Fairfax, Hampden, Eſſex, &c. in fine preſervation.

The family pictures were bought-in; as was the earl of Danby, for 45 guineas and a half.

The library conſiſted of a very reſpectable aſſortment of books[1]; which I the rather mention, as a whimſical ſaying has been attributed to ſir John, "that a gentleman's library ſhould conſiſt of but four books, the Bible, the Common Prayer, Don Quixote, and the Court Calendar[2]."

Among the other domeſticks of ſir John Danvers, was an old ſtout porter, a famous walker, who has not unfrequently been diſpatched as a pedeſtrian, diſtinguiſhed by a ſort of antient conſtable's ſtaff as a badge of office, from Swithland to London, and thence occaſionally to Bath.

In 1564, there were 30 families in Swithland.

The only freeholder in 1630 was David Blankey.

In 1655, there was collected in Swithland, for the relief of the poor Proteſtants in Piedmont, the ſum of £1. 1s. 7d.

In 1722, ten freeholders polled from this pariſh; and in 1775, we find only three names.

In 1798, an act was paſſed, for dividing, allotting, and incloſing, within the pariſh of Swithland, and eccleſiaſtical peculiar exempt juriſdiction of Groby, ſeveral common fields, meadows, paſtures, and other commonable grounds and places remaining unincloſed, containing about 350 acres; and ſeveral antient incloſed lands and woodlands within the pariſh of Swithland, containing about 740 acres. In this act George Harry earl of Stamford and Warrington is deſcribed as lord of the manor and eccleſiaſtical peculiar exempt juriſdiction of Groby, and as ſuch entitled to divers manorial rights and privileges within the pariſh of Swithland; and alſo entitled to a chief or quit rent of 1*l.* 9*s.* 7*d.* in reſpect to certain hereditaments belonging to the honourable Auguſtus Richard Butler-Danvers, ſituate in Swithland, and to certain other payments rendered yearly by the ſaid Mr. Butler Danvers and others to the ſaid earl, in lieu of wood-hens, and other rights, privileges, and benefits. The ſaid Mr. Butler-Danvers is alſo deſcribed as entitled to divers manorial rights and privileges within the ſaid pariſh of Swithland; the king's moſt excellent majeſty as patron of the rectory; and the rev. John Llwyd, clerk, as rector, and entitled to all the tithes in the open fields, and alſo in the greater part of the antient incloſures and parcels of woodland, and to one acre and a half of glebe in the ſaid open fields; and the ſaid earl of Stamford and Warrington, Mr. Butler-Danvers, and others, as proprietors of the reſidue of the ſaid incloſed and unincloſed lands and parcels of woodland, and, together with the rector, entitled to right of common in the ſame, or in ſome parts of the unincloſed land: For the more convenient allotting of the lands, all the crofts, cloſes, homeſteads, and old incloſures, in Swithland, except the homeſtead of the rectorial houſe, belonging to any proprietor of land in the open field, are directed to be thrown into hotch pot. Two acres in the firſt place to be allotted for materials for roads; then an equivalent to the rector for his glebe; and, in full ſatisfaction for his tithes and allowable dues (except Eaſter offerings, mortuaries, and ſurplice fees, ariſing out of the lands intended to be divided), one-fifth of the land to be incloſed, and one-ſeventh of ſuch of the antient incloſures as were titheable; and ſuch compenſation for the tithe of wood-land as the commiſſioners ſhall think equitable; a full compenſation to the earl of Stamford and Warrington and to Mr. Butler-Danvers, as lords of the manors, for their reſpective intereſts; and to the ſaid earl, in ſatisfaction for his chief rent of 1*l.* 9*s.* 9*d.* and other annual payments, ſo much land as ſhall be equal in amount to ſuch payments, to be let on a leaſe for 21 years. The remainder to be perpetually allotted to the ſeveral proprietors. Lands ſubject to any modus to continue ſubject thereto; and old incloſures, belonging to perſons having no open field lands, to continue ſubject to tithes; and this act not to affect the queſtion reſpecting a certain meſſuage and land called Kinſley Hill Farm, belonging to Ralph Tebbutt[3], eſq. which he claims to be diſcharged from great and ſmall tithes, by the payment of an annual ſum to the rector; but which Mr. Llwyd does not admit, but claims tithes in kind to be due to him from the ſaid farm. The commiſſioners are required to aſcertain the manorial rights reſpectively of the earl of Stamford and Warrington, and of Mr. Butler Danvers. No part whatever of Charnwood Foreſt, otherwiſe Charley-chace, or of Rothley Plain, to be affected by this act; nor the title of Mr. Llwyd, or his ſucceſſors, in reſpect of their right of tithes upon the ſame, or of any other perſons taking benefit of this act, by the incloſure thereby intended; but all ſuch rights to remain as if this act had not been paſſed; and a general ſaving of all the rights of the lords of the reſpective manors.

The appearance of the country in this lordſhip (as of the county in general) is rather flat, and the nature of the ſoil inclining to wet; but it either is, or ſoon will be, made dry; and the ſituation is in general healthy.

The price of coal, which before the navigation was uſually from 8*d.* to 10½*d.* the hundred weight, is now ſomewhat increaſed.

The poor's rate is from 2*s.* 6*d.* to 3*s.* in the pound.

The wake is held on the firſt Sunday after the 6th of November.

	£.	s.	d.
Money raiſed for the poor of Swithland, within the year ending at Eaſter 1776,	49	10	9
Expended in county rates, &c.	3	4	8
———— on the poor, &c. —	46	6	1
Rent of workhouſe and habitations,	2	16	0
Expended in litigations, —	0	0	0
Money raiſed for 1783, —	59	1	0
———— 1784, —	54	10	1
———— 1785, —	63	11	10
Medium of theſe three years,	59	1	0
———— of county expences,	4	2	8
———— of expences not relating to the poor; repairs of the church, roads, &c.	0	0	0
———— of nett annual expences,	54	18	4
———— of attending upon magiſtrates,	0	8	0
———— of entertainments at meetings,	0	11	8
———— of law expences, —	23	12	3
———— of ſetting the poor to work,	0	0	0

The Return made to Parliament in 1786, in anſwer to an enquiry reſpecting the charitable donations in this pariſh, may be ſeen in vol. I. p. 79.

By the Return made to Parliament in 1801, Swithland contained 58 inhabited houſes, and 62 families, conſiſting of 162 males, and 160 females; of whom 36 were perſons chiefly employed in agriculture, 49 in trade, manufacture, &c.; in all 322.

Slate Pits (fig. 4).

On the edge of Charnwood Foreſt, but without the limits of Swithland lordſhip, are ſome excellent Slate Pits; the proprietors of which are the earl of Stamford, the hon. Butler-Danvers, and Mr. Hind, a gentleman well known for his ingenious devices on theſe Slate ſtones. The part belonging to the earl of Stamford is rented by Mr. Hind, and that belonging to Mr. Butler-Danvers by Mr. Johnſon.

---

[1] Many of them were purchaſed by Mr. Baynes, bookſeller in Paternoſter-row.

[2] On ſhewing this paragraph to a friend, he obſerved, that it was a ſaying of the late Mr. Noble, of Leiceſter, wine-merchant, of facetious memory, vulgo dict. Kit Noble, who uſed to be much with ſir John Danvers. But whether Kit borrowed the ſaying from ſir John, or ſir John from Kit, he knows not.

[3] Now reſident at Mountſorell.

"Theſe Pits are accidentally formed by the artificer's labour into ſtriking ſcenery, bordering on the terrific. They preſent kindred marks of the Foreſt rock; and are a part of it, boſomed in the earth: The pits are very deep, extenſive, and employ a great number of hands. The Slates alſo, on account of their good quality, are taken to great diſtances. Beſides the houſes of theſe parts being chiefly roofed with them, they are wrought in various forms, both for utility and ornament. Chimney-pieces made of them are carved, and have an effect little inferior to black marble. Numbers of the large ſort are uſed for mile-ſtones, grave-ſtones, &c.; and, when engraven by a ſkilful hand, produce letters, &c. ſuperior to any other ſort of ſtone which is uſed for the ſame purpoſe[1]."

"Blue Slates are raiſed near Swithland (provincially Swidland), on the Southern[2] ſide of the Charnwood hills; where an immenſe excavation has, within the laſt 50 years, been made. Superficial quarries have been worked time immemorial; but their produce was of a coarſe quality compared with thoſe which are now raiſed, ſome of which are now equal to the Weſtmoreland Slate[3]. They are raiſed as blocks, blaſted from an almoſt ſeamleſs rock. The blocks are firſt cleft into ſlabs; and the ſlabs afterward into ſlates; or, if too ſtrong and coarſe for this purpoſe, are thrown aſide as coarſe flags, for various uſes. Out of the larger blocks, chimney-pieces and tomb-ſtones are cut. The ſame kind of blue rock is found in different parts of the Foreſt hills; but none, yet, which afford Slates equal in quality to the Swidland Slates[4]."

"The ſituation of the Slate Pits is the midſt of a grand and romantic ſcenery, formed by the Foreſt Hills and Budden wood, and hillocks in various fantaſtic ſhapes which ſurmount the excavated ground, and are ſeparated by dells, through one of which a beautiful rill winds its way. There are two large Pits, which cannot be leſs than 40 yards from the ſurface to the bottom. The depth of ſoil to the ſtratum of the Slate is from 10 to 15 yards. The blocks which form the materials of workmanſhip are blaſted out of the rocks by what is called Drilling; which is performed in the following manner: A hole is bored with an iron drill to the depth of from three feet and a half to one foot. The hole is then dried out, and powder depoſited at the bottom of the hole; a wire is then inſerted till it comes into contact with the powder, upon which the hole is rammed very hard with clay to the mouth; then the wire is drawn out; and the orifice made by it which leads to the body of the powder is filled with powder; a ſmall piece of touch-paper with fire at one end is then applied to that part of the powder in the orifice made by the wire, and burns gradually, in order to give time to the men to get out of the way. When it reaches the body of the powder, the exploſion inſtantly takes place. The effect of the exploſion is various, according to the uſe deſigned to be made of the materials; ſo that at ſome times 20 tons are looſened, at other times not 20 pounds, and ſometimes not an ounce; for the ſtrength of the powder occaſionally evaporates at the hole, inſtead of producing any effect on the ſolid Rock. When the blocks are looſened, they are drawn up by a machine in pieces from one hundred weight to a ton and a half. When the Rocks are blaſted, a good deal of water often flows out; and there are ſprings of water at the bottom of the Pits, from whence the water is raiſed up by machines for that purpoſe. The water at the bottom of Mr. Danvers's Pit, after being raiſed up, is thrown into the channel of a ſough, that conveys it to the diſtance of ſeveral hundred yards from the ſurface of the Pit. The blocks are ſawed with hand-ſaws, and are kept in a proper ſtate for the operation of the ſaw with conſtant ſupplies of ſand and water. Various are the uſes to which the blocks are converted; ſome into common ſlates, and others into ſlabs for curriers to dreſs their ſkins upon; alſo into ſink-ſtones, ſalting-ſtones, milk-ſtones, cheeſe-preſſes, chimney-pieces, and tomb-ſtones.

The labourers at the Pits are paid in ſummer at the rate of 2*s*. 3*d*. and 2*s*. 6*d*. a day, and in winter 2*s*. Sawing is performed at the rate of 10*d*. a foot.

Slates are cloven by the ſcore; ſome at the rate of 10*d*. a ſcore, and others at the rate of 10*d*. for five ſcore.

Some of the ſlabs which are made for curriers are as large as nine feet by four, and they are valued at 3*d*. and 9*d*. a foot.

The prices of Slates are 3*s*. a ſcore for the large ſort, and the ſame ſum for ſix ſcore of the common ſort.

Milk-ſtones are charged at the rate of 2*s*. 9*d*. a gallon, and ſink-ſtones at the rate of 20*d*. a foot.

A cheeſe-preſs compleat coſts about three guineas, on account of the appendages.

Chimney-pieces, when plain, are charged at the rate of 2*s*. 6*d*. a foot; more poliſhed workmanſhip is charged accordingly.

The prices of grave-ſtones are as follows: All under 20 inches wide, and at 20 inches, are charged 20*d*. a foot. The price is raiſed a penny an inch as they advance in width, till they are 30 inches wide; then the price is 2*s*. 6*d*. till they are three feet wide; from three feet and above, the price is 2*s*. 9*d*. a foot[5]."

The CHURCH (ſee Plate CXXXVIII.)

dedicated to St. Leonard, conſiſts of a handſome embattled tower, ſurmounted with pinnacles (in which are ſix bells), a nave, and chancel. At the Eaſt end of the South ſide is a chapel, built by ſir Joſeph Danvers in 1727 (the date over the entrance), appropriated to the burial of that family; and another part as big as the Danvers chapel on the Weſt of it.

On the bells are inſcribed, "The gift of ſir John Danvers, 1760."—One of theſe, being cracked, was re-caſt at Leiceſter in 1793.

A neat modern font of ſtatuary marble by Hayward, a fine organ by Snetzler, and a noble ſervice of communion plate, conſiſting of a large diſh, a large flaggon, two cups and covers, two ſalvers, and two candleſticks, were given by the late baronet.

A large pew, at the South-Weſt corner of the church, is reſerved as a veſtry-room; in which is, "Francis Danvers, 1631."

In the church Mr. Burton noticed theſe arms.

In the Eaſt window of the chancel:

Gules, ſeven maſcles voided and conjoined Or. Ferrers of Groby; fig. 5.

Walleis; impaling, Argent, a croſs patée Azure, charged with five bezants; fig. 6.

In the South Eaſt window:

Ferrers of Groby repeated.

Gules, a lion rampant queué fourché Argent. Montfort earl of Leiceſter; fig. 7.

Vert, a lion rampant Or. Norton; fig. 8.

Gules, fretty Or. Audeley; fig. 9.

---

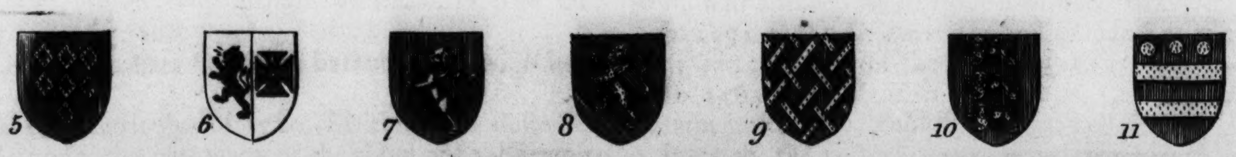
[1] Throſby's Leiceſterſhire, 1777, 12mo, vol. VI. p. 14; and Excurſions, 1790, 4to, p. 455.

[2] See p. 1047.

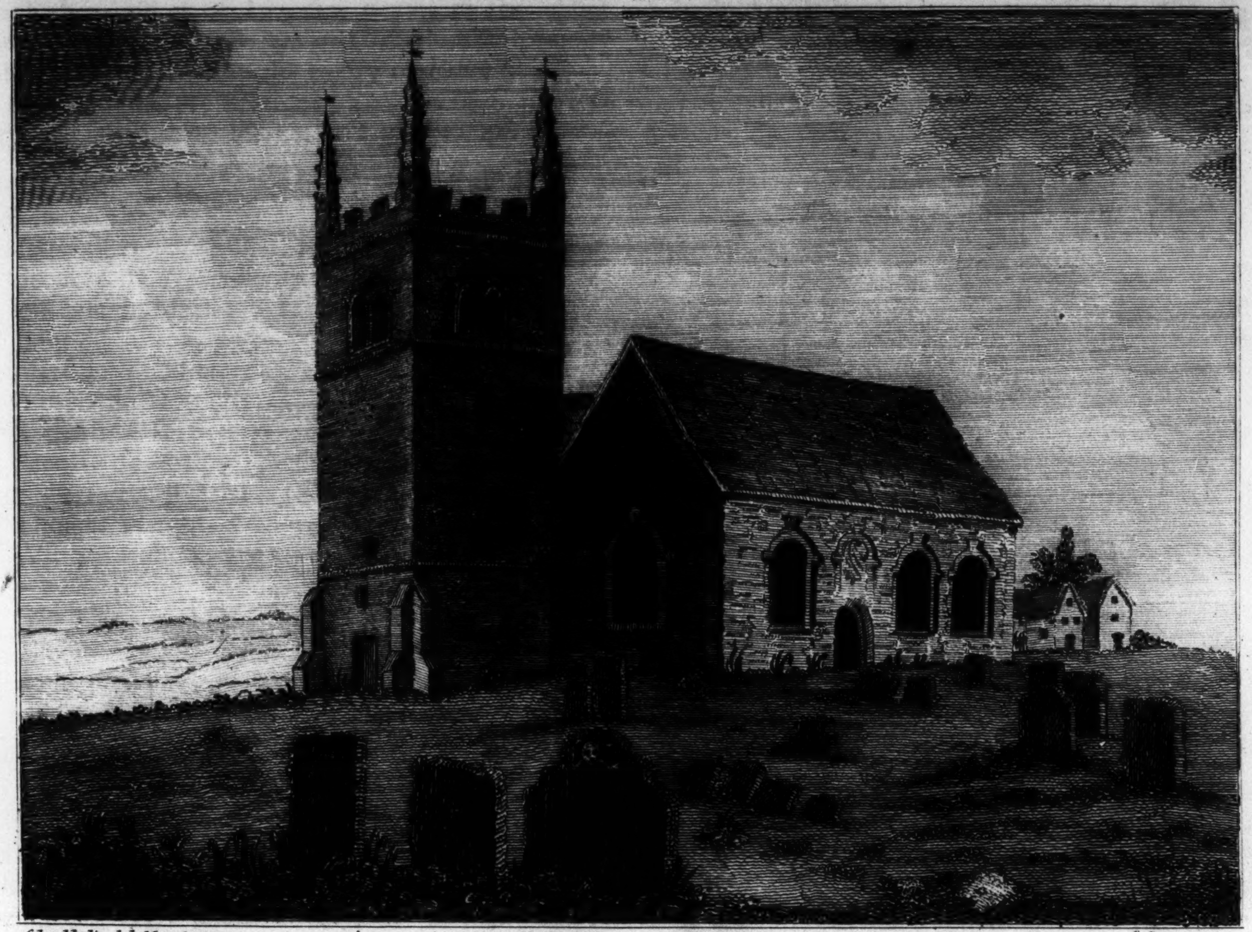
[3] The proceſs in Northamptonſhire is thus deſcribed by Mr. Morton, in his "Natural Hiſtory" of that county, p. 488: "The Slate ſtone is uſually dug at Michaelmas, or thereabouts. They pile it up in ſtacks, which they cover up with ſand till the froſty evenings. At the firſt of thoſe they take down the ſtacks, and lay each piece of Slate ſtone flat-ways on the ground, and ſprinkle them with water, keeping them always moiſt. This is their employment during the winter. Should the ſtones lie expoſed to ſun and wind before the froſts appear, it would in ſuch manner ſet or ſtock the vein (as the workmen ſpeak), that they would not cleave. Thoſe that have been ſeaſoned, like other ſtone for building, endure as well as any ſtone whatever in walling-work. The frequenter the froſts, the clearer and the finer they cleave or run. The cleaving or running them with any fit tool along the clefts or ſeams made by the froſts is the ſlateſman's buſineſs the next enſuing ſpring and ſummer. The tendency of thoſe clefts that are made by the froſts is according to the flat way of the ſtone. A piece of ſlate ſtone two inches thick will run perhaps into twenty plates, that all lie parallel to each other. The contrary way will not run. Single plates of it are never hurt by froſts."

[4] Marſhall, Remarks on the Agriculture of the Midland Counties, vol. I. p. 27; and ſee before, under Barrow, p. 81. Mr. Johnſon, who rents Mr. Danvers's pits, ſays the extracts from Throſby and Marſhall are accurate accounts.

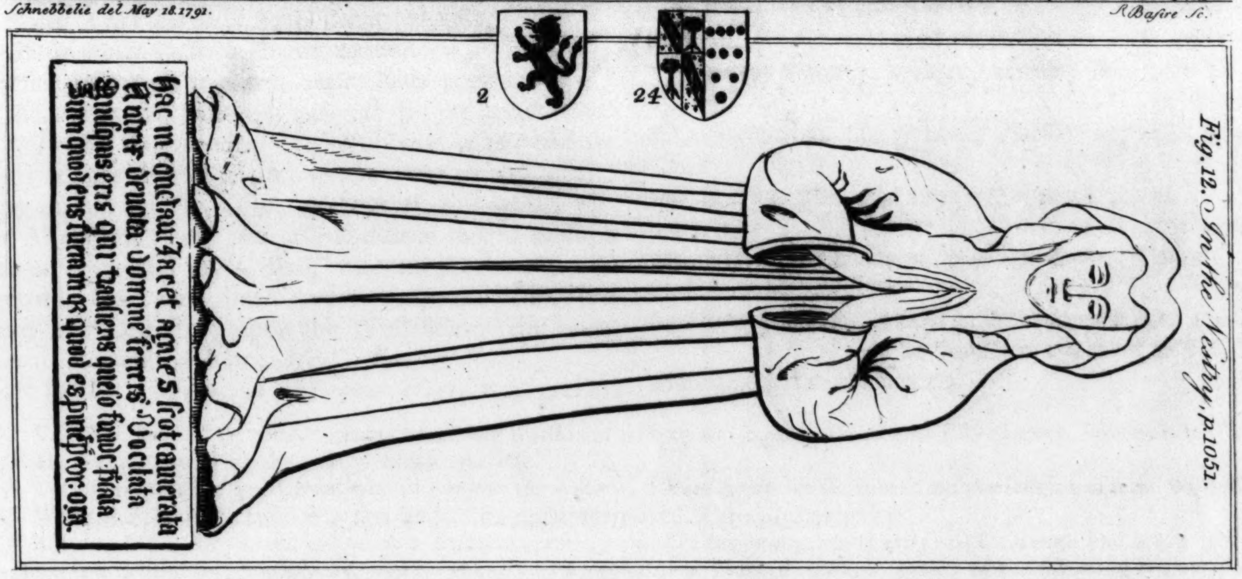
[5] For theſe intereſting particulars I am indebted to my old acquaintance and worthy friend the Rev. Aulay Macaulay; who has taken the trouble to make himſelf maſter of the ſubject, by perſonally viſiting the Pits, and by ſeveral converſations with Mr. Hind and Mr. Johnſon.



SWITHLAND. S. E. Vol. III. Pl. CXXXVIII. p. 1050.



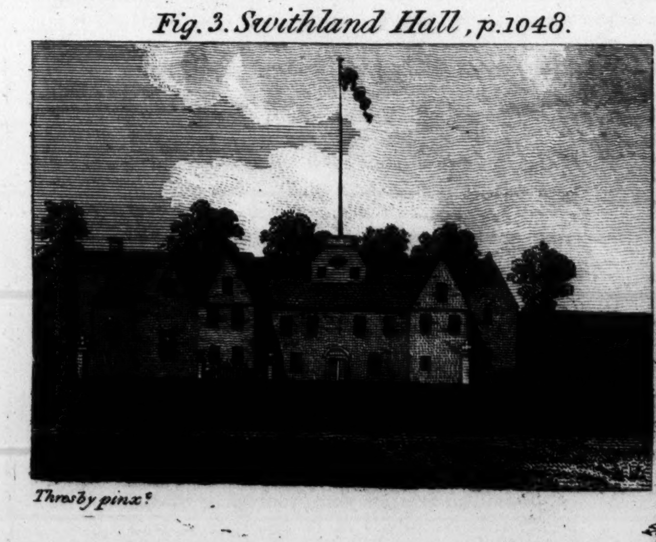
Schnebbelie del. May 18. 1791. R. Basire sc.



2
24
hac in conclaui Jacet agnes scrotcaunerata
Et atrix deuota domine ferrers vocitata
Quisquis eris qui transiens queso funde precata
Sum quod eris fueramque quod es pro me precor ora

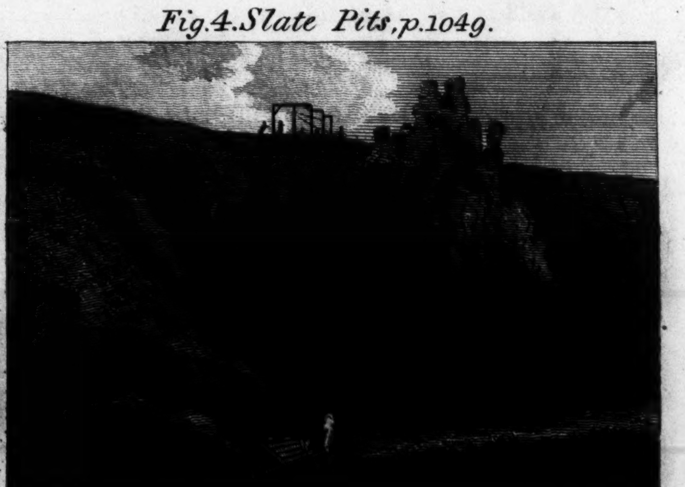
Fig. 12. In the Vestry, p. 1051.

Fig. 3. Swithland Hall, p. 1048.

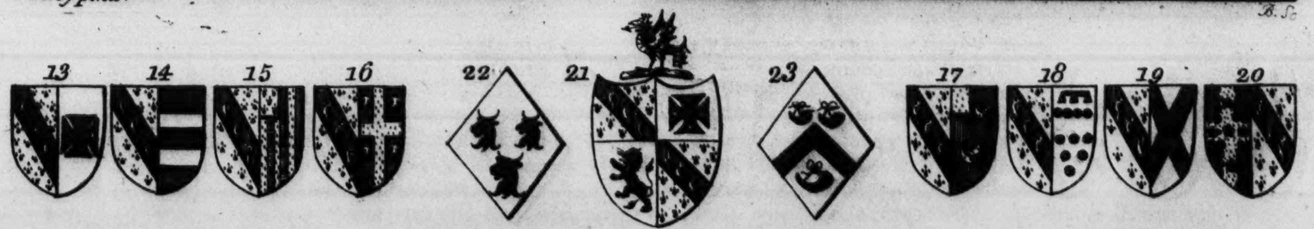


Thresby pinx.

Fig. 4. Slate Pits, p. 1049.



B. S.



13
14
15
16
22
21
23
17
18 19 20

In a South window:

Gules, three lions paſſant guardant in pale Or. England; fig. 10.

Gules, two bars Or, three bezants in chief. Wake; fig. 11.

In the Matriculus of 1220, Swithland is deſcribed to be under the patronage of the abbot of St. Ebrulph; Roger the then rector, who had been inſtituted by Hugh then biſhop of Lincoln, paying to the abbot one mark de novo[1].—A rent of 10*s.* was alſo formerly paid from Swithland to the priory of Hinckley.

In 1344, the procurations were, 7*s.* 6¾*d.* the rectory was taxed at 12 marks, and paid 1*s.* 4*d.* for Peter-pence. The abbot of St. Ebrulph, the then patron, had alſo a penſion from it of one mark.

In 1534-5, the procurations and ſynodals were 10*s.* 7*d.*; and the value of the rectory £.12.

In 1564, Swithland is noticed as a peculiar and exempt juriſdiction, conſiſting of 30 families.

In 1650, the rectory was returned worth £.40, and the incumbent as ſufficient.

In the king's books it is entered as a diſcharged living, and as a peculiar of Groby, worth £.10. 4*s.* 7*d.* Clear yearly value, in 1712, £.125. 16*s.* 10*d.*

The epiſcopal procurations are 2*s.* 4*d.*; the archidiaconal 8*s.* 11*d.* and his ſynodals 3*s.* 6*d.*

RECTORS.	PATRONS.
Roger, 1220.	The abbot of St. Ebrulph.
Roger de Turkilleſton, 1223.	The prior of Ware, proctor to the abbot of St. Ebrulph.
Geoffrey de Warwik, 1239.
William de Marſton, 1265.
John de Sutton, 1270.
Peter de Ylviſton, 1277.
Gilbert de Dorebri, 1285.
Richard de Birchy, reſigned 1356.	The king.
Richard de Mitford, preſbyter, 4 kal. Dec. 1356; reſigned 1360.
Robert de Calverley, 5 id. Maii, 1360.
Thomas Wright, Oct. 14, 1440.
William Hebbe, 1534.
——— Smith[2], 1604.	The king, pleno jure.
Guy Cardale, 1636.
Thomas Jackſon, Jan. 10, 1662; died Nov. 6, 1700.
Abel Brokeſby, M. A. Dec. 6, 1700; died July 13, 1735.
Philip Alſton[3], M. A. of New-college, Oxford; died 1760.
John Llwyd[4], M. A. June 1760; the preſent rector.

MONUMENTAL INSCRIPTIONS.

"On a flat graveſtone inlaid with plates of braſs, in the body of the church[5], near the entrance into the chancel," ſays Mr. Burton, "is the picture of a woman veiled (fig. 12); under which is this inſcription:

"Hoc in conclave jacet Agnes Scott camerata,
Antrix devota Dominæ Ferrers vocitata:
Quiſquis eris qui tranſieris, queſo, funde precata;
Sum quod eris, fueramque quod es: pro me, precor, ora."

"In the Eaſt window of the chancel is her picture in glaſs, drawn to the life, in the ſame habit, with a ring on her finger. This Agnes Scott, as I gueſs, was an Anchoreſs; and the word Antrix in this epitaph coined from antrum, a cave, wherein ſhe lived; and certainly (as I have been credibly informed) there is a cave near Leiceſter, upon the Weſt ſide of the town, at this day called Black Agnes's Bower[6]."

"In this church, in the year 1631, was erected a very fine raiſed monument[7] of blue ſtone and alabaſter, by William Danvers, eſq. for Francis Danvers, eſq. his father, deceaſed, whereon are theſe epitaphs:

At the head of the tomb:

H. S. E.

"Franciſcus Danvers, armiger, dominus iſtius villæ, qui ex priore uxore, Eliza Skeffington, filia Johannis Skeffington, de Fiſherwick, armigeri, duobus auctus filiis, Willielmo et Johanne; filiaque una, Elizabetha:
hos, ut et alteram conjugem, Brigettam Dorley, filiam Edmundi Dorley, ſuperſtites relinquens, placide in Domino obdormivit undecimo die Junii, anno Domini MDCXXXI, ætatis ſuæ ſeptuageſimo-primo.

---

[1] Vol. I. p. lix.

[2] In 1604, a cauſe concerning Swithland rectory was tried in the court of Exchequer, Smith verſus Blankey.

[3] He vacated the living the year in which he died.

[4] To this reſpectable gentleman, who ſtill enjoys the rectory, I have much ſatisfaction in acknowledging eſpecial obligations.

[5] When the Danvers chapel was new built, this ſtone was placed in the preſent veſtry.

[6] Burton, MS.—On the ſubject of this tradition, an ingenious young poet, whoſe early loſs his friends had much reaſon to deplore as a man of ſuperior talents, and his country as a ſoldier of undaunted courage, produced the following elegant lines:

"On the Cave called Annis's Bower, being an Anſwer to a very young Lady's Enquiries about the Story of Black Annis.

"Where down the plain the winding pathway falls,
From Glenn-field vill, to Leſter's antient walls,
Nature, or Art, with imitative power,
Far in the Glenn has plac'd Black Annis' Bower.
An oak, the pride of all the moſſy dell,
Spreads his broad arms above the ſtony cell;
And many a buſh, with hoſtile thorns array'd,
Forbids the ſecret cavern to invade;
Whilſt delving vales each way meander round,
And violet banks with redolence abound.
Here, if the uncouth ſong of former days
Soil not the page with Falſehood's artful lays,
Black Annis held her ſolitary reign,
The dread and wonder of the neighb'ring plain.
The Shepherd griev'd to view his waning flock,
And trac'd the firſtlings to the gloomy rock.
No vagrant children cull'd the flow'rets then,
For infant blood oft ſtain'd the gory den.
Not Sparta's Mount *, for infant tears renown'd,
Echo'd more frequently the piteous ſound.
Oft the gaunt Maid the frantic Mother curs'd,
Whom Britain's wolf with ſavage nipple nurs'd;
Whom Leſter's ſons beheld aghaſt the ſcene,
Nor dar'd to meet the Monſter of the Green.
'Tis ſaid the ſoul of mortal man recoil'd
To view Black Annis' eye, ſo fierce and wild;
Vaſt talons, foul with human fleſh, there grew
In place of hands, and features livid blue,
Glar'd in her viſage; whilſt her obſcene waiſt
Warm ſkins of human victims cloſe embrac'd.
But Time, than Man more certain, tho' more ſlow,
At length 'gainſt Annis drew his ſable bow †;
The great decree the pious Shepherds bleſs'd,
And general joy the general fear confeſs'd.
Not without horror they the cave ſurvey,
Where hung the monſtrous trophies of her ſway:
'Tis ſaid, that in the rock large rooms were found,
Scoop'd with her claws beneath the flinty ground;
In theſe the Swains her hated body threw,
But left the entrance ſtill to future view,
That children's children might the tale rehearſe,
And Bards record it in their tuneful verſe.
But, in theſe liſtleſs days, the idle Bard
Gives to the winds all themes of old regard;
Forgive, then, if in rough, unpoliſh'd ſong,
An unſkill'd Swain the dying tale prolong.
And you, ye Fair, whom Nature's ſcenes delight,
If Annis' Bower your vagrant ſteps invite,
Ere the bright ſun Aurora's car ſucceed,
Or dewy evening quench the thirſty mead,
Forbear with chilling cenſures to refuſe
Some gen'rous tribute to the ruſtic Muſe.
A violet, or common daiſy throw,
Such gifts as Maro's lovely nymphs beſtow;
Then ſhall your Bard ſurvive the Critic's frown,
And in your ſmiles enjoy his beſt renown ‡."

[7] Burton, MS.—This monument was alſo removed, and the inſcriptions placed on the Weſt wall of the Danvers chapel.

* Mount Taygetus, in a cavern near to which it was the Lacedemonian cuſtom to expoſe deformed and weakly children to periſh.

† By poetical licence for ſcythe.

‡ Some particulars of lieutenant John Heyrick, author of this poem, may be ſeen in vol. II. p. 894.

FROM EXILE HOME RETOURN'D MY FLESH AND SPIRIT.
THER FATHER'S HOUSES, EARTH AND HEAVEN, INHERIT.

On another ſide:

"ON EARTH TO TOYLE AND TROUBLE NOT DEJECTED, I, TIME'S CERTAINE AND UNCERTAINE END FORESEEING, SOUGHT, FOUND A BETTER AND A SURER BEING,
CHANG'D EARTH FOR HEAV'N, TIME FOR ETERNITY.

On another ſide:

"TRUE FAITH IN GOD, TO MAN FIRME FAITHFULNESS, HONOUR OF VERTUE, SUCCOUR OF DISTRES,
JUST HOLINESS, PRUDENT SIMPLICITYE, WITH DANVERS LIV'D, AND IN THIS GRAVE DO LIE; WITH DANVERS DEAD; AND YET NOT SO, FOR THEY IMMORTALL ARE, AND MAKE HIM LIVE FOR AYE."

The ſtone work of this monument was raiſed a yard from the ground, on which lay a plain Barrow ſtone wrought to the blue marble; above which, in the wall:

On the head of the tomb, fig. 13—23.

Ermine, on a bend Gules three parrots Or, Danvers; impaling, Argent, on a croſs patée Azure, five fleurs de lis Or, Walcote.

Danvers; impaling, Azure, two bars Argent, Venables of Kinderton.

Danvers; impaling, Paly of ſix, Or and Azure, a canton Ermine, Shirley.

Danvers; impaling, Azure, a croſs formé between four leopards' faces Or, Kingſton.

Danvers; impaling, Gules, three creſcents and a canton Or, Coke.

Danvers; impaling, Argent, ten torteauxes, a label of three points Azure, Babington.

Danvers; impaling, Argent, on a ſaltire Azure, five water-bougets Or, Sacheverell.

Gules, on a croſs engrailed Or, five roſes of the firſt, Cumberford; impaling the arms of Mrs. Elizabeth Danvers.

Quarterly, 1. and 4, Danvers; 2. Walcot; 3. Walleis. Creſt, on a wreath Ermine and Gules, a wivern Argent langued Gules.

Argent, three bulls' heads eraſed Sable, Skeffington.

Argent, a chevron between three bugle horns Sable, Wirley.

The head of the tomb was in white; the arms and title above-written ſet in a blue ſtone bordered about with black, and about that a frame chamfered about of white alabaſter; but, ſince the rebuilding of the Danvers chapel, the arms and inſcriptions have been there placed againſt the Weſt wall [1]."

A braſs monument on the Eaſt wall, ſurrounded with Swithland ſlate, is thus inſcribed:

"In memory of William Danvers, of Swithland, eſq. who married, 4th of November, 1618, Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas Babington, of Rothley Temple, eſq. by Catherine, eldeſt daughter of Henry Kendall, of Smithſby in Derbyſhire, eſq.; and had iſſue 16 children. He died 30th of Auguſt, 1656; and his widow died in 1678.

"Henry Danvers, eſq. ſon and heir of William, was married 18 March, 1644, to Anne, the third daughter of ſir John Cooke, of Melbourne in Derbyſhire, ſecretary of ſtate; and had iſſue ſeven children. He died in 1687. His wife was learned in the Hebrew and Greek Scriptures. She died in 1686.

"Samuel Danvers, eſq. ſon and heir of Henry, was married, 20 December, 1683, to Elizabeth, only daughter of Joſeph Morewood, of London, merchant, by Elizabeth Blundell, coheireſs of Woodcock, eſq. of Shinfeild, Berkſhire; and had iſſue nine children. He died in 1693. His widow married John Danvers, of Preſcott in Oxfordſhire, eſq. without iſſue. She died, 11 December, 1719.

"Joſeph Danvers, eſq. ſon and heir of Samuel, was married, 7 Dec. 1721, to Frances, the 2d daughter of Thomas Babington, eſq. by Margaret Hall, ſecond daughter of Henry Hall, of Gretford in Lincolnſhire, eſq.; and has had iſſue five children. He re-built this chapel in 1727, and erected this monument.

"Lectori candido:
God, who to thee reaſon and knowledge lent,
Will aſk how two ſuch talents have been ſpent.
Search not to find what lyes too deeply hid,
Nor to know things whoſe knowledge is forbid.
Look forward what's to come, and back what's paſt;
Thy life will be with praiſe and prudence grac'd.
Dame Fortune's ſmiles unguarded man ſurpriſe;
But, when ſhe frowns, he armes, and her defies;
When well at eaſe and happy, live content;
And then conſider why that life was lent."

Againſt the ſame wall, on a ſimilar monument:

"To the memory of John Watſon Danvers, eſq. Mr. Joſeph Danvers, Mr. Henry Danvers, Mr. William Danvers, and Mrs. Suſannah Danvers, five of the children of ſir John Danvers, bart. by Mary lady Danvers his wife, who was the daughter and heireſs of Joel Watſon, eſq. of London, merchant; which children all died young, and were buried in this chapel in leaden coffins: God's will be done!"

On a flat ſtone:

"Here lieth the body of Francis Danvers,
the ſon of Samuel Danvers, eſq. of Swithland;
who died December 1697, ætatis ſuæ 4°."

On a handſome monument of white marble, on the Weſt wall, is this inſcription in capital letters:

"The body of Sir JOHN DANVERS, bart.
who departed this life about the 18th century, was depoſited under the ſmall blue ſtone at the foot of this monument.
He was the only ſon of ſir Joſeph Danvers, bart. by Frances his wife, daughter of Thomas Babington, of Rothley Temple, in this county, eſq. Sir Joſeph was the ſon of Samuel Danvers, eſq.
by Elizabeth Morewood, an heireſs, of Overton in the county of Derby; who, ſurviving her huſband, married John Danvers, of Preſcott Manor, in the county of Oxford, eſq. the only ſon and heir of ſir
John Danvers, of Whichwood Foreſt, in the ſaid county, knight.
Sir John was the only brother and heir of Henry Danvers, earl of Danby, a general officer, and knight of the Garter, founder of the Phyſic-garden at Oxford, a faſt friend and loyal adherent of Charles the Firſt; in whoſe reign and ſervice he died without iſſue.
Theſe two brothers were ſons of ſir John Danvers, knight, by Elizabeth, daughter of John Nevill lord Latimer, ſon-in-law of queen Katharine Parr. The Earl [2] was the friend of the King; but Sir John [3] was the friend of the Conſtitution; and, in the violent

---

[1] Burton, MS.

[2] See before, p. 1048.

[3] Lord Clarendon obſerves, that "between being ſeduced and a ſeducer, ſir John Danvers became ſo far involved in the council of the Regicides, that he ſuffered himſelf to be applied to their worſt offices, taking it to be a high honour to be on the ſame bench with Cromwell, who employed and contemned him at once. He was named by the Parliament one of the council of ſtate, which they ſet up as a kind of privy council, and which they inveſted with the executive power. But, when Cromwell aſſumed the ſovereignty, they took mutual leave of each other; the one hating, the other deſpiſing, his former companion. Danvers ſhewed the firſt paſſion of malice by holding cabals in the army, in March 1655-6, inciting them to revolt from the Protector, who, by his ſpies, ſoon diſcovered and defeated it; but took no other notice of it, than to ſet a watch upon his conduct; and he died neglected, and in contempt with all parties. His brother the earl of Danby had been ſo offended by his public conduct, that he left property to the value of 30,000*l.* to his ſiſter lady Gargrave, in preference to him, though regularly his heir at law. At the Reſtoration, his name was inſerted in the act, excepting him from pardon, as if living, by which means all that wealth he had purchaſed by ſo many crimes was loſt to his heir. Had he ſurvived the return of king Charles II. he would undoubtedly have forfeited not only property but life, for no man could have fewer friends; he had neither relation or friend that would have ſtept forth to ſoften juſtice. Lord Clarendon juſtly calls him, "a proud, formal, weak man." See Dugdale, Bar. Angl. vol. II. p. 432; and Noble's "Lives of the Regicides," vol. I. pp. 165—168.

ſtruggles which enſued, ſided with that band of Patriots, who thought Liberty could not be too dearly bought, though at the expence of Royal blood. His death, happening before the Reſtoration, ſheltered him from perſecution; but his ſon, who was an infant when the King was beheaded, ſaw his paternal eſtates, to the amount of ten thouſand pounds a year, in the counties of Oxford and Wilts, in the hands of ſtrangers. The ſmall portion of his patrimony, which eſcaped the rapacity of the Court, that ſon left to ſir Joſeph Danvers for life, and to ſir John in tail. He was happy in his choice: Sir Joſeph was an able ſupporter of the Proteſtant cauſe. He was in parliament near thirty years in the reign of George the Second; was a deputy-lieutenant and acting juſtice of peace for this county; and, with his wife, lies buried in a tomb in this church-yard. Sir John, his ſon, thought proper to tread in the ſteps of his Proteſtant anceſtors, and ſeized every opportunity of ſhewing his attachment to their religious and civil principles. His bounty beautified this church, and re-built the parſonage. In all political conteſts, he uniformly gave his ſupport to the friends of the Proteſtant intereſt and aſſertors of Revolution principles, deeming them in conjunction the beſt pledges and ſecurities for his temporal welfare and eternal happineſs.

Et genus & proavos, & quæ non fecimus ipſi,
Vix ea noſtra voco.

Stemmata quid faciunt? quid prodeſt Pontice longo
Sanguine cenſeri, pictoſque oſtendere vultus Majorum?

Nobilitas ſola eſt atque unica Virtus."

The following family-pedigree in braſs is placed on the right hand ſide of ſir John's tomb:

1. Normande Alverſe, a Brabanter. He came into England in aid of William the Conqueror, anno Domini 1066, and married one of the daughters of Torold, ſon of Jeffery the Saxon.

2. Hugh Danvers, lived in the time of Henry I. and married Felice, daughter and heireſs of Thomas Sankville, of Froleſworth, co. Leiceſter.

3. Bertram Danvers, of Froleſworth, co. Leiceſter, married Alice, the relict of Robert de Barton.

4. Hugo Danvers, of Froleſworth, co. Leiceſter, was born the 18th of Henry III.

5. Stephen Danvers, lord of the manor of Froleſworth, co. Leiceſter. He was born 43 Henry III.

6. Robert Danvers was born the 8th of Edw. I.

Nicholas Danvers married Iſabella, the daughter of ſir Robert Burdett, knight, 14 Edward II.

Joan Danvers, daughter and heireſs, married Joſeph Armory, of Maldon, co. Eſſex, 15 Edward III.

7. Robert Danvers, of Shackerſton, co. Leiceſter.

8. William Danvers, of Shackerſton, co. Leiceſter, was born the 6th of Edward II.

9. Henry Danvers.

10. John Danvers was born the 29th of Edw. III.

11. John Danvers was born the 16th of Richard II.

12. John Danvers, by the right of his wife, of Swithland, co. Leiceſter, was born the 30th of Hen. VI. and married Elizabeth, the daughter and coheireſs of ſir John Walcot, knt.

13. Thomas Danvers married Alicia, the daughter of —— Venables, baron of Kinderton, 20 Henry VII.

14. John Danvers married Margaret[1], the daughter of ſir Ralph Shirley, knt. of Staunton, co. Leiceſter.

15. Francis Danvers married Margaret, the daughter of —— Kingſton, of the county of Glouceſter.

16. John Danvers, of Swithland, co. Leiceſter, was born the 2d of Edward VI.; married Iſabella, the daughter of Richard Coke, of Truſley, co. Derby.

Anna married Fr. Mulſo, of Twywell, c. Northampton.

Elizabeth married —— Mounſal, of Burton [Latimer], co. Northampton.

Dorothy married Arthur Beresford, of Shackerſton, co. Leiceſter.

17. Francis Danvers married Elizabeth, daughter of John Skeavington, of Fiſherwick, Stafford; died 1631.

John Danvers married the daughter of —— Allen, and died Oct. 26, 1674, aged 77 years.

Francis Cumberford, of Oxley, co. Stafford, married Elizabeth Danvers.

18. William Danvers married Elizabeth, the daughter of Thomas Babington, of Rothley, November 1618; died 1656.

William Danvers married the daughter of [William] Harpur, of the county of Derby.

Ann Danvers married —— Hallows, co. Notts.

Margaret Danvers married Gabriel Taylor, gent. of Wales.

Catharine Danvers married Joſias Beeſly, gent. the 31ſt of March, 1655.

Elizabeth Danvers married Wm. Palmer, of Wanlip.

19. Henry Danvers married the 13th of March, 1664, Ann, the third daughter of Joſeph Coke, of Melbourn, knt. and relict of Henry Sacheverell, of Morley, co. Derby. [See p. 509.]

20. Samuel Danvers married Elizabeth, the daughter of Joſeph Morewood, merchant, London, by Elizabeth Blundell, coheireſs of —— Woodcock, of Shinfield, co. Berks, Dec. 20, 1683; died 1693.

Anna Danvers married John Palmer, of Wanlip.

Eleanor Danvers.

21. Joſeph Danvers was married Dec. 7, 1721, to Frances, the ſecond daughter of Thomas Babington, of Rothley, co. Leiceſter.

Frances Danvers.	Lucy Danvers[3].
Catherine Danvers[2].	Fanny Danvers.

22. John Danvers was married October 10, 1752, to Mary Watſon, the daughter and heireſs of Joel Watſon, eſq. of London, merchant.

Suſannah Danvers.	Henry Danvers.
Mary Danvers.	Joſeph Danvers.
William Danvers.	John Watſon Danvers.

In the chancel, on flat ſtones:

"Here lieth the body of Thomas Jackſon, rector of Swithland 24 years;
who departed this life Nov. 6, 1700, aged 63."

"Here lieth the body of Johanna Jackſon, late wife of Tho. Jackſon, rector;
who departed this life June 26, 1700, aged 68.
Here lieth alſo interred Agrilla, the youngeſt daughter of Johanna Jackſon above-written, and wife of Mr. Richard Bacon, of Markfield.
She hath left three children, one ſon, and two daughters; and, after a pious care of her family, ſhe departed this life October 13, 1727, aged 51."

"Here lieth the body of Anne Bodle, wife of Thomas Bodle, of Markfield, gent.
and daughter of Thomas Jackſon, late rector of this place. She departed this life
March 26, 1702, anno ætatis 31, Salutis 1702."

"Here lieth the body of Thomas Bodle, ſon of Thomas Bodle, and grandſon of the ſaid Thomas Jackſon;
who died 19 May, 1700."

---

[1] In the Viſitation of 1619 is this note: "I find not that the ſaid John Danvers married this Margaret, otherwiſe than by conjecture; but I find that at the death of this Margaret the half manor of Swithland was given by certain feoffees to Thomas Aſton during his life, without impeachment of waſte; and after his death to John Danvers in tail. Fr. Danvers."—By the Shirley pedigree it appears that John Danvers married Anne, fourth ſiſter to ſir Ralph Shirley; who had a younger ſiſter, Margaret.

[2] Third wife of Eldred Lancelot Lee, eſq. of Coton, co. Salop.

[3] Married to the hon. colonel John Grey, uncle to the earl of Stamford; and died in 1799. See p. 684.

"Here lieth the body of William Raworth, of Mapplewell, gent.
who married Anne, the daughter of Robert Smalley, of Mountſorrel, gent.;
by whom he left iſſue one daughter named Anne.
He departed this life Feb. 15, 1733, aged 46."

"Here lieth alſo the body of Anne his wife, who died Dec. 8, 1741, aged 46."

"Here lieth Anne Raworth, daughter of Mr. William Raworth, of Mapplewell; who died June 7, 1744, in the 12th year of her age."

"Here lieth the body of Sarah Raworth, the wife of John Raworth, of Mapplewell, third daughter of William Yeomans, of Derby.
She departed this life the 6th day of May, 1722,
in the 69th year of her age."

"To the memory of John Raworth, who departed this life the 17 day of June, 1731,
in the 80th year of his age.
It's my deſire by my wife to lie here.
Stir not our bones until that Chriſt appear;
Until the day that Chriſt do come, and ſay,
'Ariſe, my Saints, and come you all away.'
This ordered by Anne Raworth his loving wife."

"Here lieth the body of Abel Brokeſby, A. M. who was rector of this pariſh 34 years.
He departed this life 13th July, 1735, ætatis 60.
Alſo here lieth the body of Alice Brokeſby,
the wife of Abel Brokeſby;
who departed this life June 4th, 1742, aged 70 years."

On flat ſtones in the nave:

"Hìc ſitum eſt corpus
Sam^lis^ Matthews, qui ob^t^ 9° Martij, 1694-5."

"Hìc ſitum eſt corpus
Nathanaelis filii Mich^lis^ Matthews, qui obiit 23° Sept. anno 1700."

"Hìc ſit^m^ eſt corpus
Tho^e^, alter^s^ filii Mich^lis^ Matthews, qui ob^t^ 23° Nov. 1696.
Mors janua vitæ."

"Hìc jacent reliquiæ rev^di^ viri Michaelis Matthews;
qui, Evangelium aſſiduè concionando,
juventutem paritèr erudiendo,
vitæ ſuæ miniſterio functus, obdormivit nonis Ap.
anno Salutis MDCCXXIII, ætatis ſuæ LXII.
ITEM SARA MATHEWS, UXOR EJUS, OBIIT V NON. MAII, MDCCXLIV, ANN. ÆT. LXXXI."

"Here lieth the body of Thomas,
the ſon of Michael Matthews, who died May 7, anno 1691.
Ο ΧΡΙΣΤΟΣ Ο ΒΙΟΣ ΑΘΑΝΑΤΟΣ ΕΙΜΙ."

"Here lieth the body of Chriſtian Hood, of Longdon in Staffordſhire; who departed this life,
at Mountſorrel, the 27th Nov. 1713, aged 80."

"Under this ſtone was buried the body of William,
the eldeſt ſon of Nicholas Grundy, gent.
by Hannah his wife, third daughter of Henry Lycet, of Hanſacre, in the county of Stafford, gent.
He died the 31ſt day of October, 1723, aged 11."

At the Weſt end of the church-yard, on a handſome ſlate tomb, ſurrounded with iron rails:

"The body of the honourable ſir Joſeph Danvers, bart.
lies in this tomb. He was born December 24th, 1686. He died Oct. 21, 1753.
He was the ſon of Samuel Danvers, eſq.
and Elizabeth Danvers his wife.
He was a member of parliament many years, and one of the deputy lieutenants and acting juſtices of the peace for this county.
The body of dame Frances Danvers, wife of the honourable ſir Joſeph Danvers, bart.
alſo lies in this tomb. She was born July 21, 1694. She died February 4, 1759. She was the daughter of Thomas Babington, eſq. and Margaret Babington his wife, of Rothley Temple in this county.
For farther particulars relating to this antient family you may conſult the monuments in this church."

On the South ſide:

"BE CHEARFULL, OH MAN, AND LABOUR TO LIVE:
THE MERCIFUL GOD A BLESSING WILL GIVE."

Repreſentation of building a houſe, and ploughing a field; and theſe arms: Quarterly, 1. and 4, Danvers; 2. and 3, Argent, an oak-tree fructed proper, Morewood; impaling Babington; fig. 24.

On the North ſide:

"WHEN YOUNG, I SAYL'D TO INDIA EAST AND WEST;
BUT, AGED, IN THIS PORT MUST LYE AT REST."

Repreſentation of a caſtle; a ſhip at a diſtance, &c.

At the head of a very elegant altar-tomb of ſlate:

"Depoſited lie the remains of Anne, late wife of Henry Hind, and daughter of Thomas and Anne Bennett, late of Woodthorpe.
She died March 2, 1789, in the 57th year of her age."

On other ſlate tombs:

"Beneath this ſtone lie the remains of Mr. Joſeph Prior[1].
He was land and houſe ſteward to ſir Joſeph and ſir John Danvers, baronets:
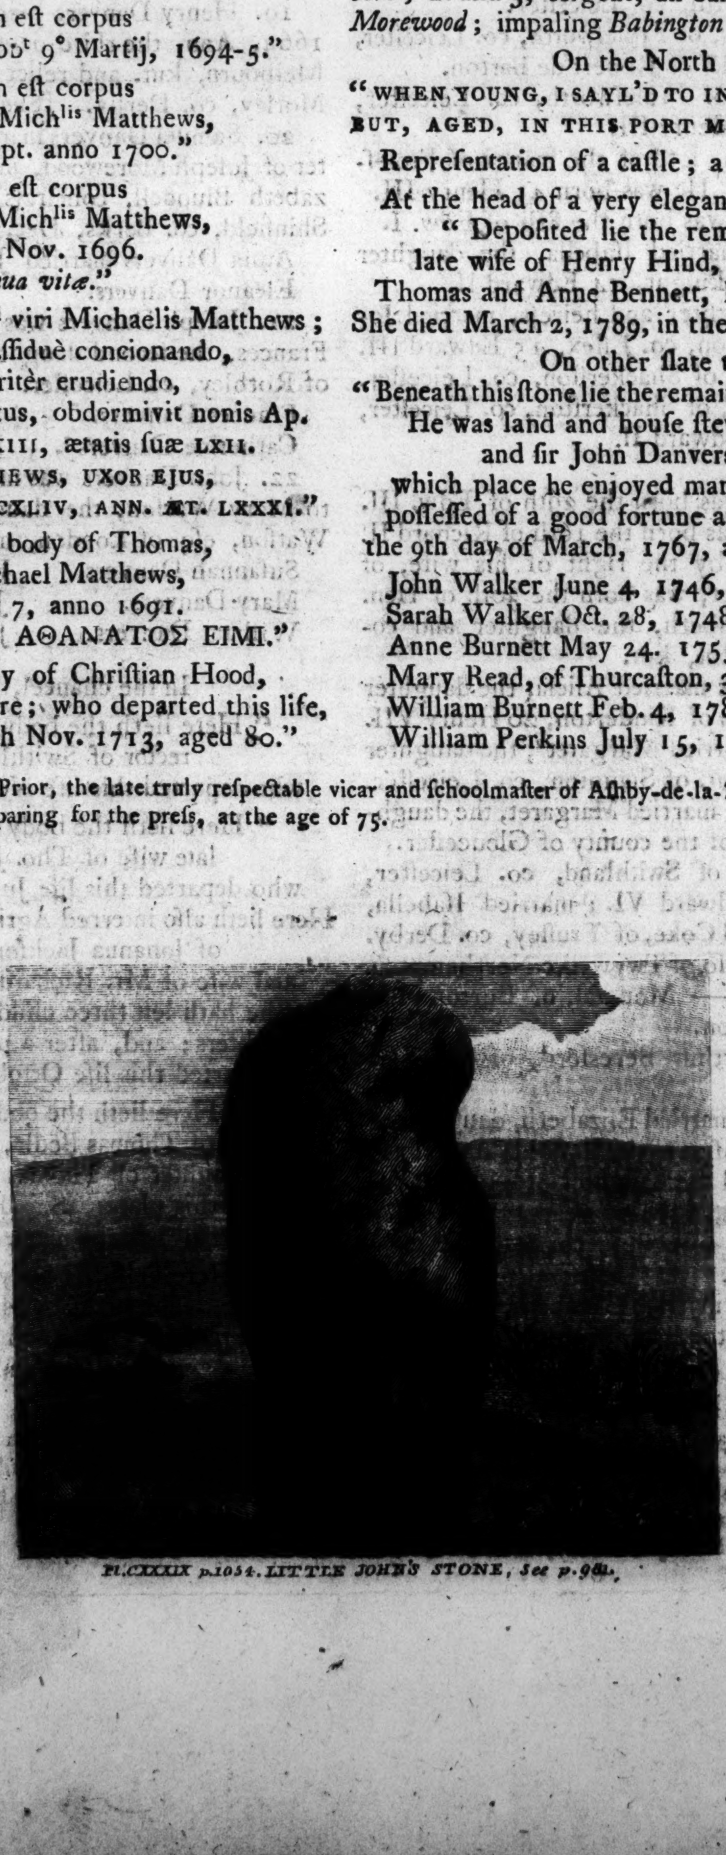
which place he enjoyed many years; and died,
poſſeſſed of a good fortune and a good character,
the 9th day of March, 1767, aged about 80 years."

John Walker June 4. 1746, aged 71.
Sarah Walker Oct. 28, 1748, aged 76.
Anne Burnett May 24. 1755, aged 77.
Mary Read, of Thurcaſton, 3 Feb. 1786, aged 73.
William Burnett Feb. 4, 1787, aged 71.
William Perkins July 15, 1793, aged 83.

---

[1] Father of the Rev. John Prior, the late truly reſpectable vicar and ſchoolmaſter of Aſhby-de-la-Zouch; who died Oct. 18, 1803, while this ſheet was peparing for the preſs, at the age of 75.



Pl.CXXXIX p.1054. LITTLE JOHN'S STONE, See p.981.

THURCASTON,

antiently called Turchitelestone and Thurkitelestſon, is a ſmall lordſhip, four miles diſtant from Leiceſter, and eight from Loughborough. It is bounded on the North by Rothley, on the Weſt by Cropſton, on the South by Anſty, and on the Eaſt by Wanlip; and, in the eccleſiaſtical diviſion of the county, is within the deanry of Akeley.

Nine ploughlands in Turchitelestſon were valued in the reign of the Confeſſor at thirty ſhillings, and were then held freely by Lewin. At the general ſurvey they were worth four pounds, and held by Hugo de Grentemaiſnell, who had alſo one houſe in the town of Leiceſter belonging to Turchiteleſtone[1]. The land was equal to four ploughs. Two were in the demeſne, and four bondmen; and twenty-two villans, with four bordars, had ſix ploughs. There was a mill of four ſhillings value, and a wood two miles long, and half a mile broad[2].

The lordſhip of Thurcaſton, from Hugo de Grentemaiſnell, came by marriage to Robert Boſſu earl of Leiceſter; but, in the Teſta de Nevill, compiled about the year 1240, it is wholly unnoticed.

In the Itinerary of 1280, Thurcaſton, Wanlip, Bradgate, Cropſton, and Newton Linford, anſwered collectively as one vill.

"This manor (as is evident by an old Feodary-book) was granted by Robert earl of Leiceſter, about the time of king Henry II. to William, one of his followers, to hold of him by this ſervice, viz. to keep his falcons; which office gave unto his poſterity the ſurname of Falconer, who thereupon bare, Argent, three falcons Gules. The heir general was married to Ridware, whoſe heir was married to Coton[3]."

In 1344, John Fauconer, knt. was the owner of Gayton, co. Stafford, Bretrichfield, Little Longdon, Totyn'ey, Yelderſley, Oxendon, Raynham, and tenements called Maplewell, co. Derby[4]. This John Falconer, who was of Thurcaſton, occurs as a witneſs to four deeds of William de Ferrariis, ſans date, of lands in Charnwood Foreſt, formerly in Mr. P. Le Neve's hands, and is there called miles[5].

In 1346, Thomas le Falkener, on the aid then granted to Edward of Woodſtoc, the king's eldeſt ſon, was aſſeſſed 10*s.* for a quarter of one knight's fee in Thurcaſton, parcel of the honour of Leiceſter[6].

In 1355, William Stoke biſhop of Rocheſter gave to John Falconer the manor of Thurcaſton, manor of Bretrichfield and Clayham, and tenements called Maplewell, co. Derby, to him and his heirs lawfully begotten; remainder to his right heirs[7].

The following is a very particular ſtatement of the tenure[8] of the manor of Thurcaſton in 1384:

"By the grave adviſe of the councell of the moſt dreade lord the kinge of Caſtile and Ligion, duke of Lancaſter, &c. it is declared, that his tennant and ſervant John Fawconer, of Thurcaſton; that whereas he houldeth the mannor of Thurcaſton of the ſaid lord, as of the honour of Leiceſter, contayning fower yard lands holden of the Foreſt of Weynoſtre, by petty ſerjancy; that is to ſay, to keep two falcons gemell of the ſaid lord's; ſo that he the ſaid John Fawconer doe bringe to the ſayde dreade lorde for every falcon 11*d.* the day, and a puyne liverey hound a halfpeny a day; and doe finde to his owne body III ſuites of apparell by the yeare, and for his portion II rokes. And when he ſhall be in the howſe of his ſayde lord, he ſhall have, for himſelf and his people, meat, drinke, wine, hay, and otes, for three horſes, &c. If none of the ſaid three horſes of his remayne in the howſe in his ſaid lord's ſervice, he ſhall have the valewe; and if he be in flight with the falcons with his lord, he ſhall find everye xv dayes a quarter of wheat and a quarter of pees and c*s.* in money pur la cuiſyne. And it hath pleaſed the ſaid counſell to declare, that the ſaid ſervices hath bin done to the ſaid lord, and Alice ſenyoure de Mounteford counteſſe of Leiceſtre, by Thomas Fawknor and his aunceſtors at all tymes after the Conqueſt; that is to ſay, by William Faucnor the father to Thomas, by John the father of William, by Robart father to John, by William father to Robart, by Raffe father to William, by Scanard father to Raffe, by Henry father to Scanard, by William father to Henry, temp. Will. Conq.; which William Fauconer, ſonne and heire to John Fawknor, kt. did doe unto the queene of Navare in his tyme, and after to earle Thomas that deceaſed at Pomfrett, and after to earle Henry his brother, and did acknowledge by fayelty the ſaid ſervices, that they gave not any thinge in ayde to make his ſonne knight, or to marry his daughter neceſſary; nor ſuit of courte; and yett it was ſhewed that the ſaid lord might diſtrayne for reaſonable aid, and to make his ſonne a knight, againſt the tennur aforeſayd; for which the ſaid John humbly beſought the ſaid grave councell that right be donne him, or God and in charity, anno 1384, & 8 Ric. II."[9]

In 1478, John Coton, eſq. died ſeiſed of the manor of Thurcaſton, held of the king as of his dutchy of Lancaſter; and Richard Coton was his grandſon and next heir[10]. "This Richard married Joan, daughter of ſir William Brereton, knight; and by her had Thomas (that had only iſſue Elizabeth that died without iſſue), and four daughters; Maud, married to ſir Anthony Fitzherbert, of Norbury, co. Derby, knight, one of the juſtices of the common pleas; Eleanor, the ſecond, married to William Venables, baron of Kinderton, Notts; Catherine, the third, married to Richard Groſvenor, of Eton, in Cheſhire; and Iſabel, married to John Bradbourn, of Hough, co. Derby. The inheritance deſcending to theſe four daughters; upon partition made, this manor, with the advowſon, was allotted to Groſvenor; whoſe heir, ſir Richard Groſvenor, knight and baronet, aliened it to William Palmer, citizen of London; whoſe ſon and heir, Mr. Archdale Palmer, is now (1630) lord thereof[10]."

This ſtatement by Mr. Burton accords with the following epitaph in the church of Hampſtall Ridware:

"Here lies the body of Joan Cotton, late the wyff of Richard Cotton, ſometime heir of this lordſhip, and daughter of ſir William Brereton, knt.; the which Richard and Joan had 8 ſons and 6 daughters, which ſons died without iſſue; ſo this lordſhip, with Thurcaſton and Boilſton, with divers other lands, came to theſe four daughters, as heirs being then alive; Maud, Eleanor, Catharine, and Iſabell. Maud, the eldeſt daughter, married to Anthony Fitzherbert, one of the king's ſerjeants of the law; Eleanor, married to William Venables, baron of Kinderton; Catharine, married to Richard Groſvenour, of Eton, eſq.; and Iſabell, married to John Bradborn, of the Hogh, eſq. which Joan died on the 2d of May, in the year of our Lord God 1517."

---

[1] "Hugo de Grentemaiſnil habet 1 domum pertinentem ad Turchileſtone." Domeſday, fol. 230. a. 1.

[2] "Hugo de Grentemaiſnil tenet 9 carucatas terre in Turchiteleſtone. Terra eſt 4 carucarum. In dominico ſunt duæ, et 4 ſervi; et 22 villani, cum 4 bordariis, habent 6 carucas. Ibi molinum de 3 ſolidis. Silva 2 leucarum longitudinis, et dimidiæ leucæ latitudinis. Valuit 30 ſolidos; modò 4 libras. Leuuinus liberè tenuit." Ibid. fol. 232. a. 2.

[3] Burton, MS.

[4] Eſch. 18 Edw. III.

[5] See my book of deeds of Leiceſterſhire, and ſee Charnwood and Ulveſcroft. P. Le Neve, Norroy, 1722.

[6] Rot. Aux. 20 Edw. III.

[7] Cart. 28 Edw. III.

[8] Roger de Kaes held Dudſton manor, co. Warwick, of the honour of Peverel, per ſervicium mutandi falconem. See vol. I. p. cl.

[9] Viſitation of Staffordſhire in 1583; Harl. MSS. 6128. f. 33.

[10] See an ample pedigree of the Cottons in Shaw's Staffordſhire, vol. I. p. 157; and Mr. Le Neve refers to a long pedigree of that family, as being in 1722 in the poſſeſſion of Mr. Cotton of Girdlers hall.

[10] Burton, MS.

PEDIGREE of FALCONER, of THURCASTON.

Arms; Argent, three falcons Sable; Plate CXL. fig. 5.

John Falconer, temp. William the Conqueror. = ..
Philip, lord of the manor of Thurcaſton. = ..
Leonard Falconer. = . . .
Galfrid, lord of the manor of Thurcaſton. = ..
Ralph Falconer, of Clayham. = ..
Galfrid, lord of the manor of Thurcaſton; without date. = ..
William Falconer. = ..
Robert Falconer. = ...
William Falconer. = ...
Ralph Falconer. = ..
Thomas Falconer, 30 Edw. I.
Sir John Falconer, of Clayham, knt. temp. Edw. I. = Margery, daughter and heir.
William Falconer, of Clayham and Thurcaſton. = Margery de Sancey.
Thomas Falconer, 24 Edw. III. = Agnes.
William Falconer.
William Falconer, 30 Edw. III. = Elizabeth.
Sir John Falconer, of Thurcaſton and Clayham, kt. 50 Edw. III. and 4 Ric. II. = Katherine.
Sir William Falconer, of Thurcaſton and Clayham, knt. 14 Hen. IV. = Cecilia, 4 Hen. IV.
Elizabeth Falconer, daughter and heir. = William Cotton, of Ridware Hamſtal, co. Stafford.

The abbot and convent of St. Mary de Pratis at Leiceſter had antiently the following property here.

"Eccleſie de Thurkaſton patronus Abbas Sancti Ebrulfi; Ricardus de Stantonâ perſona. Vicarius Gilbertus; & habet II virgatas terre, & omnes proventus altaris, nomine vicarie ſue; & ſolvit perſone xxs̃. qui ſolvit Abbati xxviiis̃. ab antiquo. Et habet capellam de Anſty, que debet deſerviri tribus diebus in ebdomadâ per matricem eccleſiam.

Habemus in Thurkeſton, ex dono Ricardi Chaplein, iiiđ. annui redditûs exeuntis de unâ virgatâ terre quam Ivo de Whitaker aliquando tenuit de ipſo, cum homagio & ſervicio, wardâ, relevio, &c.

Habemus ibi, ex dono Roberti filii Willielmi de Bromwych, xviiiđ. annui redditûs exeuntis de unâ virgatâ terre quam Ivo de Whytaker aliquando tenuit, cum homagio, ſervicio, wardâ, &c.

Habemus in Thurkeſton, ex conceſſione & quietâ clamatione Johannis de Warwyk & Johanne Bromwych uxoris ſue, viđ. annui redditûs exeunt' de unâ virgatâ terre quam Willielmus Whytakur tenuit.

Habemus ibi, ex dono Willielmi de Thurkeſton, unum toftum, cum pertinentiis, extra pontem uſque Cropſton, & II ſeliones proximè adjacentes dicto tofto verſus Orientem.

Habuimus quòndam de Rogero Fawconer de Thurkaſton, ſecundùm antiqua Rentalia, pro I virgatâ terre, quondam Willielmi Whitaker, & poſtea Willielmi Bromwych, xxiđ. per annum liberè; & de Willielmo Fawconer pro I crofto infoſſato & II buttis adjacentibus ultra villam & hutebrok uſque Wytland xiiđ.

Will'mus Whytakar modò tenet unam clauſuram[1]."

In a book of fifteenths and tenths granted by the laity in 1416, Thurcaſton was rated at £1. 6*s*. 8*d*. and in the ſubſidy of 1445, at the ſame ſum; but an abatement was then made of 3*s*. 8*d*.

In 1564, there were 25 families in Thurcaſton, 35 in Anſty, and 14 in Cropſton.

In 1655, there was collected in Thurcaſton and Cropſton, for the relief of the poor Proteſtants in Piedmont, the ſum of 13*s*. 4*d*.; and at Anſty £.2. 0*s*. 11*d*.

The freeholders here in 1630 were, Richard Northan, Richard Boyer, and Ewſtas Fielding.

In 1722, five freeholders polled from Thurcaſton, 30 from Anſty, and 8 from Cropſton. In 1775, 3 from Thurcaſton, 34 from Anſty, and 8 from Cropſton.

In 1757, there were 40 families in Thurcaſton; in Cropſton, 26.

In 1798, an act was paſſed, for dividing, allotting, and incloſing, all the common fields, &c. within the pariſh of Thurcaſton, then remaining uninclosſed, and called by the general name of Thurcaſton Fields, containing about 700 acres; and ſeveral incloſed lands, containing about 350 acres; together with certain other uninclosſed lands, containing 45 acres, 1 rood, and 16 perches, or thereabous, lying between the open fields of Thurcaſton, and the late open, but now incloſed, fields of Cropſton (a hamlet within the manor and peculiar exempt juriſdiction of Groby, and in the pariſh of Thurcaſton), which, on the incloſure of Cropſton fields, were left uninclosſed, by reaſon of their being intermixed with lands in the lordſhip of Thurcaſton. In this act, George Harry earl of Stamford and Warrington is deſcribed as lord of the manor and eccleſiaſtical peculiar exempt juriſdiction of Groby, and, as ſuch, lord of the manor of Cropſton, and entitled to the manerial rights and privileges of ſuch part of the ſaid intermixed lands as are within the liberties of Cropſton, to divers manerial rights in Thurcaſton, and to a chief rent of 6*s*. 8*d*. payable annually by the honourable Auguſtus-Richard Butler-Danvers, in reſpect of hereditaments belonging to him in Thurcaſton, and alſo to certain other payments rendered yearly by the ſaid Mr. Butler Danvers and others, in lieu of wood-hens, and other rights and privileges. The ſaid Mr. Butler Danvers was alſo entitled to divers manerial rights and liberties in Thurcaſton. The maſter, fellows, and ſcholars, of Emanuel College, Cambridge, were patrons of the rectory; and the Rev. Robert Spillman, as rector, entitled to the great and ſmall tithes of all or the greater part of the ſaid incloſed and uninclosſed grounds, and to four yard-lands glebe, and right of common in reſpect thereof, in the uninclosſed fields of Thurcaſton, and to 50 acres of glebe in the incloſed lands, and to the aftermath of a meadow, part of the lands to be incloſed, called Haſtings Meadow. The earl of Stamford and Warrington, Mr. Butler-Danvers, Sir Charles Grave Hudſon, bart. in right of dame Catharine Suſanna Hudſon his wife, John Fiſher, clerk, Rev. Charles Allen, M.A. and others, were proprietors of the reſidue of the lands. The ſoil of the roads to be ſet out in the two lordſhips is directed to be conſidered as the property of its preſent reſpective lords; and, for the more convenient allotment of the lands, all the crofts, cloſes, homeſteads, and old incloſures, in Thurcaſton (except the homeſtead or home cloſe, and old incloſures of the rectorial houſe) to be thrown into hotchpot. Two acres are firſt to be allotted as materials for the highways; after which, the rector to have, in full ſatisfaction for his glebe and right of common, and for his aftermath in Haſtings meadow, ſuch full equivalent as the commiſſioners think juſt; and for his tithes and all other dues (Eaſter offerings, mortuaries, and ſurplice fees excepted), from all the land to be incloſed, and the ſaid antient incloſures, ſuch further part as ſhall be equal to one fifth part of the arable land to be incloſed, and a ninth part of the land in graſs, or uſed for mowing or paſture, being titheable; and to two fifteenths of the antient incloſures; ſuch part of the land to be incloſed to be deemed arable as had been ploughed within the ſpace of ſeven years. Equivalent allotments to be next made to the earl of Stamford and Warrington and Mr. Butler-Danvers, as lords of the manors; and to the ſaid earl, for his annual quit-rent of 6*s*. 8*d*. and other yearly payments, from the reſpective property of thoſe liable to pay the ſame, ſo much land as ſhall be of an annual value equal in amount, to be let on leaſe for 21 years. The remainder to be proportionably divided among the ſeveral proprietors. A rate tithe to be fixed by the commiſſioners, in ſuch proportions of antient incloſures as have not land enough in the open fields to compenſate. The boundaries of Thurcaſton and Cropſton, and of manerial rights, to be aſcertained; and no part of Charnwood Foreſt (otherwiſe Charley Chace) or Rothley Plain to be any way affected by this act. The commiſſioners are authorized to enquire into the preſent ſituation of the brook which ſupplies the water mill at Thurcaſton; and, if it ſhall appear to have been raiſed by means of floodgates, weirs, or banks, made for that purpoſe, are required to reduce the brook to its antient height. A ſaving of the earl of Stamford's rights, as lord of the manor of Cropſton; and to the ſaid earl, or any future perſon who may become entitled, to manerial rights in Thurcaſton.

---

[1] Charyte's Rentale, fol. cxl. cxli.

On a beam on the outſide of a houſe near the church, in raiſed letters, is this inſcription:

"THYS HOWS WAS BOYLDED ANNO D'NI 1568, AND IN Y^{e} 1 YER OF Y^{e} RAIG̃ OF OWRE SOVERAIG̃ LADYE QENE ELIZABETH, BY ME NYCHOLAS GRAVNO."

It appears, that at the original building of this houſe, after laying the foundation, four large wooden turned pillars were ſet up as corner poſts, as large as are generally met with in country-churches; and on theſe are erected wooden arches. (Plate CXL. fig. 2.) This is uſually called Latimer's houſe; and is ſo deſcribed by Mr. Hill in the Pariſh Regiſter.

REGISTERS and CHARITABLE DONATIONS.

The earlieſt Regiſter begins in 1561.

Robert Dawkin, of Thurcaſton, yeoman, gave by will, dated April 8, 1637, to Thurcaſton poor, 6*s*. 8*d*.; to Cropſton's, 3*s*. 4*d*.; to be diſtributed on Eaſter Monday for ever, and charged his land at Cropſton with the payment thereof.

John Brown, of Anſty, gave by will 6*s*. 8*d*. to the poor of Anſty; to be diſtributed annually on Good Friday.

Peter Roe, of Anſty, gave ten ſix-penny loaves, and ſix four-penny loaves, to the poor of Anſty, to be diſtributed annually on Good Friday; and ten ſix-penny on Chriſtmas day.

October 9, 1641, Elias Travers, D. D. rector of Thurcaſton, was buried, being the firſt rector on the preſentation of Emanuel College; and was ſucceeded by Ezekiel Wrighte.

A ſecond Regiſter begins in 1653.

Nathan the ſon of Ezekiel Wrighte, rector eccleſiæ, and Dorothie his wife, was born the 18th day of February, 1653—afterwards lord keeper.

After a birth, March 31, 1658, is this entry:

"John Frere the Regiſter did not write any more that I could hear of. John Freer died 1673, 5 years after I came to be Parſon. All theiſe pages foregoing being written by him, I have taken out of his booke, and ſtitched them into this booke.

"Ita teſtor, RT. ALFOUNDER, Rect' Ecclie."

1690. Buried, William Wade; who had been pariſh-clerk 49 years.

Richard Hill, rector of Thurcaſton, ſon of Humfry Hill, of Shenſtone in Stone, in Worceſterſhire, and Heſter, daughter of William Sanderſon of Pilton in Oundle, in Northamptonſhire, were married in the ſaid Pilton church, April 14, 1702.

Richard Hill, rector of this pariſh, and Helen Tyrwhitt, daughter of the late Cecil Tyrwhitt, of Cameringham in Lincolnſhire, eſq. were married (by banns publiſhed) in Glentworth church, near Cemeringham, Jan. 27, 1707.

Mrs. Hill gave for the communion ſervice a ſilver flagon, weight 39 ounces 2 penny-weights, and a plate 15 ounces 11 penny-weights; on each is inſcribed, "Thurcaſton. To God and his church this is humbly dedicated by Mrs. Helen Hill, wife of Richard Hill, rector; May 22, 1712."

October 26, 1712. Then collected, upon the brief for enlarging Coleorton church, and repairing it, the church-yard, and church-yard wall; and for re-building the parſonage-houſe, which was entirely demoliſhed in the great rebellion, when the church was a garriſon for the king, 4*s*. 5½*d*.

John Sly, of Thurcaſton, a poor, melancholy, mopiſh man, was buried April 19, 1713.

William Swift, aged (as he ſaid) 93, born at Gaddeſby, was buried June 14, 1713.

Joſeph Harriſon, aged about 18 years, and an apprentice here, was baptized, immediately after the ſecond leſſon, on the Lord's day, April 18, 1714.

Twelve boys were formerly taught to read at Thurcaſton, on a ſettlement of £5. a year; but a regular free-ſchool was founded here in 1715, by the Rev. Richard Hill, rector, who built a ſchool houſe and ſchool room, and ſufficiently endowed it, as will appear from the "Statutes" hereafter printed, p. 1074.

Henry Hawley, B. D. ſenior fellow of Emmanuel College, Cambridge, and rector of Aller in Somerſetſhire, and Mrs. Joanna Hays, of the Out-woods in Loughborough pariſh, were married here, by licence, July 16, 1710. He died at Aller on Jan. 31, 1715.

Thomas Everard, of Hether, M. A. my late curate, and Mrs. Elizabeth Curtoys, a niece of Captain Tate's, of Burley in Loughborough pariſh, were married by me, Richard Hill, rector, May 23, 1717.

July 31, 1720. Collected 12*s*. on the brief for the loſs of £4163, by thunder and hail, for 20 miles in length, in the ſeveral pariſhes and townſhips of Wheſton, Aſton, Laxley, Pillaton, Shredicotes, Walton by Eccleſhall, Haughton, Bradeley, Seighford, Whitgrave, Shawford, Little Aſton, Great Aſton, Cold Norton, Walton, and Stoke by Stone, Spatt, Cotwalton, Hilderſtone, Fulford, Dillhorne, and Caverſwall, in the county of Stafford. Some of the hail-ſtones were eight inches in circumference.

1722. Edward Wigley, of Ulleſthorpe, in the pariſh of Claybrook, gent. M. A. and ſtudent in phyſic, and Heſter Hill, daughter of Richard Hill, rector of this church, were married by banns three times publiſhed by Mr. Hill himſelf, who rejoiced both to baptize and marry his daughter; on October 2, 1722, being Tueſday, the ſame day on which I ſet out to found Swaffham Bulbeck charity-ſchool. Benedicat Deus. Et benedictum ſit nomen Dei & nunc & in perpetuum. Amen." [This gentleman (who was of St. John's College, Cambridge, and in 1729 took the degree of M D.) gave £18. to the poor of Thurcaſton and Cropſton; and £18. to Anſty poor; which, together with Edward Fletcher's donation of £10. and ſir Nathan Wrighte's donation of £10, was laid out in purchaſing a cloſe in Sileby in this county, the rent of which is yearly diſtributed; ſo much as belongs to Thurcaſton and Cropſton poor to them on St. John's day; and ſo much as belongs to Anſty poor to them on New-year's day."]

1722. Buried, Euſtace Wade, aged 78; pariſh-clerk 31 years, in which time was never abſent one Lord's day, morning and evening ſervice.

Elizabeth, an illegitimate daughter of Elizabeth Harley by Henry Vivey, as ſhe affirmed upon her oath in the time of labour, was baptized June 22, 1726.

1728, July 28. A high wind, which beat the wheat out of the ear; the damage in the ſmall field of Anſty was ſuppoſed to be £.100, and in like manner through the country.

Elizabeth Bellamy, by will, dated Jan. .. 1737-8, gave £.5. in truſt, and charges her houſe and homeſtead with the payment of 5*s*. the intereſt of the ſaid ſum, to be given annually to five poor widows of Anſty, on Chriſtmas day; or, for want of ſo many, the number to be made up with poor aged maidens, who are not relieved by the pariſh.

Nov. 7, 1748, a terrible fire broke out at Thurcaſton; by which ſeveral houſes, barns, ſtables, corn and hay ricks, houſehold furniture, and implements of huſbandry, were conſumed to the ground. The wind being very high, and the fire breaking out early in the morning, the poor ſufferers had ſcarce time to ſave any thing but their own lives.

"Mr. William Tilly, the firſt maſter of the charity ſchool, and choſen by the Founder, died Oct. 14, 1759; and Francis Ballard (ſon of Francis Ballard of Cropſton), who had been educated at this ſchool, and received the founder's gift of a Bible and Prayer Book at leaving it, was choſen into his room, Dec. 3, 1759, by me, R. Hurd, rector."

"Nov. 19, 1763. John Cragg of Thurcaſton, an adult in his 75th year, being bed-rid, was privately baptized at his own requeſt.—N. B. His father and mother had been rigid Anabaptiſts.

R. Hurd, rector."

"1765. John Ballard, ſon of Joſeph Ballard of Thurcaſton, who had been educated at this ſchool, and received the founder's gift of a Bible, was choſen maſter by me, R. Hurd, March 25, 1767, in the room of Francis Ballard, diſplaced."

1767. From May to December, 27 perſons died of a malignant fever in the town of Anſty.

August 2, 1768. Jane Alfounder of Leiceſter, daughter of the rev. Robert Alfounder, formerly rector of this pariſh, was buried, aged 81.

27 Sept. 1793. Samuel Weight was choſen maſter of this ſchool, in the room of John Ballard, deceaſed, by the Rev. Mr. Babington, with the conſent of the other truſtee, in the abſence of the rector of Thurcaſton.

From Sept. 22, 1797, to Sept. 20, 1798, were buried 12 perſons, three of whom were infants; the other nine, on an average, appear to have been in their 80th year; one of them, William Fowkes, was at the advanced age of 97. Not any two of the old perſons died in the ſame month; and none in the three cold months of December, January, February, or in the hot month of July.

"Jan. 13, 1800. Richard Newbold, of Billingborough in Lincolnſhire, was choſen maſter, in the room of Samuel Weight, diſplaced by me W. Richardſon Tyſon, rector."

The Return made to Parliament in 1786, in anſwer to an enquiry reſpecting the charitable donations in this pariſh, may be ſeen in vol. I. p. 79.

By the Return made to Parliament in 1801, Thurcaſton contained 45 houſes, in which were 46 families, conſiſting of 101 males, 114 females, in all 215; of whom 43 were chiefly employed in agriculture, and 23 in trade, manufactures, &c.

	Thurcaſton.			Anſty.			Cropſton.
	£.	s.	d.	£.	s.	d.	£.	s.	d.
Money raiſed for the poor in the year 1739, — — —	16	6	5
Money raiſed for the poor, within the year ending at Eaſter 1776, —	27	18	0	87	10	4	14	6	6
Expended in county rates, &c.	1	6	1	2	0	0	0	12	0
——— on the poor, —	26	11	11	85	10	4	13	14	6
Rent of workhouſe and habitations,	0	18	0	3	10	8	1	18	6
Expended in litigations, —	0	0	0	3	2	3	0	0	0
Money raiſed for 1783, —	57	8	3	167	9	0	9	6	6
——— 1784, —	55	11	2	152	4	11	7	6	3
——— 1785, —	57	15	6	162	15	0	8	13	0
Medium of theſe three years,	56	18	4	160	16	4	8	8	7
——— of county expences,	2	0	0	3	15	5	0	0	0
——— of expences not relating to the poor; repairs of the church, roads, &c.	1	9	0	0	0	0	0	0	0
——— of nett annual expences,	53	9	4	157	0	11	8	8	7
——— of attending on magiſtrates,	0	10	4	1	7	8	0	4	4
——— of entertainments at meetings,	0	7	1	0	12	6	0	8	4
——— of law expences, —	1	9	6	40	16	5	0	12	6
——— of ſetting the poor to work,	0	3	1	0	1	2	0	0	0

The CHURCH (See Plate CXL.)

dedicated to All Saints, conſiſts of a tower higher than the walls about 34 feet, and containing three bells; a nave, chancel, and South aile, ſeparated by 5 arches. It is 86 feet long, including the chancel, and 35 wide; the wall of the church on the inſide about 20 feet in height. The ſeats are in the old ſtyle, and run acroſs from North to South.

The font at which the venerable Latimer was admitted a member of that church which he ſo eminently adorned, is circular and ſhallow, on a hexagon baſe, with niches. (See Plate CXXXVI. p. 1035.)

In this church is a remarkable old town-cheſt, very long and large; and a ſmaller one of the ſame faſhion. A third old cheſt is alſo kept in the church.

In the Eaſt window of the chancel:

"Orate p a'i'a Joh'is Merſden, quo'dam [rectoris] iſtius ecclesie qui me fieri fecit anno Domini [M°CCCC° .....]

commemorates the rector whoſe braſs ſlab is mentioned below; as perhaps does the figure of a little man in a red gown and blue hood, praying, I'pe fili' dei. Plate CXL. fig. 3.

In the ſame window are a ſwan in a round; a hart couchant; two angels holding cups with blood ſtreaming[1]; another in a round, with a label; two little figures ſitting (one in a cap) hold books on their knees.

A fine bearded head in nimbus.

Another relieved in panes on black.

Another had a coat impaling two bars.

In the Eaſt window of the North aile are ſome fragments of an old caſtle[2], over which is

"MARGARETA FI'..." (fig. 4.)

Mr. Burton deſcribes theſe arms at Thurcaſton:

In the North-eaſt window:

The picture of one kneeling; under whom was written, WILL'MUS FALCONER; and by him, Argent, three falcons Gules; fig. 5.

In a South window: fig. 6—8.

Gules, three lions paſſant guardant Or, a border Argent; impaling, ... (broken).

Gules, ſeven maſcles voided and conjoined Or. Ferrers of Groby.

Paly of ſix, Or and Azure, a canton Ermine. Shirley.

Hugo de Grentemaiſnell gave to the abbey of St. Ebrulph the church of Thurcaſton, with the tithes of that village, and two virgates of land[3].

In the Matriculus of 1220, Thurcaſton is deſcribed to be under the patronage of the abbot of St. Ebrulph; the rector was Richard de Staunton, inſtituted by Hugh biſhop of Lincoln. The vicar, Gilbert, was inſtituted by D. archdeacon of Leiceſter, during the vacancy of the ſee of Lincoln; and had two virgates of land, and all the profits of the altar, in right of his vicarage, paying 20*s*. to the rector, who had been accuſtomed ab antiquo to pay to the aforeſaid abbot 28*s*. To Thurcaſton was alſo annexed the chapel of Anſty, which was to be ſerved three days in the week from the mother church[4].

In 1344, the procurations were 7*s*. 6¾*d*.; the rectory was taxed at 40 marks; and paid 1*s*. 4*d*. for Peter-pence. The then patron was the abbot of St. Ebrulph, who had from it a penſion of one mark.

In 1534-5, the ſynodals were 9*s*.; the value of the rectory £.14; a penſion was paid to the prior of Shene of 7*s*.; and another of £.8. to "Magiſter Dole."

In 1552, the commiſſioners reported, that the church of Thurcaſton contained,

In primis, three belles and a ſaunce bell.
Itm, a chalice of ſylver.
Itm, towe veſtementes.
Itm, a cope of blacke velvet.
Itm, a croſſe of coper.
Itm, tow candelſtykes.

In 1564, Thurcaſton contained within the pariſh a peculiar and exempt juriſdiction extending over 24 families, one of them in Anſty, and 13 in Cropſton[5].

"The patronage of this church is in Emanuel College, Cambridge, of the grant of ſir Francis Walſingham, knight; who had it of the grant of Groſvenor[6]."

In the ſchool-houſe is an engraved portrait of ſir Francis Walſingham (from Houbraken's heads), at the back of which is thus written by Biſhop Hurd:

"Sir F. Walſingham purchaſed this rectory, and preſented it to the newly-founded College of Emmanuel in Cambridge, out of reſpect to the founder Sir Walter Mildmay."

In 1650, the rectory was returned worth £.120, and the incumbent "ſufficient, but a pluralitan and nonreſident; and "the maintenance of the curate at Anſty, who was a preacher, £.5."

The preſent value in the king's books, in manſ' terr', gleb', &c. is £.23. 6*s*. 7½*d*. The epiſcopal procurations are, 9*s*. 4*d*.; the archidiaconal, 9*s*.

---

[1] A common device in the Leiceſterſhire churches, and often repeated in the windows of the town-hall of Leiceſter.

[2] If conjecture might be allowed, why may not this be ſuppoſed the repreſentation of Mountſorell caſtle; placed there, with the inſcription, in honour of Margareta filia Roberti de Bellomont?

[3] Ordericus Vitalis, fol. 602.

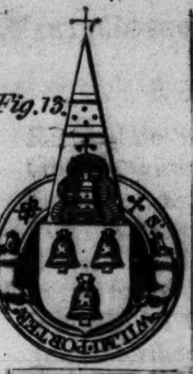
[4] See vol. I. p. lviii.

[5] Ibid. p. lxxxviii.

[6] Burton, MS.

THURCASTON, S.E.

Fig. 13.



WILLMI PORTER

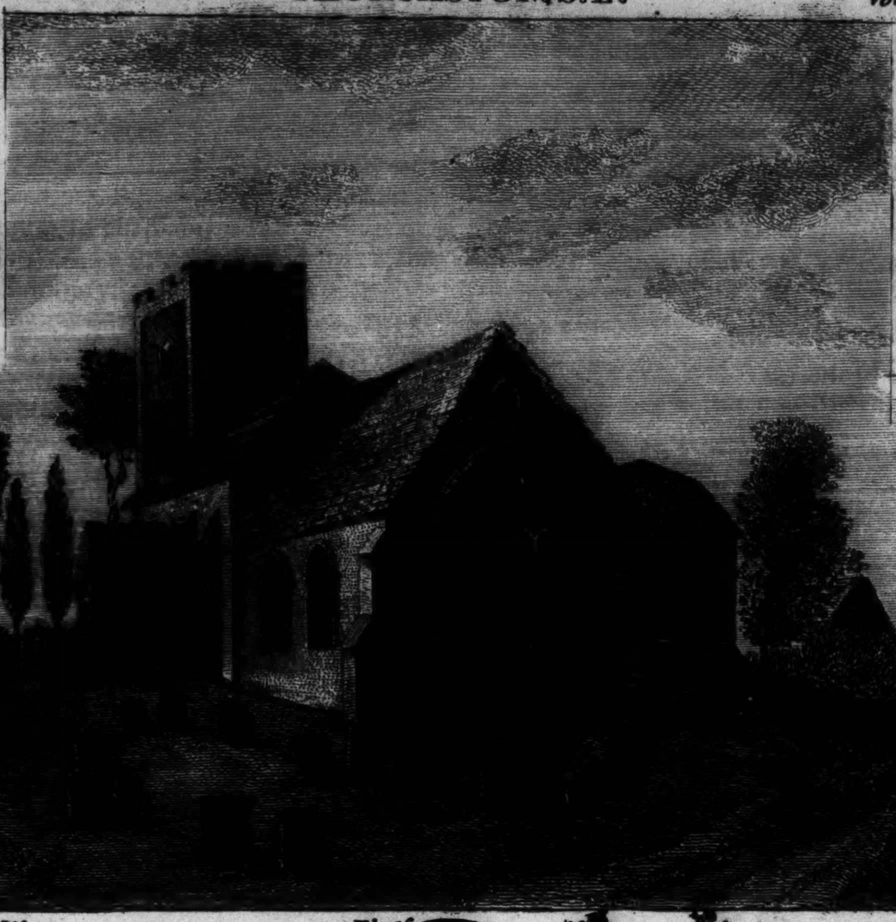


Fig. 3.

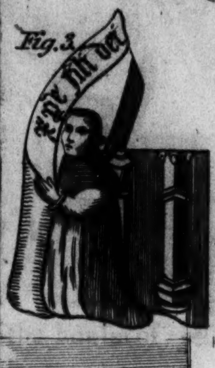
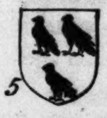
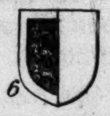


Schnebbelie del. Oct. 20. 1790.

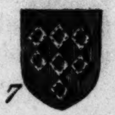
5



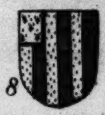
6



7



8



10

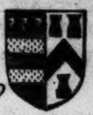


Fig. 16.

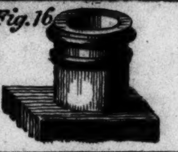
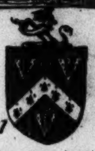
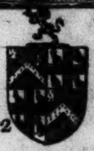


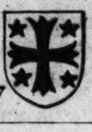
11



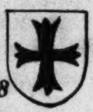
12



17



18



19

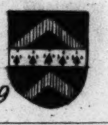


Fig. 4. p. 1058.

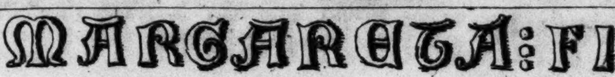
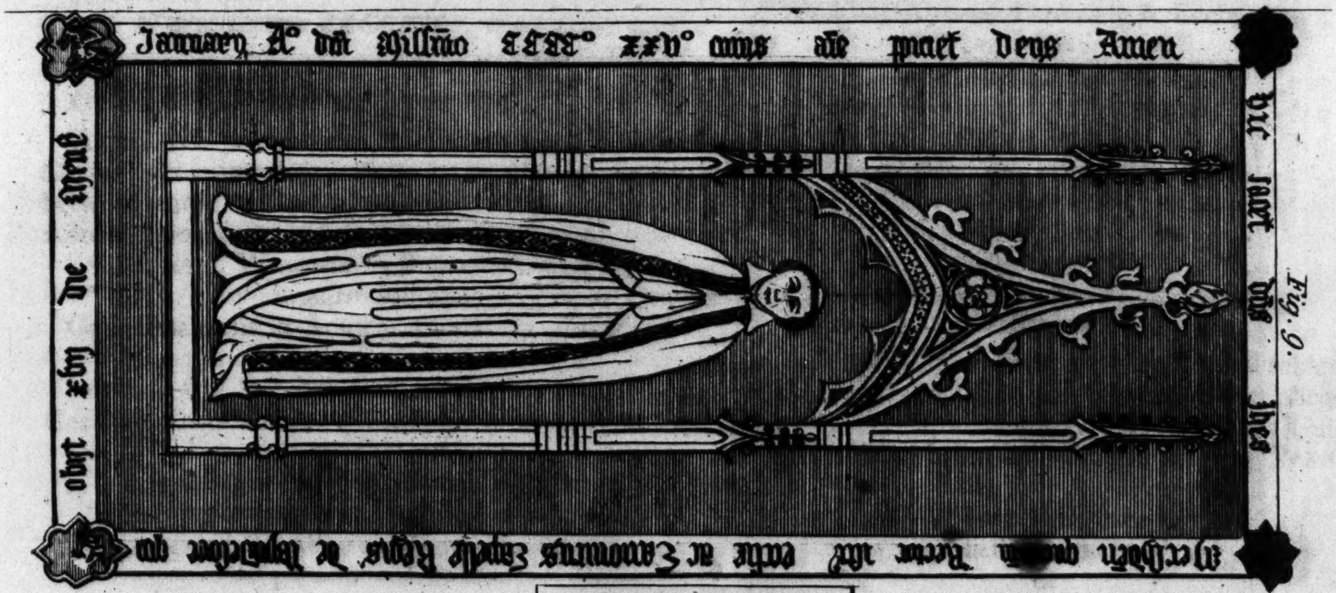


MARGARETA: FI

Fig. 9.



Januarij Aº dni Millmo CCCCCº xxvº cuius aie ppiciet deus Amen
hic iacet dns Ihes
qui Westmonaster de Regis Capelle Canonicus ac eccle isti' Rector quondam Mr Edw obijt xiij die mensis

ANSTY, E.

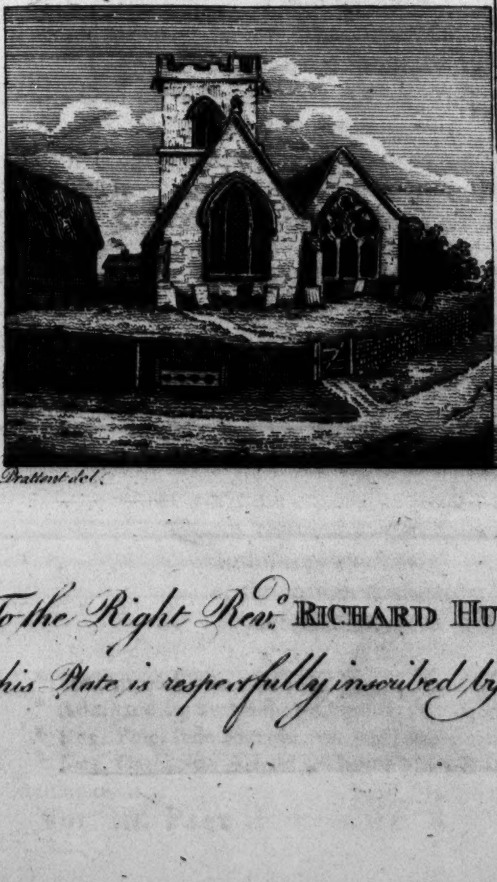

Fig. 14. p. 1082

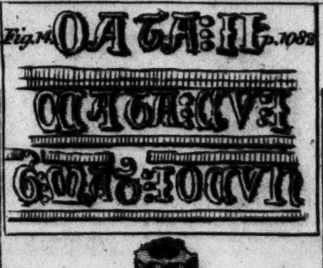
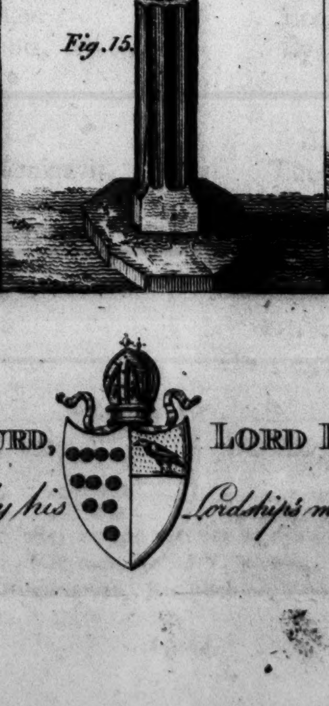
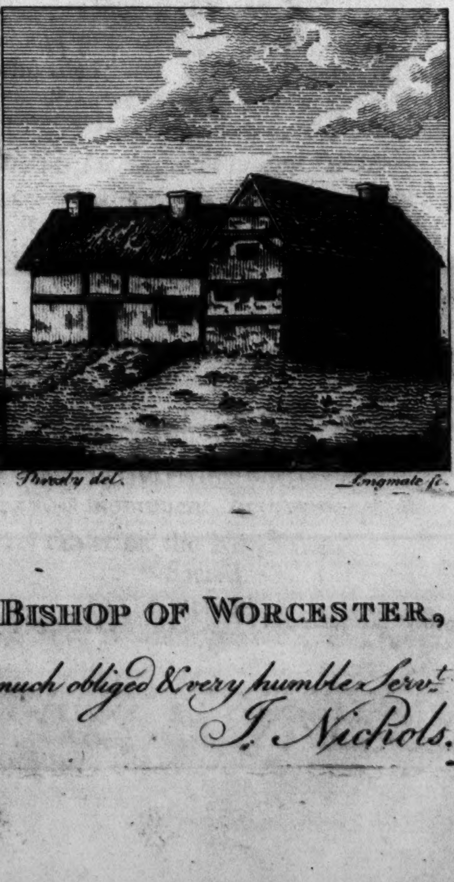


OATA: II
ORATA: CV
GMAGOTOGDV

Fig. 15.



LATIMER'S HOUSE, Fig. 2. p. 1057.



Prattent del. Pouncy del. Longmate sc.

To the Right Revd. RICHARD HURD, LORD BISHOP OF WORCESTER,
this Plate is respectfully inscribed by his Lordship's much obliged & very humble Servt.
J. Nichols.

RECTORS.	PATRONS.
Richard de Stanton, rector, Gilbert, vicar, 1220. Simon[1], 1240.	Abbot of St. Ebrulph.
Hugo de Staunford, chaplain, 1248. Roger de Martival, 13..; reſigned 1315, on obtaining the ſee of Saliſbury. Thomas Le Court, chaplain, 4 non. Feb. 1315.	Prior of Ware, proctor to the abbot of St. Ebrulph.
John Merſhden, died Jan. 17, 1424-5. Richard Ulverſton[2], chaplain, Aug. 8, 1425. William Chandler, 1534.	Prior and convent of the houſe of Jeſus of Bethlem at Sheen.
John Simpſon[3], clerk, Oct. 14, 1556.	King Philip and queen Mary.
Thomas Williat[4], Jan. 14, 1559-60; died 1584. John Symkin, 1588.	Queen Elizabeth.
Elias Travers, D. D. 1628; died Oct. 6, 1641. Ezekiel Wrighte, B. D. 1641; died May 22, 1668. Robert Alfounder, B.D. July 17, 1668; died March 12, 1700-1. Richard Hill, B. D. July 1, 1701; died Feb. 7, 1732-3. Richard Arnald, B. D. 1733; died Sept. 4, 1756. Richard Hurd, D. D. 1756; reſigned 1776.	Emmanuel College, Cambridge.
Robert Spillman, M. A. Feb. 7, 1776; died May 23, 1798.	The King, this turn, by promotion.
William-Richardſon Tyſon, B. D. 1798; the preſent rector.	Emmanuel College.

MONUMENTAL INSCRIPTIONS.

In the chancel:

A braſs figure of a prieſt, bare-headed, in a rich cope, adorned in front with lozenges, long ſleeves, falling cape, under a rich canopy with two finials; fig. 9. Round the ledge, this inſcription:

"Hic jacet d'ns Joh'es Merſhden quond'm rector iſti eccl'ie et canonicus capelle regis de Wyndeſore qui obiit xvii die menſ' januarii A° D'ni Mill'mo CCCC XXV°. cujus a'i'e p'piciet' deus. Amen."

On a mural tablet on the North ſide:

Azure, two bars, and in chief three leopards faces Or, Wright; impaling, Argent, a chevron Sable, between three caſtles Gules, Onebye. Creſt, out of a ducal coronet Or, a bear's head Argent; fig. 10.

"Ezekiel Wright, T. B. natus Dinington, in agro Suffolc.
Coll. Emanuelis in Academ. Cantabrig. quondam ſocius, decus, & deliciæ;
unde & a Deo huc Paſtor feliciter miſſus:
Conjugem habuit Dorotheam, filiam 2m Jo. Oneby, de Hinckly, Ar.
ex quâ quinis ſuſceptis liberis, videlicet,
Roberto & Dorothea ante patrem defunct.
Nathane, Dorothea altera, Ezekiele, ad parentalia flentibus.
Exuvias mortalitatis heic depoſuit viceſimo ſecundo die menſis Maii,
Anno { Salutis 1668,
Ætatis ſuæ 63.
Dignum laude virum ſponſa vetat mori;
Qui provincias, quas nactus[5] fuit, omnes
ornavit pancraticè, viz.
Theologiæ profundè, Concionatoris ſublimiter,
Humanioris literaturæ quam latiſſimè;
Quorum omnium hic baſis eſt cinis, columna pulvis, tectum umbra
veneranda tamen,
ænigma divinum;
Qui S. S. veritates & collegit, & diſſeminavit,
Monarcha, & ſervus quia ποιμὴν λαῶν;
Cadmus divinus, Hercules Chriſtianus,
Qui multiceps errorum monſtrum
ſtravit,
et veritatis columnas poſuit:
Quem virtus depreſſit[6], et humilitas exaltavit, et ſic cœlum ſcandit
deſcendendo.
Non tantum Paulus fuit doctrinâ, non Apollos Eloquentiâ, non Cephas demonſtratione, ſed omnes;
ideo verè Apoſtolicus.
Integerrimus vitæ, qui temperamentum habuit
Rationis ad pondus,
Prudentiæ ad juſtitiam.
Bibliotheca Patrum & Index Criticorum
hic coarctantur;
Sic Mors Amicos, Parœciam & Eccleſiam
vulneravit,
ipſum verò incolumen præſtitit;
Vita enim non periit, ſed mortalitas.
Exemplar magnum.
Si vis eſſe felix, lector, abi, & tu fac ſimiliter.
In memoriam verò archetypi,
mœſtiſſima conjux
Hoc fundavit, amore & lachrymis conſecravit."

On the South ſide, near the altar, on a mural tablet:

Gules, a chevron Ermine, between three pheons' heads Or. Creſt, a demi herald tiger, couped Gules, bezanty, holding a fire-ball Or, fire proper; Arnald; fig. 11.

"Near this place
lieth the body
of
the Rev. Richard Arnald, B. D. fellow of Emmanuel College,
rector of this pariſh,
and prebendary of Lincoln,
who died Sept. 4, 1756, aged 56.
Remember my judgement;
for, thine alſo ſhall be ſo:
yeſterday for me, and to-day for thee.
Eccleſ. xxxviii. 22. with the Comment.
By his ſide are interred the remains of his wife Catharine, daughter of the Reverend John Woods.
She died April 11, 1782, aged 65.
They had iſſue ſix children; Catharine,
Richard, Jane, Brough, William, and Hannah-Sophia. Of whom Richard, Brough, and Hannah-Sophia, are here buried.
Their only ſurviving ſon William erected this monument, September 1782."

On a mural tablet on the North ſide:

"Sacred
to the memory of the Rev. William Arnald[7], D. D.

---

[1] See Appendix to vol. I. p. 57.

[2] Admitted by archbiſhop Chichley, at Mortlake, on the vacancy of the ſee of Lincoln. Reg. Chichley, fol. 260. b.

[3] Reg. Pole, ſede Lincoln. vacante, fol. 44.

[4] Rymer, vol. XV. p. 562.

[5] "Orig. "nectus."

[6] Orig. "depreſſi."

[7] Mrs. Catharine Arnald, ſiſter to the above gentleman, has ſince her death given a communion table of oak, and rails to encompaſs it.

ſon of the
rev. Richard Arnald, late rector of this pariſh.
He was formerly Preceptor to their Royal Highneſſes
the Prince of Wales
and Duke of York,
one of the canons of Windſor,
and precentor of Litchfield cathedral.
He departed this life the 5th of Auguſt,
in the year of our Lord 1802,
and in the 56th year of his age."

On flat ſtones:

1. "Mary, the wife of Robert Alfounder;
ſhe departed March 11, 1693-4,
having lived 37 years, 1 month, 2 days.
Benjamin-Billers Alfounder, their ſon, died March 16, 1693-4."

2. "Here lieth the body of Robert Alfounder, B. D.
and rector of Thurcaſton 32 years and 10 months, who died March 12, 1700-1,
in the 69th year of his age."

3. "Here lieth the body of John, the ſon of Robert Alfounder and Mary his wife, who died June 5, 1686."

4. "Here lieth the body of Martha, daughter of Robert Alfounder and of Mary his wife,
who died May 6, 1691."

5. "Underneath this ſtone are the remains of the late Mrs. Jane Alfounder, ſpinſter, the ſecond daughter of the Rev. Mr. Robert Alfounder, B. D.
rector of Thurcaſton, by Mary his wife, eldeſt daughter of Mr. Benjamin Billers, of the Biſhop's Fee near the borough of Leiceſter, by Jane his wife, the daughter of George Allen, of Dingley, in the county of Northampton, gent.
who was born at the parſonage-houſe at Thurcaſton,
the 22d of April, 1687;
and changed this life, in expectation of a better, the 18th day of Auguſt, 1768, in the 81ſt year of her age, at the houſe of her nephew Mr. Richard Hill, in the pariſh of St. Martin, Leiceſter, the ſon and heir at law of Richard Hill, gent. deceaſed, by Mary his wife, the eldeſt daughter of the ſaid Robert Alfounder and Mary his wife."

6. "P. M. S.
In the bleſſed hope of a joyful reſurrection to eternal life, here reſteth the body of Heſter, the pious, loving, and excellent wife of Richard Hill, aged about 30, died Oct. 16, 1705.
Bleſſed are the dead which die in the Lord.
By her right ſide ſleeps her daughter Anne, born Oct. 2, born again 26, 1705."

7. "P. M. S.
Here reſt the ſacred remains of that admirable wife, more amiable mother, and ſtill more admirable Chriſtian,
Mrs. Helen Hill, wife of Richard Hill, rector.
She died July 7, 1713.
Precious [illegible] the ſight of the Lord is the death of his Saints. Pſ. cxvi. 15."

On an atchievement are theſe arms; fig. 12: Quarterly, 1 and 4, Azure, a chevron between three fleurs de lis and a canton Or; Hill; 2 and 3, Argent, on a croſs Azure, between four Corniſh choughs Sable, five paſſion nails Or; Alfounder. Creſt, a lion rampant Argent, pierced through the body with an arrow Gules.

8. "P. M. S.
Here reſteth the body of Richard Hill, B. D. rector of Thurcaſton, founder and endower of the charity-ſchool here.
He died Feb. 7, in the 77th year of his age, and in the year of our Lord 1732.
He that hath mercy on the poor, happy is he.
Prov. xiv. 21."

9. "Here lies interred the body of Richard Hill, eſq.
of Leiceſter, and ſon of Mr. Richard Hill
by Mary his wife (the eldeſt daughter of the Rev. Mr. Robert Alfounder, B. D. formerly rector of Thurcaſton, and lineally deſcended from Henry de Alfounder, ſervant to king Henry the Seventh when he was Duke of Richmond, and, as a reward of his bravery in the battle of Boſworth Field had his arms given him).
He died March the 11th, 1773,
aged 52 years."

10. "M. S.
Here lies interred the body of Mrs.
Heſter Wigley, wife of Edward Wigley, of Ulleſthorpe in this county, gent.;
daughter of Richard Hill, B. D. rector of this church. She died Nov. 10, in the 20th year of her age, and in the year of our Lord 1722. She had a lively ſenſe of the beauties of a practical Chriſtianity;
and was indued with all the virtues of a good diſpoſition, cultivated by a pious education."

11. "Here lyeth the body of Mrs.
Hannah Arnald, who departed this life Feb. 25, 1738-9, aged about 77.
By her ſide lies her infant
grandſon, Brough Arnald.
Here alſo lyeth the body of Mrs.
Hannah Calamy, daughter of the ſaid
Hannah Arnald; who departed this life Sept. 7, 1771, aged 90 years."

12. "Here lieth the body of Mrs. Mary Hill, daughter of Mr. Richard Hill, attorney at law, of Leiceſter, by Mary his wife, and grand-daughter of the Rev. Mr. Robert Alfounder,
B. D. formerly rector of Thurcaſton.
She died June 26, 1772, aged 65 years."

In the South aile:

1. On a large ſlab:
"..... Ioſchowe armigeri qui quondam....."

2. On a flat ſtone:
"Here lieth the body of Abigail Heich, wife of Richard Heich,
who departed this life Jan. 26, 1731,
aged about 41."

In the church-yard:

"Sacred to the memory of Samuel Stone, late of this pariſh, who departed this life May 4, 1758, aged 63.	Sacred to the memory of Sarah, the wife of Samuel Stone, who departed this life Dec. 11, 1765, aged 73 years.

Beneath the verdure of this earthen cheſt
Are laid the garments of two ſouls undreſs'd;
Two ſouls that, borne on angels wings, are gone
To put immortal life and vigour on:
Yes, 'tis decreed, they for a while muſt lie
Among theſe hillocks of mortality;
Till the great Saviour model them afreſh,
And frame theſe caſt-off tatter'd garbs of fleſh
After his own; for that's the heavenly mode,
And fit t' enrobe the favourites of God."

"In memory of George and Eleanor Allen, who, after living many years together in conjugal fidelity, and bringing up a numerous iſſue, departed this life in hopes of a better;
he Oct. 9, 1757, } aged { 68 years.
ſhe Oct. 6, 1771, } { 71 years.
No epitaph need make the juſt man fam'd,
The good are prais'd when they are only nam'd."

"Here lies the body of Mary Thornton,
who departed this life Sept. 2, 1774, aged 19.
Stop, mortal, ſtop, take home theſe lines,
And practiſe what you hear:
Repent in youth. Delay no time;
Then Death you need not fear."

" In memory of Samuel Whattaff,
who departed this life Aug. 17, 1781, aged 86 years.
And of Elizabeth his widow;
ſhe died Dec. 27, 1770, aged 68.

Thou too muſt join the dead, become as they:
Sleep through the night, wake to an awful day;
This calls for pauſe: let worldly cares make room
For meditations on a world to come."

" P. M. S.
In memory of Richard Burchnall, late of Cropſton in this pariſh, and of Elizabeth his wife, who departed this life in hopes of a better; he Nov. 28, 1783, aged 56;
ſhe May 4, 1764, aged 35.
And near to them lie alſo four of their children, who died in their infancy."

" John Weſton, ſon of Thomas and Margaret Weſton, late of Slawſton, formerly of Swebſton, in this county, died Feb. 7, 1781,
aged 45 years."

On head ſtones in the church-yard:

1. " Here lieth the body of William Tilly, firſt maſter of the charity-ſchool here. He departed this life Oct. 12, 1759, aged 74 years. Eccleſ. xii. 1.

2. " Beneath are depoſited the earthly remains of

John Ballard,	Mary Ballard
ſchoolmaſter, and	his wife,
clerk of this pariſh.	who died ſuddenly, on
He died Aug. 11, 1793,	the 7th day of Sept. 1792, in the 60th year of his age.	in the 52d year of her age.

" Sudden, alas! the ſtroke that brought her here;
Spectator, pauſe—the ſolemn ſtroke revere;
While ling'ring pains his corp'ral powers decay'd,
And gently brought him to Death's ſilent ſhade:
But now, we truſt, their ſouls above unite,
In yon bleſt manſions of eternal light."

3. " Here lieth the earthy remains of William Tyers, an induſtrious and indulgent huſband and father,
a ſincere friend, and peaceable neighbour, who,
by divine appointment, fell a ſudden victim to ſtern death, April 3, 1781, aged 50 years."

4. " Here lieth the body of William Oarton, of Stony Stanton, who departed this life
Sept. 25, 1717, aged 27 years."

5. At the chancel end remains, on a headſtone:

" Elias Travers,
D. D.
Oct. 6, 1641."

EMINENT DIVINES, NATIVES OR RECTORS OF THURCASTON.

AT the head of this reſpectable liſt it may be proper to place Roger de Martival, the laſt heir male of an antient family in this county, who in 1294 was archdeacon of Leiceſter, with the prebend of St. Margaret's annexed; and in 1310 was rector of Thurcaſton and dean of Lincoln; but vacated thoſe preferments in 1315, on obtaining the biſhoprick of Saliſbury, which he held till his death in 1322. But of this eminent perſonage it would be ſuperfluous here to enlarge, as he has been already duly noticed in a former volume of this Hiſtory[1].

The next rector of whom we have any memorial is John de Merſhden, who was inſtalled canon of Windſor in 1416; and died rector of Thurcaſton, where he was buried, Jan. 17, 1424-5. His epitaph has been given in p. 950, and the Regiſters of Archbiſhop Chicheley furniſh us with theſe particulars concerning him:

" Commiſſio ad commitend' adminiſtrationem bonorum domini Johannis Merſhden, nuper rectoris eccleſie parochialis de Thurkeſton, Linc' dioc', defuncti. Dat' apud Lameth, 8° die Feb. 1424[2]."

" Commiſſio domini archiepiſcopi, directa Will'o Dei pacientiâ abbati monaſterii B. M. de Pratis, Leyceſtrie, magiſtro Willielmo Wynwyk, ad approband' teſtamentum Johannis Merſhden, nuper rectoris eccleſie parochialis de Thurkeſton, Linc' dioc'. Dat' apud Lameth, 13° die Feb', A. D. 1424[3]."

" Teſtamentum domini Johannis Merſdon, rectoris eccleſie parochialis de Thurkeſton; corpus ad ſepeliendum in ſacrâ ſepulturâ, &, ſi benè poteſt, in eccleſiâ meâ de Thurkeſton, Dat' apud Thurkeſton, 10° die Octobris, A. D. 1424; probat' 24 die Martii, A. D. 1424[4]."

" At this place, about 1470, was born that learned and moſt reverend Hugh Latimer, D. D. of the Univerſity of Cambridge; who, in defence of his religion, ended his life in the fire[5]; whoſe whole life and actions are at large ſet down by Mr. John Fox[6].

" What his father was, and how qualified for the ſtate, take from his own mouth, in his firſt ſermon before king Edward VI. March 8, 1549, being confident the reader will not repent his pains in peruſing it[7]:"

" My father was a yeoman, and had no lands of his own; only he had a farm of three or four pounds by the year at the uttermoſt, and hereupon he tilled ſo much as kept half a dozen men. He had walk for an hundred ſheep; and my mother milked thirty kine. He was able, and did find the king a harneſs, with himſelf and his horſe, while he came to the place that he ſhould receive the king's wages. I can remember, that I buckled his harneſs, when he went to Blackheath field[8]. He kept me to ſchool, or elſe I had not not been able to have preached before the king's majeſty now. He married my ſiſters with five pounds, or 20 nobles, apiece; ſo that he brought them up in godlineſs and fear of God. He kept hoſpitality for his poor neighbours, and ſome alms he gave to the poor; and all this he did of the ſaid farm; where he that now hath it payeth ſixteen pounds by the year or more, and is not able to do any thing for his prince, for himſelf, nor for his children, or give a cup of drink to the poor."

My late worthy friend Mr. Henry Maſon, of Curſitor-ſtreet (who ſoothed by literary reſearches the melancholy hours of incurable deafneſs, and the ſtill ſeverer malady of a confirmed paralyſis) was enthuſiaſtically fond of the character of Latimer, " one of the glorious army of martyrs, who introduced the Reformation into England;" and, in a letter on the ſubject, not long before his death, obſerved to me, " The farm-houſe in which Latimer was born is ſtanding to this day[9]. It is ſuppoſed to have been the property of the duke of Suffolk, who had then large demeſnes around Thurcaſton, and whoſe ſeat was very near. Probably he might have been the firſt friend and patron of Latimer; ſeveral of whoſe ſermons were compiled by the ducheſs's deſire, for the edification of her houſehold ſervants, particularly ſeven on the Lord's Prayer. Perhaps he had been their chaplain; and although this moſt reverend biſhop appears, from his own words, to have been the ſon ſimply of a yeoman, yet poſſibly his family might have been originally of higher degree.

It appears that many families of the name of Latimer were of great note in Leiceſterſhire. In a North window of the church at Ratby (which is a very ſmall diſtance from Thurcaſton) Mr. Burton ſays, are the arms of Latimer, Gules, a croſs patonce Or, a label of France. In the churches at Ayleſton, Wigſton, and Lubbenham, the ſame arms without a label; and in the chapel at Harborough the ſame arms, with a label of three points Azure. [See p. 1082.]

---

[1] See under Noſeley, in Gartre Hundred, vol. II. p. 740.

[2] Reg. Chicheley, fol. 380. b.

[3] Ibid. fol. 390. a. b.

[4] Ibid. fol. 390. b. 391. a. b.

[5] Burton, MS.

[6] Acts and Monuments, vol. II. p. 375.

[7] Theſe are the emphatic words of Dr. Fuller; Worthies, Leiceſterſhire, p. 128.

[8] Where the Corniſh rebels, headed by lord Audley, were defeated by Henry VII. June 22, 1497; ſo that, if born in 1470, he muſt have been 27 years old.

[9] This is not quite accurate; but an old houſe remains, which in 1568 was rebuilt on the ſite of the more antient one. See p. 1056.

From 1321 to 1421 the Latimers had property at Church Langton and Weſt Langton[1]; and from 1324 to 1400 they were lords of the manor of all or the greateſt part of Smeton, Weſterby, and Foxton[2].

"Camden, for the expreſs purpoſe of explaining the meaning of the word LATIMER, in his Britannia, quotes an old Inquiſition, where it is ſaid that one Wrenoc held lands by the ſervice of being Latimer between the Engliſh and Welſh; that is, an interpreter; which, he adds, few are acquainted with, though it is a name very famous in this kingdom[3].

"There is a town near Cheyneis in Buckinghamſhire called Latimer, alias Iſe-hamſted; which, Camden tells us, has its name from the antient barons Latimer; one of whom had a ſeat at Stratton in Bedfordſhire[4]. He alſo ſays, that from William Latimer, of Corby in Northamptonſhire, which is on the borders of Leiceſterſhire, not far from Harborough, the Latimers of good antiquity in Yorkſhire had their original[5]. At Snaith in Yorkſhire was the chief ſeat of of the lords Latimer, who derive their illuſtrious deſcent from George Nevill[6], younger ſon of Ralph Nevill firſt earl of Weſtmorland, who had this honourable title conferred on him by king Henry VI. of that name, when the elder families of the Latimers had ended in a female; and ſo in a continued ſucceſſion they flouriſhed till Camden's time, when, for want of heirs male to the laſt baron, this brave inheritance was parted amongſt his daughters, who were married into the families of Percy, Cecil, Danvers, and Cornwallis[7]. The iſſue of this Ralph earl of Weſtmorland, by his ſecond wife Katharine, daughter of John of Gaunt duke of Lancaſter, became ſo famous and numerous, that almoſt at the ſame time there flouriſhed of it the earl of Saliſbury, the earl of Warwick, the earl of Kent, the marquis of Montacute, baron Latimer, and baron Abergavenny[8]; and king Edward IV. in the 2d year of his reign gave the manor of Hallaton in Leiceſterſhire to John Neville marquis Montacute.

Two other Divines, who were both of ſome eminence, may be ſaid to have been contemporary with our prelate. William Larymer, of All Souls college, Oxford, and of the Univerſity of Padua, was tutor to Reginald Pole, afterwards the celebrated cardinal, and taught Greek to Eraſmus, who ſolicited his aid in preparing the New Teſtament, and in a letter to him ſtyles him a man of the ſweeteſt candour, and more than virgin modeſty, a true divine, and of the ſtricteſt integrity of life; he was rewarded by a prebend of Saliſbury, and the rectory of Wootton Underedge and Seintbury; and died in 1545. Mr. Graves of Mickleton communicated to Dr. Knight a print of a prieſt praying to St. Nicholas in the chancel of Saintbury, near the place where he was buried. He built the parſonage at Keſten, where were his initials, W. L.[9]

Another Dr. William Latymer was dean of Peterborough in 1569, and died in 1584.

Hugh Latimer, of Thurcaſton, whom Fox ſtyles "a huſbandman of right good reputation," had ſix daughters, but only one ſurviving ſon, who was brought up at home till he was the age of four years; when his parents, ſeeing his ready, prompt, and ſharp wit, purpoſed to train him up in erudition, and knowledge of good literature, at the common ſchools of his own county. Latimer ſpeaks with much gratitude of his father's having "kept him to ſchool;" whence, at 14, he was ſent to Chriſt's college, Cambridge, where he took the degrees in arts; and, entering into prieſt's orders, was ſo ſervile an obſerver of the Romiſh decrees, that he thought he had never ſufficiently mingled his maſſing wine with water. He was violent againſt the opinions which had lately diſcovered themſelves in England; heard the teachers of them with high indignation; inveighed publicly and privately againſt the Reformers; and was ſo much taken notice of in the Univerſity, that he was elected croſs-bearer, which he ſolemnly brought forth on proceſſion days[10]; and if any read lectures in the ſchools, Latimer was ſure to be there to drive out the ſcholars. "His Popiſh zeal could in no caſe abide good maſter Stafford, reader of the Divinity Lectures at Cambridge, moſt ſpitefully railing at him, and willing the youth of Cambridge in no wiſe to believe them[11]."

A letter from Arthur Liſle, dated Calais, Feb. 27, preſerved in the Britiſh Muſeum, contains "intelligence about Dr. Latimer's preaching in favour of Papacy[12]."

He tells us indeed himſelf, in his firſt Sermon on the Lord's Prayer, "I was as obſtinate a Papiſt as any was in England; inſomuch that, when I ſhould be made bachelor of divinity, my whole oration went againſt Philip Melancthon, and againſt his opinions. Bilney heard me at that time, and perceived that I was zealous without knowledge; and he came to me afterward in my ſtudy, and deſired me, for God's ſake, to hear his confeſſion. I did ſo. And, to ſay the very truth, by his confeſſion I learned more than before in many years. So from that time forward I began to ſmell the word of God, and forſook the ſchool doctors, and ſuch like fooleries."

In another Sermon he ſays, I "was once called to one of my kinſfolk; it was at that time when I had taken degrees at Cambridge, and was made Maſter of Arts: I was called, I ſay, to one of my kinſfolk, which was very ſick, and died immediately after my coming. Now there was an old couſin of mine, which, after the man was dead, gave me a wax candle in my hand, and commanded me to make certain croſſes over him that was dead, for ſhe thought the devil ſhould run away by and by. Now I took the candle; but I would not croſs him as ſhe would have me to do, for I had never ſeen it afore. Now ſhe perceiving that I would not do it, with a great anger took the candle out of my hand, ſaying, 'It is pity that thy father ſpendeth ſo much money upon thee;' and ſhe took the candle, and ſhe croſſed and bleſſed him, ſo that he was ſure enough. No doubt ſhe thought the devil could have no power over him."

From a violent Papiſt, Dr. Fuller obſerves, "Latimer was converted, under God, to a zealous Proteſtant[13]," active in ſupporting the Reformed doctrine, and aſſiduous to make converts both in town and univerſity. He came alſo to Maſter Stafford before he died, and deſired his forgiveneſs[14]. For about three years he publicly preached at Cambridge, to the learned in the Latin tongue, and to the common people his natural and vulgar language[15]. He alſo exhorted in private, and every where preſſed the neceſſity of a holy life, in oppoſition to ritual obſervances. A behaviour of this kind was immediately taken notice of; Cambridge, no leſs than the reſt of the kingdom, was entirely Popiſh; every new opinion was watched with jealouſy.—Latimer ſoon perceived how obnoxious he had made himſelf; and, being a preacher of eminence, the orthodox clergy thought it high time to oppoſe him openly. His preaching "of the Cards," about Chriſtmas 1529, the ſubſtance and effect of which is given at large by Fox[16], more particularly attracted attention. Dr. Buckneham, prior of the Black Friers, appeared in the pulpit a very few Sundays after; and, with great pomp and prolixity, ſhewed the dangerous tendency of Latimer's opinions; particularly inveighing againſt his heretical notions of having the Scriptures in Engliſh. At this ſermon Latimer was preſent; and, either the ſame afternoon, or very ſhortly after, gave an anſwer to it from the ſame pulpit, the church being filled with doctors and other graduates, and multitudes from the town. Looking earneſtly at Buckneham, who ſat with his cowl about his ſhoulders directly facing him, he exemplified his argument thus: "The very painters, when they paint a fox preaching out of a frier's cowl (looking at Buckneham), none is ſo mad to take this to be a fox that preacheth, but know well enough the meaning of the matter." With this ſermon the frier was ſo daſhed, that he never again dared attack Latimer. Another railing frier, a Dr. Venetus, was alſo preached down.

---

[1] See vol. II. pp. 660, 663.

[2] Ibid. pp. 562, 644.

[3] Gough's Camden, vol. II. p. 400; where the learned Editor conjectures "that Latimarius ſhould be Latinarius, it being preſumed that a man who underſtands Latin muſt be a learned man." All the inſtances in the Gloſſaries are of the latter word, and none of the former.

[4] Ibid. vol. I. pp. 314, 318, 384. His grandſon John lord Latimer married Catharine Parr, afterwards laſt wife of Henry VIII.

[5] Ibid. p. 166.

[6] Ibid. vol. III. p. 24.

[7] Ibid.

[8] Ibid. p. 149.

[9] Knight's Life of Eraſmus, p. 30, 31.

[10] Fuller's Hiſtory of Cambridge, p. 102.

[11] Fox, ubi ſupra.

[12] Cotton MSS. Veſpaſian, F. XIII. p. 111.

[13] Worthies, p. 128.

[14] Fox, p. 375.

[15] Ibid.

[16] P. 476.

The Proteſtant party, after this, of which Bilney and Latimer were the heads, continued to gain ground; and great was the alarm of the orthodox clergy, of which ſome were the heads of colleges, and ſenior part of the univerſity. Frequent convocations were held, tutors were admoniſhed to have a ſtrict eye over their pupils, and academical cenſures of all kinds were inflicted: but academical cenſures were found inſufficient. Latimer continued to preach, and hereſy to ſpread. The heads of the Popiſh party applied to Dr. Weſt, biſhop of Ely, as their dioceſan: but that prelate was not a man for their purpoſe; he was a Papiſt indeed, but moderate. He, however, came to Cambridge, examined the ſtate of religion, and, at their intreaty, preached againſt the heretics at Barnwell abbey; and forbade Mr. Latimer's preaching within the churches of the Univerſity. But this gave no check to the Reformers; for there happened at this time to be a Proteſtant prior in Cambridge, Dr. Barnes, of the Auſtin-friers, who, having a monaſtery exempt from epiſcopal juriſdiction, and being a great admirer of Latimer, boldly licenſed him to preach there. Hither his party followed him; and, the late oppoſition having greatly excited the curioſity of the people, the Friers chapel was ſoon incapable of containing the crowds that attended; and, among others, it is remarkable that my lord of Ely was often one of his hearers, and ingenuouſly declared that Mr. Latimer was one of the beſt preachers he had ever heard.

The principal perſons at this time concerned in eccleſiaſtical affairs were cardinal Wolſey, Warham archbiſhop of Canterbury, and Tunſtal biſhop of London; and as Henry VIII. was now in the expectation of having the buſineſs of his divorce ended in a regular way at Rome, he was careful to obſerve all forms of civility with the pope. The cardinal therefore erected a court, conſiſting of biſhops and canoniſts, to put the laws in execution againſt hereſy: of this court Tunſtal was made preſident; and Bilney, Latimer, and others, were called before him. Bilney being conſidered as the hereſiarch, againſt him chiefly the rigour of the court was leveled; and they ſucceeded ſo far, that he was prevailed on to recant: accordingly he bore his faggot, and was diſmiſſed. The others had eaſier terms. Latimer in particular had the Cardinal's approbation, and an ample licence for preaching[1]. Tunſtal alſo omitted no opportunities of ſhewing mercy; and the heretics, on their diſmiſſion, returned to Cambridge, where they were received with open arms by their friends. Amidſt this mutual joy, Bilney alone ſeemed unaffected; he ſhunned the ſight of his acquaintance, and received their congratulations with confuſion and bluſhes. In ſhort, he was ſtruck with remorſe for what he had done, grew melancholy, and, after leading an aſcetic life for three years, reſolved to expiate his abjuration by death. In this reſolution he went to Norfolk, the place of his nativity; and, preaching publicly againſt Popery, he was apprehended by order of the biſhop of Norwich, and, after lying a while in the county gaol, was burnt in that city. His ſufferings, far from ſhocking the Reformation at Cambridge, inſpired the leaders of it with new courage. Latimer began now to exert himſelf more than he had yet done; and ſucceeded to that credit with his party, which Bilney had ſo long ſupported. Among other inſtances of his zeal and reſolution in this cauſe, he gave one very remarkable. He had the courage to write to the king againſt a proclamation then juſt publiſhed, forbidding the uſe of the Bible in Engliſh. He had preached before his majeſty once or twice at Windſor, and had been noticed by him in a more affable manner than that monarch uſually indulged towards his ſubjects. But, whatever hopes of preferment his ſovereign's favour might have raiſed in him, he choſe to put all to the hazard rather than omit what he thought his duty. He was generally conſidered as one of the moſt eminent who favoured Proteſtantiſm, and therefore thought it became him to be one of the moſt forward in oppoſing Popery. His letter is the picture of an honeſt and ſincere heart. It was chiefly intended to point out to the king the bad intention of the biſhops in procuring the proclamation, and concludes in theſe terms: "Accept, gracious ſovereign, without diſpleaſure, what I have written; I thought it my duty to mention theſe things to your majeſty. No perſonal quarrel, as God ſhall judge me, have I with any man; I wanted only to induce your majeſty to conſider well what kind of perſons you have about you, and the ends for which they counſel. Indeed, great prince, many of them, or they are much ſlandered, have very private ends. God grant your majeſty may ſee through all the deſigns of evil men, and be in all things equal to the high office with which you are intruſted. Wherefore, gracious king, remember yourſelf; have pity upon your own ſoul, and think that the day is at hand, when you ſhall give an account of your office, and of the blood that hath been ſhed by your ſword. In the which day, that your grace may ſtand ſtedfaſtly, and not be aſhamed, but be clear and ready in your reckoning, and to have your quietus eſt ſealed with the blood of our Saviour Chriſt, which alone ſerveth at that day, is my daily prayer to him who ſuffered death for our ſins. The ſpirit of God preſerve your Grace! Anno Domini 1530, 1° die Decembris."

Though the influence of the Popiſh party then prevailed ſo far, that this letter produced no effect; yet the king, no way diſpleaſed, received it not only with temper, but with condeſcenſion, graciouſly thanking him for his well-intended advice. The king loved ſincerity and openneſs; and Latimer's plain and ſimple manner had before made a favourable impreſſion upon him, which this letter contributed not a little to ſtrengthen; and the part he acted in promoting the eſtabliſhment of the king's ſupremacy riveted him in the royal favour. Dr. Butts, the king's phyſician, being ſent to Cambridge on that occaſion, began immediately to pay his court to the Proteſtant party, from whom the king expected moſt unanimity in his favour. Among the firſt, he made his application to Latimer, as a perſon moſt likely to ſerve him; begging that he would collect the opinions of his friends in the caſe, and do his utmoſt to bring over thoſe of moſt eminence, who were ſtill inclined to the Papacy. Latimer, being a thorough friend to the cauſe he was to ſolicit, undertook it with his uſual zeal, and diſcharged himſelf ſo much to the ſatisfaction of the doctor, that he was ſoon retained in the court, reſorted much to London, and preached there in ſeveral churches. About this time a perſon was riſing into power, who became his chief friend and patron; the lord Cromwell, who, being a friend to the Reformation, encouraged of courſe ſuch churchmen as inclined towards it. Among theſe was Latimer, for whom his patron ſoon obtained the rectory of Weſt Kington, in Wilts; thither he reſolved, as ſoon as poſſible, to repair, and keep a conſtant reſidence. His friend Dr. Butts, ſurprized at this reſolution, did what he could to diſſuade him from it: "You are deſerting," ſaid he, "the faireſt opportunities of making your fortune: the prime miniſter intends this only as an earneſt of his future favours, and will certainly in time do great things for you. But it is the manner of courts to conſider them as provided for, who ſeem to be ſatisfied; and, take my word for it, an abſent claimant ſtands but a poor chance among rivals who have the advantage of being preſent." Thus the old courtier adviſed; but theſe arguments had no weight. He was heartily tired of the court; and, leaving the palace thereof, entered immediately upon the duties of his pariſh. Nor was he ſatisfied within thoſe limits; he extended his labours throughout the county, where he obſerved the paſtoral care moſt neglected, having for that purpoſe obtained a general licence from the Univerſity of Cambridge. As his manner of preaching was very popular in thoſe times, the pulpits every where were gladly opened for him; and at Briſtol, where he often preached, he was countenanced by the magiſtrates. But this reputation was too much for the orthodox clergy to ſuffer, and their oppoſition firſt broke out at Briſtol. The mayor had appointed him to preach there on Eaſter-day. Public notice had been given, and all people were pleaſed; when, ſuddenly, there came out an order from the biſhop, prohibiting any one to preach there without licence. The clergy of the place waited upon Latimer; informed him of the biſhop's order; and, knowing he had no ſuch licence, were extremely ſorry that they were thus deprived of the pleaſure of hearing him. Latimer received their compliment with a ſmile; for he had been apprized of the affair, and knew that theſe very perſons had written to the biſhop againſt him. Their oppoſition became more public and avowed; the pulpits were uſed to ſpread their invectives againſt him; and ſuch liberties were taken with his character, that he thought it neceſſary to juſtify himſelf. Accordingly, he called upon his maligners to accuſe him before the mayor of Briſtol: and, with all men of candour, he was juſtified; for, when the parties were convened, and the accuſers produced, nothing appeared againſt him; but the whole accuſation was left to reſt upon the uncertain evidence of hearſay information. A long Latin expoſtulatory letter from Dr. Sherwood, with Latimer's anſwer, is preſerved by Fox; and a correſpondence in Engliſh with ſir Edward Baynton, in which Latimer ſpiritedly defends his conduct as parſon of Weſt Kington.

---

[1] Strype's Eccleſiaſtical Memorials, vol. III. p. 235.

The party againſt him became daily ſtronger, and more inflamed. It conſiſted in general of the country prieſts in thoſe parts, headed by ſome divines of more eminence. Theſe perſons, after mature deliberation, drew up articles againſt him, extracted chiefly from his ſermons; in which he was charged with ſpeaking lightly of the worſhip of ſaints; with ſaying there was no material fire in hell; and that he would rather be in purgatory than in Lollards tower. This charge being laid before Stokeſley biſhop of London, that prelate, Jan. 10, 1531, cited Latimer to appear before him; and, when he appealed to his own ordinary, a citation was obtained out of the archbiſhop's court, where Stokeſley and other biſhops were commiſſioned to examine him. An archiepiſcopal citation brought him at once to a compliance. His friends would have had him fly for it; but their perſuaſions were in vain. He ſet out for London in the depth of winter, and under a ſevere fit of the ſtone and colic; but he was more diſtreſſed at the thoughts of leaving his pariſh expoſed to the Popiſh clergy, who would not fail to undo, in his abſence, what he had hitherto done. On his arrival at London, he found a court of biſhops and canoniſts ready to receive him; where, inſtead of being examined, as he expected, about his ſermons, a paper was put into his hands, which he was ordered to ſubſcribe, declaring his belief in the efficacy of maſſes for the ſouls in purgatory, of prayers to the dead ſaints, of pilgrimages to their ſepulchres and reliques, the Pope's power to forgive ſins, the doctrine of merit, the ſeven ſacraments, and the worſhip of images; and, when he refuſed to ſign it, the archbiſhop with a frown begged he would conſider what he did. "We intend not," ſays he, "Mr. Latimer, to be hard upon you; we ſhall diſmiſs you for the preſent; take a copy of the articles, examine them carefully; and God grant that, at our next meeting, we may find each other in a better temper!" The next and ſeveral ſucceeding meetings the ſame ſcene was acted over again. He continued inflexible, and they continued to diſtreſs him. "I was once," he ſays, "in examination before five or ſix biſhops, where I had much turmoiling; every week thrice I came to examinations, and many ſnares and traps were laid to get ſomething. Now, God knoweth, I was ignorant of the law, but that God gave me anſwer and wiſdom what I ſhould ſpeak. It was God indeed; for elſe I had never eſcaped them. At the laſt I was brought forth to be examined, into a chamber hanged with arras, where I was before wont to be examined; but now at this time the chamber was ſomewhat altered. For whereas before there was wont ever to be a fire in the chimney, now the fire was taken away, and an arras hanging hanged over the chimney, and the table ſtood near the chimney's end; ſo that I ſtood between the table and the chimney's end. There was among theſe biſhops that examined me one with whom I have been very familiar, and took him for my great friend, an aged man, and he ſat next the table's end. Then, among all other queſtions, he put forth one, a very ſubtle and crafty one, and ſuch a one indeed as I could not think ſo great danger in. And when I ſhould make anſwer, "I pray you, Mr. Latimer (ſaith he), ſpeak out, for I am thick of hearing; and here be many that ſit far off." I marvelled at this, that I was bidden to ſpeak out, and became to miſdeem, and gave an ear to the chimney. And, ſir, there I heard a pen walking in the chimney behind the cloth. They had appointed one there to write all mine anſwers, for they made ſure work that I ſhould not ſtart from them; there was no ſtarting from them. God was my good Lord, and gave me anſwer; I could never elſe have eſcaped it."

Among the Cotton MSS. are, Biſhop Latimer's arguments againſt purgatory, with annotations in the margin by king Henry VIII. both in their own handwriting[1]; a letter from Latimer againſt Mr. Coots, for preaching Popiſh doctrines[2]; another from Richard Brown, March 18, 1533, ſtating that "on the ſecond Sunday this Lent, at Bryſtow, preached one Lattamer; and, as it is reported, he hath done much miſchief amongſt the people by his ſaid preaching, and ſoweth errors. His fame is there, and in moſt parts of the dioceſe[3];" and one from John Hylſey, prior to the friers preachers at Briſtol (and afterward biſhop of Rocheſter), againſt Latimer's preaching[4]. Such was the effect of theſe letters, that he was inhibited to preach at Eaſter, though he had been appointed by the mayor, and had been invited to Briſtol by the prieſts, who had welcomed him, and made much of him; but ſome of whom were afterwards employed to write ballads on him[5].

The biſhops ſtill continued their proſecution, till their ſchemes were fruſtrated by an unexpected hand; for the king being informed, moſt probably by lord Cromwell's means, of Latimer's ill-uſage, interpoſed in his behalf, and reſcued him out of their hands.

A figure of ſo much ſimplicity, and ſuch an apoſtolic appearance as his at court, did not fail to ſtrike Anne Boleyn, who mentioned him to her friends as a perſon, in her opinion, well qualified to forward the Reformation, the principles of which ſhe had imbibed from her youth. Cromwell raiſed our preacher ſtill higher in her eſteem; and they both joined in an earneſt recommendation of him for a biſhopric to the king, who did not want much ſolicitation in his favour. It happened that the ſees of Worceſter and Saliſbury were at that time vacant, by the deprivation of Ghinucci and Campagio, two Italian biſhops, who fell under the king's diſpleaſure, upon his rupture with Rome. The former of theſe was offered to Latimer; and, as this promotion came unexpectedly to him, he looked upon it as the work of Providence; and, accepting it without much perſuaſion, was conſecrated in September 1535. All hiſtorians mention him as a perſon remarkably zealous in the diſcharge of his new office; and tell us, that, in overlooking the clergy of his dioceſe, he was uncommonly active, warm, and reſolute, and preſided in his eccleſiaſtical court in the ſame ſpirit. Thus far he could act with authority; but in other things he found himſelf under difficulties. The Popiſh ceremonies gave him great offence; yet he neither durſt, in times ſo dangerous and unſettled, lay them entirely aſide; nor, on the other hand, was he willing entirely to retain them. In this dilemma his addreſs was admirable: he enquired into their origin; and, when he found any of them derived from a good meaning, he inculcated their original, though itſelf a corruption, in the room of a more corrupt practice. By thus reducing Popery to its principles, he improved, in ſome meaſure, a bad ſtock, by lopping from it a few fruitleſs excreſcences.

---

[1] Cleopatra E. V. p. 130. This is alſo printed in Strype's Eccleſiaſtical Memorials, vol. I. Appendix, p. 262.

[2] Cleopatra E. V. p. 363.

[3] Ibid. p. 363. b. And ſee Strype's Eccleſiaſtical Memorials, vol. I. p. 161.

[4] Ibid. E. IV. p. 240.

[5] One of theſe Strype has preſerved in the Appendix to his firſt volume, p. 121.

While theſe were his endeavours to reform in his dioceſe, he was called upon to exert them in a more public manner, by a ſummons to parliament and convocation, in 1536; which was opened as uſual by an oration, ſpoken, at the appointment of Cranmer, by the biſhop of Worceſter, whoſe eloquence was at this time every where famous. Many warm debates paſſed in this aſſembly; the reſult whereof was, that four ſacraments out of the ſeven were concluded to be inſignificant. Many alterations were made in favour of the Reformation; and, a few months after, in 1537, the Bible was tranſlated into Engliſh, and recommended to general peruſal. Meanwhile the biſhop of Worceſter, highly ſatisfied with the proſpect of the times, repaired to his dioceſe, having made a longer ſtay in London than was abſolutely neceſſary. He had no talents for ſtate affairs, and therefore meddled not with them. His whole ambition was to diſcharge the paſtoral functions of a biſhop, neither aiming to diſplay the abilities of a ſtateſman, nor thoſe of a courtier.

In the valuable collection already referred to are the following original letters to the Lord Cromwell:

"Ryght honorable; Salutem. And, ſyr, this berere cã tell yor lordſhype to whatt effecte ſu' doth expownde thys ꝓphecye incloſyd. Howbeytt he hath ytt, I trow, but of hearſay: butt yor lordſhype cã trye the truthe, becauſe you loſſe antiq^{i}tes; therefore I doo ſend ytt to you by my mã, y^{t} hath herde ferther than I. Thus far yor good lordſhype well in God.

19 Oct'. at Hartl'. H. L. WIGORN [1]."

"Ryght honorable; Salutem in Chriſto. And, ſyr, when I was w^{t} yor lordſchype laſte, you were deſyrous to kno where you myght have good monks: I tellyng you of too w^{t} my lord of Weſtmyſtr', I cold nott then name them to you, butt now I cã; the won ys callyd Goorſon, the other Clarke, both bacchelars of divinite, well lernyd, of ryght jugment, and very honeſt mẽ. The p̃or of Coventre, as I trew ſaye, ys dede; the matt' ys ſũwhat entyrd w^{t} the kyng's grace, and lyke to goo forward, yf you putt thertoo yor helpyng hande. I dowght nott but my brother abbott of Weſtmyſt', as yll as he myght ſpare them, yet wyll forgoo them for ſuch a purpos; butt much the rather yf he ꝑceve yor pleſour therein. I wold have waytyd uppon yor lordſhyppe myſelff, as my dewty had byn; butt ſeurly, ſyr, I doo what I cã to able myſelff to ſtande in the pulpytt uppon Tewſdaye. I ã in a faynt weryneſſe ov' all my boodey, but cheffly in the ſmall of my backe; butt I have a good nurſshe, good maſtreſſe Parham, wych, ſeynge whatt caſſe I was in, hath fachyd me hoom to herre owne howſſe, and doth pỹpur me upe w^{t} all dylygence; for I fere a cõſumption: butt ytt makyth lytel matt' for me. I pray God p̃ſ've your lordſhype longe in helthe to all ſuch good purpoſes as God hath ordenyd you too.

In Maſter Parham's howſſe, viij of Novẽb'. H. LATYM', WIGORN' [2]."

One other letter to the lord Cromwell ſhall be given, written in a rough hand, but with a natural eloquence that even yet excites emotion:

"Right honorable; Salutem in Salvatore. Ande, ſyr, I have to thanke yor lordſhype for many thyngs, Ande now alaitt ffor yor ſyngular goodneſſe, ſhowyd, as I underſtande, to maſt^{r} Lucy, a right good gẽtilmã; ande alſo toward maſt^{r} Acton, another of the ſame ſortt; butt of thys my dewtye moor att moore leyſ^{r}. Ande yett thus much now I wyll ſay; ande natt ſay it alone, butt w^{t} many, that yor lordſhype wan mã, have ꝓmotyd many moo honeſte mẽ, ſywyſte God ꝓmotyd you, then hath many mẽ doon befoore youre tyme, though in licke authorite w^{t} you. Tamq^{m} nõ tibi natus ſoli, ſed multor' com̃odo, efficiat qui õia facit, ut in eũdẽ finẽ diutiſſimè vivat dominatio tua, ut ſic inter nobiles nobiliſſimus evadas, qu' q̃dẽ nihil ẽẽ poſſit nobilius, q̃ bonos viros evehere, malos aut' rep^{i}mere. Id quod tibi hacten' uſu venit plus õib' facies. Butt now, ſyr, another thynge y^{t} by yor favo^{r} I myght be a motionare unto you, at the reqweſte of an honeſte mã, the p̃or of Grett Malverne, in my dioc', though natt of my dioc'; referrynge the ſucceſſe of the hooll matter to yor ownly approvyd wyſdoom and benynge goodneſs in ev'ry caſſe; for I knoo y^{t} I doo play the ffowll, but yet w^{t} my foolyſshneſſe I ſũwhatt qwyett an unqwiett mã, and mytygatt hys hevyneſſe, wch I am bold to doo w^{t} you, for that I kno by experience yor goodneſſe, y^{t} you wyll bear w^{t} fowlls in their freylneſſe. Thys mã both heryth and feryth (as he ſayth) the ſuppreſſion of hys howſſe, wich, thowgh he wyll be cõformable in all pointts to the kyng's hyneſſe pleſeure and yours ons known, as both I adv'tyſyd hỹ, ande alſo hys bownden dewtye ys to be; yett nevertheleſſe, if he thowght hys enterpryeſſe ſhuld natt be myſtake, nor turne to any diſpleſour, he wold be an hũble ſewter to yor lordſhype, and by the ſame to the kyng's good grace, for the upſtandynge of his forſayd howſſe, and contynuance of the ſame, to many good purpaſſeſſe: natt in Monkrye, he maynyth natt ſoo; God forbyd; butt ony other ways, as ſhuld be thowghte ande ſeyne good to the kyng's maieſtye, as to mayntayne techynge, p̃chynge, ſtudye w^{t} prayynge, ande (to the w^{c} he ys much gyvyne) good howſkepynge; ffor to the v'tu of hoſpitalitye he hathe byn grettly inclynyd from hys begỹnynge, ande ys very much cõmẽdyd in thes ꝑtees for y^{e} ſame: ſo y^{t} if ccccc marks to the kyng's hyneſſe, and cc marks to yor ſelffe for yor good wyll, myght occaſione the ꝓmotion of hys intentt, att leſte waye for ye tyme off hys lyffe, he doubtyth natt to make hys frends for y^{e} ſame. Yf ſo lytell cold bringe ſoo much to paſſe, the mã ys old, a good howſkeper, fedeth many, and y^{t} daily; for ye cõtreth ys poore, and full of penurye.. And, alas! my good lord, ſhall we not ſee ij or iij in ev'y ſhyre changyd to ſuch remedye? Thus too thys honeſte mãis [3] importunyte hath browght me beyounde my dewtye, ſavynge for the cõfydence and truſte y^{t} I have always in yor benignytye. As he hathe knolege from you, ſoo he wyll p̃pare for you, ev' obedyentt to yor adv'tyeſſment. Syr Wylliam Kyngſton cã myke reportt of ye mã. God proſpere you, to ye utterynge of all hoolow partts; bleſſyd be God of Englonde y^{t} workyth all, hows inſtrumẽt you be. Herde you ſay wons, aftur you hade ſene y^{t} furyous invectyve of cardynall Pooll, y^{t} you wold make hỹ to ete hys owne hartt; wch you have now, I trow, ^{i}browght to paſſe; for he muſte now ette hys owne hartt, and be as hartleſſe as he ys graceleſſe.

13 Decẽb. Hartl'. H. L. WIGOR' [4]."

In 1539, Gardiner biſhop of Wincheſter returned from Germany, having ſucceſsfully negotiated ſome commiſſions, which the king had greatly at heart; and a parliament having been called, to confirm the ſeizure and ſurrendry of the monaſteries, that ſubtle miniſter prevailed on his majeſty to do ſomething towards reſtoring the old religion, as being moſt advantageous for his views in the preſent ſituation of Europe. In this parliament paſſed the famous Act, as it was called, of the Six Articles; which was no ſooner publiſhed, than it gave an univerſal alarm to all the favourers of the Reformation; and, as the biſhop of Worceſter could not give his vote for the act, he thought it wrong to hold any office.—Dr. Fuller ſays, "When the conteſt was in the Houſe of Lords, in the reign of king Henry the Eighth, about the giving all abbey lands to the king, there was a diviſion betwixt the biſhops of the old and new learning; for, by thoſe names they were diſtinguiſhed. Thoſe of the old learning, unwillingly willing, were contented that the king ſhould make a reſumption of all thoſe abbeys which his anceſtors had founded, leaving the reſt to continue according to the intention of the founders. The biſhops of the new learning were more pliable to the king's deſires; only Latimer was diſſenting, earneſtly urging, that two abbies at the leaſt, in every dioceſe of conſiderable revenues, might be preſerved for the maintenance of learned men therein [1]. Thus ſwimming a good while againſt the ſtream, he was at laſt carried away with the current [2]." Finding, however, that he muſt either loſe the quiet of a good conſcience, or forſake his biſhoprick, he voluntarily relinquiſhed the epiſcopal dignity; and when he firſt put off his rochet, he ſuddenly gave a ſkip on the floor for joy, feeling his ſhoulders ſo light, on being diſcharged of ſuch a heavy burthen. Retiring into the country, he reſided there during the heat of the perſecution which followed upon this act, and thought of nothing for the remainder of his days but a ſequeſtered life. He knew the ſtorm which was up could not ſoon be appeaſed, and he had no inclination to truſt himſelf in it. But an unhappy accident ſoon forced him again into public notice.

---

[1] Cleopatra E. IV. p. 142. [2] Ibid. p. 139.—See the Biſhop's hand-writing in Plate CXLI. [3] man's. [4] Cleopatra E. IV. p. 264.

He received ſo dangerous a contuſion by the fall of a tree, that he was obliged to ſeek out for better aſſiſtance than the country afforded. With this view he repaired to London, where he had the misfortune to ſee the fall of his patron, the lord Cromwell; a loſs of which he was ſoon made ſenſible. Gardiner's emiſſaries quickly found him out; and ſomething, that ſomebody had ſomewhere heard him ſay againſt the ſix articles, being alleged againſt him, he was ſent to the Tower; where, without any judicial examination, he ſuffered, through one pretence or another, a cruel impriſonment for the remaining ſix years of king Henry's reign. Immediately on the acceſſion of Edward VI. he and all others who were impriſoned in the ſame cauſe were ſet at liberty; and Latimer, whoſe old friends were now in power, was received by them with every mark of affection. He would have found no difficulty in diſpoſſeſſing Dr. Nicholas Heath, an inſignificant man, who in 1543 had ſucceeded to his biſhopric; but he had other ſentiments, and would neither make ſuit himſelf, nor ſuffer his friends to make any, for his reſtoration. However, this was done by the parliament, who, after ſettling the national concerns, ſent up, Jan. 9, 1548-9. "a note, to require my lord's grace that Mr. Latimer ſhall be reſtored to the biſhoprick of Worceſter [3]." The protector was very well inclined, and propoſed the reſumption to Latimer; but he perſevered in the negative; which Dr. Fuller thus accounts for: "It was not for any want of favour from the king, ſeeing he ſtood rectus in curiâ in relation to his Majeſty; nor was it becauſe his downright Sermons diſobliged the courtiers, who generally delight in ſoft preaching, as in ſoft cloathing [4]. Nor was it out of ſullenneſs, becauſe he would not be bedded again with that wife, which (though unwillingly) had in his abſence embraced another. Nor have we any cauſe to ſuſpect Latimer of Hooper's opinion, as diſtaſting ceremonies, and ſo obſtructing his advancement: but we impute it either to his conſcience (ofttimes ſharpeſt in the blunteſt men), becauſe he would not be built on the ruins of another; eſpecially knowing Heath one of a meek and moderate nature; or to his age, who, Barzillai like [5], was ſuperannuated for earthly honour. Alas! what needed a ſquare-cap over the many night-caps which age had multiplied on his reverend head? Or becauſe he found himſelf not ſo fit for government; better for preaching, than ordering eccleſiaſtical affairs; or, laſtly, becauſe he prophetically foreſaw that the ingratitude of the Engliſh nation would ſhorten their happineſs, and king Edward's life; and he was loth to come into a place only to go out thereof. Sure I am, it was a loud lie, which Parſons tells [6], that Latimer was kept bare, who kept himſelf bare; living, not in the want, but neglect, yea contempt, of all worldly wealth. He was confeſſor-general to all Proteſtants troubled in mind; yea, he was the corban, or treaſury, into which reſtored ill-gotten goods were caſt, to be beſtowed on the poor, according to his diſcretion. And Latimer, by the courteſy of England (once a biſhop, and ever a biſhop), was in civility ſaluted lord, and honoured by all good people that knew him. This I conceive the true cauſe why Hooper would not be tranſlated to Worceſter, but held it in commendam with Glouceſter, becauſe Latimer and Heath were both ſurviving, each accounted a lawful biſhop by thoſe of their own religion [7]."

Having fairly rid himſelf of all incumbrance, Latimer accepted an invitation from Cranmer, and took up his reſidence at Lambeth, where he led a very retired life, being chiefly employed in hearing the complaints and redreſſing the injuries of the poor people. And, indeed, his character for ſervices of this kind was ſo univerſally known, that ſtrangers from every part of England would reſort to him; ſo that he had as crowded a levee as a miniſter of ſtate. In theſe employments he ſpent more than two years, interfering as little as poſſible in any public tranſaction. Only he aſſiſted the archbiſhop in compoſing the Homilies, which were ſet forth by authority in the firſt year of king Edward. He was alſo appointed to preach the Lent ſermons before his majeſty; which office he performed during the firſt three years of his reign; and in one of his familiar letters, Archbiſhop Cranmer particularly directs him in regard to his conduct while preaching before the king; and recommends him very ſtrongly to avoid any thing which might ſeem connected with the controverſies he was engaged in.

As at this period there were no ſermons but in the principal churches, and upon ſome particular faſts and feſtivals; it is probable that thoſe of Latimer drew the attention of the people, as much for their rarity, as the reputation of the preacher; for we are informed that ſuch crowds went to hear him, that the pulpit was removed out of the Royal Chapel into the Privy Garden [8].—"The golden mouth of this Preacher, being ſhut up before, was now opened again. And ſo he beginning afreſh to ſet forth his plough again, continued all the time of the ſaid king, labouring in the Lord's harveſt moſt fruitfully, diſcharging his talent before the Ducheſs of Suffolk, in the Convocation houſe at London, and eſpecially before the King at the Court. In the ſame place of the inward garden which was before applied to laſcivious and courtly paſtimes, he diſperſed the fruitful words of the glorious Goſpel. In this his painful travel he occupied himſelf all king Edward's days, preaching, for the moſt part, every Sunday twice, nor was he leſs indefatigable in his private ſtudies; for, notwithſtanding his years and conſtant preaching, he was, winter and ſummer, at his book by two o'clock in the morning [9]."

"As to his ſermons which are ſtill extant, they are far enough from being exact pieces of compoſition; yet his ſimplicity and low familiarity, his humour and gibing drollery, were well adapted to the times; and his oratory, according to the mode of eloquence at that day, was exceedingly popular. His action, and manner of preaching too, were very affecting; and no wonder, for he ſpoke immediately from his heart; and that blunt preaching was in thoſe dark days admirably effectual, which in our days would juſtly be ridiculous [10]." His abilities, however, as an orator, made only the inferior part of his character as a preacher. What particularly recommends him is, that noble and apoſtolic zeal which he exerts in the cauſe of truth; and, artleſs and uncouth as his ſermons appear to us, yet ſuch was the effect of his preaching, that one illuſtrious robber made reſtitution, in his hands, of money ſtole from the publick or the treaſury, moved by one of his diſcourſes on reſtitution, which pierced his conſcience, and obliged him to ſacrifice gain to godlineſs[1].

---

[1] Does not this confirm what is ſtill obſerved abroad, that the largeſt monaſteries obſerve the beſt diſcipline? A relaxation of diſcipline in the larger colleges would be ſooner perceived, and be more intolerable, than in ſmaller.

[2] Worthies, Leiceſterſhire, p. 128.

[3] Journals of the Houſe of Commons, 2 Edw. VI. vol. I. p. 6.

[4] Matth. xi. 8.

[5] 2 Sam. xix. 35.

[6] In the Examen of Fox's Martyrs, Month of February, p. 306.

[7] Fuller's Church Hiſtory, Book VII. p. 405.

[8] Heylin, Hiſtory of the Reformation, p. 57.

[9] In Fox, p. 385, is a print of Maſter Latimer's preaching before king Edward VI. in the preaching-place at Weſtminſter.

[10] Fuller's Hiſtory of Cambridge, p. 100.

The earlieſt of his printed Sermons was preached in 1535, at the time of the inſurrection in the North; the two next, before the Convocation, June 6, 1537.

In a Sermon preached in the Shroudes at Paul's church, Jan. 18, 1548, he is very ſevere on "the rich citizens of London.—What ſhall I ſay of them? Shall I call them proud men of London, malicious men of London, mercileſs men of London? No, no, I may not ſay ſo; they will be offended with me then. Yet muſt I ſpeak. For is there not reigning in London as much pride, as much covetouſneſs, as much cruelty, as much oppreſſion, and as much ſuperſtition, as was in Nebo? Yes, I think, and much more too. Therefore I ſay, Repent, O London, repent, repent."—He goes on to reproach them with want of charity:—"Their brother ſhall die in the ſtreets for cold; he ſhall lye ſick at the door between ſtock and ſtock, I know not what to call for it, and periſh there for hunger. In times paſt, when any rich man died in London, they were wont to help the poor ſcholars of the Univerſities with exhibition, and relieve other poor people with money. Alſo, when I was a ſcholar in Cambridge myſelf, I often heard good report of London; but now I can hear no ſuch good report, although I enquire for it, and hearken for it; for now their charity is waxen cold, and none helpeth the poor."

In the firſt Sermon before king Edward, March 6, 1549, he ſtates that "if a poor man be diſeaſed, he can have no help from the Phyſician without too much; and of the Lawyer the poor man can get no counſel, expedition, nor help in his matter, except he give him too much. At Merchants hands, no kind of ware can be had except we give for it too much. You landlords, your rent-raiſers, I may ſay you ſteplords, you unnatural lords, you have for your poſſeſſions yearly too much: for that heretofore went for 20 or 60*l.* a year (which is an honeſt portion to be had gratis in one lordſhip of another man's ſweat and labour) now is let for 50 or 100 pound by the year. Too much, which theſe rich men have, cauſeth ſuch dearth, that poor men (which live of their labour) cannot with the ſweat of their face have a living, all kind of victuals is ſo dear; pigs, geeſe, capons, chickens, eggs, &c.; theſe things, with others, are ſo univerſally enhanced. And I think verily that, if this continue, we ſhall at length be conſtrained to pay for a pig a pound. If the king's honour (as ſome men ſay) ſtandeth in the great multitude of his people; then theſe graſiers, incloſers, and rent-rearers, are hinderers of the king's honour; for whereas have been a great many houſeholders and inhabitants, there is now but a ſhepherd and his dog; ſo they hinder the king's honour moſt of all..... We of the Clergy had too much; but that is taken away, and now we have too little. But, for mine own part, I have no cauſe to complain; for, I thank God and the king, I have ſufficient. And, God is my Judge, I came not to crave of any man any thing: but I know them that have too little. There lyeth a great matter by theſe appropriations: great reformation is to be had in them. I know where is a great market town[2] with divers hamlets and inhabitants, where do riſe yearly of their labours to the value of fifty pounds, and the vicar that ſerveth (being ſo great a cure) hath but twelve or fourteen marks by year; ſo that of this penſion he is not able to buy him books, nor give his neighbours drink; all the great gain goeth another way."

In the ſecond Sermon, he laments "that chantry prieſts were put into parochial cures, and abbots (whoſe annuities were great and abominable) made biſhops, to ſave and redeem their penſions."

In the third Sermon, he admits that "ſome Noblemens' children had ſet forth God's word, howbeit poor mens ſons have done it always for the moſt part. Johannes Alaſco was here, a great learned man, and, as they ſay, a nobleman in his own country, and is gone his way again[3]: if it be for lack of entertainment, the more pity. I would wiſh ſuch men as he to be in the realm, for the realm ſhould proſper in receiving of them; and it ſhould be to the king's honour to retain and keep them. I heard ſay Maſter Melancthon, that great clerk, ſhould come hither. I would wiſh him, and ſuch as he is, to have 200*l.* a year: the king ſhould never want it in his coffers at the year's end. There is yet among us two great learned men, Peter Martyr and Bernard Ochin, which have 100 marks apiece. I would the king would beſtow 1000*l.* on that ſort."—In the ſame Sermon, he mentions his having been "with the biſhop of Chicheſter[4] in ward, but not ſo but that his friends might come to him, and talk with him;" and that there were at that time "executions in ſome part or other of the city every week, for there are three weeks ſeſſion at Newgate, and a fortnight at the Marſhalſea."—"In the king's dayes that dead is, a many of us were called together before him, to ſay our minds in certain matters. In the end one kneeled down, and accuſed me of ſedition; that I had preached ſeditious doctrine: a heavy ſalutation, and a hard point of ſuch a man's doing, as, if I ſhould name him, ye would not think it. The king turned to me, and ſaid, 'What ſay you to that, ſir?' Then I kneeled down; and turned me firſt to mine accuſer, and required him; 'Sir, what form of preaching would you appoint me to preach before a king? Would you have me preach nothing as concerning a king in the king's ſermon? Have you any commiſſion to appoint me what I ſhall preach?' Beſides this, I aſked him divers other queſtions, and he would make no anſwer to none of them all; he had nothing to ſay. Then I turned me to the king, and ſubmitted myſelf to his grace; and ſaid, 'I never ſued to be a preacher before your grace; but I was called to it, and would be willing (if you miſlike me) to give place to my betters; for I grant there be many more worthy of the room than I am. And if it be your grace's pleaſure ſo to allow them for preachers, I could be content to bear their books after them. But, if your grace allow me for a preacher, I would deſire your grace to give me leave to diſcharge my conſcience; give me leave to frame my doctrine according to my audience; I had been a very dolt to have preached ſo at the borders of your realm, as I preach before your grace.' And I thank Almighty God, which hath always been my remedy, that my ſayings were well accepted of the king; for, like a gracious lord, he turned into another communication. It is even, as the Scripture ſaith, Cor regis in manu Domini; the Lord directeth the king's heart. Certain of my friends came to me with tears in their eyes, and told me, they looked I ſhould have been in the Tower the ſame night."

In the ſixth Sermon he reprobates a privileged place in London, where "the Lord Mayor hath nothing to do; the Sheriffs may not meddle, nor the Queſt enquire of it;" complains of "dicing-houſes;" and adds, "Men of England, in times paſt, were wont to go abroad into the fields a-ſhooting. In my time, my father was as diligent to teach me to ſhoot, as to learn me any other thing. He taught me how to draw, how to lay my body in my bow; and not to draw with ſtrength of arm as other nations do, but with ſtrength of the body. I had my bows bought me according to my age and ſtrength; as I increaſed in them, ſo my bows were made bigger and bigger; for men ſhall never ſhoot well unleſs they be brought up in it: it is a worthy game, a wholeſome kind of exerciſe, and much commended by phyſicians."

[1] Rapin, vol. VIII. p. 189, note.

[2] This was Melton Mowbray; ſee vol. II. p. 482.

[3] A portrait of this eminent nobleman, who was uncle to the then King of Poland, with his autograph, from a letter dated Dec. 16, 1552, was publiſhed by Mr. Thane, in his "Britiſh Autography."—It appears from Fox that Alaſco and Peter Martyr were both baniſhed from this country in 1554.

[4] Dr. George Day, biſhop of Chicheſter 1543; deprived by king Edward VI. and impriſoned; reſtored by queen Mary.

In the ſame Sermon, he gives the following anecdote: "I came once myſelf to a place, riding in a journey homeward from London; and I ſent over-night into the town[1], that I would preach there in the morning, becauſe it was a holiday, and methought it was an holiday's work: the church ſtood in my way; and I took my horſe and my company, and went thither (I thought I ſhould have found a great company in the church); and when I came there, the church door was faſt locked. I tarried there more than half an hour and more; at laſt the key was found, and one of the pariſh came to me, and ſaid, 'Sir, this is a holiday with us; we cannot hear you; it is Robin Hood's day. The pariſh are gone abroad, to gather for Robin Hood: I pray you, let them not.' I was feign then to give place to Robin Hood. I thought my rochet ſhould have been regarded, though I were not; but it would not ſerve; it was fain to give place to Robin Hood's wake[2]."

In the ſeventh Sermon may be traced the germ of one of the fineſt paſſages in the fineſt poem of our greateſt Engliſh Poet. "Death and Hell is not only the wages, the reward, the ſtipend of Sin; but they are brought into the world by Sin. Our firſt father Adam was ſet at liberty to live for ever; yet God, inhibiting him from eating of the apple, told him, 'If men meddle with this fruit, thou and thy poſterity ſhall fall into neceſſity of death, from ever living.' Here come in DEATH and HELL: SIN was their Mother[3]."

In the ſame Sermon, which was one of the laſt king Edward heard, and which was preached at a time when the party which oppoſed the Liturgy began to ſpread, after expreſſing his earneſt wiſh "that prayer might be uſed in this realm, as it ought to be of all men; and eſpecially of magiſtrates, of counſellors, of great rulers;" he adds, "I have heard ſay, when that the good queen that is gone had ordained in her houſe daily prayer, both before noon and after noon, the Admiral getteth him out of the way, like a mole digging in the earth. He ſhall be Lot's wife to me as long as I live. He was, I heard ſay, a covetous man; a covetous man indeed: I would there were no more in England. He was, I heard ſay, an ambitious man: I would there were no more in England. He was, I heard ſay, a ſeditious man, a contemner of common prayer: I would there were no more in England. Well! he is gone; I would he had left none behind him."—"A paſſage ſo informative to the Church Hiſtory of that age," ſays Dr. Fuller, "muſt not paſs without ſome obſervation thereon. The good Queen was queen Katharine Parr, the relict of king Henry VIII. who ſome two years ſince died in childbed. The Admiral was Thomas lord Seymour, her huſband.

"Getteth himſelf out of the way. Here is the queſtion on what terms he abſented himſelf; whether on Popiſh, or Non-Conformiſt.

In proof whereof he is compared to Lot's wife, which importeth a looking back, and reflexion on former practice.	Being termed herein ſeditious, and not ſuperſtitious, it intimates that a factious principle made him diſtaſte the Common Prayer.

"A Contemner of the Common Prayer, I wiſh there were no more. This probably relates unto a potent party diſaffected to the Liturgy, which now began to be very conſiderable in England, but (if the premiſes be rightly collected) much to blame, in the judgment of godly Maſter Latimer[4]."

In the laſt Sermon before the king and his moſt honourable council, in his Court at Weſtminſter, 1550, which he called his ultimum vale, he ſays, "I have now preached three Lents. At my firſt preaching of reſtitution, one man took remorſe of conſcience, and acknowledged himſelf to me, that he had deceived the king, and willing he was to make reſtitution; and ſo the firſt Lent came to my hands £20, to be reſtored to the king's uſe. I was promiſed £20 more the ſame Lent; but it could not be made, ſo that it came not. Well, the next Lent came £320 more: I received it myſelf, and paid it to the king's council. So I was aſked what he was that made the reſtitution. But ſhould I have named him? Nay, they ſhould as ſoon have this weſaunt of mine. Well, now this Lent came £180. 10*s.* which I paid and delivered this preſent day to the king's council. And ſo this man hath made a godly reſtitution."—In the ſame Sermon he introduces a ſtory highly to the credit of the then king of Denmark, "that ſitteth openly in juſtice thrice in the week, and hath doors kept open for the nones;" and complains of "aldermen becoming colliers, woodmongers, and makers of coals. There cannot a poor body buy a ſack of coals, but it muſt come through their hands."

In the firſt of "Seven Sermons on the Lord's Prayer, before the right virtuous and honourable lady Katharine Ducheſs of Suffolk, 1552," he recites the ſtory of a woman, a priſoner in the Tower of Cambridge, which was accuſed that ſhe had killed her child, which act ſhe plainly and ſtedfaſtly denied, and could not be brought to confeſs the act; which denying, gave occaſion to Maſter Bilney and myſelf to ſearch for the matter, and ſo we did: and at length we found that her huſband loved her not; and therefore he ſought means to make her out of the way. The matter was thus. A child of hers had been ſick by the ſpace of a year, and ſo decayed as it were in a conſumption: at the length it died in harveſt-time. She went to her neighbours and other friends, to deſire their help, to prepare the child to the burial; but there was nobody at home, every man was in the field. The woman, in a heavineſs and trouble of ſpirit, went, and, being herſelf alone, prepared the child to burial. Her huſband coming home, not having great love towards her, accuſed her of the murther, and ſo ſhe was taken and brought to Cambridge: but, as far forth as I could learn, through earneſt inquiſition, I thought in my conſcience the woman was not guilty, all the circumſtances well conſidered. Immediately after this, I was called to preach before the king, which was my firſt Sermon that I made before his majeſty, and it was done at Windſor; where his majeſty, after the Sermon was done, did moſt familiarly talk with me in a gallery. Now when I ſaw my time, I kneeled down before his majeſty, opening the whole matter, and afterward moſt humbly deſired his majeſty to pardon that woman; for I thought in my conſcience ſhe was not guilty, or elſe I would not, for all the world, ſue for a murtherer. The king moſt graciouſly heard my humble requeſt, inſomuch that I had a pardon ready for her at my return homeward."

The duke of Somerſet, the great friend of Latimer, having been executed Jan. 24, 1551-2; our venerable Prelate ſeems to have retired into the country, and made uſe of the king's licence as a general preacher in thoſe parts where he thought his labours might be ſerviceable. A large portion of his Sermons were preached either at Stamford or Grimſthorpe in Lincolnſhire, or at Baxterley[5] in Warwickſhire. In one of theſe, on the third Sunday in Advent 1552, he ſays, "The citizens of Naim had their burying-place without the city, which no doubt is a laudable thing; and I do marvel that London, being ſo rich a city, hath not a burial-place without; for, no doubt, it is an unwholeſome thing to bury within the city, eſpecially at ſuch a time when there be great ſickneſſes, and many die together. I think verily that many a man taketh his death in Paul's church-yard, and this I ſpeak of experience; for I myſelf, when I have been there on ſome mornings to hear the Sermons, have felt ſuch an ill-ſavoured unwholeſome ſavour, that I was the worſe for it a great while after; and I think no leſs but it is the occaſion of great ſickneſs and diſeaſes."

---

[1] Tradition aſcribes this alſo to Melton Mowbray; and conjecture ſuppoſes the ſports deſcribed by Leland, vol. V. p. 93. as practiſed on Borow Hill every year on Monday after Whitſunday, when the people of the country thereabouts "cum and ſhote, renne, wreſtel, dawnce, and uſe like other feates of exerciſe," to be here alluded to.—Theſe games were of great antiquity, and of different kinds; and appear to owe their original eſtabliſhment to the cultivating and improvement of archery. Ritſon's Robin Hood, vol. I. pp. XCVII. XCVIII.

In the accompts of the churchwardens of Kingſton on Thames are charges for a "Robin Hood and May game' upwards of 9*l.*; of which four marks were for "Robyn Hood's gaderyng.' And in thoſe of St. Helen's, Abingdon, 1556 is an entry for "ſetting up Robin Hood's bower," probably preparing for the May games, in which he bore a part. Sir John Paſton (vol. II. p. 134.) complains of one of his beſt ſervants, who had for three years been loſing his time in "playing St George and Robin Hood and the ſheriff of Nottingham." The game of Robin Hood was celebrated in Scotland in the month of May ſo late as 1592. Ib. pp. ci—cx.

[2] See vol II. pp. 239. 246.

[3] Shakſpeare alſo ſays of king Richard III. (act I. ſcene III.) "Sin, Death, and Hell, have ſet their marks on him."

[4] Fuller's Church Hiſtory, Book VII. p. 426.

[5] A ſpirited letter from Latimer to a juſtice of the peace at Baxterley is preſerved by Fox, vol. III. p. 413.

In the beginning of the reign of queen Mary, the introduction of Popery having been reſolved on, the firſt ſtep towards it was the prohibition of all preaching throughout the kingdom, and a licenſing only of ſuch as were known to be Popiſhly inclined: A ſtrict enquiry was accordingly made after the more forward and popular preachers; and many of them were taken into cuſtody. The biſhop of Wincheſter, who was now prime miniſter, having proſcribed Latimer from the firſt, ſent a meſſage to cite him before the council. He had notice of this deſign ſome hours before the meſſenger's arrival, but made no uſe of the intelligence. The meſſenger found him equipped for his journey; at which expreſſing ſurprize, Latimer told him, "that he was ready to attend him to London, thus called upon to anſwer for his faith, as he ever was to take any journey in his life; and that he doubted not but God, who had enabled him to ſtand before two princes, would enable him to ſtand before a third." The meſſenger, then acquainting him that he had no orders to ſeize his perſon, delivered a letter, and departed. Latimer, however, opening the letter, and finding it contain a citation from the council, reſolved to obey it. He ſet out, therefore, immediately; and, as he paſſed through Smithfield, where heretics were uſually burnt, he ſaid chearfully, "This place hath long groaned for me." The next morning he waited upon the Council; who, having loaded him with many ſevere reproaches, ſent him to the Tower. Cranmer and Ridley were alſo priſoners in the ſame cauſe with Latimer; and, when it was reſolved to have a public diſputation at Oxford between the moſt eminent of the Popiſh and Proteſtant divines, theſe three were appointed to manage the diſpute on the part of the Proteſtants. Accordingly, they were taken out of the Tower, and ſent to Oxford, where they were cloſely confined in the Bocardo, a common priſon; and might eaſily imagine how free the diſputation was likely to be, when they found themſelves denied the uſe even of books, and pen and ink. Fox has preſerved a conference, afterwards put into writing, which was held at this time between Ridley and Latimer, and which ſets our author's temper in a ſtrong light. The two biſhops are repreſented ſitting in their priſon, ruminating upon the ſolemn preparations then making for their trial, of which probably they were now firſt informed. "The time," ſaid Ridley, "is now come: we are now called upon either to deny our faith, or to ſuffer death in its defence. You, Mr. Latimer, are an old ſoldier of Chriſt, and have frequently withſtood the fear of death; whereas I am raw in the ſervice, and unexperienced." With this preface he introduces a requeſt, that Latimer, whom he calls "his father," would hear him propoſe ſuch arguments as he thinks it moſt likely his adverſaries would urge againſt him, and aſſiſt him in providing proper anſwers to them. To this Latimer, in his uſual ſtrain of good humour, replied, that "he fancied the good biſhop was treating him as he remembered Mr. Bilney uſed formerly to do; who, when he wanted to teach him, would always do it under colour of being taught himſelf. But, in the preſent caſe," ſaid he, "my lord, I am determined to give them very little trouble. I ſhall juſt offer them a plain account of my faith, and ſhall ſay very little more; for I know any thing more will be to no purpoſe." However, he anſwered their queſtions as far as civility required; and in theſe anſwers it is obſervable, he managed the argument much better than either Ridley or Cranmer; who, when they were preſſed, in defence of tranſubſtantiation, with ſome paſſages from the Fathers, inſtead of diſavowing an inſufficient authority, weakly defended a good cauſe by evaſions and diſtinctions, after the manner of ſchoolmen: whereas, when the ſame proofs were multiplied upon Latimer, he told them plainly, "that ſuch proofs had no weight with him; that the Fathers, no doubt, were often deceived; and that he never depended upon them, but when they depended upon Scripture." "Then you are not of St. Chryſoſtom's faith," replied they, "nor of St. Auſtin's?" "I have told you," ſays Latimer, "I am not, except they bring Scripture for what they ſay." The diſpute being ended, ſentence was paſſed; and they were both remanded to priſon.

In the Appendix to the third volume of Strype's "Eccleſiaſtical Memorials," is "The Proteſtation of Mr. Hugh Latymer, rendered in writing to Dr. Weſton, and other of the queen's commiſſioners with him, in an Aſſembly at Oxford; concerning certain Queſtions to him propounded; faithfully tranſlated out of Latin into Engliſh; holden the 20th of April, 1554;" with "Old Father Latymer to one in priſon for the profeſſion of the Goſpel; giving his judgement, whether it be lawful to buy off the Croſs;" and, "An Epiſtle ſent by Mr. Latymer to all the unfeigned Lovers of God's Truth, out of a Priſon in Oxenford called Bocardo (where the ſaid Latymer was impriſoned for the Teſtimony of Chriſt), May 15, 1555 [1]." A ſhort letter, dated from the ſame priſon, addreſſed to Mrs. Wilkinſon, is preſerved by Fox [2].

A portrait of Latimer in Strype's "Memorials of Cranmer" repreſents him with a ſtaff in his right hand, a pair of ſpectacles hanging at his breaſt, and a Bible in his girdle. This venerable prelate, worn out with labour and old age, walked thus equipped to his trial.

Dr. Brooks, biſhop of Glouceſter, was the pope's commiſſioner on this trial; to whom were joined Dr. Story, and Dr. Martin, civilians, as commiſſioners of the crown; and Fox obſerves that Ridley and Latimer were only degraded from prieſt's orders, which he attributes to the ſpleen and bigotry of Brooks.

On the 18th of October, 1555, Ridley and Latimer were executed on the North ſide of the town of Oxford, in the ditch over Baliol college. A particular deſcription of the ceremony, with an illuſtrative plate, is given by Fox, who thus deſcribes the dreſs of the two martyrs: "Mr. Ridley had a fair black gown furred, and faced with foins, ſuch as he was wont to wear being biſhop, and a tippet of velvet furred likewiſe about his neck, a velvet night-cap upon his head, and a corner-cap upon the ſame, going in a pair of ſlippers to the ſtake. After him came Mr. Latimer, in a poor Briſtow freiz frock, all worn, with his buttoned cap, and a kerchief on his head, all ready to the fire, a very long ſhroud hanging over his hoſe down to the feet. Mr. Ridley gave ſeveral ſmall things to gentlemen ſtanding by. Maſter Latimer gave nothing; but very quietly ſuffered his keeper to pull off his hoſe, and his other array, which to look unto was very ſimple; and, being ſtripped into his ſhroud, he ſeemed as comely a perſon to them that were there preſent, as we ſhould lightly ſee; and whereas in his cloaths he appeared a withered and crooked ſilly old man, he now ſtood bolt upright, as comely a father as one might behold [3]." At the ſtake Latimer is ſaid to have comforted his fellow martyr by this prophetic declaration, that "they two ſhould light ſuch a candle in England, as, by God's grace, would never be extinguiſhed;" and in the Epiſtle before his Sermons it is obſerved, that "when the tormentors were about to ſet the fire upon him and that moſt reverend Father Doctor Ridley, he lifted up his eyes towards Heaven, with a moſt amiable and comfortable countenance, ſaying, Fidelis eſt Deus, qui non ſinit nos tentari ſupra id quod poſſumus; and ſo afterward by and by ſhed his blood in the cauſe of Chriſt; the which blood ran out of his heart in ſuch abundance, that all thoſe that were preſent (being godly) did marvel to ſee the moſt part of the blood in his body ſo to be gathered to his heart, and with ſuch violence to guſh out, his body being opened by the force of the fire: by the which thing God moſt graciouſly granted his requeſt; the which was, to ſhed his heart's blood in defence of the Goſpel. When he was chained to the ſtake, two bags of gunpowder were faſtened under his arms, the exploſion of which preſently put an end to his life."

---

[1] Strype's Eccleſiaſtical Memorials, vol. III. Appendix, pp. 89—104.

[2] Vol. I. p. 415.

[3] Fox, vol. III. p. 430.

In the rectorial-houſe at Thurcaſton is a good old painting of the venerable Biſhop, from which the annexed Plate (CXLI.) has been accurately copied, by the bounty of the reverend Prelate who now ſo worthily adorns the ſee which Latimer once poſſeſſed.

To an edition of the Sermons in 1635 is alſo prefixed a good plate, with his head engraved, by G. Gif'; under which are the following lines:

"Thus while he liv'd, grave Latimer was ſeen:
I mean his outward part; and that within
May here be view'd: above you view his face,
But in his book behold his inward grace."

Among the other rectors more particularly deſerving notice is Thomas Willet, who firſt occurs by having officiated as a public notary at the conſecration of archbiſhop Parker, in Lambeth chapel, Dec. 17, 1559. He was ordained deacon by biſhop Grindall, Jan. 14, 1559 60; and in the ſame year was preſented by queen Elizabeth to the rectory of Thurcaſton, and admitted prebendary of Ely. In biſhop Cox's Certificatorium of the ſtate of the dioceſe of Ely, to the archbiſhop, dated Jan. 28, 1560-1, Mr. Willet is returned "prebendary there; a prieſt, no graduate, but qualified for preaching; and had a ſpecial licence for that purpoſe from the biſhop of Ely; and reſided there with his family [1]." Biſhop Cox afterward preſented him to the rectory of Barley, Herts, to which he was inſtituted April 3, 1571. He reſigned his prebend in July 1587; and dying at Barley, in April 1598, was there buried.—His ſon, Andrew Willet, was born at Ely, and educated in the grammar-ſchool there; was firſt admitted of Peter Houſe, and afterward became ſcholar and fellow of Chriſt's College, Cambridge, where he took his degrees in Arts; was incorporated July 14, 1584, at Oxford; and preſented by the queen, in July 1587, to the prebend of Ely which his father had reſigned; Nov. 12, 1588, was inſtituted to the rectory of Childerley, in Cambridgeſhire; and, July 2, 1597, to the rectory of Granteſden Parva, in the ſame county. He likewiſe ſucceeded his father (though not immediately) in the rectory of Barley; for which he exchanged Granteſden; was inſtituted (being then B. D.) Jan. 26, 1598 9; and not long after was created D. D. He was a perſon of great induſtry, piety, and judgement, and was accounted one of the beſt commentators and moſt celebrated controverſial writers of that age. In December 1621, returning from London, near Hodſden, his horſe ſtumbling, threw him, and broke his leg, of which he died on the 10th of that month, ſays Clarke, in his Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory, p. 450; but his epitaph ſays the 4th. Clarke mentions another particular, which does not ſeem probable. He ſays that his death was haſtened by his hearing of a paſſing-bell, which may have been tolled in the adjoining pariſhes of Broxbourne or Amwell, in both which Hodſden lies. He was buried in his church at Barley; to the poor of which pariſh he had given a ſmall tenement, and £40. in money; and where, on the left hand ſide of the chancel, and touching the new and neat ſtalls all round the choir or chancel, lies a large ſpotted marble to the North, with the full length of a prieſt in his gown and Doctor's ſcarf, and his ſquare cap on his head, in a praying poſture with his hands; at his feet the following inſcription, and a little lower the following verſes:

"Hic jacet Andreas Willet,
Doctor Sacræ Theologiæ, aliquando hujus Eccleſiæ Miniſter,
& magnum totius veræ Eccleſiæ ornamentum.
Ob. ætat: ſuæ 59, Dec. 4, A. D. 1621.

"Vivus in hoc tegitur (Lector, mirare) Sepulchro,
Willettus, ſua poſt funera vivus adhuc!
Quin ubi nunc habitat cognoſcere; conſule ſumptu
Magnifico ſtructam, ſcripta polita, Domum
Intereà partem hanc ejus quam Fata tulerunt,
Hìc ubi pauliſper flêris, abire potes.

"Thou that erewhile didſt ſuch ſtrong reaſons frame,
As yet, great Willet, are the Poplin's ſhame;
Him by thy ſickneſs, and by Death, haſt made
Strong arguments to prove, that Man's a ſhade.
Thy Life did ſhew thy deep Divinity;
Death only taught us thy Humanity [2]."

His works were:

"De Animæ naturâ & viribus, Cantab. 1585" 8vo.

"Synopſis Papiſmi; i.e. A general View of Papiſtry, compiled from Scripture, Fathers, Councils, Conſtitutions, Pontifical Decrees. By Andrew Willet, D.D. 1600," folio. This work had four ſeveral editions in his life-time; and was dedicated to king James I.; "who approved and conſtantly patronaged the ſame, having been ſeen and allowed by the Lords, the Reverend Biſhops, and ever ſince had in great eſteem in both Univerſities, and alſo much deſired by all the learned both of the Clergy and Laity;" as it is expreſſed in a ſpecial licence granted by king Charles I. for re-printing it, to his ſon Paul Willet, April 26, 1630 [3]. A fifth edition, with the Life of the Author, by Peter Smith, was publiſhed in 1634.

"A Catholicon againſt the Pſeudo-Catholike Religion, gathered out of the Epiſtle of St. Jude, 1602," 8vo.

"An Antilogie, or Counterplea to an Apologetical Epiſtle in favour of the Romaniſts, 1603," 4to.

"Hexapla; i.e. a Sixfold Commentary on Geneſis and Exodus; wherein ſix ſeveral Tranſlations, viz. the LXX, the Chaldee, the Latin of St. Jerom and Tremelius, the larger and the Geneva Bibles in Engliſh, are compared with the Hebrew interlineary Bible of Pagnine and Montanus: comprizing whatever is worthy of note in Mercerus, Pererius, and Marlborat; London, 16 5," folio.

"Loidoromaſtix; being an Anſwer to Robert Parker againſt the Author of Limbomaſtix, 16 7" 4to.

"Harmonie, or Expoſition upon the Firſt Book of Samuel, 1607." 4to.

"Hexapla on Leviticus, 1 Samuel, Daniel, Epiſtle to the Romans, wherein ſix Things are obſerved in every Chapter. 1. The text, with the divers Readings. 2. Argument and Method. 3. Queſtions diſcuſſed. 4. Doctrines noted. 5. Controverſies handled. 6. Moral Uſes obſerved, 1610, &c." (4 vols. folio.)

"Treatiſe on Solomon's Marriage; a Sermon (Pſalm xlv. 10, 11.) on the Marriage of Frederick V. Count Palatine of the Rhine, and Elizabeth, ſole daughter of our king James I; Feb. 14, 1612.

"Epithalamium in Nuptiis Frid. V. & Pr. Elizabethæ, 1612."

His "Harmony on the firſt and ſecond books of Samuel" were printed in 1613 and 1614; and to each of them is prefixed an elegant Latin epiſtle; the former addreſſed to the Maſter and fellows of Chriſt's College, in which are recounted the biſhops and eminent men who had been of their ſociety: the latter addreſſed to his brethren the Dean and Prebendaries of Ely; wherein he recounts, within his own memory, no leſs than three archbiſhops and ſeven biſhops, who had either been Dignitaries of the Church, or bred up at Ely ſchool; which in his time was in ſo flouriſhing a ſtate, that he remembers above 300 ſcholars in it at once; and further obſerves, that near 20 Maſters of Colleges in the Univerſity of Cambridge had been Deans or Prebendaries of Ely.

"Eccleſia Triumphans."

"Theſaurus Eccleſiæ," &c.

Of this family was Henry Willet [4], D. D. a faithful adherent to king Charles I.; and Ralph Willet, who, with ſeveral other Royaliſts, ſought refuge during the civil war in the Iſland of Barbados.—Ralph Willet, eſq. of Merley, in Dorſetſhire, who died Jan. 13, 1765, was grandſon of the laſt-mentioned Ralph.

---

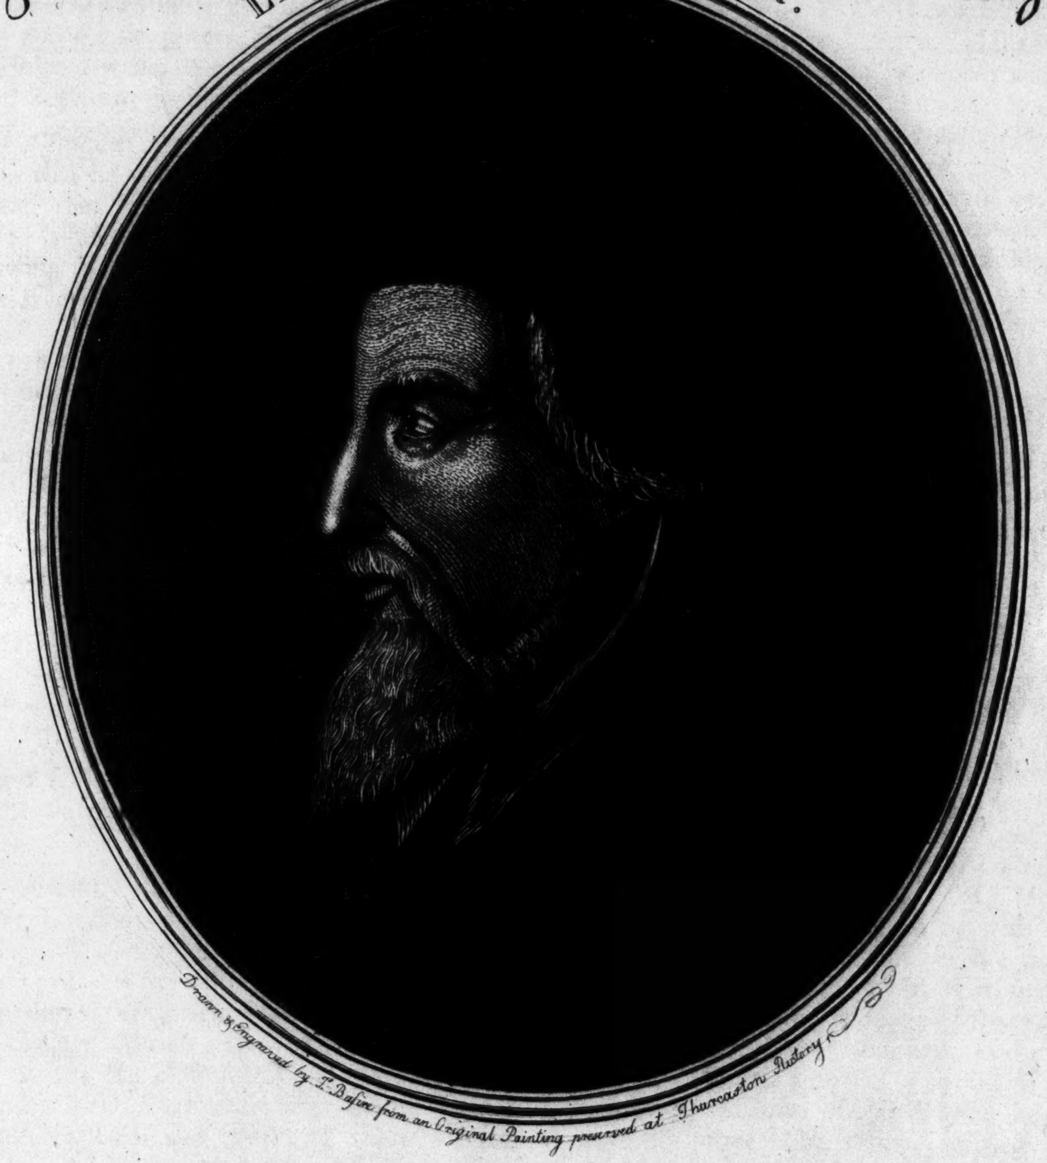
[1] Manuſcript in Ben'et College Library, Miſcellanea V. [2] Chauncey's Hertfordſhire, p. 99. [3] Rymer, Fœd. vol. XIX. p. 161.
[4] Probably the fellow of Exeter College, Oxford, whoſe name is barely mentioned by Walker, p. 116.

Vol. III. Pl. CXLI. p. 1070.

H Latymer
Wigorn

LATIMER, BISHOP & MARTYR.

H L
Wigorn



Drawn & Engraved by T. Basire from an Original Painting preserved at Thurcaston Rectory.

To the Right Revd RICHARD HURD, LORD BISHOP OF WORCESTER,
this Plate is respectfully inscribed, by his Lordship's much obliged & very humble Servt
J. Nichols.

Published as the Act directs, June 4, 1795.

The next rector of Thurcaſton of whom we have any particular account is my kinſman Ezekiel Wright, B. D. a native of Dennington, co. Suffolk; who was elected fellow of Emmanuel College, Cambridge, 1625; and enjoyed the rectory of Thurcaſton, the gift of that college, from 1641 till his death, May 22, 1668. He married Dorothy Oneby, then in her 25th year, Dec. 31, 1650. Robert, their eldeſt ſon, was born April 15, 1652; and died June 3, 1658. Nathan, their next ſon, afterward lord keeper of the great ſeal, was born in 1653. Their third ſon, Ezekiel, was a ſtudent of the Inner Temple.

The epitaph in p. 1059, characterizes Mr. Wright; and the following tranſcript from a marble ſlab in the chancel of Walſoken church, Norfolk, on which are the arms of Wright impaling Oneby (with a reference to the pedigree[1]), completes the hiſtory of the family:

> “In memory of Dorothy Wright, widow, > daughter of John Oneby, of Leiceſterſhire, > relict of Elizabeth Wright,
> late of Thurcaſton, in Leiceſterſhire, clerk;
> by whom ſhe had two ſons, Nathan and Ezekiel, > and a a daughter Dorothy,
> wife of John Twells, late of this town, eſq.
> who died Sept. 29, in her 65th year, 1691.”

Of Robert Alfounder, the ſucceſſor of Mr. Wright, we only know that he was rector of Thurcaſton nearly 33 years; and that he was deſcended from one who had ſignalized himſelf in Boſworth field, as appears by the following ſhort letter, addreſſed by him to one of the Heralds at a Viſitation of this County:

“Sir, Sept. 12, 1682.

“I ſend you this more certain account of my arms and the firſt bearers, as I received it from my father. A croſs Azure, charged with five nails Or, between four Corniſh choughs proper, quarterly, in a field Argent[2]. The creſt (a hand between a pair of wings) as in the ſeal you took. Theſe are the arms of John Alfounder, ſon of Henry Alfounder, ſervant to king Henry VII. when duke of Richmond, and was at the battle of Boſworth 1485. Theſe arms were confirmed by Thomas Wriotheſley, Garter Principal King of Arms, anno 1503. Sir, I deſire your care to add theſe to my pedigree and arms. This from your faithful ſervant,

“To Mr. May, at Sutton.” “Ro. Alfounder[3].”

Of Richard Hill, B. D. the ſucceeding rector, ſome memoirs will be given in the account of his ſchool, p. 1074.

Richard Arnald, the next rector in ſucceſſion, was born at London, and admitted a penſioner of Bene't College, Cambridge, under the tuition of Mr. Waller, in 1714. After taking the degree of B. A. being diſappointed of a fellowſhip, he removed to Emmanuel College, March 10, 1718; where he proceeded M. A. and was elected fellow June 24, 1720. He commenced B. D. ſeven years after, as the ſtatutes of that houſe required, and continued there till the Society preſented him to the rectory of Thurcaſton. Whilſt fellow of that college, he printed two copies of Sapphics on the death of king George; a Sermon preached at Biſhop Stortford[4] ſchool-feaſt (where he was educated), Auguſt 3, 1726, from Col. ii. 8; another at the Archdeacon's Viſitation at Leiceſter, April 22, 1737, from Deut. xxxiii. 8; and afterward publiſhed a third, under the title of “The Parable of the Cedar and Thiſtle, exemplified in the great Victory at Culloden, from 2 Kings xiv. 8, 6, 1746,” 4to. The firſt edition of his “Commentary on Wiſdom” appeared in 1744; a “Commentary on Eccleſiaſticus” in 1748; and the “Commentary on Tobit, Judith, Baruch, the Hiſtory of Suſannah, and Bel and the Dragon, with Diſſertations on the two Books of Maccabees and Eſdras;” and another, on the Dæmon Aſmodæus, tranſlated from Calmet, in 1752. He died Sept. 4, 1756; and Catharine his widow, who was daughter of the Rev. John Woods, rector of Wilford near Nottingham, April 11, 1782.

Their ſon, William Arnald, was educated at Mancheſter under Mr. Lawſon; took the degree of B. A. at St. John's College, Cambridge, 1766, where he was ſoon a wrangler; was elected fellow of his college 1767; became head tutor 1768; M. A. 1769; B. D. 1776; D. D. 1781. In 1775 he was appointed chaplain to Biſhop Hurd; by whoſe kindneſs he became præcentor of Lichfield; and by whoſe recommendation he was in 1776 appointed preceptor to the Prince of Wales and Duke of York, and was rewarded with a canonry of Windſor. In January 1782, to the unſpeakable regret as well as ſurprize of all his friends, ſome ſymptoms of inſanity unhappily put a ſtop to any expectations of further preferment; and this too at a moment when the higheſt Perſonage in the kingdom had condeſcended ſo far to intereſt himſelf in his welfare, as to adviſe him to enquire into the value of the living of Twickenham, juſt then vacant by the death of Mr. Coſtard. This unhappy ſituation of mind (which terminated only with his death in the autumn of 1802) was for more than 20 years the cauſe of real grief to a numerous circle of friends, who, attached to him by the ſtrongeſt ties of gratitude and affection, admired his abilities, loved the ſweetneſs of his manners, and acknowledged the goodneſs of his heart.—A Sermon of his, preached before the Univerſity of Cambridge, on Commencement Sunday, 1781, has been printed ſince his death, 1803, agreeably to the directions of his will.

One other Rector remains to be mentioned; of whom it may at preſent be improper to ſpeak in the very high terms of commendation which he deſerves[5].

Richard Hurd, a native of Penford, in the pariſh of Tettenhall in Staffordſhire, was educated at the grammar-ſchool of Brewood in that county, under the Rev. William Budworth, whoſe memory he has affectionately embalmed in a dedication to ſir Edward Littelton. From Brewood Mr. Hurd went to the Univerſity of Cambridge, and was entered a member of Emmanuel College; where he proceeded A. B. 1738; A. M. 1742; S. T. B. 1744; S. T. P. 1768; and of which ſociety he regularly became a fellow. The firſt performance which is known to have been written by him was a copy of verſes on the Peace of Aix-la-Chapelle, printed in the Univerſity collection.

In 1749, Mr. Hurd publiſhed, “Q. Horatii Flacci Epiſtolæ ad Piſones & Auguſtum, with an Engliſh Commentary and Notes;” and in the preface to it took occaſion to compliment Mr. Warburton in a ſtyle that procured him the patronage of that author; who ſoon after returned the eulogium, in his edition of Mr. Pope's Works, wherein he ſpeaks of Mr. Hurd's Commentary in terms of the higheſt approbation[6], though not more than it was entitled to from its merit. It was re-printed in 1757, with the addition of “Two Diſſertations; the one on the Province of the Drama; the other on Poetical Imitation; and a Letter to Mr. Maſon, on the Marks of Imitation.” A fourth edition, corrected and enlarged, was publiſhed in 3 volumes 8vo, 1765, when another diſſertation was added, “on the Idea of Univerſal Poetry;” and the whole was reprinted in 1776.

During the ſucceeding year (1750) the Univerſity was diſturbed by internal diviſions, occaſioned by an exerciſe of diſcipline againſt ſome of its members, who had been wanting in reſpect to thoſe who were intruſted with its authority. A puniſhment having been inflicted on ſome delinquents, they refuſed to ſubmit to it, and appealed from the Vice-chancellor's juriſdiction. The rights of the Univerſity, and thoſe to whom their power was delegated, by this means becoming the ſubject of debate, ſeveral pamphlets appeared; and among others who ſignalized themſelves upon this occaſion, Mr. Hurd was ſuppoſed to have publiſhed, "The Opinion of an eminent Lawyer[1] concerning the Right of Appeal from the Vice-chancellor of Cambridge to the Senate, ſupported by a ſhort hiſtorical Account of the Juriſdiction of the Univerſity; in Anſwer to a late Pamphlet, intituled, An Inquiry into the Right of Appeal from the Chancellor or Vice-Chancellor of the Univerſity of Cambridge, &c. By a Fellow of a College, 1751," 8vo; which paſſed through three editions, and, being anſwered in another performance, was defended in "A Letter to the Author of a further Inquiry, 1752," 8vo. At this period he had entered into holy orders, and been appointed one of the preachers at Whitehall. July 29, 1752, he preached an aſſize ſermon on the miſchiefs of enthuſiaſm and bigotry, at the cathedral church of Norwich, which was printed ſingly that year: as was another, in 1753, "on the Annual Meeting of the Charity Schools." In 1753, he became miniſter of St. Andrew's the Little in Cambridge; and, on March 28, preached a ſermon at Trinity church, which was printed for the benefit of the charity-ſchool of the town. A ſecond edition of the Art of Poetry appeared about the ſame time.

---

[1] See vol. III. p. 219.

[2] See the arms of Alfounder quartered with thoſe of Hall, Plate CXL. fig. 12.

[3] A Robert Alfounder, B. D. died rector of North Luffenham in Rutland 1775, aged 71.

[4] Clarke, in his Index of Sermons, ſays at Leiceſter.

I may be permitted here to borrow the words of a ſevere and impartial, but perhaps ſtill concealed, cenſor of unworthy proceedings on occaſion of the ordination to the rectory of Bourton on the Water, co. Glouceſter, about 20 years ago: “The various, the ornamental, and profound literature of Dr. Hurd baffles eulogy; and would be diminiſhed by any poor attempts of mine to aſcertain and eſtimate its intrinſic merit.” Obſervations on the preſent rapid decline of the clerical credit and character, in a letter to the biſhop of Cheſter, 1782,” 8vo. p. 80.—The late excellent Mr. Thomas Warton alſo, whoſe taſte and judgment are univerſally acknowledged, calls him “the moſt ſenſible and judicious of modern Critics.” Obſervations on Spenſer's Fairy Queen, vol. II. p. 36. edit. 1762; penès Mich. Tyſon, 1770.

[6] Note to Eſſay on Criticiſm, ver. 631.

The friendſhip which had taken place between Dr. Warburton and Mr. Hurd had from its commencement continued to increaſe by the aid of mutual good offices. In 1755, an opportunity offered for the latter to ſhew the warmth of his attachment to his patron. Dr. Jortin having ſpoken of the former with leſs deference and ſubmiſſion than the claims of an overbearing and confident ſuperiority ſeemed to demand, was called to account for it in a pamphlet, intituled, "The Delicacy of Friendſhip, a ſeventh Diſſertation, addreſſed to the Author of the Sixth, 1755," 8vo. This was univerſally aſcribed to Mr. Hurd; and the ſenſe which the perſon in whoſe favour the attack was made had of the ſervice, may be ſeen in the following extract of a letter to Dr. Lowth: "The author is a man of very ſuperior talents of genius, learning, and virtue; indeed, a principal ornament of the age he lives in: ſo that was I to wiſh a bleſſing to the man I was moſt obliged to, I could not wiſh him a greater, than the friendſhip of ſuch a perſon. And I not only hold myſelf highly honoured and obliged to him, for this mark of his good-will towards me, but think the diſcourſe very ſerviceable to men of letters, if they would condeſcend to make a proper uſe of it. He tries, in the fineſt irony in the world, to ſhame them out of that deteſtable turn of mind, which either out of low envy is unwilling to give merit its due, or out of mean and baſe apprehenſions dare not do it, for fear of its being unacceptable to their ſuperiors." Though Mr. Hurd's reputation for genius and learning had been long eſtabliſhed, we do not find that his merit had attracted the notice of the great, or that any diſpoſition had appeared at this time to advance his fortune. He ſtill continued to reſide at Cambridge, in learned and unoſtentatious retirement; till, in December 1756, he became, on the death of Dr. Arnald, entitled to the rectory of Thurcaſton, as ſenior fellow of Emmanuel College. At this place he accordingly entered into reſidence, perfectly ſatisfied with his ſituation; and the leiſure which this living had given to its poſſeſſor ſoon appeared to have been not idly ſpent.

In 1757, he publiſhed "A Letter to Mr. Maſon, on the Marks of Imitation," 8vo; which (as has already been obſerved) was in the ſame year added to the third edition of the Epiſtles of Horace. And in this year alſo appeared his "Remarks on Mr. David Hume's Eſſay on the Natural Hiſtory of Religion, addreſſed to the Rev. Dr. Warburton," 8vo. This little tract was occaſioned by ſome paſſages in Mr. Hume's Life of himſelf; and is a moſt excellent ridicule and diſplay of Hume's bad logic and reaſoning.

In 1759, whilſt Thurcaſton was benefited by the paſtoral labours of one of the brighteſt ornaments of literature, Mr. Maſon, in a moſt beautiful elegy,

"—— choſe to conſecrate his favourite ſtrain
To Him, who, grac'd by ev'ry liberal art,
That might beſt ſhine among the learned train,
Yet more excell'd in morals and in heart:
Whoſe equal mind could ſee vain Fortune ſhower
Her flimſy favours on the fawning crew,
While in low Thurcaſton's ſequeſter'd bower,
She fix'd him diſtant from Promotion's view;
Yet, ſhelter'd there by calm Contentment's wing,
Pleas'd he could ſmile, and, with ſage Hooker's eye,
"See from his mother earth God's bleſſings ſpring,
"And eat his bread in peace and privacy."

In 1759, a volume of "Dialogues on Sincerity, Retirement, the Golden Age of Elizabeth, and the Conſtitution of the Engliſh Government," was publiſhed anonymouſly in 8vo; and was followed, in 1762, by two editions of "Letters on Chivalry and Romance." "Thoughts on Foreign Travel" ſucceeded in 1764; all which, in 1765, were republiſhed, with the author's name, under the title of "Dialogues Moral and Political, with Letters on Chivalry," in three vols. 8vo; This edition contains a prefatory diſcourſe, then firſt publiſhed, on the manner of writing Dialogue[2].

About this time Mr. Hurd accepted the office of aſſiſtant preacher at the Rolls chapel; and in 1766 obtained, through his friend and patron the hon. Charles Yorke, the preacherſhip of Lincoln's-inn. In 1767, he became archdeacon of Glouceſter; and on Commencement Tueſday, July 5, 1768, was admitted D. D. at Cambridge.

In 1772, as Preacher at Lincoln's-inn, Dr. Hurd delivered the firſt ſeries of Sermons that were preached at the lecture eſtabliſhed by his friend Biſhop Warburton, for the illuſtration of the Prophecies; and exhibited a model truly worthy of the imitation of his ſucceſſors[3]. His "Twelve Diſcourſes" on that occaſion, which had been delivered before the moſt polite and crowded audiences that ever frequented the chapel, were publiſhed in 1772, under the title of "An Introduction to the Study of the Prophecies concerning the Chriſtian Church, and in particular concerning the Church of Papal Rome," in one volume[4], 8vo.

In the ſame year he publiſhed an edition of "Select Works of Mr. Abraham Cowley," with a Preface and Notes, in two ſmall volumes octavo.

It is well known that Dr. Hurd's noble friend and patron only enjoyed the great ſeal a few hours; but a man of ſuch real merit and genius could not be ſuffered to follow his own reſolution of returning to a college life. Lord Mansfield ſeized the firſt occaſion of cultivating his acquaintance; and in 1774 the mitre was placed, as it always ought to be, on the head of Genius and Learning. Dr. Hurd was conſecrated Biſhop of Lichfield and Coventry, Feb. 12, 1775. That this promotion was on his part unſolicited, and what was the ſenſe entertained of it by the College which prided itſelf on his being one of their body, will appear from the following authentic papers:

"Reverendo admodum in Chriſto Patri ac domino, domino Ricardo Epiſcopo Coventrienſi et Lichfeldenſi, Magiſter et Socii Collegii Emmanuelis Cantabrigiæ, S. P. D.

"Nunquam ſanè, digniſſime Præſul, ampliorem vel gratulandi vel gloriandi materiam Divina Providentia nobis obtulit, quam quando te Epiſcopali Infulâ inſignitum contemplamur.

"Tibi igitur gratulamur, quod nulla ſollicita ambitio, nulla magnatum neceſſitudo, niſi quam tua virtus, tua et in Divinis et in humanioribus literis doctrina conciliaverit, viam ad tantam dignitatem munivit; ad quam bonorum omnium votis jam dudum expetitus, et quaſi oculis deſignatus fueris; unde tuo exemplo diſcant omnes, apud optimum Principem nihil ad honores adipiſcendos magis valere, quam meruiſſe.

"Gratulamur Eccleſiæ, quæ eximium probitatis exemplar, et ſimul acerrimum, ſiquando indigeat, paratum habitura ſit vindicem.

---

[1] Earl of Hardwicke.

[2] Reprinted in 1771.

[3] Mr. Mainwaring, in the Diſſertation prefixed to his Sermons, printed at Cambridge 1780, 8vo, p. lxxi. ſpeaks thus of his Lordſhip: "No perſon ever underſtood the art of method ſo thoroughly, or has been ſo ſucceſsful in ſhewing the advantages of it, as the preſent Biſhop of Lichfield. It would be difficult to mention any other ſpecies of writing, in which his Lordſhip does does not excell in a very eminent degree."

[4] A ſecond edition was printed in the ſame year; a third in 1773; and a fourth in 1776.

“ Gratulamur Academiæ, quæ filium, cui ſummos ſuos honores libentiſſimè haud ita pridem detulit, majoribus jam auctum videt.

“ Quidni etiam nobis liceat gloriari, cum de ſplendore tuo nonnihil in hanc Muſarum ſedem repercuti noſſe videatur? in quâ, non hoſpes paucorum dierum, non paucorum annorum diſcipulus, ſed ab ineunte juventute bonis literis imbutus, Socius deinde ejuſdem per plures annos decus et ornamentum fueris; et in curam tandem animarum, tuo arbitrio, non tam emitti, quam ab invitio nobis avelli viſus eſſes.

“Quin et gratulemur venerandæ iſti urbanæ Societati, quæ te rure diutiùs deliteſcere non eſt paſſa; ſed in lucem produxit publicam, quo faciliùs concionatoris munere fungendo, merita tua et dignoſci poſſent et remunerari.

“ Nihil jam reſtat, niſi ut Deum Opt' Max' obnixè comprecamur ut diu vivas et valeas; in hoc enim voto, quodcunque felix fauſtumque ſit (quantum quidem in te fuerit præſidii, et eſt certè maximum) pientiſſimo Regi, Reſpublicæ, Eccleſiæ, Academiæ, Collegio demum noſtro (cujus te memorem nupero beneficio comprobâſti) concluſum arbitramur. Dat' è Coll' Emman'.”

Mr. Farmer and Mr. Aſkew went with this letter to London; preſented it to the Biſhop Feb. 16, 1775; and brought back the following anſwer:

“ Reverendo admodum Magiſtro Sociiſque digniſſimis Collegii Emmanuelis apud Cantabrigienſes,
S. P. D. R. Lichfeldenſis et Coventrienſis.

“ Gratulationes veſtras, viri graviſſimi, mihi perplacere non eſt ut dubitem profiteri, qui, quali ſint elegantiâ conſcriptæ, et ex quanto veſtrûm omnium erga me profectæ amore planè video.

“ Verebar equidem, ut tantam hanc Epiſcopalis faſtigii dignitatem, quâ nec petentem nec ambientem cohoneſtari me voluit optimus Princeps, dignè ſatis ſuſtentare poſſem. Verum animum mirè reficit benevolentia veſtra, et facit ut de tenuitate meâ non nunc pertimeſcam; idque magis, quia laudibus veſtris, etiamſi nimiis, non ignotum cumulatis, aut diſciplinæ veſtræ (de quâ multa prædicare ſoleo) expertem. Quod cum mecum reputo, fidentior paulò ad capeſſendum hoc graviſſimum munus accedo, non modò ſuffragiis veſtris, ſed inſtitutis etiam munitus.

“ Videtis, viri ornatiſſimi, quanti me faciam! nec immeritò; cum, qualis qualis ſum, vos me totum effinxiſtis. Ideo magis in vos, & veſtrum, imò noſtrum, Collegium memori me fore animo gratoque promitto: nec aliud mihi ex hujuſce loci opportunitate priùs exoptandum cenſeo quam ut, quantum vobis veſtriſque ſtudiis faveam, aliquâ ſaltem mei vel judicii vel voluntatis ſignificatione, pluribus teſtari poſſim.

“ Vos autem, viri doctiſſimi, amiciſſimique, valete!

“ Dat' Londini, a. d. XIII cal' Mart' MDCCLXXV[1].”

In conſequence of this well-deſerved promotion, and of Biſhop Hurd's having been entruſted with the important office of Preceptor to the Heir Apparent to the Crown, Mr. Maſon thus again addreſſed his learned friend, with a copy of “ Caractacus:”

“ Still let my HURD a ſmile of candour lend
To ſcenes that dar'd on Grecian pinions tow'r,
When, “ in low Thurcaſton's ſequeſter'd bower,”
He prais'd the ſtrain, becauſe he lov'd the friend:
There golden leiſure did his ſteps attend,
Nor had the rare, the well-weigh'd call of Power,
To thoſe high cares decreed his watchful hour,
On which fair Albion's future hopes depend.
A fate unlook'd-for waits my friend and me;
He pays to duty what is Learning's claim,
Reſigning claſſic eaſe—for dignity;
I yield my Muſe to Faſhion's praiſe or blame.”

In 1776, Biſhop Hurd publiſhed a volume of “ Sermons preached at Lincoln's-inn, between the years 1765 and 1776;” to which two more volumes were added in 1780. Theſe Diſcourſes were prepared for the uſe of the Society of Lincoln's-inn, and delivered in their Chapel, whilſt he was their preacher. Upon his reſignation of that office, the Maſters of the Bench requeſted him to publiſh them; by complying with which, he put the world at large under conſiderable obligations. In the ſame year his Lordſhip alſo favoured the publick with a re-publication of Dr. Jeremy Taylor's “ Moral Demonſtration of the Truth of the Chriſtian Religion,” 8vo.

In May 1781, Dr. Hurd was tranſlated to the ſee of Worceſter, and ſucceeded Biſhop Thomas in the office of clerk of the cloſet to his Majeſty; and in 1783, on the death of archbiſhop Cornwallis, he had the honour of declining the proffered ſee of Canterbury[2].

In 1785, an excellent likeneſs of Bp. Hurd was engraved by Hall, from an original by Gainſborough in the poſſeſſion of his Majeſty; intended for publication at a period which it is earneſtly to be hoped may be long, very long, diſtant. Another portrait of his Lordſhip was given to Dr. Farmer, for the Maſter's lodge at Emmanuel College[3].

In 1788, he publiſhed an edition of “ The Works of the Right Reverend William Warburton, Lord Biſhop of Glouceſter,” in ſeven handſome quarto volumes; to which in 1794 was added, to complete thoſe volumes, but not in a ſeparate publication, “ A Diſcourſe, by way of General Preface to the Quarto Edition of Biſhop Warburton's Works; containing ſome Account of the Life, Writings, and Character of the Author.”

The very admirable “ Addreſs of the Clergy of the Dioceſe of Worceſter to his Majeſty, on his late Proclamation, June 1, 1792,” a production of no ordinary merit, may alſo without much hazard be aſcribed to the pen of this very learned Prelate[4].

Of Bp. Hurd's character (if this were the proper time or place) little more need be ſaid. Where Calumny has not even ventured to inſinuate a fault, and where Reſpect and Reverence are the conſtant attendants, it will be unneceſſary to expatiate on good qualities. As a writer, his taſte, learning, and genius, are univerſally confeſſed. His Sermons are read with not leſs advantage than they were delivered. With his friends and connexions he has obtained the beſt eulogium, their conſtant and warm attachment; and with the world in general a kind of veneration, which, in times like the preſent, could neither be acquired nor preſerved but by the exerciſe of great virtues. And here let me be allowed to boaſt that, from the commencement of my typographic life to the preſent moment, I have had the honour of uninterruptedly enjoying his lordſhip's patronage.

This article ſhall be cloſed with ſome lines on the addition of a Library to the Epiſcopal Houſe at Hartlebury; where the venerable Prelate has for ſeveral years paſſed the placid evening of life in elegant hoſpitalities and dignified retirement:

Thus Phœbus to Minerva ſaid:
“ By HURD in all things we're obey'd:
Not Socrates, however fervent,
Was more than HURD your humble ſervant.
Genius and Taſte from me he drew,
But martial dignity from you;
Now, with propriety refin'd,
He manifeſts a grateful mind.
Behold the hoary, Gothic ſeat,
Which riſes in that green retreat!
To us a votive Temple there
Is finiſh'd, by his filial care.
Whate'er in Literature is beſt,
The various treaſures of the Eaſt,
The eloquence of Greece and Rome,
Shall dignify the ſpacious dome.
Whate'er in Learning's common-weal,
Of modern date hath had our ſeal,
Shall to this venerable fane,
Through HURD, a free admiſſion gain;
Hence (whom we deem our ſpecial care)
Each Britiſh Genius ſhall be there.
There Locke and Newton claim your ſmile,
And Bacon, glory of the Iſle;
There, Chiefs of the poetic band,
My Shakſpeare and my Milton ſtand;
And Clarendon, with ſterner pride,
Shall o'er th' hiſtoric ranks preſide:
Thus, fill'd with all that's good and great,
The votive fane ſhall ſtand compleat.”
The Maid replied—“ If in our ſhrine
His modeſt merit ſhould aſſign
To his own work a ſtation due,
Your obſervation would be true.”

---

[1] Cole's MSS. in the Britiſh Muſeum, vol. LVII. p. 407.

[3] This fact is well known; but I had the honour of receiving it from the good Biſhop himſelf, ſoon after the offer had been made to him from the higheſt Perſonage in the kingdom.

[2] His Lordſhip's arms are, thoſe of the See of Worceſter; impaling, Argent, on a chief Or, a raven cloſe proper. Pl. CXLI.

[4] Annual Regiſter, vol. XXXIV. p. 75.

THURCASTON FREE SCHOOL.

Σὺν Θεῷ.

Statutes, Rules, and Orders, drawn up and compoſed by Mr. Hill himſelf, agreeably to his laſt Will, for the regular and Chriſtian governing, ordering, and teaching of his Charity School at Thurcaſton.

Chapter I.

An account of the founder's birth, education, and preferments. Of his wives and children. The charity ſchool at Thurcaſton, when and by whom founded and endowed.

Richard Hill, B. D. ſon of Humfry Hill, of Shenſtone, in Stone pariſh, adjoining to Chadgely and Kidderminſter pariſhes in Worceſterſhire, was educated firſt at Chadgely ſchool, and afterward at Uppingham ſchool in Rutland, by the great kindneſs and bounty of his good brother, the Rev. John Hill, then rector of Preſton by Uppingham; and from Uppingham ſchool he was admitted ſizar in Immanuel College upon Dec. 10, 1675, and was choſen fellow of the ſaid college on July 14, 1682. He always kept ſtatutable reſidence in his college, whilſt ſcholar and fellow of it; and being ordained deacon upon Dec. 23, 1683, and prieſt upon Sept. 21, 1684, he ſerved the cure firſt of Swaffham Bulbeck church, five miles Eaſtward from Cambridge, for ſomething more than nine years; and afterward aſſiſted Dr. Davis more than ſeven years in his cure of Heydon and Little Chiſwell in Eſſex, the firſt 10 miles, the other 12 from Cambridge, going to Heydon the Lord's day in the morning, and from thence to Little Chiſwell in the afternoon, and returning to the college in the evening; but never tired; never in thoſe days wearied with the holy ſervice of that moſt holy day:—And all this till, upon the deceaſe of his pious, worthy, and good predeceſſor Mr. Alfounder, he was elected rector of Thurcaſton on May 22, 1701, by the unanimous conſent and vote of the maſter, fellows, and ſcholars of Immanuel College, patrons of the ſaid rectory. Upon July 1, then next enſuing, he was inſtituted rector of Thurcaſton by biſhop Gardener, then biſhop of Lincoln. On the 2d he arrived at the parſonage-houſe in Thurcaſton, and by the good providence of God was inducted on the 4th; preached twice on the 6th; and has been conſtantly reſident, a conſtant preacher, and a conſtant houſekeeper, ever ſince. Upon April 14, 1702, Mr. Hill married Heſter, ſenior daughter of William Sanderſon, of Pilton near Oundle in Northamptonſhire, gent. and had by her two daughters, Heſter and Anne. Anne lived but about three weeks. Heſter was married upon Oct. 2, 1722, in the 19th year of her age, to Edward Wigley, of Ulleſthorp in this county, gent. and now commenced doctor in phyſick, ſon of the rev. learned and good Mr. Wigley, ſome time fellow of St. John's College in Cambridge, and contemporary with me. She died, in all Chriſtian appearance penitent and holy, on Nov. 10 next after. She was married in London, and was buried on the 24th, in a leaden coffin, at the feet of her good mother, in Thurcaſton chancel, upon Jan. 27, 1707. The ſaid Mr. Hill married Helen, one of the daughters of the late Cecil Tyrwhit, of Camringham near Lincoln, eſq.; with whom he lived moſt peaceably and lovingly (as he alſo did with his firſt good wife) till July 7, 1713, on which day ſhe died, and was buried cloſe to the grave he reſerved for himſelf, between his two dear and excellent wives.

In the year of our Lord 1715, the ſaid Richard Hill, being moved by the infinite, eternal, and myſterious charity of God to him, founded and built a charity-ſchool, and ſchoolmaſter's houſe, for the poor children of Thurcaſton pariſh, upon a little cottage of glebe-land, cloſe by the cauſeway at the lower end of it, on the left hand, as we walk from the parſonage-houſe to the bleſſed houſe of God, the church. He has alſo endowed this ſchool for ever, by his laſt will, with 14l. a year in free land, and with 1l. more at leaſt in money; being the intereſt of 25l. which he has left with his ſucceſſor, to be laid out in land for the ſchool.

Chapter II.

An account of the ſchool lands, and of the truſtees for them. The rector's old rent for this cottage, and the ſchoolmaſter's ſtipend, to be paid out of theſe ſchool lands. The number of the founder's ſcholars, and the Bibles and other books to be bought and given to his ſcholars. The repairs to be made. The founder's gift of William Graves's land to the rector, together with his earneſt obſervation to the rector, and his hearty prayer to God for him.

For the honour of God, and for the flouriſhing eſtate of Chriſtianity in this pariſh; for the eternal good of mankind, and for the perpetual memory of the thing; be it recorded, that Richard Hill, B. D. rector of Thurcaſton, did, in the year of our Lord 1712, purchaſe one incloſed ground, called Great Huſterdale, at Burton on the Wolds, in Preſtwold pariſh in this county; which then was, and now is, ſet for 7l. 10s. a year. And in the year 1714 he purchaſed of John Cooke as much arable land and meadow-ground, in the open fields and meadows of Anſty, as is ſet for 3l. 13s. a year; fully purpoſing, when he purchaſed them, to endow a charity-ſchool with them in this pariſh. And now he has accordingly, by his laſt will and teſtament, given, deviſed, and bequeathed, all theſe ſeveral lands at Burton and Anſty, together with 25l. in money, purchaſed by him at three diſtinct times, to the rev. the rector of Thurcaſton, and to the rev. the rector of Loughborow, and to the rev. the vicar of Rothley, for the time being, for ever, in truſt, for the paying of 11l. a year, for ever, to the maſter for the time being of this his charity-ſchool at Thurcaſton; one pound whereof is to be paid back again yearly by the ſchoolmaſter to the rector of Thurcaſton, for his rent of this cottage.

And I earneſtly beſeech every rector contentedly to accept of this one pound in full pay for the year's rent of this glebe cottage, and of all the buildings upon it and appurtenances belonging to it, that being the whole rent and the full value of this cottage in Mr. Wright's time, and in Mr. Alfounder's time, and in my time, till I improved it by building a ſchoolmaſter's houſe and a ſchool upon it, and by planting an orchard, and appointing a garden, and fencing them both, and the whole homeſtead round, partly with new ſtone walls, and partly with a quick hedge; eaſing the rector of all the repairs of this cottage and of all the parts of it for ever, by charging my endowment of the ſchool with them. The other ten pounds, reſidue of the ſaid eleven pounds, is to be for a liberal annual ſtipend to the ſchoolmaſter for teaching the founder's twenty and two poor children; nine of Thurcaſton, nine of Anſty, and four of Cropſton, in caſe ſo many poor children of each town ſhall be offered by their parents or other friends to the rector of Thurcaſton, to be ſet to ſchool by him; otherwiſe the rector of Thurcaſton ſhall make up the number out of what part of the pariſh he ſees fit, or out of any other adjoining pariſh, if ſome one of Thurcaſton pariſh don't ſeek to him for a place in the ſchool within 12 days after a place becomes vacant.

The remaining four pounds, or thereabouts, is allotted for buying of Bibles and other books for the ſaid ſcholars, and for keeping the ſchool, ſchoolmaſter's houſe, &c. in good repair, and for the preparing of a handſome repaſt for the rev. the truſtees, when they meet at the ſchool once in the year upon the fixed day. And as I have given to the ſeveral rectors, my ſucceſſors, this ſchool-eſtate in truſt; ſo for the encouraging of a watchful diſcharge of this truſt in every one of my ſucceſſors, and out of love and gratitude to them, have I moſt cheerfully given to every one of them for his time being, for ever, that land at Anſty which I bought of William Graves, being ſet for 30 ſhillings a year, for his own uſe and benefit; once more beſeeching my dear ſucceſſors, even every one of them, in the bowels of Jeſus Chriſt, that they will not raiſe the rent of this ſchool cottage; for they, they above all other men in the world, are the men whom I would and do chooſe to be not only my truſtees, equally with the other two truſtees above named, but my vicegerents, and in my ſtead, to ſet and let all and all the parts of the ſchool eſtate, to receive all the rents, and to pay as occaſion ſhall require; and to govern, manage, and order, every particular belonging to this my charity, as fully as I myſelf now do. And ſo, by the faithful diſcharge hereof, will my good ſucceſſors approve themſelves the watchful patrons of Chriſt's poor brethren in this their pariſh; into which Chriſt himſelf has called them to be his ſtewards, his miniſters, and ambaſſadors; and I pray God bleſs and proſper them all, in their own perſon, family, and eſtate; but eſpecially in this their truſt: which conſiſts in a continual governing, ordering, and managing, of this my charity-ſchool, in their miniſtry, and in the care of ſouls. Amen, Amen.

CHAPTER III.

The great and glorious ends of charity-ſchools. The qualifications of the ſchoolmaſter, who is always to be choſen by the rector of Thurcaſton, or by the other two truſtees in the rector's abſence, or when the rectory is vacant; and to be made pariſh clerk if the rector pleaſe.

And be it for ever piouſly conſidered, that as the great and glorious ends of founding all ſchools, but Bible-ſchools eſpecially, ſuch as I delight to call this, and all charity-ſchools, ſhould be the honour of God, and the temporal and eternal good of mankind; ſo theſe ſublimer ends are to be ſupported and advanced by educating and training up children and youth in good morality, uſeful learning, and ſound, devout, well-formed orthodox Chriſtianity. And in order to the accompliſhing of theſe moſt laudable ends, which (thanks be to the God of all grace!) have been religiouſly propoſed in the founding of this ſchool, it is ſtrictly required by me, the founder of it, that the elector of the ſchoolmaſter, whether he be the rector of Thurcaſton or in his abſence, or, when the rectory is vacant, the other two truſtees, always make it a religious point of conſcience, and uſe a watchful care, to chooſe a ſober, grave, learned, orthodox, and diligent member of the Church of England, to be the maſter of this ſchool, and one who has formerly been a ſcholar in it, if any ſuch candidate appear, and is well qualified for it; conſidering that, as a maſter who has himſelf been educated in this ſchool will naturally care for the good of it, ſo upon the maſter's wiſe, diligent, and circumſpect management of his ſcholars, will the early and right forming of their minds greatly depend; as will alſo the putting of them into a right way and method of ſpelling, reading, writing, and caſting account, and the adorning of their heaven-born ſouls with good morality, uſeful learning, and true orthodox and ſteady Chriſtianity. And, for an encouragement to the ſchoolmaſter, 'tis my earneſt deſire that the rector will always pleaſe to make him pariſh-clerk, and to enter his Chriſtian and ſurname, when choſen maſter, into his admiſſion-book.

CHAPTER IV.

What ſort of children are to be choſen into the ſchool, and by whom. In what ſort of learning to be inſtructed. Out of what books the writers' copies are to be taken.

The rector, or in his abſence the curate by his direction, ſhall always chooſe into the ſchool the pooreſt children in the pariſh, if they be offered to him; and the ſchoolmaſter ſhall diligently teach them to read the Holy Bible truly, diſtinctly, and leiſurely, and to underſtand what they read; to pronounce truly and emphatically; to write a plain, legible, and fair hand; and thoroughly to underſtand the five firſt rules, at leaſt, of arithmetick, as many of them as are capable and deſirous to learn, whether they be boys or girls; becauſe theſe things, well learn'd, will fit them for almoſt all buſineſs, and will make them uſeful in their generation, and qualify them for good ſervices and uſeful trades, and for almoſt any other employ: and ſo ſhall they be enabled, by God's bleſſing, to get an honeſt and a comfortable livelihood for themſelves and for their families.

And, which is abundantly better than all this, they will hereby be enabled, with the help of one to guide them now and then, and eſpecially with the help of their parents, farther to improve themſelves in the firſt principles of Religion; to hear ſermons with profit, and to know and do the will of God, as God himſelf has revealed it to us in his own holy and divinely inſpired book, the bleſſed Bible; in order to the better underſtanding whereof, and edifying their ſouls therewith, I injoin the maſter to take all his copies out of the Holy Bible, or out of the hymns and ſuffrages in the Common Prayer-book, or ſome grave and inſtructive ſentence of ſome wiſe man or pious author.

CHAPTER V.

What method the maſter is to uſe; and what weighty particulars to obſerve and do himſelf, and to teach his ſcholars, for the training of them up in uſeful learning, in the fear of God, and in all the parts of God's true religion and worſhip.

And, for the glory of God, and the ſalvation of the maſter's and the children's ſouls, the maſter ſhall teach them a morning and evening prayer, and two graces for private uſe. He ſhall alſo go to prayers with them twice a day in the ſchool, at eight o'clock in the morning, or within a quarter of an hour after, and immediately before leaving ſchool in the afternoon. And becauſe God is moſt honoured by our public worſhip, and the ſoul of man is thereby moſt edified, it is my will, that all my ſcholars of Thurcaſton and Cropſton, and all the reſt of them, wherever they dwell, ſhall preſent themſelves ſolemnly and reverently before God in the church every Lord's day morning and evening, before the miniſter begins divine ſervice; and ſhall behave themſelves with reverence and attention. They ſhall likewiſe go devoutly with the maſter to church upon Wedneſdays and Fridays, two and two abreaſt, according to their ſeniority; walking decently into the church, as into God's houſe of prayer, either before the miniſter, or immediately after him; as they ſhall likewiſe on holy-day mornings, and at all times as oft as divine ſervice ſhall be therein performed.

And, that the maſter and every ſcholar may perform a commendable part in the public worſhip of God, the maſter ſhall teach his ſcholars, as many of them as are qualified, for to ſing Pſalms with ſkill; and, if he be a good pariſh clerk, he may eaſily do it. He ſhall alſo teach them to ſay the Church Catechiſm, reverently, and with underſtanding, before the miniſter; in order whereunto, he ſhall expound it plainly to them. The maſter ſhall moreover teach them to make all the anſwers in the church audibly and devoutly throughout the whole ſervice, and to ſay Amen gravely at the end of every prayer; and ſhall oblige them actually and in very deed to ſay Amen at the end of every prayer, both in church and ſchool, and in their father's houſe.

And, for the better, more ready, and more profitable performance of all this, the maſter, and every Bible ſcholar, ſhall conſtantly carry their Bible along with them to church, and ſhall read the chapters, &c. after the miniſter; after him, I ſay, that they may learn, by obſerving how he reads and pronounces, how to read and pronounce any word themſelves. And this is an excellent reaſon why every man and woman who can read ſhould carry God's book along with them to God's houſe, and read the chapters, &c. after the miniſter, that thereby they may learn to correct and mend their own falſe reading and pronouncing. But, if too many parents will go on in their own falſe way of reading, and will not themſelves learn to read and pronounce truly, how ſhould they teach their children to do it! But, however that be, the maſter ſhall take care that my ſcholars don't hurry on, to read faſter than the miniſter reads, as the fooliſh thoughtleſs cuſtom of too many, even of grown men and women, is; but that both the ſcholars and himſelf read God's book reverently, deliberately, and attentively, all of them, as well the maſter as every ſcholar, ever obſerving moſt carefully how the miniſter pronounces, that they themſelves may all learn of him to correct their own falſe pronouncing in ſome words, and to pronounce truly, and to read judiciouſly, and with an emphaſis rightly placed; without which ſort of reading God's book, God himſelf is greatly diſhonoured, and the word of God loſes much of its converting and edifying power upon the hearts of its bleſſed readers and hearers, whoſoever they be, whether poor or rich.

Now then, for the more eaſy and delightful performance of all this, the maſter ſhall cauſe all his Bible ſcholars to get all the names of the books of the Old and New Teſtament by heart perfectly, and in their order; and to underſtand the Calendar, and the ſeveral Tables and Rules, and proper Leſſons and Pſalms, &c. in the Common Prayer Book, becauſe hereby they will be enabled immediately to find any book, or chapter, or verſe.

CHAPTER VI.

The qualifications of thoſe ſcholars who are to receive a Bible of the founder's gift at their leaving the ſchool. The perpetual and moſt precious benefit of this Bible to all thoſe ſcholars, if it be carefully kept and religiouſly uſed by them, as God's moſt holy book ought always to be uſed by every Chriſtian who is bleſſed with the uſe of it.

And, that every poor but yet godly parent may have the comfortable hope of his children having a good new Bible of their own at their leaving the ſchool, to enable them to keep their learning, and to improve it by frequent and moſt attentive reading therein at home and in the church, and to edify their ſouls in the knowledge of God, and of their whole duty both to God and to all men; it is my expreſs will, in order thereunto, that each of my ſcholars, attended with their father or mother, or ſome other near relation or friend who has the care of them, wait on the reverend the rector upon the ſame day on which they leave the ſchool, to thank him for their learning, to be examined by him, and to receive of him a new Bible, together with his farewell charge to them. To receive a new Bible, I ſay, on theſe following conditions, and not otherwiſe: namely, if they be good Bible ſcholars, and were admitted my ſcholars ſoon after their beginning to ſpell; or at their going into the Primer at lateſt, which I call a timely admiſſion; and if they have been diligent, and of a good behaviour in the ſchool, in the church, and in all other places, and are like to uſe their new Bible well, and to keep it carefully and religiouſly for their own uſe only as long as they live. Of all which particulars the rector of Thurcaſton ſhall be the ſole judge.

CHAPTER VII.

Who to buy theſe Bibles, and carefully to lay them them up in the cheſt belonging to the charity ſchool till they be diſpoſed of; and, when they are diſpoſed of, to enter the diſpoſal of them both into the rector's admiſſion book and into the ſchoolmaſter's.

For theſe religious purpoſes, my good ſucceſſor for the time being for ever is by me earneſtly deſired to buy ſix good new Bibles, as oft as occaſion ſhall require, of the price of about five or ſix ſhillings each, well bound in calf's leather, with the Common Prayer in each of them; and, having uſed his beſt care and ſkill in buying theſe holy books, to lay them up carefully in the ſchool cheſt in his ſtudy till he or his ſucceſſor ſhall have occaſion to diſpoſe of them to thoſe ſcholars only, and to none elſe, whom he ſincerely and impartially judges to be truly qualified for a Bible, according to the rules in the ſixth and the foregoing chapters.

I do moreover deſire the rector to enter the price of theſe Bibles, together with his diſpoſal of every ſingle Bible, and every particular receipt of money and expence of it relating to my ſchool, into that his own particular book of accompts which he keeps for this my charity ſchool and ſchool affairs of every ſort; and, for fear of omiſſions, to enter every particular receipt or expence, &c. on the very day of receiving or expending it; and ſo ſhall the rector's whole year's accompts be moſt eaſily and truly made up all at once, as the Maſter of Immanuel's are, againſt the yearly meeting of himſelf and the other two truſtees upon the ſet day of accompts, in order to theſe accompts being ſeen, peruſed, approved of, and paſſed by the other two truſtees, and to their being entered into the rector's admiſſion book by the maſter of the ſchool at the order of the truſtees.

CHAPTER VIII.

The old admiſſion books to be kept, one by the rector, the other by the ſchoolmaſter, or at leaſt one by the ſchoolmaſter, from generation to generation, for the peruſal of ſuch as have a real occaſion, or but a laudable curioſity, to know where their fathers and forefathers had their education, and what reward they received for their commendable diligence in good behaviour and in learning; the forms of admiſſion, and of leaving the ſchool, and of receiving a Bible of the founder's gift at the leaving of it.

For the uſe of this and of every ſucceeding generation, and for the gratifying of poſterity, the rector ſhall buy an admiſſion book out of the rent of the ſaid lands, as often as occaſion ſhall require; and the old ones, when filled with admiſſions and ſchool accounts, &c. ſhall be carefully laid up from generation to generation in Thurcaſton charity-ſchool cheſt, in the rector's ſtudy; as ſhall alſo that admiſſion book from time to time which the rector has in preſent uſe. And, for fear of omiſſions, the ſchoolmaſter ſhall alſo have an admiſſion book for his own uſe, to be kept ſafe locked up either in the ſchool or in his ſtudy, and therein he ſhall enter the admiſſion of every ſcholar, and the time of every ſcholar's leaving the ſchool, and every gift of the Bible at his leaving of it.

For the ſchoolmaſter ſhall with good ink fairly and handſomely write the Chriſtian and ſurname of every ſcholar and of their parents in his admiſſion book, together with the day and year of their admiſſion, and the age they are of at their admiſſion, and the name of the book they are then in, or do then begin with; and for this 2d. ſhall be paid to the maſter by the parent or other friend who brings the child to be admitted. The Chriſtian and ſurname of every ſcholar and of their parents, and of the day and year of their leaving the ſchool, together with an account of their having or not having a Bible of the founder's gift, ſhall likewiſe be written by the ſchoolmaſter in his admiſſion book, and he ſhall be paid 2d. for the writing of it as before. And when his admiſſion book is finiſhed, he ſhall keep it ſafe locked up in his ſtudy for future peruſal.

The form of a ſcholar's admiſſion, mutatis mutandis, ſhall be this:

"Thomas, ſon of John Throlſby, of Anſty chapel, clerk, was admitted the founder's ſcholar at his going into the Primer, upon January 9, in the 5th year of his age, and in the year of our Lord 17 . . ."

The form of a ſcholar's leaving the ſchool, and receiving a Bible, mutatis mutandis, ſhall be this:

"Thomas, ſon of John Throlſby, of Anſty chapel, clerk, having been examined and approved of by the rector, received a new Bible of the founder's gift, and left the ſchool on March 25, in the . . . year of his age, and in the year of our Lord 1723."

CHAPTER IX.

Two other truſtees, beſides the rector of Thurcaſton, appointed as aboveſaid, for preſerving this my charity and charity-ſchool; for paſſing the rector's accompts; for regulating all perverſions and abuſes of this my pious charity, and whatſoever may at any time hereafter be amiſs in the management of it.

And now, being ſorrowfully ſenſible that loſſes, corruptions, perverſions, and abuſes, have ruined too many charities; inſtead of withholding my hand from charity, I do moſt humbly beſeech the Almighty Sovereign of the world, that he will be pleaſed to ſave this my charity entire, to and for the ſame pious uſes that have been appointed and eſtabliſhed by me, though it be with a ſharp correction upon the head of him who ſhall ever deſign and endeavour to corrupt, pervert, or abuſe it.

And, as I have conſtituted three truſtees for the preſerving theſe ſchool lands, and the reſt of the charity, and the whole profit of it, as much as in me lies, ſafe and entire throughout all ages, for thoſe beſt of uſes for which they are given, God helping and ſupporting me myſelf and the truſtees in our endeavours; ſo do I deſire the ſaid truſtees to meet in the ſchool upon the Monday next before St. Barnabas' day in every year, to enquire into, and to know, the ſtate and condition of the ſchool, the ſchoolmaſter's houſe, the ſchool lands at Burton and Anſty, and all things belonging to this my charity; and to regulate all ſorts of perverſions and abuſes of any part of it, by whomſoever committed or done, and to paſs the rector's accompts.

For, for the laſting ſecurity of this my pious charity and charity-ſchool, I will, and muſt deſire the rector of Thurcaſton, once in the year, for ever, upon the aboveſaid day, to accompt for all the rents and profits of the ſaid premiſes in Burton and Anſty ſo given to him and to the other truſtees in truſt as aforeſaid, and for all the Bibles and other books bought and diſpoſed of, and for the repairs made, and for all monies received and paid by him, and for whatever elſe ſhall be done for the good of this charity ſince the laſt accompts.

And as ſoon as the rector's accompts are paſſed by the two other truſtees, I muſt deſire them to order the ſchoolmaſter to enter them all immediately, and all the particulars of them, with the balance remaining in the rector's hands, and the number of Bibles and other books undiſpoſed of, into the rector's admiſſion book, immediately under the name of that ſcholar who was laſt admitted, that when they are ſo entered they may be ſigned by the rector himſelf as juſt and true accompts; and may be atteſted, as allowed and approved of, by the other truſtees. And be it obſerved, that in this method the accompts of any former years may be moſt eaſily referred to and peruſed.

And becauſe this ſchool buſineſs will require a refreſhment for the truſtees at their annual meeting, I do therefore appoint a handſome repaſt to be provided for them againſt their buſineſs is finiſhed, a repaſt not exceeding two diſhes of meat and two quarts of wine, to be provided, if the rector pleaſe, by his own ſervants, in the parſonage-houſe; and I allow the rector twenty ſhillings for it, to be taken out of the remainder of the rents of my ſchool eſtate.

And whereas the proſperity of the ſchool, and the improvement of the ſcholars, very much depends upon the diligent, diſcreet, regular, and religious management of the maſter; therefore, if any maſter of this ſchool ſhall be guilty of any groſs miſdemeanor, or repeated negligence, the rector ſhall admoniſh him a ſecond time; and, if he ſtill continue unreformed, the rector ſhall remove him, and ſhall elect and admit another maſter into his place; or, if the rector neglect ſo to do, the other truſtees ſhall do it.

Chapter X.

What farther ways and means, under God, are to be uſed by all concerned in this charity, to make it anſwer the bleſſed ends for which it was given.

For this charity will be ſpent in vain, as will alſo the ſchoolmaſter's pains, and the children's moſt precious years (which moſt precious years I conceive are generally the twenty next after their third) will be loſt in too great a meaſure if they be not put to ſchool in their fourth or fifth year at lateſt, unleſs they be taught at home to know their letters, and their God; their God I ſay, for God and Religion muſt not be neglected. And when they are put to ſchool, they muſt be kept conſtantly to it, all along every day, both morning and afternoon, that they may be ſufficient ſcholars before their years and ſtrength tempt their parents to take them away from ſchool, and put them to the wheel or plough to get a penny.

For, if they be taken from ſchool before they can read a chapter in the Holy Bible well and commendably, they will have no heart to read at home, or in any company after they have left the ſchool, but will ſhun reading as oft as they can, and ſo that little reading they have got will ſoon be loſt, and all the time they have ſpent at ſchool will be loſt with it. For theſe weighty reaſons, one condition of any children being admitted my ſcholars ſhall be this, that their parents ſeek to have them admitted in the fifth or ſixth years of their age, if it may be, unleſs they be taught at home. And let all parents know and conſider, that their teaching their children at home but to know their letters, their God, and a devout prayer to him, forwards them very much at ſchool, and brings them from ſchool to the wheel a year ſooner.

And as wiſe and good parents will take care to keep their children conſtantly to ſchool every day, morning and afternoon, not ſuffering them through indulgence of one holiday to expect another; ſo will they take care that they be at ſchool in the morning neat and clean, with head combed, hands and face waſhed, and prayers devoutly ſaid upon the knee before their mother every day, from Lady-day to Michaelmas by ſeven o'clock or ſoon after, and all the reſt of the year by eight o'clock or ſoon after; and ſo ſhall they always be at ſchool by the ſchool hours of prayer; and whoſoever is not at ſchool before morning prayers begin muſt give a good reaſon for it, to be approved of by the maſter of the ſchool, or ſuffer the rod for being tardy.

And if any ſcholar be abſent from the ſchool two days together, and be neither ſick nor lame, the maſter ſhall admoniſh that ſcholar, and, if he be guilty a ſecond time, the maſter ſhall admoniſh the parents or guardians; and, if he be ſtill guilty a third time, the maſter ſhall acquaint the rector with it; and it ſhall then be in the rector's good pleaſure to continue him longer in the ſchool, to try whether his parents or guardians will take care that he ſhall amend; or to expel him, and admit another that will be conſtant into his place.

Now, if any parent ſhould think any part of this chapter too ſevere, I would win that parent into a better and truer opinion of it, by convincing him that it is all of it very kind and well-tempered; this ſtrict diſcipline being the only way to make one half of the children good ſcholars and good Chriſtians. For although ſome children be ſo apt, ſo well inclined, that they will be ſcholars, they will be Chriſtians in a little time, and with a little pains; yet others of them, and thoſe the moſt, are ſo dull, or heedleſs, or perverſe, that they never will be ſcholars, never will be Chriſtians indeed, unleſs they be put to ſchool young, and kept conſtantly to ſchool, and have great pains taken with them in the ſchool to beat it into them, as we ſay, but not ſo much with the rod as by a watchful ſearching out of their natural temper and genius, joined with a prudent uſe of the rod[1], and a no leſs prudent diligence and conſtancy both in the maſter and in the ſcholar too, as far as he can be worked up into it by all the arts, ſteps, and degrees, of a wiſe correction, or winning inſinuation, or rather by both in their ſeaſon.

And here all parents who can read a chapter in the Holy Bible ought to conſider, that they may greatly forward their children's learning by that frequent and very uſeful aſſiſtance which every ſuch parent ought to give the maſter for his child's good; and every wiſe and good father and mother will give the maſter this aſſiſtance by teaching their child at home out of ſchool hours, and upon holidays, and the Lord's-day.

---

[1] See Proverbs xiii. 24. and xix. 18. and xxix. 15. 17. and xxiii. 13. 14.

Chapter XI.

The rector's admiſſion charge to every new maſter of the ſchool to this purpoſe, and as he ſhall then ſee fit.

That he continue orthodox in the faith, ſober, careful and induſtrious, prudent, grave, and reſerved, eſpecially when in the company of his ſcholars, and indeed in the company of all young people; and that he never ſwear an oath, nor dare to tell a lie; that his principal care be to be truly religious; to teach his ſcholars faith in God, and fear and love of him; that he bear in his mind an humble dependence on God, and a lively truſt in him, together with an unfeigned piety and devotion towards him, and obedience to him; that he alſo teach his ſcholars to be pious and devout, juſt and merciful, mannerly and well-behaved at all times, and before all people; carefully training them up in a way of true, leiſurely, diſtinct reading and ſpeaking, fair writing, uſeful arithmetic, and in whatever elſe may be beneficial to them in every way to Heaven, and for the getting an honeſt and comfortable livelihood here on earth.

Chapter XII.

The rector's admiſſion charge to every ſcholar, and to their parents, to this and the like purpoſes.

For it is highly proper that, upon the day of his admiſſion, the child come to the rector firſt, and then to the maſter of the ſchool, attended with one of his parents or guardians, that the rector and maſter both may have an opportunity of enquiring of the parent or guardian into the temper and genius of the child, and thereby be the better enabled to train him up in a ſuitable way, and to give the proper admiſſion charge both to the child and to his parents, to this purpoſe:

That, if the child be tractable and docible, willing, deſirous, and ſtudious to learn of his maſter in the ſchool, and of his parents at home; that he be dutiful to his parents, and obedient to his maſter, attending carefully to all their good counſels and inſtructions; that he learn to govern his tongue, and always ſpeak the truth, and thereby keep himſelf free from thoſe helliſh ſins of ſwearing, curſing, and lying, and from that great, but yet too common ſin of taking God's name in vain; that he riſe up before the aged, and bow his body to him as to the image of God, though he be but a beggar; that he be mannerly, and of a reſpectful, an obliging, and a good behaviour at all times, and in all places, but eſpecially in the ſchool, in his father's houſe, and in the church in the time of God's public and moſt ſolemn worſhip, making it his firſt care to be a good Chriſtian, and his next to be a good ſcholar.

And for a happy ſucceſs in all theſe leſſons of learning and religion, the child's father and mother ſhall promiſe to give the ſchoolmaſter their beſt aſſiſtance, by teaching their child at home out of ſchool hours: as in all other particulars of religion, morality, and piety, ſo in this of learning; namely, to know his letters, if it may be, before he be admitted, and to ſpell truly, by a frequent aſking him eaſy queſtions, and by a wiſe, fatherly care to make him remember the anſwers to them; by inſtructing him alſo in his catechiſm, both to ſay it perfectly well before the miniſter, and to underſtand the meaning of it, carrying on theſe domeſtic inſtructions as long as their child continues at ſchool, if they themſelves are bleſſed with learning enough to do it; and hearing him read on the Lord's-day, and other days, as oft as they can, that he may be a good thorough ſcholar before he leaves the ſchool, they taking eſpecial care when he reads that he reads and pronounces truly; and ſo ſhall the child's parents have the very beſt of ſatisfactions and of all joys, namely, that of ſeeing their child grow in learning and in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, to whom be honour and glory, both now and for ever! Amen.

Chapter XIII.

The rector's farewell charge to every ſcholar when he leaves the ſchool, and to his parents alſo, to this purpoſe; for them it highly concerns as well as the children.

In order hereunto it is my will, that upon the ſame day on which any ſcholar, whether boy or girl, leaves the ſchool, they ſhall come, attended with their father or mother, or ſome other near relation or friend, and preſent themſelves before the rector, to thank him for their learning, to be examined by him, and to receive from him his farewell charge, and a good new Bible, if, upon conſideration of their behaviour, and upon examination of their ſcholarſhip, he finds they deſerve one.

And moreover, the ſcholar ſhall aſſure the rector, at his receiving this Bible, that he will ſtill endeavour to improve himſelf more and more in learning, morality, and piety; and that he will be a conſtant attendant upon, and an aſſiſtant in, the public worſhip of Almighty God, both morning and evening, on the Lord's-day at leaſt, as long as he lives, and on other days as oft as he can.

The parents ſhall alſo promiſe the rector that they will ſtill give their child their beſt aſſiſtance for his further improvement, or for his keeping at leaſt what he has already learned; and that, in order thereunto, they will continue frequently to hear him read at home, and to keep him conſtantly to church on the Lord's-day morning and evening, and will obſerve his behaviour in the church, and will ſee that he joins himſelf humbly and devoutly with the congregation in the public worſhip of God, uſing an attentive, a reverent, and a regular behaviour in the church, and making all the anſwers which good Chriſtianity and gratitude to God oblige every ſerious Chriſtian to make, as much as the clerk, audibly and reverently, both with heart and tongue.

And by ſo doing every ſcholar of mine will make it his daily care, his continual work throughout the whole courſe of his life, to improve himſelf in true Chriſtian ſcholarſhip, and in the true Chriſtian religion, as believing this to be the beſt means of pleaſing God in this world, and of working out his own ſalvation in the world to come.

The Conclusion.

Now all theſe ſtatutes, rules, and orders, in the foregoing chapters, if well obſerved by all that are and ſhall be concerned in them, will be a bleſſed means of a flouriſhing ſchool, and of a religious pariſh; and will teach both the maſter and the ſcholars to ſet the Lord always before them, and always to behave themſelves as in the preſence of God, decently and orderly, reverently and devoutly, but eſpecially in the time of God's public worſhip, whether in the church or in the ſchool, or in their own father's houſe. And moreover,

Theſe ſtatutes, rules, and orders, if well obſerved, will, by God's grace, enable both the maſter and ſcholars to ſpend the Lord's-day well, and to live like good Chriſtians all the days of their life. And ſo ſhall the very beſt ends of a Bible ſchool be happily anſwered; ſo ſhall God be glorified; and ſo ſhall their own ſouls be eternally ſaved, by the blood of Chriſt Jeſus, God manifeſted in the fleſh, and through faith in his death; and ſo ſhall the founder of this moſt holy Bible ſchool, though dead and buried in his grave, ſtill continue to live, to ſpeak, to teach, and to preach to this his beloved pariſh, even till he riſes again. Amen.

Benedicat igitur Deus omnibus hiſce meis inſtitutis; & benedictum ſit nomen Dei & nunc & in perpetuum. Amen. Sic ſtatuit, ſic vovet, ſic precatur; ſed, heu! minimè dignus, Richardus Hill. Benigniſſimus tamen, Potentiſſimus, Optimus, hæc omnia tueatur, ſtabiliat, perficiat Deus. Amen. Amen.

On a plain ſtone in the front of the ſchool:

"Immanuel, for the training up of poor children in good morality, and a reverent orthodox piety, in a conſtant keeping the church, and in all ſorts of the beſt learning, this Bible-ſchool was founded and endowed, by Richard Hill, B. D. rector, 1715.

"Glory be to God."

ANSTY,

ANSTY,

antiently called Anſtige, Hanſtigie, and Elneſty, a conſiderable hamlet belonging to the pariſh of Thurcaſton, by which it is bounded on the North-eaſt, by Newton Linford on the Weſt, by Groby on the South-weſt, and by Glenfield on the South, is ſituated between the Foreſts of Charnwood and Leiceſter.

Two ploughlands in Anſtige, which in the reign of the Confeſſor had been valued at ten ſhillings, were worth forty ſhillings at the general ſurvey, and were then held by Hugo de Grentemaiſnell. The land was equal to four ploughs. One was in the demeſne, and four bondmen; and thirteen villans, with three bordars, had two others. There were eight acres of meadow, a wood one acre long and half a mile broad, and another wood two furlongs long and one broad[1]. Hugo de Grentemaiſnell had alſo in the borough of Leiceſter twenty-five burgeſſes belonging to the lordſhip of Anſty[2].

This town did antiently belong to the earls of Leiceſter; and, after the partition of their lands, was held of the fee of Wincheſter.

Robert Fitz-parnel earl of Leiceſter gave twenty-four virgates of land to the abbey of Leiceſter; and afterward, with the conſent of the convent, granted the ſaid lands to the church of Lincoln, pro pace reſervandâ in perpetuum inter ipſam eccleſiam Lincolnienſem & dictam abbatiam; and, in lieu thereof, gave the ſaid abbey certain lands in Farningo and Sygreſham[3].

In the Regiſter of Leiceſter Abbey their poſſeſſions at Anſty were thus deſcribed:

"Anſty capella eſt de Thurkeſton; & debet deſerviri tribus diebus in ebdomatâ per matricem eccleſiam, ſicut patet in matriculo.

Habemus ibi, ex dono Roberti filii Petronille comitis Leyc', tertii fundatoris noſtri, xxiv virgatas terre, cum omnibus eas tenentibus, & omnibus pertinentiis; & iv cotagia cum toftis ſuis; que omnia dedit nobis, cum corpore ſuo, ſecundum tenorem carte ſue. Et ſciendum eſt quod quelibet predictarum xxiiii virgatarum terre continet xviii acras terre & ix rodas prati, & reddere ſolebat ad placitum, ante annum peſtilentie, marchet'; & i diem meſſionis in autumpno, cum ii hominibus, & xiiis̃. iiiiđ. Et modò reddit tantum xs̃. & cariag' i die cum hominibus vel i homine.

Tenentes ad voluntatem.

Johannes Clerk tenet i virgatam terre & dim', i meſſ'; & reddit xiiis̃.; iii opera.

Johannes Jonſon tenet i meſſ', i virgatam terre & dim'; & reddit xvs̃.; iii opera.

Johannes Townſyende tenet i meſſ', i virgat' terre & dim'; & reddit xiiiis̃.; iii opera.

Johannes Tompſon tenet ii meſſ', i virgatam terre & dim'; & reddit xiiis̃. viđ.; iii opera.

Willielmus Hakleit tenet i meſſ', i virgatam terre & dim'; & reddit xvs̃.; iii opera.

Thomas Bagworth tenet i meſſ', i virgatam terre; & reddit xs̃.; ii opera.

Johannes Bradſale tenet ii meſſ', ii virgatas terre; & reddit xxs̃.; iiii opera.

Johannes Moreton tenet i meſſ', i virgatam terre; & reddit xs̃.; ii opera.

Habemus confirmationem Johannis Regis de xxiiii virgatis, cum hominibus, & omnibus pertinentiis ſuis, & iiii cotagiis, cum toftis ſuis, in Anſty.

Thomas Wylſon tenet i meſſuagium, i virgatam terre; & reddit xs̃.; ii opera.

Johannes Hakkett tenet i meſſuagium, ii virgatas terre; & reddit xxs̃.; iiii opera.

Willielmus Abell tenet i meſſuagium, i virgatam terre; & reddit xs̃.; ii opera.

Johannes Maſon tenet i meſſuagium, i virgatam terre & dimidiam; & reddit xvs̃.; iii opera.

Ricardus Glover tenet ii meſſuagia, i virgatam terre & dimidiam; & reddit xvs̃.; iii opera.

Robertus Wylſon tenet i meſſuagium, i virgatam terre; & reddit xs̃.; ii opera.

Willielmns de Glene tenet i meſſuagium, i virgatam terre & dimidiam; & reddit xvs̃.; iii opera.

Thomas Browne tenet i meſſuagium, i virgatam terre & dimidiam; & reddit xvs̃.; iii opera.

Summa xl lĩ. xviis̃. viđ.

Summa acrarum terrarum predictarum xxviii virgate, $\overset{\text{xx}}{\text{iiii}}$i acre.

Summa acrarum prati pertinentium ad predictas, liiii acre.

Anſty cotagia.

Rogerus Foſhyde tenet i cotagium, & reddit iiis̃. iiiiđ.

Johannes Smyth tenet i cotagium & tertiam partem unius rode; & reddit iiis̃.; i opus.

Willielmus Hakket tenet i toftum, ii rodas & tertiam partem unius rode; & reddit xviiiđ.; i opus.

Henricus Flowr tenet i cotagium, & iiii rodas terre; & reddit iiis̃. iiiiđ.; i opus.

Johannes Cleybroke tenet i cotagium; & reddit iiis̃.; i opus.

Robertus Leypar tenet i cotagium; & reddit iiis̃.; i opus.

Willielmus Dunham tenet parcellam gardini ſui, ſive i toftum; & jacet inter meſſuagium Johannis Tomſon ex parte auſtrali, & meſſuagium Willielmi Dunham ex parte boreali; & quondam fuit pars predicti meſſuagii Johannis Tomſon; & reddit xiiđ.

Johannes Bradſale tenet unum croftum & iiii rodas in Odalfelde, ſcilicet dimidiam acram, unam rodam, & unam pyke; que croftum & acra recuperata fuerunt per breve de Ceſſavit de heredibus Henrici Gryſley, anno regis Edwardi IIII^{ti} ſecundo. Et reddit vs̃.

Et memorandum quod in dicto crofto includuntur unum toftum & unum croftum, una roda & due placee terre; quorum illa toftum & croftum data fuerunt Willielmo Whytwick & heredibus ſuis per abbatem & conventum pro ſervicio iiiis̃. per annum. Et illa roda & ille placee terre date fuerunt Willielmo Batte & heredibus ſuis per abbatem & conventum, ut patet per cartam inde confectam, pro ſervicio xiiđ. per annum.

Summa vs̃. nunc recuperantur, ut ſupra.

Mem' quod Johannes Gryſley clamavit habere unum meſſuagium in predicto crofto, cujus titulum ipſe poſtea relaxavit; & quod quidem meſſuagium duodecim jurati, inquiſitione factâ, neſciunt aliquo modo invenire in dicto crofto, ſicut patet in Rotulo curiali cujus datum eſt anno regni Regis Henrici Septimi nono, & in cartâ predicti Johannis Gryſely.

Johannes Hakket tenet le Holme auſtralem; & reddit iiis̃.

Ricardus Glover tenet terram vocatam Waterbreche; & reddit viđ.

Robertus Jonſon tenet dimidiam rodam prati in Notelmerche.

Johannes Tomſon tenet dimidiam rodam prati in Notelmerche.

Thomas Brown tenet iii acras, unam rodam & dimidiam terre in W'lnedale; & reddit xiiđ.

Summa xxxviiis̃. iiiiđ.

Habemus ibi, ex dono Ricardi Byrcheley, rectoris eccleſie de Hungarton, feofatoris noſtri, molendinum aquaticum ſuper Hauedbrok, cum ſtagno & holmo,

---

[1] "Hugo de Grentemaiſnil tenet 2 carucatas terræ in Anſtige. Terra eſt 4 carucarum. In dominico eſt una; et 4 ſervi et 13 villani, cum 4 bordariis, habent 2 carucas. Ibi 8 acræ prati. Silva 1 leucæ longitudinis, et dimidiæ leucæ latitudinis; et alia ſilva 2 quarentenarum longitudinis, et 1 quarentenæ latitudinis. Valuit 10 ſolidos; modò 40 ſolidos." Domeſday, fol. 232. a. 1.

[2] "Habet idem Hugo in Ledeceſtre 24 burgenſes pertinentes ad Hanſtigie." Ibid. fol. 330. a. 1.

[3] Charyte's Rentale, fol. lviii. cxxix.

& omnibus aliis pertinentiis, ſituatum ſuper terram noſtram propriam, quod priùs ſituabatur ſuper terram Willielmi Bate de Groby, a quo emebamus predictum molendinum, cum ſuis pertinentiis, pro XX marcis, & a quo habemus totum jus & clameum quod ipſe habuit in dicto molendino. Et ſciendum quod pro iſto molendino habemus houſbote & mylnebote capiend' in Foreſtâ domini Willielmi de Ferrariis, domini de Groby, in Charnewode, per viſum foreſtarii ejuſdem Foreſte. Et inde tenemur ſolvere domino de Groby unum denarium ad feſtum Michaelis per annum pro omnibus ſerviciis & demandis.

Mem' quod molendinum de Anſty, cum IIII acris terre, & cum XIII s̄. IIII đ. & cum redditu XII nodulorum calcedonii, &c, recuperata fuerunt contra dominum Willielmum de Ferrariis, &c. ut in libro placitorum.

Mem' quod dominus Willielmus de Ferrariis emit molendinum de Anſty a Johanne filio Walteri de Anſty pro duobus marcis, ſicut patet per cartam cujus copia eſt in libro Chartuary; quod quidem molendinem dominus Willielmus de Ferrariis dedit Willielmo Bate de Groby, tenendum de ipſo per ſervicium I đ. per annum; a quo nos emebamus dictum molendinum.

Habemus liberam piſcariam in aquâ de Hathebrok; videlicet, a ſuperiori parte ſtagni molendini noſtri uſque ad campum de Thurgaſton; de quâ quidem piſcariâ ſeyſiti fuimus a tempore domini Roberti filii Petronille, qui nobis, per cartam ſuam, terras & prata dictam aquam circumjacentes dedit uſque ad feſtum Nativitatis Beate Marie, anno Domini MCCCXLIII, quo anno Henricus de Ferrariis dominus de Groby dictam piſcariam nobis & ſucceſſoribus noſtris reſtituit & relaxavit, purè, ſpontè, & abſolutè. Inſuper conceſſit & confirmavit dictam piſcariam in perpetuam elemoſinam poſſidend', ut patet in cartâ ſuâ.

Item habemus quietam clamationem Roberti Chriſtopheri de Syth eſton de unâ placeâ prati que vocatur le Holme, juxta Hathebrok; & reddit II s̄. per freboroos, & ideò vocatur Freboroos holme.

Item habemus quietam clamationem Rogeri Quency, comitis Wyntonie, de ſtabilâ quam a nobis exigebat, & ab hominibus noſtris de Anſty.

Item habemus quietam clamationem Godfredi Chriſtopheri de Anſty, factam Roberto de Aulâ abbati Leyc', de illâ placeâ terre aſſartatâ, cum ſuis pertinentiis, que vocatur Belgrave ſale in Anſty, & in illis duabus acris & III rodis prati que jacent in pratis de Anſty; que quidem terre & prata dictus Robertus habuit ex dono & feoſſamento dicti Godfredi, ut in cartâ predictâ.

Item habemus ibidem quoddam aſſartum vocatum Cleyh Egges, Litel Stokyng, ſive Otylſyke, quod emebamus de Symone de Monteforti comite Leyc', cum boſco ſupercreſcente, & omnibus pertinentiis ſuis; & jacet ex occidentali parte manerii de Bealmont, & eſt annexum capiti vivarii de Bealmont in foſſato, continente in longitudine novem rodas terre; & extendit ſe in latitudine ab exteriori parte foſſe includentis ipſum ad alterum ſicum uſque le ſyke XIX pedes, & ad alteram finem ab exteriori parte predicte foſſe XXI pedes.

Item habemus ibi quandam placeam terre arabilis que vocatur Oſeleſhagh; quondam fuit aſſarta, & jacet inter le Freborows holme & le Frith fine, ſub palatio defenſi ex auſtrali parte molendini, cum omnibus angulis boſci & terre que jacent inter dictam placeam de Oſeleſhagh & viam de Anſty.

Item habemus illam placeam terre que vocatur Langbruke, que jacet ex occidentali parte illius crofti que vocatur Belgrave ſale.

Et ſciendum quod habuimus illam placeam que vocatur Oſeleſhaw, cum aliâ placeâ que vocatur Langebreche, & uno boſco de Doneland, de domino Symone de Monteforti, in eſcambium pro quietâ clamatione unius carette tranſeuntis in Foreſtâ Leyc', & cujuſdam culture in defenſo vocato Mykyldal, & pro paſturâ ibidem inter vias de Groby & Anſty, ad includendum, infoſſandum, &c. ut patet per cartam ejuſdem Simonis.

"Edwardus Rex, &c. Conceſſimus & licentiam dedimus Ricardo de Byrcheley, perſone eccleſie de Hungerton, quod ipſe unum molendinum cum pertinentiis in Anſty dare poſſit & aſſignare abbati & conventui Leyc'.

Tota villa reddere ſolebat ante peſtilentiam:

Pro Cleyhegges VII s̄.; modò Cleyhegges jacet in communi.

Langbreches X s̄. } Sed iſte duo jam dividuntur in-Oſelneſhagh X s̄. } ter tenentes.

Summa totalis redditûs levati hoc anno, cum molendino, communi fyn, & freboroholme, XV lī. IX s̄. VI đ. Solebat reddere XX lī.

Mem' quod III° die menſis Maii, anno regni regis Henrici Quinti poſt Conqueſtum Anglie octavo, venerunt ad curiam domini abbatis Willielmus Edſon de Anſty, filius Johannis Sareſon nuper de eadem; Johannes Wylſon ſenior, filius predicti Willielmi Edſon; Thomas Wilſon, filius predicti Willielmi; Robertus Wilſon, filius ejuſdem Willielmi; Johannes Wilſon, filius Willielmi; Ricardus Wilſon, filius ejuſdem Willielmi; & Willielmus Wilſon, filius predicti Willielmi Edſon de Anſty; qui attachiati fuerunt per corpora ſua cauſâ nativitatis. Et poſtea in eadem curiâ omnes predicti, ſcilicet Willielmus Edſon, &c. per Ricardum Rothley abbatem, cum aſſenſu totalis conventûs, manumiſſi in libertatem; pro quâ verò manumiſſione fecerunt finem cum dicto abbate & conventu pro C marcis.

Item habemus quietam clamationem Roberti Quency comitis Wintonie & Margarete comitiſſe ejuſdem, de omni demandâ, ſectâ, & de toto jure ſuo, quod habuerunt vel habere poterint, ſuper viſu firmiplegii confectis, aliiſque per aliquod tempus a nobis vel hominibus noſtris vel poſſeſſionibus in feodo ſuo conſtitutis exigebant; ſcilicet, in Anſty, Lokyngton, Hemyngton, Sutton, Stanton, Thurmaſton, Whiſton, Glenfield, Stocton, Brakley, Sygreſham, Faringo, Hauſo, Clifton, Bulkyngton, Brankket, Barnangue, & Wybtoft, &c. ut patet in cartâ noſtrâ.

Item omnes tenentes noſtri de Anſty debent ſolvere ingreſſum domino abbati ſervicium quod poſſint finire cum ipſo.

Item omnes tenentes noſtis debent venire ad viſum franciplegii noſtrum, ubicunque tenetur, ſive ſit in Anſty ſive in abbatiâ.

Item omnes debent ſolvere pro communi fyn XI s̄. & VI đ.

Item omnes tenentes noſtri habent communam liberam in le waſt, ad imponend' averia ſua, pro quâ communiâ debent unâ die in anno adjuvare ballivis domini de Ferrariis ad congregand' catalla en le waſt, & ad drivand' ea.

Item omnes tenentes noſtri habent libertatem ad accipiend', colligend', & ad cariand' fryſſe, goſſe, & feyrne, & hujuſmodi, ad focum ſuum pandoxatorum, piſtorum, & ad uſtrinam; pro quâ libertate quilibet tenens ſemel in anno dare debet domino de Ferrariis unam gallinam.

Habemus ibi viſum franc' de omnibus tenentibus noſtris, & quicquid ad viſum franc' pertinet.

Ad hunc viſum venient omnes tenentes noſtri de Abbeygate, de Anſty, de Glenfield, de Thornton, de Stanton, & de Baggworth, de Brunthynſthorp, de tenentibus ſacriſte manentibus infra pontem de North'.

Reſolutiones; ſcilicet, domino de Groby I đ. per annum pro ſitu molendini ibidem.

Mem' quod nulli officiarii domini de Groby debent venire ſuper ſolum abbatis Leyc' in Anſty nullicubi pro aliquo ad diſtringend'; quia a tempore quo non extat memoria non ſolebat ſic agere, ſicut preſentatur in curiâ domini abbatis Leyc', que fuit tenta in grangiâ abbathie Leyc', prout patet in Rotulo curiali cujus datum eſt anno regni regis H. VI^{ti} XXX°.

Mem' quod nos dedimus W. de Whytwyk, pro homagio & ſervicio ſuo, unum toftum cum crofto, &c. reddendo nobis per annum IIII s̄.; ſalvis nobis duobus adventubus dicti W. & heredum ſuorum ad magnas curias noſtras apud Leyc' bis per annum; & quod ad breve domini regis placitand' & lationem judicand' quamdocunque hoc in curiâ noſtrâ apud Leyc' venire contigerit, &c. ut in cartâ XV^{a}, & in III^{a} cartâ inter feoffamenta.

Mem' quod anno regni regis Edwardi IIII^{ti} XII°, ad viſum in abbathie Leyc' grangiâ, Johannes Gryſley clamavit franciplegium prioris unum examen apū ꝓṇ' de extrahurâ in Anſty, &c."[1]

In 1277, Thomas Danvers held five yard lands in this townſhip; and the abbot of Garendon had then alſo ſome lands here.

In 1343, Henry de Ferrers died ſeiſed of a twentieth part of one knight's fee, with the appurtenances, in Anſty, which Marmaduke de Grendale held[2].

In 1288, John de Anſty gave one yard land here to the priory of Ulveſcroft near adjoining; in 1293, John de Stocton gave two yard lands to the ſaid priory; and in 1363, John Clerke gave them other lands in Anſty.

In 1346, the abbot of Leiceſter and Marmaduke de Grendvaile (on the aid then granted for knighting of Edward of Woodſtock, the king's eldeſt ſon) were aſſeſſed 6*s*. 8*d*. for a ſixth part of one knight's fee in Anſty, parcel of the honour of Winton[3].

In 1357, Henry Ferrers of Groby, knt. died ſeiſed of five virgates of land in Anſty, which Benedict de Ulveſcroft and many others held ſeverally among themſelves[4].

In 1360, ſir Roger Caylly, knt. died ſeiſed of a moiety of the manor of Anſty, held of lord Edward prince of Wales, by knight's ſervice, and ſuit of court at his court of Charleſmore[5].

In 1371, William de Ferrers of Groby died ſeiſed of five virgates of land in Anſty, which Thomas Danvers held[6].

In 1444, William de Ferrers of Groby, knt. died ſeiſed of five virgates of land in Anſty, late Thomas Danvers's, which the heirs of Benedict de Ulveſcroft and Roger Fitz-Ralph held of the ſame William[7].

In 1457, Edward de Grey, knt. lord Ferrers of Groby, died ſeiſed of five virgates of land in Anſty, late Thomas Dannowe's, which the heirs of Benedict de Ulveſcroft and Roger Fitz-Ralph held of the ſame Edward by ſervice of one knight's fee[8].

Several parcels of lands and tenements in Anſty, to the amount of £11. 11*s*. 9*d*. a year, were demiſed by queen Elizabeth in 1583, for 21 years, to William Crofte; in the ſame year two other parcels for 35*s*. 8*d*. a year to William Ylway; and in 1576 other lands to William Byville; and in 1594 divers meſſuages, three villages, and certain lands in Anſty, were demiſed, for 21 years, to John Drewe, at a rent of £9. 2*s*. 6*d*.[9]

The family of Porter is of antient ſtanding at Anſty. Robert Porter occurs there ſo early as 1288; and held a knight's fee in Redmile in 1330.

In 1416, ſir William Porter, knt. XL hom' d'armes, quorum ipſe dux, aut Chr̃s Remnant arm', CXX archers[10]. In the ſame year ſir William Porter received CCCLXX lĩ. XIIIS̃.[11] In 1421, he had ſupporters to his coat-armour, viz. three church bells; and above the ſhield, as a creſt, a like bell, the ſhield ſupported by two boars; behind the whole a church ſteeple, and round this, "S' WILMI PORTER." See his ſeal in Plate CXL. fig. 13.

In 1430, ſir William Porter, knt. furniſhed "XIX hom' d'armes, LX archers; ipſe pro vad' IIIIS̃. per diem."

Thomas Porter, eſq. (couſin of Robert Strange) was ſheriff of Leiceſterſhire 1448; and in Welby chapel are three bells Sable borne by the name of Porter. This was Beler's land; and Beler and Porter came out of two ſiſters.

Amicia de Gorham, 1279.=....
John Kirkeby, 1279.=....
William Kirkeby, 1302.=....
1. Margaret.=.....
2. Alice.=Peter Strange.
Priſſy.
3. Matilda.=Walter de Stanley.
Robert Strange.
William.=....
Anthony.=...
Robert.=....
Elizabeth.=John de Beler, 1450.
Anne.=Thomas Porter, 1447.

"In the reign of king Henry VI. Robert Falconer, deſcendant of the houſe of Falconer of Thurcaſton, was ſeiſed of lands here[12]."

The manor of Anſty belonged at the diſſolution of religious houſes to the priory of Ulveſcroft, and was then of the annual value of £5. 6*s*. 8*d*.; but from this manor there was a rent due to the lord Ferrers of Groby of 3*s*. 4*d*. per annum, and one pound of pepper[13].

The property of the abbot and convent of St. Mary de Pratis at Leiceſter in Anſty remained in the crown till July 1, 1609; when it was conveyed in fee ſimple to the following different purchaſers:

Robert Martin, of Anſty, yeoman, purchaſed two tenements, of the yearly value of 28*s*. which had formerly been leaſed to John Buxner for a term then expired.

Richard Tomſon, of Anſty, yeoman, purchaſed a meſſuage, with two virgates of land, which had been demiſed, 9 Nov. 19 Eliz. to Nicholas Thompſon, for 21 years, at 19*s*. 6*d*. a year.

William Lewen, of Anſty, yeoman, purchaſed a meſſuage, with a virgate of land, &c. lately in the tenure of William Patchet (exceptis omnibus groſſis arboribus, boſcis, ſubboſcis, miner', & quarris), which had been demiſed to William Lewen for 21 years, at 31*s*. a year.

Thomas Browne, of Anſty, yeoman, purchaſed a meſſuage, with two virgates of land, which had been demiſed to Thomas Browne at a rent of 20*s*.

Richard Glover, of Anſty, yeoman, purchaſed a meſſuage, with two virgates of land, one cottage, and a cloſe adjoining, which had been demiſed to John Glover, at a rent of 29*s*.

Thomas Wilkinſon, of Anſty, yeoman, purchaſed a meſſuage, with two virgates of land, and a meadow, which had been demiſed to Robert Parſon for 20*s*. a year.

Robert Bradſell, of Anſty, yeoman, purchaſed a meſſuage, with a virgate and three quarters of land, a cloſe called Greſley, and one cottage, with its appurtenances, in the tenure of Thomas Bradſell, which had been demiſed to William Bradſell, alias Bradſhawe, for 22*s*. 10*d*. a year[14].

Oliver Goddard, in 1612, held lands at Anſty in capite.

"The now lord of the manor (1630) is Henry Grey, earl of Stamford; wherein is claimed a peculiar juriſdiction for eccleſiaſtical matters[15]."—The freeholders here, at that time, Thomas Martin, Robert Bradſhaw, William Glover, John Corbett, and Robert Browne.

In 1761, an act was paſſed, for dividing and incloſing the common and open fields of Anſty, containing about 1100 acres; deſcribed as parcel of the manor, and within the peculiar, of Groby, belonging to Harry earl of Stamford, who was impropriator of the great tithes of Anſty and its fields, a proprietor of land, and of right of common there, and patron of the vicarage of Newton Linford; Joſeph Hooley, clerk, is deſcribed as the vicar of Newton Linford, entitled to the ſmall tithes; and the earl of Stamford as impropriator of the great tithes; and the maſter, fellows, and ſcholars, of Emmanuel College, Cambridge, as patrons of the rectory of Thurcaſton, whereof the other part of Anſty is reputed a member; Richard Hurd, clerk, rector of Thurcaſton, entitled to great and ſmall tithes, and to glebe land in the ſaid fields; and Thomas Martin, Daniel Glover, Thomas Iliffe, John Martin, and others, as proprietors of the reſidue of the land and right of common. To the earl of Stamford was allotted, in lieu of his impropriate great tithes (except of antient incloſures), one fourth part of the whole, ſubject to cuſtomary taxes; and to the ſaid earl, in lieu of ſmall tithes, Eaſter offerings, and other vicarial dues in his portion of Anſty (except mortuaries, if any, and ſurplice fees) ſuch land as ſhould be of the clear yearly value of 48 ſhillings, which laſt ſum was ſettled on the vicar of Newton Linford, to be ſecured to him out of the allotment of the earl of Stamford. To the rector of Thurcaſton another ſeventh part, in lieu of all rectorial and vicarial tithes and payments (except ſurplice fees and certain moduſes payable to the rector for the mill, the Millholme, and Earl's Meadow in Anſty, reſpectively), ſubject to the uſual outgoings. The antient incloſures to pay two ſhillings an acre in lieu of all great and ſmall tithes, either to the earl of Stamford or the rector of Thurcaſton, as their lands may be reſpectively found.

---

[1] Charyte's Rentale, fol. viii. b.—x. b.
[2] Eſch. 17 Edw. III. N° 57. Leic.
[3] Rot. Aux. 20 Edw. III.
[4] Eſch. 11 Ric. II. N° 26. Leic.
[5] Eſch. 34 Edw. III. N° 4. Leic.
[6] Eſch. 45 Edw. III. N° 22. Leic.
[7] Eſch. 23 Hen. VI.
[8] Eſch. 36 Hen. VI.
[9] Leaſes in the Augmentation Office.
[10] Harl. MSS. 5804; p. 107.
[11] Rot. Peil. 4 Hen. V.
[12] Burton, MS.
[13] Miniſters Accompts, 31 Henry VIII. in the Augmentation office.
[14] See vol. I. p. cxl.
[15] Burton, MS.

By the Return to Parliament in 1801, Anſty contained 8 uninhabited houſes, 134 inhabited, and in which were 137 families, conſiſting of 333 males, 327 females, in all 660; of whom 48 were chiefly employed in agriculture, and 221 in trades, manufactures, &c.

The earl of Stamford is lord of the manor.

Sunday ſchools were inſtituted here in 1787.

In a window of a farmhouſe at Anſty is the inſcription ſhewn in Plate CXL. fig. 14; the characters of which are correſpondent with thoſe of Margareta in Thurcaſton church, p. 1058.

An old croſs at Anſty is given in fig. 15.

The CHAPEL (ſee Plate CXLI), dedicated to St. Mary, is ſmall; but has a tower with five bells in it, and a pariſh clock; a nave, chancel, and South aile.

The old round font is given in fig. 16.

In 1552, the commiſſioners reported, that the church of Anſty contained,

Inprimis, thre belles.
Itm̄, one cope.
Itm̄, tow ſuetes of veſtments.
Itm̄, one challice.
Itm̄, a croſſe of braſſe.

Mr. Burton deſcribes theſe arms, fig. 17—19.
Argent, a croſs patonce, between four mullets Gules.
Ermine, a croſs patonce Gules [1].
Sable, a feſs Ermine, between two chevronels Or.
Gules, ſeven maſcles pierced Or. Ferrers of Groby, as at Thurcaſton, fig. 7.

On the wall of the belfry:

"Whoever takes a bell in hand,
Muſt firſt theſe orders underſtand.
Before you begin a bell for to ſwing,
Off your hat, ſpurs, and girdles, be ſure you do fling.
He that rings with his ſpurs on, his girdle, or hat,
He muſt pay down two pence—be ſure of that.
He that a bell doth overthrow, I ſay,
Shall two pence pay the clark, without delay.
And he that doth a bell pull back again,
Shall ſurely pay down ſix pence for the ſame.
If you refuſe the ſtated ſum to pay,
Preſented you ſhall be, the next court-day."

On a table of benefactions:

"Edward Wigley, M.D. £18. &c. &c." (as in p. 1057.)

MONUMENTAL INSCRIPTIONS.

In the chancel, on flat ſtones:

1. "Here lieth interred the body of Ann, the wife of Joſeph Heard, and daughter of Robert Jones, of Thornton, in this county;
ſhe departed this life June the 7th, 1742,
aged 27 years."

2. "Here lieth interred the body of Joſeph Heard, ſon of John Heard, late of Beaumont Leys, by Frances his wife, and grandſon to John Heard, ſenior.
He departed this life Sept. 18, 1742,
aged 29 years."

3. "Here reſteth the body of Anne Iliffe, daughter of Daniel and Elizabeth Iliffe, of Desford;
ſhe departed this life Oct. 19, 1731,
aged 25 years."

In the South aile:

On a looſe ſtone:

1. "Here lieth interred Amy,
the daughter of Thomas Martin, ſenior.
She departed this preſent life April
XVIII, MDCLXXXVII, aged about 5 years.
Here alſo lies her niece, that cry'd
For Baptiſm, and then ſhe died."

2. "Here lieth the body of Elizabeth Atkins, daughter of Thomas Atkins and Conſtance his wife;
ſhe departed this life March the 20th, 1755,
aged 59.
My pilgrimage on earth is paſt;
My glaſs in ſorrow run full faſt.
Sweet Jeſus Chriſt, prepare for me,
A reſting-place in Heaven to be."

In the chapel-yard:

An altar-tomb for the family of Heard, with ſeveral inſcriptions on it.

On various upright ſtones:

"Jan. 2, 1703-4. Here was buried the body of Anne Heath, aged 99 years."

Henry Burgeſs, 16 Feb. 1794, aged 81.
Robert Martin, 29 July, 1769, aged 84.
Anne Martin, 28 Jan. 1772, aged 86.
They lived together in a marriage ſtate 60 years.
Thomas Glover, 18 Jan. 1763, aged 82.
Sarah Glover, 1 Jan. 1775, aged 71.

CURATES OF THURCASTON.

Richard Jug ſigns as curate in 1600.
William Arme curate 1601.
William Whitinge miniſter 1606.
William Bockinge miniſter 1612.
Thomas Synte curate 1627.
Samuel Wright curate 1658.
Nathanael White died curate 1640.
John Pepper curate 1649.
Gilbert Caulton curate 1665.
Henry Read miniſter 1680.
John Dickinſon curate 1740.
Joſeph Fowler curate 1749.
D. Ball curate 1763, and alſo of Anſty.
J. Beaumont curate 1773.
C. Philpot curate 1784.
Edward Vaughan curate 1791.
J. D. Akers curate 1796.
James Hodges curate 1799.

CURATES OF ANSTY.

1570. John Symkin ſigns reader [2].
1627. William Dalbye curate.
1628. Thomas Ing curate.
1638. Samuel Wright curate.
1639. Nathaniel Whyting curate.
1646. John Pepper curate.
1665. Gilbert Caulton curate.
1680. Henry Revet miniſter.
1732. William Iliff curate.
1737. Edward Ellis of Markfield.
1739. John Dickinſon curate.
1746. Walter Crumpton curate.
1748. Paul Dudley curate.
1749. Sherman Harrold curate.
1751. Thomas Purcell curate.
1754. J. Clayton curate.
1756. Lemuel Abbott curate.
1761. Thomas Green curate [3].
1763. D. Ball curate.

---

[1] Perhaps the arms of Latimer. See p. 1062.

[2] He writes John Symkin lector in 1606; and his laſt ſignature, 1617, is John Symkin miniſter.

[3] He was afterwards Conduct of Trinity College, Cambridge, where he continued near 30 years; but, being out ſhooting one day, was ſuddenly taken ill, and lay in the field ſome hours before he was found, which occaſioned his death.

CROPSTON,

another conſiderable hamlet in the pariſh of Thurcaſton, very near to Charnwood Foreſt, is bounded by Swithland on the North, Bradgate Park on the Weſt, Anſty on the South, and Thurcaſton on the Weſt.

In the Teſta de Nevill, under the title, "De Serjantiis arrentatis per Robertum Paſſelewe, tempore Henrici Regis, filii Regis Johannis," is this entry:

"De terris Normannorum in villâ de Cropſton ſunt 7 virgate terre, pretium virgate 10 ſolidi; inde comes Wintonie habet 5 virgatas, & prior de Ulveſcroft 1 virgatam, & Ernoldus de Boſco 1 virgatam [1].

In 1299, it was found that William le Waleis held a quarter of a knight's fee in Cropſton (which is an appurtenance of the manor of Thorp Ernaud in the ſame county) free [2]; alſo that there were certain other freeholders there, who, by antient cuſtom, paid 7*s*. 6*d*. at the view of frankpledge yearly on the feaſt of St. Martin; and that William la Zouch, a ſon and heir of dame Milicent de Montalt, deceaſed, was then aged 22 [3].

In 1324, William de Ferrars, at his death, had two nativi [or vaſſals ſo born] in Cropſton; and Henry de Ferrers his ſon and heir was then aged 22 [4].

In 1343, Henry de Ferrars, at his death, poſſeſſed one knight's fee, with the appurtenances, in Thorp Ernaud, Aylmerſtorp, Thirneby, Petlinge, Buſſeby, Bellegrave, Croppeſton, Barneſby, Babbegrave, and Atherton, which William la Zouch of Haringworth held [5].

In 1346, John Walſhe (on the aid then granted for knighting Edward of Woodſtock, the king's eldeſt ſon) was aſſeſſed 4*s*. for a tenth part of one knight's fee in Cropſton, parcel of the honour of Winton [6].

In 1387, Henry de Ferrars of Groby, knt. at his death poſſeſſed the manor of Cropſton, which William la Zouch of Haringworth held [7].

In 1392, king Richard II. granted to ſir Thomas Walſhe, knt. liberty of free warren in all his demeſne lands at Andlep, Croppeſton, Sitheſton, and Thorpe juxta Barkeby. Hiis teſtibus; W. Cantuar' archiepiſcopo; Thoma archiepiſcopo, Eboracenſis cancellario noſtro; R. London', W. Dunelm', J. Sarum, theſaurario noſtro, epiſcopis; Johanne Aquitanie & Lancaſtrie, Edmundo Eboraci, ducibus, avunculis noſtris chariſſimis; Thomâ de Holand, com' Huntingtonie, camerario noſtro, fratribus noſtris chariſſimis; Johanne Devereux, ſeneſcallo hoſpitii noſtri; magiſtro Edmundo de Stafford, cuſtode privati ſigilli noſtri; & aliis. Dat' per manum noſtram apud Weſtm', 29 die Nov. [8]

In 1375, William la Zouch of Haringworth, knt. at his death poſſeſſed half a knight's fee in Cropſton, which the heirs of ſir Thomas Walſhe held [9].

In 1444, William de Ferrers of Groby, knt. at his death was ſeiſed of the manor of Cropſton, which William la Zouche of Haringworth held [10].

In 1457, Edward de Grey, knt. lord Ferrers of Groby, was ſeiſed of the manor of Cropſton, which ſir William de la Zouch of Haringworth held [11].

In 1463, Thomas Walſhe, of Onlep, eſq. died ſeiſed of eight meſſuages, 120 acres of land, and eight acres of meadow, in Cropſton [12].

The freeholders at Cropſton in 1630, were Richard Corbett, Richard Thornton, Ralph Allen, and Thomas Shelton.

In 1706 was publiſhed the following "Faithful account of the lamentable ſtate of a young man, and his immediate recovery upon obeying a voice, commanding him to ariſe and walk, &c. at Cropſton in Leiceſterſhire, containing the plain matter of fact without Reflections."

"John Cook, a very ſober and pious young man, of Cropſton, being then 21 years of age, two or three days after Michaelmas 1704, in ſeeking of a mare which was miſſing, heated himſelf very much. The mare being found in the evening, in a narrow part of a river whoſe ſides were very precipitous, and but one way of coming out, and that very difficult, he, to aſſiſt the mare, put off his cloaths, and went into the water, which took him up to the middle: nevertheleſs, all that he and his father could do being ineffectual, his father (who ſtood on the bank) was forced to go to Cropſton, which was half a mile off, to procure farther help; the ſaid John ſtanding on the bank in the mean time naked, except his ſhirt. On the return of his father, he went in again, and, in getting out of the river, ſlipt in up to his breaſt in water, and, notwithſtanding all his precaution, wet part of his ſhirt; which, upon putting on his cloaths, ſtruck cold to his body; yet he continued to wear the ſame ſhirt. That night his head and back began to ache. Next morning, being obliged to accompany his father to the coal-pits near Swannington, he found himſelf much worſe; ſo that he was not able to help his father in loading the coals, and was forced to ride moſt of the way home. Upon his return thither, he was not able either to ſit up, or even eat any ſupper before his going to bed, and was very reſtleſs all night. The next day, and ſeveral following, his face and body ſwelled, were inflamed and red, he having no part of his body free from pain. Theſe ſymptoms being looked upon as the effect of a cold, they gave him ſeveral things to cauſe a ſweat: but, finding no relief by theſe means, about a month or ſix weeks afterward, his father let him blood, which was repeated half a dozen times in the next half-year, but ſtill without any benefit. He was confined to his bed till Midſummer laſt, ſaving that in evenings he was carried out, and laid on a couch by the fire during the time that his bed was making. In this interval the ſinews of his arms and legs, more eſpecially the latter, were very much contracted, and he was afflicted all over his body with lancinating pains; which, in his own way of expreſſion, were as if he had been pierced all over with knives, and his bones broke to pieces. About Midſummer laſt, his pains abating in ſome meaſure, he uſed to be got up in a morning; and although by the help of crutches he could remove himſelf from one place to another in the lower rooms of the houſe; yet ſuch was the contraction of the ſinews of his hams, &c. that his body, when hanging on his crutches, was in the poſture of one ſitting and bending forward; and he was unable to get over the door-ſill without very great trouble. Being willing to do ſomewhat at his trade of a ſhoemaker, he once went into his ſhop, and, attempting it, found the ſinews of his arms ſo far contracted, that he was not able to draw his hands above half a yard aſunder; and in doing it his ſtrength was ſo little, and his pain ſo great, that he was forced to deſiſt from any ſuch undertaking during his illneſs for the future. He continued in this condition till laſt Michaelmas, when he was ſeized on by a violent fever, which was generally ſuppoſed would be mortal; on which the Rev. Richard Hill, B. D. rector of the pariſh, often viſited him (which the ſaid John Cook deſires to be inſerted, with all thankful acknowledgement). The fever terminated in about three weeks time; but the contraction of the ſinews was greater than ever, and ſo likewiſe were his pains, and ſo continued till December laſt. During this interval, his father being concerned that he was unable to walk, or do any manner of buſineſs, made uſe of deer-ſuet and brandy to foment the parts affected; and afterward conſulted Mr. Lydall, practitioner in phyſic, at Horſe-pool Grange, Mr. Matthew Judd, and Mr. John Coltman, apothecaries in Leiceſter; by whoſe advice they uſed internally ſudorifics, and externally fomentations, but without ſucceſs, the contraction of his ſinews and the pain of his body continuing as violent as ever. All the methods uſed hitherto proving ineffectual, his father cauſed a perſon to pull him by the heel, whilſt he himſelf ſat upon his knees, to force an extenſion of the contracted ſinews; which put him to exceſſive pain, as much as if his legs had been broken to pieces. Upon complaint of which pain, they deſiſted from ſuch afflicting experiments. In this condition he continued till the laſt of November, or firſt of December, when, about half after three in the morning, having been awake for ſome time, he heard a voice ſay deliberately to him, "John, John, John, ariſe, for thy limbs are reſtored unto thee, and walk." Whereupon he called to his father, and deſired him to ariſe, and light a candle, for he was minded to ariſe, himſelf having heard the voice above-mentioned; but his father reproved him for it, ſaying, "It was a dream, or ſome vain imagination of his, for miracles were ceaſed; and, if any one did hear him talk thus, they would ridicule him for it." Hereupon he with ſome reluctancy lay ſtill; but, knowing how diſtinctly he had heard the voice, it grieved him much that he had diſobeyed it; ſo that for 12 days and nights, between his hearing it the firſt and ſecond time, he believes he did not eat one pennyworth of bread, or ſleep three hours; but ſaith his heart was ready to burſt with grief, and rarely ſpoke to any one. All which was imputed by his relations to a ſour and ſullen temper, ſaying, that "he had a mind to pine and ſtarve himſelf." And his father told him, "he feared his melancholy would throw him into deſpair." But the ſaid John Cook, being fully convinced that it was no dream or deluſion, aſked God pardon daily and hourly, for having diſobeyed his voice, or the voice of his meſſenger; and fully reſolved, if he would vouchſafe him the like favour again, that he would readily obey the admonition. The 12th of December, in the evening, Francis Wain, a neighbour of his, living at Cropſton, ſeeing him go to bed in his uſual manner, ſaid, "Ah! poor John, I am ſorry to ſee thee in ſo miſerable a condition." To which he replied, "Ah! ſo I am; and would to God he would take me out of the world, or reſtore me to the uſe of my limbs again." And, that I may conceal nothing from the reader, that can in the leaſt be ſuppoſed to have any influence on his recovery (though I think it had none), I think it proper to inſert, that in the evening he drank about half a ſpoonful, or perhaps a ſpoonful, of ſtrong waters, as he had done at other times. Whatever it is to be imputed to, he apprehended his ſpirits to be more lightſome than they had been at any time ſince his hearing the voice, and ſo continued till half after five the next morning; when, having lain for ſeveral hours awake, he heard the ſame voice, but ſomething louder and ſharper, ſay unto him, "John, John, John, ariſe; thy limbs are reſtored, and walk." This voice ſeemed to him as formed about a yard above his head, and was ſo loud, that he believes it might have been heard into the next room. Upon hearing of it, he ſtraight called his father and mother, who were faſt aſleep in a bed about a yard diſtance from his in the ſame room; ſo that he was forced to call ſeveral times before they awoke. When they did ſo, and he had related to them the occaſion of his calling them, they reproved him again, as giving heed to dreams and vain imaginations, and ſaid, "He would be in as bad a condition as a certain perſon in the pariſh," who then was diſtracted. But he, not deterred by theſe reproofs, told his father, "That he reſolved to endeavour to ariſe, whether any body elſe would or not;" and accordingly ſat up in his bed, which he had not done from his firſt illneſs; whereupon his pains, which all along had afflicted his whole body, immediately ceaſed. His father, hearing him ſtir, aroſe. The ſon, whoſe arms had been as it were pinioned before, now readily reached his coat and waiſtcoat; but, in putting them on, one of his ſhirt ſleeves being driven up, he deſired his father then ariſing, to help him; who juſt moving it he got it on; and then, getting to the bed-ſide, put on his breeches; and raiſing himſelf upon his feet, he perceived, and, as he thinks, heard the bones above and below his knees to crackle, and that without any pain; but, finding himſelf able to ſtand upright, he immediately fell upon his knees, and gave God thanks, who had ſo miraculouſly reſtored him to his limbs. Then, putting on his ſtockings and ſhoes, he took one of his crutches in his hand, not to uſe it as a crutch, but to guide him in the dark, and went into the houſe or kitchen to his father, who was then lighting a candle, and, ſeeing his ſon walk upright, was amazed, as were likewiſe the reſt of the family when they had notice of it, and, preſently ariſing, condemned or blamed themſelves for the rough ſpeeches they had uſed, and the hard cenſures they had paſſed on him, for having regard to the voice which he had heard; and then preſently joined all in giving God thanks for his wonderful recovery. It is to be obſerved that, at his firſt walking, he immediately found himſelf perfectly at eaſe, and that the cold numbneſs which affected his legs and arms during his illneſs was ceaſed, a gentle warmth returning into them, and that he had the motion of his limbs as perfect as at any time before or after, and as great a ſtrength in thoſe parts which were moſt affected as in the reſt of his body.

---

[1] See vol. I. p. xlviii.

[2] Eſch. 27 Edw. I. N° 50. Leic.

[3] Eſch. 18 Edw. II. N° 73. Leic.

[4] Eſch. 17 Edw. III. N° 57. Leic.

[5] Rot. Aux. 20 Edw. III. 1346.

[6] Eſch. 11 Ric. II. N° 26. Leic.

[7] Eſch. 15 Ric. II.

[8] Cart. 15 Ric. II. n. 35.

[9] Eſch. 19 Ric. II. N° 52. Leic.

[10] Eſch. 23 Hen. VI.

[11] Eſch. 36 Hen. VI.

[12] Eſch. 3 Edw. IV. N° 13. Leic.

This relation, as it is here drawn up, being read to the young man, is by him averred to be the real truth.

We, whoſe names are hereunto ſubſcribed, upon occaſion of the report of the wonderful providence above-mentioned, went to viſit the Rev. Mr. Hill; and, having ſent for the ſaid John Cook, did make ſtrict enquiry into the circumſtances of it. And we do hereby certify, that the aforegoing exactly agrees with the relation which he then made to us.

"Samuel Carte, miniſter of St. Martin's, Leiceſter.
"John Kilbye, vicar of St. Margaret's, Leiceſter."

Atteſted alſo, in a letter to Mr. Simon Martin, bookſeller at Leiceſter, by

"Richard Hill, B. D. rector of the pariſh,
"Henry Cook, William Thornton, John Palmer,
"John Noone, Suſanna Noone, and Francis Weane[1]."

In 1781, an act was paſſed, for dividing, allotting, and incloſing, ſeveral open fields called Cropſton fields, and other uninclosed lands and meadows, and commonable places, reputed to contain about 360 acres, and belonging to the hamlet or chapelry of Cropſton, in the pariſh of Thurcaſton, which hamlet or chapelry is parcel of the manor and eccleſiaſtical peculiar exempt juriſdiction of Groby, belonging to George Harry earl of Stamford. In this act the maſter, fellows, and ſcholars, of Emmanuel College, in the Univerſity of Cambridge, are deſcribed as patrons of the rectory of Thurcaſton; the Rev. Robert Spillman, clerk, as rector of the ſaid rectory, and entitled to certain tithes in kind, and to certain moduſes, or payments, in lieu of the other tithes ariſing within the ſaid hamlet or chapelry; and the earl of Stamford, ſir John Danvers, bart. the Rev. John Fiſher, clerk, Daniel Allen Glover, Henry Hind, and others, as the owners and proprietors, in different proportions, of the ſaid fields and other uninclosed lands and meadows, and of the right of common upon the ſame and upon the ſaid commonable places, and as owners and proprietors alſo of nearly all the houſes, yards, gardens, orchards, homeſteads, and other antient incloſures, within the hamlet or chapelry of Cropſton aforeſaid. A compenſation is directed to be ſet out for the lord of the manor; the rector to have a ſeventh part of the reſidue of the open field, and the proportion of a ſeventh for old incloſures, in lieu of all tithes and payments, with a reſervation of mortuaries, ſurplice-fees, and tithes of ſuch old incloſures as ſhall not be compenſated for.

By the Return to Parliament in 1801, Cropſton contained 22 houſes; in which were 24 families, conſiſting of 54 males and 72 females; in all 126; of whom 28 were chiefly employed in agriculture, and 70 in trade, manufactures, &c.

The earl of Stamford is the preſent lord of this manor, as parcel of the lordſhip of Groby.

---

[1] In a copy of this pamphlet, which Mr. Reed once ſaw, was the following MS note: "The above narrative fell accidentally into my hands in the year 1770, and (as an additional teſtimony to the truth of it) I enquired of the wife and two brothers of the above John Cook, then living and of good reputation, who declared upon their knowledge as is here related; 1771; D. Ball, curate of Thurcaſton."

ULVESCROFT,

in old deeds called Oſolveſcroft, Olveſcrofte, Woolveſcrofte, Oulveſcrofte, Alwayſcrofte, and Ulverſcrofte, is ſituated on the South-weſt extremity of the Foreſt of Charnwood, about ſeven miles North-weſt from Leiceſter, and five miles South-weſt of Loughborough.

"At Ulleſcroft, ſtanding in Charnwood Foreſt, in a dearne and ſolitary place, Robert Blanchmains, earl of Leiceſter, temp. Hen. II. founded a ſmall priory for Eremites of the order of St. Auguſtine; which (beſides the lands given to it by the founder) had the manor of Carlton Curlew in this county, 12 meſſuages and 12 yard lands in Shenton; the advowſons of the church of Boney, co. Notts, and thoſe of Syſton and Radcliffe in this county [1]."

Notwithſtanding the authority of Mr. Burton, I am juſtified in giving a ſtill earlier date to the foundation of this priory, and of calling Robert Boſſu its founder; as it evidently had exiſted more than 40 years, when the following circumſtantial detail of its poſſeſſions was thus confirmed, in 1174, by a Papal bull:

"Alexander epiſcopus, ſervus ſervorum Dei, dilectis filiis Willielmo priori eccleſie Sancte Marie de Ulveſcroft, ejuſque fratribus tam preſentibus quam futuris, regularem vitam profeſſis, In P. P. M. Quociens illud a nobis expetitur quod religioni et honeſtati convenire dinoſcitur, animo nos decet libenti concedere, et petentium deſideriis congruum impetiri ſuffragium. Eapropter, dilecti in Domino filii, veſtris juſtis poſtulationibus clementer annuimus, et prefatam eccleſiam, in quâ divino mancipati eſtis obſequio, ſub beati Petri et noſtrâ protectione ſuſcipimus, et preſentis ſcripti privilegio communimus; ſtatuentes ut quaſcunque poſſeſſiones, quacunque bona, eadem eccleſia in preſentiarum juſtè et canonicè poſſidet, aut in futurum, conceſſione pontificum, largitione regum vel principum, oblatione fidelium, ſeu aliis juſtis modis, preſtante Domino, poterit adipiſci, firma vobis veſtriſque ſucceſſoribus et illibata permaneant. In quibus hec propriis duximus experimenda vocabulis. Ex donatione comitis Legreceſtrie, Ulveſcroft, in quo ſita eſt eccleſia cum aliis officinis, cum virgultis et culturis, cum pratis et paſcuis, aquis, et omnibus pertinentiis ſuis. Ex donatione comitis Ranulphi, triginta acras terre ſuper montem de Aldermanneſhagâ. Ex donatione Henrici, unum tophtagium in Leyeceſtriâ. Ex donacione Roberti de Burſtallâ, unum tophtagium in eadem civitate. Ex donacione Yvonis Friday, unam virgatam terre in Stoctonâ. Ex donatione Radulfi parvi, unam virgatam terre in Torp'. De conſenſu Oſberti filii Fulconis, et de conſenſu Nicholai de Trowellâ, et ex conceſſione archiepiſcopi Eboracenſis, eccleſiam de Stanford; et ex donatione ejuſdem Nicholai unum tofthtagium in predictâ villâ. Preterea jura, dignitates, et libertates illas, quas eccleſia noſtra à quadraginta retrò annis uſque nunc rationabiliter noſcitur habuiſſe, vobis et eidem eccleſie auctoritate apoſtolicâ confirmamus. Sepulturam quoque ipſius loci liberam eſſe decernimus, ut eorum devotioni et extreme voluntati qui ſe illic ſepeliri deliberaverint, niſi fortè excommunicati vel interdicti ſint, nullus obſiſtat, ſalvâ cum juſtitiâ illarum eccleſiarum à quibus mortuorum corpora aſſumuntur. Sanè novalium veſtrorum, que propriis manubus aut ſumptibus colitis, ſive de nutrimentis veſtrorum animalium, nullus a vobis decimas preſumat exigere. Liceat quoque vobis clericos vel laicos liberos et abſolutos è ſeculo fugientes ad converſionem veſtram ſuſcipere, et eos abſque ullius contradictione in veſtro collegio retinere. In parochialibus autem eccleſiis quas tenetis liceat vos ſacerdotes eligere, et epiſcopo preſentare; quibus, ſi idonei inventi fuerint, epiſcopus animarum curam committat, ut de plebis quidem curâ epiſcopo vobis autem de temporalibus debeant reſpondere. Criſma verò, oleum ſacrum, conſecrationes altarium ſeu baſilicarum, ordinationes clericorum qui ad ſacros ordines fuerint promovendi, a dioceſano ſuſcipietis epiſcopo, ſi quidem catholicus fuerit, et ea gratis et abſque ullâ pravitate vobis voluerit exhibere. Alioquin liceat vobis quem maluiſtis adire antiſtitem, qui noſtrâ ſcilicet auctoritate quod poſtulatur indulgeat. Obeunte verò te nunc ejuſdem loci priore, vel tuorum quolibet ſucceſſorum, nullus ibi quelibet ſubreptionis allutia ſeu violentia proponatur, niſi quem fratres communi conſenſu beati Auguſtini regulam providerint eligendum. Decernimus ergò ut nulli omnino quo hominum liceat prefatam eccleſiam temerè perturbare, aut ejus poſſeſſiones auferre, vel ablatas retinere, muniere, ſeu quibuſlibet vexationibus fatigare; ſed illibata omnia et integra conſerventur eorum pro quorum gubernatione et ſuſtentacione conceſſa ſunt uſibus omnimodis pro futuro; ſalvâ ſedis apoſtolice auctoritate, et dioceſani epiſcopi canonicâ juſtitiâ. Si que igitur in futurum eccleſiaſtica ſeculariſve perſona hanc veſtre conſtitutionis paginam ſciens, contra eam temerè venire temptaverit, ſecundo tertióve commonita, niſi preſumptionem ſuam dignâ ſatisfactione correxerit, poteſtatis honoriſque ſui dignitate careat, reamque ſe divino judicio exiſtere de perpetratâ iniquitate cognoſcat, et a ſacrociſſimo corpore ac ſanguine Dei et Domini Redemptoris noſtri J'hu Chriſti aliena fiat, atque in extremo examine diſtricte ultioni ſubjacet. Cunctis autem eidem loco ſua jura ſervantibus ſit pax Domini noſtri J'hu Chriſti continua; et hic fructum bone actionis percipiant, et apud diſtrictum Judicem premia eterne pacis invenientur. Amen! Amen! Amen!

"Dat' Terencium, per manum Gratiani Sancte Romane Eccleſie ſubdiaconi et notarii, XV kalend' Decembris, Indictione viij, Incarnationis Dominice anno milleſimo c^{mo} LXX° IIIJ^{o}, pontificatûs domini Alexandri Pape Tertii anno ſextodecimo.

Ego Alexander Catholice Eccleſie ep'us.

✠ Ego Hubaldus Hoſtienſiis ep'us.

✠ Ego Bernardus Ibrivenſis et Sc'e Rufine ep'us.

✠ Ego Gwalterius Albanenſis ep'us.

✠ Ego Johs Sanctorum Joh'is et Pauli preſbyter, card' Pamachii.

✠ Ego Torill's p̄br', card' tunc S'ci Pet' ad vincula.

✠ Ego Ardicio diac', card' S'ti Thedon'.

✠ Ego Enichyus diac', card' S'ti Adriani.

✠ Ego Labordus diac', Card' S'te Marie in Porticu [2]."

In the Matriculus of 1220, Ulveſcroft is ſtated to be "quondam heremitorum, patronus comes Wintonie. Ibi ſolent eſſe tres fratres ſacerdotes [3]." The habit of theſe humble Eremites has been given under Charley [4].

Margaret de Quency, ſiſter to the laſt earl of Leiceſter of the race of Bellomont, grand-daughter of Robert Boſſu, daughter of Robert Blanchmaines, and relict of Saer de Quency earl of Winton, followed the example of her noble and generous relations, by becoming a benefactreſs to theſe humble Eremites.

"Omnibus ſancte matris eccleſie filiis, Margareta comitiſſa Winton', ſoror Roberti comitis Leirceſtrie, ſalutem. Sciatis quod ego, in viduitate meâ, poſtquam homagium feci domino meo regi pro hereditate meâ, dedi, et hâc meâ cartâ confirmavi, Deo et beate Marie, et priori Waltero de Ulveſcroft, et fratribus ibidem Deo ſervientibus, pro ſalute anime me, in puram et perpetuam elemoſinam, totam terram que continetur in Riehul et in Biſſopehul, in longitudine uſque vetus foſſatum, et in latitudine à Legabroc uſque ad ſepem orchardie. Et ego et heredes mei hanc terram prenominatam predictis fratribus in perpetuum warentizabimus contra omnes homines. Teſtibus hiis; Willielmo de Cnapewell tunc temporis ſeneſcallo meo, Willielmo de Hareſtan, Rogero de Sancto Andreâ, fratre Simone de Brackel, Ricardo de Evereſſ', Alano foreſtario meo, et pluribus aliis [5]."

Sehero de Sancto Andrea

---

[1] Burton, MS.

[2] This is cited by Tanner among the collections of Humphrey Wanley; but is now in the British Muſeum, among the Cartæ Antiquæ. 111 A. 6. See the ſeal, &c. affixed to this bull, with the motto, Monſtra mihi vias tuas, Plate CXLII. fig. 1, 2.

[3] See vol. I. p. lix.

[4] See before, p. 120.

[5] Cartæ Antiquæ, Harl. MSS. 112 C. 27. See the ſeal, fig. 3.

Roger de Quency earl of Winton, the ſon of Saer and Margaret, was alſo ſo great a benefactor to Ulveſcroft, that he has been ſtyled by Leland[1] the fundator primus, and the fundator modernus the marquis of Dorſet[2]. And in 1271 it appeared that earl Roger died ſeiſed of the advowſon of this priory; and that Eleanor de Vaux, daughter of William de Ferrariis earl of Derby, third wife and relict of the ſaid earl, held the advowſons of Ulveſcroft and Charley in dower[3].

William the firſt lord Ferrars of Groby, younger ſon of William de Ferrars earl of Derby, by his ſecond wife Margaret de Quency, one of the daughters and co-heirs of the above-named Roger earl of Winton, ſucceeded, as lord of Groby, in right of his wife, to the patronage of Ulveſcroft, and was himſelf a conſiderable benefactor[4] to that religious houſe, as appears by the following deeds, in or about 1275.

"Sciant preſentes et futuri, quod ego Willielmus de Ferrariis conceſſi, et hâc preſenti cartâ meâ confirmavi, Deo et beate Marie de Ulveſcroft, et canonicis ibidem Deo et beate Marie ſervientibus, quindecim acras et dimidiam terre, cum pertinentiis ſuis, infra Foreſtam de Charnewod, et cum haybote ad eandem terram includendam; videlicet, duas acras et dimidiam terre jacentes juxta clauſum de Haldermanhawe ex parte occidentali, et quinque acras terre jacentes juxta croſtum dicte domûs de Ulviſcroft ex parte occidentali, et quinque acras terre jacentes juxta clauſum molendini dicte domûs verſus Baſtardleye, et tres acras terre jacentes inter le Leyefeld et clauſum Nove Ville juxta terram predicte domûs que vocatur Ulfpychala; habend' et tenend' de me et heredibus meis, predictis canonicis et eorum ibidem ſucceſſoribus, liberè, quietè, benè, et in pace, et hereditariè, in perpetuum; reddendo inde annuatim michi et heredibus meis, vel aſſignatis meis, quatuor ſolidos et duos denarios argenti ad tres anni terminos; videlicet, in Purificationem beate Marie ſexdecim denarios et obolum, et ad Pentecoſten ſexdecim denarios et obolum, et ad feſtum Sancti Michaelis ſeptendecim denarios, pro omni ſervicio ſeculari, conſuetudine, ſeu demando. In cujus rei teſtimonium preſentem cartam ſigilli mei impreſſione roboravi. Hiis teſtibus; Roberto le Waleys de Swythelond, Willielmo le Waleys de Anlep, Petro filio Rogeri, Johanne filio ſuo, Johanne Falconar, militibus; Johanne de Aneſty, Willielmo Bate de eadem, Rogero de Bradeg' clerico, et multis aliis[5]."

"Sciant preſentes et futuri, quod ego Willielmus de Ferrariis dedi, conceſſi, et hâc preſenti cartâ meâ confirmavi, domino Roberto de Gaddiſbi, priori de Ulveſcroft, & canonicis ibidem Deo ſervientibus, octo acras et dimidiam acram terre, jacentes inter campum ejuſdem prioris quod vocatur Biſchopiſhull ex unâ parte, et Foreſtam meam de Charnewode ex alterâ, cum pertinentiis ſuis, & cum heiebote per viſum foreſtariorum meorum; habendas et tenendas de me et heredibus meis, vel aſſignatis meis, predictis domino Roberto priori et canonicis, et eorum ſucceſſoribus, in perpetuum, liberè, quietè, plenariè, benè, in pace et hereditariè; reddendo inde annuatim mihi et heredibus meis vel aſſignatis meis iidem prior canonici et eorum ſucceſſores, duos ſolidos et decem denarios; videlicet, ad Purificationem Beate Marie undecim denarios, ad Pentecoſten undecim denarios, et ad feſtum Sancti Michaelis duodecim denarios, pro omnibus ſerviciis, conſuetudinibus, et demandis ſecularibus. In hujus rei teſtimonium, preſentem cartam ſigillo meo ſignavi. Hiis teſtibus; domino Andreâ de Jarpinvile, domino Roberto le Waleis, Johanne Falconar, Petro filio Rogeri, Johanne filio ſuo, militibus; Johanne de Aneſti, Thomâ Cannow, Edmundo Coco de Aneſti, Roberto Caretar' de eodem, Willielmo Bate clerico, et aliis[6]."

Nearly co-equal with the two laſt-cited grants may be placed thoſe which here follow.

"Sciant preſentes, &c. quod ego Petrus filius Rogeri, miles, de Glen, dedi et conceſſi Deo et beate Marie de Ulveſcroft, et canonicis ibidem Deo et beate Marie ſervientibus, pro ſalute anime mee et animarum omnium anteceſſorum et ſucceſſorum meorum, tres virgatas terre in territorio de Sytheſtonâ, cum omnibus pertinentiis. Teſtibus; d'no Roberto le Waleyes de Swythland, d'no Will'o le Waleys de Onlip, Rogero Somervile de Coſinton, &c.[7]"

"Omnibus, &c. Robertus de Gaddeſby, dominus prior de Ulveſcroft, et ejuſdem loci canonici, ſalutem in Domino. Noveritis nós dediſſe et conceſſiſſe domino Roberto le Waleys de Swythelond militi tertiam partem molendini aquatici de Northawe in Swythelondi, cum totâ ſectâ, &c. Hiis teſtibns; d'no Will'o le Waleys de Anlep, d'no Joh̄e Falconario de Thurkedeſton, Joh̄e de Aneſty, Ric'o Sweyn de Swythlond, Will'o Bate de Groby, et aliis[8]."

In 1304, John of Normanton was elected prior of Ulveſcroft, the permiſſion of William lord Ferrars of Groby being firſt obtained[9].

On an inquiſition taken at Lindeford in 1361, it was found to be of no prejudice, &c. if William de Ferrars granted 67 acres of waſte in Groby to the prior and convent of Ulveſcroft[10]; and in 1369 the ſame benefactor had licence to give 7 meſſuages, 3 tofts, 12 virgates of arable land, and 8 acres of meadow, with the moiety of one acre of arable land and of one acre and a rood of meadow, in Anſty, Cropſton, Bradgate, and Staunton under Barndon[11].

In 1361, Bennet de Ulveſcroft gave 12 meſſuages and 12 yard lands at Shenton, by conſent of Thomas de Aſtley and Elizabeth his wife, to the priory of Ulveſcroft[12].

Sept. 22, 1366. Radulphus procurator magiſter Hamonis Beleres, juris civilis profeſſoris, octoginta duorum annorum & amplius, exhibuit, &c. quod magiſter Hamo habet ſubdecanatum in eccleſiâ Lincoln', taxatum ad LX marcas. Item habet penſionem annuam de priore & conventu monaſterii de Ulveſcroft, pro bono ſervitio eis impenſo; viz. XL libras[13].

William the third lord Ferrars of Groby, by his laſt will, dated June 1, 1368, bequeathed his body to be buried in the conventual church of our Lady at Ulveſcroft, giving £100. to be diſtributed to poor people, and for his funeral expences, whereat he appointed ſhould be five tapers, four morters, and 24 torches[14].

In 1371, it was found that William de Ferrars of Groby, at his death, held the advowſon of the priory of Ulveſcroft[15]; and in 1382, that Henry de Ferrars held it[16].

In 1445, it was found that William the fifth and laſt lord Ferrars of Groby, died ſeiſed of this advowſon[17]. By his teſtament, dated May 17, 1445, he bequeathed his body to be buried in the priory of Ulveſcroft; and died the next day[18].

In 1457, Edward de Grey, knt. lord Ferrars of Groby, in right of his wife Elizabeth, grand-daughter and heir to the laſt-named William, died ſeiſed of the advowſon of the priory of Ulveſcroft, value 10 marcs[19].

In 1465, the priories of Ulveſcroft and Charley were united, by the conſent of their reſpective patrons, ſir John Bourchier, knight, and dame Elizabeth his wife, who was grand-daughter and heireſs of the laſt-named William lord Ferrars of Groby.

"Uniuntur, appropriantur, & annectantur, prioratus de Charley & de Ulveſcroft, de conſenſu patroni, viz. Johannis Bourghchier militis, & domine

---

[1] Collectanea, vol. I. p. 34. Dugdale, Mon. Angl. vol. II. p. 362.

[2] Ibid.

[3] Eſch. 53 Hen. III. No. 36. Leic.

[4] William de Ferrars gave the prior of Charley 30 acres of land in Milneghes, and Alan la Zouch 1 meſſuage in Snepeſheved, and the advowſon of the chapel of Mansfeld. Rot. Pat. 1 Edw. II. p. 1. m. 14.

[5] Cartæ Antiquæ in Muſ. Brit. 111 G. 5.

[6] Ibid. G. 6.

[7] From the original, formerly in the hands of Mr. S. Roper. See the ſeal, fig. 4.

[8] Ibid. See fig. 5.

[9] Reg. D'alderby.

[10] Ad quod dampn. 34 Edw. III.

[11] Ibid. 42 Edw. III.

[12] MS. Chetwynd.

[13] Reg. Langham, fol. 27. b.

[14] Dugdale, Bar. Angl. vol. I. p. 268.

[15] Eſch. 45 Edw. III. 1371, No. 22, Leic.

[16] Eſch. 11 Ric. II. No. 26, Leic.

[17] Eſch. 23 Hen. VI. 1444.

[18] Dugdale, Bar. Angl. vol. I. p. 269.

[19] Eſch. 36 Hen. VI.

Elizabethe uxoris ejus, heredis domini de Ferrars de Groby; dat' 5 Nov. 5 Edw. IV.; de conſenſu etiam Will'i Witham, LL.D. archidiaconi Leic'; reſervatâ ſibi & ſucceſſoribus archidiaconis annuali penſione 3s̄. 4d̄. pro indemnitate dicti prioratûs de Charley, per priorem & conventum de Ulveſcroſte & ſucceſſores ſuos annuatim ſolvend' [1]."

In 1525, king Henry VIII. made a leaſe for 21 years of the manor of Cheylesmore, co. Warwick, with the herbage of the park and conies there, to Geffrey Whalley, prior of Ulveſcroft, rent 13*l.* 9*s.* 5*d.* ob'.[2].

In 1578, Benedict Wilſon, gent. was cited to ſhew by what title he poſſeſſed the ſite of the priory of Ulveſcroft[3].

Aug. 16, 1593, Richard Everard, gent. died ſeiſed of three meſſuages, one cottage, ſix crofts, and twelve virgates of land, called Ulveſcroft land, held of the queen by the ſervice of a fortieth part of one knight's fee[4].

The priory of Ulveſcroft was returned by the commiſſioners to be worth, in ſpiritualities and temporalities, according to Dugdale and Bacon's Liber Regis, the clear annual ſum of £83. 10*s.* 6½*d.*[5]; according to Speed, £101. 3*s.* 10½*d.*

Ulveſcroft was of courſe ſuppreſſed in 1534, among the ſmaller abbeys, &c.; but (in conſequence, probably, of the following recommendation from Mr. Giffard, one of the commiſſioners for viſiting religious houſes, addreſſed to the lord Cromwell) it was eſpecially re-founded by king Henry VIII.

"The ſure knowledge I have had always in your indifference, giveth me boldneſs to write to you in the favour of the houſe of Woulſtorp; the governor whereof is a very good huſband for the houſe, and well beloved of all the inhabitants thereunto adjoining, a right honeſt man; having eight religious perſons[6], being prieſts, of right good converſation, and living religiouſly, having ſincere qualities of virtue, as we have not found the like in no other place; for, there is no one religious perſon there, but that he can and doth uſe either embrothering, or writing books with very fair hand, making their own garnements, carving, painting, or graffyng; the houſe without any ſlander or evil fame, and ſtanding in a waſte ground very ſolitary, keeping ſuch hoſpitality, that, except by ſingular good proviſion, it could not be maintained with half ſo much land more as they may ſpend; ſuch a number of the poor inhabitants nigh thereunto daily relieved, that we have not ſeen the like, having no more land than they have. God be even my judge, as I do write unto you the truth, and none otherwiſe to my knowledge, which very pity alone cauſeth me to write! The premiſſes whereof conſidered, in moſt humble wiſe I beſeech you to be a mean unto the king's majeſty for the ſtanding of the ſaid Woulſtorp, whereby his grace ſhall do a myche gracious and a meritorious act for the relief of his poor ſubjects there; and ye ſhall be ſure, not only to have the continual prayers of thoſe religious perſons there, but alſo the hearty prayer of all the inhabitants within four or five miles about that houſe. And this, for lack of wytt, I am bold to write unto you in the pleynes of my heart, as unto him that of all living creatures I have moſt aſſured and faithful truſt in. So knoweth our Lord God; who have you in his moſt merciful tuition! From Garadon, the xixth day of June. Your bounden bedeman at commandmant, George Gyffard [7]."

Among the deeds belonging to the manor of Ulveſcroft, there is a copy of letters patent, dated the 30th January, 1536-7, made and granted to the prior of the houſe or priory of the Holy Trinity and Bleſſed Mary of Alwayſcroft, or Olveſcroft, which, after reciting an act paſſed previous to the 4th day of February preceding, amongſt other things enacting, "that all monaſteries and priories, and other religious houſes whatever, not poſſeſſed of lands, &c. &c. beyond the clear annual value of £200, to be taken and conſtrued according to their clear value in the Exchequer, ſhould in right belong to, and be at the diſpoſal of the crown," do direct and declare, that "the ſaid Priory of Alwayſcroft, of the order of St. Auguſtin, ſhall for ever continue in its ſame body corporate, and in its eſſential ſtate, quality, &c. as well in poſſeſſions, as all other things, as it was at the time of making the ſaid act, without ſuppreſſion, or diſſolution in any manner by authority of the ſaid act." They likewiſe appoint Edward Dalbye, profeſſor of the order of St. Auguſtin, to continue prior of the ſaid priory, and the ſame religious perſons to be the convent of the ſaid houſe, who belonged to it at the time of paſſing the ſaid act, and were not ſince ſeparated from it.

Exemplification of the letters patent granted by Henry VIII. in 1536-7 to the priory of the Holy Trinity and Bleſſed Mary of Ulveſcroft.

"Elizabetha, Dei gratiâ, Anglie, Francie, et Hibernie regina, Fidei defenſor; &c. Omnibus ad quos preſentes litere pervenerint, ſalutem. Inſpeximus irrotulamentum quarundam literarum patentium gerentium dat' trigeſimo die Januarii, anno regni perchariſſimi patris noſtri Henrici Octavi, nuper regis Anglie, viceſimo octavo, priori domûs ſive prioratûs Sancte Trinitatis et Beate Marie de Ulveſcrofte, fact' et conceſſ', in rotulis Cancellarie noſtre irrotulatum, in hec verba: "Rex omnibus ad quos &c. ſalutem. Cum per quendam actum in Parliamento noſtro apud Lond', tertio die Novembris, anno regni noſtri viceſimo primo inchoatum, et deinde uſque Weſtmin' adjornatum, et per diverſas prorogationes uſque ad et in quartum diem Februarii ultimum preteritum continuatum, et tunc ibidem tentum, inter alia inactatum exiſtit, quod nos haberemus et gauderemus, nobis et heredibus noſtris in perpetuum, omnia et ſingula monaſteria et prioratus, et alias domos religioſas monachorum, canonicorum, et monialium, quibuſcunque generibus ſive diverſitate regularum ſive ordinum vocarentur ſive novarentur, que non habeant terras, tenementa, redditus, decimas, portiones, et alia hereditamenta ultra clarum annuum valorem ducentarum librarum, dictos annuales claros valores dictarum monaſticorum ac prioratuum capiendos ac conſtruendos ſecundùm clarum valorem in curiâ noſtrâ; et ſimili modo quod haberemus &c. nobis et heredibus noſtris omnes et omnimodos exitus et circuitus earundem religioſarum domorum, ac omnia et ſingula maneria, &c. &c. et alia hereditamenta quecunque, eiſdem monaſteriis ſive, &c. non habentibus, ùt predicitur, terras vel &c. ultra predictum annuum valorem ducentum librarum, pertinentia ſive ſpectantia, adeo plenè, et integrè prout abbates, priores, et alii gubernatores hujuſmodi monaſteriorum, vel prioratuum, adtunc illa habuerunt aut habere debuerunt in jure domorum ſuarum; habend' et tenend' omnia et ſingula premiſſa, cum omnibus ſuis juribus, &c. &c. nobis, heredibus et ſucceſſoribus noſtris, in perpetuum, adinde faciend' et utend' noſtras proprias voluntates. Cumque tamen in actu predicto provideatur, quod nos aliquo et quocunque tempore poſt confectionem actûs illiùs valeamus, et potuiſſemus ad beneplacitum noſtrum ordinare, conſtituere, et declarare per litenas noſtras patentes ſub magno ſigillo conficiendas, quod ille et tales hujuſmodi predictarum domorum religioſarum quas ſupprimendas et diſſolvendas eſſe noluiſſemus, ceſſent, perſeverarent, ſtarent, continuarent, et permanerent in iiſdem ſuis corporibus corporat', ac in iiſdem ſuis eſſentialibus ſtatu, qualitate, conditione, robore, et effectu, tam in poſſeſſionibus quam aliter, prout eſſent et fuiſſent ante confectionem actûs predicti, abſque ſuppreſſione ſive diſſolutione earundem, aut alicujus partis inde, pretextu et auctoritate ejuſdem actûs; et quod qualicunque talis hujuſmodi ordinatio et declaratio per nos ſic facienda et ordinanda eſſet

---

[1] Ex Libro Memorandorum Johannis Chedworth, epiſcopi Lincoln', fol. 95.

[2] Dugdale's Warwickſhire, p. 90.

[3] Mich. Rec. 20 Eliz. Rot. 67.

[4] Eſch. 36 Eliz. Aug. 16.

[5] For the particulars, ſee the original Survey in the Firſt Fruits office.

[6] See a fac ſimile of the names of the prior and his ſeven companions, in Plate CXLII.

[7] Cotton MSS. Cleopatra E. IV. p. 213, 1539.

bona, ſecura, et effectualis, capitalibus gubernatoribus hujuſmodi religioſarum domorum, quas ſupprimendas et diſſolvendas eſſe noluiſſemus, et ſucceſſoribus ſuis, juxta et ſecundùm tenores et effectus literarum patentium inde conficiend', aliquâ re, ſive, &c. in actu predicto in contrarium inde factis non obſtantibus, prout in actû predicto inter alia plenius continetur. Pretextu cujus quidem actûs, domus ſive prioratus Sancte Trinitatis et Beate Marie de Ulveſcroft, Lincoln' dioceſi, in comitatu noſtro Leiceſtrie, pro eo quod non habet terras, &c. &c. ultra dictum clarum annuum valorem ducentarum librarum, prout in dictâ Curiâ noſtrâ plane liquet, in manibus et diſpoſitione noſtris jam exiſtit, utrum diſſolvetur ſecundum formam et effectum actus predicti, an permaneret, &c. in ſuo priſtino et eſſentiali ſtatu, &c. prout ante confectionem actûs predicti fuit. Nos, volentes dictam domum ſive prioratum Sancte, &c. de Ulveſcroft predict', pro diverſis cauſis, &c. nos ad preſens ſpecialiter moventibus, in ſuo priſtino eſſentiali ſtatu, &c. permanere, continuare, prout ante confectionem actûs pred' fuit, ac prout eſſet ſi actus iſte factus non fuiſſet. Sciatis igitur, quod nos, ob favorem quem erga domum ſive prioratum de Ulveſcroft predict', quod non extenditur in terris, tenem', et aliis hereditam' ſuis ad annuum valorem ducent' librarum, in com' predicto, ordinis Sancti Auguſtini, Lincoln' dioc', gerimus et habemus, et ut prior et religioſe perſone ejuſdem prioratûs divino cultu ibidem celebrando devotiùs intendant, hoſpitalitatemque et alia pietatis opera ibidem uberiùs exerceant, de gratiâ noſtrâ ſpirituali, ac ex certâ ſcientiâ et mero motu noſtris, ordinavimus, &c. ac per preſentes, quantum in nobis eſt, origimus et renovamus, &c. quod predict' domus ſive, &c. de Ulveſcrofte predict' in perpetuum continuabit, ſtabit, permanebit, in eodem ſuo corpore corporat', ac in eodem ſuo eſſentiali ſtatu, gradu, qualitate, et conditione, tam in poſſeſſionibus quam in omnibus aliis rebus tam ſpiritualibus quam temporalibus et mixtis, prout fuit tempore confectionis actûs predict', aut aliquo tempore ante confectionem actûs predicti, abſque ſuppreſſione ſive diſſolutione aliquali ejuſdem domûs ſive, &c. de Ulveſcroft predict', aut alicujus partis vel parcelle inde, vigore et auctoritate actûs predicti. Et alteriùs, de uberiori gratiâ ſpeciali, conceſſimus, ac per preſentes concedimus, quod Edwardus Dalbye, profeſſor ordinis Sancti Auguſtini, ſit deinceps prior dicte domûs ſive, &c. de Ulveſcroft predict', deinceps habeatur, reputetur, et acceptetur, eiſdem modo, formâ, qualitate, gradu, conditione, dignitate, ſtatu, et robore, prout idem Edwardus 4° Februarii ult' preterito aut antea fuit; et quod omnes alie religioſe perſone ejuſdem domûs ſive, &c. de Ulveſcroft predict' modo exiſtentes, et que 4° Februarii ult' predicto ibidem, et jam a dicto conventu non ſeparantur, ſint deinceps conventus ejuſdem domûs ſive, &c. et pro conventu ejuſdem domûs ſive, &c. deinceps habeantur, &c. eiſdem modo, formâ, &c. prout dicto Februarii 4° ult' preterito aut antea fuerunt; et quod predict' Edwardus, et religioſe perſone predict', et omnes ſucceſſores ſui, habeant et habebunt hujuſmodi et eandem ſucceſſionem in omnibus, et per omnia, prout ante dictum Februarii 4° habuerunt et habere debuerunt, aut prout habuiſſent aut, &c. &c. ſi actus predict' factus non fuiſſet; et quod predict' Edwardus per nomen prioris dicte domûs ſive, &c. de Ulveſcroft predict', et ſucceſſores ſui priores dicte domûs ſive, &c. ſint deinceps perſone habiles implacitare et implacitari in omnibus placitis, ſectis, querelis, actionibus, petitionibus, tam realibus quam perſonalibus et mixtis, et ab quibuſcunque curiis et locis, ac coram quibuſcunque juducibus ſive juſticiariis, tam ſpiritualibus quam temporalibus, licet tangat nos et heredes noſtros, et ad faciendum, exercendum, et exequendum omnia et ſingula alia quecunque, ut priores dicte domûs ſive, &c. de Ulveſcroft predictâ, prout feciſſent aut facere potuiſſent ante confectionem actûs predict', aut prout feciſſent, &c. ſi idem actus minimè factus et editus fuiſſet; et quod predict' Edwardus et religioſe perſone predict' ut prior et conventus domûs ſive prioratûs Sancte Trinitatis et Beate Marie de Ulveſcrofte, et ſucceſſores ſui priores et conventus domûs ſive prioratûs illius, habeant, gaudeant, et teneant, et habere poſſint et valeant in perpetuum, totam predict' domum ſive, &c. de Ulveſcroft predictâ, necnon eccleſie ſcitum, cemiterium, &c. &c. eccleſie ejuſdem, ac omnia et ſingula maneria, terras, tenementa, &c. &c. et alias res quaſcunque, tam ſpiritualia quam temporalia, eidem domui ſive prioratui quoviſmodo ſpectantia ſive pertinentia, eiſdem modo et formâ prout haberent, gauderent, tenerent, aut habere, &c. potuiſſent et valerent, ſi actus predictus factus ac editus non fuiſſet. Et, pro majore ſecuritate de et in premiſſis prefato priori et conventui domûs ſive prioratûs de Ulveſcroft et ſucceſſoribus ſuis adhibenda, ſciatis inſuper, quod nos, de uberiori gratiâ noſtrâ ſpeciali, dedimus et conceſſimus, ac per preſentes, &c. prefato priori dicte domûs ſive, &c. de Ulveſcroft predict', necnon totum ſcitum, fundum, ambitum, precinctum, circuitum, eccleſiam, campanilia, et cemiterium ejuſdem domûs ſive, &c. ac omnia et ſingula dominica, maneria, meſſuagia, terras, tenementa, boſcos, ſubboſcos, redditus, reverſiones, ſervicia, feoda militaria, ward', maritagia, rellevia, eſcaet', warrennas, ſtagna, vivaria, piſcarias, copicias, rectorias, vicarias, advocationes et preſentationes eccleſiarum, capellarum, et cantariarum, terras, glebas, penſiones, portiones, decimas, oblationes, curias letas, viſus franci plegi, libertates, juriſdictiones, franchiſias, ac alia jura, poſſeſſiones, ac hereditamenta quecunque, eidem domui ſive prioratui ſpectantia ſive pertinentia, et que predict' prior, et conventus 4° Februarii ult' predict', aut antea vel poſtea, in jure domûs ſive prioratûs illius, habuerunt, tenuerunt, vel gaviſi fuerunt, et que ad manus noſtras robore et pretextu actûs predict' devenerunt et devenire debuerunt, adeo plenè ac integrè, ac in tam amplis modo ac formâ, prout dictus prior et conventus dicto 4° Februarii ult' preterito, et ante confectionem actûs predict', in jure domûs ſive prioratûs predict' illa habuerunt, &c. et adeo plenè et integrè, ac in tam amplis modo ac formâ, prout illa robore, pretextu, &c. actûs predict' ad manus noſtras devenerunt, aut in manibus noſtris jam exiſtunt, vel exiſtere deberent; habend' et tenend' predict' domum, ſive, &c. de Ulveſcroft predictâ, ac omnia et ſingula cetera premiſſa, cum ſuis juribus, pertinenciis, et commoditatibus univerſis, prefato Edwardo, priori dicte domûs ſive prioratûs illius, et conventui ejuſdem loci, et ſucceſſoribus ſuis, in puram et perpetuam elemoſinam in perpetuum, de nobis, heredibus et ſucceſſoribus noſtris, ut de fundatione noſtrâ, et non aliter; ſolvend' et faciend' capitalibus gubernatoribus terrarum et tenement' predictorum, et ceterorum premiſſorum, redditus et ſervicia inde eis et eorum cuilibet debita et de jure conſueta: Proviſo ſemper, et prefatus prior et conventus unanimi conſenſu pro ſe et ſucceſſoribus ſuis per preſentes concedunt nobis et heredibus noſtris, quod predicti prior et conventus, et ſucceſſores ſui in perpetuum, ſolvant, aut ſolutum faciant, nobis, heredibus et ſucceſſoribus noſtris, omnes decimas et primos fructus, quotieſcunque evenire contingunt, eodem modo et formâ, ac ſi dicta domus ſive prioratus nunquam ſuppreſſus, diſſolutus, ſive datus nobis per actum predict' non fuiſſet, ac ſecundùm vim, formam, et effectum cujuſdam actûs Parliamenti pro decimis et primis fructibus editi et proviſi. Et dictus prior et conventus concedunt per preſentes, quòd ipſi et ſucceſſores ſui in perpetuum benè et fideliter cuſtodiant et obſervabunt omnes et omnimodas regulas, ordinationes, conſtitutiones, et ſtatuta, per nos ut ſupremum caput Anglicane eccleſie, ſive miniſtros ſuos, et ſucceſſores ſuos, bonum regimentum dicti prioratûs et religioſorum virorum ejuſdem prioratûs concernentia ſive tangentia, in poſterum providenda, aſſignanda, et appunctuanda. Eo quod expreſſa mentio, &c. In cujus, &c. Teſte Rege, apud Weſtm', xxx° die Januarii. Per ipſum Regem, &c.”

Nos autem tenorem irrotulamenti literarum patentium predictarum ad requiſitionem dilecti nobis Bennetti Wilſon, armigeri, duximus exemplificandum per preſentes. In cujus rei teſtimonium has literas noſtras fieri fecimus patentes. Teſte meipſâ, apud Weſtm', quinto die Julii, anno regni noſtri quadrageſimo.

EGERTON BR.”

From the preceding letters patent, it is evident that the convent at this period were poſſeſſed of conſiderable property real and perſonal, as alſo of advowſons, juriſdictions, franchiſes, &c. &c.

Edward Dalby, prior, and nine of his brethren, ſubſcribed the king's ſupremacy, Sept. 17, 1534.

The ſame prior, with brethren of this houſe, by the following inſtrument of ſurrender, dated Sept. 15, 1539, ſubſcribed by them, did finally deliver it up into the king's hands.

"Omnibus, &c. Edwardus Dalby, prior domûs ſive prioratûs Beate Marie Virginis de Ulveſcrofte, in com' Leyc', ordinis Sancti Auguſtini, Lincoln' diœc', et ejuſdem loci conventus, ſalutem in Domino ſempiternam. Noveritis nos, &c. In quorum teſtimonium, nos prefati prior et conventus huic ſcripto ſigillum noſtrum commune appoſuimus, et nomina noſtra ſubſcripſimus. Dat' decimo quinto die menſis Septembris, anno Domini milleſimo quingenteſimo triceſimo nono, et anno dicti metuendiſſimi domini noſtri regis Henrici octavi trigeſimo primo.

Per me Edwardum Dalby, priorem.
Thomas Wymondeſwold.
Per me Ricardum Eglate.
Willielmus Smythe.
Thomas Maſſon.
Per me Willielmum Belton.
Per me Willielmum Bland.
Per me Georgium Smythe[1].

Et memorandum, quod, die & anno predictis, venerunt predicti prior & conventus, in domo ſuâ capitulari apud Ulveſcrofte predictam, coram Johanne London clerico, pretextu commiſſionis dicti domini regis in hâc parte directe, & recognoverunt ſcriptum predictum, ac omnia & ſingula in eodem contentas in formâ predictâ[2]."

PRIORS.

Walter de Ulveſcroft, 1260.
Robert de Gaddeſby, 1276.
John of Normanton, elected 1304.
John Whatton, 1466.
—— Whalley, 1518.
Edward Dalby, 1534.

In Pope Nicholas's Valor 1291, the temporalities of Ulveſcroft in Leiceſterſhire[3] were thus rated:

In Gartre deanery they had	0	8	9
In Goſcote	6	13	4
In Akele	4	18	0
In Sparkenhoe	0	10	6
In Gudlakſton	1	2	10
	£13	13	5

They had 70 acres in Groby, and the advowſon of Sitheſton[4]; the appropriation of the church of Sitheſton[5]; tenements in Anſty, Cropeſton, Sitheſton, Bradgate, and Staunton[6]; meſſuages and lands in Sitheſton, Coſington, and Charnwood[7]; and tenements in Sheinſton[8].

At Stanford on Sore, co. Notts, they had alſo a meſſuage and lands to the annual value of £1. 6*s*.[9], with the advowſon of the church[10]; the church of Bunny (Bonye)[11], with three bovates of lands in that town[12].

It is evident, from a conveyance of the remainder of a term in them to Robert Peſhall, eſq. dated 1616, that the manor of Staunton-under-Bardon, and ſome lands in Thornton, were parcel of the poſſeſſions of the priory at its diſſolution. Theſe are expreſsly ſaid to have been granted to the hoſpital of The Savoy, founded by Henry VII; and a leaſe was granted by that hoſpital to John Barbor, ſervant to the chaplain of the ſaid hoſpital, in the 4th and 5th years of Philip and Mary, for 99 years; and, after various aſſignments over, was ſold to Robert Peſhall by Liſle Cave, eſq. in 1616, for £7500. The annual reſerved rent under this leaſe was only £5. 15*s*. 6*d*.

From what is incidentally mentioned in deeds of a later date, it appears that, before the final diſſolution of the priory, the ſaid priory came into the hands of ſir Richard Cromwell, knight, by a leaſe made by the laſt prior, Dalbye; who, after the ſurrender of the ſaid priory, ſold the leaſe to ſir Andrew Judd, knt. who had before purchaſed the fee ſimple from the earl of Rutland, and who alſo purchaſed from the Crown a leaſe of the ſite of Charley.

The ſite and demeſne lands of this monaſtery were of the yearly value, at the time of its final diſſolution, of £20. 16*s*. 4*d*.; out of which, beſides other deductions, there was an annual penſion of £3 to the prior of Shene in Surry[13].

The following penſions were aſſigned on the ſurrender of the priory: To Edward Dalbye, late prior, £20.; Thomas Maſen, William Belton, £6. each; Thomas Maſſye, ſub-prior, Richard Eglott, William Ellaud, £5. 13*s*. 4*d*. each; William Smythe, £5. 6*s*. 8*d*.; and Henry Smythe Morice, 40*s*.[14]

The priories of Ulveſcroft and Charley, with all the lands belonging to them, were granted in 1543 to Thomas Manners earl of Rutland, who paſſed it then ſoon after to ſir Andrew Judd, lord mayor of London in 1550; who in that year aliened them to Henry duke of Suffolk, who, by indenture dated 20 May, 1552, let Charley to Iſabella Gibſon, widow, for 20 years, at £16. a year. After the attainder of the ſaid duke, the ſite of this priory again reverted to the Crown; and, by various public documents during the reign of king Edward VI. and of queen Mary, it appears that Frediſwide Strelley, widow, had divers grants of manors and lands in the counties of York, Leiceſter, and Lincoln; amongſt which was the ſite of the priory of Ulveſcroft and its appurtenances[15].

In 1553, here remained in charge £2. in fees, and £15 in annuities, and the following penſions: To Thomas Maſſey and William Ellaunde, £5. 13*s*. 4*d*. each; Richard Eglett and William Smyth, £5. 6*s*. 8*d*. each; and Henry Smith, £2.[16]

In 1554, a record occurs in the Exchequer, "De literis Regis Edwardi Sexti patentibus, Fredeſwide Strelley, vidue, de ſcitu nuper prioratûs de Ulveſcroft, vel Olveſcroft[17]."

Next in order are letters patent, 3d and 4th Philip and Mary, reciting letters patent of queen Mary, of 23d May, in the firſt year of her reign, wherein ſhe granted the late Priory of Alwayſcroft, and all that capital houſe called Charley, in the county of Leiceſter, with the appurtenances and lands to them belonging, with the privileges of free warren, &c. &c. to Fredeſwide Strelley, widow of Robert Strelley, eſq.[18] of Great Bowden in Leiceſterſhire, and one of the ladies of the queen's privy chamber, and to her heirs and aſſigns for ever, “ to be held of the ſaid queen in capite by knight's ſervice; to wit, by the fortieth part of one knight's fee, at and under the yearly rent of £20. at Lady-day and Michaelmas in equal portions.”

---

[1] See the ſeal, Plate CXLII. fig. 6.

[2] Rymer. Fœd. tom. XIV. p. 660. ex Clauſ. 31 Hen. VIII. p. 3, n. 28.

[3] Printed Valor, pp. 67. 69. b.

[4] Pat. 17 Edw. II. p. 1. m. 9.

[5] Pat. 23 Edw. III. p. 1. m. 17 vel 18. Pat. 35 Edw. III. p. 1. m. 8.

[6] Pat. 42 Edw. III. p. 2. m. 3.

[7] Pat. 16 Ric. II. p. 1. m. 12. & 34.

[8] Pat. 46 Edw. III. p. 1. m. 14.

[9] Printed Valor, pp. 312. b. 339. b.

[10] Plac. de Banco 4 Edw. I. Trin. Rot. 80. Pat. 29 Edw. I. m. 9. vel 10. Pat. 35 Edw. I. m. . . Thoroton, p. 34. Pat. 46 Edw. III. p. 2. m. 13. vel 14. Pat. 48 Edw. III. p. 1. m. 8. Eſch. Nottingh. 16 Ric. II. p. 1. n. 115. Pat. 18 Ric. II. p. 1. m. 13.

[11] Pat. 11 Edw. III. p. 1. m. 8. vel 9. Pat. 23 Edw. III. p. 1. m. 8.

[12] Pat. 2 Hen. IV. p. 3. m. 6.

[13] Miniſter's Accompts, 31 Hen. VIII. Augmentation Office.

[14] Willis, Abbeys, vol. II. Appendix, p. 17.

[15] 1 Pars Original. 1 Mariæ, Rot. 37; and 4 Pars Original. 3 & 4 Phil. & Mar. Rot. 9.

[16] Willis, Mitred Abbeys, vol. II. Appendix, p. 114.

[17] Hil. Rec. 1 & 2 Phil. and Mar. Rot. 25.

[18] Mr. Strelley died Jan. 24, 1554-5 (not 1553-4, as ſtated in vol. II. p. 491); for, in December 1554, he obtained the following grant: "To all and ſinguler as well kinges, herauldes, and officers of armes, as nobles, gentilmen, and others, which theſe preſentes ſhall ſee or heere, William Heruye, eſquire, otherwiſe called Clarencieulx principall heraulde and king of armes of the Southe, Eaſte, and Weaſte parties of Englande from the ryuer of Trente Southwarde, ſendith due comendac'ons and greatinge. Foraſmuch as auncientlie, from the begynnynge, the valiaunte and vertuous actes of excellent parſons have been com'endid to the worlde with ſondrye monumentes and remembraunces of theare good deſeartes, emonges the which one of the chefiſte and moſt uſuall hath ben the bearinge of ſignes and tokens in ſhildes, called Armes, the which ar none other things then euidences and demonſtrac'ons of prowes and valoure diuerſlie diſtributed accordinge to the qualleties and deſeartes of the parſons; that ſuch ſignes and tokens of the diligent, faithfull, and cowragiouſe, myght apeare before the negligent, cowarde, and Theſe latter letters patent were granted to Frediſwide Strelley, upon her having made a ſurrender of the former letters patent to the queen. The occaſion of this ſurrender was, that (owing to the late priory having demiſed various lands upon leaſe, &c. and other circumſtances) the lands given to the ſaid Frediſwide Strelley were not ſpecified in the firſt letters patent with ſufficient exactneſs to prevent diſpute, eſpecially about the hereditary lands of the late duke of Suffolk, and thoſe parcel of the late priory. In theſe laſt letters patent, which are directed to be made out, and wholly completed, without any expence whatever to the ſaid Frideſwide, the lands are particularly ſpecified, and are expreſſly ſaid to have belonged to Henry late duke of Suffolk, and to have been forfeited to the crown by his attainder.

Frediſwide Strelley paid £20. rent yearly for the priory of Ulveſcroft in 4 and 5 of Philip and Mary, as appears by a quietus in the poſſeſſion of Peter Le Neve, Norroy.

Other letters patent under the great ſeal, dated Feb. 26, 4 and 5 Philip and Mary, were likewiſe granted to the above Frediſwide Strelley, appointing eight commiſſioners, therein named, “ perſonally to view, enquire, and ſet out, by the oaths of proper perſons taken before jurors, the true metes and boundaries between the lands, woods, and waſtes, which belonged to the late priory of Ulveſcroft, and thoſe in the manors of Groby, Markfield, Whitwick, Shepeſheved, Newtown, and Bowmanor, then in poſſeſſion of Adrian Stokes, eſq. and Frances his wife, in right of the ſaid Frances, and for the life of the ſaid Frances, who was wife of the ſaid Henry late duke of Suffolk, and at her deceaſe reverting to the crown, in conſequence of the ſaid duke having been convicted of high treaſon.”

The letters patent, or exemplification of commiſſion (the deed is of great length), begin thus:

“ Philippus & Maria, Dei gratiâ, rex & regina Anglie, Hiſpaniarum, Francie, &c. Omnibus ad quos, &c. ſalutem. Inſpeximus quandam petitionem per Fredeſwidam Strelley, viduam, coram nobis in cancellariâ noſtrâ nuper exhibitam, & in Filaciis ejuſdem Cancellarie reſidentem, in hec verba: “ To the right reverend father in God Nicholas archepyſshoppp of Yorke and lord chauncellor of Ingland. In moſt humble wiſe beſeecheth your grace your dayly oratrix Frediſwide Strelley, widow, one of the gentlewomen of the queene's majeſtie's moſt honorable pryvy chambre; that whereas it hath pleaſed the king and queene's majeſties, by their moſt gracious letters patent, bearing date the ſyxtene day of March, in the 3d and 4th yeres of their reignes, to grant unto your ſaid oratrix, and hyr heirs, the ſeveral ſcytes of the late priory of Olveſcroft, otherwiſe called Ulveſcrofte, and the manſion houſe or capitall meſſuage of Charleye, in the countye of Leiceſter, with all the other lands, medows, paſtures, woods, underwoods, waſts, waters, tythings, commons, liberties, commodities, profits, and hereditaments, and all and ſinguler their appurtenances, unto the ſaid late pryory and capital manſion of Charley, or eyther of them, belonging or appurteyning, ſet, lying, or being within the towns, fields, paryſhes, or hamletts of Olveſcroft, alias, &c. Charley, Ratby, Newtowne, Markefelde, and in the waſte commonly called the Foreſt of Charnwood, or in any of them, to have and to hold unto your ſaid oratrix, and to hyr heires for ever, as fully, hollye, and amplye, and in as large manner and waies, and with all ſuche and the like liberties, privileges, franchyſes, &c. &c. whatever, as the laſt pryor of the ſaid late ſurrendred pryory, or any his predeceſſors or pryors there at any tyme before the ſurrendre of the ſaid late pryory, or as Henry late duke of Suffolke of high treaſon attainted, or any other parſon or parſons had or enjoyed the ſame, and as fully, hollye, and amplye, as the ſaid late pryorye, and other the premiſſes, by meanes of the diſſolution or ſurrendre of the ſaid late pryorye, came or ought to have come unto the hands of the late king of famous memory, king Henry the Eight, father unto our ſaid ſovereign lady, or uuto the hands of the late king, king Edword the Syxt, or to the hands of the king and quene's majeſtie that now are, by reaſon of the diſſolution or ſurrendre of the ſaid late pryory, or by the atteyndre of the ſaid Henry late duke of Suffolke, or by any other meanes, and in the hands of the king and quene's majeſties were, or ought to have bene, as by the ſaid letters patent more at large, among other things, doth and may appear: yet nevertheleſs, for as much as at the time of the diſſolution or ſurrendre of the ſaid late ſurrendered pryory, and ſince the ſurrendre of the ſame, the deeds, charters, wrytings, and evidences, concerning the premiſſes, have been from the poſſeſſion of one man to another in ſuch ſorte conveied and tranſpoſed, that thereby they have been ſo imbeſyled, ſpoyled, loſt, and otherwiſe conſumed, that your ſaid oratrix cannot by any means get the ſight and poſſeſſion of the ſaid evidences, or the perfecte knowledge of the contents of the ſame, by means whereof your ſaid oratrix cannot be perfectly enſtructed, nor otherwiſe attaine to the perfecte knowledge of what lands, tenements, medows, &c. &c. and emoluments did belong and apperteyne unto the ſaid late pryorye or capital manſion, and now of right do belong and apperteyne unto your ſaid oratrix and her heires by force of the ſaid letters patent, except your ſaid oratrix might be thereof inſtructed and informed by ſuch as have been chanons, tenants, or officers, of and in the ſaid late priory, or elſe inhabitants nighe unto the ſame (who, by the meanes of Adryan Stokes, eſq. and the lady Frаunceys grace, ducheſs of Suffolke, late wife unto the ſaid Henry late duke of Suffolke of high treaſon atteynted, and now wife unto the ſaid Adrian, being now ſeiſed in their demeſne as of freehold, in the right of the ſaid lady Frauncys, and for time of the life of the ſaid lady Frauncys, of and in the manors of Groby, Bewmaner, Whitwycke, Shepeſheved, Markefeild, and

---

and ignorant, and be an efficient cawſe to moue, ſtire, and kindle the harttes of men to the ymytac'on of vertue and nobleſſes; euen ſo hath the ſame ben and yet ys continuaallie obſeruid, to the intente that ſuch as haue don com'endable ſeruice to their prince or contrey, eyther in warre or peace, maye both receyue due honor in their liues, and alſo deriue the ſame ſucceſſiulie to their poſteretie after them: And hereuppon beinge enformed, by dyuers gentilmen and credible parſons, that Robert Strelley, of Bowdon, in the countie of Leyceter, eſquire, beinge off the howſe off Strelley, and one of the preuye councell to owre moſt dreade ſouereigne Ladye Queene Marye, hath well meryted; and deſeruid to be in all places of honor and wourſhippe accepted and receyued, as well for his trewe and faithfull ſeruice don to her ſaid Majeſtie at Fremyngham, as alſo for his good and valiaunt ſeruice don in Scotlande, and at the ſeige of Muſtrell, and otherwayes: And, in remembraunce and conſiderac'on thereof, I the ſaid Clarencieulx king of armes, by power and authoretie to myne office annexed and granted by letters pattents under the greate ſeale of Englande, haue increſid his armes, and aſſigned, gyuen, and graunted, unto and for the ſaid Robert Strelley, eſquire, theſe ſame, with the appurtenantes, here after following; that is to ſay; he bearith Paly of ſixe peces, Argent and Azure, a bordure engreiled Ermyns; and to his creaſte, uppon the heaulme, on a wreathe Argent and Azure a Sarzins headd from ſhoulders upwarde ſharnne, heyred and beardid Sables, with a wreath abowte his headde, Argent and Azure, taſſelid Golde, mantellid Gules, doubled Argent, as more plainlie apearith deputed in this margent (Plate CXLIII. fig. 5.); to haue and to houlde the ſaid armes, heaulme, and craſte, unto the ſaid Robert Strelley, eſquire, and to his poſteretie, with theire due difference, to uſe, beare, and ſhewe for euermore, without ympedyment, lett, or interrupc'on of anie perſon or perſons. In wittnes whereof, I the ſaid Clarencieulx kynge of armes haue ſigned theſe preſentes with my hande, and put thereunto the ſeale of myne office, and the ſeale of myne armes. Geuen at London, the xxth of December, in the yeare of our Lorde God 1554, and in the firſt and ſeconde yeares of the reigne of oure Souereignes Phillippe and Marye, by the grace of God, Queene of England, France, Naples, Jeruſalem, and Ireland, defendors of the faithe; princes of Spaine and Cevill, archdukes of Auſtrie, dukes of Myllaine, Burgonye, and Brabant, countes of Haſpurge, Flanders, and Tyroll.

WILL' HERUY, al's Clarencieulx king of armes.”

Newtowne, in the ſaid countye of Leiceſter, the reverſion thereof, after the death of the ſaid lady Frannceys, unto the king and quene's majeſties, and the heires and ſucceſſors of the ſaid quene, belonging and apperteyning) have refuſed, and yet do refuſe, to declare their knowledge touching the premiſſes, unleſs they ſhall be thereunto, by virtue of their oathes and proceſſe out of this honorable court of Chancery, conſtreyned; ſo that the ſaid oratrix and her heires, for lack of inſtruccions, evidences, and witneſſes, as is aforeſaid, if ſuch as now are lyving ſhould be prevented by deaths before ſuch tyme as they have declared their knowledge touching the premiſſes, are lyke to be for ever diſinheryted, excepte remedy be forthwith therefore provided: May it therefore pleaſe your grace, the premiſſes tenderly conſidered, to grant the king and quene's majeſties moſt gracious commiſſion to be dyrected to ſuch men of worſhipp, gravyte, and learning, as by your Grace ſhall be thought mete, thereby willing and commanding them not only to call before them ſuch perſons as can depoſe any thing for declaration of the trouths touching the premiſſes; and the ſaid perſons to examyne upon ſuche artycles and interrogatories as in the ſame commyſſion ſhall be encloſed; but alſo at a certain day, by your Grace to be lymyted, to certifie unto this highe Court of Chancery their doing touching the premiſſes, to the intent the ſame may there remaine for ever of record, in perpetuam rei memoriam: And your ſaid oratrix ſhall dayly pray unto God for the preſervation of your Grace. MAUWOOD." Inſpeximus quoddam breve noſtrum de Dedimus poteſtatem, a curiâ cancellarie noſtre emanen', dilectis nobis Andree Nowell, Johanni Hunt, Henrico Sayvyle, Gulielmo Fawnte, Michaeli Purefoy, Georgio Sherarde, Georgio Vincent, et Libeo Derby, armigeris, eis ſeptem, ſex, quinque, quatuor, vel tribus eorum, ad examinandum teſtes quoſcunque, pro parte predicte Fredeſwide Strelley," &c. &c.

It may be obſerved, that the manor of Ulveſcroft at this day exactly correſponds to the limits aſſigned under this commiſſion; and ſome of the 22 ſtones, which the commiſſioners expreſsly ſay in their report they cauſed to be ſet up in the Foreſt of Charnwood as marks of the boundaries, ſtill remain.

In their anſwer, the commiſſioners deſcribe two cloſes in or near Charley, as "late parcel of the poſſeſſions of the late monaſtery de Pratis in Leiceſter; which two cloſes (by the name of The Oldfield) were demiſed by the ſaid late abbey and convent to one William Barnard, of Barnard in Leiceſterſhire, with all the woods, &c. (ſamples excepted), for the term of 81 years, from Lady-day, 26 Henry VIII. at the yearly rent of £3. 10*s*.

The commiſſioners mention "a particular oak, on which was engraved the ſign of the croſs, then almoſt worn out by age; nevertheleſs appearing to the ſaid jurors upon a view of the ſaid oak." They likewiſe ſpecify another oak, in which were two croſſes ſimilarly circumſtanced. "Little Bawdon caſtle," they ſtate, "lieth at the corner of Fawkner's cloſe, againſt Sir Robert's Croſs. Blackcliff hill lieth above Blackcliff, and cometh up to ſir Robert's Croſs, and goeth down after a gutter towards Maplewell."

Extracts from "the depoſitions and ſayings of divers perſons, ſworn and examined upon the part and behalf of Fredeſwide Strelley, widow, concerning the lands and poſſeſſions, and privileges, of the late diſſolved priory of Ulveſcroft, in the county of Leiceſter, taken April 1, 1558, before Andrew Noell, Henry Sayvyle, William Fawnte, George Vincent, John Hunt, Michael Purefoy, George Sherarde, and Libeus Derby, eſqrs. commiſſioners by virtue of the king and queen's majeſties commiſſion hereunto annexed, to remain in perpetuam rei memoriam."

"Thomas Maſſey, clerk, the laſt ſub-prior of the priory of Ulveſcroft, of the age of 65 years, ſworn and examined, ſaith, to the firſt interrogatory, that 51 years ago he came to the ſaid priory, and there remained two years and a half before his profeſſion there, and there hath inhabited ever ſince, till the diſſolution of the ſaid houſe. And further ſaith, he knoweth the houſe of Charley, for he celebrated the holy maſs there 16 years all together upon Eaſter-day."

To the third interrogatory he ſaith, "that to his knowledge he never knew or underſtood any of the ſaid priors to ſuffer any other perſon but their own ſervants to fell, lop, or carry away, any wood, thorns, furzes, &c. within any of the woods, lands, or waſtes belonging to the ſaid priory; but divers times he hath known divers offenders in the premiſes, who have aſked the prior there for the time being forgiveneſs, and ſo have been forgiven."

To the ſixth interrogatory he ſaith, "that the ſaid prior, time out of mind, hath had a common without number appurtenant to the ſaid priory, in all places throughout all the Foreſt of Charnwood, at all times, and by the whole year, for all their oxen, kine, ſheep, goats, horſes, ſwine, and all other cattle, and pawnage likewiſe for all their ſwine, in ſo much that, at the firſt ſurvey before the ſurrender of the ſaid priory, they had belonging to the convent 300 head of beaſts, 1000 ſheep, and 60 ſwine; and for the ſtaff-holding, he ſaith, that the prior of Ulveſcroft had always a ſhepherd, and a ſwine-herd, who did nothing elſe but followed, and looked to the cattle without contradiction; whereas he knoweth not that any other commoner, except the abbot of Garrodon, and the prioreſs of Gracedewe, had any ſhepherd or ſwine-herd."

To the ſeventh interrogatory he ſaith, "that the ſaid priors, during all his time there, have kept hounds, greyhounds, and hawks, of their own, and did hunt, courſe, and hawk, throughout the waſte of Charnwood, unto the ſaulte of the parks of Bradgate, Groby, and Loughborough, that is to ſay, fallow deer, roe, foxes, hares, &c. and likewiſe did hawke at the patridges and pheaſants; and for thoſe purpoſes they kept a huntſman; and they had a ſpecial grant from Roger therle of Quincye, lord of Groby, to hunt at their pleaſure, by theſe words, uſque ad ſaltum; and that they had free fiſhing in Blackbrooke, from Charley to Shepeſhed mylne, by a grant made by deed, which ſeveral deeds this deponent kept and peruſed."

To the eighth interrogatory he ſaith, "that he left all the deeds and grants belonging to the ſaid priory in ſeveral boxes and coffers, at his departing out of the ſaid late priory at the ſurrender thereof to the commiſſioners for the king, doctor London, maſter George Gifford, and maſter Robert Burgoine." He likewiſe ſaith, "that, about a year after the diſſolution, the ſaid boxes, &c. were found broken open, and moſt of the evidences ſpoiled or deſtroyed."

William Bampkyn, of Belton, aged 57, having been ſervant in the late priory ſince he was eight years old, except that he ſerved the lord Leonard Gray one year, to the ſeventh interrogatory, among other things, ſaith, "that, upon a time about 40 years paſt, lord Thomas marquis Dorſet was offended with prior Whalley for his ſaid hunting; which the ſaid prior underſtanding, went to Bradgate to the ſaid lord marquis, and, amongſt others, took this deponent to attend upon him, and delivered him a box to carry, wherein was a grant, from one of the anceſtors of the ſaid lord, of the liberty of hunting, &c. to the priors of Ulveſcroft. Upon which being produced, this deponent heard the marquis ſay thus: "Well, prior, I have put my red deer forth lately: ſpare them, I pray thee, and ſpare not the fallow deer." He likewiſe ſaith, that prior Dalby, and ſir William Eland, and all the canons, except ſir Thomas Maſſy, ſir Thomas Maſon, and ſir Richard Eglatt, were common hunters."

Robert Conyngham, of Horſepool Grange, in the county of Leiceſter, gent. ſworn and examined to the firſt interrogatory, among other things, depoſeth, "that he hath known the priory of Ulveſcroft and capital meſſuage of Charley by the ſpace of 26 years, and was ſervant there to prior Dalbye at the ſurrender of the ſaid priory, and that he dwelt at Charley one year after the ſaid ſurrender with the ſaid maſter Dalbye, and ſo removed again with him to Ulveſcroft (the ſaid maſter Dalbye then being farmer there, firſt to ſir Richard Cromwell, then to ſir Andrew Judde); and, after the death of the ſaid maſter Dalbye, this deponent was farmer of Ulveſcroft by the ſpace of eight years or more."

To the third interrogatory he ſaith, "that he doth right well know the ſaid hills, waſtes, and outwoods, within the Foreſt of Charnwood, mentioned in the ſaid interrogatory, i. e. Biſhop's hill, Stanywelhill, Moſeley Plain, Hamercliff, the Outwood lying between Hamercliff and Newcloſe, and the Redeſyke, nigh an old mere of ſtones there, and the hill now called Little Bawdon Caſtle, otherwiſe called the Mount of Alderman Haw, Blackcliff Hill, and Greenhill, and every of them. And he knoweth the bounds of the ſaid hills and outwoods; and that the ſaid hills, &c. ever to his remembrance, and as much as by all ways and means that he could learn, were the proper grounds of the ſaid late priory, and ſo have always been reputed, uſed, and taken, &c. &c. But he knoweth of no wood ſold by the ſaid prior, foraſmuch as the whole topwood and underwood growing upon the ſaid waſtes and hills were ſcarce ſufficient to ſuffice the kitchen, brewhouſe, bakehouſe, and other offices of the ſaid houſe, and for hedging the ſaid cloſes; and as for felling any trees by the root, not any other owners of outwood in the ſaid foreſt or waſte uſed commonly ſo to do, becauſe then the ſpring would have been utterly loſt, which the prior ever deſired to maintain, and would ever command his ſervants to fell none but as high as a man, leſt the goats or other cattle ſhould hurt them. And further ſaith, that, never ſince his memory and knowledge of the ſaid ground, any man that ever he knew did, without the conſent, or againſt the will, of the ſaid prior, fell, &c. or carry away, any of the wood, gorſe, &c. growing upon any of the ſaid hills or outwoods; whereas, in all other places of the Foreſt or waſte of Charnwood, as well in the late duke of Suffolk's outwoods as all other men's, the commoners of the Foreſt or waſte of Charnwood do and may, by their cuſtom, fell gorſe at their pleaſure, but only in the ſaid outwoods belonging to the ſaid late priory; which privilege the late duke of Suffolk, after he had bought Ulveſcroft, obſerved and kept, becauſe it belonged to Ulveſcroft." This deponent mentions "a croſs called ſir Robert's croſs, at that time defaced, as being in a plain on the Foreſt near Little Bawdon Caſtle."

To the eighth interrogatory, in his anſwer, he depoſeth, "that at the time the late prior Dalbye was farmer there, after the ſurrender of the priory, and this deponent waiting upon him at Ulveſcroft, there was a cheſt of evidences left by the commiſſioners of the diſſolution in the priory houſe; the which the ſaid Edward Dalbye, at his entry into the farm of the ſite and demeſnes of the ſaid late priory, one year after its diſſolution, found broken open, and the evidences which were therein ſcattered, ſpoiled, and many of the ſeals broken, and the boxes ſpoiled and much diſordered, from the ſtate that he before ſaw them when in the cuſtody of ſir Thomas Maſſey; the which evidences ſo remained ſmally regarded until the ſaid late priory came to the hands and poſſeſſion of ſir Andrew Judde, knight, who, upon variance between the late duke of Suffolk and him (the ſaid duke having directed ſome wood ſold by the ſaid ſir Andrew to a perſon at Markfelde to be carried to Bradgate), having knowledge of the ſaid evidences, cauſed the ſame to be ſearched by the ſaid ſir Edward Dalbye, and one ſir William Eland, canon of the ſaid priory; and afterwards, the ſaid ſir Andrew Judde perceiving the variance about the outwoods to grow between the ſaid duke and him, cauſed ſome of the ſaid writings to be copied into Engliſh on paper, which copies as yet remain; and as to the reſidue of the ſaid writings which were ſo ſcattered and left in the ſaid priory, this deponent, being farmer to the ſaid ſir Andrew Judde of the ſaid priory (next after the ſaid ſir Edward Dalbye), and then bailiff and collector to the king of the rents of the ſaid late priory, and according to his duty, gathered up the ſaid writings, which are yet in his ſafe cuſtody."

Hugh Poole, of Markfelde, yeoman, aged 68 years, cellerer and ſervant to the priory till its diſſolution, to the ſecond interrogatory ſaith, "that he knew the mylne called Sharpcliff, and the dam now re-edified; and that there was a building in Barn-leys, which this deponent knew burnt when king Henry VIII. went to Turwin and Turney (prior Whalley's mother then, for fear of the plague at Markfelde, dwelling there); and that he hath ſeen the walls of an old houſe, and a well, which remains in Packmanheys."

In ſpeaking to the ſixth interrogatory he ſaith, "that the priory every year had a penn on Greenhill in lambing-time, and that the prior had goats going at Brown's goathouſe."

To the ſeventh interrogatory depoſeth, "that in prior Whalley's days there were few red deer in the Foreſt, and that the prior would ever will his ſervants to ſpare them, but not the other; and ſaith he hath brought many fallow deer home to the houſe at Ulveſcroft, which they had taken; and farther ſaith, that he hath divers times, with his lennards that he kept, hawked at the heathcock, pheaſant, &c. &c."

William Worrell, of Syſon, depoſeth, "that he lived with the parſon of Markfelde, who was brother to prior Whalley, and after dwelt and was ſervant to the ſaid prior at Ulveſcroft, and at the priory's parſonage of Syſon."

William Syſon, of the Old Bede-houſe of Leiceſter, aged 72, who was firſt carter, and after baker and brewer at the ſaid priory, to the third interrogatory ſaith, "that when he dwelt in the ſaid priory, and maſter Belton was cellerer, maſter Belton beſought the lord Thomas marquis Dorſet, about 40 years now paſt, that becauſe their outwoods, by means of baking and brewing for the ſaid lord marquis (brewing divers times ten quarters a week), and by means of great expence of wood, which they had in their chambers, kitchen, and other houſes of office, whilſt the lady Elinor, wife to the ſaid lord marquis, lay there, by means whereof their outwoods aforeſaid were ſore ſpoiled, that it might pleaſe his lordſhip to grant unto them ſome of his woods to fell; wherefore the ſaid lord marquis gave land unto the ſaid maſter Belton, and houſe of Ulveſcroft, accordingly."

Thomas Taylor, 10 years ſervant at Ulveſcroft in prior Whalley and prior Dalbye's days, in his anſwer to the third interrogatory ſaith, "that all the ſaid time of 10 years that he was wainman there, this ſaid deponent did no other work almoſt, but only with a wain and a cart carry home ſuch wood, furze, and thorns, as were felled by ſeven perſons kept conſtantly at work for that purpoſe, to the number of from four to eight loads a day, and ſo for the moſt part of the year, during the ſaid 10 years; and that all the wood the priory had without would ſcarce ſerve, and within the prior ſaved his wood."

Robert Everard, gent. depoſeth, "that his (this deponent's) father had the uſe and occupation of all the demeſnes of the ſaid priory, not otherwiſe demiſed, at the hand of ſir Richard Cromwell, knight, for one year only next after the ſurrender thereof."

The above Fredeſwide Strelley, having no iſſue, by indenture dated 1565, entailed the Ulveſcroft eſtate on her nephews John, Bennett (in whom it ultimately veſted), William, and Francis Wilſon, and their heirs male reſpectively; and in default of ſuch, to Peter Newarke, his heirs and aſſigns for ever.

In 1577, it came to John Wilſon; and from a deed of Henry earl of Huntingdon, dated Feb. 15, 1584, it appears that the ſaid earl purchaſed the remainder in fee of the above Peter Newarke, and afterwards ſold his intereſt in the reverſion to the above Wilſon, on the expreſs condition that if the eſtate, or any part of it, ſhould be on ſale during his life-time, he (the ſaid earl) ſhould have the option of purchaſing it at the price that any other perſon would be ready (bonâ fide) to give for it.

In the Regiſter of the pariſh of Lee, near Greenwich, in Kent, are the following entries: "Anne daughter of Ambroſe Wilſon, gent. of Ulveſcrofte, co. Leic. born laſt of February, and baptized March 4 following, and put into this Regiſter by the handwriting of me, Katharine Wilſon, her mother, 1598.

Frideſwide, Sept. 17, 1601.
William, Oct. 14, 1602.
Mary, June 17, 1604."

In 1609, Bennet Wilſon, eſq. and his nephew Ambroſe Wilſon, ſold the Ulveſcroft eſtate, at that time containing, by eſtimation, 1358 acres, and of the clear annual rent of £260. 14*s*. 4*d*. to Robert Peſhall, eſq. counſellor at law (next brother of ſir John Peſhall, bart. of Gorzeley, co. Stafford, and third brother to Thomas Peſhall, eſq. of Horſeley, in that county); whoſe only daughter and heir Elizabeth was married, firſt to ſir Robert Boſvile, knt. of Byana, near Eccleſhall, in Staffordſhire.

Charley was expreſſly included in the grant of Ulveſcroft made by queen Mary to Frediſwide Strelley; but was not included in the purchaſe made by Mr. Peſhall; the lordſhip of Charley having been previouſly ſold, in 1605, by Mr. Bennet Wilſon, to Henry Turvile, eſq. of Aſton Flamvile [1]. Charley (it is preſumed) never paid any quit-rent to the Crown or its aſſigns, as Mr. Peſhall bought Ulveſcroft charged with the whole rent reſerved in the letters patent of queen Mary.

Robert Peſhall, eſq. by deed, dated 28 and 30 March, 1613, (called of Blorepipe, co. Stafford, eſq.) ſettled it on ſir John Leveſon, of Haling in Kent, knt. and Robert Broome, of Walcot, co. Northampton, eſq. with capital meſſuages in Eccleſhall, and certain lands in Eccleſhall and Croxton, co. Stafford, in truſt for ſir Robert Boſvile, of Byana aforeſaid, and of Eynsford in Kent, knt. for life; after to dame Elizabeth Boſvile, if living; if not, to Charles[2] Boſvile their ſon, if living; after to Rachel[2] their daughter.

By an indenture dated in 1623, and a ſchedule annexed, this priory, with many lands in Eccleſhall and other places in Staffordſhire, were delivered to dame Elizabeth Boſvile, daughter and heir of Robert Peſhall; who had to her ſecond huſband ſir Humphrey Style, of Langley, in the pariſh of Beckingham, Kent, cup-bearer to king Charles I. and colonel of all the trained band horſe of the county of Kent.

A licence of alienation to ſir Humphrey Style, knt. and Elizabeth his wife, for the manor of Cold Newton[3], alias Newton Burdet, vel Marmion, to Francis Theobald, eſq. and Edward Kidwell, is dated in April 1627; and includes alſo the priory of Ulveſcroft, with lands in Eccleſhall, Croxton, Little Sugnell, Biſhop's Offley, and Peaſhall, co. Stafford[4].

As a recompence for his many eminent ſervices[5], ſir Humphrey Style was created a baronet, May 20, 1627.

By dame Elizabeth Style, the manor of Cold Newton, by a deed dated Dec. 4, 1639, was given, after her deceaſe[6], to her only ſon Richard[2] Boſvile, who inherited alſo from his mother the manor of Ulveſcroft, with the ſite of the priory; which continued in the poſſeſſion of his lineal deſcendants till 1764, when Charles Boſvile, eſq. of Byana aforeſaid, dying without iſſue[7], bequeathed his Leiceſterſhire eſtate, after the deceaſe of his ſiſter Elizabeth, in fee to Thomas Boſvile, eſq. of Twickenham in Middleſex, and of Braithwell in Yorkſhire; in whoſe family the manor of Ulveſcroft remains.

The names of the family of Boſvile who in ſucceſſion have been owners of Ulveſcroft are theſe:

Sir Robert Boſvile, of Byana, and his wife Elizabeth, daughter and heireſs of Robert Peſhall.
Richard Boſvile.
Robert.
Robert.
Charles, brother of Robert.
Elizabeth, ſiſter of Robert and Charles.
Thomas Boſvile, of Braithwell.
William-Parkin Boſvile, eſq. of Ravenfield Park, co. York, the preſent owner, 1804; to whom, and to his brother the Rev. Thomas Boſvile, it would be ungrateful were I not to acknowledge my obligations.

Arms of Boſvile: Argent, five fuſils conjoined in feſs Gules, in chief three bears heads eraſed Sable. Creſt, a pyed bull, horns and hoofs Or, paſſant behind a buſh proper; Plate CXLII.

The following inſcriptions to the Byana family, who ſo long poſſeſſed this liberty, are on two mural monuments in a ſide chancel of the church at Eccleſhall:

"Near this place
lie the remains of Robert Boſvile, eſq.
and Frances his ſiſter, deſcended from parents, whoſe virtues they inherited
as well as their names.
Their contemporaries need no monument to remind them of their merits;
but poſterity may learn from this inſcription,
that they were perſons of diſtinguiſhed worth.
He was religious without ſuperſtition, and habitually regular without hypocriſy;
affable and condeſcending without meanneſs,
yet ſenſible of his dignity without pride;
never happier than when he contributed to render others happy.
The rich and the poor reſorted to his houſe;
and while the former were elegantly entertained by his hoſpitality, the latter were liberally relieved by his bounty.

---

[1] See before, p. 122.

[2] Charles and Rachel muſt have died young; and Richard, at length ſole heir to his mother, could not have been born when the deed was made.

[3] It does not appear in what way either ſir Humphrey Style or his lady became poſſeſſed of the manor of Cold Newton; which in 1607 was held by ſir William Faunt, knight, and afterward by his ſon George. See before, p. 349.

[4] Ex autographo, penès P. Le Neve.

[5] Thoſe ſervices are beſt expreſſed in the following copy of a paper in the collections of Peter Le Neve, eſq.: "About 11 or 12 years ſince, the late king, for and in conſideration of the long and faithful ſervice done by ſir Humphry Style, knt. and baronet, both to his father and to himſelf, and in recompence of his great expences therein, as alſo for his ſervice in the Proteſtant wars in France, granted unto the ſaid ſir Humphry Style, by letters patent under the then broad ſeal of England, all the incroachments made within and upon his palace at Weſtminſter, reſerving to himſelf and ſucceſſors a clear full fourth part of all the profits that ſhould accrue thereby. Sir Humphry Style, in purſuance of this grant, and the better to diſcover how much was incroached upon the ſaid palace, procured a jury of Middleſex to be impanneled, by whom the bounds and limits of the ſaid palace were, by their verdict, upon the teſtimony of witneſſes then ſworn and examined, found and diſcovered, and an exact and perfect map thereof was drawn, which is now in the cuſtody of the ſaid Humphry Style. After the verdict of the ſaid jury, ſir Humphry Style proceeded by law in the Exchequer againſt ſome of the incroachers, where, after a long ſuit and much charge, at a full hearing, he obtained the judgment of the Court againſt the ſaid incroachers; whereupon the late king granted a commiſſion, under his broad ſeal, to divers lords, giving them power to compound, at reaſonable rates, with ſuch perſons as had ſo incroached upon his ſaid palace. Sir Humphry Style humbly deſires your opinion, whether it be not neceſſary for him to preſent this his caſe to the judgment of the Parliament, the fourth part reſerved by the king now accruing and belonging to them, without whoſe approbation and direction he will not do any thing." Whoſe opinion it was that is here aſked, is not mentioned by Mr. Le Neve; or any farther account given.—Sir Humphrey Style died without iſſue Nov. 10, 1659; and was buried at Beckenham (Haſted, vol. I. p. 86); and, after his death, the old deeds of the priory of Ulveſcroft were given by ſir John Elwill, bart. (who married the heir female of that family) to John Hare, eſq. Richmond Herald; who gave them by will to the Corporation of Kings, Heralds, and Purſuivants, in 1720; but before that time he gave to Peter Le Neve, eſq. Norroy, ſome few deeds relating thereto; ſcilicet, two of William de Ferrars, knt. of lands in the waſte of Charnwood Foreſt, to Richard Nowell, which Nowell after gave to Ulveſcroft (theſe lands, conſiſting of a wood and ſome meadows, are ſeverally called by his name to this day); one of William de Ferrariis; another of William de Ferrariis, ſon of ſir William, of releaſe of rents due to him for lands to Robert prior of Ulveſcroft. P. L. N. (All theſe are now preſerved, amongſt the "Cartæ Antiquæ," in the Britiſh Muſeum.)

[6] Lady Style died 12 Dec. 1644, as appears by an inquiſition, dated 24 Sept. 20 Car. I. wherein every piece of land is particularly named, both here and in Staffordſhire.

[7] His Staffordſhire eſtate he left under the ſame circumſtance to Godfrey Boſville, eſq. of Thorpe and Gunthwait in Yorkſhire. He was ſheriff for the county of Stafford in 1746.

While he was a worthy example to his ſex, ſhe was a pattern to hers
of the virtues that adorn it.
Remarkable for that true politeneſs,
which is the reſult of good nature and good breeding, nothing could equal her modeſty and prudence,
except her charity;
which in her heart was univerſal,
and extenſive in its effects,
After ſhe had finiſhed her courſe in ſuch a manner as made her admired and eſteemed
by all her acquaintance, who were very conſiderable both for their number and quality,
ſhe died full of days and honours, Nov. 3, 1758,
in the 78th year of her age;
fourteen years after her beloved brother,
who departed this life Dec. 31, 1744,
aged 63."

" To the memory of
Charles Boſvile, eſq.
of Byana,
who died Jan 15th, 1764, aged 76,
and Elizabeth Boſvile,
his ſiſter and ſucceſſor,
who died June 14, 1771, aged 85.
They were much eſteemed
for their benevolence,
friendlineſs, and hoſpitality.
The circling years, like giddy viſions, fly,
Alas! but thy good deeds ſhall never die!"

The lordſhip of Ulveſcroft is extra-parochial; conſiſting of four diſtinct incloſures, ſurrounded by the Foreſt, beſides lands of ſome extent adjoining on the lordſhips of Markfield and Newtown. It contains 957 acres of incloſed lands (about 180 acres of which are woodland); and its royalty over the Foreſt includes near 700 acres.

The ſoil is in ſome places wet and ſtony, but in other parts of the beſt nature for the Foreſt land; and is in general very favourable to the growth of wood, chiefly oak and aſh.

It is the cuſtom to perambulate the boundaries of the Liberty every third year. There are within it 14 farm-houſes and cottages, and four freeholds, excluſive of the manor eſtate.

The following articles (among others), drawn up at a court baron held for this manor towards the end of the ſeventeenth century, may ſerve to ſhew what private regulations were at that time adopted reſpecting the uſe of the Foreſt:

" We lay a pain upon each perſon who ſhall have a tup or ram found upon the Foreſt within this Liberty betwixt the 14th of September and the 28th of October, to pay 3*s*. 4*d*.

" We lay a pain of five nobles an acre upon him who ſhall burn gorſe upon the Foreſt within the liberty of Ulveſcroft; and ſo in proportion for a greater or leſs quantity than an acre.

" We lay a pain of 2*s*. a load upon every perſon who ſhall kidd any gorſe upon the Foreſt, and not live within this Liberty.

" We lay a pain upon every perſon who ſhall bring and turn any cattle within this Liberty, and ſhall not live there, of 3*s*. 4*d*. for each offence.

" We lay a pain of 3*s*. 4*d*. upon any one who ſhall oppreſs the common by keeping more upon it in the ſummer than he can winter upon the ground by which he claims ſuch right.

" We lay a pain of 3*s*. 4*d*. upon any one who ſhall keep any ſcabbed or infectious horſes or ſheep upon the Foreſt."

A wood called Copt-oak or Coped-oak (probably from a venerable oak antiently and ſtill ſo called, and nearly adjoining it on the Foreſt) ſtands on the brow of a highly-elevated ſituation, and is an object of view at a very conſiderable diſtance. At the North-weſt corner of a wood called Stanywells are the remains of a tree, which within theſe few years by ſome accident has been deſtroyed, round which a regular mound and trench are diſcernible; where, it is thought, the manor courts for this liberty uſed formerly to be holden.

In an account of the year 1705, of "Rents formerly in charge before the Clerk of the Pipe," is this entry:

	£.	s.	d.
Site of the late priory of Ulveſcroft, paid by Robert Boſvile, eſq. —	20	0	0

A few years ſince there was a warren on the Eaſt ſide of the liberty in the Foreſt, called Ulveſcroft Warren[1]; which in 1738 appears to have been let on a leaſe for 21 years, but of which there are now hardly any remains. An adjoining incloſure or encroachment on the Foreſt points out its ſite.

In 1722, Henry Burges and John Freier polled as freeholders from the lordſhip of Ulveſcroft; and in 1775, we find the names of Edward Aſpinſhaw, gent. and of Elnathan Pilgrim[2].

The names of the preſent freeholders are, John Pares, eſq.; rev. John Aſpinſhaw[3] (whoſe eſtate in this liberty came to him by his mother, Elizabeth Abel, whoſe mother was Mary, daughter of Babington Whatton[4]); William Roby Burgin, gent.; and Elnathan Pilgrim.

	£.	s.	d.
Money raiſed for the poor within the year ending at Eaſter 1776,	11	4	2
Expended in county-rates, &c.	0	15	0
——— on the poor, ——	10	9	2
Rent of workhouſe and habitations,	0	5	2
Litigations, — — —	0	0	0
Money raiſed for 1783, —	46	2	8
——————— 1784, —	30	15	1
——————— 1785, —	34	11	1
Medium of theſe three years, —	37	3	2
——— of county expences,	0	0	0
——— of expences not relating to the poor; repairs of churches, roads, &c.	0	0	0
——— of nett annual expences,	37	3	2
——— of attending on magiſtrates,	2	12	4
——— of entertainments at meetings,	0	5	8
——— of law expences, —	1	5	8
——— of ſetting the poor to work,	0	0	0

The Return made to Parliament in 1786, in anſwer to an enquiry reſpecting the charitable donations within this Liberty, may be ſeen in vol. I. p. 80.

By the Return made to Parliament in 1801, this Liberty contained 13 families in the ſame number of houſes; 29 males, and 29 females; in all 58; of whom 14 were chiefly employed in agriculture, and only one in trade.

[1] William Chaplin, of Ulveſcroft abbey warren, died Auguſt 16, 1710, aged 62.

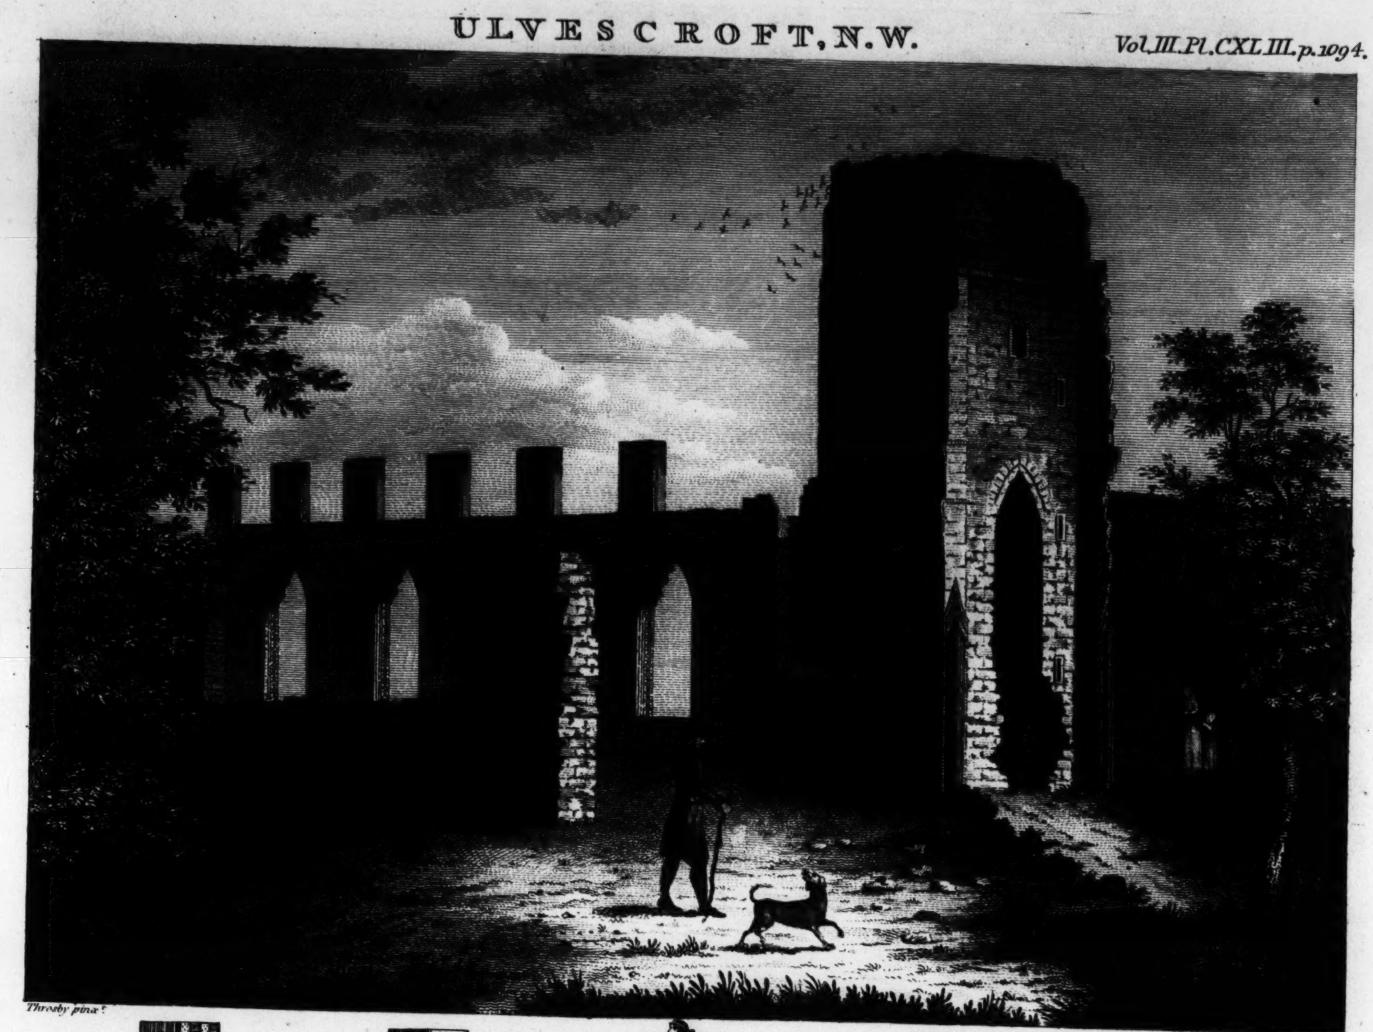
[2] Mary the wife of Elnathan Pilgrim, gent. of Ulveſcroft, died Sept. 12, 1758, aged 56; and Robert Poultney, of Ulveſcroft, died Aug. 22, 1754, aged 70. Their epitaphs may be ſeen at Hether and Markfield.

[3] Of Emmanuel College, Cambridge; B. A. 1788; M. A. 1791; rector of St. Peter's in Nottingham; and, whilſt this ſheet was printing, preſented by the Dean and Chapter of Weſtminſter to the vicarage of Hinckley, with the rectory of Stoke and chapel of Dadlington annexed, all in the county of Leiceſter.

[4] See before, p. 912.

The

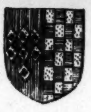
ULVESCROFT, N.W.



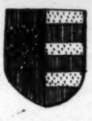
Throsby pinx^t

Walker sculp^t

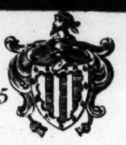
1



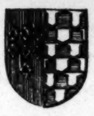
2



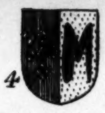
5

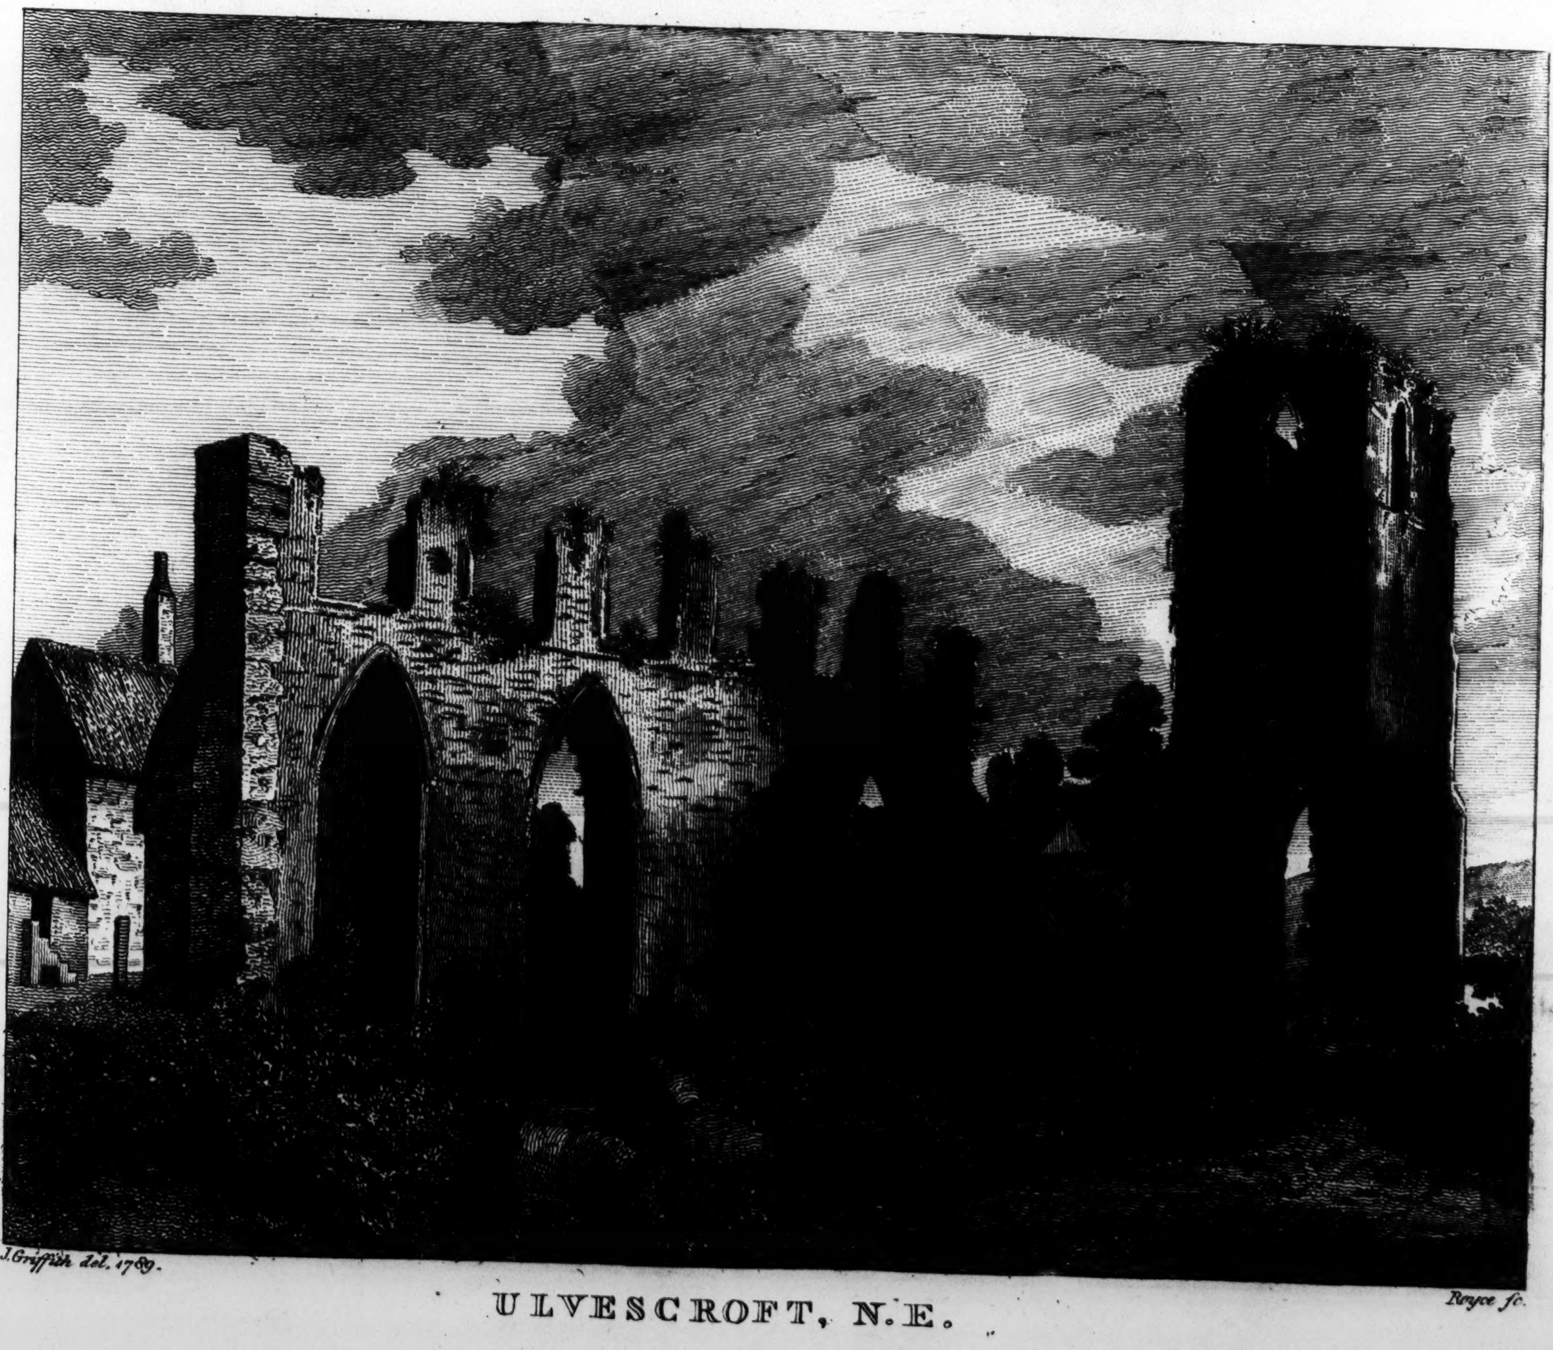


3



4





J. Griffith del. 1789.

Royce fc.

ULVESCROFT, N.E.

ULVES CROFT, W. Vol. III. Pl. CXLII. p. 1094.

8
9
10
11
12
13
14
15

I. Griffith del. 1790. Basire sc.

Fig. 3.

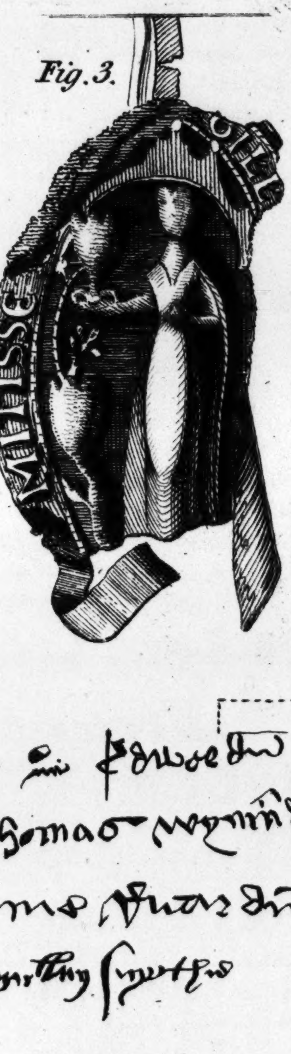

Fig. 6.

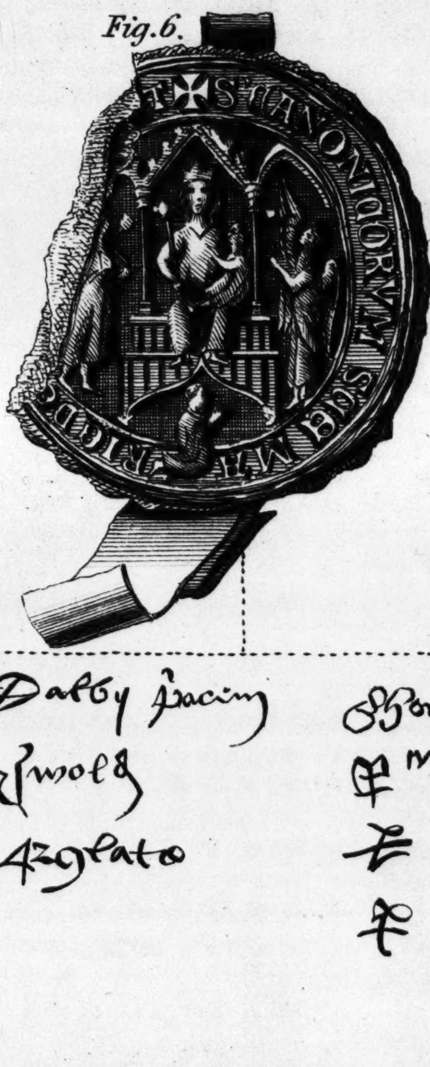
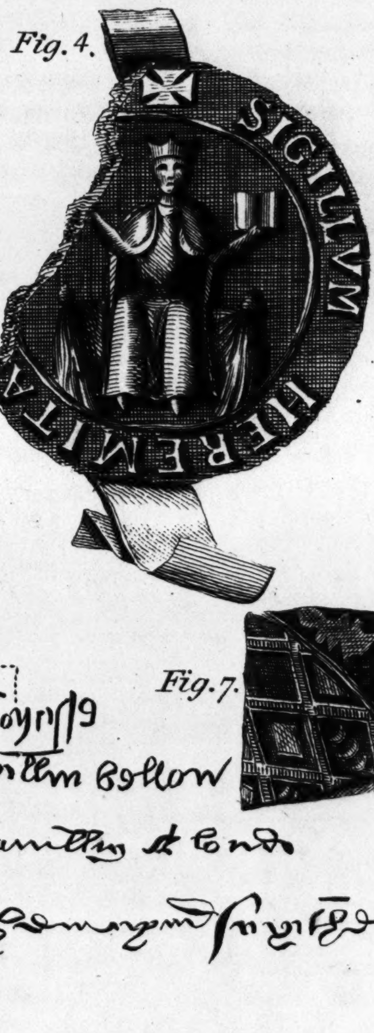


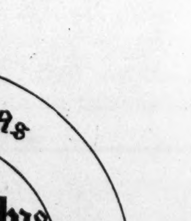
S CANONICORUM SCE MARIE DE ULUESCROFT

Fig. 4.



SIGILLUM HEREMITA

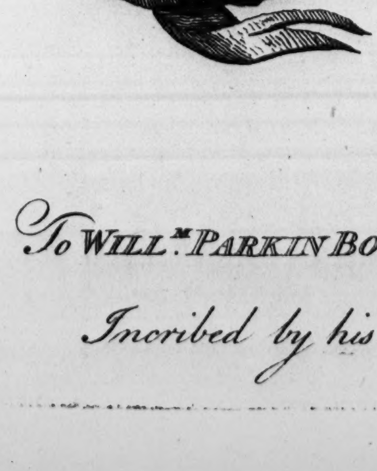
Fig. 7.



℟ dn̄ Edwardu Dalby ſacris
Thomas Wymunde Swolb
℟ mo Ricardi Azglato
Willm Smythe

Storn de Ayſſe
℟ mo Willm Bollow
℟ mo Amllm at Conde
℟ mo Edmunde Smythe

Fig. 5.



SIGILLVM PETRI FILII ROBERTI DE CLEN

Fig. 1.

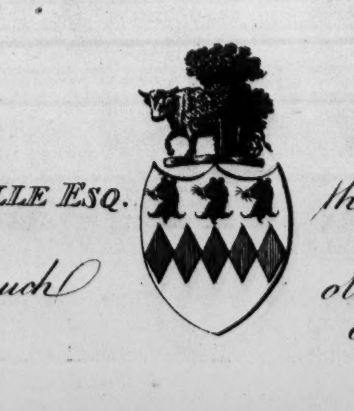


Fig. 2.

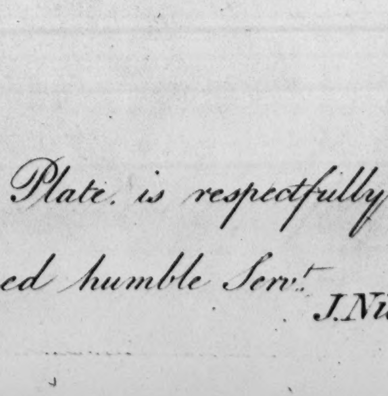

Scs
Scs
Petrus
Paulus
Alexa
Ander
pp ny vias tuas domine demonstra
michi

To WILLᴹ. PARKIN BOSVILLE ESQ. this Plate is respectfully Incribed by his much obliged humble Servᵗ.

J. Nichols.

The PRIORY (ſee three Views of it in Plates CXLII. CXLIII.)

What is more particularly to be noticed in Ulveſcroft is its antient Priory, or (as through courteſy it is uſually called) Abbey. The ſite of it is in a deep valley, which lies North and South nearly through the middle of the lordſhip. It is ſurrounded on all ſides, except to the South, by high eminences in the Foreſt; but to the South aſpect the view is open and extenſive, commanding the town of Leiceſter, and a conſiderable tract of country around and beyond it.

The ſituation is very ſequeſtered and picturesque, and muſt have been particularly ſo at a time when the ſurrounding hills were almoſt wholly covered with wood, as was the caſe formerly. Though low, and near to ſome ſwampy grounds, it appears to be in no ſort unhealthy. Several perſons within the laſt century have lived in the houſe to a very advanced age.

A rather large, and at times rapid, brook (producing ſome trout, crawfiſh, &c.), which has its riſe higher up, flows through the valley, and at a little diſtance below the Priory. This, with another ſtream that ſkirts the Priory ſtill nearer in a different direction, ſerved amply to ſupply the moat, fiſh-ponds, &c. with which it was ſurrounded, and the ſite of which may ſtill readily be traced.

Mr. Wyrley, who viſited Ulveſcroft about 1592, deſcribes the eight following coats (ſee Plate CXLII.) then remaining in the dwelling-houſe of Mr. Bennet Wilſon, which had been a part of the then decayed monaſtery:

1. Azure, two bars; and on a chief Argent three torteauxes.

2. Quarterly of four: 1. Azure, two bars; and on a chief Argent three torteaux; 2. Haſtings; 3. Azure, on four bars Argent, nine birds Gules, 3. 2. 2. and 2; Valence. 4. Argent, a feſs, and canton engrailed Sable; Irby.

3. Quarterly, 1. and 4. Ermine, three bars, couped Gules; Drawbridge. 2. and 3. an eagle diſplayed.

4. Barry of ſix, Argent and Azure. Grey of Codnor.

5. Argent, a ſaltire engrailed Gules. Tiptoft of Worceſter.

6. Argent, a lion rampant Sable; a chief Gules. Aſhby of Loſeby.

7. Quarterly, 1. and 4. Argent, three bulls heads affrontée couped Sable; Knyniſman, or Kynnyan. 2. and 3. Azure, a bend between ſix mullets pierced Or. Howby.

8. Argent, a ſaltire engrailed, between four birds Sable.

The four following coats (ſee Plate CXLIII.) were alſo at that time within the ruins of the priory church:

1. Gules, ſeven maſcles conjoined and voided Or, 3. 3. and 1. Ferrers of Groby; impaling, Chequy, Or and Azure. Warren.

2. The ſame; impaling, Barry of ſix, Or and Gules. St. Owen.

3. The ſame; impaling Vaire.

4. The ſame; impaling, Or, a maunch Gules. Haſtings.

Ulveſcroft is the moſt pure and beſt-preſerved religious ruin in the county; and, though but little known or noticed by Touriſts, is well worth attention.

Buck engraved in 1730 a North view of theſe venerable ruins, which are ſtill very conſiderable.

Two of thoſe here given are from drawings taken in 1790 by the rev. J. Griffith; the other is from a drawing by Mr. Throſby.

The tower, which ſtands on two elevated pointed arches, is in a good degree entire, except at one corner, and may be aſcended by 63 ſteps, a few only towards the top being deficient. The entrance to the ſtaircaſe is now very low, the ground having been evidently much raiſed by rubbiſh, &c.

The South ſide of the church, and ſome ſmall ruins on the North, remain.

There are two niches at the further end of the ruins, which have the appearance of having formerly been ſtone-ſeats.

The floor of the church conſiſted of ſmall ſquare tiles variouſly marked, which are yet frequently found below the rubbiſh. One of theſe is engraved in Plate CXLII.

Adjoining to the church on the South is the Priory houſe, now occupied as a farm-houſe. The walls, roof, and other circumſtances, evidently prove this to have been part of the original building. Not long ſince, when making ſome alterations in a room there, the maſons met with a ſtone fixed in the wall, on which there is reaſon to believe were engraved the arms and date of the Priory, or ſomething of the kind; but which they unfortunately deſtroyed.

A high mouldering wall, with large windows, evidently a material part of the original building, adjoins to the houſe. What is now too uſed as a barn, from the timbers, &c. plainly belonged to the Priory.

There are the remains of what appears to have been a dovecote on the North ſide of the church; and heaps of ſtone, &c. ſcattered here and there over the premiſes prove the buildings to have been originally much more conſiderable.

Some Engliſh ſilver and a few gold coins have at different times been found here; but none, as appears, of any great antiquity.

It is ſaid, that a cannon ball and a gold (though from circumſtances probably only metal) ſpur were dug up ſome years ago among the ruins.

A few antient keys have likewiſe been met with, which ſtill remain.

The preſent church-door at Thornton, in this neighbourhood, is believed to have belonged to the church of the priory here at the diſſolution; and its curioſity and antiquity ſeem to warrant the tradition[1].

"La chartre de Hoſgodethorp," referred to in p. 981*; which being found too late for Oſgathorpe article, and being a curious and very antient evidence, is printed here[2]:

"Bertram de V'd' (Verdon), omnibus amicis & hominibus ſuis Francis & Anglis, tam preſentibus quam futuris, ſalutem. Sciatis me conceſſiſſe & preſenti cartâ confirmaſſe Rob' filio Hardulfi & heredibus ſuis terram totam de Hangodeſtorp, quam teneo de Nigello de Munevillâ, de me & de heredibus meis in feudo & hereditate tenendam, pro humagio & ſervicio ſuo, reddendo annuatim mihi XIIII ſol', cum Stordun Stocwudd & Snapa, & pratis & paſcuis & omnibus aliis rebus eid' terre pertinentibus, liberè & quietè & honorificè, ſub bipartitâ terminor' diſtinctione, videlicet VII ſol' ad feſt' Sancti Michael, & totid' ad Paſca. Hiis teſtibus; Rogero de Amundevile, Alano fil' Mainfenini, Rogero fil' Willielmi, Simone fratre ejus, Philippo de Eſtlee, Rob' de Flamvile, Ernaldo de Barewelle, Ernaldo dapifero, Henrico de Lee, Gaufrido de Normanvile, Ric' de Boiſdeie, Rob' de Culunces, Warino clerico, Gaufrido clerico, Widone de Verd', Willielmo Saraceno, & Rob' Venatore." Seal broken (a horſeman, &c.)

---

[1] Mr. Throſby, in his "Leiceſterſhire Excurſions," p. 361, thus deſcribes it: "The door of the church" (ſpeaking of Thornton) "is a curioſity, being taken from Ulveſcroft priory at the diſſolution of religious houſes. The outer part is of wrought iron, and of a ſingular make. It is two yards wide, and three high; and the inward part is ornamented, or ſtrengthened, with croſs bars of wood."

[2] From Mr. Greſley's original.

The following "Suit Roll for the Manor of Ulveſcroft in the County of Leiceſter, March 2, 1797," has been communicated by Henry Whatton, eſq.

Freeholders.

The Rev. Mr. Aſpinſhaw.
Elnathan Pilgrim, gent. jury.
—— Lovell.
Thomas Roby, gent. jury.

Tenants and Reſiants.

David Warner, poor.
William Platts, jury.
Peter Harvey, jury.
Elnathan Pilgrim, junior, jury.
Chriſtopher Wright, jury.
George Bywater, jury.
John Swain, jury.
Samuel Swain, jury.
Samuel Boyer, jury.
John Glover, jury.
George Belcher, jury.
Mary Belcher, app.
John Worth, jury.
Thomas Worth, jury.
William Roby, gent. jury.
Benjamin Hathold, inmate.
Joſeph Owner, jury.

JOHN WALKER, Bailiff.

Manor of Ulveſcroft,
with the members. }

Theſe are to will and require you to ſummon and give notice to the ſeveral and reſpective tenants and perſons concerned, to make their appearances at a Court Baron to be held for William-Parkin Boſvile, eſq. for his manor aforeſaid, at the uſual place, on Tueſday the 2d day of May next; and that you yourſelf be then and there preſent, to make return hereof, and do your duty: And for your ſo doing, this ſhall be your ſufficient warrant. Given under my hand and ſeal, this 6th day of April, 1797.

HENRY WHATTON, (L.S.) Steward.

To Mr. John Walker, Bailiff of the manor aforeſaid.

Manor of Ulveſcroft,
with the members. }

The view of freepledges, with the Court Baron of William-Parkin Boſvile, eſq. lord of the manor of Ulveſcroft aforeſaid, in the county of Leiceſter, held the 2d day of May, in the year of our Lord 1797, before Henry Whatton, gentleman, ſteward.

Names of the Jury.

Thomas Roby,
William Roby,
Elnathan Pilgrim,
Chriſtopher Wright,
William Platts,
Samuel Boyer,
John Worth,

ſworn.

Peter Harvey,
Samuel Swain,
John Glover,
George Belcher,
Thomas-Worth,
Joſeph Owner,

"We lay a penalty of 6*d.* an acre upon all fences, if any complaint be made betwixt neighbour and neighbour, and not amended before the old May day next.

We lay a pain upon each perſon who ſhall have a tup or ram found upon the Foreſt betwixt the 14th of September and the 28th of October, within this Liberty, to pay 3*s.* 4*d.*

We lay a pain of 3*s.* 4*d.* upon the ſheep-waſh, if the water-courſe be not made good between this and Candlemas day next.

We lay a pain of five nobles an acre upon he who ſhall burn gorze upon the Foreſt within the liberty of this manor, and proportionably for a greater or leſs quantity than an acre.

We lay a pain of 1*s.* a load upon every perſon who ſhall kid any gorze upon the Foreſt, and not live within this manor.

We lay a pain upon every perſon who ſhall bring and turn any cattle within this manor, and ſhall not live there, 3*s.* 4*d.* for each offence.

We lay a pain of one noble upon every one who ſhall diſturb any of his neighbour's cattle or ſheep upon the common within this manor.

We lay a pain of 3*s.* 4*d.* upon any one who ſhall oppreſs the common by keeping more upon it in the ſummer than he can winter upon the ground by which he claims ſuch right.

We lay a pain of 3*s.* 4*d.* upon any one who ſhall make any new road over his neighbour's ground, or any of the lord's coppice, for each offence.

We lay a pain of 3*s.* 4*d.* upon any one who ſhall keep any ſcabbed or infectious horſes or ſheep upon the Foreſt.

We likewiſe lay a pain of 6*s.* 8*d.* upon every perſon who ſhall cut or ſtock, or cauſe to be got, any gorze upon the common where any young oaks grow, for each offence that ſhall be committed."

Manor of Ulveſcroft,
with the members. }

At a Court Leet and Court Baron of William-Parkin Boſvile, eſq. held for the ſaid manor the 2d day May, 1797;

We the Jury, upon our oaths, do preſent George Bywater, being lawfully ſummoned to ſerve on the Jury, and made default. Therefore we amerce him 6*s.* 8*d.*

[Signed by Thomas Roby; and the other Jurymen.]

We affere the ſeveral pains and amerciaments as the Jury have laid as above.

THOMAS ROBY.
ELNATHAN PILGRIM.
HENRY WHATTON, Steward.

N. B. Received G. Bywater's amerciament, 6*s.* 8*d.*
JOHN WALKER, Bailiff, app.

WANLIP.

WANLIP,

in old records written Anelepe and Onelep, ſtandeth finely ſeated upon the river Soare. It is five miles diſtant from Leiceſter, five from Loughborough, and ſeven from Melton Mowbray; and, in the eccleſiaſtical diviſion of the county, is within the deanry of Akely.

Four ploughlands in Anelepe, which in the reign of the Confeſſor had been valued at ten ſhillings, were worth twenty-five ſhillings at the general ſurvey, when they were held by Ralph Carnot. This land had been held by Harding and his homagers, and afterwards by earl Aubrey; and at the ſurvey was the property of the king. It was equal to four ploughs. One was in the demeſne; and eight villans, with three bordars, had three ploughs. There was a mill of eight ſhillings value; and there were twenty-two acres of meadow[1].

Wanlip was by the Conqueror granted to Robert de Mellent, and came about 1140 to Geffrey Pincerna, commonly called L'Abbé, ſon of Ralph Pincerna, of Leiceſter, who was butler to the ſaid earl. Geffery L'Abbé was brother to Ralph Butler of Overſley[2]; and his grandſon Richard L'Abbé gave the church and ſix virgates of land here to the abbey of Leiceſter[3]; by whom the advowſon of the church and one virgate of land were exchanged, about 1280, with ſir William Wales, knight, for a meadow im the Outfield at Leiceſter, commonly called Walſche Meadow, or The Oſtler's Aker. The particulars their Regiſter will beſt deſcribe:

"Habuimus in Anlep quondam advocationem eccleſie, ex dono Ricardi L'Abbe; ſed predictam advocationem & unam virgatam terre quam dominus Willielmus Wales dominus de Anlip nobis antea dederat pro glebâ eccleſie, dedimus & contulimus per cartam noſtram predicto Willielmo Wales & heredibus ſuis in perpetuum. Et pro hujuſmodi advocatione & donatione dedit nobis predictus Willielmus Wales quoddam pratum vocatum Walſche Medowe, ſive The Oſtler's Aker, jacentem in prato boreali Leyceſtrie, &c.

Item habuimus ibi liberam piſcationem piſcarie ſue de Anlep, ex dono Ricardi L'Abbe, quotiens & quando ibi piſcare voluerimus, cum quibuſcunque retibus & ſagenis, &c. ſed illam piſcationem quietclamavimus domino Thome Wales & heredibus ſuis per cartam noſtram in perpetuum; pro quâ quidem quietclamatione dedit nobis & conceſſit per cartam indentatam in perpetuum ſex ſolidatos annui redditûs, provenient' de uno meſſuagio & unâ virgatâ terre, cum pertinentiis, in Barkby, una cum homagio & ſervicio Willielmi filii Rogeri de Rotheley de Sytheſton, qui predict' meſſuagium & virgatam terre tenet in dominico, ut patet in cartâ, &c. Modò tenet Willielmus Maſon de Thorpe Barkby predict' meſſuagium & virgatam terre ut heres; & ſolvit vi s̃. Et reddit i libram piperis.

Habuimus ibi unam carucatam terre, ex dono Ricardi L'Abbe, de dominico ſuo de Anlep, cum omnibus pertinentiis; ſed inquiratur quando alienatur.

Item habemus, ex dono predicti Ricardi ibidem, redditum ſubſcriptum, ſecundùm diverſa Rentalia; ſcil', de ii virgatis terre quas Radulphus Craft de ipſo tenebat, una cum homagio magiſtri Geraldi filii predicti Radulphi.

Heres Thome Waleys tenet i virgatam terre de feodo Salow, quondam Alexandri Benewyke, & quam Willielmus Waleys emit de predicto Alexandro, poſtea Rogeri Waleys, & poſtea Willielmi predicti, & tandem Thome Waleys. Et reddit i libram piperis ad feſtum Natalis Domini.

Johannes Belgrave & Johannes Bull tenent de heredibus Thome Waleys ad voluntatem i meſſuagium cum crofto, & i bovatam terre, quondam Ketylberni de Anlep, poſtea Johannis Clerici, poſtea Inge & Emme ſororis, poſtea Margerie Mayſter, poſtea Willielmi rectoris de Sytheſton. Et reddit liberè iii s̃.

Johannes Burbage & Thomas Lambe tenent ad voluntatem de heredibus Thome Waleys i bovatam terre quondam Roberti Craft, ex feofamento Pauli Abbatis, poſtea Roberti Pers, poſtea Donyl & Emme, poſtea Johannis Walton & Radulphi Belgrave. Et reddit liberè ii s̃. vi đ.

Modò Margeria Walſhe tenet liberè unam virgatam terre jam in tenurâ. Et reddit i libram piperis.

Eadem tenet liberè unam bovatam terre, nuper in tenurâ Johannis Burbage & Thome Lombe; jam in tenurâ. Et reddit ii s̃. vi đ.

Eadem tenet liberè unum meſſuagium cum crofto, & unam bovatam terre, que Johannes Belgrave & Johannes Bull tenuerunt; & que perquiſite fuerunt per Willielmum Miln' de Burſtall de rectore de Sytheſton. Et reddit per annum heredibus Walſhe ii s̃.; & abbati Leyc' iii s̃. Jam in tenurâ[4].

In the Teſta de Nevill, compiled about the year 1240, Wanlip is not noticed; but in the Harleian MSS, 5138. Onelep is noticed as belonging to the honour of Tutbury.

From the family of L'Abbé, Wanlip paſſed, about 1279, to that of Welſh, in old deeds written Wales and Walleis, who bare, Gules, three gemewes and a bend Argent, and were a diſtinct houſe from thoſe of Swithland before mentioned.

In 1297, it was found that Edmund earl of Lancaſter, the king's brother, deceaſed, held divers lands at Onlepe[5].

In 1346, John Walſhe (on the aid then granted for knighting Edward of Woodſtock, the king's eldeſt ſon) was aſſeſſed 13s. 4d. for a third part of one knight's fee in Anlepp, parcel of the honour of Leiceſter[6].

July 16, 1347, the Warden and ſcholars of Merton College, Oxford, held one penny rent in Onlepe of the heir of William de Roos, by knight's ſervice[7].

In 1361, Henry Plantagenet, duke of Lancaſter, died ſeiſed of one knight's fee in Anelep, which Hugh Turvile held[8].

Sir Thomas Welſh, knt. in 1392, obtained the king's charter for free warren in all his demeſne lands here, in Barkby, Thorp, Cropſton, and Syſton, in this county[9]. This ſir Thomas "built the church, and dedicated it to St. Nicholas, in 1393; at which time, (as I gueſs) it was made a parochial church, being before but a chapel, as is manifeſt by the Roll of 1220[10]."

In a book of fifteenths and tenths granted by the laity in 1416, Wanlip was rated at £1. 10*s.* 6*d.*; and in the ſubſidy of 1445, at the ſame ſum; but an abatement was then made of 7*s.* 6*d.*

In 1439, by an inquiſition taken at Leiceſter, before William lord of Ferrars, Laurence Berkley, knt. (then ſheriff of Leiceſter), Thomas Palmer, Richard Hotoft, and William Hoton, commiſſioners to enquire what waſtes and diſtreſſes Thomas Greſeley had made in the lands and tenements of Thomas Walſhe non compos, it was found that[11] . . . .
in his manor of Onelep[12].

In 1463, Thomas Walſhe of Onlep, eſq. died ſeiſed of the manor of Onlep, held of William Turvyle, eſq. as of his manor of Aſton Flamvile[13].

The laſt heir male of this family was Thomas Welſh, who died 1493; whoſe daughter and coheir Helen was married to Henry Lyttelton, of Frankley, co. Worceſter, eldeſt ſon to that learned judge ſir Thomas Lyttelton knt. author of the Tenures; by whom he had one only daughter[1], who brought this manor, and that of Tixhall, co. Stafford, to her huſband ſir John Aſton, of Haywood, knt. who, at the marriage of prince Arthur, eldeſt ſon of king Henry VII. was created a knight of the Bath. In 1413, he went on the expedition into Britany, and aſſiſted that king at the ſiege of Terouenne and Tournay, as alſo at the battle of Spurs, 1513, when, for his conduct and bravery, he was made a knight banneret in the open field. He had two ſons, ſir Edward, his heir, and William.

---

[1] "Radulfus Carnotus tenet 4 carucatas terre in Anelepe. Terra eſt 4 carucaram. In dominico eſt una; & 8 villani, cum 3 bordariis, habent 3 carucas. Ibi molinum de 8 ſolidis, & 22 acræ prati. Valuit 10 ſolidos; modò 25 ſolidos. Has terras tenuit Harding cum hominibus ſuis; & Albericus poſt eum habuit. Modò ſunt in manu Regis." Domeſday, fol. 231. b. 2.

[2] Lib. de Pinley. Dugdale's Warwickſhire, vol. II. p. 584.

[3] Regiſt. Abb. Leic.

[4] Charyte's Rentale, fol. x. b. xi. a.

[5] 25 Edw. I. Eſch. 25 Edw. I. No. 51, Leic.

[6] Rot. Aux. 20 Edw. III.

[7] Eſch. 21 Edw. III. No. 91, Leic.

[8] Fin. 35 Edw. III. m. 23.

[9] Cart. 15 Ric. II. n. 35.

[10] Burton, MS.

[11] Recorda manca.

[12] Eſch. 18 Hen. VI. No. . . . Leic.

[13] Eſch. 3 Edw. IV. No. 13, Leic.

In 1564, there were 12 families in Wanlip.

Sir Edward dying in 1568, left by Joan his wife, daughter of ſir Thomas Bowles, ſir Walter, his heir; and three daughters, Catharine, married, firſt, to Stephen Stanley, eſq.; ſecondly, to ſir William Chetwynd; and, thirdly, to ſir Edward Cope; Mary, to Simon Harcourt; Frances, to Robert Needham, of Shenton, in the county of Leiceſter.

Sir Walter, who ſucceeded his father, dying in 1589, left by Elizabeth his wife, daughter of James Leviſon, ſir Edward his heir; and Margery, married to Thomas Aſtley, of Pateſhul, in the county of Stafford, eſq.

By an inquiſition taken at Tixhall, co. Stafford, 18 Auguſt, 1589, it appeared that ſir Walter Aſton, knt. died ſeiſed of the manor of Onelep, with its appurtenances; of certain lands in Syſton and Burſtall, held of the king, as of his manor of Tutbury, in ſocage, by the rent of 6*s.* 8*d.* and a pound of pepper; that he died the 2d of April laſt; and that Edward Aſton, eſq. his ſon and heir, was then aged 38 years, and upwards[2].

Sir Edward, marrying Anne, daughter of ſir Thomas Lucy, knight, by her had a daughter Anne, married to Ambroſe Elton, eſq. and ſir Walter, who ſucceeded him, and at the coronation of king James I. of England was made a knight of the Bath; and in 1611, created a baronet. In 1615, he was deſirous of diſpoſing of his property at Wanlip, as appears by the following extracts of original letters from alderman Robert Heyrick to his brother ſir William, who was then looking out for an eſtate in Leiceſterſhire for his friend Mr. Tovey:

"I have made ſome enquyry for a purchaſe of £3000, or ſomewhat more. And I am enformed of a very fine thing, that I thinke will be ſhortly ſold. Yf the party that would have the purchaſe will be content with that, I thinke yt well every way lyke you. Yt is a fine thing, and the mydway between Leiceſter and Bowmannor. 26th of December, 1615.

"The thing I wrote to you about is Wanlip; which hathe a ſuffycyent hows, and good paſture and meadow abu[illegible] yt, and I am enformed yt will be ſold. Jan. 8, 1615-6.

"In Wanlip, for Mr. Tovey, I can do no more yet; but learne that it will be ſolld, but one frend of mine, that can and will give me new intelligence how all things ſtandethe, and what will be doone, did promes to be with me of Sayturday laſt, and cam not. Make you no dowt but I will, ſo ſoone as I can, ſartefye you ſo muche as I can learne, and ſpeake to the party. Jan. 23, 1615-6.

"For Wanlip, the parſon of the town, who is very inward with ſir Walter, tells me, that it is all let for 21 years, reſarving but a peppercorn a year. I demanded of him, yf ſome of them that were tennands woold not be bought out; ſo that yf a man bought the feſymple, he myght compas the hows, and ſoom part of the demains to himſelfe. He aſked me yf I woold part with £1000, to have a fayre bargen. And ſo, to cum by an entraunce into the matter, I tolld him I woold. So he hath promiſed to be with me er long, and to ſhow me what way he will worke; which way ſo ſoone as I know, you ſhall no be long er you knowe. Leiceſter, the 6th of Feb. 1615-6.

Your loving brother, ROBERT HEYRICKE."

This negotiation ſeems to have been of no effect; for Wanlip continued ſome few years longer in the family of Aſton.

Devereux Aſton and Margaret Betham were married at Wanlip, April 1, 1621; and Devereux Aſton, eſq. was buried there March 1, 1634.

No freeholder is noticed here in the liſt of 1630.

Sir Walter Aſton was created a peer of Scotland in 1628, by the title of baron Aſton of Forfar. He married Gertrude, daughter of ſir Ralph Sadlier; and died in 1639. Several years, however, before his death, he ſold Wanlip to "Mr. William Palmer, citizen of London[3];" whoſe name appears, with the date 1636, on a cup belonging to the communion plate, which was of his gift; and whoſe ſon Archdale Palmer ſucceeded him as lord of the manor of Wanlip.

March 8, 1640-1, "the particular petition of the widow Palmer, of the county of Leiceſter," was referred, by the Houſe of Commons, to the conſideration of the Committee for Deputy Lieutenants[4].

In 1655, there was collected in Wanlip, for the relief of the poor Proteſtants in Piedmont, the ſum of £1. 10*s.* 10*d.*

March 6, 1721-2, a letter was read at the Society of Antiquaries, from Mr Archdale Palmer, to Mr. John Bridges, dated Wanlip, Feb. 19, 1721-2, giving an account of a teſſelated pavement found thereabouts, with coins of Conſtantine, broken urns, human ſkulls and bones, ſtags horns, &c. There was a foundation of a wall by the pavement at Rodeley upon the Foſs-way[5].

About the ſame period, Wanlip Hall is thus deſcribed by Mr. Bridges: "Archdale Palmer, eſq. has a houſe here. From his gardens you overlook the Soar, which runs at the bottom through meadows on each ſide. The turret on his houſe is highter than the church ſteeple, and overlooks all the country, which hereabouts is very flat[6]." This old manſion, being of the caſtellated form, poſſeſſed conſiderable means of defence, as well from its ſituation on the banks of the river, as from the ſtrength of the walls. It was taken down by the late Henry Palmer, eſq. who in 1768 erected the preſent ſpacious and ſubſtantial houſe on the ſite of the old one. Mr. Palmer died in 1773; leaving one ſon and four daughters.

Harry Palmer, eſq. the only ſon, died at Decca, in the kingdom of Perſia, in September 1775, unmarried; and the lordſhip of Wanlip having been deviſed to Catharine-Suſan Hudſon, the eldeſt ſurviving daughter (charged with legacies to her three ſiſters), Wanlip became the property (in right of his wife) of Charles-Grave Hudſon, eſq. F. R. S. and a Director of the South Sea Company; by whom the building at Wanlip Hall was ſoon after completed, with many additions and improvements on the original plan. The building was originally of brick, but has ſince been ſtuccoed, and is ſeen to great advantage from the Melton road. On the Wanlip front it is embelliſhed with neat gardens and pleaſure-grounds, and ornamented with trees, which almoſt cover it from view. It is honoured with frequent viſits from the Judges on the Midland circuit.

A view of this hoſpitable manſion, drawn and etched by a young lady, is here given in Plate CXLIV; for which I conſider myſelf to be very much indebted to the liberality of its worthy poſſeſſor.

Mr. Hudſon was high ſheriff of the county of Leiceſter in 1784; and in 1791 was created a baronet.

A ſtriking proof of the excellence of the paſtures at Wanlip may be ſeen in the portrait of a Devonſhire Bull, in the poſſeſſion of Charles-Thomas Hudſon, eſq. which was engraved in 1800, and is preſented to the reader in Plate CXLV.

---

[1] "Tickſall came to the Littletons by deſcent from William Littleton, of Frankley, and Elizabeth his wife, the daughter and heir of Thomas Walſh, of Anlep, in Leiceſterſhire, to Joane, third daughter and heir, who was married to John Aſton, knight-banneret, from whom it deſcended to their ſon ſir Edward Aſton, father of ſir Walter, father of ſir Edward, knight, who had iſſue Walter, the Queen's ward, 1598." Erdeſwick's View and Antiquities of Staffordſhire.

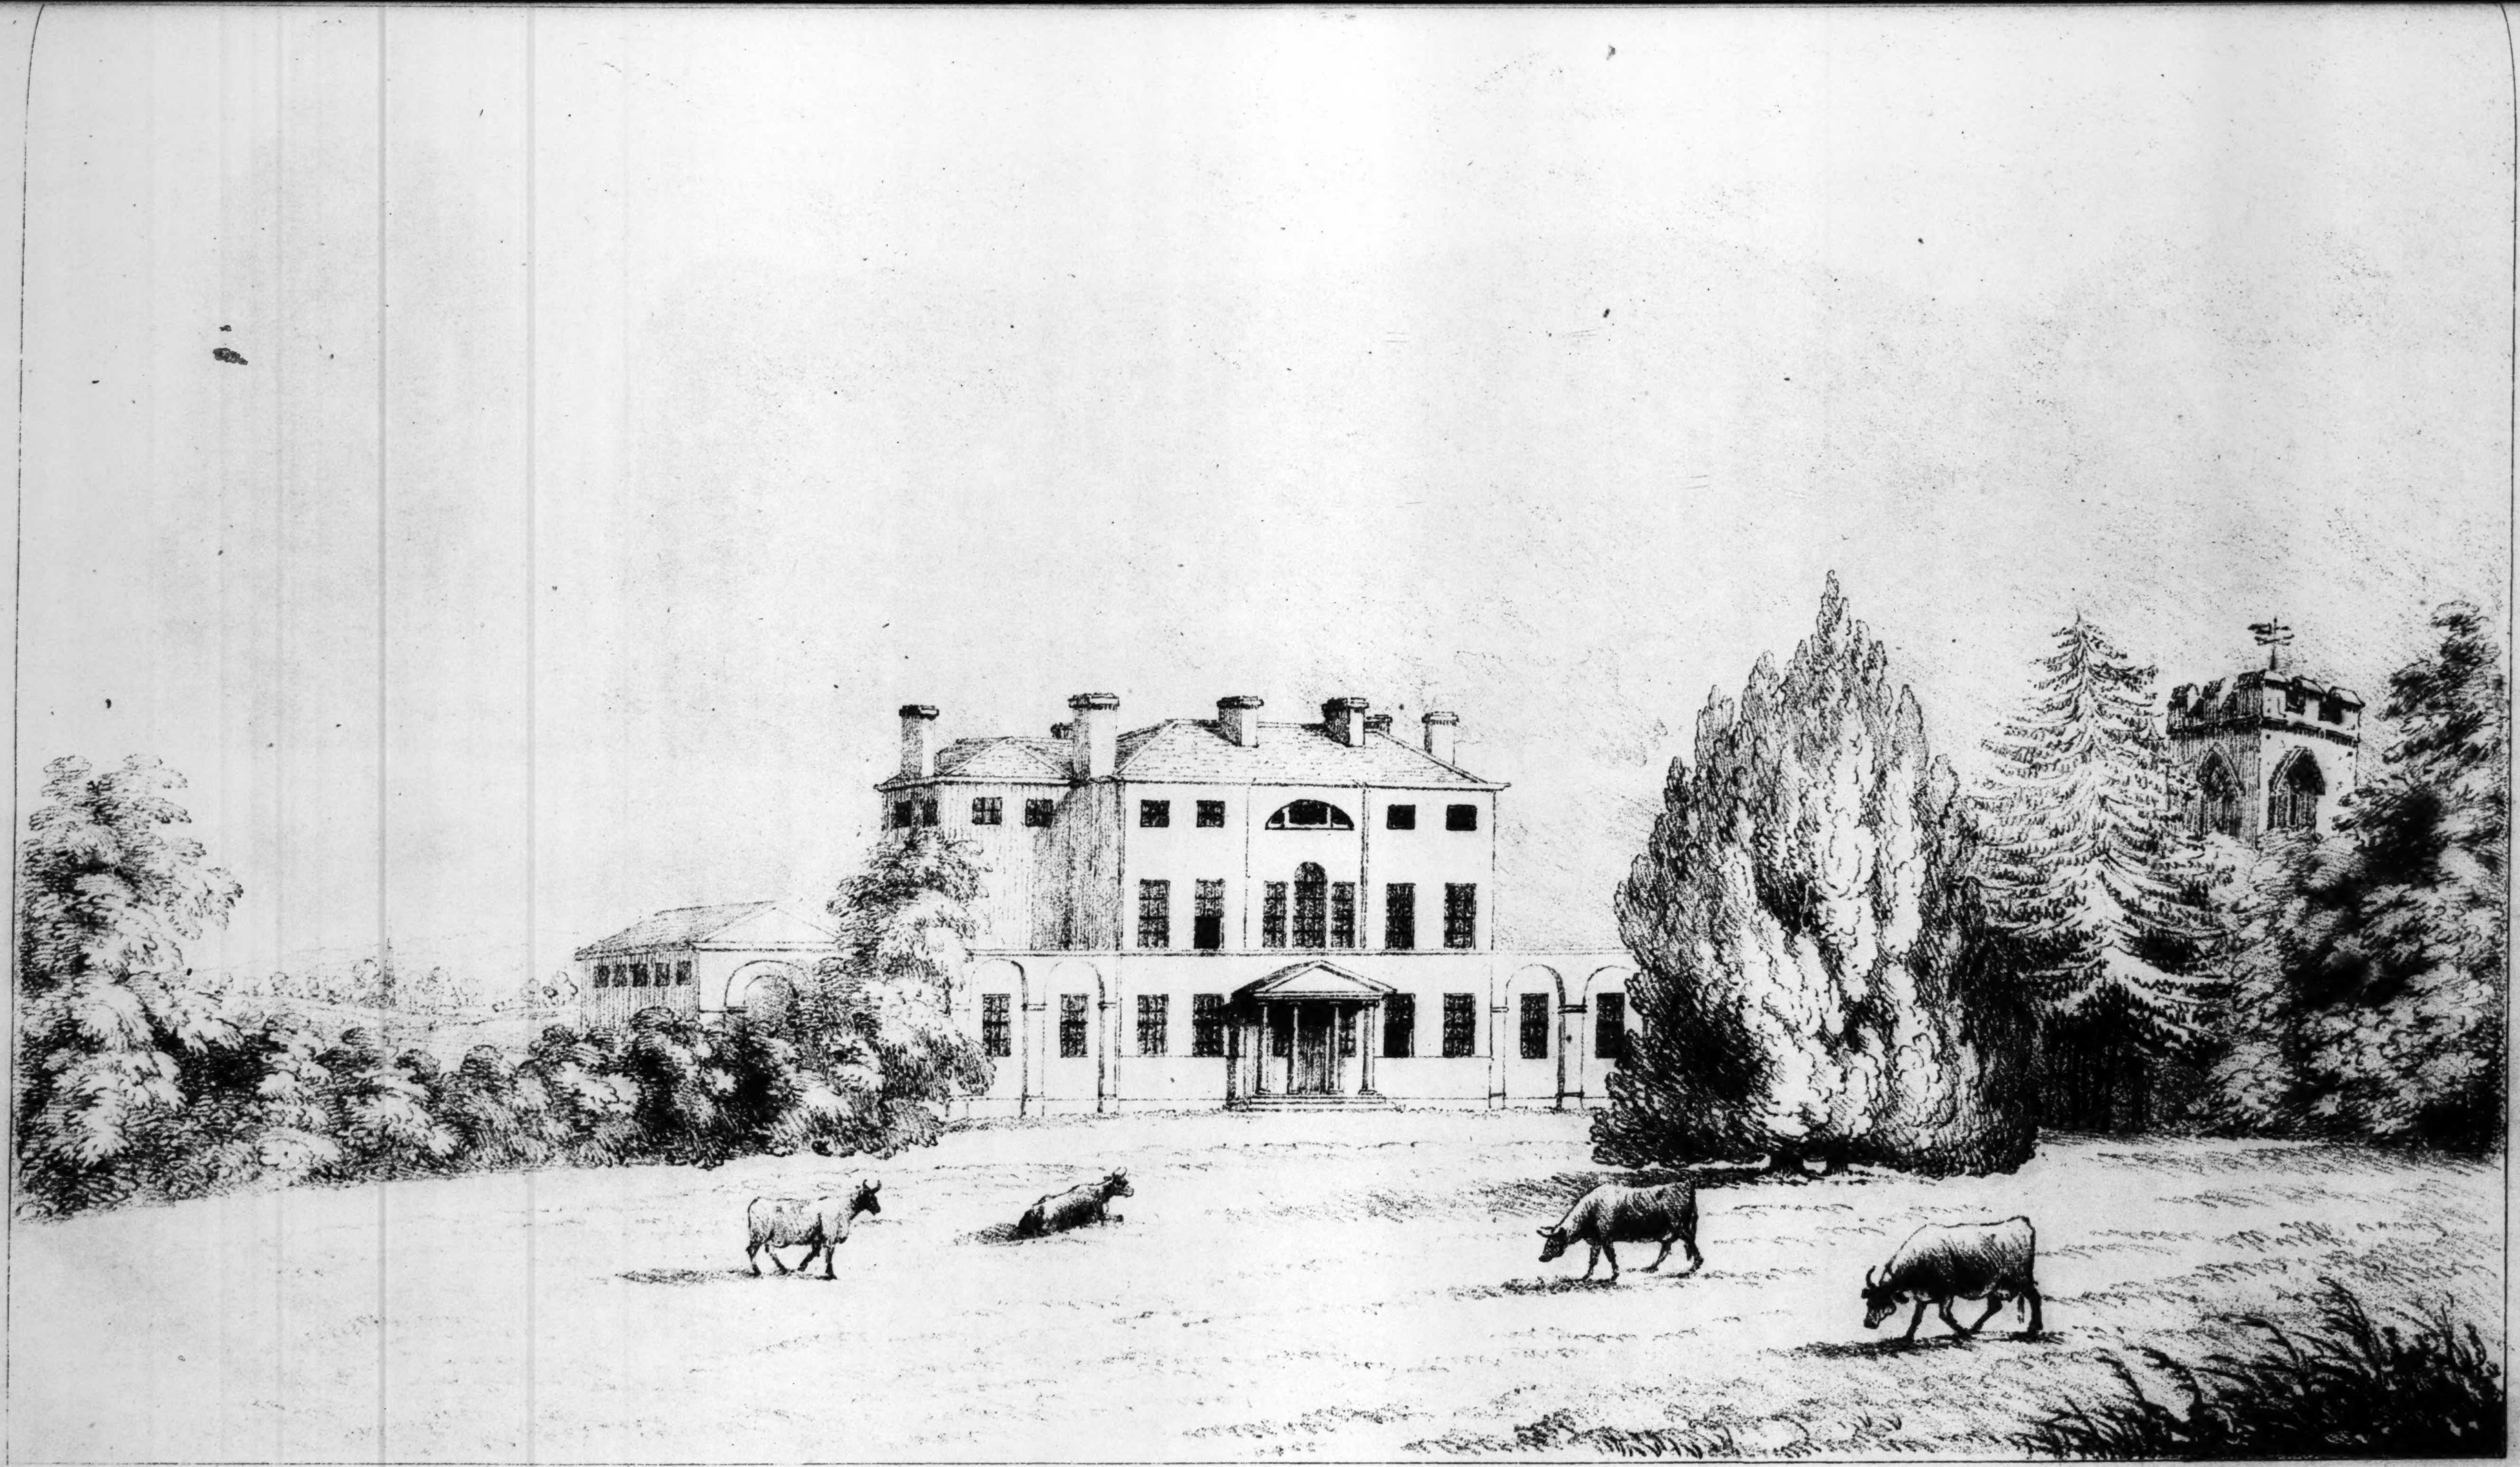
[2] Eſch. 31 Eliz.

[3] Burton, MS

[4] Journals of the Houſe of Commons, vol. II. p. 99.

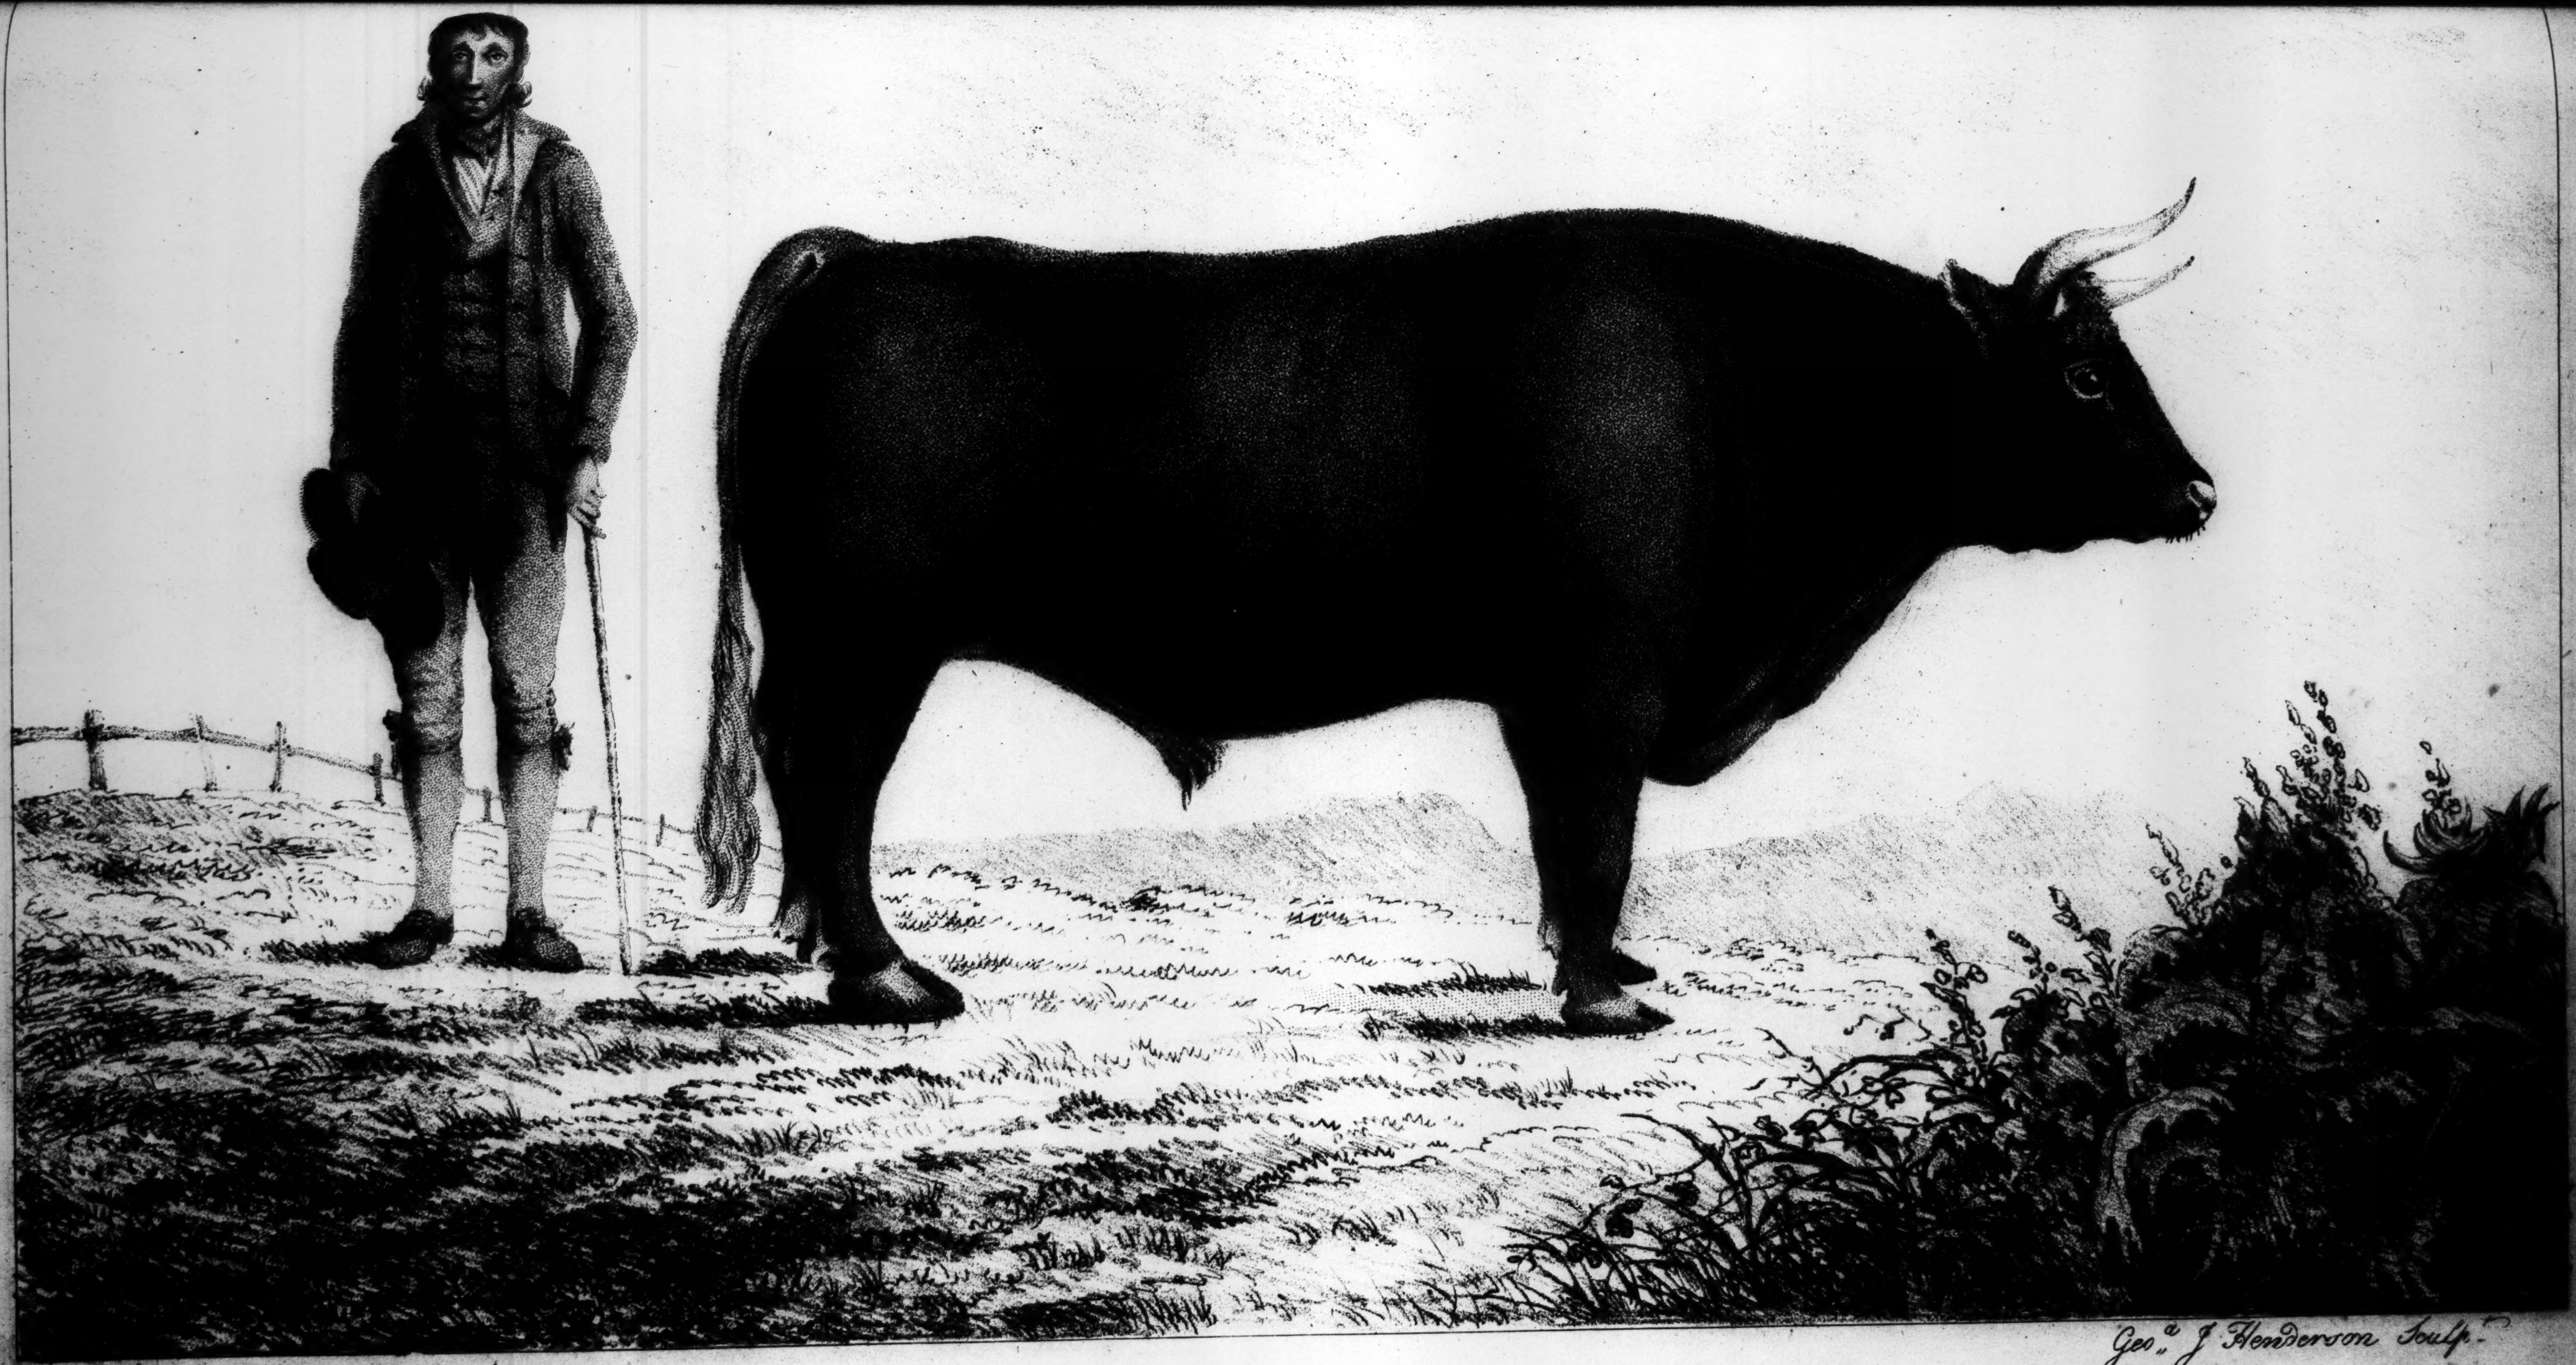
[5] Minutes of the Society of Antiquaries.

[6] E Coll. Bridg. 12mo, vol. AA. 3.



J. Henderson delint. & Sculpt.

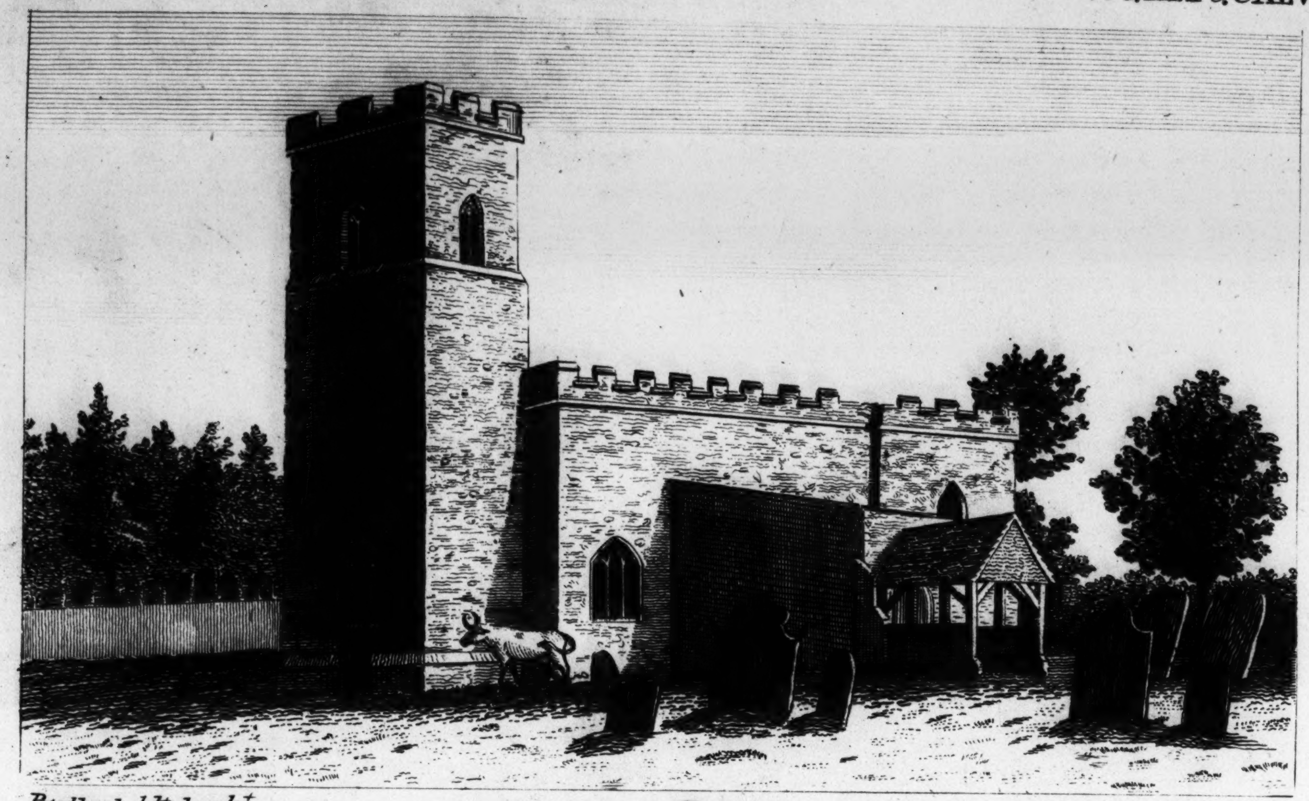
Wanlip Leicestershire the Seat of Sr. Chas. Grave Hudson Bart.



Annabella Norford Delint. 1800.

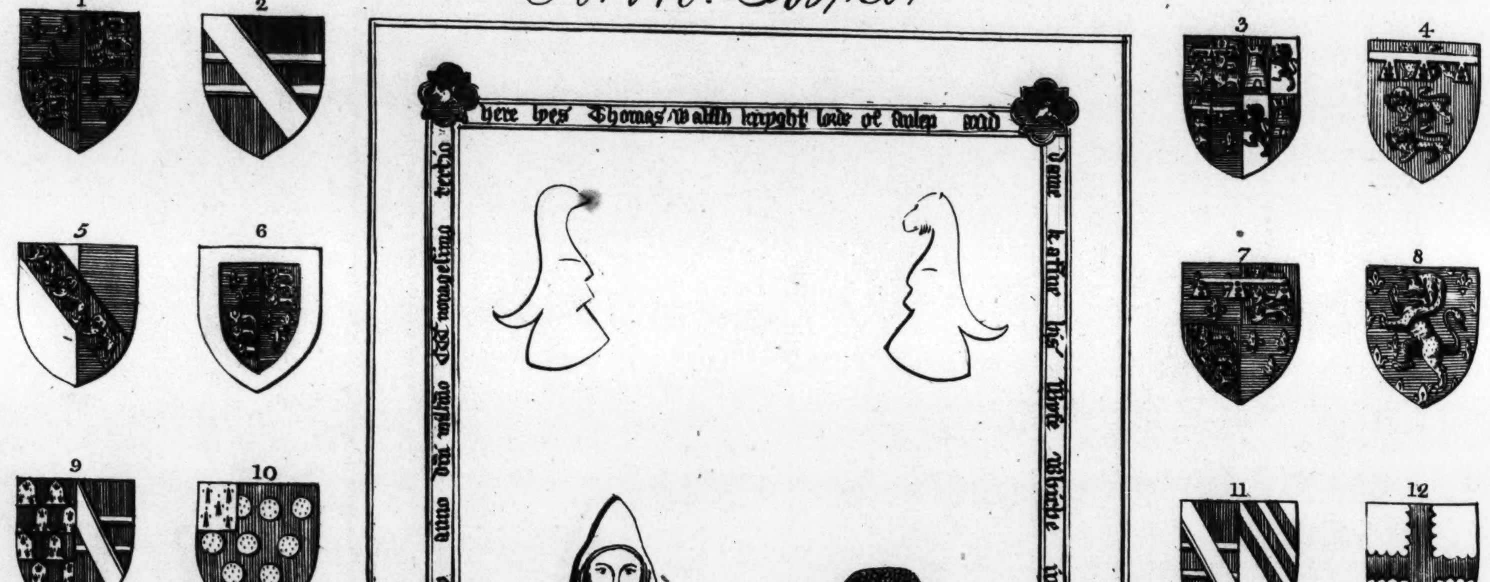
Geo. J. Henderson Sculp.

A Devonshire Bull in the poſseſsion of Chas. Thos. Hudson Esqr. Wanlip Leicestershire.



Prattent del. et sculp.

Arch. Palmer



1
2
3
4 here lyes Thomas Walsh knyght lord of Anlep and Dame Katine his Wyfe Whiche in her tyme made the kirke of Anlep and halud the kirkyerd first in Wurchip of God and of oure lady and seynt Nicholas that god have yer soules and mercy anno dni millmo CCC nonagesimo tercio
5
6
7
8
9
10
11
12
13
14
15
16
17
18
22
23
24
28
27
26
19
25
20 21
29

The lordſhip contains 950 acres of old incloſure, of which ſir Charles Grave Hudſon is the ſole owner.

In 1722, ſeven freeholders polled from this pariſh; but in the liſt of 1775 not one name appears.

	£.	s.	d.
Money raiſed for the poor, within the year ending at Eaſter 1776, —	6	8	6
Expended in county rates, —	2	14	2
———— on the poor, —	5	0	4
Rent of workhouſe and habitations	0	0	0
Expended in litigations, —	0	0	0
Money raiſed for 1783, —	35	1	3
———————— 1784, —	41	12	0
———————— 1785, —	35	4	0
Medium of theſe three years,	37	5	9
——— of county expences,	3	5	3
——— of expences not relating to the poor; repairs of the church, roads, &c.	3	9	10
——— of nett annual expences,	30	10	8
——— of attending on magiſtrates,	1	5	8
——— of entertainments, —	0	0	0
——— of law expences, —	0	3	10
——— of ſetting the poor to work,	0	0	0

The Return made to Parliament in 1786, in anſwer to an enquiry reſpecting the charitable donations in this pariſh, may be ſeen in vol. I. p. 80.

By the Return to Parliament in 1801, Wanlip contained 21 inhabited houſes; 24 families, conſiſting of 55 males and 48 females, total 103; of whom 51 were chiefly employed in agriculture, and 11 in trade, manufactures, &c.

The earlieſt Regiſter begins in 1561; and from that year to 1565 ſeven baptiſms, but no burials, are entered. From 1786 to 1790 were 23 baptiſms, and 16 burials.

Joſhua the ſon of Archdale Palmer, eſq. was born April 9, 1658; and ſprinkled (which the law of England calls baptiſm) the 30th of the ſame month, by Mr. Grace, rector of Rereſby.

The CHURCH, (ſee Plate CXLVI.)

dedicated to St. Nicholas, conſiſts of an embattled body and a South aile, an embattled tower in which hang three bells, and a large South porch.

The nave and chancel were new-paved in 1793; and the church has ſince been wholly new-pewed.

A ſmall but elegant font of variegated marble has alſo been lately placed in this church, the gift and workmanſhip of Mr. Alſop.

In the Matriculus of 1220[1], Wanlip is deſcribed to be under the patronage of the abbot of Leiceſter; the then rector, Walter the clerk, having been inſtituted by Hugh then biſhop of Lincoln, and paying to the church of Rothley half a mark ab antiquo.

In 1344, the procurations were 7*s.* 6¾*d.*; the rectory was taxed at 10 marks and a half; and paid 1*s.* 3*d.* for Peter-pence. The then patron was John Welſh.

In 1534-5, the procurations and ſynodals were 10*s.* 7*d.*; the vicar of Rothley's penſion 6*s.* 8*d.*; and the value of the rectory 15*l.*

In 1552, the commiſſioners reported that the church of Onelepe contained,

"It̃m, one chalice of ſylver.

It̃m, two croſſes, one of tynne, another of braſſe.

It̃m, one cenſur of braſſe.

It̃m, two copes, one of blue velvet, another of whyte chamlet.

It̃m, three veſtments, one of whyte chamlet, another of blacke chamlet, another of grene ſay.

It̃m, thre greate bells and a ſaunce bell, two hand bells.

It̃m, two candelliſtycks of maſtlen."

Richard Benſkin, rector of Wanlip, in 1639, ſued Archdale Palmer, eſq. in the Court of the Archdeacon of Leiceſter; alledging that there were divers parcels of meadows and leys belonging to the glebe, which lay incloſed in part of the ſaid Archdale Palmer's demeſnes of his manor, and that all the lands in the pariſh ought to pay tithe in kind, whereas the demeſnes had for ſome years paſt paid a rent only; and, leſt the glebe lands ſhould be forgotten, and the rent be conſtrained to be a rule by preſcription, the ſaid Benſkin ſued to examine witneſſes in perpetuam rei memoriam, and to have the glebe ſet out, and the tithes aſcertained.—Mr. Palmer alledged, that the parcels of land pretended to be Benſkin's were his freehold and inheritance, and that the rate of 20*s.* a year had, time out of mind, been paid for the tithes of the demeſnes, and no other tithe due; and he obtained a prohibition in the Eccleſiaſtical Court.—Mr. Benſkin proved, that there was half a yard land glebe belonging to the rector, with two cow paſtures and a follower, and ten ſheep commons belonging to the half yard land, and a piece of meadow of about two acres in the town meadow; all which Mr. Palmer did not deny. But, beſides theſe, Mr. Benſkin claims a piece of meadow, of about two acres and a half, lying in the Hall meadow, four cow paſtures in the Hall fields, and ſome pieces of land in the Hall fields, being about ſeven or eight acres. As to the piece of meadow in the Hall meadow, William Perkins only ſaid poſitively that there was ſuch a piece, and that, in his remembrance, it was marked out as belonging to the rectory; but owns, that he did not know the meadow, but had been told it was ſo. All the reſt of the witneſſes ſpoke upon report and hearſay from creditable perſons, that there was a piece of meadow in the Hall meadow, and ſeveral lands in the Hall field, belonging to the parſonage, and that the parſon had four cow paſtures in the Hall fields; and that Mr. Coap, the former parſon, had uſually running in the Hall field for a horſe, mare, or gelding, but on what account they knew not. After Mr. Benſkin's death, the parſonage had been in many hands; and upon the late change, Aug. 15, 1660, the king, by lapſe, preſented Mr. Smith, who (before introduction or induction) procured the juſtices to put him in poſſeſſion of the church, upon the act about miniſters, and afterwards procured inſtitution and induction[2].

"1642. March 21. Ordered, That the High Sheriff of Leiceſterſhire ſhall have power to erect a lecture in the pariſh of Wanlip, in the county of Leiceſter, at his own charges; and that the parſon of the ſaid pariſh ſhall permit the perſon nominated by the ſaid high ſheriff the free uſe of his pulpit, provided that the perſon ſo nominated be orthodox in orders[3]."

"Feb. 24, 1648. Whereas this Committee have, the 2d of November, 1646, graunted the yearely ſumme of fiftie pounds out of the profitts of the impropriate rectory of Hungerton, in the county of Leiceſter, ſequeſtred from ſir Robert Banaſter, delinquent, for increaſe of the maintenance of Thomas Weld, miniſter of the pariſhe church of Onelippe, in the ſaid county, and the ſaid ſir Robert Banaſter hath ſince compounded for the ſame; it is ordered, that the ſaid order be diſcharged: And whereas the rectory of Whitwicke is lately ſequeſtred from the lord viſcount Beaumont, delinquent, of the yearely value of one hundred and fourty pounds or thereabouts; and Mr. Weld, the preſent miniſter there, doth not onely faithfully diſcharge the duties of the ſaid place, but is at great paines and charge in aſſiſting the upholding of ſeverall weekly lectures in divers other places in the ſaid county, it is therefore ordered, that the ſaid Mr. Weld ſhall have one moyety of the tythes, rents, and profitts, of the ſaid rectory of Whitwicke, for increaſe of his maintenance; and the ſequeſtrators of the premiſſes are required to pay the ſame accordingly, at ſuch times and ſeaſons of the yeare as the ſame ſhall become due and payable."

"May 17, 1650. Whereas this Committee have, the 24th of February, 1648, graunted one moyety of one hundred and fourty pounds a yeare, ſequeſtred from the lord viſcount Beaumont, delinquent, out of the rectorie of Whitwicke, in the county of Leiceſter, for increaſe of the maintenance of Mr. Weld, then miniſter of the pariſh church of Onelepp, in the ſaid county, who hath ſince relinquiſhed the ſame; it is ordered, that the ſaid moyety be from henceforth continued and paid unto William Troughton, a godly and orthodox divine, the preſent miniſter of the ſaid church, which the ſequeſtrators of the premiſſes are required to pay accordingly."

---

[1] See the Introductory Volume, p. lviii.

[2] Rev. Samuel Carte, from Palmer's MS Caſes, p. 279.

[3] Journals of the Houſe of Commons, vol. II. p. 491.

"May 20, 1650. By vertue of an order of the Parliament, of the ſecond of May, 1646, it is ordered, that the yearely ſumme of fourty pounds be paid out of the profits of the impropriate rectorie of Shepſhed, in the county of Leiceſter, ſequeſtred from the lord Beamont, papiſt and delinquent, for increaſe of the maintenance of the miniſter of the pariſh church of Oneleppe, in the ſaid county; and the ſequeſtraters of the premiſſes are required to allow and pay the ſame accordingly, at ſuch times and ſeaſons of the yeare as the ſaid rent ſhall grow due and paieable; and all former orders for augmenting the ſaid living are therefore hereby diſcharged [1]."

In 1650, the rectory was returned worth £66. 3*s*. 4*d*. and the incumbent as weak and negligent.

The preſent value in the king's books is £14. 4*s*. 4½*d*.; certified value, £69. 12*s*. 1*d*.

The epiſcopal procurations are 2*s*. 4*d*.; the archidiaconal, 10*s*. 7*d*.; and a penſion is paid to the vicar of Rothley of 6*s*. 8*d*.

Mr. Burton noticed the following arms at Wanlip:

In the Eaſt window of the chancel:

1. Quarterly, France and England.

2. The picture of a knight, armed, kneeling, on whoſe ſurtout, Gules, two bars gemelles, a bend Argent; over againſt whom kneeleth his lady, on whoſe under-garment is the ſame arms; and under him is written, Orate pro anima Thomæ Welſh, militis, qui hoc Templum fieri fecit MCCCLXXXXIII, et pro anima Katherinæ uxoris ejus."

In the South window of the chancel:

France and England.

3. Quarterly, France and England, with a label Ermine; impaling, Quarterly, 1. and 4. Gules, a caſtle Or, kingdom of Caſtile; 2. and 3. Argent, a lion rampant Purpure, kingdom of Leon.

4. Gules, three lions paſſant guardant in pale Or; a label of France; earl of Lancaſter.

5. Per pale, Argent and Azure; on a bend Gules, three lions paſſant guardant Or. Beaufort [2].

The ſame coat with a creſcent.

The ſame coat with a mullet.

In the North window of the chancel:

6. Quarterly, France and England, within a border Argent.

7. The ſame; with a label of three points Argent, each charged with three torteauxes.

8. Azure, ſemé of fleur de lis, a lion rampant Or, Beaumont.

In a North window of the church:

9. Vaire, Ermine and Gules, Greſley; impaling Welſh.

10. Gules, ten bezants, and a canton Ermine, Zouch.

Welſh ſingle.

In another North window:

11. Welſh; impaling, Argent, three bends enhanced Gules, Byron.

12. Argent, a croſs engrailed Gules, Draiton.

13. Welſh; impaling, Argent, two chevrons Gules, a label Azure, Grendon.

In another North window:

14. Welſh; impaling, Ermine, three maſcles voided in feſs Gules, Glenfeild.

15. Azure, three bucks trippant Or, Green.

16. Welſh; impaling, Gules, a feſs Ermine between three maſcles voided Argent, Belgrave.

In the Weſt window in the ſteeple:

17. The coat of Welſh, with helmet and mantle; the creſt, upon a wreath an oſtrich's head holding in the mouth an horſeſhoe Argent, between two piles reverſed Gules.

18. Argent, a chevron between three mullets Sable, Cuilye.

The following arms are taken from eſcutcheons in the church:

Quarterly, 1. and 4. Argent, on two bars Sable, three trefoils of the firſt, in chief a hound currant of the ſecond, collared Or; Palmer; 2. and 3. Azure, on a chevron Or, between three ſwans volant Argent, three roſes Gules; Charlton; on an eſcutcheon Ermine, three boars' heads eraſed and erect Azure; fig. 19.

Argent, on a feſs Gules, between three goats paſſant Sable, a creſcent Argent; Boynton; impaling Palmer; fig. 20.

Party per chevron, embattled Or and Azure, three martlets counterchanged; Hudſon, baronet; fig. 21.

Of all the arms mentioned by Mr. Burton, thoſe in the North window are all that now remain.

RECTORS.	PATRONS.
Walter de Briſtol, 1230.	Abbot and convent of Leiceſter.
Walkelin de Rol', 1233.
Peter Walenſis, 1276.
William de Waleys, 1287.
John Thruham, 1534.
Robert Coip ſigns the Regiſter till 1605.
Richard Benſkin [3], M. A. reſigned 1639.
William Fuller [4], B. A. Feb. 20, 1639.	The king.
Timothy Kirke [5], 1646.	Parliamentary Sequeſtrators.
Thomas Weld, 1648.
John Smith, 1649.
William Troughton, 1650.
Gilbert Woodward, 1653.
John Smith, clerk, July 24, 1656.
John Smith, Aug. 15, 1660.	King Charles II. by lapſe.
Richard Wood, March 13, 1699.	Archdale Palmer, eſq.
Thomas Horton, Sept. 22, 1703; buried Sept. 13, 1738.
George Cardale [6], M. A. July 1, 1739; died 1769.	Anne Palmer, widow.
Robert Burnaby, LL.B. Aug. 28, 1770; preſent rector 1804.	Henry Palmer, eſq.

---

[1] From the original Minute Books of the Committee of Sequeſtration, preſerved in the Bodleian Library at Oxford.

[2] "This coat is here ſet up for Beauforts, natural ſons to John of Gaunt duke of Lancaſter by Katherine his third wife, and was firſt borne by them, but afterwards left and forſaken; and bore the arms of England with differences, as doth appear in Maſter Glover Somerſet's Book of the Catalogue of Honours." BURTON.

[3] He was preſented in 1639 to the vicarage of Sileby. See before, p. 423; and Walker, p. 203.

[4] Rymer, vol. XX. p. 398.

[5] See before, under Preſtwould, p. 354.

[6] Afterwards D. D. and vicar of Rothley by diſpenſation dated March 12, 1759. He publiſhed an Aſſize Sermon in 1755.

MO-

MONUMENTAL INSCRIPTIONS.

Mr. Wyrley noticed the three following epitaphs, not now to be found here[1]:

1. Arms: Welſh, impaling Glenfield; fig. 14.

"Hic jacet Tho' Walſhe, arm', fil' Ricardi Walſhe, arm'; ob. menſ. Julii, 1493."

2. Arms: Quarterly, 1 and 4. Argent, a chevron between three ravens heads Sable; Erdeſwike; 2 and 3. Argent, on a chevron Gules three bezants; fig. 22. On the ſame tomb alſo was graven, Argent, a feſs, three maſcles in chief Sable; Aſton; fig. 23.

"Hic jacet Hugo Erdeſwike, filius et heres Hugonis Erdeſwike de Sandon et Elize uxoris ejus; 1510."

3. Arms; Aſton; impaling, Argent, fretty Sable, Vernon; fig. 24.

"Hic jacet Maria Aſton, uxor Ed' Aſton, arm', una filiarum Hen' Vernon, militis; ob. 1525."

Near the pulpit is a white ſtone, on which ſome faint traces of a figure of a knight in armour are ſtill left; at his feet is a lion couchant: the figure of the woman is entirely obliterated. The following fragment of an inſcription remains:

. . . . uxor ejus, que obiit iiº die menſ' . . . . . .
. . . April. anno Dñi MºCCCCºXLI. quor' . . .

The letters, as well as the lines of the figure, are filled with pitch[2].

In the chancel:

On the floor, at the entrance, is a ſtone in high preſervation, with two very capital braſſes, repreſenting a knight and his lady, Plate CXLVI; and this inſcription, in fine preſervation, round the edge:

"Here lyes Thomas Walſſhe, knyght, lorde of Anlep, and dame Kat'rine his wife, which in her tyme made the kirk of Anlep, and haylud the kirkyerd
firſt, in wirchip of God, and of oure Lady, and Seynt Nicholas, that God have yer ſoules and mercy. Anno Dñi mill'mo CCC nonageſimo tertio[3]."

On a mural tablet of black marble on the North ſide:

Arms: Palmer; impaling, Azure, two bars between three pheons Or; fig. 25.

"Adſis, Viator:
Quid eris, memento.
Quod tu es, olim fuit
Archdalus Palmer, armiger,
Gulielmi Palmer Londinenſis filius,
Patronymicus Eboracenſis,
è minore ſtirpe tranſmigrante
ad Marſton, in agro Staffordienſi, hujuſque Comitatûs bis Vicecomes;
Qui filios binos filiaſque quaternas
Spe vitæ æternæ præmiſit;
Natos quinque nataſque duas ſuperſtites
in mortali umbrâ reliquit:
Quemque dilectiſſima marita Martha,
Thomæ Smith, Londini, armigeri, nata,
Fide reſtorationis beatæ hic repoſuit;
Seque juxta peramantiſſimum recondi juſſit.
Obiit ſexto die Auguſti, anno æræ Chriſtianæ 1673,
ætatis ſuæ 64.
Quod eſt, eris.
Abi, Lector. Perpende; præſto ſis. Feſtina."

On a tablet of white marble on the North ſide:

Arms: Sable, on a bend Gules, three martlets Or, firſt wife; impaling Palmer; and impaling, Per pale, Argent and Sable, a ſaltire counterchanged, Hunt; fig. 26.

"Hic juxta ſitum eſt corpus Gulielmi Palmer, arm.
Qui de Elizabethâ, filiâ Gulielmi Danvers,
gen. de Swithland,
in comitatu Leiceſtriæ, quatuor filios, Archdale,
Thomam, Gulielmum, & Henricum;
& de Marthâ filiâ Thomæ Hunt de Boreaſton in comitatu Salopienſi, filios duos Joannem & Samuelem,
& Martham filiam unicam, reliquit ſuperſtites.
Obiit decimo octavo die Aprilis,
anno poſt Chriſti natum 1692, ætat. 56.
Vir bonus, juſtus, ac pius."

On a monument of white marble on the South ſide:

Palmer; impaling, Ermine, on a canton Azure, a ſtag trippant Argent; Danvers; impaling again, Azure, on a chevron Or, between three ſwans volant Argent, three roſes Gules; Charlton; fig. 27.

"Near this lie the remains of Archdale Palmer, eſq.
one of the repreſentatives in Parliament for the Borough of Leiceſter in the year 1695; who, by Mary daughter of Joſeph Dawſon,
citizen of London,
had ten ſons and one daughter; of which
William and Elizabeth only ſurvived him.
Mary their mother died in the year 1695,
and was buried near this place.
By Anne daughter of Nicholas Charlton, citizen of London, he had nine ſons and ſix daughters; of whom Henry, Thomas,
Archdale, Charlton, Anne, Catharine,
Mary, Barbara, and Betty, ſurvived him.
He died Sept. 15, 1732, in the 71ſt year of his age.
Anne, his ſecond wife, at whoſe deſire this monument was erected, died on the 6th of July, 1764, in the 92d year of her age, and is interred near him.
He was an honeſt man, a firm and able magiſtrate,
a good father, and an affectionate huſband."

Under the rails of the altar:

Palmer; impaling Gules, a chevron between three mullets round pierced; Danvers. Creſt, a greyhound ſegreant Sable, collared Or; fig. 28.

"Here lies the body of John Palmer, late of Great Chelſea, in the county of Middleſex, eſq. eldeſt ſon of Archdale Palmer, of Wanlip, eſq.
by Mrs. Mary Dawſon his firſt wife.
He was a gentleman ſincere in his Religion, of an affable and pleaſant converſation. His death was greatly lamented by all that knew him.
He married Anne, one of the daughters of Samuel Danvers, of Swithland, in this county, eſq. by Mrs. Elizabeth Moreward, his only wife, and relict.
He had iſſue one ſon, named Archdale;
and one daughter, named Anne.
His ſorrowful widow and daughter only ſurvived him.
He died the 25th day of Auguſt, anno Dom. 1747, aged 52."

"Here lies the body of Jane Simons, the widow of Matthew Simons, eldeſt ſon of John Simons, of Belgrave, eſq.
and only daughter of the rev. Mr. Peter Potter, late rector of Thurleſton.
She departed this life Dec. 14, 1740, aged 33."

On flat ſtones:

1. "Hic jacet corpus Mariæ uxoris Thomæ Palmer, filiæ Bartholomæi Cradock de Farndon;
obiit 7º Maii, 1676, ætat. 27."

2. Arms of Charlton.

"Here lieth the body of Nicholas Charlton, citizen and merchant-taylor of London,
who departed this life Sept. 9, 1700, ætatis ſuæ 60.
Here alſo lieth the body of Nicholas Charlton, ſon of Robert Charlton,
who died Feb. 21, 1716-17, aged 42,
much lamented by all who knew him.
The end of that man is peace."

3. "Here lieth the body of Mrs. Eleanor Danvers, one of the daughters of Samuel Danvers, of Swithland, in the county of Leiceſter, eſq.

---

[1] Biſhop Sanderſon, having ſeen the ſpoil and havock made in the times of uſurpation, both in his own cathedral and throughout the kingdom, gives the following admonition to his Clergy in his Viſitation of 1662: "Alſo the Clergy are deſired to bring with them in writing a roll of all ſuch coats of arms as are in the church windows, and of all ſuch monuments, graveſtones, and inſcriptions, whether of antient or later date, as are yet remaining in their ſeveral churches or chapels, or the chancels thereof." From the original Viſitation Charge.

[2] This was taken in 1791; but is now no longer preſerved.

[3] The inſcription is very imperfectly given by Burton, p. 299; and not correctly by Staveley, who reads the name Wallis, in his "Hiſtory of Churches," p. 138.

She died in October, 1758.
Her piety to her God, her charity to the poor, joined with a great degree of every Chriſtian virtue,
made her beloved and lamented by all that knew her.
Her friends have loſt a moſt valuable treaſure,
the poor a generous benefactor,
and her acquaintance a moſt excellent example."

On a mural tablet on the South ſide of the church:

Arms: Sable, a chevron between three harts' heads eraſed Argent; fig. 29.

"The rev. William Spencer, D. D. rector of Thurnſchoe, in the county of York, gave in his life-time five pounds yearly for ever,
to be paid to the poor of Wanlip,
where he was born, commencing at Lady-day, 1714.
Walter Spencer, of Wanlip, gave 5*s*.
to the poor of this place, to be paid yearly for ever,
at two equal payments,
the one at Chriſtmas, the other at Eaſter, out of his eſtate lying in the liberty of Rothley, 1710."

On a flat ſtone near the church-door:

"Here lieth the body
of Walter Spencer,
who departed this life
February 12, 1708,
aged 68 years,
and 8 months.

Here lieth the body
of Judith Spencer,
who departed this life
March 22, 1720,
aged 85 years
and 8 months.

A loving brother and a ſiſter dear,
Till Death did part them they together were;
A batchelor and maiden they did die:
Through Chriſt, we hope, they'll live eternally."

In the church-yard:

"Here lie the remains of Francis and Iſaac Alſop, two of the ſons of Mr. Francis Alſop, of this pariſh, by Anne his wife.
They accidentally died, much lamented;
Francis, Aug. 27, 1767, aged 31;
and Iſaac, Jan. 25, 1768, aged 27.
With deepeſt thought, Spectator, read their fate;
How mortals paſs to an immortal ſtate.
Here lie entomb'd in careful parents tears
Two youthful branches cropt in tender years:
By ſudden death each did a victim fall,
To the great grief of parents, friends, and all.
Each fled, we truſt, borne on ſeraphic wings
From hence, to dwell with Chriſt the King of Kings."

"Francis Alſop, died Dec. 25, 1775, aged 75.
Anne Alſop, died April 5, 1784, ætat 73."

Elizabeth Burſlem, died Dec. 29, 1782, aged 61.
Henry Fiſher, died Sept. 13, 1757, aged 76.
Elizabeth, wife of Henry Fiſher, died July 29, 1725, aged 51.
Mary Fiſher, died Feb. 2, 1741, aged 62.
Robert Fiſher, died Feb. 27, 1776, aged 59.
Elizabeth Fiſher, died Sept. 17, 1782, aged 64.
Anne Fiſher, died May 18, 1779, aged 23.
William Barfoot, died March 4, 1759.

An additional view of Wanlip Hall, with a view of Rothley Temple, are given in Plate CXLVII.

PEDIGREE of WALSH, or WALEYS, of WANLIP.

Roger Wallenſis, temp. Hen. II.=.....

Roger Wallenſis, 6 John.=.....

1. Roger le Walleis.=Maud, da. and coheir of Henry de Anlep.[1]
2. William Walleis, knt. 53 Hen. III. ob. ſ. p.

Sir William Wallenſis, of Anleppe, knt. 34 Hen. III.=....
Joan, wife of John, ſon of Peter ſon of Roger, knt.

William le Wallenſis, rector of the church of Anleppe.
Sir Roger Wallenſis, knt. 35 Edw. I. died ſ. p.=Amicia, da. of Peter ſon of Roger de Cugtho, re-mar. to John de Chetwood, knt.
Robert Walſche, of Anleppe, 35 Edw. I.=Elizabeth.....

John le Walſche, of Anleppe, knt. 13 E. II. and 6 E. III.=....

Sir Thomas le Walſche, de Anleppe, knt.=Katherine.....; will dated 9 Hen. IV.

1. Sir William de Walſche, knt. died ſ. p.
2. John le Walſche, lord of Anlep, m. Iſabella, da. and coheir of John Grey, of Sandiacre; died ſ. p.
3. Thomas le Walſche, m. Margaret, wife of ſir Thomas Greſley, knt. of Drakelow, co. Derby; died ſ. p.
Elizabeth, wife of ſir John Boywill, knt.
4. Richard Walſche, of Anlep, 11, 29 Hen. VI.=Helen, d. and coheir[2] of Alan Waldeiſe, by Joan da. and heir of ſir Richard de Witenton, knt.

Thomas Welſh, of Wanlip, died 1493; first huſband.=Margery, daughter and coheir of ſir Richard Byron, knt. of Clayton, co. Lancaſter.=Robert Staunton, ſecond huſband.

John Fielding, eſq. first huſband.=Helen, daughter and coheir.=William Lyttelton, of Frankley, c. Worceſter, kt.; 2d huſband.
Elizabeth, daughter and coheir.=Sir Ralph Shirley, of Staunton Harold, knt.

Joan, daughter and heir of her mother, married ſir John Aſton, of Haywood, Staffordſhire, kt.; and, in right of his wife, lord of Wanlip and of Tixhall; died in 1524.
Anne, heir to her mother, married ſir Thomas Poultney, of Miſterton, knt.

[1] De Anlep, or Onlep, per cartam ſine dat. viſ. per me Peter Le Neve, Norroy. Dominus Robertus Waleys de Swithland, Willielmus Le Waleys de Anlep, Johannes Falconarius de Thurkeſton, Johannes filius Petri, milites, teſtes cartar' Willielmi de Ferrariis ſine dat', penes P. Le Neve, Norroy, inter cartas com' Leic'.

[2] Margaret, the other daughter and coheir, was married to Thomas Hore, of Elmedon, co. Warwick.

PEDIGREE of CORBETT, of WANLIP.

... Corbett, of Powſbury, co. Salop.=...

1. John Corbett.
2. Anthony Corbett, of Wanlip.=Mary, d. of Hugh Bradſhawe, of Morebarne.
3. Edward Corbett.

1. Chriſtopher Corbett, of Wanlip, co. Leiceſter, and of Stretton, co. Rutland.=Anne, dau. to ... Wymarke, of Luffnam, co. Rutland.
2. Thomas; d. ſ. p.
3. Roger Corbett.=Mary, dau. of Tho. Clarke, of Leiceſter.
4. Humfrey Corbett, of London, merchant-tailor, ſ. p.=Agnes, da. of George Jue, of Haddon in Suffolk.

1. Arthur Corbett. 2. Humfrey Corbett. 3. Roger Corbett.

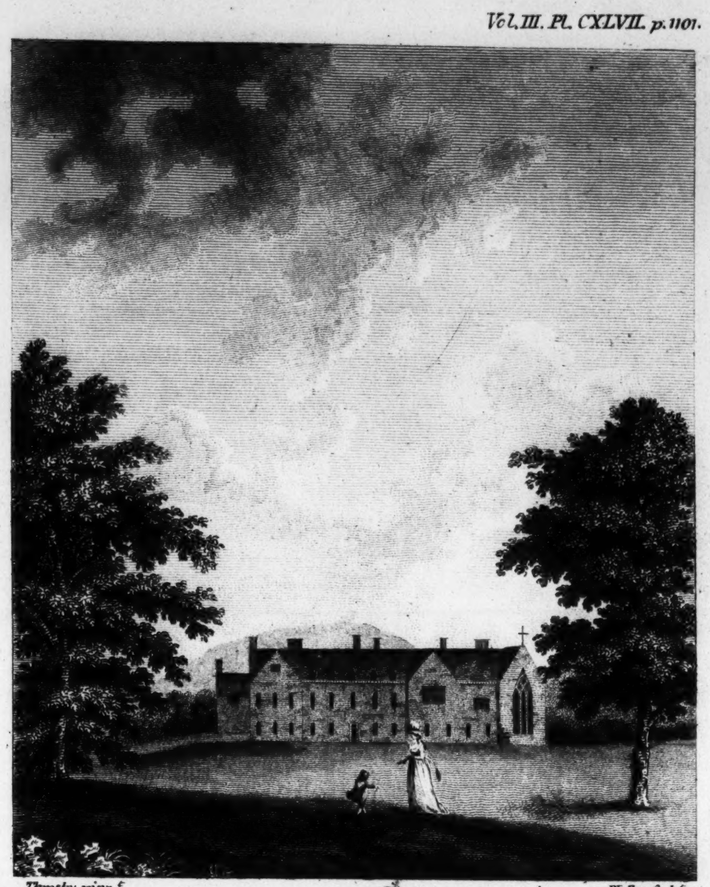
1. Rowland Corbett, of Rutland, and of Newington, co. Middleſex.=...
2. Arthur Corbett, of Clipſham, co. Rutland, 1618.=...

John, æt. 17, in 1618.

Rowland Corbett.=.... daughter and coheir of ſir Thomas Fowler, of Iſlington, bart.

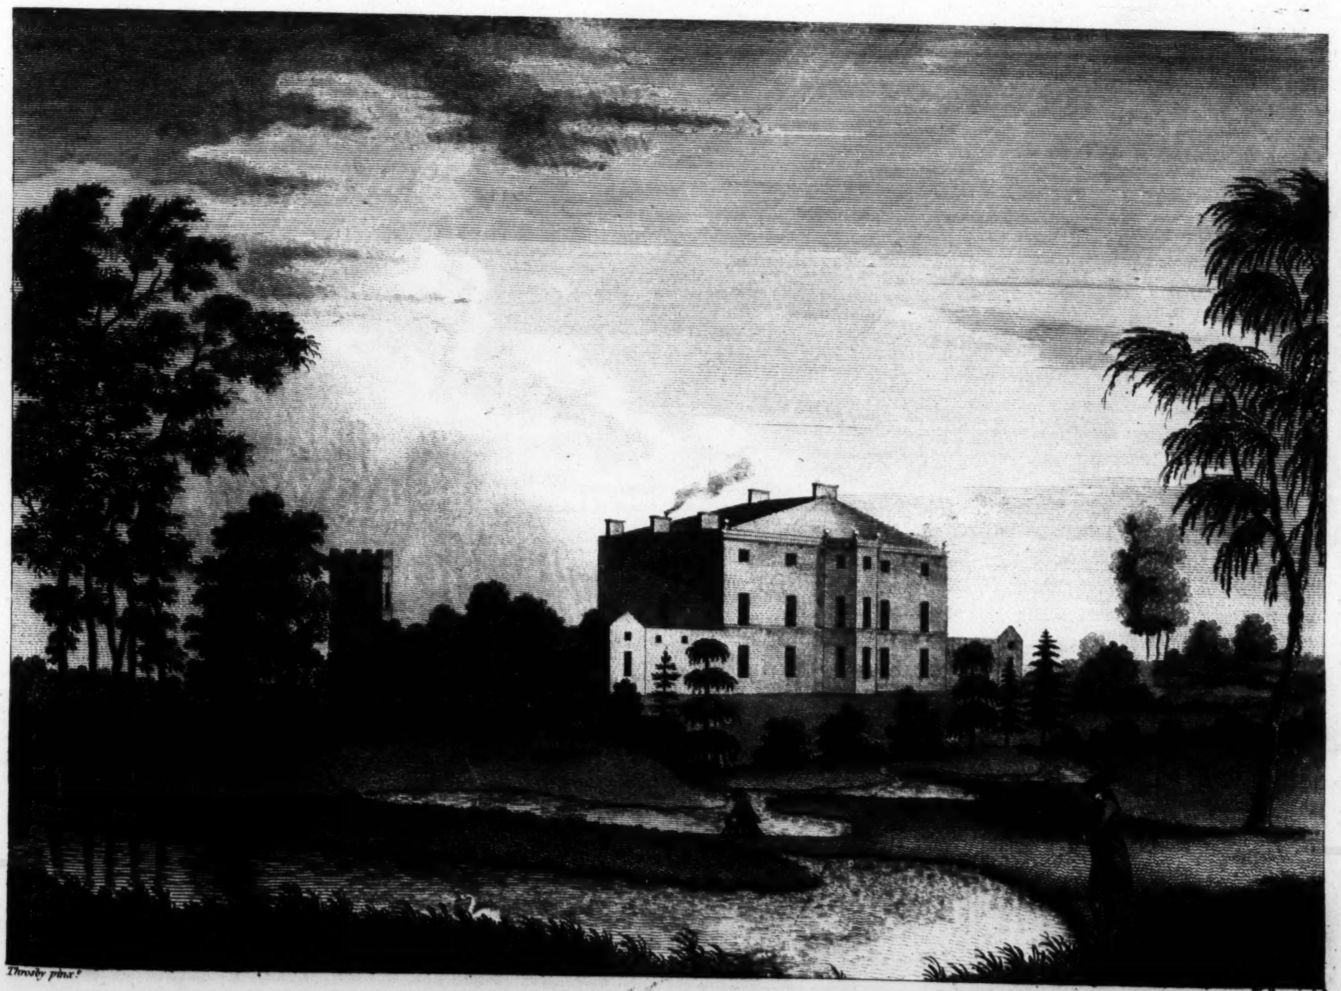
1. Thomas Corbett. 2. Rachel.

Vol. III. Pl. CXLVII. p. 1101.



Throsby pinx.t
Walker ſculp.t

ROTHLEY TEMPLE,
The Seat
of Thomas Babington Esq.r

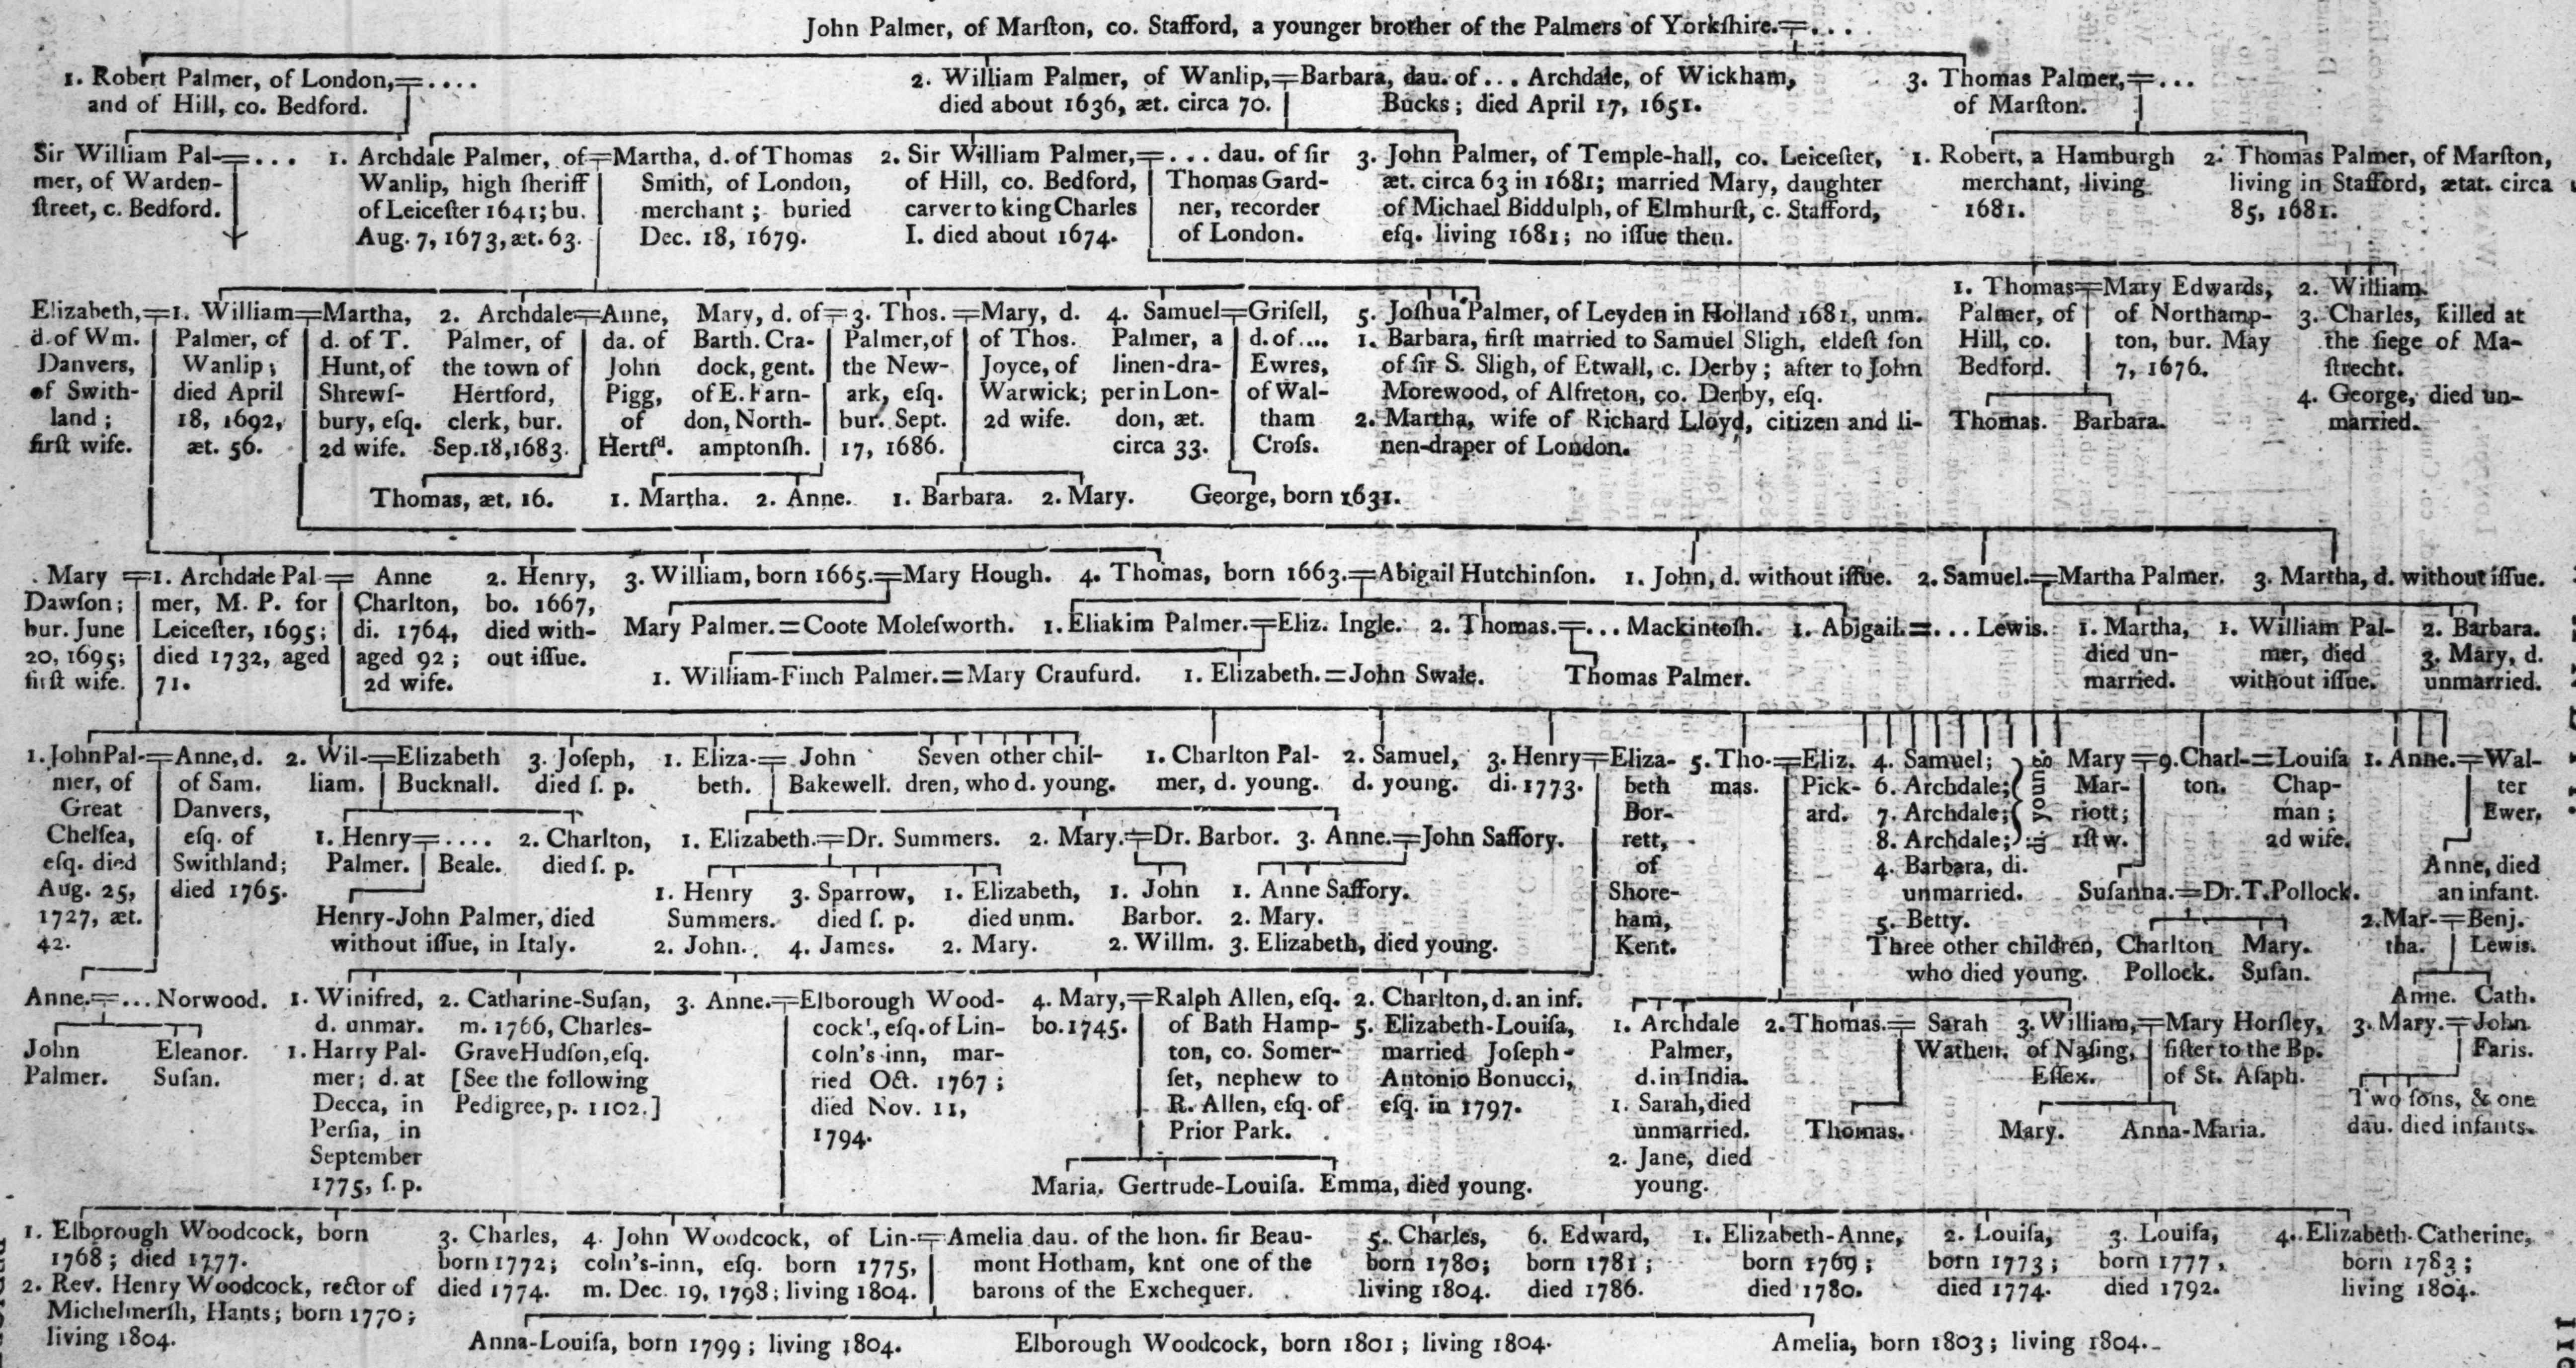


Throsby pinx.t
Walker ſculp.t

WANLIP HALL
The Seat of Sir Charles Grave Hudson Bar.t

PEDIGREE of PALMER, of WANLIP;

Entered at Leicester, by WILLIAM PALMER, March 24, 1681-2; and continued from original documents.



John Palmer, of Marston, co. Stafford, a younger brother of the Palmers of Yorkshire. = . . .

1. Robert Palmer, of London, and of Hill, co. Bedford. = ...
2. William Palmer, of Wanlip, died about 1636, æt. circa 70. = Barbara, dau. of . . . Archdale, of Wickham, Bucks; died April 17, 1651.
3. Thomas Palmer, of Marston. = . . .

Sir William Palmer, of Warden-street, c. Bedford. = . . .
1. Archdale Palmer, of Wanlip, high sheriff of Leicester 1641; bu. Aug. 7, 1673, æt. 63. = Martha, d. of Thomas Smith, of London, merchant; buried Dec. 18, 1679.
2. Sir William Palmer, of Hill, co. Bedford, carver to king Charles I. died about 1674. = . . . dau. of sir Thomas Gardner, recorder of London.
3. John Palmer, of Temple-hall, co. Leicester, æt. circa 63 in 1681; married Mary, daughter of Michael Biddulph, of Elmhurst, c. Stafford, esq. living 1681; no issue then.
1. Robert, a Hamburgh merchant, living 1681.
2. Thomas Palmer, of Marston, living in Stafford, ætat. circa 85, 1681.

Elizabeth, d. of Wm. Danvers, of Swithland; first wife. = 1. William Palmer, of Wanlip; died April 18, 1692, æt. 56. = Martha, d. of T. Hunt, of Shrewsbury, esq. 2d wife.
2. Archdale Palmer, of the town of Hertford, clerk, bur. Sep. 18, 1683. = Anne, da. of John Pigg, of Hertfd.
Mary, d. of Barth. Cradock, gent. of E. Farndon, Northamptonsh. = 3. Thos. Palmer, of the Newark, esq. bur. Sept. 17, 1686. = Mary, d. of Thos. Joyce, of Warwick; 2d wife.
4. Samuel Palmer, a linen-draper in London, æt. circa 33. = Grisell, d. of . . . . Ewres, of Waltham Cross.
5. Joshua Palmer, of Leyden in Holland 1681, unm.
1. Barbara, first married to Samuel Sligh, eldest son of sir S. Sligh, of Etwall, c. Derby; after to John Morewood, of Alfreton, co. Derby, esq.
2. Martha, wife of Richard Lloyd, citizen and linen-draper of London.
1. Thomas Palmer, of Hill, co. Bedford. = Mary Edwards, of Northampton, bur. May 7, 1676.
2. William.
3. Charles, killed at the siege of Mastrecht.
4. George, died unmarried.

Thomas, æt. 16.
1. Martha. 2. Anne.
1. Barbara. 2. Mary.
George, born 1631.
Thomas. Barbara.

Mary Dawson; bur. June 20, 1695; first wife. = 1. Archdale Palmer, M. P. for Leicester, 1695; died 1732, aged 71. = Anne Charlton, di. 1764, aged 92; 2d wife.
2. Henry, bo. 1667, died without issue.
3. William, born 1665. = Mary Hough.
4. Thomas, born 1663. = Abigail Hutchinson.
1. John, d. without issue.
2. Samuel. = Martha Palmer.
3. Martha, d. without issue.

Mary Palmer. = Coote Molesworth.
1. Eliakim Palmer. = Eliz. Ingle.
2. Thomas. = . . . Mackintosh.
1. Abigail. = . . . Lewis.
1. Martha, died unmarried.
1. William Palmer, died without issue.
2. Barbara.
3. Mary, d. unmarried.

1. William-Finch Palmer. = Mary Craufurd.
1. Elizabeth. = John Swale.
Thomas Palmer.

1. John Palmer, of Great Chelsea, esq. died Aug. 25, 1727, æt. 42. = Anne, d. of Sam. Danvers, esq. of Swithland; died 1765.
2. William. = Elizabeth Bucknall.
3. Joseph, died s. p.
1. Elizabeth. = John Bakewell.
Seven other children, who d. young.
1. Charlton Palmer, d. young.
2. Samuel, d. young.
3. Henry di. 1773. = Elizabeth Borrett, of Shoreham, Kent.
5. Thomas. = Eliz. Pickard.
4. Samuel;
6. Archdale;
7. Archdale;
8. Archdale; } di. young.
4. Barbara, di. unmarried.
5. Betty.
Three other children, who died young.
Mary Marriott; 1st w. = 9. Charlton. = Louisa Chapman; 2d wife.
1. Anne. = Walter Ewer.

1. Henry Palmer. = ... Beale.
2. Charlton, died s. p.
1. Elizabeth. = Dr. Summers.
2. Mary. = Dr. Barbor.
3. Anne. = John Saffory.
Susanna. = Dr. T. Pollock.
Anne, died an infant.
2. Martha. = Benj. Lewis.

Henry-John Palmer, died without issue, in Italy.
1. Henry Summers.
2. John.
3. Sparrow, died s. p.
4. James.
1. Elizabeth, died unm.
2. Mary.
1. John Barbor.
2. Willm.
1. Anne Saffory.
2. Mary.
3. Elizabeth, died young.
Charlton Pollock.
Mary. Susan.
Anne. Cath.
3. Mary. = John Faris.

Anne. = . . . Norwood.
1. Winifred, d. unmar.
1. Harry Palmer; d. at Decca, in Persia, in September 1775, s. p.
2. Catharine-Susan, m. 1766, Charles-Grave Hudson, esq. [See the following Pedigree, p. 1102.]
3. Anne. = Elborough Woodcock[1], esq. of Lincoln's-inn, married Oct. 1767; died Nov. 11, 1794.
4. Mary, bo. 1745. = Ralph Allen, esq. of Bath Hampton, co. Somerset, nephew to R. Allen, esq. of Prior Park.
2. Charlton, d. an inf.
5. Elizabeth-Louisa, married Joseph-Antonio Bonucci, esq. in 1797.
1. Archdale Palmer, d. in India.
1. Sarah, died unmarried.
2. Jane, died young.
2. Thomas. = Sarah Wathen.
3. William, of Nasing, Essex. = Mary Horsley, sister to the Bp. of St. Asaph.
Two sons, & one dau. died infants.

John Palmer. Eleanor. Susan.
Maria. Gertrude-Louisa. Emma, died young.
Thomas.
Mary. Anna-Maria.

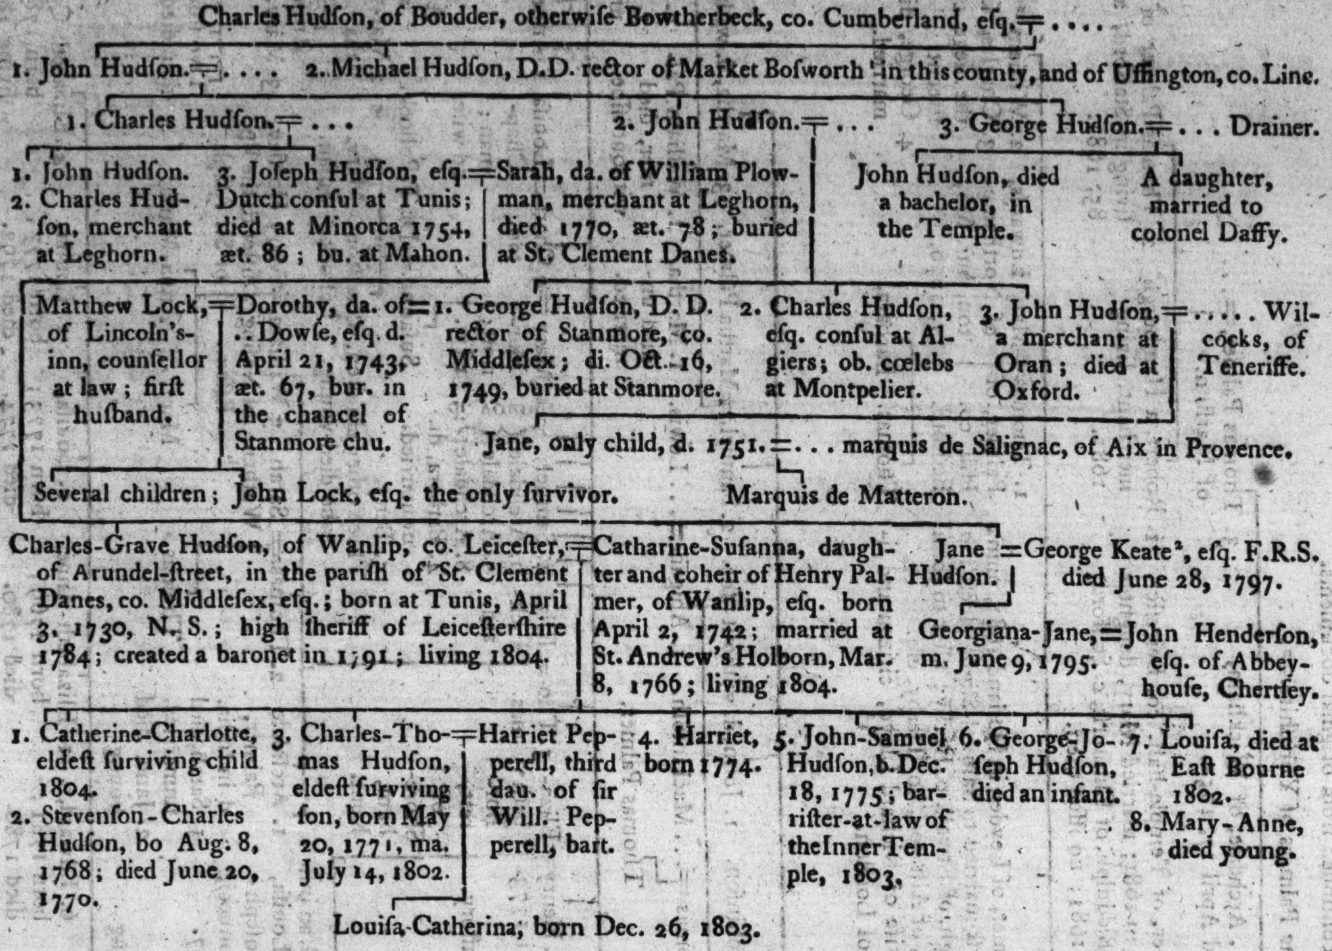
1. Elborough Woodcock, born 1768; died 1777.
2. Rev. Henry Woodcock, rector of Michelmersh, Hants; born 1770; living 1804.
3. Charles, born 1772; died 1774.
4. John Woodcock, of Lincoln's-inn, esq. born 1775, m. Dec. 19, 1798; living 1804. = Amelia dau. of the hon. sir Beaumont Hotham, knt one of the barons of the Exchequer.
5. Charles, born 1780; living 1804.
6. Edward, born 1781; died 1786.
1. Elizabeth-Anne, born 1769; died 1780.
2. Louisa, born 1773; died 1774.
3. Louisa, born 1777, died 1792.
4. Elizabeth-Catherine, born 1783; living 1804.

Anna-Louisa, born 1799; living 1804.
Elborough Woodcock, born 1801; living 1804.
Amelia, born 1803; living 1804.

---

[1] This gentleman, as his father had been before him, was one of the first solicitors in London. His father Edward Woodcock, esq. died Aug. 22, 1790, at the age of 84; and his elder brother the Rev. Dr. Woodcock, vicar of Watford, Herts, and rector of the united parishes of St. Michael Wood-street, and of St. Mary Stayning, June 6, 1792.

PEDIGREE of HUDSON, of LONDON, now of WANLIP.



Charles Hudſon, of Boudder, otherwiſe Bowtherbeck, co. Cumberland, eſq. = ...

1. John Hudſon. = ...

2. Michael Hudſon, D.D. rector of Market Boſworth [1] in this county, and of Uffington, co. Linc.

1. Charles Hudſon. = ...

2. John Hudſon. = ...

3. George Hudſon. = ... Drainer.

1. John Hudſon.

2. Charles Hudſon, merchant at Leghorn.

3. Joſeph Hudſon, eſq. Dutch conſul at Tunis; died at Minorca 1754, æt. 86; bu. at Mahon. = Sarah, da. of William Plowman, merchant at Leghorn, died 1770, æt. 78; buried at St. Clement Danes.

John Hudſon, died a bachelor, in the Temple.

A daughter, married to colonel Daffy.

Matthew Lock, of Lincoln's-inn, counſellor at law; firſt huſband. = Dorothy, da. of .. Dowſe, eſq. d. April 21, 1743, æt. 67, bur. in the chancel of Stanmore chu. = 1. George Hudſon, D. D. rector of Stanmore, co. Middleſex; di. Oct. 16, 1749, buried at Stanmore.

2. Charles Hudſon, eſq. conſul at Algiers; ob. cœlebs at Montpelier.

3. John Hudſon, a merchant at Oran; died at Oxford. = ... Wilcocks, of Teneriffe.

Jane, only child, d. 1751. = ... marquis de Salignac, of Aix in Provence.

Several children; John Lock, eſq. the only ſurvivor.

Marquis de Matteron.

Charles-Grave Hudſon, of Wanlip, co. Leiceſter, of Arundel-ſtreet, in the pariſh of St. Clement Danes, co. Middleſex, eſq.; born at Tunis, April 3, 1730, N. S.; high ſheriff of Leiceſterſhire 1784; created a baronet in 1791; living 1804. = Catharine-Suſanna, daughter and coheir of Henry Palmer, of Wanlip, eſq. born April 2, 1742; married at St. Andrew's Holborn, Mar. 8, 1766; living 1804.

Jane Hudſon. = George Keate [2], eſq. F.R.S. died June 28, 1797.

Georgiana-Jane, m. June 9, 1795. = John Henderſon, eſq. of Abbey-houſe, Chertſey.

1. Catherine-Charlotte, eldeſt ſurviving child 1804.

2. Stevenſon-Charles Hudſon, bo Aug. 8, 1768; died June 20, 1770.

3. Charles-Thomas Hudſon, eldeſt ſurviving ſon, born May 20, 1771, ma. July 14, 1802. = Harriet Pepperell, third dau. of ſir Will. Pepperell, bart.

4. Harriet, born 1774.

5. John-Samuel Hudſon, b. Dec. 18, 1775; barriſter-at-law of the Inner Temple, 1803.

6. George-Joſeph Hudſon, died an infant.

7. Louiſa, died at Eaſt Bourne 1802.

8. Mary-Anne, died young.

Louiſa-Catherina; born Dec. 26, 1803.

---

[1] Under which pariſh a full account of the ſufferings of this eminent Loyaliſt will be given.

[2] Well known by his ſeveral ingenious publications; and eſpecially by a very excellent "Account of the Pelew Iſlands," which he drew up and publiſhed in 1788. See Gent. Mag. vol. LXVII. p. 613.—To this reſpectable gentleman, who cultivated with conſiderable ſucceſs the ſiſter arts of Poetry and Painting, I have the pleaſure of recollecting that I was under many obligations at a very early period of my apprenticeſhip.

LONG WHATTON,

ſo called from its length, as being above a mile from Eaſt to Weſt, ſtands near unto a rivulet which runneth from Belton, united to a ſmall brook running from Diſeworth. It is diſtant from Loughborough four miles Weſt-North-Weſt; and, in the eccleſiaſtical diviſion of the county, is within the deanry of Akeley. There are two turnpike roads through the pariſh; one the Mancheſter and London, &c.; the other leading from Aſhby-de-la-Zouch to join the Nottingham turnpike road at Rempſton.

The village is ſituated in a valley, ſurrounded by a good deal of wood, with the ground riſing immediately from the ſtreet on the South ſide, and from the brook on the North ſide of it. The lordſhip contains upwards of 1900 acres; the ſoil being moſtly clay.

I cannot diſcover in Domeſday book any article correſponding with Whatton; but this lordſhip appears to have been part of the extenſive domain of Hugo de Grentemaiſnell, from whom it deſcended to Robert Boſſu earl of Leiceſter; who gave the church of Whatton, and one yard land here, to the abbot and convent of St. Mary de Pratis; whoſe poſſeſſions in this lordſhip are thus noticed in their Regiſter:

"Habemus advocationem eccleſie de Whatton, ex dono fundatoris noſtri, & ex confirmatione regis Henrici, &c. quia ex ſocâ Schepiſhed. Et habemus xx s̄. pro annuâ pencione à rectore ibidem. Et eſt Whatton unum de ſochâ de Schepiſhed.

"Matriculus epiſcopi. 'Eccleſia de Whatton, patronus abbas Leyc'; perſona Leodegarus inſtitutus per H. nunc Lincolnie epiſcopum, ſolvens dicto abbati xx s̄. ab antiquo.'

"Nota taxationes decimarum & ſententiones diffinitivas pro iſtâ pencione, & condemnationes.

"Habemus ibidem I meſſuagium, I virgatam terre, & I croftum, ex dono Roberti comitis Leyc', que Willielmus Savage jam tenet; & reddit XII s̄. & ſectam curie ad Schepyſheyd vel Lokynton. Et ſolvit ad commune fyn II đ. Et habemus ibi wayſe & ſtreyſe.

"Habemus ibidem IIII đ. per annum a domino Johanne Lebconer, pro II virgatis terre, cum medietate unius gardini & unius tofti, que nos quondam clamavimus uſque Petrum filium Radulphi & Adeliciam uxorem ejus in curiâ domini regis; & que dedimus eis, & per cartam noſtram eis confirmavimus, tenend' de nobis in perpetuum, reddendo annuatim nobis IIII đ. ad Paſch' pro omni ſervicio, ut patet in cartâ.

"Habemus ibidem quietam clamationem Roberti comitis Leyc', & conceſſionem de predictâ virgatâ terre in Whatton; preterea & quietam clamationem de omni actione & demandâ quam habuit adverſus nos & homines noſtros liberos & villanos ac terras ſuper viſu francplegii ubicunque in dominico ſuo, & quod cartis ſuis de libertatibus per reges Anglie nobis conceſſis liberè ac pacificè poſſumus uti, &c.[1]"

In the terrier referred to under Barkby, p. 45, Whatton fills one page; but the lordſhip is not noticed in the Teſta de Nevill, compiled about 1240.

In the beginning of the reign of king Henry III. Margaret de Quency, counteſs of Wincheſter, widow of Saer' de Quency earl of Wincheſter, and ſiſter and coheir of Robert Fitzparnell earl of Leiceſter, confirmed ſix yards land in this town to Brian Fitz-William her Foreſter, as appeareth by her deed in theſe words:

"Sciant preſentes & futuri, quod ego Margareta de Quency, comitiſſa Wintonie, conceſſi & hâc preſenti cartâ meâ confirmavi Briano filio Willielmi, foreſtario meo, ſex virgatas terre in Whatton, cum omnibus pertinenciis ſuis; ſcilicet, illas quas Alicia de Notele ei vendidit, quietum clamavit, & heredibus ſuis, de ſe & heredibus ſuis, in curiâ meâ de Legeceſtriâ, tenend' & habend' de me & heredibus meis, ſibi & heredibus ſuis, in perpetuum, benè & in pace, liberè & quietè, jure hereditario, abſque ullo retenemento, cum hominibus eandem terram tenentibus, cum totâ ſequelâ eorum, & cum viginti porcis quietis de panagio in foreſtâ meâ de Legeceſtriâ, faciendo mihi inde ſervicium, & mihi et heredibus meis ille & heredes ſui quedam calcaria deaurata annuatim ad Paſch' pro omnibus ſervitiis, ſicut carta predicte Alicie de venditione & quietâ clamatione, quam predictus Brianus habet, teſtatur. Ut hec autem conceſſio & preſentis carte mea confirmatio rata ſit & firma, eum ſigilli mei munimine corroboravi. His teſtibus; Willielmo de Cnapwell, tunc ſeneſcallo meo, Ricardo de Trumpiton, Sahero de Sancto Andreâ, Odinello de Albinico, Johanne Fryday, Magiſtro Alexandro de Witeby, Hen' Biſet, Willielmo de Trengeſton, Roberto Godeberd, Alano de Whatton, & multis aliis[2]."

"You may perceive by the ſeal affixed to this deed (which is now in my cuſtody), that though Maſter Brooke Yorke, in his Catalogue of Nobility, have written that Saere de Quincy earl of Wincheſter did bear for his arms a feſs and a label of twelve points, which he affirmeth there to be in a ſeal annexed to a charter in his cuſtody, yet the ſaid Saere did bear Gules, ſeven maſcles Or, which in this ſeal you ſee drawn upon the inner garment of Margaret his counteſs, and in the upper eſcutcheon next to her hood. So then Roger de Quincy his ſon, earl of Wincheſter, was not the firſt that aſſumed the maſcles, as ſome have not long ſince written. In this ſeal may be further obſerved the lining of the upper garment to be of the fur Vaire, which is very rare, and which I confeſs I did never ſee before in any garment[3]."

"SIGILL' MARGARETE DE QUENCY COMITISSE WINTONIE." See Plate CXLIX. fig. I.

In 1254, Mathew Le Venour held 3*s*. rent of a virgate of land in Whatton[4].

---

[1] Charyte's Rentale, fol. cxlvi. b.

[2] Burton, MS.

[3] "Concerning the antiquity of ſeals, Mr. Lambarde, in his Perambulation of Kent (in Halling, p. 318), delivereth to be no antienter here in this land than the Conqueſt, to be brought in by the Normans, and not to be frequently uſed till the time of king Edward III; but, ſeeing his opinion, I hold otherwiſe; for, concerning his latter tenet, it is moſt evident that long before ſealing was moſt common in all the preceding kings' times, as almoſt the private evidences of any gentleman of antiquity will produce ſufficient teſtimony for the confirmation of the truth thereof, though not with arms, which was not uſual till the reign of king Henry III. as I could inſtance by ſufficient proof out of my own ſtore; for the other, though the Saxons had diſcontinued the antient uſage of ſealing, and in lieu thereof had ſigned their deeds with a croſs; yet no doubt the uſe of ſealing had been in practice in this land long before, for that before the Saxon government the Romans were here ſovereign princes, who were the expellers of barbariſm, the bringers of civil diſcipline, and the broachers of new inventions, amongſt whom it cannot be denied but that the manner of ſealing was in uſe. For, as it appeareth by that excellent antiquary Abraham Gorleus, in his Dactolytheca, or Treatiſe of the Antiquity of Seals and Rings, the Grecians were firſt inventors thereof, and from them the Romans, who there deſcribeth the making of them to be of gold, ſilver, copper, iron, wherein precious ſtones were ſometimes fixed; and therein were graven either the device of the family, as beans for the Fabii, peas for Piſones, lentils for Lentuli, chiches for Cicerones, hog for Porcii, an eagle for Aquilii, and ſuch like; or elſe their heads cut to the life, by the inſpection of which the party was at firſt diſcovered. And that they had been uſed in the Saxon times appeareth by the charter of king Edwin, brother of king Edgar, bearing date anno 956, made of lands called Jeckter in the Iſle of Ely, which was not only ſealed with his own ſeal, as appeareth by theſe words: "Ego Edwinus, gratiâ Dei totius Britannie telluris rex dominuſque, proprio ſigillo confirmavi;" but alſo the biſhop of Wincheſter put to his ſeal, "Ego Elfwinus, Winton' eccleſiæ divinus ſpeculator, proprium ſigillum impreſſi;" and the charter of Offa king of Mercia, whereby he gave the Peter-pence to the ſee of Rome, doth yet remain under ſeal. Almoſt all the great ſeals of the kings from the Conqueſt to the preſent affixed to their letters patent I have collected together, as alſo the coats of arms of the greateſt part of the antient nobility, and of many old families, and to their deeds; all which, for a more ready and ſpeedy view, I cauſed to be written and ſet forth in a book together." Burton, MS. referring to Lord Coke's Inſtitutes, Part I. fol. 7.

[4] Eſch. 39 Hen. III. N° 37. Leic.

Ralph Baſſet, ſlain at the battle of Eveſham 1265, was then ſeiſed of this manor; after whoſe death it was aſſigned, inter alia, to Margaret his widow for her ſupport, during the king's pleaſure [1].

In 1270, Roger de Quency, earl of Winton, died ſeiſed of half a knight's fee in Whatton (value 100*s. per annum*), which William de Dune then held; alſo a quarter of one knight's fee in Whatton (value 40*s. per annum*), which Ralph de Bredon then held; alſo of half a knight's fee in Whatton (value 100*s. per annum*), which Ralph Baſſet of Drayton then held. And it was found that Eleanor de Vaus, relict of the ſaid Roger earl of Winton, held the two laſt parcels above-named in dower, which Ralph de Bredon and Ralph Baſſet of Drayton aforeſaid held under her and the heirs of the ſaid earl [2].

In the Itinerary of 1280, Whatton and Belton anſwered collectively as one vill.

"Sciant preſentes & futuri, quod ego Robertus de Haythyrne, rector eccleſie de Eſtwell, dedi, conceſſi, & hâc preſenti cartâ meâ confirmavi, Rogero Laurence de Belagrave, pro quadam ſummâ pecunie quam mihi dedit pre manibus, unam virgatam terre, cum tofto & crofto, & cum omnibus pertinentiis, que Johannes le Child tenet in villâ de Watton. Preterea dedi eidem Rogero & conceſſi Johannem le Child de Watton, nativum meum, cum totâ ſequelâ ſuâ tam procreatâ quam procreandâ, & cum omnibus rebus ſuis, & catallis ſuis tam mobilibus quam immobilibus; habend' & tenend' predicto Rogero, & heredibus ſuis, cum omnibus ayſiamentis & fortunis de eiſdem provenientibus, liberè, quietè, benè, & in pace, & hereditariè, in perpetuum, faciendo capitalibus dominis feodi illius unum quadrantem per annum pro omnibus ſervitiis, conſuetudinibus, & demandis ſecularibus. Et ego dictus Robertus & heredes mei predictam virgatam terre & predictum Johannem le Child, nativum meum, cum totâ ſequelâ ſuâ, ſicut predictum eſt, predicto Rogero & heredibus ſuis, & aſſignatis ſuis, contra omnes gentes in perpetuum warantizabimus, adquietabimus, & defendemus. Et ut hec mea donatio, conceſſio, & preſentis carte confirmatio & warrentia in perpetuum rata ſit & ſtabilis, hanc cartam ſigillo meo ſignavi. His teſtibus; domino Roberto de Wylington, domino Johanne le Fauconer, Thomâ Truſſebut, Thomâ de la Hay in Harthirn, Willielmo Nauntel, Roberto de Belgrave de Watton, Roberto Hotoſte in Humberſtone, Roberto de la Hay de eadem, Willielmo Chaſteleyn de eadem, Henrico Meeber de Leic', & aliis [3]."

In 1297, Edmund earl of Lancaſter, the king's brother, died ſeiſed of divers lands at Whatton [4].

In 1313, William de Bredon held a quarter of one knight's fee in Whatton, of Alan la Zouch, deceaſed [5].

In 1321, Robert Hauſted, ſenior, deceaſed, and Margery his wife, held five acres of meadow, with the appurtenances, in Whatton, of Richard Brian, but by what ſervice they knew not; and that Robert de Hauſted, ſon of the ſaid Robert, was the next heir of the ſaid Robert and Margery [6].

In 1325, it was found that John de Segrave, deceaſed, and Chriſtian his wife, held 11*s.* and one pound of pepper rent of the free tenants of Whatton; and that John de Segrave (ſon and heir of Stephen de Segrave, couſin of the ſaid John de Segrave ſenior) was his next heir [7].

In 1327, "Hec indentura teſtatur quod nos Ricardus de Birmingham, Thomas Hervey, Johannes Leyr, clerici, & Johannes Parker de Olneye, dedimus Willielmo de Rothwell, ſcutifero domini Radulphi Baſſet de Drayton, quoddam annuum redditum decem marcarum, percipiendum annuatim de omnibus terris & tenementis in Long Whatton, nuper Willielmi Bromdehurſt, &c. Dat' apud Olneye, anno 1 Ric. II. [8]"

In 1328, it was found that ſir Robert de Holand held, as of the right and inheritance of Maud his wife, a quarter of one knight's fee in Whatton (value 40*s.*), which William de Bredon then held [9].

In ..... lord Baſſet of Drayton gave 11 yard lands and three cottages here to Richard de Croupes in frank marriage with Maud his daughter.

In 1336, it was found that Richard de Croupes was ſeiſed of £8. yearly rents, ariſing out of certain freehold lands in Long Whatton, which he held of Henry de Beaumont by the ſervice of the twentieth part of one knight's fee; and that Edward Croupes was his ſon and heir [10].

In 1340, Henry de Beaumont earl of Boghan died ſeiſed of the moiety of one knight's fee in Whatton, held of the king in capite, as of the right of Alice his wife [11].

In 1346, Ralph Baſſet of Drayton (on the aid then granted for knighting Edward of Woodſtock, the king's eldeſt ſon) was aſſeſſed 20*s.* for half a knight's fee in Whatton; Thomas de Thorpe 4*s.* for a tenth part of one knight's fee; and William de Bredon 10*s.* for a quarter of one knight's fee there; all parcel of the honour of Winton.

In the ſame year, the prioreſs of Gracedieu (on the ſame occaſion) was aſſeſſed 10*s.* for a quarter of one knight's fee in Belton, Whatton, and Diſeworth, parcel of the honour of Leiceſter [12].

July 16, 1361, it was found that Henry Plantagenet duke of Lancaſter died ſeiſed of one fifth part of one knight's fee in Whatton, which John de Segrave held; alſo of a third part of two parts of one knight's fee in Whatton, which Anketil Hubbard then held [13].

In 1369, it was found that Henry de Beaumont died ſeiſed of the moiety of one knight's fee in Whatton, held of the king in capite, which Ralph Baſſet of Drayton then poſſeſſed [14].

In 1390, it was found that Ralph Baſſet of Drayton, knt. died ſeiſed of 24 virgates of land, with the appurtenances, in Whatton, which John de Beaumont then held by knight's ſervice [15].

In 1396, it was found that John de Beaumont, knt. died ſeiſed of a moiety of one knight's fee in Whatton, which Ralph Baſſet of Drayton then held [16].

In 1402, it was found that Joan (who was the wife of Ralph Baſſet of Drayton), died ſeiſed of a third part of 12 virgates of land in Whatton; and that it was then held of Robert lord Beaumont by knight's ſervice [17].

In 1413, it was found that Henry de Beaumont, knt. died ſeiſed of a moiety of one knight's fee in Whatton, which Ralph Baſſet of Drayton then held [18].

In a book of fifteenths and tenths granted by the laity in 1416, Long Whatton was rated at £3. 12*s.* 6*d.* and in the ſubſidy of 1443, at the ſame ſum; but an abatement was them made of 10*s.* 6*d.*

In 1417, it was found that Thomas Green, knt. died ſeiſed of one piece of meadow in Long Whatton; and that it was then held of the heir of the lord Lovel [19].

In 1422, it was found that Maud (who was the wife of John Lovel, knt.) died ſeiſed of a quarter of one knight's fee in Whatton, which Thomas Aſheby then held [20].

In 1452, it was found that Thomas Leukenore died ſeiſed of ſix meſſuages, 200 acres of land, ſix acres of meadow, and one water-mill, with the appurtenances, in Long Whatton; that he held the ſame of Elizabeth prioreſs of the monaſtery of The Holy Trinity of Gracedieu, as of the right of the church, by the ſervice of 20*s. per annum* for all ſervices; and that Roger Leukenor, of Tratton, in the county of Suſſex, knt. was his next heir [21].

In 1454, it was found that William Lovel, knt. died ſeiſed of a quarter of one knight's fee in Whatton, which Thomas Aſhby then held [22].

In 1461, it was found that John Moubray duke of Norfolk died ſeiſed of a fifth part of one knight's fee

---

[1] Pat. 50 Hen. III. m. 46.

[2] Eſch. 55 Hen. III. N° 36. Leic.

[3] Ex Orig. penès S. Roper, arm.

[4] Eſch. 25 Edw. I. N° 51. Leic.

[5] Eſch. 7 Edw. II. N° 36. Leic.

[6] Eſch. 15 Edw. II. N° 32. Leic.

[7] Eſch. 19 Edw. II. N° 88. Leic.

[8] Ex orig. penès S. Roper, arm:

[9] Eſch. 2 Edw. III. N° 54. Leic.

[10] Eſch. 10 Edw. III. N° 28. Leic.

[11] Eſch. 14 Edw. III. N° 24. Leic.

[12] Rot. Aux. 20 Edw. III.

[13] Fin. 35 Edw. III. m. 23.

[14] Eſch. 43 Edw. III. pars 1. N° 12.

[15] Eſch. 14 Ric. II. N° 9. Leic.

[16] Eſch. 20 Ric. II. N° 14. Leic.

[17] Eſch. 4 Hen. IV. N° 38. Leic.

[18] Eſch. 1 Hen. V. N° 45. Leic.

[19] Eſch. 5 Hen. V. N° 39. Leic.

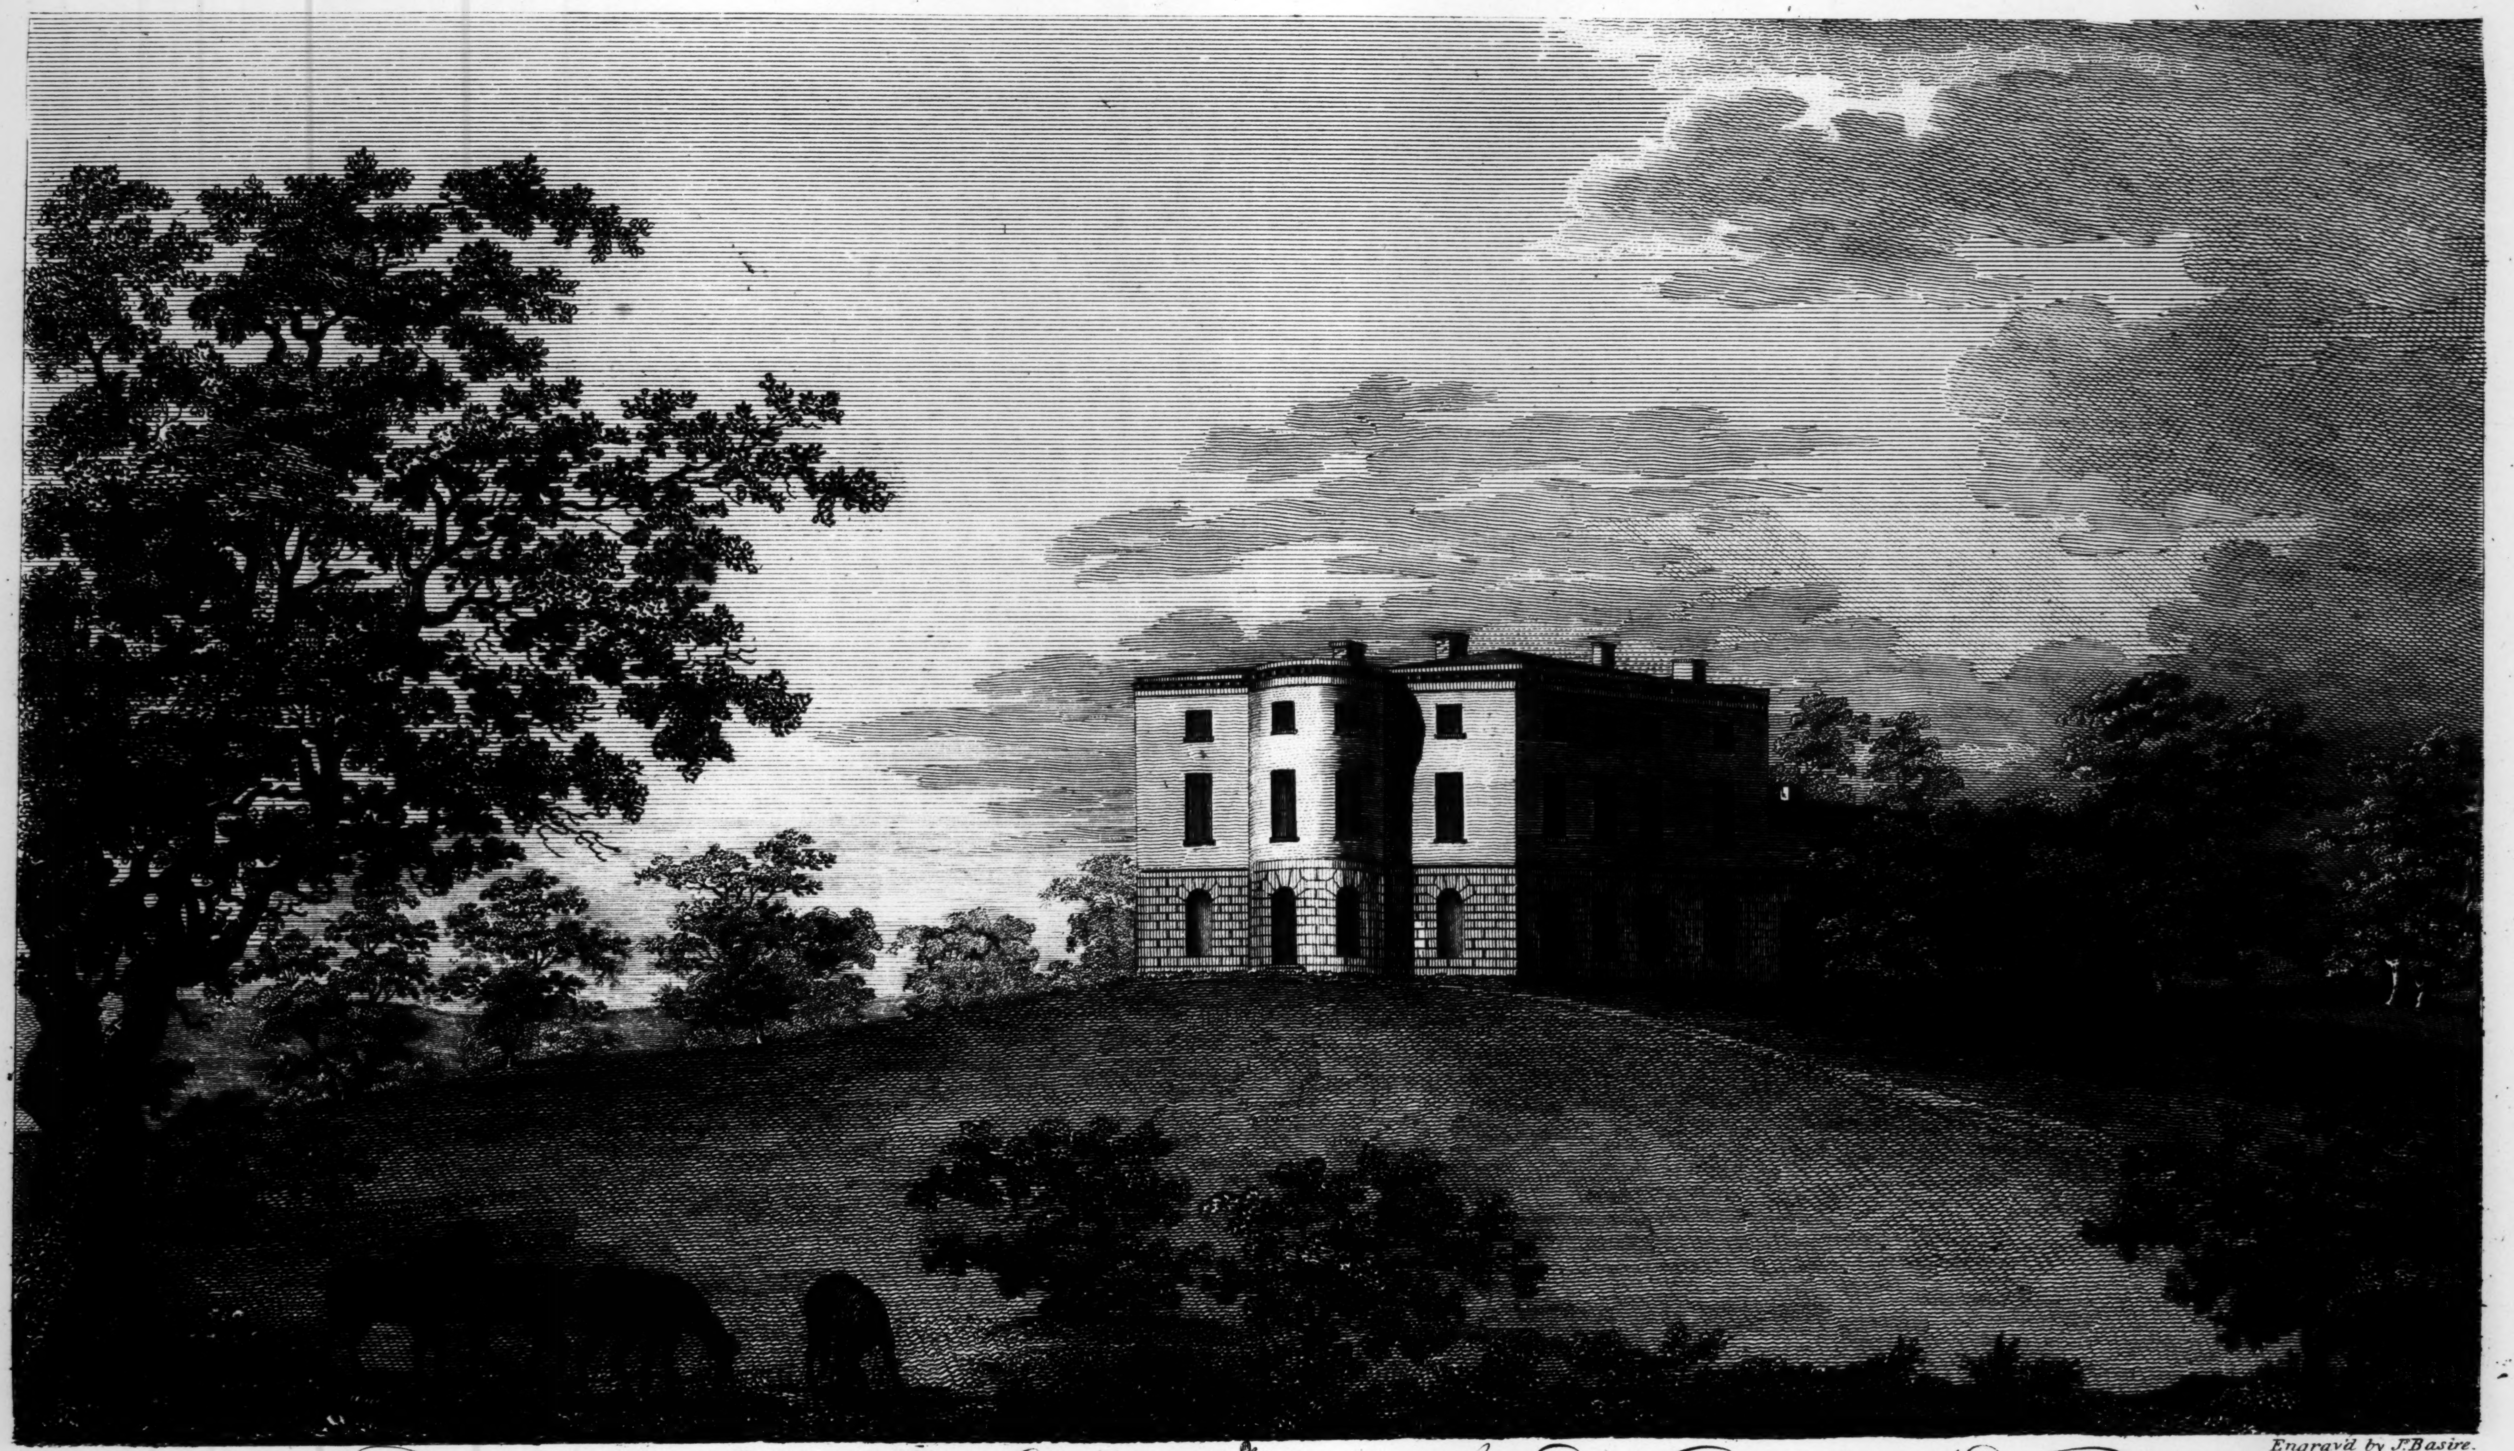
[20] Eſch. 1 Hen. VI. N° 51. Leic.

[21] Eſch. 31 Hen. VI.

[22] Eſch. 33 Hen. VI. N° 28. Leic.

WHATTON HOUSE.

Vol. III. Pl. CXLVIII. p. 1101.



Engrav'd by J.s Basire.

To EDWARD DAWSON Esq.r this PLATE, is inscribed by his much obliged and very faithful Servant J. Nichols.

in Whatton, which John Bothe then held[1].

From the family of Baſſet this manor came, with divers other lordſhips in this county, to that of Shirley; the feoffees of the laſt lord Baſſet releaſing all their intereſt herein to ſir Ralph Shirley, knt.[2] who, as appears by an inquiſition taken April 8, 1518, died ſeiſed of this manor (then worth £7), which was held of the king as of his duchy of Lancaſter[3].

In 1539, a meſſuage and two oxgangs of land in Whatton, within the pariſh of Belton, together with divers other lands in Whatton, were parcel of the poſſeſſions of Gracedieu priory[4].

In 1564, there were 40 families in Long Whatton.

Lands in this pariſh were held by Chriſtopher Middleton, by leaſe from the crown, bearing date Jan. 29, 1588[5].

On an inquiſition taken at Leiceſter in 1590, it was found that George Whatton, gent. died April 29, 1587; that he held nothing under the king in capite; and that his daughters Anne and Elizabeth were his coheirs[6].

The freeholders here in 1630 were, Thomas Lawrence, Michael Cheatle, William Wilde, John Shilcock, William Parſons, Richard Weight, John Smith, gent. William Ainſworth, Robert Middleton, and Robert Parſons.

Sir Henry Shirley, bart. died Feb. 8, 1633-4; ſeiſed of the manor of Whatton; leaving ſir George his ſon and heir, at that time ten years old[7]; and who died unmarried in 1646.

In 1655, there was collected in Whatton, for the relief of the poor Proteſtants in Piedmont, the ſum of 15*s.* 7*d.*

In 1686, Thomas Aynſworth ſenior, ſeiſed in fee of divers lands in Long Whatton, by indentures of leaſe and releaſe, dated 1 and 2 September, granted the ſame to Robert Aynſworth and John Roberts, in truſt for himſelf and Mary his wife, and for other uſes therein mentioned. This was preparatory to the marriage of Thomas Aynſworth junior; who, by indenture dated April 30, 1686, conveyed the ſame lands to Henry Smith and William Peate, to the uſes of his intended marriage.

Feb. 10, 1686-7, Mary Aynſworth, the Ceſtui truſten, Thomas Aynſworth junior, and Elizabeth his wife, by indentures of leaſe and releaſe, reciting the indenture of Sept. 2, 1686, granted all the lands in the ſettlement contained to Atkins Dawſon in fee, to the uſe of Thomas Aynſworth junior in fee.

In Hilary Term 1699, Mary Aynſworth, John Robins, Thomas Aynſworth, and Elizabeth his wife, levied a fine to Atkins Dawſon, of all the lands contained in the two ſettlements made by the elder Aynſworth and his ſon, by the name of two meſſuages, four cottages, ſix gardens, ſix orchards, 150 acres of land, 60 acres of meadow, 150 acres of paſture, 10 acres of furze and heath, and common of paſture for all manner of cattle, with the appurtenances, in Long Whatton and Charley Foreſt; all which, by indenture dated Sept. 30, 1699, were declared to be to the uſe of Thomas Aynſworth junior in fee.

—— Smyth, of Long Whatton, is noticed in Sanders's Hiſtory of Shenſtone, as having married (about the year 1700) one of the daughters of John Swynfen, of Swynfen; by whom he had two ſons; Swynfen Smyth, who went abroad, and died childleſs; and John Smyth, of Shepey in this county[8].

In 1722, 31 freeholders polled from this pariſh; and in 1775 we find 36 names.

In 1778, an act was paſſed, for dividing, allotting, and incloſing, in the lordſhip of Long Whatton, ſeveral open fields, and ſome common or waſte land, containing together about 800 acres; and alſo a great number of incloſures that were held and enjoyed in ſeveralty, and ſeveral of them in conſequence of exchanges for that purpoſe. In this act, ſir William Gordon, K. B. is deſcribed as lord of the manor of Long Whatton; the king as patron of the rectory; and John Clements, clerk, as rector, and entitled to about five parts in ſix of all the tithes in kind both great and ſmall, and other ſmall dues and payments ariſing within Long Whatton aforeſaid and the lordſhip thereof. Francis earl of Huntingdon is deſcribed as patron of the vicarage of Belton; and Theophilus Henry Haſtings, clerk, as vicar of the ſaid church, and entitled to the reſidue of ſuch tithes, and alſo to certain pieces of land called tithe-pieces, and to certain moduſes or cuſtomary payments in lieu of the tithes of certain antient homeſteads lying contiguous to the town of Long Whatton aforeſaid, and alſo to other ſmall dues and payments. And the ſaid ſir William Gordon, Edward Dawſon, and Charles Townley, eſquires, Martha Smith, widow, Thomas Bowley, Oſwin Aynſworth, William Middleton, Thomas Plowright, Hart Buck, Ann Roſe, widow, and others, are entitled to all the land in the ſaid fields, to all the ſaid commons and waſte land, to all the right of common upon and over the ſaid lands, and to all the ſaid incloſures. A compenſation is firſt directed to be made to the lord of the manor; and an allotment to the rector of Long Whatton of one ſeventh part of the common land from which he had a right to tithes, and the proportion of a tenth part from perſons having old incloſures. To the vicar of Belton a compenſation for his tithe pieces; a ſeventh part of the common land from which he had a right to tithes; and a tenth from the proprietors of old incloſures; and alſo a proportionable compenſation for any former modus or cuſtomary payment. The reſpective allotments to the ſaid rector and vicar to be in lieu of all tithes and other payments, except Eaſter offerings and ſurplice fees. A general ſaving of right to the lord of the manor, and to the earl of Stamford as lord of the honour of Wincheſter.

In 1803, an exchange was made of the manors of Whatton and Knight-thorpe, between Thomas March-Philipps, eſq. of Garendon Park, and Edward Dawſon, eſq. by which means the latter is now become lord of the manor of Whatton; and he is alſo the principal proprietor of lands in this place.

The old manſion of the family was ſituated in the village of Whatton, near unto the church, having a ſmall ſheet of water before it, and riſing grounds well ornamented with trees and thriving plantations; but, being a very old manſion-houſe, it was pulled down by the preſent owner, who has lately erected a handſome manſion about a mile from the village on a fine ſituation near unto the London road, commanding many extenſive and pictureſque views; itſelf, together with the ſurrounding grounds, being a handſome ornament to the adjacent country: a view of which, by the kindneſs of the owner, is given in Plate CXLVIII.

	£.	s.	d.
Money raiſed for the poor within the year ending at Eaſter 1776,	54	19	2
Expended in county rates, &c.	0	0	0
——— on the poor, —	72	1	4
Rent of workhouſe and habitations,	8	0	6
Expended in litigations, —	4	4	9
Money raiſed for 1783, —	88	1	0
——— 1784, —	140	17	8
——— 1785, —	123	5	4
Medium of theſe three years,	117	8	0
——— of county expences,	0	0	0
——— of expences not relating to the poor; repairs of the church, roads, &c.	0	0	0
——— of nett annual expences,	117	8	0
——— of attending on magiſtrates,	1	0	1
——— of entertainments at meetings,	0	7	4
——— of law expences, —	1	14	10
——— of ſetting the poor to work,	0	17	0

The Return made to Parliament in 1786, in anſwer to an enquiry reſpecting the charitable donations in this pariſh, may be ſeen in vol. I. p. 81.

By the Return made to Parliament in 1801, Long Whatton contained 119 inhabited houſes, and 5 uninhabited; 124 families; 331 males, 281 females, in all 612; of whom 55 were chiefly employed in agriculture, and 179 in trade or manufactures.

---

[1] Eſch. 1 Edw. IV. N° 46. Leic.

[2] Leland, in his Itinerary, vol. I. p. 23, among the "gentilmen of Leyrceſterſhir that be there moſt of reputation," mentions "Shirle toward Dunnington, a man of very fair landes;" and, p. 17, notices two of the Shirleys, knights, having been buried on the South ſide of the choir of St. Mary's chapel in the collegiate church in the Newark at Leiceſter.

[3] Inq. at Leiceſter, 8 April, 9 Hen. VIII; Cole's Eſcheats, vol. IV. (Harl. MSS. 759.) p. 80.

[4] Bailiff's Accounts, 31 Hen. VIII. in the Augmentation Office.

[5] Leaſes in the Augmentation Office

[6] Eſch. 32 Eliz.

[7] Eſch. 9 Car. I.

[8] Hiſtory of Shenſtone, 1794, p. 292.

PEDIGREE of DAWSON, of Newbold and Whatton.

Arms: Quarterly, 1 and 4. Azure, on a bend engrailed Argent three birds Sable, Dawſon; 2. Argent, a chevron engrailed Ermines, on a chief Sable three birds Argent, Wilde; 3. Azure, two bars Gules, on a chief three torteauxes of the ſecond; Mould. Motto: Tendimus ad Terram. See Plate CXLVIII.

Henry Dawſon, of Newbold, in the pariſh of Bredon, was buried at Bredon March 25, 1577.=Helen . . . .

1. Henry Dawſon; died Jan. 14, 1624, buried at Bredon.
2. Edward Dawſon, of Dagenham, co. Eſſex; died Nov. 14, 1648.=Mary.
   - Mary, born at Dagenham, Oct. 13, 1644.
3. George Dawſon; died Sept. 26, 1605, buried at Bredon.
4. Griffin Dawſon; died Jan. 27, 1657, buried at Bredon.=Jane, daughter of . . . . Armſton, of Aſhby-de-la-Zouch; d. Nov. 8, 1680, bur. at Bredon.

Helen.
Margaret.

1. Edward Dawſon; died March 15, 1711, buried in the South aile of Long Whatton church, æt. 83.=Iſabel, ſole daughter and heireſs of Wm. Atkins, of Long Whatton; married Nov. 13, 1654; and was buried in Whatton church Feb. 26, 1674.
2. George Dawſon; buried at Bredon Nov. 8, 1658.
3. Griffin Dawſon, born at Bredon July 25, 1637.=Mary, daughter and coheireſs of Thomas Hardy, of Thringſton.
   - Elizabeth, married May 24, 1685, to Thos. Aynſworth, of Whatton; and died there in her 47th year, March 1, 1711.
   - Margaret, married to her couſin Atkins Dawſon.
4. John Dawſon, born March 29, 1640; bu. at Bredon May 17, 1716.
5. Henry Dawſon, born May 14, 1646; bu. at Bredon June 23, 1704.

Eliz. Dawſon; bur. at Bredon Feb. 19, 1659.

1. Atkins Dawſon, born at Long Whatton May 8, 1657; buried there April 9, 1711.=Margaret, 2d dau. and coheireſs of Griffin Dawſon, of Thringſton; buried Oct. 6, 1733.
2. George Dawſon, born June 23, 1661; died May 18, 1688, unmarried.
3. Edward Dawſon, born Nov. 24, 1663; died Aug. 5, 1747, unmarried.
4. John Dawſon, born Oct. 28, 1666; died Nov. 25, 1738, unmarried.

1. Sarah, born at Long Whatton, and there buried Oct. 24, 1665.
2. Elizabeth; d. April 6, 1660.
3. Iſabel, born May 7, 1669; died Feb. 11, 1733, unmarried.

1. Mary, born July 27, 1686; bur. at Whatton March 19, 1716.
2. Jane, born Feb. 7, 1687, married to Wm. Hickling, Jan. 30, 1723; died Sept. 5, 1724.
3. Elizabeth, born June 24, 1691; buried at Whatton Dec. 17, 1703.
4. Iſabel, born Aug. 19, 1698; died Jan. 13, 1733, unmarried.
5. Anne, born Oct. 23, 1701; married to John Ragdale, M.A. rector of Appleby c. Leiceſter, and of Normanton upon Soar, co. Nottingham. She died Oct. 16, 1768.

1. Edward Dawſon, b. June 12, 1694; high ſheriff of Leiceſterſhire 1726; buried at Whatton July 28, 1765.=Elizabeth, eldeſt dau. of John Wilde, of Long Whatton, marr. Jan. 23, 1717; buried at Appleby, June 13, 1765.
2. Henry Dawſon, bo. Dec. 27, 1707; di. Jan. 3, 1758, unmarried.

1. Anna, born June 2, 1721.
2. Mary, born May 3 , 1725; married to Thomas Smith, of Long Whatton; died July 28, 1794.
3. Elizabeth, born Feb. 26, 1727; died April 21, 1768, unmarried.

1. Atkins Dawſon, born June 2, 1723; died Oct. 18, 1782, unmarried.
2. Edward Dawſon, born Sept. 8, 1730; high ſheriff of Leiceſterſhire 1768; buried at Whatton Feb. 29, 1788.=Mary, eldeſt daughter of Joſhua Grundy, eſq. of Newhall Park; married Feb. 1, 1770, d. Dec. 10, 1779.

1. Henry Dawſon, bo. Dec. 28, 1770; di. March 0, 1789, and buried at Long Whatton.
2. Edward Dawſon, eſq. born June 8, 1778.=Suſan, eldeſt daughter of Thomas March-Phillips, eſq. of Garendon Park; married May 19, 1801.
   - Edward Dawſon, born March 14, 1802.

1. Sarah, b. Apr. 7, 1772; married, Aug. 21, 1794, to Walker-King, D. D. prebendary of Peterboro' and Canterbury, canon-reſidentiary of Wells, rector of Burnham, and of Aller, co. Somerſet, and preacher to the honourable ſociety of Gray's Inn; by whom ſhe has iſſue 3 ſons and 2 dau'rs.
2. Elizabeth, bo. June 29, 1775; d. Oct. 11, 1779.

PEDIGREE of ROBINSON, of Long Whatton.

Arms: Vert, on a chevron between three ſtags ſtatant Or, three trefoils ſlipped Gules, a creſcent for difference[1].

William Robinſon, deſcended out of the North.=. . . .

John Robinſon, of Reading, co. Berks; firſt huſband.=Lucie, daughter of John Webb, of Reading, and ſiſter of William Webb, knt. and alderman of London.=William Laud, of Reading; ſecond huſband.

William Robinſon, D. D. rector of Long Whatton, prebendary of Weſtminſter.=Sarah, da. of William Bainbridge, of Lockington, co. Leiceſter.

William Laud, D. D. and dean of Glouceſter; afterwards archbiſhop of Canterbury; beheaded on Tower-hill.

1. Henry Robinſon, æt. 9, 1619.
2. William Robinſon, æt. 6.
3. John Robinſon, eſq. born 1614; lieutenant of the Tower, and lord mayor of London 1663.

1. Elizabeth, æt. 13.
2. Sarah, æt. 7.
3. Lucie, æt. 2.

The CHURCH (See Plate CXLIX.)

dedicated to All Souls, conſiſts of a nave, chancel, and two ailes; and has a tower on the South end, in which hang three bells. It is a large but light building, and is kept in very neat order.

Fig. 2. is a ſmall ground-plan of the church.

Fig. 3. ſhews the ſtalls in the chancel.

Fig. 4. the old round font, with a kneeling ſtep.

On a chair is inſcribed, "I. W. 1665."

In the Matriculus of 1220, Whatton is deſcribed to be under the patronage of the abbot of Leiceſter; Leodegarus the then parſon having been inſtituted by Hugh then biſhop of Lincoln, and paying to the abbot a penſion of 26*s. ab antiquo*[2].

In 1344, the procurations were, 7*s.* 6½*d.*; the rectory was taxed at 18 marks, and paid 1*s.* 6*d.* for Peter-pence. The abbot of Leiceſter, the then patron, had alſo a penſion from it of 20*s.*

In 1534-5, the ſynodals were 3*s.* 6*d.*; the abbot's penſion £1. 6*s.*; and the value of the rectory £10.

In 1550, the commiſſioners reported, that the church of Whatton contained,

Inprimis, thre belles, wythe a ſmall bell.
Itm, tow croſſis of latyn.
Itm, tow veſtments wyth a cope.
Itm, thre alter clothes, and a ſurples.
Itm, on chalice of ſylver, wythe one corporas and the chaſe.

In 1650, the rectory was returned worth £100; and the incumbent as ſufficient.

The preſent value in the king's books, in land and glebe, is £13. 6*s.* 8*d.*; certified value £290.

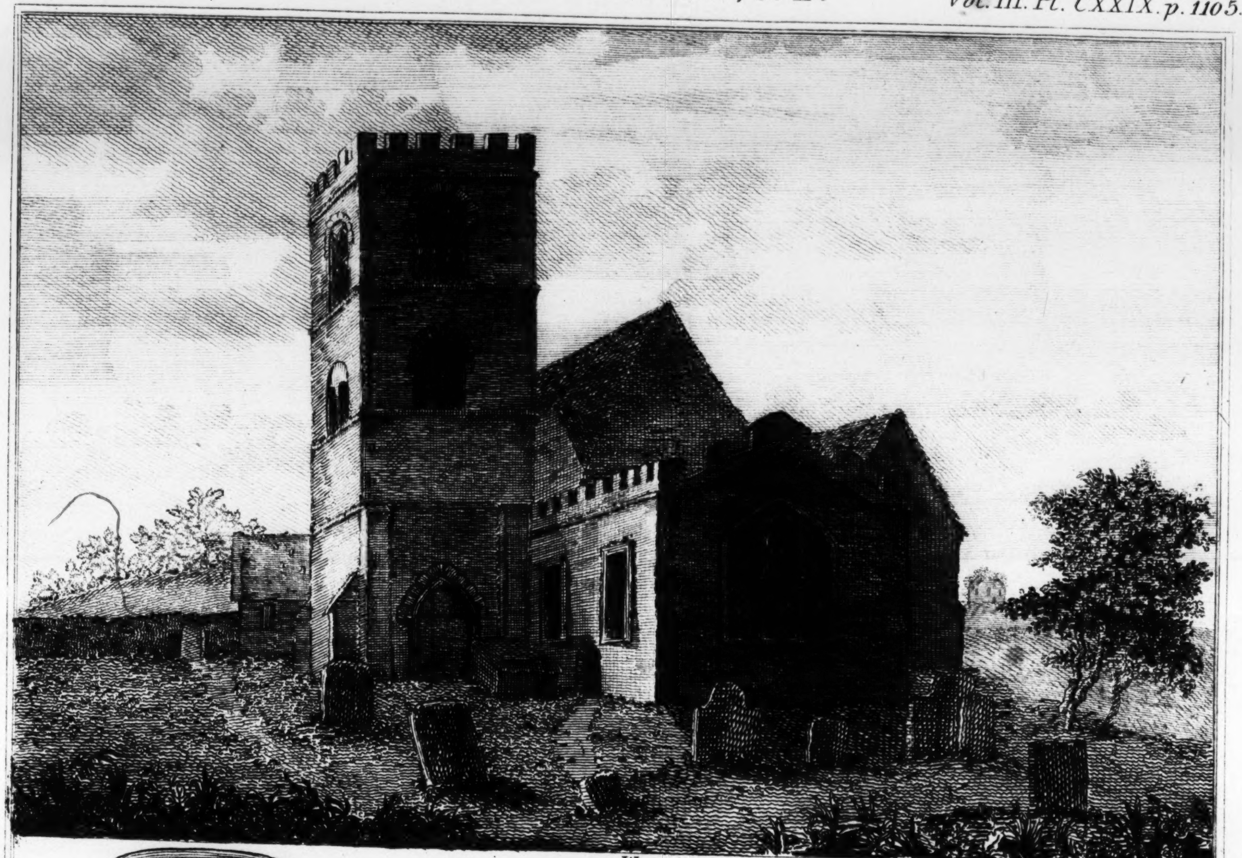
The epiſcopal procurations are, 4*s.* 8*d.*

---

[1] Plate CXLIX. fig. 12.

[2] See the Introductory Volume, p. lix.

RECTORS.



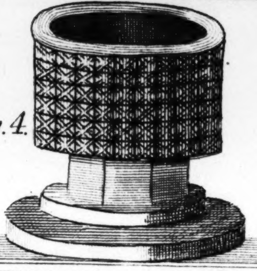


Fig. 4.

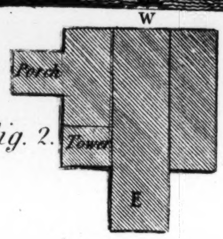

Fig. 2.

W
S Porch
N Tower
E

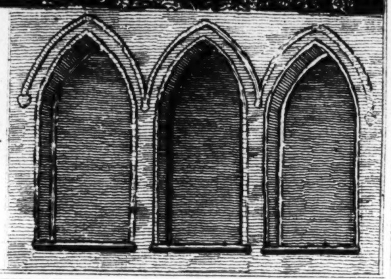

Fig. 3.

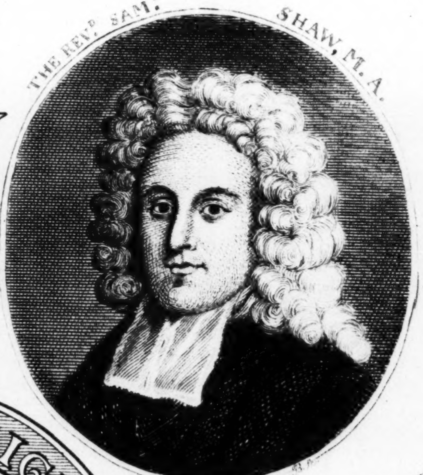
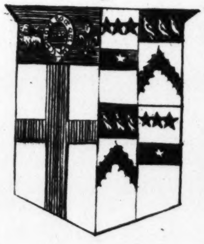
Schnebbelie del. May 18, 1791.

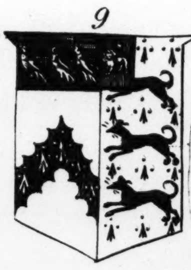
Basire sc.



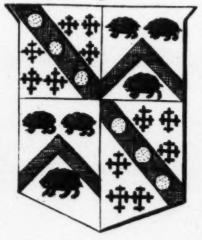
THE REVD. SAML. SHAW, M.A.



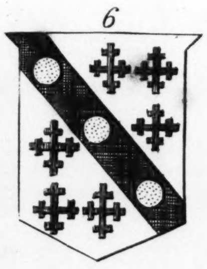
8



9



5



6

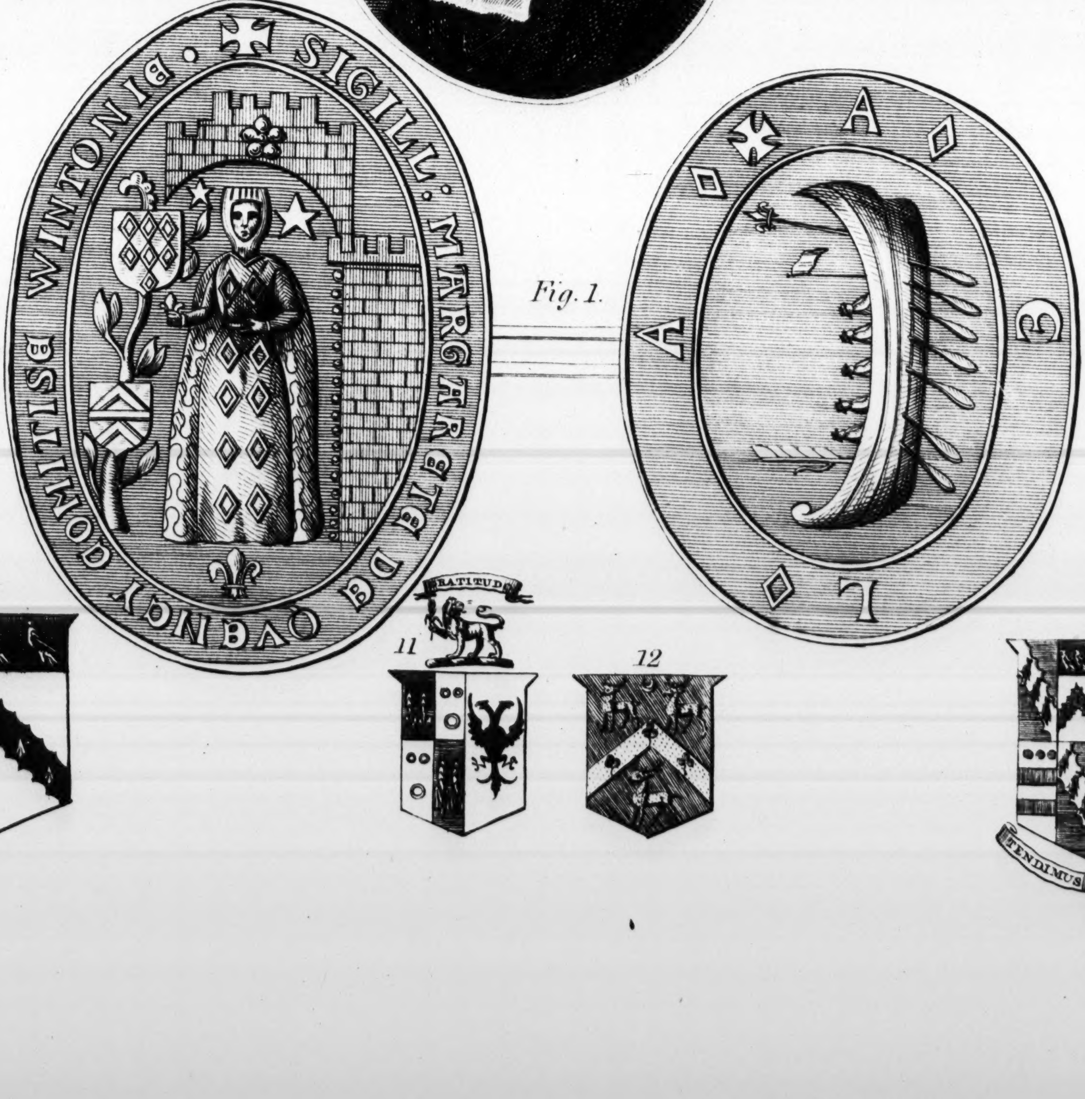


Fig. 1.

SIGILL' MARGARETE DE QVENCY COMITISSE WINTONIE
A
E
L
A

7

11

12

10

TENDIMUS AD TERRAM

RECTORS.	PATRONS.
Leodegarus, 1220.
Richard Hethe, reſigned 1405.	Abbot and convent of Leiceſter.
John Fowler[1], 1405.
Walter Fowler[2], reſigned 1421.
John Greenlowe, biſhop of Solton', 1421.
Robert . . . . . . ; died 1494.
John Parker; died April 24, 1514.
William Ireland, 1534.
William Robinſon, D. D. [His ſon John baptized Jan. 10, 1614.]
Henry Robinſon, inducted by Mr. Armſtrong, parſon of Hathern[3], March 31, 1638.
Henry Upton, 1650.	Parliamentary Sequeſtrators.
Thomas Foulds, May 16, 1651; buried April 7, 1658.
Samuel Shaw[4], M.A. June . . . 1658.	The Protector.
The ſame, Sept. . . . 1660; deprived in 1661.	The king, pleno jure.
Andrew Butler, July 8, 1661.
William Robinſon, M. A. inducted by Iſaac Hoyland, vicar of Diſeworth, June 15, 1671; died 1721.
John Bradbury, B. D. inducted by Andrew Glen, June 13, 1722.
Matthew Dutton, Aug. 9, 1745.
John Clements[5], Feb. 16, 1747; reſigned 1786.
Thomas Beere, June 14, 1786; the preſent worthy rector, 1804.

MONUMENTAL INSCRIPTIONS.

Mr. Burton did not obſerve any "arms or monuments" in this church; but he muſt have overlooked a large blue flat ſtone (which ſtill remains, though much damaged), and, on a braſs plate, the following arms and inſcription:

1. and 4. Argent, on a bend Sable, between ſix croſs croſslets Gules, three bezants, Whatton. 2. and 3. Argent, a chevron between three hedge-hogs Sable, Heriz; fig. 5.

"Pray for the ſoule of Robert de Whatton, arm', which deceſſed the v of March, anno Dom. 1545; on whoſe ſoul Jehu have mercy. Amen."

The Whatton pedigree alſo notices a large white alabaſter, with the arms of Whatton ſingle, fig. 6.

"Here lyeth the bodies of Robert Whatton, gent. and Margaret his wyffe; which Robert deceaſed the 10 of Sept. and ſhe deceaſed the 16 of Sept. 1577[6]."

The following epitaphs are now in the chancel:

"Here lieth the body of Henry,
the third ſon of Mr. William Robinſon, rector,
who died the 29th day of February, 1688, aged 8."

"In memory of Mr. William Robinſon, Maſter of Arts, late rector of this place, who died the 12th day of December,
in the year of our Lord 1721, aged 77.
Reſurgam."

"Hic jacet corpus Edwardi Bigland[7], Servientis ad Legem."

"Here lyeth the body of Anne Bigland, late wife of Edward Bigland, Serjeant at Law."

"Hic jacet corpus Henrici Bigland, armigeri."

"Anna Bethia Bigland, daughter of Henry[8] Bigland, eſq. and Orme his wife, departed this life May 22, 1708, aged 9 months.
"Eheu quam brevis ætas."

"In memory of Jane Sidebotham,
who departed this life July 22, 1771, aged 83.
She was daughter of William Sidebotham, of Stockport, in the county of Cheſter, gent.
and ſiſter to Samuel Sidebotham,
of the city of London, merchant, who married Elizabeth, daughter of the Rev. William Robinſon, rector of this pariſh."

Argent, a chevron engrailed Ermines; on a chief Sable, three birds cloſe Argent; Wilde; fig. 7.

On the South wall of the nave.

Argent, a croſs Gules; on a chief Azure a ducal coronet Or, encircled with a Garter (thereon this motto, Honi ſoit qui mal y penſe), between a lion paſſant guardant on the dexter, and a fleur de lis on the ſiniſter, all Or; being the armorial enſigns of the office of Garter Principal King of Arms: Impaling, Quarterly, 1. and 4. Argent, a feſs Sable, in chief three mullets of the laſt; on the feſs a mullet Or for difference; Townley; 2, and 3. Wilde; fig. 8.

Wilde; impaling, Ermine, three greyhounds currant, in pale, Sable; on a canton of Augmentation Gules, a lion paſſant guardant Or. Moore; fig 9.

"To the memory of William Wilde, of this pariſh, gent.
who died the 22d of December, 1701,
in the 46th year of his age;
and, with his two wives, was buried in the middle aile of this church.
He married, firſt, Elizabeth, 2d daughter of Mr. Thomas Aynſworth, alſo of this pariſh, by whom he had an only ſon named John Wilde, gent.
who wedded Sarah, eldeſt daughter of Thomas Moore, of Great Appleby, in this county, gent.
and died the 11th of June, 1739,
in the 57th year of his age, without iſſue,
and was buried in the middle aile aforeſaid.
The abovenamed William Wilde eſpouſed, ſecondly, Joan, 2d daughter of George Moore, of Little Appleby, gent. and ſiſter to John Moore,
of Kentwell hall, in the county of Suffolk, eſq.
by whom he had an only daughter, namely, Sarah[9],

---

[1] "Johannes Fouler, clericus, preſentatus per abbatem & conventum Beate Marie de Pratis, Leyc', ad eccleſiam de Langewhatton, per hoc quod Magiſter Ricardus Hethe, ultimus rector ejuſdem, ſubdecanatum eccleſie Lincolnie canonicè eſt adeptus, 21 Octobris, 1405." Reg. Repingdon.

[2] "10 Nov. 1421, Magiſter Walterus Fowler, rector eccleſie de Longwhatton, Lincolnie dioc' (de patronatu abbatis & conventûs Beate Marie de Pratis, Leyc'), & reverendus pater dominus Johannes Grenelowe, epiſcopus Solton', rector medietatis eccleſie de Codgrave, Ebor' dioc' (de patronatu prioris & conventûs de Lincoln') reſignant ex permutacione." Reg. Fleming.

[3] Sequeſtered from his rectory during the civil wars. He was ſon to Dr. William Robinſon, and half-brother to Archbiſhop Laud. Another of that Doctor's ſons, and conſequently brother to this ſufferer, was ſir John Robinſon. Mr. Walker ſays, that "Mr. Robinſon outlived the Uſurpation, and was reſtored to his living; but it appears from Calamy, that he was dead before 1660." See p. 1110. And ſee before, under Lockington, p. 878, an epitaph on his ſon John Robinſon, gent. by which it appears that the rector of Whatton, with his wife and ſon, were "all there buried."

[4] See p. 310.

[5] Of St. John's College, Cambridge; M. A. 1748, F. S. A. 1782. He was rector alſo of Cheick, co. Stafford, and of Appleby in this county; and died at Worceſter in 1793.

[6] In the MSS. of St. Loe Kniveton this epitaph is ſaid to be in Newark church, co. Nottingham.

[7] Son of Edward Bigland, of Queen's college, Cambridge; M. A. 1598; B. D. 1605; and rector of Leek, co. Notts, where he died Auguſt 9, 1650.—The ſon, who was alſo of Queen's college, Cambridge, 1637, became a member of Gray's Inn; and in 1680 was called to the degree of a ſerjeant at law. He was recorder of Nottingham, and repreſentative in parliament for that town in 1688. He married Anne, the only daughter and heir of Peter Richeir, eſq. M. D. by whom he had iſſue two ſons and two daughters; and, ſettling at Long Whatton, was buried there Auguſt 5, 1704.

[8] Henry Bigland, of Long Whatton and Froleſworth, was the eldeſt ſon of the ſerjeant. He married Orme, daughter of Charles Whinyates, of Peterborough, eſq. by whom he had two ſons and two daughters. He died in 1712, and was buried in the church of St. James, Clerkenwell. His widow died Oct. 6, 1755, æt. 73; and was buried in the cathedral at Peterborough. See p. 1111.

[9] She died, on her birth-day, May 21, 1714; and was buried at St. Dunſtan's in the Eaſt.

wife of Charles Townley [1], of London, eſq.
whoſe iſſue are only two ſons; viz.
Sir Charles Townley, knight,
[[2] Garter Principal] King of Arms, elder ſon, by whom this monument is erected;
and the Rev. James Townley, A. M.
rector of St. Bennet's Gracechurch-ſtreet, in the ſaid city of London, younger ſon."

On a monument on the North wall:
"D. O. M.
Near this place lieth interred in a vault
the remains of Mrs. Ann Ragdale, late wife of the rev. John Ragdale, A. M.
rector of Appleby in this county, and of Normanton on the Soar in the county of Nottingham, daughter of Atkins Dawſon,
and ſiſter to Edward Dawſon, eſq. late of this pariſh.
She was deſcended from an antient and reſpectable family;
her perſon was graceful,
her education genteel, polite, and liberal.
Yet was ſhe happily free from the levities and follies,
the vices and extravagancies of the age;
ſhe was an affectionate wife, a tender miſtreſs,
and a prudent œconomiſt; a ſincere and conſtant friend;
of a very humane and compaſſionate diſpoſition;
bountiful to the needy and diſtreſſed;
and, after the pattern of the Divine Benignity, kind even to the unthankful and the evil.
In ſhort, her piety and virtue, for ſingular and the moſt diſtinguiſhing meekneſs and mildneſs, amiableneſs and ſweetneſs of temper,
her benevolence and charity,
ſhe was a pattern to her ſex.
Theſe good qualities rendered her greatly beloved by all who had the happineſs to know her;
and her death an unſpeakable loſs to all her friends.
May her example excite and animate others to imitate her virtues, in the ſure hope of the ſame glorious and immortal rewards!
She died, with decent and becoming calmneſs, tranquillity and compoſure of mind,
and with examplary ſubmiſſion to the will of Heaven,
October 16, 1768, in the 67th year of her age.
In memory of his truly excellent and entirely beloved conſort, her diſconſolate huſband
cauſed this monument to be erected."

Under the above:
"Here in a vault is interred the body of
Mrs. Ann Ragdale, 1768.
Alſo in the ſame vault are depoſited the remains of the Rev. Mr. John Ragdale, her huſband, who died April 1ſt, 1777, aged 78 years."

On the South ſide of the church, on a handſome urn, placed behind iron rails:

Arms: Quarterly, 1. and 4. Dawſon; 2. Wilde; 3. Argent, two bars Gules, on a chief Argent three torteauxes of the ſecond. Impaling, Argent, on a croſs engrailed Gules, between four lions paſſant guardant Sable five martlets Or, Grundy; fig. 10. Motto: Tendimus ad Terram.

"To the memory of Mrs. Mary Dawſon, whoſe remains are depoſited in this vault,
late wife of Edward Dawſon, eſq.
and eldeſt daughter of Joſhua Grundy,
of Thornton, in this county, eſq.
She died December 10, anno Domini 1779,
in the 36th year of her age.
Their iſſue were two ſons and two daughters;
Henry, Sarah, Elizabeth, and Edward.
Her fidelity, affection, and ſincerity, amiably diſtinguiſhed the wife, the parent, the friend;
and her Chriſtian profeſſion was equally adorned with correſponding virtues.

"To Heaven reſign'd, the penſive huſband view'd
Her ſlow, but certain fate; whilſt infant tears
In artleſs grief bewail'd a parent's loſs."

On the other ſide of the urn:
"Edward, younger ſon of Edward Dawſon, late of this pariſh, eſq. and Elizabeth his wife,
after a life exemplary for filial, conjugal,
and parental affections,
died February 23d, A. D. 1788, ætat. 58.
His remains are depoſited under this monument, which, whilſt living, he cauſed to be erected [3]."

On the lower part of the ſame monument:
"Here is interred the body of Elizabeth Dawſon, younger daughter of Edward Dawſon, eſq.
and Mary his wife.
She died October 11, 1779,
in the 5th year of her age.
"Alas! how ſhort is life!"

"H. S. V. M. N.
Henricus Edwardi et Mariæ Dawſon
fil. natu max.
qui vix. ann. 18. m. 2. d. 11;
relictis Edwardo fratre
& Sarâ ſorore mœſtiſſimis.
Ob. prid. n. Mart. A. D. 1789."

On another monument, near the former:
"Underneath lie the remains of Atkins Dawſon, eſq.
eldeſt ſon of Edward Dawſon,
late of Long Whatton, eſq.
and Elizabeth his wife.
He died October 18, 1782, aged 59 years."

At the North-eaſt corner of the church:
"Near this place lyeth buried the body of Abigail, late wife of Henry Smith, of this town, gent.
and daughter of Ralph Brown, of Carſwell,
in the county of Stafford, gent.
She departed this life the 29th day of October, in the year of her age 65, and of our Lord 1695.
She was a perſon of great piety,
and lived in ſerious preparation for death,
even in her greateſt health and proſperity.
She was a tender and religious miſtreſs in her family,
and in all other reſpects a Chriſtian very exemplary;
and therefore her huſband has here inſcribed this teſtimony as due to her memory."

On a ſtone under the above monument:
"Here lieth the body of Henry Smith,
of this town, gent.
who departed this life January 12, 1706-7,
in the 69th year of his age."

The following inſcriptions are alſo on the floor:
"Here lyeth the body of John Dawſon, fourth ſon of Edward Dawſon, gent.
late of Long Whatton, deceaſed.
He departed this life the 25th day of November, in the year 1738, in the 74th year of his age."

"Here lies the body of Iſabella Dawſon.
She departed this life the 11th of February,
1733, aged 64."

"Here lies the body of Jane, ſecond daughter of Margaret Dawſon, of this town, widow.
She dyed the 3d day of September, anno Dom. 1724, in the 36th year of her age."

"Here lieth the body of Iſabella Dawſon, the fourth daughter of Atkins Dawſon, gent.
and Margaret his wife,
who died the 13th day of January, 1732, aged 34."

"Here lyeth the body of Edward Dawſon (third ſon of Edward Dawſon and Iſabella his wife, late of Long Whatton, deceaſed).
He departed this life the 5th day of Auguſt, 1747,
aged 84."

"Here lieth the body of Henry Dawſon, gent.
(younger ſon of Atkins Dawſon, gent.
and Margaret his wife, late of this town).
He departed this life, unmarried, on the 3d day of January, 1758,
in the 50th year of his age."

---

[1] Charles Townley, eſq. of Long Whatton, was appointed York Herald Aug. 26, 1735; Norroy king of arms Nov. 19, 1751; Clarenceux king of arms, Jan. 11, 1755; knighted Sept. 22, 1761, on the coronation day of their preſent Majeſties; and appointed Garter Principal king of arms April 29, 1773. He died at Iſlington, in the county of Middleſex, June 7, 1774; and was buried on the 14th of the ſame month in his own family vault, under the North porch in the church of St. Dunſtan in the Eaſt, London. He married Mary, youngeſt of the two daughters and coheirs of George Eaſtwood, of Thornhill, in the Weſt Riding of the county of York, gent. by whom he had ſeveral children.

[2] Originally either Norroy or Clarenceux; changed afterwards to Garter, by a piece faſtened on.

[3] See before, under Bredon, p. 692, a memorial placed by this gentleman to two brothers of his great-grandfather.

"Underneath in a vault is interred the body of Edward Dawſon, late of this town, eſq.
who married Elizabeth,
ſole daughter and heir of John Wilde, gent.
and left iſſue two ſons and two daughters.
He departed this life the 26th of July, 1765,
in the 72d year of his age."

"Here lyeth the body of Elizabeth Aynſworth, wife of Thomas Aynſworth,
who had iſſue by him eight ſons and two daughters, and who was the oldeſt daughter of Griffith Dawſon, of Thringſton;
who departed this life on the 27th day of February,
A. D. 1710-11, in the 47th year of her age."

"Here lyeth the body of Elizabeth,
the ſecond wife of William Wilde the elder.
She died the 13th day of January, A. D. 1694,
aged 86 years."

"Here lieth the body of Samuel Wilde, gent.
who departed this life Jan. 22, 1712, aged 68."

"Here lieth the body of William Wilde the eldeſt; deceaſed July 21, 1680, aged 87.
He had two wives;
by his firſt, three ſons and one daughter;
by his ſecond, four ſons and three daughters.
Two of his ſons,
viz. Stephen, and Samuel the youngeſt, cauſed this ſtone to be laid as a memorial.
Here lieth the body of John Wilde, grandſon of the above William Wilde, who departed this life Feb. 19, 1718, aged 66."

"Here lieth the body of Mrs. Elizabeth Wilde, wife of William Wilde, gent.
ſecond ſon of John Wilde, gent.
and ſecond daughter of Mr. Thomas Aynſworth,
of this pariſh.
She died the 16th day of April, 1683,
in the 24th year of her age,
leaving iſſue only one ſon John.
Here alſo lieth the body of John Wilde, gent.
only ſon of the above named
William and Elizabeth Wilde.
He died June 11, 1739, in the 57th year of his age."

"Here lieth the body of Mrs. Joan Wilde, ſecond wife of William Wilde, of this town, gent.
and ſecond daughter of George Moore,
of Little Appleby, in this county, gent.
She died July 5, 1691, in the 26th year of her age, leaving iſſue only one daughter, Sarah,
afterwards married to Charles Townley, of London, eſq."

"Here lieth the body of Mrs. Joan Wilde, ſecond daughter of Charles Moore,
of Little Appleby, in this county, gent.
and ſiſter to ſir John Moore, knt.
lord mayor of the City of London in the year 1681.
She was relict,
firſt, of Thomas Sherwood, of Long Whatton;
afterwards of John Wilde, of the ſame place, gent.
and was buried 6th of May, 1698."

"Here lieth the body of Anna Wilde, who was the widow of John Wilde, jun. late of this town.
She departed this life the 21ſt of February, 1722,
in the 63d year of her age."

"Here lieth the body of John Wilde, of Long Whatton, gent.
eldeſt ſon of William Wilde, of the ſame place, gent.
by Frances his firſt wife.
He died in February, 1691, in the 76th year of his age, leaving iſſue, by Joan his wife, two ſons,
John and William Wilde.
John the elder ſon married Anna the third and youngeſt daughter of the Rev. Abraham Mould, of Great Appleby, M.A. rector and patron of that church;
whoſe only ſurviving iſſue was Elizabeth,
wife of Edward Dawſon, of Long Whatton, eſq.;
William the younger ſon married, ſecondly,
Joan, ſecond daughter of George Moore,
of Little Appleby, gent.
whoſe ſurviving iſſue by his firſt wife Elizabeth, ſecond daughter of Mr. Thomas Aynſworth, was John Wilde, gent. who died without progeny;
and by the ſaid Joan he had only Sarah,
wife of Charles Townley, of London, eſq."

17. "Here in a vault is interred
the body of Elizabeth Dawſon, youngeſt daughter of Edward Dawſon, eſq.
She died the 21ſt day of April, 1768, aged 40."

In the South aile:

"Here lieth the body of Mary Dawſon, eldeſt daughter of Atkins Dawſon, gent.
and Margaret his wife.
She died the 17th day of March,
in the 29th year of her age, annoque Dom. 1716."

"Here lieth the body of Edward Dawſon, of this town, gent. who departed this life
the 15th day of March, A. D. 1711, aged 83."

"Here lieth the body of Atkins Dawſon,
of this town, gent.
who departed this life the 6th day of April,
A. D. 1711, in the 54th year of his age."

"Here lyeth the body of Elizabeth Dawſon,
the third daughter of Atkins Dawſon, gent.
and Margaret his wife.
She died the 14th day of December,
in the 13th year of her age, anno Dom. 1703.
"Here alſo lieth the body of Margaret Dawſon, widow, who departed this life
the 4th day of October, 1733, aged 69."

On the floor of the North aile.

"In Chriſtian hope of a bleſſed immortality.
In memory of Leonora Hand, wife of Thomas Hand, who departed this life September 13, 1784, being in the 24th year of her age,
youngeſt daughter of the late Major Mace.
With her alſo lies interred her only child Leonora Maria Hand, aged 4 months."

"Sacred to the memory of Henry Foſbrooke, ſon of Leonard Foſbrooke, late of Shardlow,
in the county of Derby, eſq.
He deceaſed Feb. 12, 1777, aged 43 years."

Beneath lie the remains of Mary Smith,
the wife of Thomas Smith, gent.
of this pariſh,
and the daughter of Edward Dawſon, eſq.
She died July 20, Ann. Dom. 1794,
in the 70th year of her age.
In the ſame vault is depoſited
the body of Thomas Smith.
He died Dec. 16, Ann. Dom. 1799,
in the 64th year of his age."

An epitaph in Whatton church-yard for William Allt, preacher of the Goſpel, who died Auguſt 4, 1779, aged 60, is printed under Sileby, vol. III. p. 425.

Philip Burton, of Long Whatton, a wood-button-maker, and a very eccentric character, died May 9, 1765. His age was not certainly known; but it was thought he was nearly 100.

Anne Sutton, of this pariſh, who died Oct. 19, 1797, in her 97th year, was blind for near 21 years; and, without uſing any means for it, recovered her ſight, which ſhe enjoyed for the laſt four years of her life.

BENEFACTION.

William Lane, of Long Whatton, gave by his will £5 annually, to be diſtributed in bread amongſt the poor of Whatton, at the diſcretion of his truſtees.

Samuel Shaw, M. A. of St. John's College, Cambridge, was born at Repton in Derbyſhire in 1635, and educated at the free ſchool there, then the beſt in thoſe parts of England. He went to the Univerſity at 14 years of age, where he was chamber-fellow to Dr. Morton. When he had completed his ſtudies, he removed to Tamworth in Warwickſhire, and was uſher in the free ſchool there in 1656. He next removed to Moſely, a ſmall place in the borders of Worceſterſhire, being invited thither by colonel Greavis of that place, who had a great reſpect for him, and ſhewed him much kindneſs. At his coming thither, he was ordained by the claſſical preſbytery at Wirkſworth in Derbyſhire; and in 1658, by the aſſiſtance of Mr. Gervas Pigot of Thrumpton, he obtained a preſentation from the Protector to the rectory of Long Whatton, which was in the gift of the crown[1]. In June this year, he had full and peaceable poſſeſſion of this place, and continued ſo to have till king Charles's return in 1660. Then, fearing ſome diſturbance, in the month of September that year, he got a freſh preſentation under the great ſeal of England, which he obtained without much difficulty, as the former incumbent, Mr. Henry Robinſon, was dead, and two more that enjoyed it after him[2]. But, though his title was thus corroborated, ſir John Pretyman made intereſt with the lord-chancellor, and they found means to remove Mr. Shaw about a year before the act of uniformity came out; and introduced Mr. Butler. After this he never had any public living, and ſo was not properly turned out by the uniformity act, though he was ſilenced by it; for he could not ſatisfy himſelf to conform, though he was afterwards offered his living without any other condition than re-ordination: but he uſed to ſay, he would not lie to God and man, in declaring his Preſbyterian ordination invalid. When he left Whatton, he removed to Cotes, a ſmall village near Loughborough. During his ſtay here, his family was afflicted with the plague, being infected by ſome relations from London, who came from thence to avoid it: it was about harveſt 1665. About that time he preached in his family, and afterwards publiſhed an uſeful little book, called "A Welcome to the Plague," from Amos iv. 12. He buried two children, two friends, and one ſervant, of that diſtemper; but he and his wife ſurvived it; and, not being ill both at once, looked after one another and the reſt of the family: which was a great mercy, for none durſt come to his aſſiſtance; but he was, in a manner, ſhut up for about three months together, and was to attend his ſick, and bury his dead himſelf in his own garden. Towards the end of 1666, he removed to Aſhby-de-la-Zouch in the ſame county; and was choſen to be the ſole ſchoolmaſter of the free-ſchool in 1668. The revenue was then but ſmall, the ſchool-buildings quite out of repair, and the number of ſcholars few; but, by his diligence, he ſoon got the ſalary augmented, not only for himſelf, but all ſucceeding ſchoolmaſters: and, by his intereſt among gentlemen, he procured money for the building of a ſchool, and a ſchool-houſe, and a gallery for the convenience of the ſcholars in the church. He had another difficulty to conteſt with in this matter; which was, how to get a licence without ſubſcription to ſuch things as his conſcience did not allow of: but he got over that; for, by means of the lord Conway, he obtained from archbiſhop Sheldon a licence to teach ſchool any where in his whole province[3]; and that without his ſo much as once ſeeing or waiting upon the archbiſhop. As he needed a licence alſo from the biſhop of the dioceſe, he got a friend to make his application to Dr. Fuller, then biſhop of Lincoln. This friend put Mr. Shaw's late book, occaſioned by the plague in his family, into his lordſhip's hands, in order to ſatisfy him of Mr. Shaw's real worth. The biſhop was ſo pleaſed with the piety, peaceableneſs, humility, and learning, there diſcovered, that he gave him a licence upon ſuch a ſubſcription as his own ſenſe dictated and inſerted; and added, "that he was glad to have ſo worthy a man in his dioceſe upon any terms." He alſo ſaid, that he underſtood there was another of his books in print, viz. "Immanuel," which he deſired might be ſent him. Mr. Shaw's piety, learning, and temper, ſoon raiſed the reputation of his ſchool, and the number of his ſcholars in thoſe parts; ſo that he always kept one, and for a great while two uſhers, to aſſiſt him, having often 160 boys or more under his care. His houſe and the town was continually full of boarders from London, and other diſtant parts of the kingdom. Several divines of the church of England (among the reſt Mr. Sturgeſs, miniſter of All Saints in Derby, Mr. Walter Horton, formerly miniſter of the ſame place, and afterwards one of the canons of Lichfield), and many gentlemen, phyſicians, lawyers, and others, in ſeveral parts of England, were his ſcholars, and owed their ſchool learning to his good inſtructions. He endeavoured to make the youth that were under his care in love with piety; to principle them in religion betimes by his good advice, and allure them to it by his good example. His temper was affable, his converſation pleaſant and facetious, his method of teaching winning and eaſy. He had great ſkill in finding out, and ſuiting himſelf to, the tempers of boys. He freely taught poor children, where he ſaw in them a diſpoſition to learning, and afterwards procured them aſſiſtance to perfect their ſtudies at the univerſity. He did, indeed, excellent ſervice in educating youth; and his ſchool was a great advantage to the trading part of the town. When the liberty of the Diſſenters was ſettled by act of parliament, he licenſed his ſchool for a place of religious worſhip. He ſo contrived his meetings as not to interfere with the public, preaching at noon between the ſermons at church, and conſtantly attending there both parts of the day, at the beginning of the ſervice, with all his ſcholars, his family, and all his hearers with him: ſo that the public aſſembly was conſiderably augmented; and the weekly lecture was chiefly attended by him and his ſcholars. He was upon the moſt friendly terms with the vicar of the place, and correſponded with Dr. Barlow, then biſhop of Lincoln, to whom he preſented his book of "Meditations." His lordſhip, who was a great reader, and judge of books, and as conſiderable a caſuiſt as moſt in his age, wrote him a letter on this occaſion, which is preſerved by Calamy, and is highly creditable to them both. If ſuch a correſpondence as this, between the biſhops of the church of England and the miniſters among the Diſſenters, had been uſually and commonly kept up, it might have produced much better effects than the great diſtance that has been generally obſerved on both ſides. Mr. Shaw was a man of a peaceable diſpoſition. He was frequently employed, and very ſucceſsful in his endeavours, to reconcile differences. He had a public and generous ſpirit, and was ever ready to encourage any good deſigns. He was given to hoſpitality, and was very moderate in his principles. For the ſpace of almoſt 30 years he ſpent himſelf in endeavours to make the world better, though with no great gains to himſelf. It was his chief aim to live uſefully; and he thought that a conſiderable reward to itſelf. He was of a middle ſtature, and his countenance not very penetrating; like another Melancthon, that could not fill a chair with a big look and portly preſence; but his eye was ſparkling, and his converſation witty, ſavoury, affable, and pertinent. He was ready at repartees and innocent jeſts, with a mixture of poetry, hiſtory, and other polite learning: but his greateſt excellence was in religious diſcourſe, in praying and preaching.

---

[1] The Protector's preſentation ſhall here be given, as a ſpecimen of the forms that were uſed under the Commonwealth: "Know all men by theſe preſents, that the 28th day of May, in the year 1658, there was exhibited to the commiſſioners for approbation of public preachers, a preſentation of Mr. Samuel Shaw to the rectory of Long Whatton, in the county of Leiceſter, made to him by his Highneſs Oliver, Lord Protector of the Commonwealth of England, &c. the patron thereof, under his ſign manual; together with a teſtimony in the behalf of the ſaid Samuel Shaw, of his holy and godly converſation: Upon peruſal and due conſideration of the premiſes, and finding him to be a perſon qualified as in and by the ordinance for ſuch approbation is required, the Commiſſioners abovementioned have adjudged and approved the ſaid Samuel Shaw to be a fit perſon to preach the Goſpel, and have granted him admiſſion, and do admit the ſaid Samuel Shaw to the rectory of Long Whatton aforeſaid, to be full and perfect poſſeſſor and incumbent thereof; and do hereby ſignify to all perſons concerned therein, that he is hereby entitled to the profits and perquiſites, and all rights and dues incident and belonging to the ſaid rectory, as fully and effectually as if he had been inducted according to any ſuch laws and cuſtoms as have in this caſe formerly been made or uſed in this realm. In witneſs whereof, they have cauſed the common ſeal to be hereunto affixed, and the ſame to be atteſted by the hand of the Regiſter by his Highneſs in that behalf appointed. Dated at Whitehall, the 28th day of May, 1658.

(L. S.) "Jo. Nye, Regiſter."

"Mem. That the 5th day of June, 1658, full, peaceable, corporal poſſeſſion of the church of Whatton within-mentioned was taken by Mr. Samuel Shaw, by virtue of this inſtrument. In preſence of, Ger. Pigot, Jo. Foxcroft, Thomas Alſopp, William Boyer."

[2] The Royal preſentation runs thus: "Carolus Secundus, Dei gratia, Angliæ, Scotiæ, Franciæ, & Hiberniæ rex, fidei defenſor, &c. Omnibus & ſingulis officiariis & miniſtris noſtris, & aliis quibuſcunque qui in hâc parte auctoritatem ſive poteſtatem ſufficientem habent, ſive in poſterum habuerint, ſalutem. Ad rectoriam de Long Whatton, in comitatu noſtro Leiceſtrienſi, per mortem Henrici Robinſon ultimi incumbentis ibidem, aut aliquo alio quocunque modo jam vacantem, & ad noſtram præſentationem pleno jure ſpectantem, dilectum nobis in Chriſto Samuelem Shaw, clericum, in artibus magiſtrum, vobis præſentamus; mandantes & requirentes quatenus eundem Samuelem Shaw, ad rectoriam de Long Whatton prædictam admittere, ipſumque rectorem ibidem, ac de & in eadem ritè & legitimè inſtituere pariter & inveſtire, cum omnibus ſuis juribus, membris, pertinentiis univerſis, cæteraque omnia & ſingula facere, peragere, & perimplere, quæ veſtro in hâc parte incumbunt officio paſtorali velitis cum favore & effectu. In cujus rei teſtimonium, has literas noſtras fieri fecimus patentes. Teſte meipſo, apud Weſtmonaſterium, primo die Septembris, anno regni noſtri 12mo. Per dominum cancellarium Angliæ. Hastings."

[3] "Gilbertus Providentiâ divinâ Cantuarienſis archiepiſcopus, totius Angliæ Primas & Metropolitanus, ad infra ſcripta auctoritate Parliamenti Angliæ legitimè fulcitus, dilecto nobis in Chriſto Samueli Shaw, de Aſhby-de-la-Zouch, in comitatu Leiceſtriæ, in artibus magiſtro, ſalutem; & gratiam ad inſtruend', ſtudiend', & informand', pueros in literis grammaticalibus aliiſque documentis licitis & honeſtis, ac de jure legibus ſtatutis & conſuetudinibus hujus inclyti regni Angliæ in eâ parte permiſſis & approbatis, in quocunque loco vel privato (tuo arbitrio eligend') in & per totum Angliæ regnum, juxta leges, ſtatuta, & conſtitutiones in eâ parte editas & proviſas, tibi, de cujus fidelitate, literarum ſcientiâ, conſcientiæ puritate, morum probitate & diligentiâ plurimùm confidimus; tribus illis articulis mention' in triceſimo ſexto capitulo libri Conſtitutionum ſive Canonum eccleſiar', anno Domini mileſimo ſexcentiſimo quarto regiâ auctoritate edit' & promulgat', manu tuâ propriâ ſubſcribenti, in hunc modum; viz. primo & tertio articulis integris, & ſecundi articuli duobus prioribus membris, necnon juramentum ſupremitatis regiæ Majeſtati juxta vim, formam, & effectum ſtatuti Parliamenti hujus regni Angliæ in eâ parte edit' & proviſ' ad ſancta Dei Evangelia per te corporaliter facta & deoſculata, coram nobis aut commiſſario noſtro ad facultates præſtanti, & ſubeunti, licentiam & facultatem noſtras concedimus & impertimur per præſentes, ad noſtrum bene placitum tantummodo duratur'; proviſo ſemper quod hæ literæ tibi non proficiant, niſi regiſtrentur & ſubſcribantur per clericum Regiæ Majeſtatis ad facultates in Cancellariâ. Dat' ſub ſigillo ad facultates, viceſimo quarto die menſis Decembris, anno Domini milleſimo ſexcenteſimo ſeptuageſimo, & noſtræ tranſlationis anno octavo.

"Jo. Berbinhead, ad facultates Magiſter.
"Ricardus Baylie, clericus facultatum.

"Viceſimo ſexto die Decembris, anno Domini 1670, regiſtratur per Johannem Spencer, clericum Regiæ Majeſtatis ad Facultates in Cancellariâ."

He died Jan. 22, 1696, in the 59th year of his age; and his funeral ſermon was preached by Mr. William Croſſe, his brother-in-law, from Luke xxiii. 28. A portrait of him is given in Plate CXLVIII.

His works were;

"A Funeral Oration for Mr. Blake."

"The Welcome to the Plague."

"A Farewell Sermon, in 1663, on Phil. i. 12." which is the 8th in the country collection.

"A Farewell to Life," from 2 Cor. v. 6.

"The Angelical Life," from Matth. xxii. 30.

[Theſe two are annexed to "The Welcome to the Plague;" and were all three printed together in 1666, under the title of "The Voice of one crying in the Wilderneſs."]

"Immanuel; or, A Continuation of the Angelical Life;" on John iv. 14; an admirable performance, reprinted in 1763.

"The great Commandment; a Diſcourſe on Pſalm lxxiii. 25. To which is annexed, The Spiritual Man in a carnal Fit; from Pſalm lv. 6."

"A Latin Grammar."

"A Receipt for the State Palſy; or, a Direction for the Government of the Nation; a Sermon from Prov. xxv. 5."

"Samuel in Sackcloth; a Sermon from 1 Sam. xv. 35; eſſaying to reſtrain our bitter Animoſities, and commending a Spirit of Moderation, and a right Conſtitution of Soul, and Behaviour towards our Brethren, 1660."

"The true Chriſtian's Teſt; or, a Diſcovery of the Love and Lovers of the World, in 149 Meditations; from 1 John ii. 15."

"An Epitome of the Latin Grammar, by Queſtions and Anſwers."

"Adam, Abel, or vain Man; Sermons from Pſalm xxxix. 6."

"A Funeral Sermon on the Death of Mr. Richard Chantry."

"Words made viſible; or, Grammar and Rhetoric, a Comedy."

"The different Humours of Men; a Comedy."

Theſe two were acted by his own ſcholars for their diverſion; and for the entertainment of the town and neighbourhood at Chriſtmas-time.

He had alſo in the preſs, "A Deſcription of the Heavenly Inheritance; on 1 Pet. i. 3—6;" but, the bookſeller failing whilſt it was printing, it was never perfected.

On the floor of the library in Peterborough cathedral, on a black marble with a grey border:

"Here reſts the body of Orme Bigland, relict of Henry Bigland, eſq. late of Long Whatton, Leiceſterſhire, who departed this life Oct. 6, 1755, aged 73."

At the feet of his mother's tomb, a black marble:

Arms: Quarterly, 1. and 4. Azure, two ears of big in pale, couped and bearded Or; Bigland; 2. and 3. three annulets, 2, and 1: Impaling, Argent, an eagle diſplayed, with two heads Sable. Depupe; fig. 11. Creſt, on a wreath of the colours, a lion paſſant reguardant Gules, holding in his dexter paw an ear of big Or; and over the lion, on a ſcroll, the word GRATITUDO.

"To the memory of Edward Bigland[1], eſq.
of Frowleſworth, in the county of Leiceſter, deſcended from the Biglands of Bigland,
in the county palatine of Lancaſter.
He died on the 18th of May, 1760, in the 50th year of his age, and lies buried here.
He married Elizabeth, the daughter of Charles Pitfield, eſq. of Hoxton, in Middleſex, by whom he had no iſſue;
afterwards Mary, the daughter of Robert Depup, and relict of White Kennett, ſon of the late Biſhop of Peterborough;
by whom he left iſſue one ſon and three daughters;
viz. Edward[2], Mary[3], Orme[4], and Lucy-Eliza[5]."

---

[1] Eldeſt ſon of Henry Bigland, eſq. He was born July 15, 1710; and ſettled firſt at Froleſworth (ſee p. 1007.) and afterwards at Peterborough.

[2] Born Aug. 21, 1745. He died unmarried, in Jamaica, about 1790.

[3] Born March 26, 1740; and married to Iſaac Bayley.

[4] Married to Roger Dutvall.

[5] Born Oct. 5, 1754; married Wright-Thomas Squire, of Peterborough, eſq.

WHITWICK

is ſituate on the border of Charnwood Foreſt, in a ſharp and cold ſituation, having ſeveral high hills and rocks on the North ſide; yet the inhabitants are in general healthy. It is 7 miles Weſt-South-Weſt from Loughborough, and 5 from Aſhby de la Zouch; bounded on the North by Thringſton; on the Weſt by Swanington; on the South and Eaſt by the Foreſt; and, in the eccleſiaſtical diviſion of the county, is within the deanry of Akeley.

It appears from antient records, that Whitwick was occaſionally at leaſt the reſidence of that noble and potent baron Hugo de Grentemaiſnell, who had here a caſtle and a park [1]; and under whom, at the time of the general ſurvey, Hugo held in this lordſhip half a ploughland, then worth two ſhillings. The land was equal to half a plough. There was one bordar; and a wood one furlong long and half a furlong broad [2].

"In the North-weſterly part of the Foreſt of Charnwood is placed Whitwick, where are ſeen the ruins of an antient caſtle [3], by which runneth a brook to Gracedieu, and ſo to Belton, &c. [4]"

Whitwick was originally a fair and large manor, and of a great circuit; having theſe towns and villages part and members of it; viz Whittington, Hugleſcote, Donington, Swanington, Ravenſton, Stanton under Bardon and the Park, Markfield, Borcheſton, and Newton Unthanke [5].

About 1140, it was the inheritance of William de Newmarch, who conveyed it, a ſhort time after, to Robert Boſſu earl of Leiceſter, in exchange for the manor of Stockingford, co. Warwick [6].

When the French ſeized upon Normandy, the eſtates of the Engliſh in that country were taken from them, and given away to others. The Engliſh made repriſals in the ſame way; which, veſting in the crown by the way of eſcheat, under the name of "Terræ Normannorum," were granted away generally under this condition, "quouſque rectis heredibus reddiderimus per pacem." On this occaſion, we find, in 1205, the following record in the Exchequer:

"Petronilla comitiſſa Lancaſtrie debet 3000 marcas, pro habendo Leiceſtriam cum pertinentiis, cum feodis & dominiis omnibus que pertinent ad honorem de Grentemeiſnill, infra comitatum & extra, ſicut jus ſuum & hereditatem; ita quod regi remaneant omnes terre Normannorum que ſunt de eodem feodo; & quod domus de Witewick committatur cui rex voluerit, qui de fideliter regi ſerviendo obſides dabit; & predicta comitiſſa omnia predicta que rex ei reddidit tenebit, niſi per judicium curie regis diſſaiſietur [7]."

In the ſame year, William de Senevill was appointed keeper of Whitwick caſtle (in right of Petronilla counteſs of Leiceſter), and to give to the king John his ſon and heir, as a pledge for the ſafe keeping thereof; as alſo Richard, another ſon of his, but he would not [8].

By the marriage of Margaret, one of the two daughters and coheirs of Robert Fitz Parnell earl of Leiceſter, this manor became the property of Saer de Quincy earl of Wincheſter.

In 1229, Margaret counteſs of Winton paid 80 marks into the Exchequer, "pro habenda conceſſione domini regis de terris Normannorum que ſunt de feodo ſuo, & ſunt in manu ſuâ, vel de illis terris quas alii tenent per ipſam comitiſſam de eiſdem terris Normannorum que ſunt de feodo ſuo; habendis & tenendis eidem comitiſſe totâ vitâ ſuâ, & Rogero de Quincy filio & heredi ſuo poſt mortem ejus, niſi rex reddiderit terras illas heredibus earundem terram per pacem [9]."

In the Teſta de Nevill, compiled about the year 1240, Whitwick is not noticed.

In 1247, "Aſſiſa venit, &c. ſi Rogerus Quincy, comes Wintonie, Philippus Lunel, Johannes de Muntford, Elias Swen, & Willielmus Winter, injuſtè, &c. diſſeiſaverunt Rogerum de Appelby de dimidiâ rode terre in Swaninton, &c. faciendo in quadam culturâ ſuâ unam marleram. Et comes venit, & reſpondit pro ſe & aliiis; & dicit quod terra ubi marlera facta fuit eſt propria terra ipſius comitis, pertinens ad manerium ſuum de Whitewick. Juratores dicunt quod predictus Willielmus Winter diſſeiſivit predictum Rogerum de Appelby. faciendo ibi predictam marleram; & benè dicunt, quod hoc non fuit per preceptum, aſſenſum, vel voluntatem ipſius comitis, vel ballivorum ſuorum. Ideo conſideratum eſt quod predictus Rogerus recuperet ſeiſinam ſuam de predictâ marlerâ, & Willielmus Winter in miſericordiâ; & ſimiliter Rogerus in miſericordiâ pro falſo clamore verſus predictum comitem & alios predictos [10]."

"Warinus Warin nihil capit per aſſiſam verſus Rogerum comitem Winton & alios de communiâ in Whitwicke, quia Whitwick & Swanington ſunt in diverſis baroniis, & communia in Whitwick non pertinet ad aliquod tenementum in Swannington, niſi per eſchamburam, vel per ſua dando Rogero [11]."

In the Itinerary of 1280, Whitwick, Thringſton, Swanington, and Oſgathorpe, anſwered collectively as one vill.

Elizabeth, youngeſt daughter and coheir of Roger de Quincy earl of Wincheſter, brought this lordſhip to Alexander Comyn earl of Boghan or Bucquan in Scotland, her huſband; by whom ſhe had iſſue, John, Alexander, and William.

In 1290, it was found that Alexander Comyn earl of Boghan held not any lands of the king in capite, becauſe he had enfeoffed John his ſon and heir, ſeven years before, in the manor of Whitwick, with the appurtenances, and in all the other lands and tenements which he had in the counties of Leiceſter and Warwick, to hold of him by the ſervice of half a knight's fee; and that John Comyn his ſon and heir was then aged 30 [12].

In 1291, the following proceeding occurs in the Regiſter of Garendon Abbey:

"Placitum inter nos & Johannem Comyn, de interfectione porcorum noſtrorum tempore pannagii, anno Domini M°CC° nonageſimo primo.

"Et predictus Johannes Comyn, pro ſe & omnibus aliis, dicit, quod nullam injuriam eidem fecerunt; quia dicit quod ipſe habet quandam libertatem in foreſtâ de Charnewode, de adimando quolibet anno ſemel, tempore pannagii, omnes porcos in foreſtâ illâ exiſtentes ad parcum ſuum in manerio ſuo de Wytewyk ut 𝔐'chep' [13], ad vidend' quis habeat plures porcos in foreſtâ quàm habere debeat; & ſi plures porcos ibidem inveniant quàm quis habere debeat, cujuſcunque fuerint, pannagium de eis habere debet ratione ejuſdem libertatis. Predicti Ricardus & alii, tamquam ballivi domini, porcos predicti abbatis & omnes alios porcos in eadem foreſtâ inventas ad manerium ipſius, ſcilicet 𝔐'chep', adimaverunt ſicut eis benè licuit. Et unus dicit quod ſi predicti porci, vel eorum aliqua pars interfecerunt, hoc fuit ob defectum ipſius abbatis, eo quod idem abbas porcos ſuos noluit petere ſibi liberari quietos per legem in foreſtâ predictâ hactenus uſitatam. Et de hoc ponit ſe ſuper patriam, &c. Et predictus abbas dicit quod predictus Johannes non debet porcos ſuos in foreſtâ predictâ inventos capere, nec fugere ad parcum ſuum predictum, ſicut dicit; ſed benè dicit quod predictus Johannes & alii predictos porcos ſuos ceperunt, & malicioſè interfecerunt ſicut ſuprà actatur; & quod ita ſit, petit quod inquiratur per patriam. Et Johannes & alii ſimiliter. Ideò veniant juratores coram rege à die Sancti Hillarii in xv dies, ubicunque, &c. Quia tam, &c.[1]"

---

[1] Madox, Hiſtory of the Exchequer, p. 338.

[2] "Hugo tenet de H[ugone de Grentemaiſnell] dimidiam carucatam terræ in Witewic. Terra eſt dimidia carucæ. Ibi eſt 1 bordarius. Silva 1 quarentenæ longitudinis, & dimidia quarentenæ latitudinis. Valet 2 ſolidos." Domeſday, fol. 233. a. 1.

[3] The foundation walls of the caſtle are ſtill to be ſeen in a cloſe called The Caſtle Hill, the property of Henry Cropper, eſq. of Loughborough.

[4] Wyrley, MS. p. 23.

[5] Stockingford, under the name of Newhay, was given by William de Newmarch to the abbot and convent of St. Mary de Pratis at Leiceſter; who about the ſame time had the chapel of Stockingford by the gift of Geffrey de Turvill, and certain lands bordering on Hardreſhull from Geffrey the Heremite. Dugdale, Warwickſhire, vol. II. p. 1070; citing Cart. 11 Edw. II. n. 10. per Inſpeximus.—And ſee before, under Leiceſter Abbey, vol. I. Appendix, p. 81.

[6] See the Inquiſition of 14 Edw. III. cited in p. 212. Burton, MS.

[7] Magn. Rot. 6 John 17. b. Warw. & Leic. Madox, Hiſtory of the Exchequer, p. 338.

[8] Fines 6 John.

[9] Rot. Mag. 13 Hen. III. War. & Leic. Madox, Hiſtory of the Exchequer, p. 207.

[10] Placita 31 Hen. III. in Receptu Scaccarii, Rot. 11.

[11] Ibid. Rot. 12.

[12] Eſch. 18 Edw. I. N° 12. Leic.

[13] I acknowledge myſelf unable to decypher this abbreviation; which might be conjectured to have been merchetum, but that the laſt letter is clearly a p; nor does the well-known ſenſe of merchetum in any way accord with the context in this deed.

June 6, 1293, king Edward I. granted to John Comyn earl of Boghan a market on Tueſdays, and a fair on the eve and day of St. John Baptiſt and two days after, at his manor of Whitwick. Hiis teſtibus; venerabilibus patribus J. archiepiſcopo Dublin'; J. Winton', A. Dunelm', & W. Elienſ', epiſcopis; Edmundo com' Cornub', conſanguineo noſtro; Willielmo de Valentiâ, avunculo noſtro; Henrico de Lacy comite Lincoln'; Waltero de Bellocampo; Ricardo de Boſco, & aliis. Dat' per manum Regis apud Weſtm', ſexto die Junii[2].

Nov. 30, 1306, Elizabeth relict of Alexander earl of Boghan[3], at what time as Robert Bruſe (having ſlain John lord Comyn of Bodenaugh) proclaimed himſelf king of Scotland, crowned the ſaid Robert Bruſe at Scone; her ſon Alexander earl of Fife (to whom that office appertained by inheritance) being then abſent in England, at his manor of Whitwick[4]. By the command of king Edward I. the counteſs of Boghan was for this act ſet on the walls of Berwick caſtle in an iron cage[5].

In 1312, Maſter William Comyn of Boghan having obtained of John Comyn, ſometime earl of Boghan, his brother, deceaſed, a grant[6] of two parts of the manor of Shepeſhed, the towns of Markinfield, Whitenton, Bochardeſton, and Newton, as alſo a moiety of Ratbye, and the town of Whitewyke, with the park of Bardon, all in the county of Leiceſter, in fee, without the king's licence, had the king's pardon for the ſame[7].

"Per tres inquiſitiones compertum eſt in longo placito, quod Johannes Comyn, nuper comes Bougham, fuit ſeiſitus de duabus partibus manerii de Witwicke, Shepeſſehead, villatam de Markenfield, Whittington, Bocherdeſton, Neuton, & Rotby, ac de parco de Berdon, que tenuit de domino rege in capite per ſervitium unius feodi militis; & quod feoffavit inde magiſtrum Willielmum Comyn fratrem ſuum, excepto ſcitu manerii de Whitewicke, ante mortem ſuam; & per quartam inquiſitionem compertum fuit quod dictus comes obiit inde ſeiſitus, & quod dictus comes obiit ſine herede de ſe; & quod Margareta & Johanna filie Alexandri Comyn fratris ſui ſunt ejus proxime heredes & infra etatem, per quod dominus rex per eſchaetam ſeiſivit premiſſa, &c. Que dictus Willielmus per petitionem ſuam demonſtravit, petens rehabere juxta feoffamentum ſuum. Et quia eſt variatio in dictis inquiſitionibus, inquirendum eſt per juratos per patriam; qui dicunt quod predictus comes feoffavit predictum fratrem ſuum Willielmum de omnibus premiſſis, habendum & tenendum ſibi & heredibus ſuis, exceptis preexceptis, &c. Ideo dictus Willielmus adeat dominum regem, & loquatur cum eo, & faciat finem ſi ſibi viderit expedire. Memorandum etiam quod feoffavit ipſum de IIII virgatis terre in Swanington, que valent per annum IIII*l*. & tenetur de Johanne filio Petri per ſervicium II*d*.; & reliqua tenementa valent per annum LXIV*l*.[8]"

All the above-mentioned property the ſaid William rendered to the king, in behalf of his two nieces, Alice wife of Henry lord Beaumont of Folkingham, co. Lincoln, and Margaret her ſiſter, daughters to Alexander earl of Boughan his brother; and the manor of Whitwick was allotted to Alice Beaumont, of whom deſcended John Beaumont, the firſt Engliſh viſcount.

May 12, 1330, king Edward III. (after intimating that he had retained Bartholomew de Burgherſh to attend him conſtantly, whether in peace or war) granted him, for his better ſupport in the ſaid ſervice, the manor of Whitwick: "Rex archiepiſcopis, &c. ſalutem. Sciatis nos, pro bono & laudabili ſervicio quod dilectus & fidelis noſter Bartholomeus de Burgherſh (quem, ad moram nobiſcum ad totam vitam ſuam, tam pro guerrâ quam pro pace, ſub certâ formâ contentâ in quadam indenturâ inter nos & prefatum Bartholomeum de Burgherſh inde confectâ, retinuimus) nobis hactenus impendit, & impendet in futurum; & ut idem Bartholomeus ſe valeat in obſequio noſtro decentiùs continere; dediſſe, conceſſiſſe, & hâc cartâ noſtrâ confirmâſſe eidem Bartholomeo manerium de Whitwick, in comitatu Leiceſtrie, cum pertinentiis; habendum & tenendum eidem Bartholomeo & heredibus ſuis, una cum feodis militum, advocationibus eccleſiarum, libertatibus, liberis conſuetudinibus, feriis, mercatis, chaceis, parcis, boſcis, warennis, & omnibus aliis ad manerium illud ſpectantibus ſeu pertinentibus, de nobis & heredibus noſtris, ac aliis capitalibus dominis feodi illius, per ſervicia inde debita & conſueta in perpetuum: Et ſi contingat manerium predictum, ſeu aliquam parcellam ejuſdem extra manus ipſius Bartholomei vel heredum ſuorum per nos vel heredes noſtros poni, ſeu per conſiderationem curie noſtre vel heredum noſtrorum per quoſcunque quacunque de causâ recuperari; tunc nos & heredes noſtri valorem manerii illius, ſeu parcelle ſic recuperate, in aliis terris & tenementis, in loco competenti infra regnum noſtrum, eidem Bartholomeo & heredibus ſuis, antequam ipſum Bartholomeum ſeu heredes ſuos à poſſeſſione ejuſdem manerii, ſeu alicujus parcelle ejuſdem, vel pertinentium ſuarum predictarum, fecerimus vel permiſerimus amoveri, provideri & aſſignari faciemus; habendum ſibi & heredibus ſuis in perpetuum in formâ ſupradictâ. Hiis teſtibus; H. Lincolnie epiſcopo, cancellario noſtro Johanne de Eltham, comite Cornubie, fratre noſtro chariſſimo; Willielmo de Monteacuto, Olivero de Ingham, Johanne Mautravers, ſeneſcallo hoſpitii noſtri; & aliis. Dat' per manum noſtram apud Wodeſtock, 22° Maii[9]."

In 1340, Henry de Beaumont earl of Boghan, at his death, was ſeiſed of the manor of Whitwick, with its members (viz. Shepeſheved, Merkefeld, Newtown, Wydington, Roteby, and Bochardeſton), as alſo the advowſon of the church of Whitwick, held of the king in capite, by the ſervice of half a knight's fee; and John de Beaumont his ſon and heir was then aged 22[10].

"Inquiſitio capta, &c. Juratores dicunt quod Henricus de Bellomonte tenuit die quo obiit manerium de Whitwike, cum ſuis pertinentiis & membris, viz. Shepeſheved, Merkefeld, Wyrdington, Rotby, Neuton, & Bocharſton, de domino rege in capite, per ſervitium medietatis unius feodi militis. Et dicunt quod tenuit manerium de Loughteborough, una cum hamelettis & membris ſuis quibuſcunque, viz. hamelettis de Beaumanor, Burton, Huckleſcote, Walton, Erneſby, Barrow, Coſington, Ravenſtone, Querndon, Mountſorrell, Woodthorp, & Kniteſthorp, cum feodis militum & advocationibus eccleſiarum, de domino rege in capite, per ſervitium unius feodi militis. Hec ſunt feoda militum que fuerunt ipſius Henrici. Ipſe tenuit medietatem unius feodi militis in Thorp Serlone; quartam partem unius feodi militis in Hatherne; medietatem unius feodi militis in Houton; quartam partem unius feodi in Lougthborough; & tenuit advocationes eccleſiarum ſubſcriptarum; viz. advocationem eccleſie de Loughteborough, advocationem eccleſie de Walton, advocationem eccleſie de Coſſington, val' x*l*.; advocationem eccleſie de Ravenſtone, val' VIII*l*. Item tenuit feoda ſubſcripta de domino rege in capite, ut de jure Alicie uxoris ejus; viz. unum feodum militis in Houton, quartam partem unius feodi militis in Hatherne, medietatem unius feodi militis in Houton & Swynford, unum feodum in Friſby & Galby, quartam partem unius feodi in Wheſton, quartam partem unius feodi in Pakinton, duo feoda in Napton & Weſton, unum feodum in Leyton, unum feodum in Wikingeſton, duo feoda in Boſeworth, Carleton, Cotes, Aileſton, & Parva Glen, medietatem unius feodi in Whatton, medietatem unius feodi in Waltham, medietatem unius feodi in Weſton & Montſorell, duo feoda militum in Aſhby-la-Zouch, & feodum militis in Weſton, Bulkington, Bramcote, Ruton, Bedworth, Merſton, & Claibroke, cum Clifton; Wibbetoft, & Grimeſwatr'. Item tenet advocationem ecclesie de Whitewike. Et quod Johannes de Beumond eſt filius & heres predicti Henrici propinquior, & eſt etatis xxii annorum [1]."

---

[1] Gerendon Chartulary, in the Library of the marquis of Lanſdown, fol. 32. b.
[2] Cart. 21 Edw. I. N° 9.
[3] Scoto-chronicon, cited by Leland, vol. I. p. 779, the author of which Chronicle was one Grey of Northumberland.
[4] Burton, p. 314. Holinſhed, vol. I. p. 299.
[5] Holinſhed, vol. II. p. 313.
[6] Clauſ. 6 Edw. II. m. 19.
[7] Pat. 6 Edw. II. pars 2. m. 5.
[8] Placita coram Rege, termino Paſche, 2 Edw. II. in Receptu Scaccarii, Rot. 9.
[9] Cart. 4 Edw. III. N° 80.
[10] Eſch. 14 Edw. III. N° 24. Leic.

In 1346, Alice de Beaumont (on the aid then granted for knighting Edward of Woodſtock, the king's eldeſt ſon) was aſſeſſed 39*s.* for a moiety and a fifth part and a fortieth part, of one knight's fee in Whitwicke and Shepeſhed [2].

In 1347, William de Herle, at his death, held one meſſuage and two virgates of land at Whitwyke of Alice de Beaumont, by the ſervice of 2*s. per annum* [3].

In 1349, Alice wife of Henry de Beaumont deceaſed held the manor of Whitewyke, with its members and appurtenances, of her inheritance, of the king in capite, by the ſervice of a quarter of one knight's fee; and Thomas de Beaumont her ſon (and brother of John de Beaumont) was her next heir [4].

In 1369, Henry de Beaumont, at his death, held the manor of Whitewyk of the king in capite, as parcel of the honour of Winton; and John de Beaumont was his ſon and heir [5].

In 1378, Agnes wife of Simon Pakeman, at his death, held divers lands and tenements in Whitewyke of the lord Beaumont's heir, as of the manor of Loughborough [6].

In 1396, John de Beaumont, knt. was ſeiſed at his death of the manor of Whitewyke, with its members and appurtenances, held of the king in capite, as of the honour of Winton; and Henry his ſon was his next heir [7].

In 1413, Henry de Beaumont, knt. died ſeiſed of the manor of Whitwyke, with its members and appurtenances held of the king in capite, as parcel of the honor of Winton [8].

In a book of fifteenths and tenths granted by the laity in 1416, Whitwick was rated at 17*s.* 6*d.* and in the ſubſidy of 1445, at the ſame ſum; and no abatement was made. Thringſton was rated with Oſgathorpe; and had no abatement.

In 1418, Agnes the wife of Simon Pakeman, deceaſed, was ſeiſed, in dower, of a certain cloſe called William's cloſe, with the appurtenances, in Whitwyke, held of the lord Beaumont [9].

In 1427, Elizabeth wife of Henry de Beaumont, deceaſed, was ſeiſed of the manor of Whitewyk, with its members and appurtenances, which extended itſelf into Ravenſton, Swanyngton, Merkefeld, Bocheſton, and Donyngton, and was held of the king in capite as parcel of the honour of Winton [10].

Per inquiſitionem captam apud Lutterworth, coram Radulpho Bellers, eſcheatorem in comitatu Leiceſtrie, virtute brevis, &c. compertum eſt, quod Elizabetha tenuit in dotem (ex dotatione Henrici de Bellomont, militis, viri ſui) de hereditate Johannis de Bellomonte filii & heredis predicti Henrici (inter alia) manerium de Whytwick, cum membris & pertinentiis, quod ſe extendit in Raveneſton, Swannynton, Markefeld, Bocheſton, & Donyngton; & manerium de Hokelſcote; cum pertinentiis & advocationibus ecclesie de Raveneſton, pertinent' predicto manerio de Whytwick; quod taxatur annuatim ad x marcas. Item quod predictum manerium de Whytwick, ſimul cum membris & pertinentiis, tenetur de domino rege in capite, ut parcella honoris de Wynton'; ſed per quod ſervitium ignoratur. Item, quod eſt in ſitu manerii de Whytwick quoddam caſtrum vetus & ruinoſum, in quo nulla ſunt edificia, quod nihil valet per annum. Item, quod ſunt ibidem xxxi meſſuagia, unde xii in manu domini exiſtunt pro defectu tenentium, & nihil valent per annum, & quod xix meſſuagia valent per annum ultra repriſas vi đ.; cclxxxix acre terre vaſtate, quarum quelibet valet per annum ii đ.; duo molendina aquatica, quorum quodlibet valet xx s̃.; unum columbare in parte decat', quod nihil valet per annum; ii acre prati, que valent per annum ii s̃.; quoddam clauſum vocat' Halley, contin' iv acras, & valet per annum iv s̃. Item, eſt etiam quoddam proficuum annuatim capiendum pro ſtallagio & pannagio in ſolo domini ad feſtum Nativitatis Sancti Johannis Baptiſte quolibet anno, & valet per annum ii s̃. Item, eſt ibidem parcus vocat' Barendon Parke, contin' c acras boſci & paſture, que valet per annum ultra feoda parcarii & clauſuram ejuſdem parci xl s̃. Item, ſunt ibidem cccc acre terre vaſtate, que nihil valent per annum, eo quod tenentes dicte ville de Whytwick & alii villarum adjacentium habent communiam paſture in eiſdem omni tempore anni. Item, quod Everardus Digby tenet duo clauſa ibidem per fidelitatem & ſervitium, reddendo annuatim domino predicti manerii v s̃. equis portionibus, ad feſta Purificationis, Penteceſten, & Michaelis ſolvend'. Item, ſunt ibidem xxix opera hominum vocat' Berrys ad blada domini, quolibet anno, quorum quoddam opus valet per annum i đ. Item, eſt ibidem redditus xxxi gallinarum, ſolvend' ad feſtum Purificationis, pretium cujuſlibet earundem i đ. Item, quod eſt in manerio de Whytwick quoddam viſus franciplegii ad Mich' tenend', ac curia baronis de iii ſeptimanis ad tres ſeptimanas, que valent ultra feoda ſeneſcalli xv s̃. Item eſt ibidem curia vocata Swanymote, tenend' in Charnewood ſemel in anno, viz. in Nativitate Sancti Johannis Baptiſte, que valet xii đ. Item, quod Elizabetha tenet tertiam partem de ii viſibus franciplegii vocat' Wyncheſter Court, quolibet anno, infra menſes Paſche & Michaelis, ac tertiam partem curie baronis de iii ſeptimanis in iii ſeptimanas apud Leiceſtriam tenende, que tertia pars valet per annum ultra repriſas vi s̃. viii đ. Item, eſt in Ravenſton predictâ, parcellâ manerii de Whytwick, quoddam toftum ad valentiam per annum ii s̃.; item, ii meſſuagia & ii acre terre, que valent per annum ultra repriſas . . . s̃. & v denar', reddend' annuatim ad Mich' & Purificationem, de diverſis tenentibus, equis portionibus ſolvend'. Item, quod ſunt in Swanington, parcellâ dicti manerii de Whytwick, ii meſſuagia ruinoſa & vacua pro defectu tenentium, quarum quelibet valet per annum vi đ.; ii virgate terre jacentes, pro defectu tenentium in manu tent' ibidem, valent per annum iv s̃. iv đ. Item, iii opera hominum vocata Berrys pro bladis, &c. valor cujuſlibet per annum i đ. & v s̃. redd' ad Nativitatem Domini & Johannis Baptiſte, de diverſis tenentibus, equis portionibus ſolvend'; redd' iii gallinarum ad Purificationem ſolvend'. Item, quod ſunt in Markefeld, parcellâ predicti manerii de Whytwick, xvii meſſuagia, quorum quodlibet valet per annum ultra repriſas ii s̃.; xiii acre terre valent per annum v s̃.; c acre terre arabilis, in manibus diverſorum tenentium, valent per annum ii đ.; xii alia meſſuagia, que nihil valent pro eo quod ſunt ruinoſa; unum clauſum vocat' Cliffeſlade, continens xl acras, que valet per annum xxx s̃.; alium clauſum vocat' Bondmanhey, continens xx acras, valet ii s̃.; alium clauſum vocat' Shiffens, continens x acras, val' per annum v s̃.; alium clauſum vocat' Sponhey, continens vi acras, jacens infra Raveneſton bythey, continens x acras, val' per annum v s̃.; alium clauſum jacens apud Guilderhurſt, continens xii acras, val' per annum vi s̃.; alium clauſum jacens apud Cliffbuſke, continens viii acras, valor acre viii s̃.; alium clauſum vocat' Wadmanhey, continens xx acras, val' xx s̃.; xviii đ. redditûs de ii . . . quas Radulphus Hickſon tenet, ad Purificationem & Mich' ſolvend', redd' xxvi gallinas ad Purificationem; preter i đ. & ii opera Berrys. Item, quod ſunt in Bocheſton, parcellâ ejuſdem manerii de Whytwick, vi meſſuagia, quorum iii meſſuagia val' per annum vi s̃. x đ.; . . . val' iii s̃. iiii đ.; iii s̃. vi đ. redditûs ad Purificationem, Penteceſten, & Mich', de diverſis tenenti-

---

[1] Eſch. 14 Edw. III. 24. in Turri London.

[2] Rot. Aux. 20 Edw. III.

[3] Eſch. 21 Edw. III. N° 44. Leic.

[4] Eſch. 23 Edw. III. pars 2. N° 157.

[5] Eſch. 43 Edw. III. pars 1. N° 12.

[6] Eſch. 2 Ric. II. N° 38. Leic.

[7] Eſch. 28 Ric. II. N° 14. Leic.

[8] Eſch. 1 Hen. V. N° 45. Leic.

[9] Eſch. 6 Hen. V. N° 27. Leic.

[10] Eſch. 6 Hen. VI. N° 49. Leic.

bus. Item, in Donington, parcellâ ejuſdem manerii de Whytwick, ſunt xvi meſſuagia ruinoſa, &c. quodlibet valens per annum vis̃. xđ. jacent' in manibus domini pro defectu tenentium; ſex opera hominum vocata Berrys, valor iđ.; vs̃. ad Inventionem Sancte Crucis & Michaelis. Item, quod manerium de Huckleſcote tenetur de domino rege in capite, ſed per que ſervitia ignoratur. Item, quod ſunt in ſitu ejuſdem manerii ii acre terre non edificat', val' per annum viđ.; xii meſſuagia ruinoſa. Item, quod ſunt ibidem x meſſuagia, que valent per annum vis̃. viđ. ten' in manu domini pro defectu tenentium, que nihil valent; vi acre terre, que valent per annum ivs̃. ivđ.; xlvi acre freſci pro defectu tenentium; vi acre prati, quelibet valet per annum xiiđ. Et eſt ibidem quedam pecia vocata Hockleſcotebreche, val' per annum vs̃.; alia paſtura vocata Whitehill, val' per annum xs̃.; quoddam ſtagnum, quod valet per annum viđ.; quedam libera piſcaria cujuſdem torrentis, que valet per annum viđ.; iis̃. ixđ. redditus aſſiſe ad Paſcham & Michaelem de diverſis tenentibus. Item, quod eſt in manerio de Hokleſcote quidem viſus francipleģii quolibet anno infra menſes Paſche & Michaelis, ac quedam alia curia vocata curia baronis de iii ſeptimanis in iii ſeptimanas tenenda, que viſus & curia valent per annum, ultra feoda ſeneſcalli, ... Item, quod predicta Elizabetha, &c. nulla, &c.[1]"

In 1439, ſir John Beaumont, at that time owner of Whitwick, was created viſcount Beaumont by king Henry VI. being the firſt Engliſhman that was ever honoured with the ſtare and title of a viſcount; to whom, in 1448, the ſame king, out of an affectionate love which he bore to the ſaid John and his ſon William lord Bardolph, among divers pledges and earneſts of the ſame, granted the privileges of return of writs and all precepts, aſſiſe of bread and ale, ſoc, ſac, weyf, ertſey, felons goods, treſore-trove, felo's-de-ſe, eſcape, gallows, pillory, wreck of ſea, &c. at Lincoln, Folkyngham, co. Linc. Wyrmgay, co. Norf. and Whitwick, co. Leic.; at the laſt of which places he alſo granted them liberty to have a peculiar and proper priſon for the puniſhment of offenders within their juriſdiction. "Rex archiepiſcopis, &c. ſalutem. Sciatis quod, de gratiâ noſtrâ ſpeciali, ac ex certâ ſcientiâ & mero motu noſtris, conceſſimus dilectis conſanguineis noſtris Johanni vicecomiti de Beaumond, & Willielmo filio ſuo domino de Bardolf, quod ipſi, uterque eorum, heredes & aſſignati ſui, per ballivos ſuos vel per ballivum ſuum, inperpetuum habeant plenum returnum brevium, & omnimodorum & ſingulorum brevium, tam aſſiſarum, attinctorum, & juratorum, quam omnibus & omnimodorum brevium aliorum, mandatorum, billarum, preceptorum, & warantorum noſtrorum, heredum & ſucceſſorum noſtrorum, ac quorumcunque juſtitiariorum, cuſtodum pacis noſtre, commiſſariorum, vicecomitum, admirallorum, eſcaetorum, coronatorum, ballivorum noſtrorum, heredum & ſucceſſorum noſtrorum, emergentium ſeu exequendorum, infra, de, vel ſuper omnia caſtra, dominia, maneria, terras & tenementa, feoda & ſervicia ſua, cum omnibus ſuis pertinentiis; unde iidem Johannes vicecomes & Willielmus, conjunctim ſeu ſeparatim, ſeu aliquis alius ad uſum eorum ſeu alterius eorum, ſeiſiti exiſtunt; vel que iidem Johannes vicecomes & Willielmus, ſeu alter eorum, de cetero per deſcenſum hereditarium, ſeu de perquiſito, habebunt, ſeu alter eorum habebit, infra comitatus Lincolnie, Leiceſtrie, & Norfolcie, necnon in civitate Lincolnie, tam ad ſectam noſtram, heredum & ſucceſſorum noſtrorum, per nos, heredes & ſucceſſores noſtros ſolos, ſeu per nos, heredes & ſucceſſores noſtros conjunctim cum aliis perſonis vel aliâ perſonâ, quam ad ſectam alterius cujuſcunque proſequendorum ſeu quovis modo emergentium; & omnimodas executiones omnium & ſingulorum brevium, mandatorum, billarum, preceptorum, & warantorum noſtrorum; & quod nullus vicecomes, admirallus, eſcaetor, coronator, ac ballivus predictus, ſeu eorum alicujus miniſter, vel miniſtri noſtri, heredum vel ſucceſſorum noſtrorum, caſtra, dominia, maneria, terras, & tenementa, feoda & ſervicia predicta, cum ſuis pertinentiis, ingrediatur, ad aliquod officium ibidem faciendum, exercendum, ſeu exequendum, niſi in defectu ipſorum Johannis vicecomitis & Willielmi, heredum vel aſſignatorum ſuorum, aut ballivi ſeu ballivorum ſuorum predictorum. Conceſſimus etiam eiſdem Johanni & Willielmo, & heredibus ſuis in perpetuum, conjunctim & diviſim, omnes fines pro tranſgreſſionibus, offenſis, miſpriſionibus, negligentiis, ignorantiis, falſitatibus, deceptionibus, conceleamentis, murdris, raptibus mulierum, feloniis, & aliis delictis quibuſcunque; ac etiam fines pro licentiâ concordandi; ac omnia amerciamenta, redemptiones, exitus, & penas, foriſfacta & foriſfacienda, de anno, die, vaſto & ſtrepitu; ac etiam omnia que ad nos, heredes ſeu ſucceſſores noſtros, pertinere poterint de hujuſmodi anno, die, vaſto & ſtrepitu, & aliis premiſſis, tam de ſeipſis quam de omnibus ſuis, ac de omnibus tenentibus ſuis & non integrè tenentibus ſuis, reſidentibus & non reſidentibus, & aliis reſidentibus quibuſcunque, licet ipſi, ſeu eorum aliquis miniſter, ſeu miniſtri noſtri, heredum ſeu ſucceſſorum noſtrorum, ſint vel fuerint infra aliqua dominia, maneria, terras & tenementa, feoda & poſſeſſiones quecunque, que iidem Johannes & Willielmus ad preſens conjunctim & ſeparatim habent, ſeu ipſi & heredes ſui in poſterum habebunt vel poſſidebunt, in quibuſcunque curiis noſtris, heredum & ſucceſſorum noſtrorum, ac coram theſaurario vel baronibus heredum & ſucceſſorum noſtrorum de Scaccario, ac coram juſtitiariis noſtris, heredum & ſucceſſorum noſtorum, de uno & altero banco; ac coram admirallis noſtris, heredum & ſucceſſorum noſtrorum, qui pro tempore fuerint, & aliis curiis noſtris, heredum & ſucceſſorum noſtorum; ſeu coram ſeneſcallo & mareſcallo ac clerico mercati hoſpitii noſtri, heredum & ſucceſſorum noſtrorum, qui pro tempore fuerint, & aliis curiis noſtris ac heredum & ſucceſſorum noſtrorum; ac coram juſtitiariis ſewerarum & juſtitiariis itinerantibus ad placita corone, communia placita, & placita foreſte; ac coram juſtitiariis noſtris, heredum & ſucceſſorum noſtrorum, ad felonias, tranſgreſſiones, oppreſſiones, exceſſus, & alia gravamina & malefacta, tam ad ſectam noſtram, heredum & ſucceſſorum noſtrorum, quam aliorum quorumcunque & alterius cujuſcunque, faciendum, audiendum, exequendum, & terminandum, aſſignatis vel aſſignandis; & coram juſtitiariis noſtris, heredum & ſucceſſorum noſtrorum, ad aſſiſas, juratas, certificationes, & quaſcunque alias inquiſitiones capiendum, vel gaolas deliberandum, aſſignatis vel aſſignandis; ac coram cuſtodibus pacis noſtre, heredum & ſucceſſorum noſtrorum, & coram juſtitiariis noſtris, & heredum & ſucceſſorum noſtrorum, ad ſtatuta & ordinationes de artificibus, laboratoribus, ſervientibus, vittelariis, foreſtallariis, ac de ponderibus & menſuris conſervandum, aſſignatis vel aſſignandis; & quibuſcunque aliis juſtitiariis & miniſtris noſtris, heredum & ſucceſſorum noſtrorum, tam in preſentiâ noſtrâ, heredum & ſucceſſorum noſtrorum, quam in abſentiâ noſtrâ, heredum & ſucceſſorum noſtrorum; que predictos Johannem & Willielmum & heredes ſuos, necnon homines & tenentes ſuos, ac integrè tenentes ſuos & non integrè tenentes ſuos, reſidentes & non reſidentes, predictas fines facere, amerciari, exitus producere, & penas foriſfacere de anno, die, vaſto & ſtrepitu, & foriſfacturâ hujuſmodi, adjudicare contigerit; que fines, amerciamenta, redemptiones, exitus, penas de anno, die, vaſto, ſtrepitu, & foriſfacturâ, ad nos, heredes & ſucceſſores noſtros, poſſent pertinere, ſi prefatis Johanni & Willielmo & heredibus ſuis conceſſa non fuiſſent. Et quod predicti Johannes & Willielmus, & heredes ſui, per ſe vel per ballivos ſeu miniſtros ſuos, fines, amerciamenta, redemptiones, exitus, penas, foriſfacturas tam ipſorum Johannis & Willielmi & heredum ſuorum quam hujuſmodi hominum ſeu tenentium eorum, integrè tenentium & non integrè tenentium, reſidentium & non reſidentium, & aliorum reſidentium quorumcunque, & omnia que ad nos, heredes & ſucceſſores noſtros, pertinere poterint, de anno, die, vaſto & eſtrepamento; & de omnibus predictis, levare, percipere, & habere poſſint, ſine occaſione vel impedimento noſtri, vel heredum, ſeu ſucceſſorum noſtrorum, aut juſtitiariorum, eſcaetorum, vicecomitum, [1] Eſch. 6 Hen. VI. & ante feſtum Sancti Andreæ Apoſtoli.

---

admirallorum, coronatorum, juſtitiariorum ſewerarum, aut aliorum ballivorum ſeu miniſtrorum noſtrorum vel heredum ſeu ſucceſſorum noſtrorum, vel heredum & ſucceſſorum quorumcunque, licet quod iidem Johannes & Willielmus & heredes ſui, ac iidem homines ſeu tenentes, &c.[1]"

In 1461, Everard Digby, attainted of high treaſon, was ſeiſed of one cloſe, containing 300 acres of land, called Kynton Waſte, in the pariſh of Whitwyke, and of one cloſe, containing 200 acres, called Tibiot Waſte; in the ſame town[2].

Feb. 18, 1461-2, king Edward IV. granted the manors and lordſhips of Beaumanor, Whitwyke, Bocheſton, Neuton, Hocleſcote, Donyngton, North Markefield, and Erneſby (which Katherine dutcheſs of Norfolk held for term of her life, with remainder to William lord viſcount Beaumont), to William Haſtings, eſq. and his heirs[3].

May 16, 1462, king Edward IV. granted divers lands in Whitwic (late parcel of the poſſeſſions of John Beaumont, eſq.) to Richard Haſtings, eſq. and his heirs male[4].

July 26, 1462, king Edward IV. granted the manor of Whitewick, and a certain piece of waſte ground called Savorye, worth together £6. per annum, to John Goars and his heirs, in conſideration of his faithful ſervices, to hold the ſame at the rent of 3*s*. 4*d*. per annum, to be paid into the king's exchequer[5].

Aug. 28, 1462, king Edward IV. granted divers lands at Whitwick, Dunnington on the Heath, and Raunſton (late parcel of the poſſeſſions of Everard Digby) to Alice Ruſſel for life[6].

In 1463, William Beamount viſcount Beaumont, attainted of high treaſon, was ſeiſed of the manor of Whitwyke[7].

In 1464, John Beaumont, eſq. attainted of high treaſon, was ſeiſed of one cloſe, called Stordon, in the pariſh of Whitwick, containing 200 acres[8].

Oct. 25, 1464, king Edward IV. granted divers lands at Whitwyke, viz. Kynton Waſte and Tybbote Waſte (late parcel of the forfeited lands of Everard Digby), to Peter Curleys and Alice his wife, to hold by fealty only, in lieu of all other ſervices[9].

Oct. 26, 1464, king Edward IV. granted the reverſion of the manor and lordſhip of Whitwick, with the members and appurtenances (then parcel of the poſſeſſions of Katherine dutcheſs of Norfolk), to Henry Haſtings, his chamberlain[10].

In 1483, it was found that Edward late king of England, by his letters patent, bearing date at Weſtminſter, Aug. 9, 1467, had granted the manor and lordſhip of Whitewyke, with its members and appurtenances, to William lord Haſtings, now deceaſed; and that it was held of the king by homage only[11].

After the death of lord Haſtings, it was granted by king Richard III. to Francis lord Lovell and Joan his wife, ſole ſiſter and heir to John viſcount Beaumont; but he being alſo attainted in 1485, it fell again to the crown, and was given by Henry VIII. 1530, to Thomas Grey, marquis of Dorſet, inter alia, in exchange for the lordſhips of Grafton and Hartwell, co. Northampton, to be held by him and his heirs in ſocage, by the rent of £5. 5*s*. 4*d*. per annum[12].

By indenture dated Mareh 28, 1512, between the king and Thomas marquis of Dorſet, the marquis conveyed to the king the manors of Lee Bankert and Shroffold, with the advowſon of Lee church, in the county of Kent, in exchange for the manor of Whytewyk, with its members and appurtenances, in the county of Leiceſter, together with all the lands which the king poſſeſſed in Whytewyk, Swanyngton, Donyngton, Hokelſcote, Newton Unthanke, Bocherdeſton, Roteby, and Markfeld, and the advowſon of Markfield church, all which had been parcel of the poſſeſſions of William lord viſcount Beaumont; reſerving to the king and his heirs the park of Bardon[13].

In Michaelmas Term 1515, the following enrolment of the above exchange occurs among the records of the court of Exchequer:

"Leyc'. Dominus rex mandavit hic breve ſuum, ſub magno ſigillo ſuo, theſaurario & baronibus hujus Scaccarii directum, cujus quidem brevis tenor ſequitur in hec verba: "Henricus, Dei gratiâ, rex Anglie & Francie, & dominus Hibernie, theſaurario & baronibus ſuis de Scaccario ſalutem. Tenorem irrotulamenti cujuſdam ſcripti in rotulis Cancellarie noſtre irrotulati, per quod Thomas marchio Dorſet dedit & conceſſit diverſa terras & tenementa in comitatu Kancie in excambium pro aliis terris & tenementis in comitatu Leyceſtrie, in dicto ſcripto ſpecificatis, nobis, & heredibus & ſucceſſoribus noſtris, in perpetuum, vobis mittimus preſentibus intercluſ'; mandantes vobis, ut, inſpecto tenore predicto, ulterius inde pro nobis fieri facietis prout de jure & ſecundum legem & conſuetudinem regni noſtri Anglie fuerit faciendum. Teſte meipſo, apud Weſtm', 19° die Octobris, anno regni regis ſeptimo." Tenor irrotulamenti ſcripti predicti, unde in brevi predicto fit mencio, ſequitur in hec verba: "Omnibus Chriſti fidelibus ad quos preſens ſcriptum pervenerit, Thomas marchio Dorſet ſalutem. Cum Chriſtianiſſimus & excellentiſſimus princeps dominus noſter Henricus, Dei gratiâ rex Anglie & Francie, & dominus Hibernie Octavus, per literas ſuas patentes, dederit & conceſſerit michi prefato marchioni, in excambio pro maneriis de Lee Bankers & Shroffolde, cum advocatione eccleſie de Lee predictâ, in comitatu Kancie, necnon pro omnibus aliis terris, tenementis, redditibus, ſervitiis, & aliis hereditamentis meis, in Lee Bankers & Shroffolde, in comitatu predicto; uno meſuagio, uno gardino, ſex acris prati, in Lee predictâ, nuper Johannis Mathewſe, tantummodo exceptis; dimidium manerii ſui de Whitewyke, cum ejus membris & pertinentiis, ac omnia terras & tenementa, redditus, reverſiones, & ſervicia ſua, in Whitewyke, Swanyngton, Whityngton, Donyngton, Hokelſcote, Newton Unthanke, Bocherdeſton, Roteby, & Markefelde, cum eorum pertinentiis, in comitatu ſuo Leyceſtrie, que nuper fuerunt Willielmi vicecomitis Beamont, ac advocationem eccleſie de Markefelde, in dicto comitatu ſuo Leyceſtrie, parco ipſius regis de Bardon excepto & ſibi & heredibus ſuis reſervato; ac omnia & omnimodas libertates, francheſias, commoditates, proficua, & alia emolumenta quecunque, in dicto dominico ſive manerio, villis, & ceteris premiſſis, in comitatu Leyceſtrie predicto, ſive in aliquâ inde parcellâ, tam liberè, largè, & plenariè, ſicut dictus Willielmus vicecomes Beaumont unquam habuit aut legitimè uſus fuit, in predicto dominico ſuo de Whitewyke, Swanyngton, Whityngton, Donyngton, Hokelſcote, Newton Unthanke, Bocherdeſton, Roteby, & Markefelde, ſive in aliquo eorundem, vel in aliquâ inde parcellâ, cum ſuis pertinentiis; habend' & tenend' predictum dominicum & manerium de Whitewyke, Swanyngton, Whityngton, Donynton, Hokleſcote, Neuton Unthanke, Bocherdeſton, Roteby, & Markefelde predictis, cum ſuis pertinentiis, ac advocationem eccleſie de Markefelde predictam, cum omnibus ſuis juribus & pertinentiis, ac cum predictis libertatibus & francheſiis, ac ceteris premiſſis, exceptis preexceptis, michi prefato Thome marchioni Dorſet, heredibus & aſſignatis meis, in perpetuum, in excambium pro predictis maneriis de Lee Bankers & Shroffolde, & advocatione eccleſie de Lee, & ceteris premiſſis, prout per eaſdem literas patentes pleniùs liquet & apparet: Sciatis me prefatum marchionem dediſſe, conceſſiſſe, & hâc preſenti cartâ meâ confirmâſſe, prefato excellentiſſimo principi domino noſtro Henrico, Dei gratiâ regi Anglie & Francie Octavo, predicta maneria mea de Lee Bankers & Shroffolde, in comitatu Kancie, ac advocationem eccleſie de Lee predictam, necnon omnia meſſuagia, terras, & tenementa, redditus, reverſiones, & ſervitium, & alia hereditamenta mei quecunque, in Lee Bankers & Shroffolde predictis, cum pertinentiis, exceptis meſſuagio, gardino, & ſex acris prati predictis, in excambium pro predicto manerio de Whitewyke, cum ejus membris & pertinentiis, omnibus aliis terris & tenementa, redditibus, penſionibus, in Whitewyke, Swanynton, Whityngton, Donyngton, Hokelſcote, Newton Unthanke, Bocherdeſton, Roteby, & Markefelde predictis, & advocatione eccleſie de Markefelde predictâ; dicto parco de Bardon domino regi, heredibus & ſucceſſoribus ſuis, omnino excepto; ac pro ceteris premiſſis in comitatu Leyceſtrie, tam liberè prout predictus Willielmus vicecomes Beaumont unquam premiſſa in comitatu Leyceſtrie habuit aut legitimè uſus fuit; habend' & tenend' predicta maneria de Lee Bankers & Shroffolde, ac advocationem eccleſie predicte, ac omnia alia terras & tenementa in Lee Bankers & Shroffolde predictis, cum ſuis pertinentiis, prefato noſtro Domino Regi, heredibus & aſſignatis ſuis in perpetuum: Ac inſuper noveritis me prefatum marchionem dediſſe & per preſentes conceſſiſſe eidem Domino Regi omnia & omnimoda reverſiones, redditus, exitus, & proficua predictorum maneriorum de Lee Bankers & Shroffolde predicti, ac omnium predictorum terrarum & tenementorum, & ceterorum premiſſorum, in Lee Bankers & Shroffolde predictis, exceptis preexceptis, à feſto Sancti Michaelis Archangeli ultimo ante datum preſentium quoquomodo hucuſque debit', exigent' ſive creſcent'. In cujus rei teſtimonium huic preſenti carte mee ſigillum meum appoſui. Dat' viceſimo octavo die Martii, anno regni Domini Regis predicti tercio."

---

[1] Dugdale's Bar. Angl. vol. II. p. 54. a. Burton, p. 314. Car. II. N° 23.

[2] Eſch. 1 Edw. IV. N° 7. Leic.

[3] Pat. 1 Edw. IV. pars 1. m. 25.

[4] Pat. 2 Edw. IV. pars 1. m. 13.

[5] Pat. 2 Edw. IV. pars 1. m. 2.

[6] Pat. 2 Edw. IV. pars 1. m. 23.

[7] Eſch. 3 Edw. IV. N° 30. Leic.

[8] Eſch. 4 Edw. IV. N° 47. Leic.

[9] Pat. 4 Edw. IV.

[10] Pat. 4 Edw. IV. pars 2. m. 18.

[11] Eſch. 1 Ric. III. N° 32. Leic.

[12] Inq. 22 Hen. VIII.

[13] Originalia in the Lord Treaſurer's Remembrancer's Office, 3 Hen. VIII. Rot. 13, 14.

"Memorandum, quod viceſimo octavo die Martii, anno ſupradicto, predictus marchio venit coram Domino Rege in Cancellariâ ſuâ, & recognovit cartam & ſcriptum predictum in formâ predictâ[1]."

"The ruines of Whitewik caſtel long now by permutation of landes to the marquiſe of Dorſete. Whitewik is a . . . . miles from Leiceſter by . . . . .[2]"

From Thomas marquis of Dorſet, the lordſhip deſcended to Henry duke of Suffolk his ſon; on whoſe attainder, in 1554, it again reverted to the crown.

In 1564, there were 17 families in Whitwick; in Thringſton 20 families; in Swanington 25 families.

In 1576, three parcels of the manor of Whitwick, to the amount of £6. 5*s*. 6*d*. were granted by queen Elizabeth to William Fiſher for the conſideration of £80.; and in 1582 certain lands and tenements, parcel of that manor, of the rent 6*s*. 8*d*. were granted to John Packington[3].

Elizabeth Grey, widow of ſir John Grey, knt. (who died in 1611) petitioned for the manor of Whitwick[4].

King James I. by letters patent, dated Feb. 21, 1612-13, granted the manor of Whitwick, parcel of the poſſeſſions of Henry late duke of Suffolk, attainted, to ſir Henry Haſtings, knt. and Henry Cutler, gent. with Bardon park, in Charnwood foreſt and without, belonging to Whitwick manor.

"Jacobus, Dei gratiâ, &c. Sciatis, quod nos, &c. in conſideratione ſumme quatuor mille librarum, &c. per te Henricum Haſtings militem, &c. ſolut', &c. conceſſimus prefato Henrico Haſtings militi, & Henrico Cutler gen', &c. totum illud manerium noſtrum de Whitwick, in com' noſtro Leic', &c. parcell' terrar' Henrici nuper ducis Suffolc', de altâ proditione attincti, &c. Ac etiam totum illum parcum noſtrum de Bardon, in com' Leic', &c. ac omnia & ſingula meſſuagia, &c. terras, &c. tam infra foreſtam de Charnewood in com' Leic' predict' quam extra, predicto manerio de Whitwick ſpectan', &c. prefato Henrico Haſtings militi, & Henrico Cutler, hered' & aſſign' ſuis, &c. in perpetuum, &c. Teſte, &c. xxi° die Febr. anno regni noſtri xi°."[5]

The freeholders at Whitwick in 1630 were, George Marſh, Thomas Moore, and John Colton.

In 1642, this lordſhip was the inheritance of Henry earl of Huntingdon.

In 1655, there was collected in Whitwick, for the relief of the poor Proteſtants in Piedmont, the ſum of £2. 1*s*. 6*d*.; in Swanington £2. 2*s*. 10*d*.

The ſignature of ſir Thomas Beaumont occurs to a letter dated Whitwick, June 19, 1683, relative to a payment for a large quantity of timber bought from the eſtate of Mr. Herrick in Charnwood Foreſt.

The manor of Whitwick paid for fee-farm in 1693:

Ralph Argall	0	12	10
William Blay	1	1	10
Thomas Bradſhaw	1	14	0
John Burgeſs	3	1	0
William Carver	0	3	4
William Carver	0	12	7
John Chapman	0	13	6
Thomas Coulter	1	17	4
George Gilbert	0	8	5
Robert Gilbert	1	0	0
Thomas Houghton	0	5	5
The counteſs of Huntingdon	7	5	5½
Elizabeth More	0	14	3½
George More	0	17	0
Frances More, widow	0	17	0
Thomas More	2	5	0
Elizabeth Muncke	1	19	4
Thomas Orton	0	6	10
Richard Oſburne	0	3	0
Thomas Reddall	0	7	8
John Swaine	0	4	8
John Thompſon	0	7	8
	£.26	5	2

Eighteen freeholders polled from Whitwick in 1721, and 40 in 1775.

March 13, 1801, a petition was preſented to the Houſe of Commons, by the Rev. John Piddocke, Leonard Piddocke, eſq. Ellis Shipley Peſtell, eſq. Henry Cropper, eſq. Joſeph Stinſon, William Avárne, and the ſeveral other perſons whoſe names are thereunto ſubſcribed, being owners and proprietors of land, ground, and right of common, within the lordſhip and liberties of Whitwick, in the county of Leiceſter, and Thringſton, in the pariſh of Whitwick aforeſaid, ſetting forth, that there are, within the lordſhip or liberties of Whitwick and Thringſton, ſeveral open fields, meadows, paſtures, commons, and waſte grounds; and that the lands and grounds of the petitioners in the ſaid fields, meadows, and paſtures, lie intermixed in ſmall parcels in and over the ſame, and are, in their preſent ſituation, incapable of improvement; and would greatly tend to the advantage of the ſeveral perſons intereſted, to have the ſame divided and incloſed, and ſpecific parts and ſhares thereof allotted to them, according to their property and intereſt therein; and that certain allotments, or diviſions of land in Thringſton, have heretofore been made amongſt the proprietors, by private agreement, which would be of great advantage and benefit to the ſaid proprietors, to be confirmed, and to have the ſame exonerated from the payment of tithe. A bill was accordingly ordered; but no further proceedings were had in that ſeſſion. In 1803, however, an act was paſſed, ſtating that there are within the townſhip of Whitwick ſeveral common and open fields, meadows, and paſtures, and alſo certain commons or parcels of waſte grounds, called or known by the name of Whitwick Moor, as well as other waſte grounds, containing about 50 acres; and that there are within the townſhips or liberties of Thringston and Peggs Green certain commons or waſte grounds, all within the ſaid pariſh: and that the right honourable Francis Rawdon Haſtings earl of Moira, baron Rawdon of Rawdon, in the county of York, is lord of the manor of Whitwick aforeſaid, and Joſeph Boultbee, eſq. is lord of the manors of Thringſton and Peggs Green aforeſaid; and the ſaid earl of Moira is ſole lord of the ſoil of the ſaid commons and waſte grounds within the townſhip of Whitwick aforeſaid, and the ſaid Joſeph Boultbee is ſole lord of the ſoil of all the commons and waſte grounds within the townſhips or liberties of

---

[1] De termino Sancti Michaelis, 7 Hen. VIII.

[2] Leland, Itinerary, vol. I. p. 20.

[3] Leaſes in the Augmentation Office.

[4] For this particular circumſtance, a memorandum among my multifarious Collections refers to Harl. MSS. 7129. 137. But, from ſome error in the reference, I have not been able to find the petition.

[5] Harl. MSS. 3881. f. 696.

Thringſton and Peggs Green in the ſaid pariſh of Whitwick; and, in their ſeveral rights as aforeſaid, are entitled to all the cottages and buildings erected upon the ſaid commons or waſte grounds, and to all mines and minerals whatſoever within and under the ſame; and that the King's moſt excellent Majeſty, in right of the Duchy of Lancaſter, is patron of the vicarage of Whitwick aforeſaid; and Francis Harris, clerk, is the preſent vicar thereof, and ſir George Howland Beaumont, bart. is impropriator of all the great tithes; and the ſaid Francis Harris, as vicar as aforeſaid, is entitled to the ſmall tithes within the ſaid townſhip and liberties; and that the ſaid ſir George Howland Beaumont and Joſeph Boultbee, John Rapper, Thomas Fenton, Edward Dawſon, Henry Cropper, Thomas Chapman, John Bonnet, eſquires, John Piddocke, clerk, and divers other perſons, are the proprietors of, and entitled unto, the ſaid common and open fields, meadows, and paſtures, and of all the meſſuages, lands, and tenements, for or in reſpect of which the owners and propretors are reſpectively entitled to common right upon the ſaid commons and waſte grounds within the ſaid townſhips or liberties. Two acres are firſt allotted for public watering-places for cattle, and for getting materials for the public ways; and, after the public and private roads are ſet out, a compenſation to be made to the impropriator and vicar for all great and ſmall tithes, and other eccleſiaſtical dues, except Eaſter offerings, mortnaries, and ſurplice fees. An allotment to Mr. Boultbee for a brickkiln, and for a public ſand-pit; and to the earl of Moira, in lieu of his right in a certain coney-warren. Cottages and gardens on the commons are to be allotted to lord Moira and Mr. Boultbee. Tithe owners to be exempt from the expence of obtaining this act, and of fencing allotments. Proprietors not having ſufficient property in the lands to be incloſed to pay the value of their tithes in money: Power for Mr. Boultbee to uſe engines for draining, &c. Satisfaction to be made for damages in getting minerals, &c. or in digging for coals. And nothing in this act to alter or vary any right, tithes, property, or intereſt, in, over, or upon, Charnwood Foreſt.

The Return made to Parliament in 1786, in anſwer to an enquiry reſpecting the charitable donations in this pariſh, may be ſeen in vol. I. p. 81; where it appears that a donation of Thomas Monk, of Shenton in this county, gent. to the amount of £110. 18*s.* 3*d.* a year, is principally applied to the apprenticing annually 12 or 13 boys, from the ſeveral pariſhes of Whitwick, Shenton, Meaſham, and Anſtey, with each of whom a premium of £10 is given.

By the Return to Parliament in 1801, Whitwick contained 160 inhabited houſes, and 17 uninhabited; 168 families; 421 males, 396 females; total 817; of whom 53 were chiefly employed in agriculture, and 282 in trade, manufactures, &c.

The ſtocking manufactory employs about 100 frame-work knitters.

The preſent lord of the manor is the earl of Moira, by inheritance from the earls of Huntingdon.

The coal-mines in this pariſh are numerous; of which great quantities are got up at Swanington.

A ſmall rivulet produces plenty of trout.

	Whitwick.			Swanington.			Thringſton.
	£.	s.	d.	£.	s.	d.	£.	s.	d.
Money raiſed for the poor within the year ending at Eaſter 1776, — — —	87	8	6	52	9	7	110	19	8
Expended in county rates, &c. —	2	16	10	2	4	0	3	11	0
—— on the poor, — —	84	11	8	50	5	7	97	3	0
Rent of workhouſe and habitation, —	4	17	6	2	5	4	7	3	6
Expended in litigations, — —	0	0	0	1	1	0	0	0	0
Money raiſed for 1783, — —	114	9	1	171	19	10	153	1	0
—— 1784, — —	94	3	0	179	1	8	124	18	2
—— 1785, — —	110	3	9	129	13	9	157	8	6
Medium of theſe three years, — —	106	5	3	160	5	1	145	2	6
—— of county expences, — —	6	1	2	22	6	11	1	5	6
—— of expences not relating to the poor; repairs of churches, roads, &c. — —	8	13	6	0	0	0	6	7	11
—— of nett annual expences, — —	91	10	7	137	18	2	127	9	1
—— of attending on magiſtrates, —	5	16	11	4	0	10	1	18	5
—— of entertainments at meetings, —	1	0	6	1	12	4	1	4	2
—— of law expences, — —	7	4	0	8	12	3	12	0	0
—— of ſetting the poor to work, —	2	6	0	0	0	0	0	16	0

The CHURCH (ſee Plate CL.)

dedicated to St. John the Baptiſt, conſiſts of a ſtout tower (the upper windows of which are antient and handſome, and in which are four bells); a large South porch; a ſpacious chancel; nave, and two ailes.

The nave is ſeparated from the chancel by a ſcreen, and from the ailes by three arches, over which are clereſtory windows.

The South aile is larger than the North, and has a fourth arch, dividing it from the chancel.

Mr. Burton deſcribes theſe arms in the church:

In the Eaſt window of the chancel:

Azure, three garbs Or, Comin earl of Cheſter; fig. 4.

Azure, a bend Argent, cotiſed Or, between ſix lioncels rampant Or, Bohun; fig. 5.

Checky Or and Azure, Warren; fig. 6.

Gules, ſemé of croſs croſslets a feſs Or, Beauchamp; fig. 7.

Sable, a lion rampant Argent, Verdon; fig. 8.

In the North window:

Gules, a croſs moline Argent, Beke; fig. 9.

Or, a lion rampant Purpure, Lacy earl of Lincoln; fig. 10.

Argent, a croſs Azure, fretty Or; fig. 11.

Azure, cruſuly, two barbels addorſed Or, all within a border engrailed Gules, Barre; fig. 12.

In the South-eaſt window:

Azure, ſeme of fleur-de-lis Or, France antient; fig. 13.

Gules, three lions paſſant guardant in pale Or, England; fig. 14.

The ſame, with a label of five points Azure; fig. 15.

Checky, Or and Azure, a canton Ermine, Warren; fig. 16.

In the South window:

Warren, as fig. 6.

Checky Or and Azure, a canton Gules, Warren; fig. 17.

In a great North window:

A man in armour kneeling; on whoſe ſurcoat, Argent, ſemé of croſs croſslets fitché three fleurs-de-lis Gules, holding in hand an helmet and mantle; the creſt thereon, a talbot Argent; and over his head hangeth an eſcutcheon, wherein, Argent, ſemé of croſs croſslets fitché three fleur-de-lis Gules. Talbot.

Over againſt him kneeleth a woman, on whoſe gown are the ſame croſslets and fleurs-de-lis, and holdeth the ſame eſcutcheon of Talbot, and over her head hangeth, Argent, a cinquefoil Azure.

At the altar is a handſome table, of variegated marble, and a ſilver communion cup.

In the reign of king Richard I. "Thomas Maunſell dat unam marcam pro habend' aſſiſam ultime preſentationis de eccleſiâ de Whitwic. Et ſciendum eſt quod Rogerus Godberd eſt in miſericordiâ, eo quod detulit breve verſus Rogerum Arrebi; quare ipſe impedivit preſentationem ejus[1]."

In 1207-8, Thomas Maunſell paid the king a fine of one mark, for a recognizance, to be ſummoned before the juſtices itinerant, between him and Roger

---

[1] Plac. de temp. Ric. I. in Receptu Scaccarii, Rot. 4.

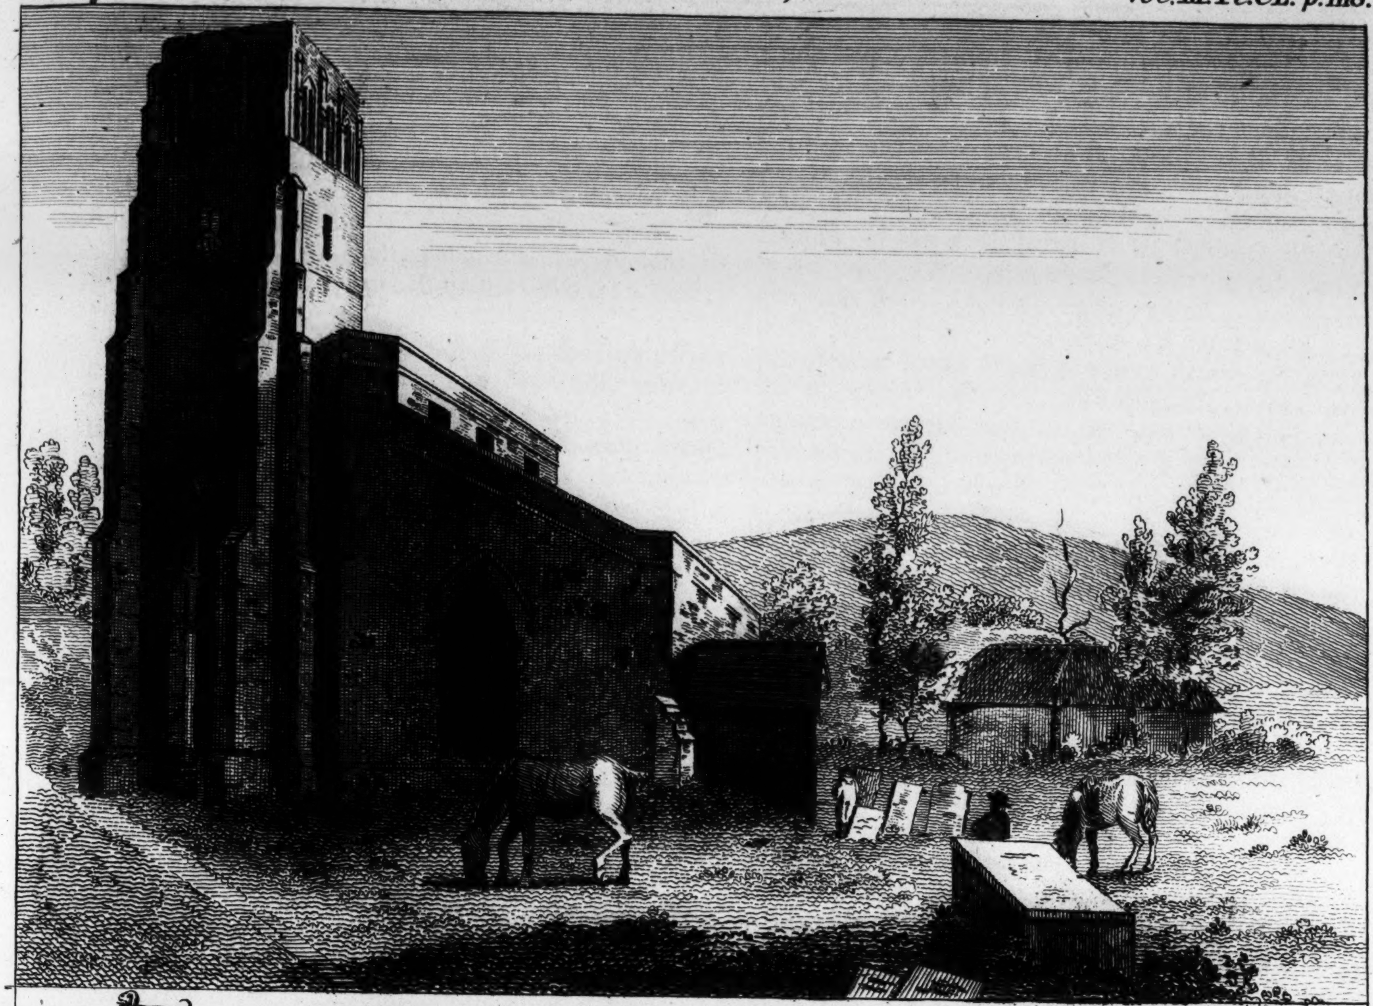

Fig. 3.

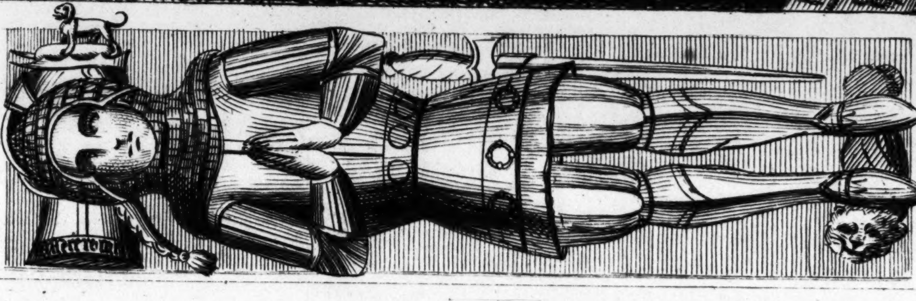

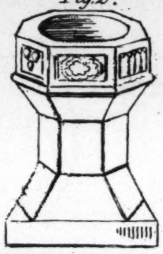

Fig. 2.

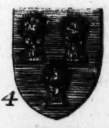
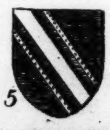
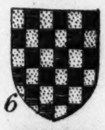


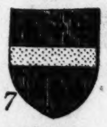
4



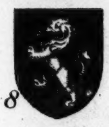
5



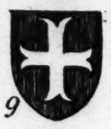
6



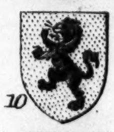
7



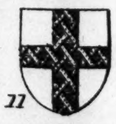
8



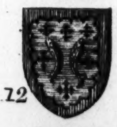
9



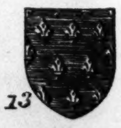
10



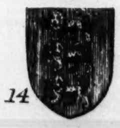
11



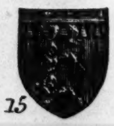
12



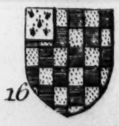
13



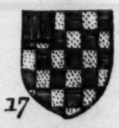
14



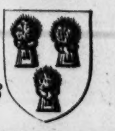
15



16



17



18

19 20

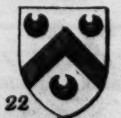
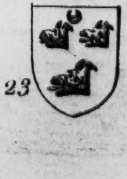
21



22



23

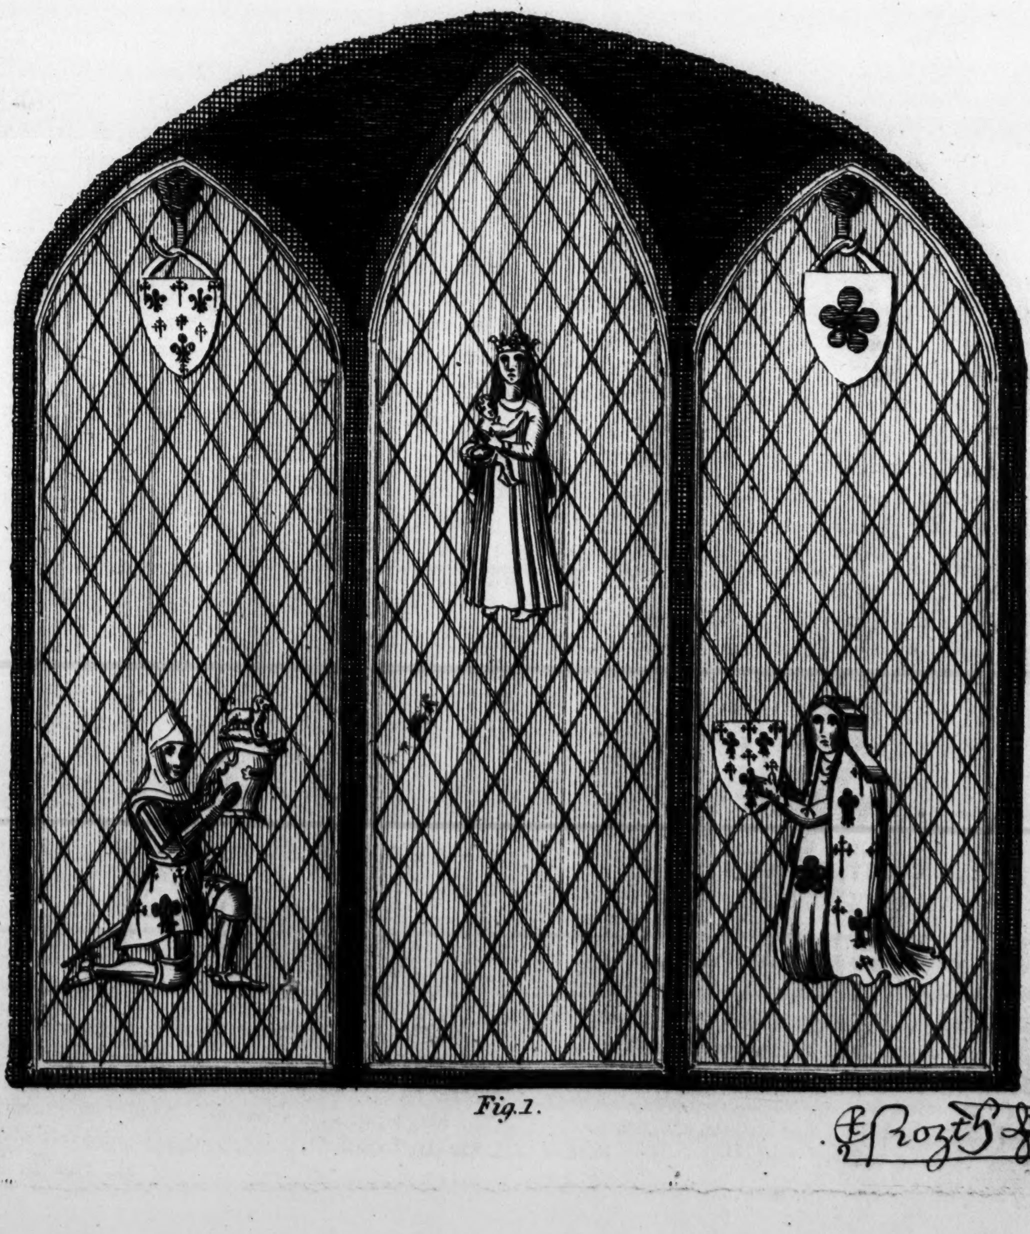


Fig. 1.

p. 1137.

Godeberd and Robert de Arreby, touching the advowſon of the church of Witewike, as alſo before the king's juſtices at Weſtminſter: "Thomas Maunſell dat unam marcam, pro habend' recognitione ſummonitionis, coram juſtitiariis itinerantibus, inter ipſum & Rogerum Godebr' & Robertum de Areby, de advocatione eccleſie de Witewike; & coram juſticiariis domini regis apud Weſtmonaſterium [1]."

"Willielmus Maunſell, pater Thome, preſentavit ultimam perſonam. Adeo Rogerus Godbert in miſericordiâ [2]."

In the Matriculus of 1220, this was the ſtate of the church of Whitwick: "Thomas Maunſell, patron; Ralph Talbois, parſon, inſtituted by Hugh [Walleis], then biſhop of Lincoln; William de Skawell, vicar, receiving a moiety of all the profits of this church in the name of his vicarage, inſtituted by maſter archdeacon, the ſee of Lincoln being then vacant. He pays to the parſon one pound of aromatic incenſe. This church hath belonging to it the chapel of Angodeſthorp [Oſgathorp], which hath a reſident chaplain [3]."

The rectory and vicarage of Whitwick were conſolidated in 1234, when Ralph Taylebos was rector, and William de Shawel, vicar.

"This town was one of thoſe happy places, where Robert Groſſeteſte biſhop of Lincoln's zeal againſt impropriations had a good effect; though in other places he met with too great oppoſition to the good he intended; for whereas the great tithes at this place were appropriate to his ſee, and a ſmall pittance only left for a vicar, he reſtored the great tithes to the vicar, and conſolidated them to the living for ever [4]."

"From making appropriations to monaſteries, deans, prebendaries, &c. the example went on to pariſh prieſts, who in populous and rich places obtained a vicarage to be endowed, and caſting upon them the care of ſouls they had the rectory appropriated to them and their ſucceſſors as a ſinecure for ever. Biſhop Groſſeteſte, conſecrated biſhop of Lincoln 1234, had a great abhorrence of this corruption. He looked upon appropriations as robbing God of his honour, the prieſt of his maintenance, and the people of their ſouls; and laboured to reſtore all tithes to the parochial clergy. He conſolidated the vicarage with the rectory in many churches; in Stanes, co. Northampton; Lillingſton, co. Oxon; Yaxly, co. Huntingdon; in Whitwick, co. Leiceſter; in Haſele, Wotton Drayton, Beaucham, and other places. This conſolidation ſeems to have been afterwards reverſed, as it is now a vicarage only [5]."

"Henricus de Lacy, ratione cuſtodie terrarum filii & heredis Thome Manſell de Whitwike & Suaneton, in manu ſuâ tunc exiſtentium, preſentat Johannem de London' ſubdiaconum ad eccleſiam de Whitewike, tunc vacantem poſt mortem Roberti de Manſell [6]."

"Dominus Henricus de Bellomonte preſentat ad eccleſiam de Whitewike ex unâ parte, & dominus Thomas comes Lancaſt', &c. ex alterâ parte. Dictus dominus Henricus revocat preſentationem ſuam, &c. [7]"

In 1344, the procurations were, 7*s.* 6½*d.*; the rectory was taxed at 20 marks, and paid 4*s.* for Peterpence. The prior of Holland was the then patron.

In 1391, Robert prior of Holand preferred the following petition relative to the church of Whitwick, which had been given to that priory.

"A ſon tres redote & tres puiſſant ſeigneur le roi d'Engleterre & de Fraunce ſupplie tres humblement ſon pover oratour & chapellein Robert priour de Holand, q̃ come le dit priour & ſes predeceſſours ount ewe en leur propre oeps l'egliſe de Whitewyk en le countee de Leiceſtr', la viendrent Henr' Tebbe [8] de Threnguſton, William ſon frere, Robert [9] Siſſelſon, Robert Grubber, Richard Sprot, & Johan Grenelowe, ove pluſours autres meſſeſours, & le dit priour ove fort mayn hors de ſa dit eſgliſe boterunt & enchaſerunt, & cent ſouldz des oblacions le dit priour al haut auter en la dit egliſe priſterunt & miſtrent en une ganſe & emporterunt; & le dit priour manaſſerunt de tuer s'il entraſt en la dit eſgliſe; & le dit priour & ſes ſervantz unquore manaſſont de vie & membre, la ou le dit priour & ſes ſervantz furount deſouth votre tres reverent proteccion a ycel temps: & pluſours autres horribles treſpas & tortz le dit Henr' & les autres meſfeſours ont fait a dit priour & ſes ſervantz, leſqueux le dit priour eſt preſt a monſtrer devant vous ſon tres graciouſe & tres puiſſant ſeigneur; c'eſt aſavoir, q̃ la ou le dit priour avoit vendu certeinz diſmez a dit Henr', pur queux le dit Henr' & autres furont obligez par une obligacion a dit priour en quatorſe marcz d'argent a paier a certein jour, a quel jour le dit Henr' ne paia point, & le dit priour vient a dit Henr' & luy pria de paier les ditz deners, & le dit Henr' demanda viewe de dit obligacion, & le dit priour monſtra la dit obligacion a dit Henr' & William ſon frere, & la le ditz Henr' & William debruſerunt & enraſſerunt la dit obligacion, & le dit Henr' ne vodroit paier les ditz deners a dit priour. Sur quoy le dit priour ſuiſt briefs a viſcont de Leiceſtr' d'areſter le dit Henr' & les autres meſſeſours tan qe ils uſſent trove ſeurete de la pees a dit priour & ſes ſervantz, lequel Henr' & lez autres ſont tant favore ove le dit viſcont, iſſint q̃ le dit viſcont ne voet eux prendre, ne les ditz briefs ſ̃ver. Sur quoi ſupplie tres humblement le dit pover priour a votre tres graciouſe & tres puiſſant ſeigneurie, q̃ vous pleiſe comander briefs as ditz meſſeſours ſur grevouſe peine de vener devant vous & votre tres noble & tres ſage conſeil en plein Parlement a certein jour, de reſpondre des horribles treſpas & tortz a Saint Eſgliſe & luy faitz, & auxi de trover ſufficeant ſeurete a dit priour & les ſeons de lour vie & de membre, pur l'amour de Dieu, & en oevre de charite."— To this petition the anſwer was, "Soit commiſſion fait a un ſergeant d'armes d'arreſtier les meſſeſours deinz eſcriptz, & de les ameſner en parlement, a y reſpondre des horribles treſpas deinz eſcriptz [10]."

To the order made upon this petition, a proper attention ſeems not to have been paid; for, in the ſame Parliament, it is thus repeated:

"Robert priour de Holand, el counte de Lancaſtr', miſt avant une petition en ceſt Parliament, en la fourme q'enſuit: A ſon tres redote & tres puiſſant Sr̃ le Roi d'Engleterre & de France, &c. [as before.]

"Laquelle petition lieue en Parlement, agardez feuſt, q'une commiſſion ſerroit maintenant faite a un ſergeant d'armes pur ameſner les ditz meſfeſours en ceſt Parlement, a y reſpoundre de la matire compriſe en la dite petition. Et ſur ceo Johan de Elyngham, ſergeant d'armes, par force d'une commiſſion a luy ent faite, ameſna les ditz Henr' Tebbe & Johan Grenelowe, q̃ feurent principalx meſfeſours celle partie, devant le roy meſmes & ſeigñrs en Parlement. Et illoeqes oppoſez & areſonez de la dite matire, confeſſerent & granterent, q'ils fuerent coupables de les treſpaſſes a eux par le dit priour en la dite petition ſurmys, & ſe miſtrent en la grace du roi & du dit priour. Par ount les ditz Henr' Tebbe & Johan Grenelowe, pur l'orribilite & malveys enſample du dit treſpas, par agarde du roi meſmes & des ſeigñrs fuerent agardez & commys en la priſon de Flete, a y demurer a volunte du roi. Et puis les ditz Henr' & Johan firent fyn au roi en la chancellerie, & gree al dit priour, & troverent ſeurte de lour bon port: Et enſi fuerent deliverez [11]."

In 1534-5, the procurations and ſynodals were 11*s.* 8*d.*; £1. 6*s.* 8*d.* was paid to a deacon; and a penſion of £3. 6*s.* 8*d.* to Robert Smith. The value of the vicarage was then £10.

In 1564, Whitwick is called "vicaria, que tantum habet curatum."

The impropriation was purchaſed by the lord Beaumont from the earl of Saliſbury, to whom it had been given by king James I. [12]

"Nov. 4, 1646. By virtue, &c. ordered, that the yearly ſum of £50. be paid out of the profits of the impropriate rectory of Horninghold, in the county of Leiceſter, ſequeſtered from John Prettyman, delinquent, to and for increaſe of the maintenance of ſuch miniſter as this Committee ſhall appoint to officiate in the pariſh church of Whitwick, in the ſaid county; the ſaid pariſh conſiſting of three great towns, viz. Whitwick, Swanington, and Thrinkſton, and the vicarage thereof being worth but £30. per annum."

---

[1] Fines 9 John, m. 7.

[2] Plac. de temp. 9 regis Johannis, Rot. 6. in dorſo.

[3] See the Introductory volume, p. lviii.

[4] Magna Britannia, p. 1376.

[5] Kennett on Impropriations, p. 35. See alſo the Roll in the Firſt Fruits office.

[6] In archivis eccleſie de Linc', anno 12 Ricardi de Graveſend epiſcopi, 1269.

[7] Ibidem, tempore Johannis Dalderby epiſcopi, 1316.

[8] In another copy of this petition, it is Gebbe.

[9] Richard in the other copy.

[10] Rot. Parl. vol. III. p. 298.

[11] Ibid. p. 286.

[12] MS Burton.

"May 22, 1650. By virtue of an order of parliament of May 2, 1646, it is ordered, that the ſum of £50. a-year be paid out of the profits of the impropriate rectory of Whitwick, in the county of Leiceſter, ſequeſtered from the lord Beaumont, delinquent, for increaſe of the maintenance of John Bennet, miniſter of the pariſh church of Whitwick aforeſaid, his preſent maintenance being but £30. per annum; and the ſequeſtrators of the premiſes are required to allow and pay the ſame accordingly, at ſuch times and ſeaſons of the year as the ſaid rent ſhall grow due and payable; and all former orders for augmenting the ſaid living are hereby diſcharged[1]."

In 1650, Whitwick was returned as an impropriation; the rectory worth £60; the vicarage £30; and the incumbent "weak."

In the king's books it is called a diſcharged living, worth in great and ſmall tithes, with manſe and glebe, £9. 14*s.* 7*d.*; clear yearly value £75.

The epiſcopal procurations are, for the rectory 2*s.* 11*d.*; the vicarage 1*s.* 9*d.*; the archidiaconal 11*s.* 7½*d.*

Upon the font-ſtone (fig. 2.) Mr. Burton noticed theſe three eſcutcheons:

1. [Azure], three garbs [Or]; Comin earl of Cheſter, fig. 18.

2. [Or], three chevrons Gules, Clare; [fig. 19.]

3. [Argent], Cruſilly and three fleurs-de-lis [Sable]; Beresford, fig. 20.

The earlieſt Regiſter begins in 1601; and till 1642 was regularly well kept, but has ſuffered greatly (as have all the ſucceeding ones) by neglect and damp.

"William ſon of Sapcote lord Beaumont and lady Anne his wife, bapt. Dec. 10, 1643.

Henry ſon of Henry Beaumont, eſq. bapt. Dec. 24, 1643.

It appears by the pariſh regiſter that William Rowell was appointed pariſh-clerk of Whitwick in 1686, and continued till 1739; when John his ſon ſucceeded, and continued till 1775; when John his ſon ſucceeded, and is now the preſent clerk.

Chriſtenings from 70 to 80 annually; burials about 60.

The wake is on the Sunday after Midſummer-day.

RECTORS.	PATRONS.
Ralph Taylebos, rector, 1209—1234.	Thomas Maunſell.
William de Shawell, vicar 1220—1234.
Robert de Manſell, died 1269.
John de London, 1269.	Henry de Lacy.
Robert Smith[2].	Thomas earl of Lancaſter.
. . . . kal. October, 1316.	Dean and Chapter of the chapel of St. Thomas the Martyr.
. . . . 3 kal. March, 1317.
Peter Finch, 1534.
Michajah Croſſley occurs 1612—1642[3].
John Bennet, 1659[4]; ejected 1662.	The Parliamentary Sequeſtrators.
John Brentnail, July 17, 1675.	The King, as duke of Lancaſter.
William Hunt, Sept. 21, 1691.	The King and Queen.
William Ramſor, Sept. 17, 1700.	The King, as duke of Lancaſter.
Joſeph Hagger, Dec. 5, 1705.	The Queen.
William Banks, Jan. 3, 1710.
Charles Clerke, Dec. 19, 1715.	The King, as duke of Lancaſter.
Charles Frank, March 19, 1735.
Francis Harris, M. A. Dec. 1, 1767; the preſent vicar, 1804.

MONUMENTAL INSCRIPTIONS.

The chancel has a vault all the way under it; and has a plaſter floor, ſupported by timber; but does not appear to have ever been a burial-place. It contains not a ſingle graveſtone.

"Underneath the great North window lieth the tomb of ſir John Talbot, knt. made of alabaſter, neatly wrought and poliſhed, of an huge great length; the proportion of him made thereon curiouſly graven and emboſſed, under whoſe head is an helmet, with the mantle, and the creſt a talbot. At his feet a lion; upon the edge of the helmet is written,

Miſerere mei Deus, Jeſus Nazarenus, Rex Judeorum.

The inhabitants report him to have been a giant of great ſtrength and valour, and withal have certain tales of him, not worthy (for the uncertainty of the truth) here to be ſet down[5]."

Mr. Wyrley obſerves, "There is a tomb (but no inſcription) where they ſay ſir John Talbot of Swanington (which is a town hard by) lies buried; in the window over which is one in his coat armour, who bears, Argent, three fleurs de lis Gules, between ſeven croſſes; they ſay Talbot's coat; and hard by, in the ſame window, is, Argent, a cinquefoil Azure; which, it ſeems, was his wife's; for ſhe is alſo pictured in the window with the firſt arms upon her alſo; this other coat with her[6]."

The figure of ſir John Talbot is ſtill in being, but much defaced by time; ſee fig. 13. It meaſures ſeven feet. The helmet under the head is broken off; and the face is worn quite flat. The lion at the feet remains tolerably perfect[7].

On flat ſtones in the nave:

1. "Beneath lie the remains of Elizabeth Holyoak, relict of Richard Holyoak, late of Thringſton, formerly the wife of George Chapman,
late of the ſame place.
She died the 24th of March, 1799, aged 80 years."

2. "Beneath lies interred the body of Thomas Thorpe, gent. late of Thringſton, who departed this life Jan. 15, 1800, aged 77."

---

[1] From the original Minute-books of the Committee of Sequeſtration, preſerved in the Bodleian Library at Oxford.

[2] Garendon Chartulary.

[3] Between theſe years the Regiſters were well kept, and regularly ſigned by him.

[4] John Bennet, a native of London, was educated at Cambridge, and epiſcopally ordained. Before he was ejected here in 1662, he preached in Northamptonſhire and other places. Afterwards he removed to London, where he preached occaſionally 10 years, and then went to Littleover in Derby. He taught ſchool, and preached about in the darkeſt times, for which he met with many troubles, and was excommunicated. It was once deſigned to draw him into a plot, and he was actually impriſoned as a ſuſpicious perſon, without any reaſon alledged; but he ſo managed as to make his eſcape. He died on a journey to London, ſix miles from home, in May 1693. He was a man of conſiderable learning, lively and pleaſant in converſation, plain in his preaching, and was much reſpected by ſeveral perſons of diſtinction, with whom he had acquaintance.

[5] Burton, p. 305.

[6] Wyrley's MS. in the College of Arms, p. 22. b.

[7] The tradition of the neighbourhood advances the height of Giant Talbot to nine feet; and adds that the ſculptor of the monument was under the neceſſity of abſconding, for having made the monument in every reſpect under the proper ſize. See p. 1122.

On a ſmall blue tablet in the North aile:
1. “In hâc eccleſiâ propè hanc inſcriptionem
ſitus eſt Georgius Bellott, oriundus[1], nuper receptor generalis
eccleſiæ collegiatæ beati Petri Weſtmonaſterii.
Novem erant ei fratres & ſex ſorores, quos omnes ſupravixit;
licet novem erant eo minores natu.
Vitam cœlibem agebat, pietatemque colebat,
& a bonis literis non alienus fuit.
Mors Chriſti mortis mea medela.
Mors omnium malorum ſenſum adimit.”

On an alabaſter monument under the above:
“Hic jacet Georgius Bellott, de antiqua familia Bellotorum, de Moreton, in comitatu Ceſtriæ, qui obiit apud Thringſton, primo die Maii, 1627, ætatis 84.”

On a white marble tablet in the ſame aile:
“Near this place lie the bodies of George-Chapman, Thomas-Chapman, and George-Lang, children of Henry Cropper, of Loughborough, gent.
by Elizabeth his wife, only daughter of George Chapman, late of Thringſtone in this pariſh, gent.
George the eldeſt child died February 10, 1773,
Thomas the 10th of June, 1775,
both in their infancy;
And George-Lang the 24th of December, 1776, in the third year of his age.”

On a monument againſt a pillar in the ſame aile:
Arms: . . . . . . three boars' heads . . . .
a creſcent for difference; fig. 23.
“Poſt lentas febres (hic infra) requieſcit Sam. Litherland, de Thringſton, vir probus, fidus amicus, alter Nathanael, ac eccl. Angl. verè filius.
Obiit XVIII Junii, A. D. MDCXCV°, æt. XXVII°.”

On flat ſtones in the ſame aile:
“Here lies interred the body of Samuel,
ſon of Thomas and Sarah Grundy.
He died the 10th of April, 1777,
aged two years and one month.
Too early ſnatcht away, thou lovely boy!
Thy parents' pleaſing hope and fondeſt joy!
They feel the ſmarting wound, yet kiſs the rod—
Not doubting thou'rt an angel with thy God.”

“Here lie interred the remains of Elizabeth Freeman, daughter of Thomas Chapman, late of Thringſton, gent.
She departed this life May 17, 1790, aged 68.”

On mural tablets in the South aile:
“Beneath lie the remains of George Moore, gent.
who departed this life May 6, 1724, aged near 30.
Alſo of Ann his wife:
ſhe died the 2d of May, 1774, aged 74.
And alſo of Sarah their daughter, and wife of John Hammond, one of the aldermen of the Borough of Leiceſter, gent.
She died May 26, 1768, in the 49th year of her age.
Likewiſe of Henry-Moore Hammond, ſon of the above John and Sarah Hammond.
He died April 27, 1778, aged 35 years.”

“In memory of Thomas Chapman, gent. (ſon of George and Hellen Chapman, late of Thringſton).
He died the 18th of January, 1745, aged 55 years.
Alſo of Elizabeth Chapman his widow.
She died the 21ſt of February, 1758, aged 62 years.
Likewiſe of George Chapman (only ſon of the above-named Thomas and Elizabeth Chapman).
He died the 21ſt of March, 1754, aged 37 years.
Reader! caſt thine eye around thee!
Attend to the chronicles of Mortality;
And let reflection prepare thee for Eternity!”

On the floor of the ſame aile:
“Here lieth interred the body of Ann, the wife of Thomas Chapman, who departed this life April 3, 1747, aged 25 years.”

“Beneath are depoſited the remains of John Hammond, who departed this life May 7, 1787, aged 33.”

On an upright ſlate ſtone at the Weſt end:
“Near this place lieth interred the body of John Bonnett, ſon of John and Sarah Bonnett.
He died November the 26th, 1758, aged 59.
Alſo near this place lie the bodies of Samuel Bonnett and Sarah his wife.
She departed this life Auguſt 4, 1757, in the 41ſt year of her age.
He died Auguſt the 7th, 1760, aged 53.
Likewiſe near to them lieth the body of John Bonnett, ſon of the aboveſaid Samuel and Sarah Bonnett.
He died Auguſt 7, 1764, in the 13th year of his age.”

On flat ſtones near the Weſt end:
“Here lieth interred the body of Sarah,
the wife of James Walker.
She departed this life Dec. 5, 1781, aged 26 years.”

“Here lieth the body of Ann Vickars, the wife of John Vickars.
She departed this life the 14th of December, 1764,
in the 50th year of her age.”

“Beneath lie interred the remains of Samuel Bonnett, late of this place,
who departed this life Aug. 31, 1783, aged 30 years.”

On altar tombs in the church-yard:
“James Boultbee, of Swanington, departed this life May 28, 1768, aged 61.
Mary his wife died Aug. 28, 1763, aged 67.
Elizabeth, wife of John Boultbee, died May 20, 1762,
aged 23.
Martha, his ſecond wife, died July 24, 1776, aged 40.”

“Here lieth the body of William Newark,
who departed this life Oct. 6, 1749,
in the 61ſt year of his age.
Here lieth interred the body of Margaret,
the wife of William Newark,
who departed this life Aug. 20, 1776, aged 38.
Here lieth interred the body of Sarah,
ſecond wife of William Newark.
She departed this life May 5, 1744, aged 44.”

On various upright ſtones:

Richard Holyoak, late of Thringſton, died Oct. 1, 1797, aged 80.

William Chapman, died April 30, 1800, aged 95.

Abraham Jeſſon died (about 1782) aged 99.

Anne, wife of Thomas Knight, died Dec. 31, 1797, 80.

Four wives of Henry Burton have each a graveſtone; the laſt of them, Catharine Burton, died Dec. 20, 1770, aged 49.

Anne, wife of Thomas Pick, died June 29, 1797, 67.

William Heggs, died Nov. 23, 1785, aged 72.

Anne Heggs, died Jan. 25, 1797, aged 78.

Sarah, wife of James Windram, and daughter of Thomas and Anne Barſeby, of Staunton under Bardon, died Aug. 4, 1802, aged 24.

Iſaac Heggs, ſon of William and Anne Heggs, of Charley, died Oct. 3, 1798, aged 38.

Thomas Toon, died Dec. 6, 1799, aged 69.

Robert Gamble, died March 29, 1795, aged 77.

Samuel Moor, died Dec. 29, 1791, aged 82.

Sarah Moor, died May 4, 1770, aged 73.

Mary Moor, died Feb. 9, 1788, aged 69.

Joſeph Griffein, died March 26, 1796, aged 80.

Elizabeth Griffein, died April 27, 1773, aged 51.

Mary Pantalin, died May 7, 1802, aged 69.

BENEFACTIONS.

John Chapman gave to the poor of Whitwick ſix ſhillings and eight-pence yearly, to be paid at two payments; viz. 3*s.* 4*d.* at Chriſtmas and Eaſter each, which is to be paid out of a parcel of land in Whitwick Field upon the long Breach.

On a braſs plate is written Mrs. Margaret Mead's gift; the ſame as already given under Belton, p. 649.

On ſeveral flat ſtones in the nave at Southwell:
“Here lieth the body of the Rev. Charles Franke[2], M.A.
vicar of Whitwick,
who departed this life Aug. 1, 1769, aged 62.
Here lieth the body of Mrs. Eliz. Franke,
who departed this life Sept. 10, 1767, aged 86.
Here lieth the body of Elizabeth Franke,
who departed this life Sept. 14, 1782, aged 74.
Here lieth the body of Mr. Richard Franke, who departed this life Nov. 9, 1763, aged 57.”

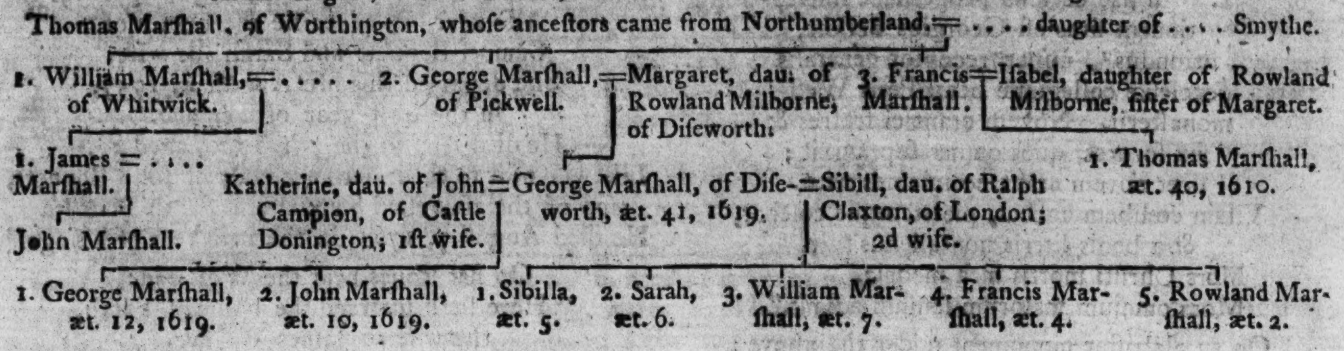
---

[1] So on the tomb.

[2] Mr. Franke was a native of Southwell.

PEDIGREE of MARSHALL, of WORTHINGTON, WHITWICK, and DISEWORTH.

Arms: Argent, a chevron Vert, between three creſcents Gules; Plate CL. fig. 21.



Thomas Marſhall, of Worthington, whoſe anceſtors came from Northumberland. = ... daughter of . . . . Smythe.

1. William Marſhall, of Whitwick. = ...
2. George Marſhall, of Pickwell. = Margaret, dau. of Rowland Milborne, of Diſeworth.
3. Francis Marſhall. = Iſabel, daughter of Rowland Milborne, ſiſter of Margaret.

1. James Marſhall. = ...
John Marſhall.

Katherine, dau. of John Campion, of Caſtle Donington; 1ſt wife. = George Marſhall, of Diſeworth, æt. 41, 1619. = Sibill, dau. of Ralph Claxton, of London; 2d wife.

1. Thomas Marſhall, æt. 40, 1610.

1. George Marſhall, æt. 12, 1619.
2. John Marſhall, æt. 10, 1619.
1. Sibilla, æt. 5.
2. Sarah, æt. 6.
3. William Marſhall, æt. 7.
4. Francis Marſhall, æt. 4.
5. Rowland Marſhall, æt. 2.

SWANINGTON.

In the Teſta de Nevill, compiled about 1240, Swanington Araby is mentioned as containing one ploughland; and Hugo de Diſeworth had two other ploughlands there.

In Swanninton Willielmus Bretun dat 33 denarios ad ſcutum 40s̃.; & tenet de Willielmo de Greſel, & ipſe de comite de Ferrariis. In eadem Ricardus de Appelby dat 8 denarios ad ſcutum 40s̃.; & tenet de Willielmo de Picheford, & ipſe de comite de Ferrariis.

Among the records in the Chapter-houſe at Weſtminſter, called "Pedes Finium," or "Placita temp. Hen. III." in the cheſt marked B. are ſome deeds relative to Swanington, marked 1. and 18.

In 1278, William Talbot, ſon of Adam Talbot, was lord of the manor of Swanington.

In 1310, it was found that the abbot of Garendon, Alan Talebot, John de Coleſhul, and Roger Gorberd, held half a knight's fee in Swanington of Henry de Lacy earl of Lincoln deceaſed; and it was worth 50*s.*[1]

Roger, ſon of Roger Godbert gave to Gerondon abbey a place called Small Heath, in Swanington, and confirmed to them all the woods, lands, and waſtes, belonging to five yard lands, which they held in the ſame, of his fee, worth 5*s.* rent[2].

Thomas de Stokes gave them one virgate, and Richard Warren gave them two more, with 12*d.* yearly rent. They had alſo divers other lands here, from ſeveral benefactors, on which they afterwards erected a grange.

In 1317, Thomas earl of Lancaſter, at his death, held 30*s.* 10*d.* yearly rent, ariſing out of divers free tenements in Swanington and Ravenſton[3].

Aug. 20, 1317, king Edward II. (at the inſtance of his beloved valet Ralph de Waltham) granted to Alan Talbot and his heirs liberty of free-warren in all their demeſne lands at Swaningon. Hiis teſtibus; venerabili patre W. Wigornie epiſcopo, cancellario noſtro; Gilberto de Clare, comite Glouceſtrie & Hertfordie, Johanne de Warennâ, comite Surrie; Edmundo comite Arundell; Roberto de Clifford; Pagano Tybetot, Edmundo de Malo Lacu, ſeneſcallo hoſpitii noſtri. Dat' &c. apud London, 20° die Auguſti[4].

In the ſame year, "Aſſiſa capta apud Melton Moubray mittitur hic, quod Henricus de Bello Monte & uxor ejus recuperaverunt B. B. de 24 acris terre in Swanington, & tres acras boſci & 100 l. dampni, verſus Alanum Talbot; eo quod dampnum predictum non ſolutum fuerit ibidem; & 118 acre terre ſue in Whatton & Swanington extenduntur pro eiſdem dampnis[5]."

Adam Talbot had iſſue Philip; whoſe ſon ſir John Talbot, knight, married Alice daughter of ſir Robert Moton, of Peckleton, knight.

In 1346, John Talbot (on the aid then granted for knighting Edward of Woodſtock, the king's eldeſt ſon) was aſſeſſed 6*s.* 8*d.* for a ſixth part of one knight's fee in Swanyngton; Ivo de P . . . . . 12*d.* for a fortieth part of one knight's fee there; the abbot of Gerendon 16*d.* for a thirtieth part of one knight's fee; and John le Archere 10*s*, for a quarter of one knight's fee in Overton Sawcye and Swanington; all parcel of the honour of Lancaſter[6].

In 1365, it was found that ſir John Talbot, of Swanington, ſon of Elizabeth, ſiſter and coheir of ſir Richard de Frene, died at the age of 40; leaving an only daughter and heir Joan[7]; who was married to Simon Leke, of Cotham, co. Notts; by whom ſhe had four daughters, Mary, Margaret, Elizabeth, and Anne, among whom their father's lands were divided.

This ſir John Talbot was a man of great valour and proweſs, and alſo of an extraordinary great ſtature, whoſe tomb is ſtill to be ſeen in Whitwick, the pariſh church near adjoining, of an uncommon length, with the proportion neatly cut in alabaſter, ſo curiouſly wrought and poliſhed that it may well paſs for white marble[8]. The common tradition here goeth, that he was a giant of great ſtrength and might; and many ſtories are told of him[9].

In 1404, the following complaint, in the form of a petition to the king in parliament, was made, by John Walron, of Snypſton, one of the executors of ſir John Talbot, and who was 80 years old, for a violent aſſault made on him by John Belers, ſon of ſir James Belers, as he was ſitting ſick at his own fire-ſide, whence they forcibly carried him naked to Syſonby, and confined him 12 days, and otherwiſe ill-treated him, on account of his having ſued the elder Belers for a debt of £200, on a bond which had been given to ſir John Talbot. But take it as on the record:

---

[1] Eſch. 4 Edw. II. N° 51. Leic.

[2] Cart. 14 Edw. III. n. 17. per Inſpeximus.

[3] Eſch. 1 Edw. III. N° 88. Leic.

[4] Cart. 5 Edw. II. N° 43.

[5] Placita Mich. 1 Edw. III. Rot. 114. in Receptu Scaccarii.

[6] Rot. Aux. 20 Edw. III.

[7] Eſch. 49 Edw. III. m. 1.

[8] See before, p. 1120.

[9] "That there have been giants it is moſt certain, both by the Holy Scripture, which is evident by Geneſis vi. 4. "There were giants on the earth in thoſe days." By Anake the giant and his ſeed called Anakins; Numb. xiii. 23. 29. Deut. i. 28. By the Zanzummims, whoſe country was inhabited after by the Ammonites; Deut. ii. 20. By Goliah the Philiſtine; 1 Sam. xvii. from the 4th verſe to the 12th. Yet John Goropius Becanus, a conceited Dutchman, with his Gigantomachia, would knock all giants on the head; in which treatiſe he goeth about to prove, that there were never ſuch huge and monſtrous bodies of giants as are written of, and endeavoureth by ſundry demonſtrations to illuſtrate it. But John Chaſſagnon, or Caſſanius, in his book of Giants * and of their progeny, doth ſufficiently confute him and his allegations; whither I muſt ſend the curious reader to be better certified concerning thoſe his tenets. Yet moſt certain it is, by all hiſtorians both old and new, that there have been giants, whoſe works, atchievements, proportions, and carcaſes, have been diſcovered and found in theſe latter ages. As of a giant buried in the temple of the city of Puzzoli in Campanja in Italy, now dedicated to St. Proculus, of whom Leandro Alberto † ſpeaketh, and there ſetteth down a decaſtichon made by Pomponius Letus upon him. Of thoſe giants of Norway, Gothland, and Swethland, mentioned by Olaus Magnus ‡, and of their monſtrous acts. Of the carcaſe of a giant found upon the coaſt of Wales, as Trivet § writeth in the year 1170, upon the ſea ſhore, diſcovered by the waſhing and fretting of the ſea, which contained 50 feet in length. Of late years a Frenchman, a Bourdelois (as the ſaid John Chaſſagnon ‖ relateth), was of ſuch an height and bigneſs, that he was called the giant of Bourdeaux. King Francis I. the French king, ſtood amazed at the firſt ſight of him, and commanded him to be one of his guard: his ſtature was ſuch that a man of an ordinary height might go right up betwixt his legs when he did ſtride. The cauſes and reaſons of this giant-like ſtature is ſet down by Marcello Donato , a learned Italian doctor of phyſic." Burton, p. 277.

* "De Gigantibus, et eorum reliquiis; Spiræ, 1587-8.

† Diſcrittione di Italia; fol. 179.

‡ De Gent. Septentrion. lib. V. a cap. I. uſque ad cap. 16.

§ Lel. tom. II. p. 280.

‖ De Gigantibus, cap. 6.

 Lib. iii. cap. 14.

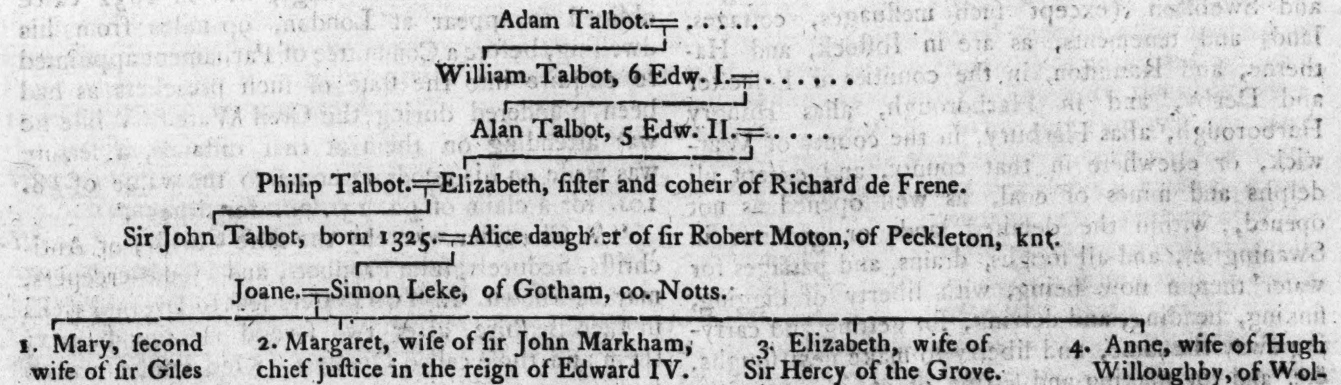
"A noſtre tres-gracious Sr̄ le Roy, Sr̄s & Cōes de ceſt p̄ſent Parlement, ſoy pleyne & monſtre Rob̄t Walron, un dez executours del teſtament de Sr̄ John Talbot de Swanyngton, chivaler, q̄ come le dit Rob̄t, ove Aleyn le Souche coexecutour del teſtament avant dit, ſuyſt un brief de dette de deux centz lives env̄s Sr̄ James Belers, chivaler, ſur une obligacion faite a lour dit teſtatour, proces ent ſue tan q̄ al niſi prius en païs; la vient un John Belers, fitz le dit Sr̄ James, ove certeyns perſones diſconuz, armez a faire de guerre, al maiſon du dit Rob̄t, a Snypſton, le Vendredy al noet ꝓſchein apres la Purificacion de noſtre Dame darreyne paſſe, & la maiſon du dit Rob̄t obſederont, & en le dit Rob̄t eſteaunt de l'age de $\overset{\text{xx}}{\text{iiii}}$ ans, ſeaunt malade p̄s ſa ſue, un de ſez gaumbes & ſanz brakes illeoſqes aſſaute firent, & luy ove force & armes priſterent, & ſur un chival jeſterent, & hors de ſa dit maiſon luy iſſint nude carieront meſme la noet ꝑ xvi leukes, & ꝑ toute la chimeyn luy chivachant en ſez ditz nudez gaumbes, ove rowelx de lour eſpores prixeront, & ove les poynts de lour arkes butteront, & luy ameſneront al maiſon du dit John Belers a Sixynby, ou il fuiſt receaunt, & la, & aillours, ꝑ xii jours luy empriſoneront, & la, ꝑ makement & faux ymaginacion d'un William Belers, frere de ordre dez prechours, & James Belers, hom̄e de ley, ꝑ dureſſe du priſon, mutilacion de ſez membres, & ardere de luy & ſez maiſons, & pur ſa deliveraunce avoir luy illoeſqes firent faire un acquaintance a dit Sr̄ James lour pier de le dit dette, & une obligacion a eux de c lī. q'il ne lour empeſchera de les horribles malfaitz avant ditz. Et en outre luy firent jurrer ſur le corps de Dieu faere, & le cruſoit, q'il, n'aſcune pur luy, les ditz acquietaunce & obligacion contrediſroit, ne ſueroit le dit action pluis avant env̄s le dit Sr̄ James; ne les avant ditz John, William, ne James, ne nulluy de lour covyne & compaignie, de les ditz treſpaſſes & horribilitees unqes n'empeſcheroit. Qe pleſe a v̄re tres gracionſe S̄rie de conſiderer les ditz horribles treſpaſſes, & les circumſtances d'icelles, & le grande offenſe fait a vous, v̄re corone & mageſte, & malveys enſample q'enſuit a toutz voz lieges, ſi due & covenable remedie & redreſſe ne y ſoit faite celle ꝑtie, de ordiner ſufficiaunt remedie & due redreſſe dez ditz horribilitees, iſſint q'il poet eſtre en pees, & ſuer v̄re ley dev̄s les ditz malfeſours, & ſuer avant le dit accion de dette, & q̄ tiel puniſſement a eux ſoit fait pur les offences avant ditz, q̄ lour puniſſement ſoit enſample a toutz autres malfeſours en temps a venir."

The petition was thus anſwered: "Accordez eſt ꝑ le Roy & les Sr̄s en Parlement, q̄ ſeveralx briefs ſoient directz a John Belers & James Belers, deins eſcriptz, ſur peine de c li. a lever de cheſcun de eux, d'eſtre devant le Roy & ſon Conſeil en Parlement, Lundy ꝓſchein ap̄s le feſt de Seint Benet ꝓſchein advenir. Et ſoit autre brief direct al viſcount de Leyc', de faire venir les ditz Johan & James, au jour ſuis dite, ſ'ils ſoient trovez deinz lour maiſons; & en cas q'ils ne ſoient trovez illoeqes, q'adonqes le dit viſcont leſſera les ditz briefs oveſq̄ eux q̄ ſront trovez es dites maiſons, eux chargeant q'ils deliverent meſmes les briefs as ditz John & James, chargeantx eux d'eſtre illoeqes au jour ſuis dit, ſur la peine de c lī. ſuis ditz. Et en cas q̄ les ditz John & James n'apiergent au jour ſuis dite, q'ils, & cheſcun de eux, encourgent, & encourge, la dite peine de c lī. Et q̄ ceſte ordinance tiegne lieu en ceſt cas tant ſoulement, ſanz eſtre traiez en enſample en temps advenir[1]."

Pedigree of TALBOT, of Swanington.

Arms: Argent, cruſuly, fitché, three fleurs-de-lis Gules; Plate CL. fig. 2.



Adam Talbot.═. . . . .
William Talbot, 6 Edw. I.═. . . . . .
Alan Talbot, 5 Edw. II.═. . . .
Philip Talbot.═Elizabeth, ſiſter and coheir of Richard de Frene.
Sir John Talbot, born 1325.═Alice daughter of ſir Robert Moton, of Peckleton, knt.
Joane.═Simon Leke, of Gotham, co. Notts.
1. Mary, ſecond wife of ſir Giles D'Aubeney.
2. Margaret, wiſe of ſir John Markham, chief juſtice in the reign of Edward IV.
3. Elizabeth, wife of Sir Hercy of the Grove.
4. Anne, wife of Hugh Willoughby, of Wollaton, co. Notts.

In 1427, Elizabeth wife of Henry de Beaumont, deceaſed, was ſeiſed of Swanington, as a member of Whitwick[2].

In 1429, John Zouch (ſon and heir of Alan Zouch, ſon and heir of Alan Zouch of Swanington) and Agnes his wife, releaſed all their right in three meſſuages, 120 acres of land, 8 acres of meadow, 4 acres of paſture, 4 acres of wood, and 4*d.* rent, in Swanington, to ſir William Babington, knt. and John ſon of Ralph Leeke of Halam, and to their heirs and aſſigns[3].

In the marriage ſettlement of king Henry VI. in 1444, he ſettles the manor of Swanington on his intended conſort[4].

Swanington Grange was leaſed by the abbot and convent of Garendon, before the diſſolution, at a rent of £3. 6*s.* 8*d.* to Richard Godwyn[5]; and in 1538 was granted from the crown to ſir Humphrey Foſter, knt.

March 29, 1606, it was found that ſir Henry Beaumont, knt. at his death was ſeiſed of a capital meſſuage called Swanington Grange, held of the king in capite by knight's ſervice[6].

The freeholders at Swanington in 1630 were, Richard Burgeſs and Edward Litherland; and in that year the greater part of the village belonged to "the new Bedehouſe at Leiceſter, founded by William Wigston, merchant of the Staple, about the end of the reign of king Henry the Sixth[7]."

Among the leaſes preſerved at Wigston's Hoſpital, is one dated Oct. 5, 1678, to Edward Palmer ſen. gent. of all the Hoſpital's delphs, and mines of coals in Swanington, with full liberty to dry, delve, ſink, head, and make pits, and to ſet and place engines, and to make ſoughs, drains, and paſſages, for carrying of the water away, and to do any other act expedient for the getting of the coals, in any the moors, waſte grounds, cloſes, or other lands in Swanington, belonging to the hoſpital; habend' from the day next before the date of this leaſe for 21 years, under the yearly rent of 20*s.* payable at Lady-day and Michaelmas, with a covenant from the Hoſpital for quiet enjoyment by the leſſees; except one leaſe made by the Hoſpital to Joſeph Jones, by indenture, dated Auguſt 19, 28 Car. II. of the coal-mines in George Roe's cloſe and Mary Litherland's cloſe.

---

[1] Rot. Parl. 6 Hen. VI. vol. III. p. 564.
[2] Eſch. 9 Hen. VI. N° 49. Leic.
[3] Clauſ. 8 Hen. VI.
[4] Rot. Parl. vol. V. p. 118.
[5] Miniſters Accompts, 1540, in the Augmentation Office.
[6] Eſch. 4 Jac. I.
[7] Burton MS.

This leaſe was made at the nomination and appointment of Mr. Richard Clark, late maſter of the ſaid hoſpital, and in truſt for him, his executors and adminiſtrators; and at the very ſame time when this leaſe was ſealed, an indenture was executed between Edward Palmer ſenior and Edward Palmer junior, of one part, and Mr. Richard Clark of the other part, wherein it is acknowledged that the leaſe made to Mr. Palmer ſenior and Mr. Palmer junior, by the nomination and appointment of Mr. Richard Clark, and in truſt for him, his executors and adminiſtrators, and Edward Palmer ſenior and Edward Palmer junior, to have no profit at all thereby. One part of this indenture was delivered to Mr. Richard Clark, and is now in the cuſtody of his adminiſtratrix; and the other part thereof is in the cuſtody of Edward Palmer ſenior. After this, Mr. Clark, conſidering ſeriouſly of the buſineſs, did make an agreement in writing under his hand and ſeal, which is in the cuſtody of John Newton the confrater, wherein he doth declare that the leaſe made to Edward Palmer ſenior and Edward Palmer junior, of the coal delphs, was in truſt for Mr. Richard Clark, and the two Palmers to have no benefit thereby. And whereas, before the making of the leaſe, it was doubtful whether any profit would be made thereof, did then declare that the leaſe made to the two Palmers was not with intention that Mr. Clark, his executors or adminiſtrators, ſhould convert the whole profit to their own uſe; and he doth now by this writing declare and agree, that all the clear profits of the delph, after charges deducted, ſhall be diſpoſed of in manner following; one moiety thereof to go to the ſtock of the Hoſpital, and the other moiety thereof to go to the uſe of Mr. Clark, his executors and adminiſtrators.

April 5, 1682, a leaſe was granted to ſir William Villiers, bart. and William Woolaſton, eſq. of the manor of Swanington, with the rights, members, and appurtenances thereof, in Swanington aforeſaid, and all and ſingular the meſſuages, cottages, farms, cloſes, arable land, meadows, and paſtures, tenements, and hereditaments, whatſoever, of the chaplains and poor of Wigston's Hoſpital, in Swanington and Swebſton (except ſuch meſſuages, cottages, lands and tenements, as are in Ibſtock, and Hatherne, and Raunſton, in the counties of Leiceſter and Derby, and in Harborough, alias Hungry Harborough, alias Harbury, in the county of Warwick, or elſewhere in that county, and except all delphs and mines of coal, as well opened as not opened, within the demiſed lands or grounds in Swanington, and all ſoughs, drains, and paſſages for water therein now being, with liberty of digging, ſinking, heading, and delving, for getting and carrying away the ſame, and liberty to make new ſoughs, &c. and for making and ſetting of engines upon the demiſed premiſes, and doing other requiſites for the better getting of coal, and except all manner of courts baron, courts leet, and view of frankpledge, and whatſoever to them belongeth, and all waifs, ſtrays, deodands, felons goods, reliefs, eſcheats, chief rents, and all other royalties and privileges to the ſaid manor belonging, and liberty of calling and keeping of courts and leets in the manor houſe, and except all woods, underwoods, and trees, growing upon the premiſes, other than for neceſſary reparations); habend' (except before excepted) to the ſaid ſir William Villiers and William Woolaſton, their heirs and aſſigns, for the lives of ſir William Villiers and of Mary Villiers, one of the ſiſters of ſir William Villiers, ſon of William Pick, ſon of Richard Pick, of Friſby upon the Wreke, in the county of Leiceſter, yeoman, the ſaid William Pick being of the age of 8 years. Rent per annum £70. 8*s*. at Michaelmas and Lady-day; and 12 ſufficient cart-loads of coals, 20 hundred in each load, to be brought between the 1ſt of May and 1ſt of September; with clauſe of diſtreſs for non-payment in 30 days, and a clauſe of re-entry at 50 days; and that ſo often as any court ſhall be kept at the manor-houſe the leſſees are at their own charge, not exceeding 10*s*. at any one court, to provide a dinner for the ſteward and other officers and retinue attending at the court.

Then follow certain articles between ſir George Villiers, bart. and William Wollaſton, eſq. of the one part, and the chaplains and poor of Wigſton's Hoſpital on the other part; reciting the leaſe of the manor of Swanington, which was this day made by the hoſpital to ſir William Villiers and Mr. Wollaſton and their heirs, during the lives of ſir William Villiers, Mary Villiers, and William Pick; and reciting that one or more leaſe or leaſes of the ſaid manors, or ſome part or parts thereof, had been made, or pretended to be made, by the hoſpital, to Thomas Barodale, gent. during the time that Dr. Clark or William Chillingworth, clerk, were maſters of the hoſpital; and ſeveral other leaſe or leaſes were made, or pretended to be made, to Henry Roe, Edward Muggleſton, William Jaques, Francis Bayly alias Maſon, Edward Biſhop, and Henry Litherland, or ſome of them, or to ſome other perſon or perſons, whilſt Job Grey, clerk, and Richard Lee, clerk, reſpectively were maſters of the hoſpital, by colour whereof the ſaid perſons do pretend ſome in the premiſes. Now ſir William Villiers and Mr. Wollaſton do covenant to indemnify the chaplains and poor of the hoſpital, and their lands and tenements, goods and chattels, from all actions, ſuits, and other trouble, damages, charges, and expences whatſoever, which ſhall be brought or proſecuted againſt, or otherwiſe happen to the ſaid chaplains and poor, or their ſucceſſors or aſſigns, by reaſon, colour, or occaſion of the ſaid leaſes made, or pretended to be made, to Thomas Barrodale, Henry Roe, Edward Muggleſton, William Jaques, Francis Bayly alias Maſon, Edward Biſhop, and Henry Litherland, or any of them, or to any other perſon or perſons as aforeſaid, or for any covenant or thing in any of them contained.

Swanington was the firſt place in this county in which the ſect called Quakers[1] were moleſted on account of their religious tenets. Edward Muggleſton, an antient man of this village, was in 1652 twice obliged to appear at London, 90 miles from his dwelling, before a Committee of Parliament appointed to enquire into the ſtate of ſuch preachers as had been plundered during the Civil Wars. While he was attending on them at that diſtance, a ſeizure was made on his goods at home to the value of £8. 10*s*. for a claim of £2. 15*s*. 6*d*. for tithes[2].

"A Character whereby the falſe Chriſts, or Antichriſts, Seducers, falſe Prophets, and Houſe-creepers, may be known. In Two Letters ſent to ſeveral Prieſts in Leiceſterſhire, after two ſeveral meeting betwixt them and thoſe called Quakers. One Letter was to be ſent to one Thomas Cockeram, of Swanington, ſervant to the Lord Protector; the other was to the prieſt of Twycroſs. By R. Farnworth, 1654. Theſe are the mad Ravings of a Quaker. The Prieſt of Prieſtcraft was "Prieſt Hill:" a "Prieſt Whetſtone" is alſo noticed. The other two were Prieſt Bennet and Prieſt Houlderſhaw.

The perſecutions of this peaceable ſect were finally ſtopped in 1686, by the following letter to the earl of Huntingdon, then chief recorder of Leiceſter, and cuſtos rotulorum of the county:

"My Lord, Whitehall, Dec. 7, 1686.

"The King being informed, that John Smith, a commiſſioner, doth very vexatiouſly perſecute the Quakers in the county of Leiceſter, and in the town and county of Nottingham; and his Majeſty being pleaſed to extend his favour to thoſe of that perſuaſion; his Majeſty would have your Grace direct the juſtices of the peace to give no ſort of countenance to the ſaid John Smith, and his perſecution againſt the Quakers. My Lord, I am, for his grace the Duke of Newcaſtle, one of his Majeſty's moſt honourable Privy Council, &c. Your Grace's moſt faithful humble ſervant. SUNDERLAND, P."

---

[1] "See one Oats, an Anabaptiſt of Leiceſterſhire, mentioned by George Fox, Journal, p. 28. Q. whether not father of Titus Oates?" MS. Q. of Dr. Z. Grey, penès R. Gough, eſq.

[2] Sufferings of the Quakers, 1783, vol. I. p. 330.

By a particular of the eſtates of John Wilkins, eſq. (which in 1726 were ſold before a Maſter in Chancery), it appears that he poſſeſſed in Swanington 186 acres, 2 roods, and 1 perch, of incloſure, and 100 acres, 3 roods, and 18 perches, of field land, amounting in the whole to £143. 14*s.* 4*d.* a year; out of which a chief rent of £1. 13*s.* 4*d.* was paid to ſir John Meres; a chief rent of 3*s.* out of a cloſe by Balls; and levies for Redhills, Aulton Hook, and Pingle. The principal tenants were, Joſeph Boultbee, Edward Orton, William Walker, and Henry Burton.

Mr. Wilkins poſſeſſed alſo the royalty of part of the manor of Thringſton, with cottage rents, amounting to £5. 10*s.* 7*d.*; and at Oſgathorpe he had 13*s.* 6*d.* of the like rents; £1. tithe at Belton; 16*s.* 0½*d.* chief rents at Caſtle Donington; and 14*s.* 8*d.* at Thorpe near Loughborough. The annual amount of all his freeholds was £539. 7*s.* 3½*d.*

I have a large unpubliſhed plan (taken in June 1760, by Thomas Peat, of Nottingham, ſurveyor) intituled, "A map, or plan, of the incloſures and commons in the manor of Swanington, in the county of Leiceſter, particularly deſigned to repreſent not only the preſent foundation under which the coals lie; but alſo a large quantity of different kinds of coal on the common, and in other parts of the ſaid liberties; the whole being holden by leaſes to Gabriel Holland, from the chaplain and poor of ſir William Wigſton's hoſpital in Leiceſter, and others."

In this plan, the Red Hills are deſcribed as "the property of Miſs Bainbrigge, being the largeſt quantity of land ſhe had in the whole manor, all the reſt of her land being diſperſed about in minute parcels."

In an "Explanation" of the references, the following particulars are enumerated: "The new Fire Engine. The Engine Pit. The Common Pit. The Breach Pit. A Sinking, or Face Pit. The new-erected Stables. The Old Pit. Tenements. A new Sleck Pit. Three Mere Trees; Swanington, Thrinkſton, and Cole Orton. An old Sleck Pit. A Foundation begun in 1752 on the Stone Smutt, and Swanington Nether Coal, with a Brick Sough; which Pits and Sough are now perfect and in good condition, fit for uſe upon further occaſion. The Place where the old Fire Engine and Water Wheel Engine, and the Place where a new Fire Engine ſtood about the year 1720, and then worked by John Wilkins, eſq. with the Soughs uniting into one at R, and delivering the Water into Snapes at S, at which time a ſmall quantity of Swanington Nether Coal was got in Talbot Wood by virtue of that foundation; there ſtill remaining perfect and whole two valuable ſorts of coal above that which was then got, called the Rider and the Stone Smutt, beſides a large quantity of Swanington Nether Coal remaining ſtill perfect, as alſo the Rider and Stone Smutt, from Talbot Wood, bounded by the Red Hills and Redings Lane, on the Eaſt of Swanington and the Foundation as above; making upwards of 128 acres of each ſort of coal, and in the whole 384 acres and upwards. Two Pits ſunk to the coal, begun by Gabriel Holland in March 1760, propoſed as a very valuable foundation for Stone Smutt, or Sleck; being upwards of 54 acres of that kind of coal remaining whole on the Common, &c. The joining of the two Soughs. A ſmith's ſhop, lately erected and fitted up on the Common.

In 1760, a printed letter was addreſſed, by Gabriel Holland, of Swanington, "to his Acquaintance, Cuſtomers, and others, in the Towns and Counties of Leiceſter, Northampton, Rutland, and elſewhere, whom it may concern," touching his concerns as coal-maſter at Swanington, with a relation of divers occurrences which had happened ſince his entering on the coal-works in 1751. After ſtating that he had not unadviſedly or ignorantly engaged in this very expenſive undertaking, and ſome diſappointments he had experienced in the want of a proper capital; he adds, that he made his caſe known to Mr. Iſaac Dawſon, attorney at law, of Aſhby; "who," he ſays, "had friendſhip enough to encourage me to proceed in ſo promiſing an undertaking; and ſaid he would aſſiſt me with money, which he did; and hath for a conſiderable time ſince been the principal ſopport in carrying on this expenſive, though at the ſame time proſperous work. I would not be thought ſo vain as to aſſert that no unprofitable attempts have been made; there have been conſiderable ſums of money laid out, which will not return at preſent; but thoſe attempts had at that time, and ſtill have, their reaſonableneſs and natural tendency to advance the works, though the profits then ſeemed to lie at a diſtance; which when I found to be really ſo, I left off for that time, and ſet about ſeeking for the preſent valuable deep coal, never before attempted or ſought for in this liberty; which with the deſired ſucceſs I found; and have ſince proceeded to lay a plan, and accordingly fixed a durable foundation; having ſeveral hundred acres of coal to get, all which may be drained by the new-erected fire-engine. I have likewiſe built ſeveral new houſes, and good ſtabling for above 40 horſes, which are a great accommodation to the works; and alſo compleated ſoughs or drains; pointing out to myſelf future and agreeable benefits; and adapted the whole concerns of my family in the liberty of Swanington and elſewhere, purely for the promoting of the coal-works; well knowing how durable they would prove, from the great quantity of the beſt and [deepeſt] coal lying under the preſent foundation; as alſo the continuance of the ſame ſtratum or bed of coal throughout the liberty; together with three other valuable kinds of coals, peculiar (in perfection) to Swanington liberty only; and which are called by the names following, the Nether-coal, the Stone-ſmut, and the Rider; all which are extended in large and uninterrupted quantities, as are intelligibly and fully expreſſed in a compleat plan of the whole liberty or manor of Swanington lately laid down, and purpoſely deſigned to illuſtrate at one view, to a demonſtration, the quantity of coals contained in the ſame, and the proved and undoubted certainty of their goodneſs; alſo their advantageous ſituation for getting and ſelling; likewiſe their well-known quality, far ſuperior to any other coal-works in this country; and which will, without any contradiction, continue for ages and generations yet to come; and are at this time (with a few neceſſary preparations) capable of producing a very large and ſufficient quantity of coals, and at many hundred pounds a year leſs expence than any other works that I know of. That there are two coal pits, which have been worked for ſome time, and from which I have gotten a conſiderable quantity of the deep coal. And as I have revived the practice of waggoning under ground, which proves extremely ſuitable and profitable to this work, on account of its being dry, and alſo a good floor and roof; great quantities of coal are ſtill capable of being produced from thoſe pits, without any more charge in ſinking. There is alſo a new pit in an elliptical form (which I prefer to all others) ſet with bricks, and ſunk within about three or four ells, at the ſame deep coal, and part of the under-ground works prepared and in readineſs; alſo a new pit-frame and pullies; together with a gin wheel and roof ſet up; and what remains to be done in order to compleat and ſet this pit to work may upon occaſion be done in one month, and at a very trifling expence. I have before mentioned three different kinds of coal peculiar to Swanington only, which I have likewiſe made conſiderable preparations to work occaſionally; and have made proof of one of them on the common, the Stone-ſmut, or Sleck, which is of excellent uſe for moſt common buſineſs; and particularly in the burning of brick, lime, &c. I therefore think it needleſs to enumerate much more in relation to the coals of Swanington liberty; there being numbers of evidences, even from the working collier to the moſt extenſive capacity in mineing, to prove the truth of what is herein but faintly advanced, and alſo the richneſs of this coal-work. Since I engaged in this undertaking, I have all the while been contriving with the utmoſt diligence and attention to form a compleat work, and be accommodated with every thing materially neceſſary; and do imagine that not many unprejudiced perſons who have ſeen my concerns will call my application or induſtry into queſtion. The latter end of 1759, I had procured moſt or all the valuable materials for the works in readineſs (after ſo many years expence) in expectation of ſome returns, and had the two pits before mentioned completely at work, and a conſiderable quantity of coals ſtacked on the bank; my men all engaged by bargain, hireing, &c. for the enſuing ſeaſon, and in an undoubted condition to get a large quantity of coal."—Thus much may ſuffice by way of extract from Mr. Holland's letter; the remainder of which conſiſts of a long detail of his own perſonal difficulties; with ſtrong expreſſions of an earneſt wiſh to ſatisfy his creditors; and an aſſertion, that he was "the firſt who propoſed and planned that profitable and uſeful road from Leiceſter to Aſhby-de-la-Zouch; clearly diſcovering at that time its great utility to the publick; as alſo its certain advantage to the coal-works; which, together with the number of uſeful roads ſince that time promoted, and now ſurrounding the liberty of Swanington, contribute greatly to the value of the work, by reaſon of their natural ſituation to each road, and manifeſt their certainty of continuing ſo for ſome time to come."

Six freeholders polled from Swanington in 1722; and 16 in 1775.

By the Return made to Parliament in 1801, Swanington contained 100 houſes, inhabited by 103 families, conſiſting of 248 males, 240 females; in all 488; of whom 54 were chiefly employed in agriculture, and 86 in trade, manufactures, &c.

The whole lordſhip contains 1478 acres, 10 roods, 14 perches; the greater part of which belongs to Wigſton's Hoſpital in Leiceſter; but the earl of Moira is lord of the manor.

A turnpike road from Aſhby to Whitwick paſſes through Talbot Lane[1].

THRINGSTON.

Mr. Roper mentions an agreement made in 1286, under the title of "Concordia inter abbatiſſam de Graciâ Dei & Willrelmum Pakeman querentes, & Alanum de Threngeſton def', pro communiâ paſture in Threngeſton, que pertinet ad libera tenementa ſua in Belton & Worthinton poſt duas ſeparales aſſiſas;" which he ſtyles lectu dignum[2].

May 16, 1462, king Edward IV. granted divers lands at Thringſton (late parcel of the poſſeſſions of John Beaumont, eſq.) to Richard Haſtings and his heirs male[3].

In 1464, it was found that John Beaumont, eſq. who had been attainted of high treaſon, was at that time ſeiſed of the manor of Thringſton[4].

This manor came afterwards again into the Beaumont family; for in 1494 Thomas Beaumont was in poſſeſſion of it[5]; and in December 1550, John Beaumont, eſq. who at that time was lord of this manor, had a grant of the office of maſter of the Rolls, with all fees and profits thereunto belonging, in as large and ample a manner as ſir Robert Smith lately had it.

Mr. Strype, in his "Eccleſiaſtical Memorials," under the year 1552, obſerves, that the Court then was very corrupt; raking continually from the king (who was fain to borrow) for the enriching of themſelves, and making alſo preys one of another. The lord Paget chancellor of the dutchy, and Beaumont maſter of the rolls, and Whaley receiver of Yorkſhire, were in the month of May diſcovered to have groſſly wronged the King. Paget had ſold away lands, and great timber woods, and had taken great fines of the king's lands, to his particular profit and advantage, never turning any of it to the king's uſe. He made leaſes in reverſion for more than 21 years. All this he confeſſed before the privy council, and ſurrendered his office, which was after conferred upon ſir John Gates, and ſubmitted himſelf to what fines ſhould be laid upon him. Beaumont bought lands with the king's money, and kept it from the king, to the value of £9000 and above, and £11,000 obligations; and, being judge in a cauſe in chancery between the duke of Suffolk and the lady Powis, he took her title, and went about to get it into his hands, paying a ſum of money, and letting her have a farm of a manor of his; and cauſed a falſe indenture to be made, with the old duke's counterfeit hand to it (by which pretended indenture the ſaid duke gave theſe lands to the lady Powis), and went about to make twelve men perjured; and, laſtly, had concealed the felony of his man, to the ſum of £200. All this he confeſſed; and for theſe things ſurrendered all his offices, lands, and goods to the king, and gave an obligation under his hand and ſeal, for his debt of £20,861, and upwards. Whaley lent the king's money upon gain: he paid one year's revenue with the arrearages of the laſt: he bought the king's land for himſelf with the king's own money. In his accompt he made many falſe ſuggeſtions. At the time of the fall of money, borrowed divers ſums of money, and had allowance for it after; by which he gained £500 at one crying down; the whole ſum being £2000, and above. All this he confeſſed, ſurrendered his office, and ſubmitted to fines. The lord Paget, and Beaumont, June 16, were brought into the Star-chamber. There the former declared his ſubmiſſion by word of mouth, and delivered it in writing. He was fined £6000. But Beaumont had denied his former confeſſion before the council. But now, being called before the council, he acknowledged a fine of his lands, and ſigned an obligation and ſurrender of all his goods; and on the 20th day, being brought again to the Star-chamber, he confeſſed all. When the council had diſcovered all this corruption, on the 18th of June, from Greenwich, they wrote the news of it to the duke of Northumberland, earls of Huntingdon and Pembroke, and ſecretary Cecil, who were in a journey, going down to the borders of Scotland, upon many diſorders there, and negligent looking to the forts, the duke being lord warden of the Marches. Beaumont had ſurrendered his goods and lands to the king: but the king was not to be the better for them; ſome of them being preſently begged by the duke of Northumberland and earl of Pembroke for the earl of Huntingdon; and Huntingdon another time will do the like courteſy for them, if need be. That which they aſked for this earl was, the cuſtody of Gracedieu, the parſonage of Donington, and the manors of Thringſton and Swanington, parcel of the ſaid Beaumont's poſſeſſions, with all his goods and chattels in and upon the ſaid houſe and lands. And when order ſhould be taken for the delivery of any of the lands of the lord Paget, in ſatisfaction of part of his ſin, they prayed the council, that the earl of Huntingdon and the lord chamberlain might not be forgotten; the one to have the cuſtody of his houſe at Drayton, and the other of that at London. And as theſe things before mentioned came under the keeping of Huntingdon, ſo the next year he became the proprietor of them: for, in June 1553, the king granted him the ſite, circuit, and precinct, and alſo the manor of Gracedieu, in Leiceſterſhire, with divers other lands, to the yearly value of £158. 8*s*. 5*d*.[6]

---

[1] Of this lane, and of the famous large pot at Warwick caſtle, we have an old traditionary couplet,

"There's nothing left of Talbot's name,
But Talbot's pot, and Talbot's lane."

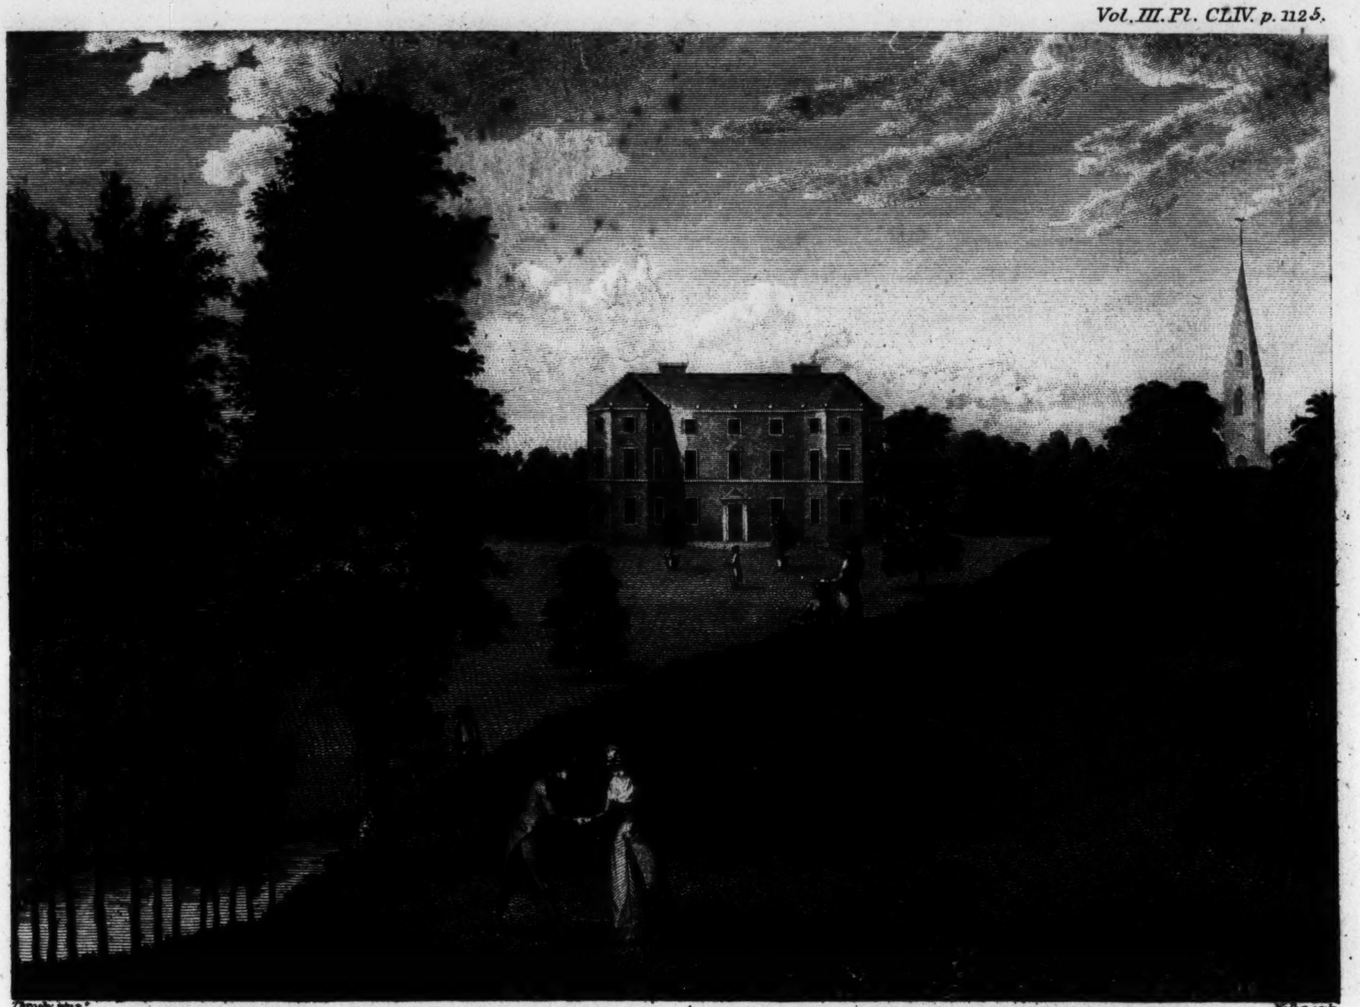
[2] Hil. 15 Edw. I. in Receptu Scaccarii, Rot. 21.

[3] Pat. 2 Edw. IV. pars 1. m. 13.

[4] Eſch. 4 Edw. IV. N° 47. Leic.

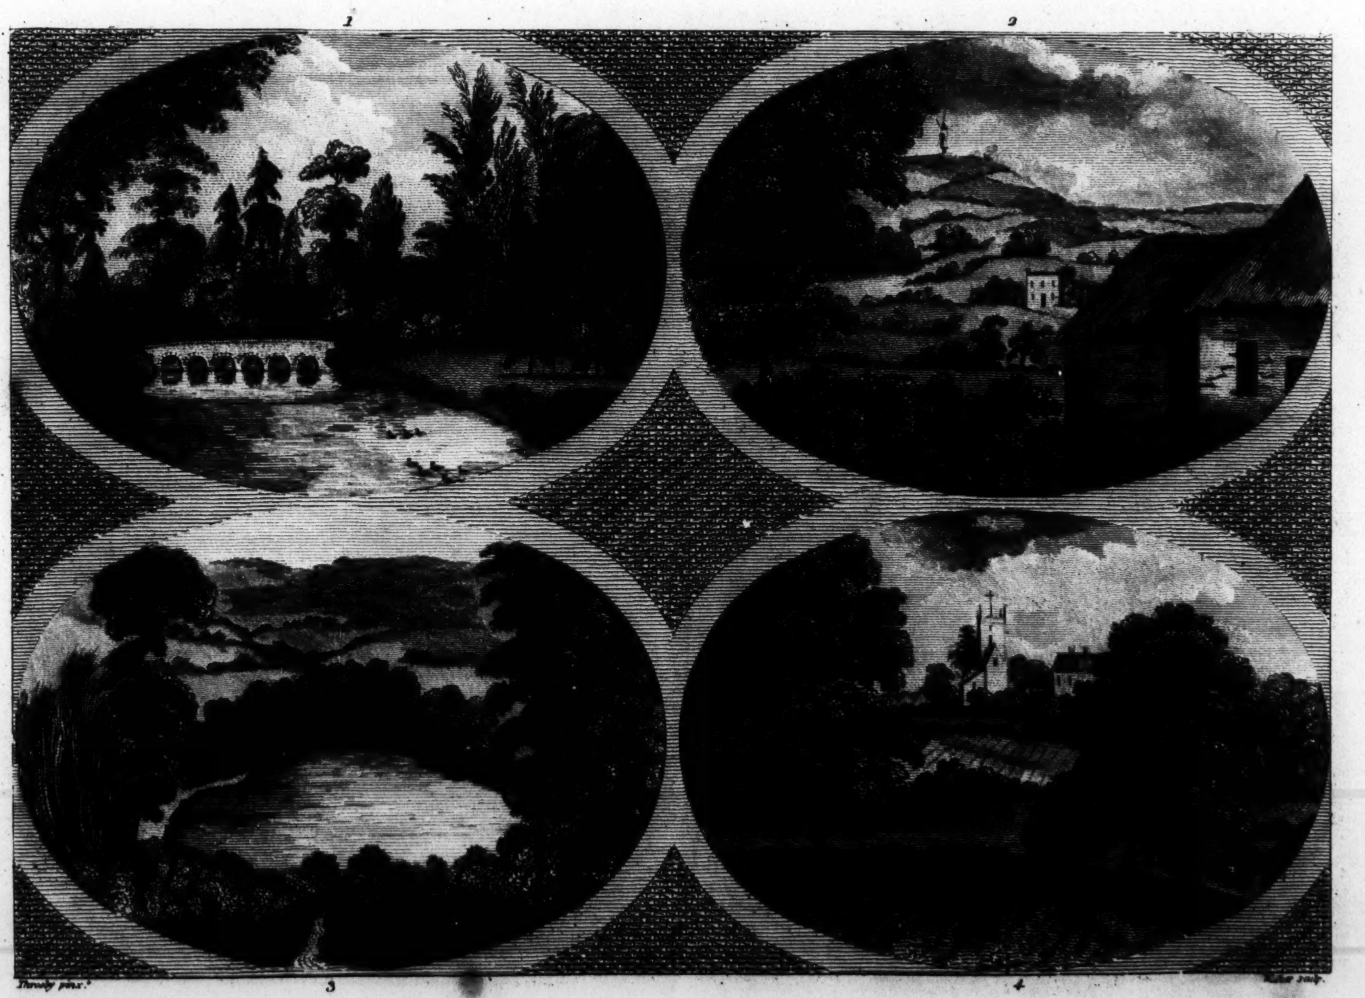
[5] Burton, MS.

[6] Strype's Eccleſiaſtical Memorials, vol. II. Appendix, p. 87.



Throsby pinx.t Walker sculp.

GUMLEY HALL
The Seat of Joseph Cradock Esq.r

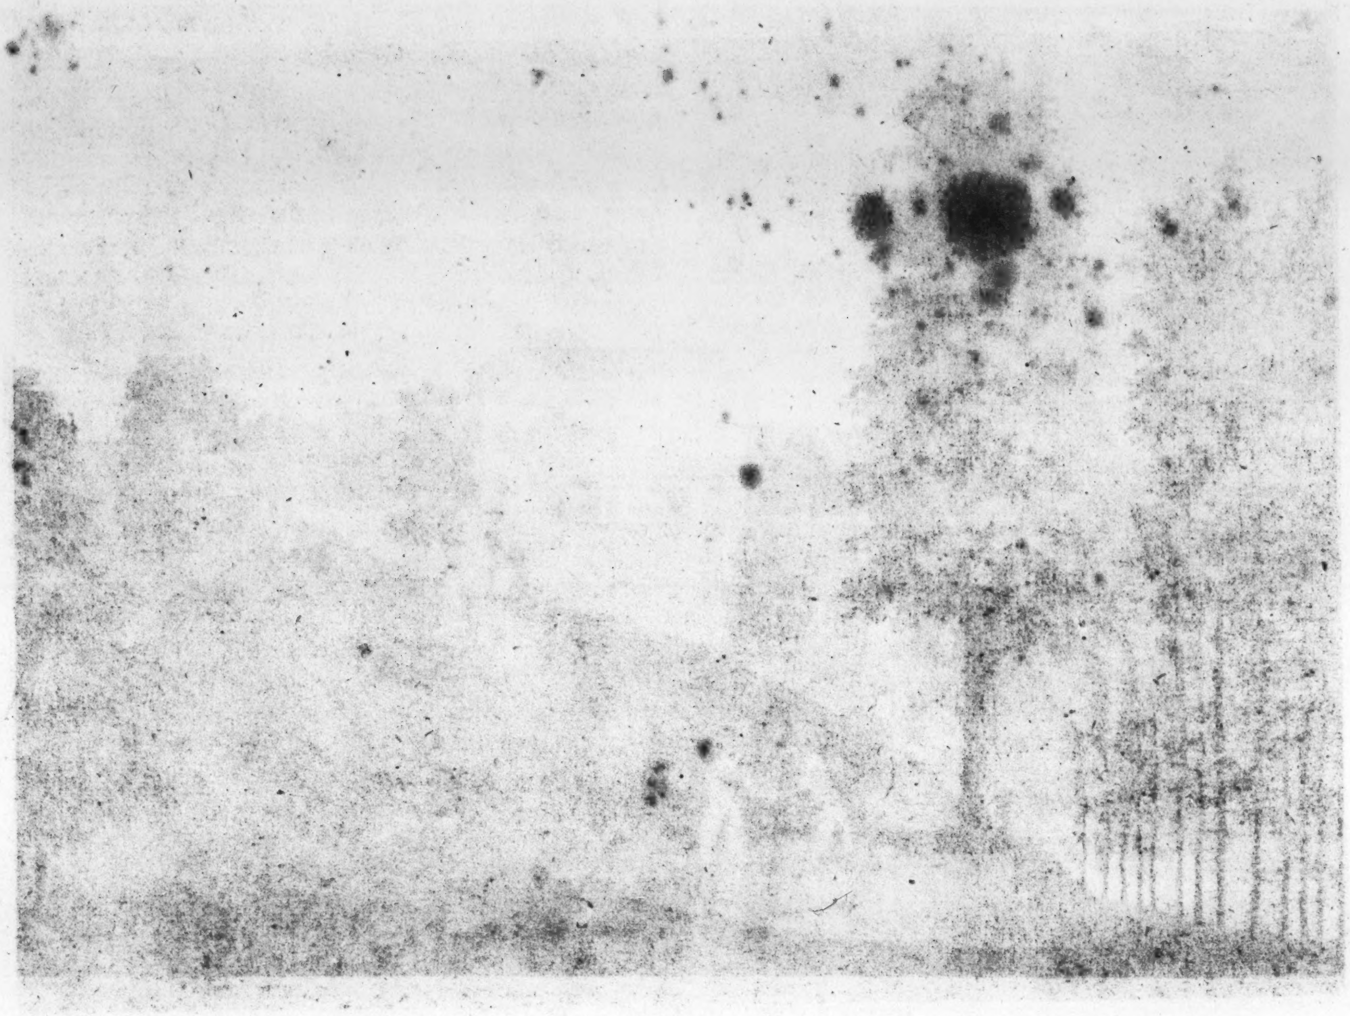


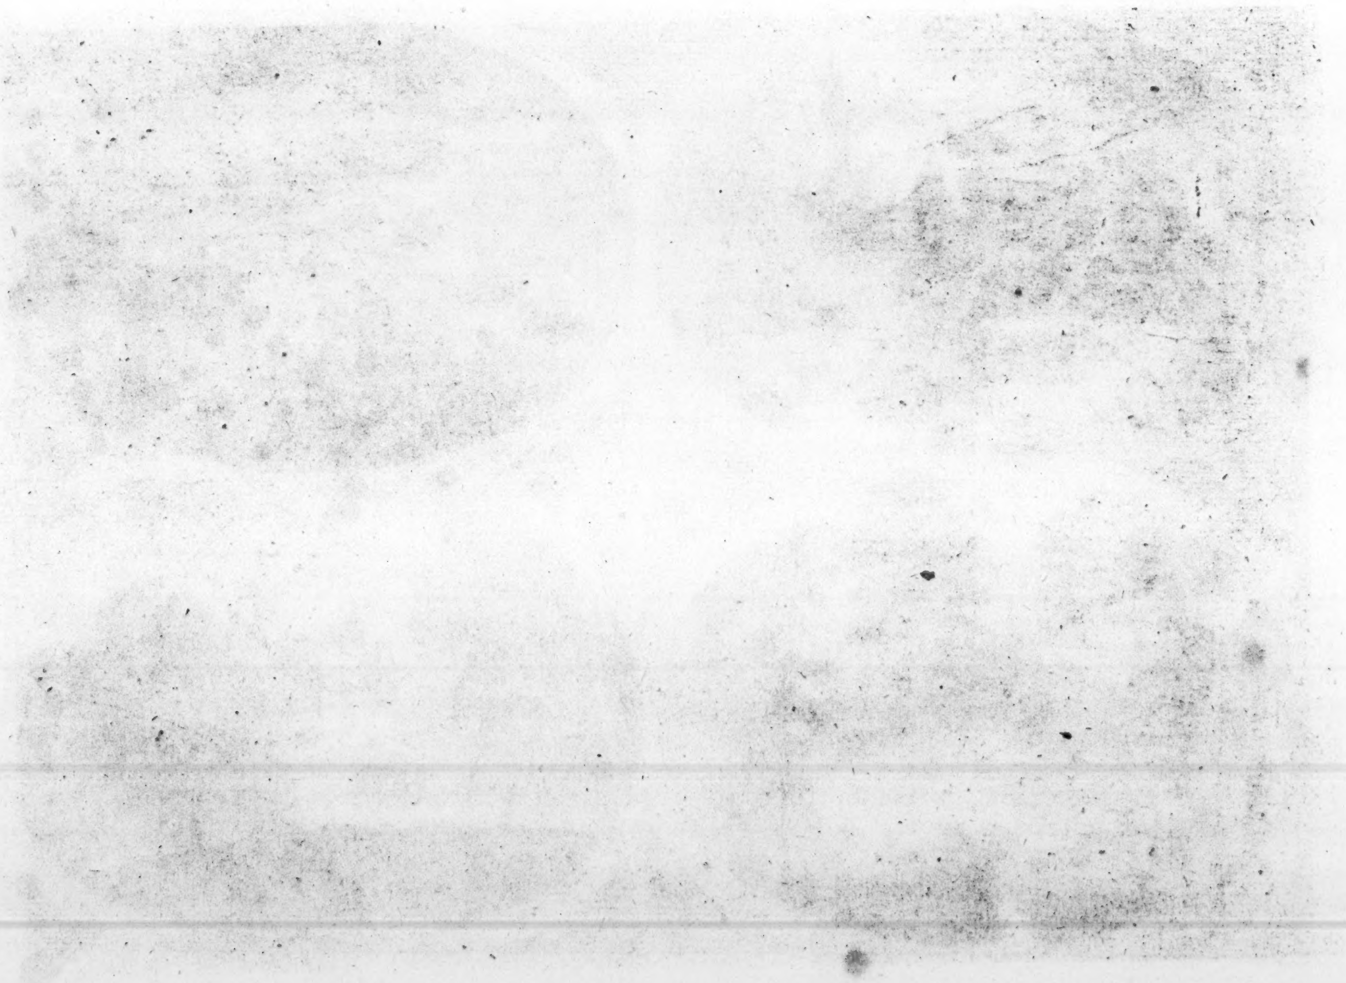
Throsby pinx.t Walker sculp.

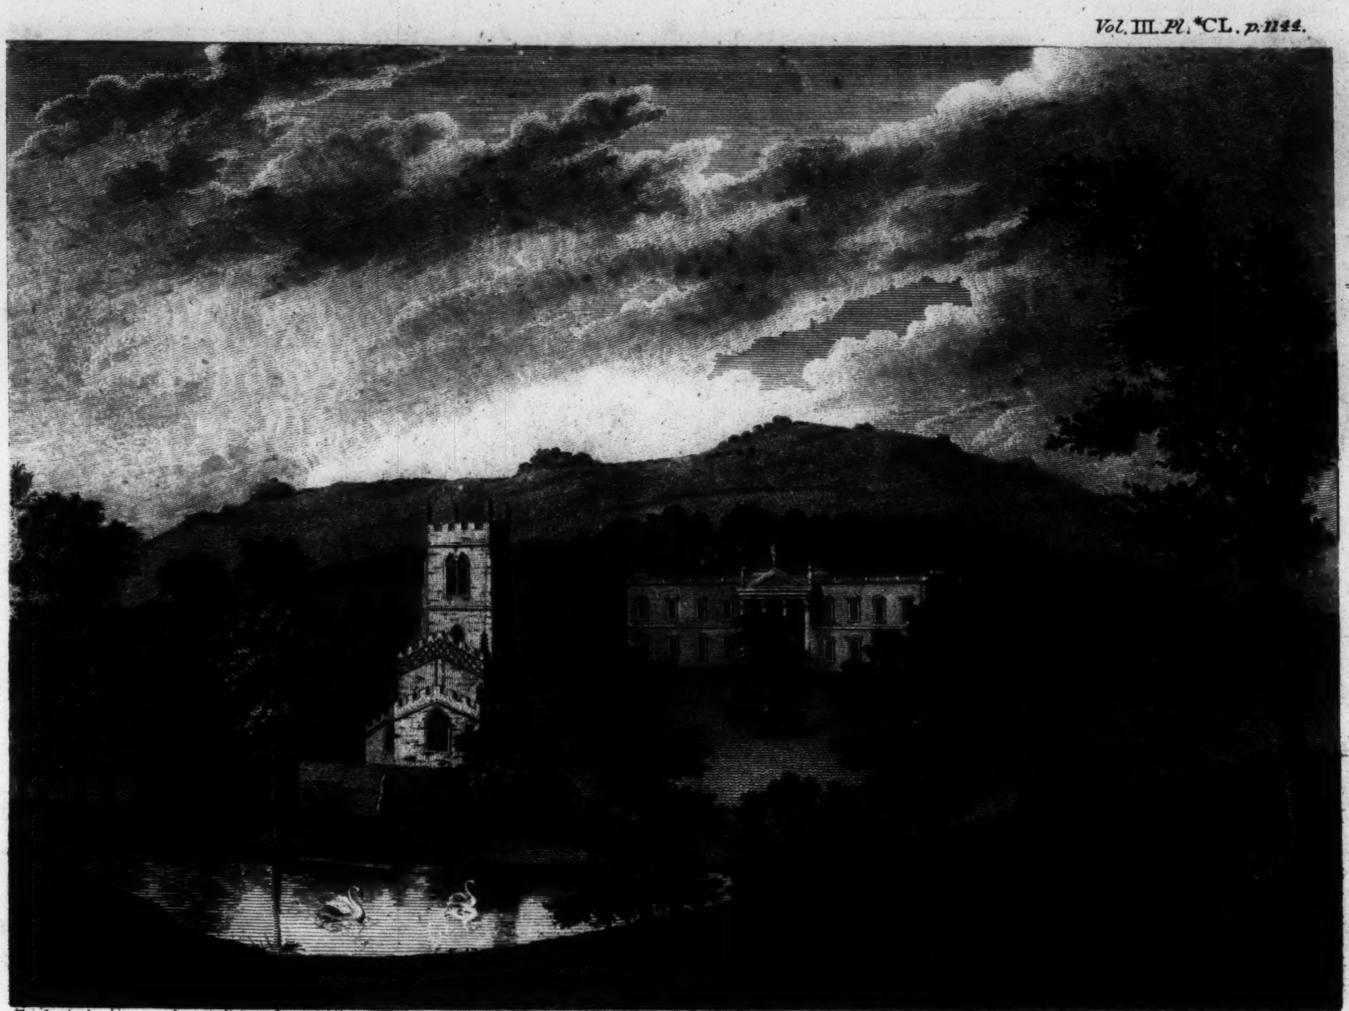
N.o 1 Gumley Groves.
2 From Woodhouse.

I

N.o 3 Gumley Groves.
4 Cleybrooke.

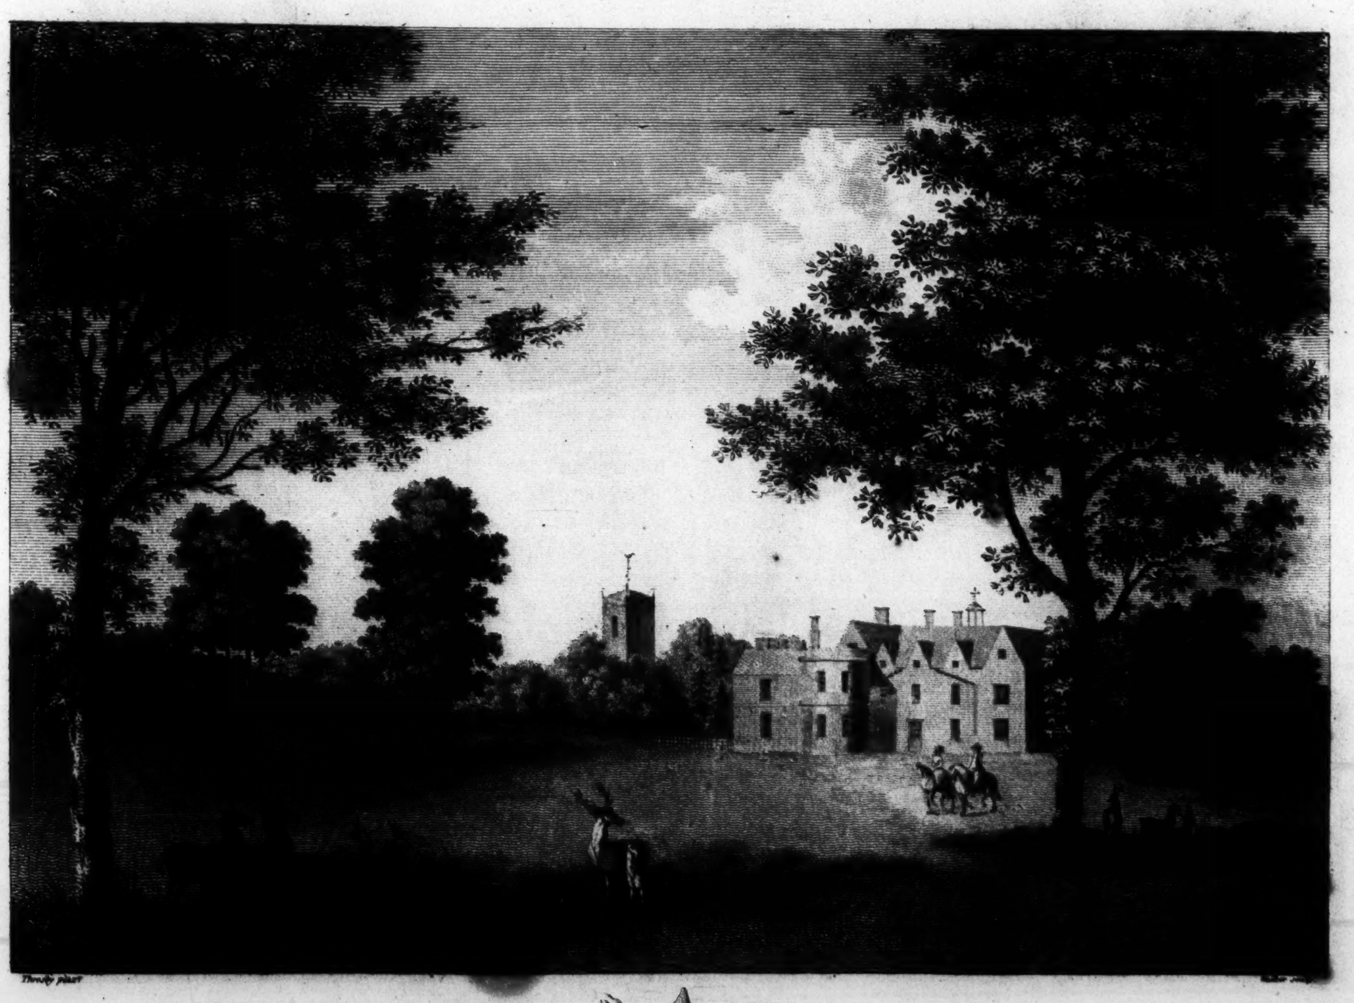






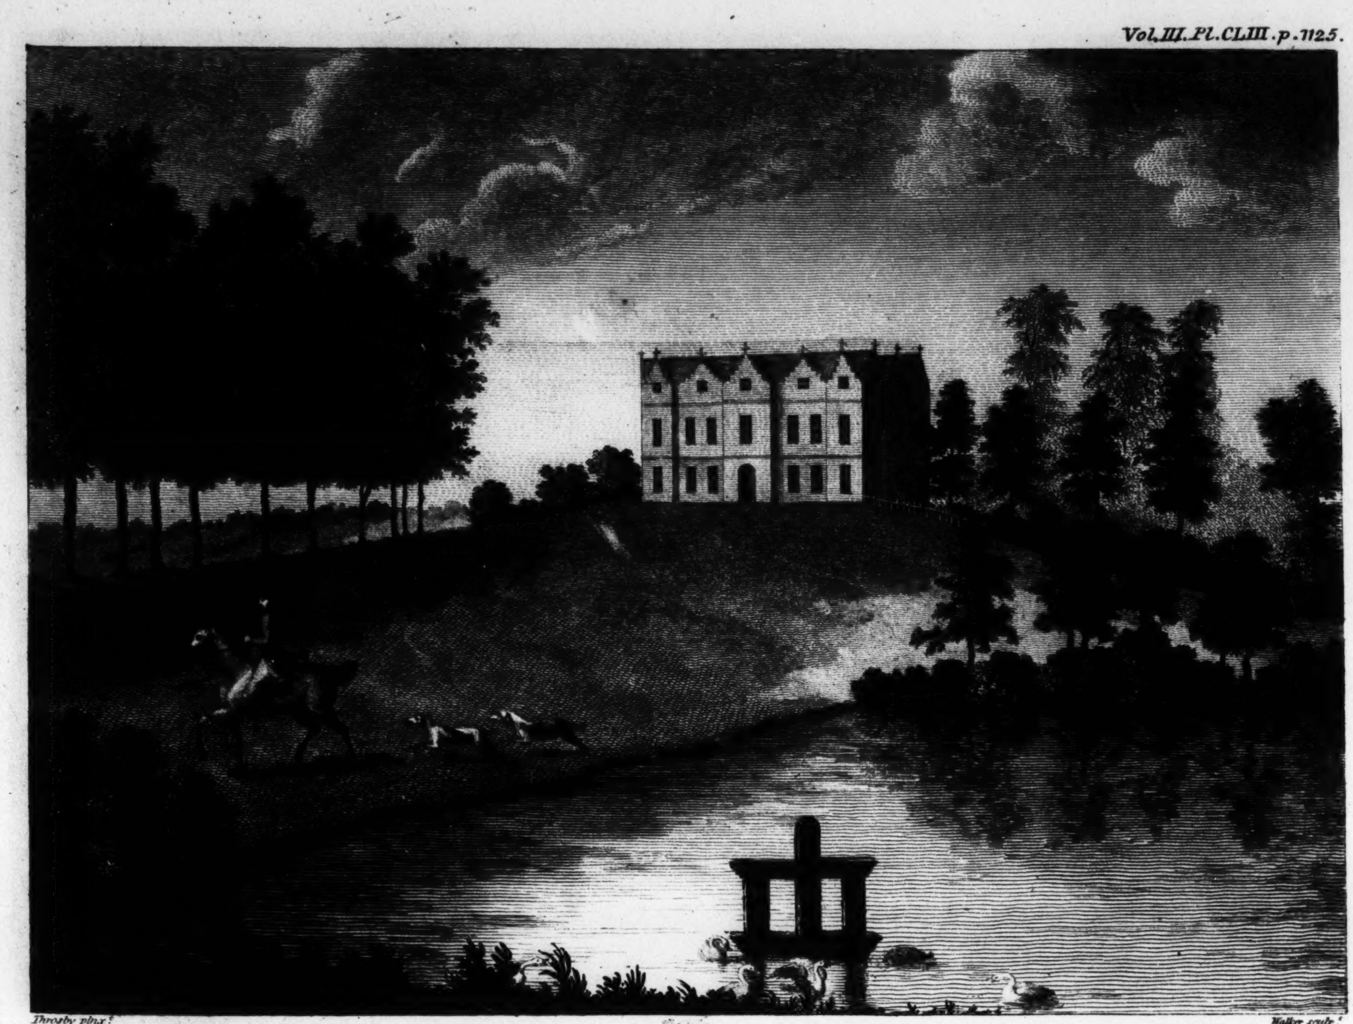
Throsby pinx.t Walker sculp.t

STAUNTON HAROLD,
The Seat of the Right Honble Earl Ferrers.



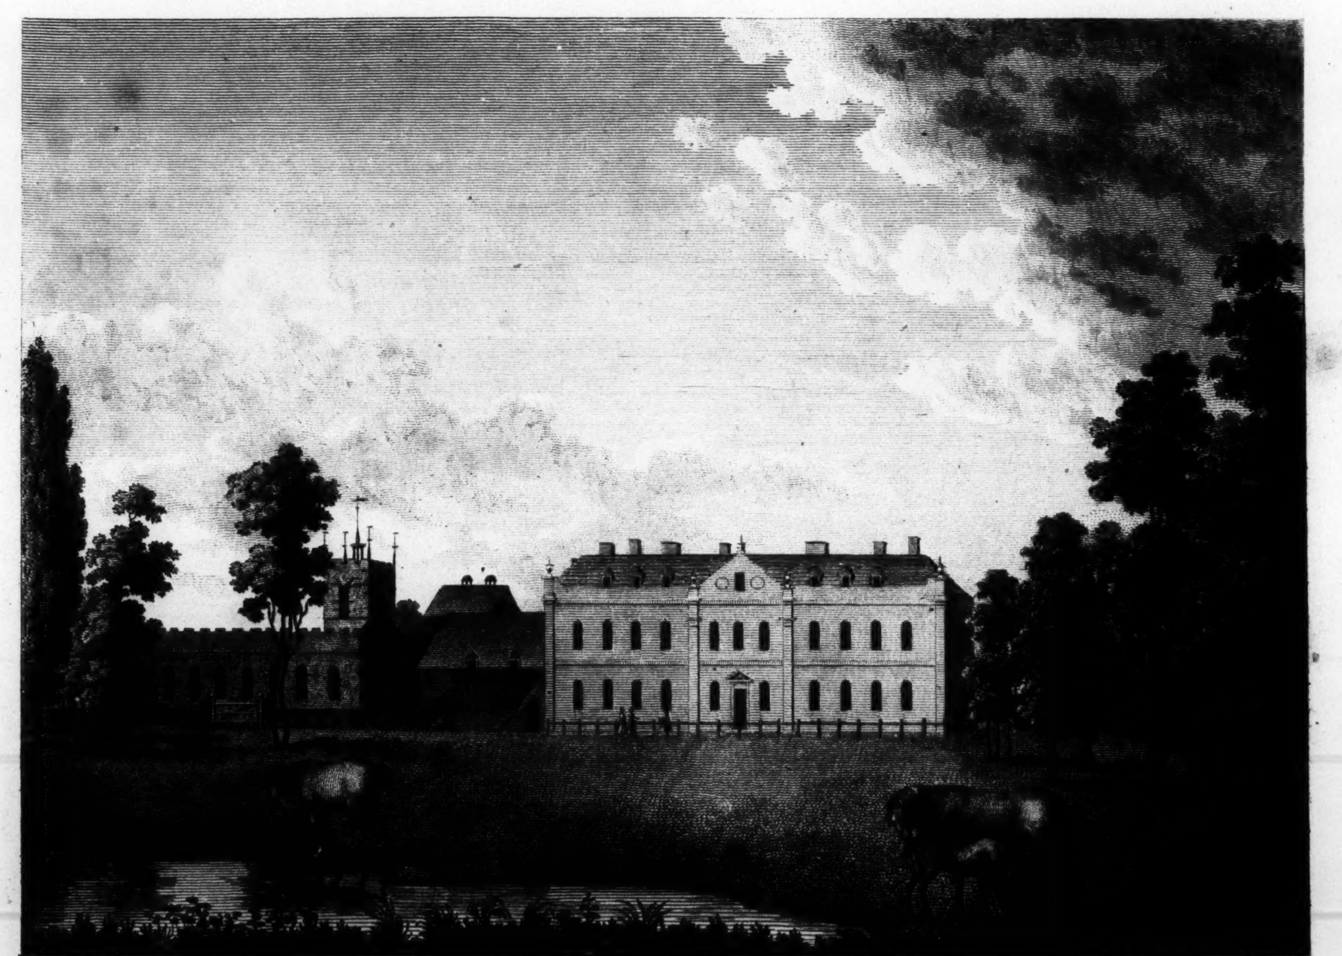
Throsby pinx.t [illegible]

EDMONDTHORPE HALL,
The Seat of Wm Pochin Esqr



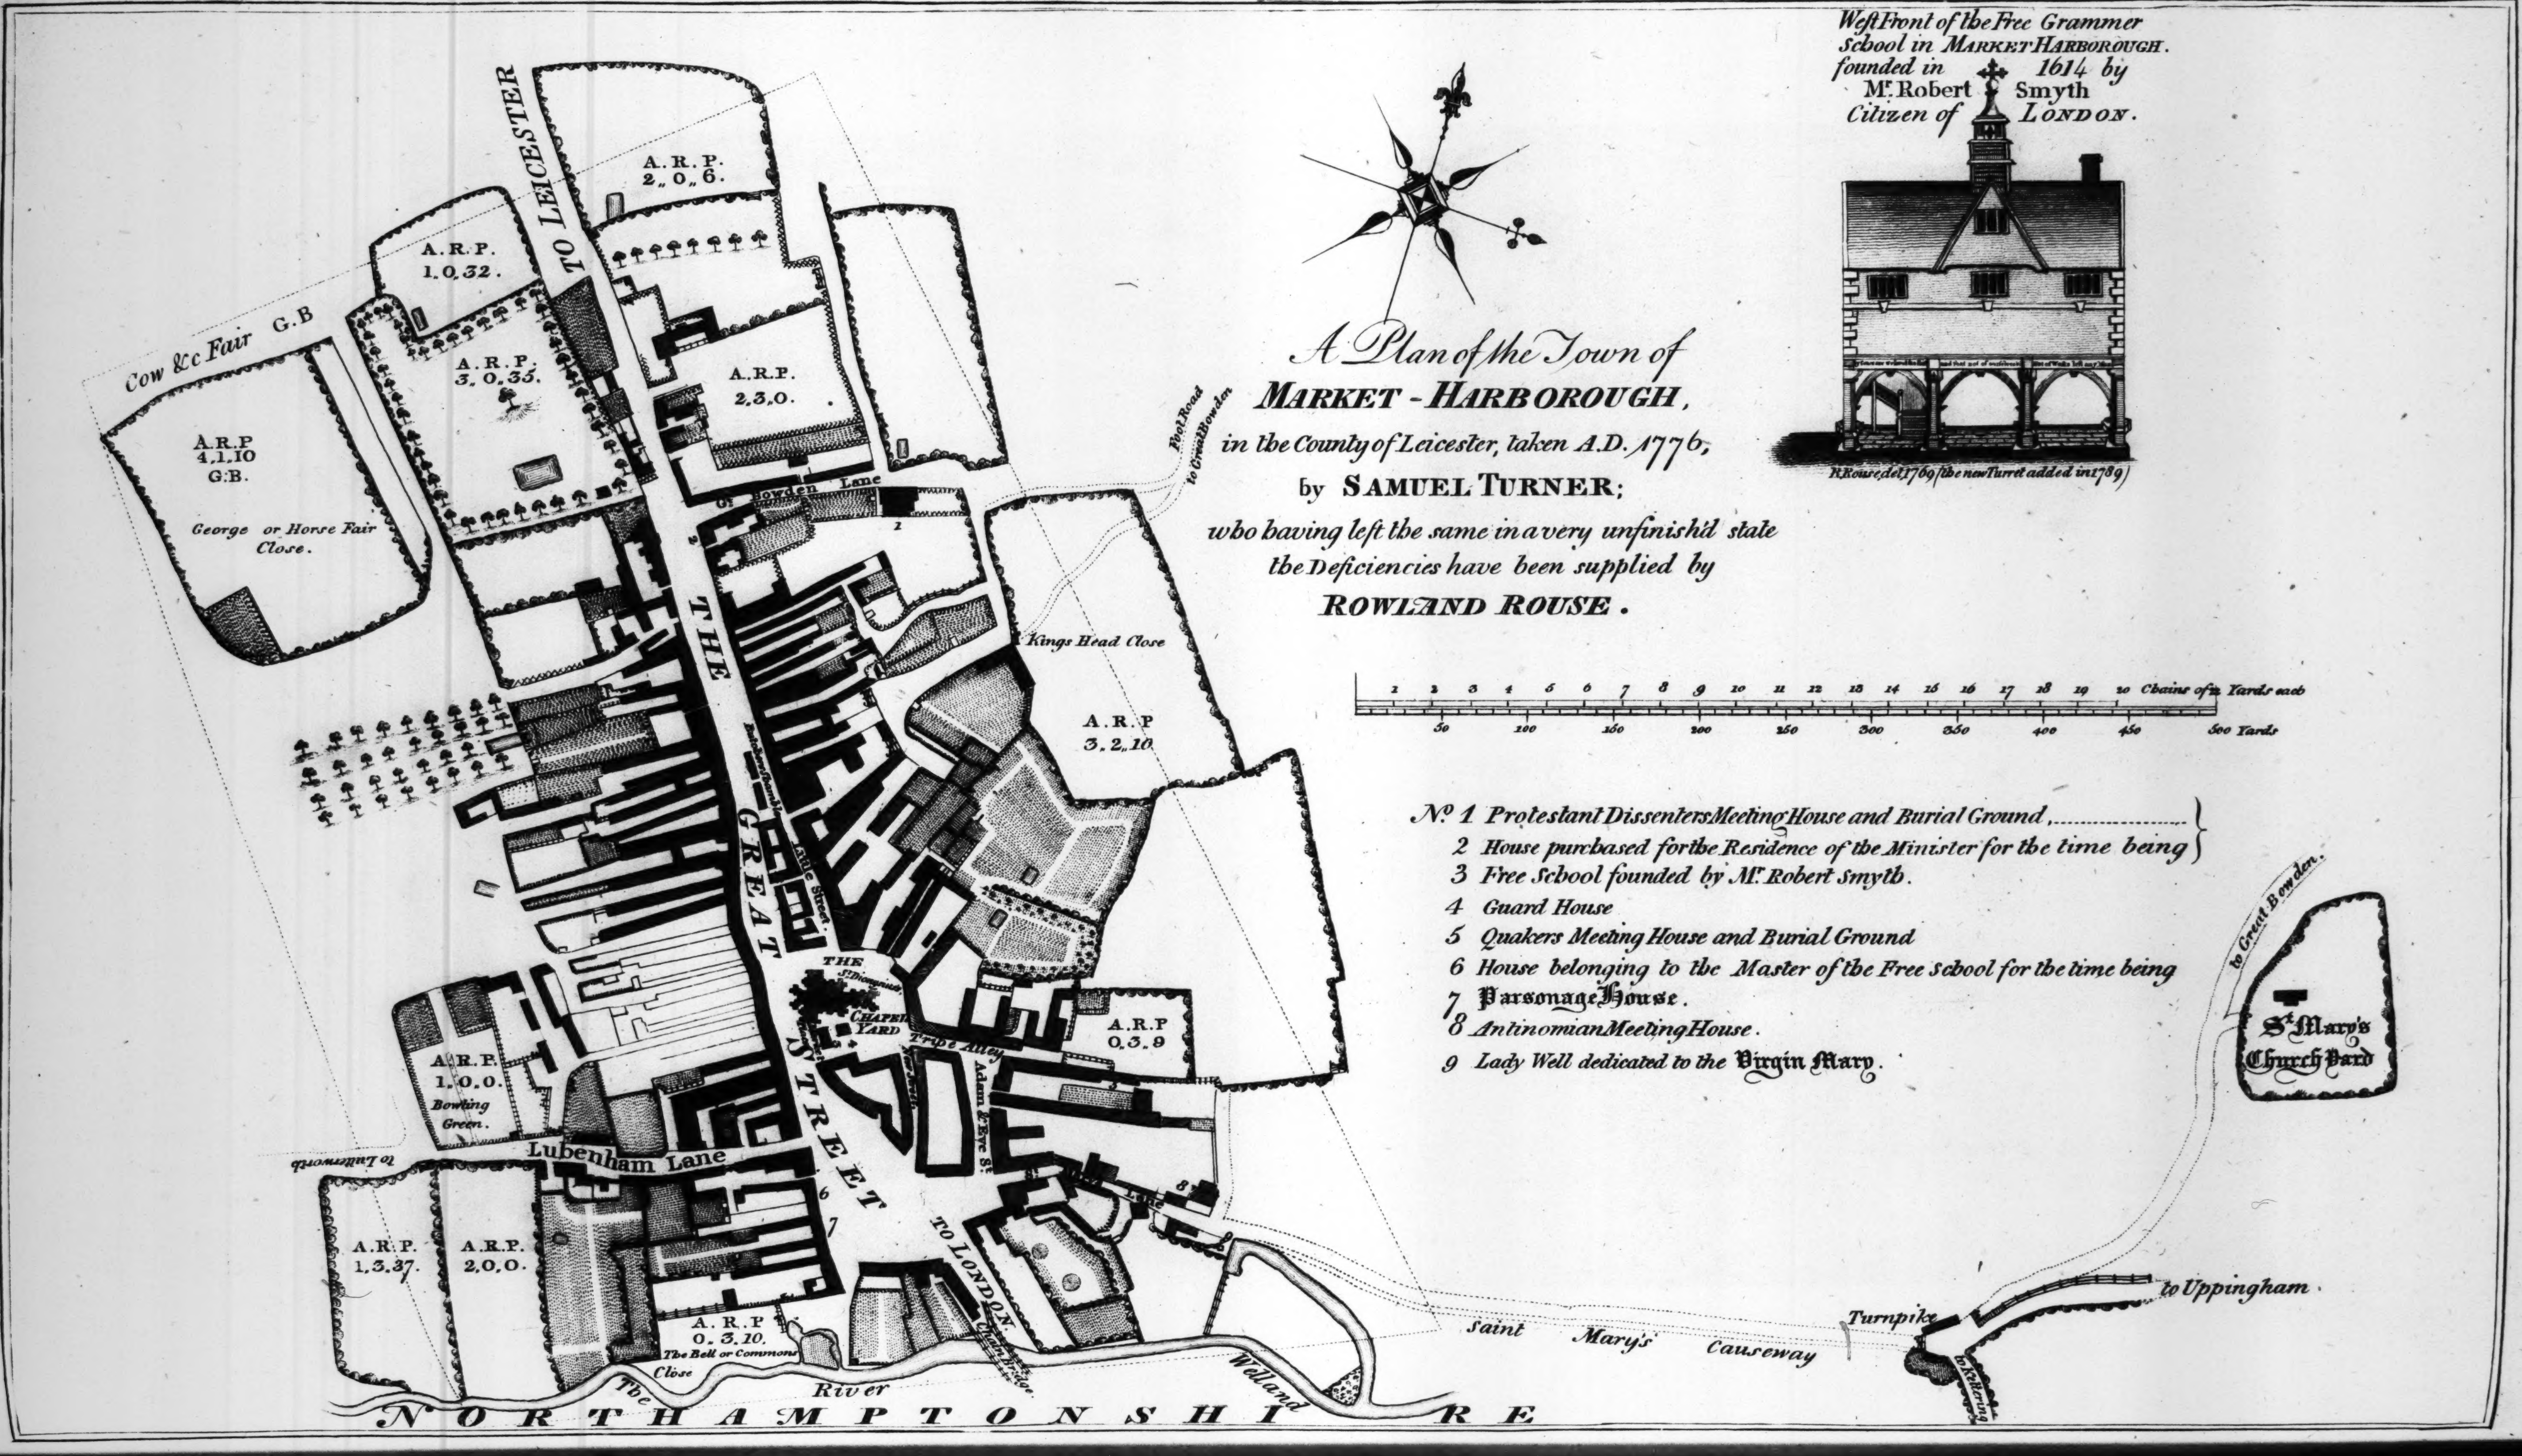
Throsby pinx. Walker sculp.

CARLTON HALL,
The Seat of Sir John Palmer Bar.t



Throsby pinx. Walker sculp.

NOSELEY HALL,
The Seat of Charles Haselrigg Esq.r



A Plan of the Town of
MARKET - HARBOROUGH,
in the County of Leicester, taken A.D. 1776,
by SAMUEL TURNER;
who having left the same in a very unfinish'd state the Deficiencies have been supplied by ROWLAND ROUSE.

West Front of the Free Grammer
School in MARKET HARBOROUGH.
founded in 1614 by
Mr. Robert Smyth
Citizen of LONDON.

R. Rouse, del. 1769 (the new Turret added in 1789)

No. 1 Protestant Dissenters Meeting House and Burial Ground,
2 House purchased for the Residence of the Minister for the time being 3 Free School founded by Mr. Robert Smyth.
4 Guard House
5 Quakers Meeting House and Burial Ground
6 House belonging to the Master of the Free School for the time being 7 Parsonage House.
8 Antinomian Meeting House.
9 Lady Well dedicated to the Virgin Mary.

1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10 11 12 13 14 15 16 17 18 19 20 Chains of 22 Yards each
50 100 150 200 250 300 350 400 450 500 Yards
TO LEICESTER
A.R.P. 2, 0, 6.
A.R.P. 1.0.32.
Cow &c Fair G.B
A.R.P. 3.0.35.
A.R.P 4.1.10 G.B.
George or Horse Fair Close.
A.R.P. 2.3.0.
Bowden Lane
Foot Road to Great Bowden
Kings Head Close
A.R.P 3, 2, 10
THE GREAT STREET
Butchers Shambles
Little Street
THE St. Dionysius
CHAPEL YARD
Tripe Alley
New Street
Adam & Eve St.
A.R.P 0, 3, 9
Lane
A.R.P. 1.0.0. Bowling Green.
Lubenham Lane
to Lutterworth
A.R.P. 1.3.37.
A.R.P. 2.0.0.
A.R.P 0. 3.10.
The Bell or Commons Close
TO LONDON.
Chain Bridge
The River Welland
NORTHAMPTONSHIRE
Saint Mary's Causeway
Turnpike
to Kettering to Uppingham
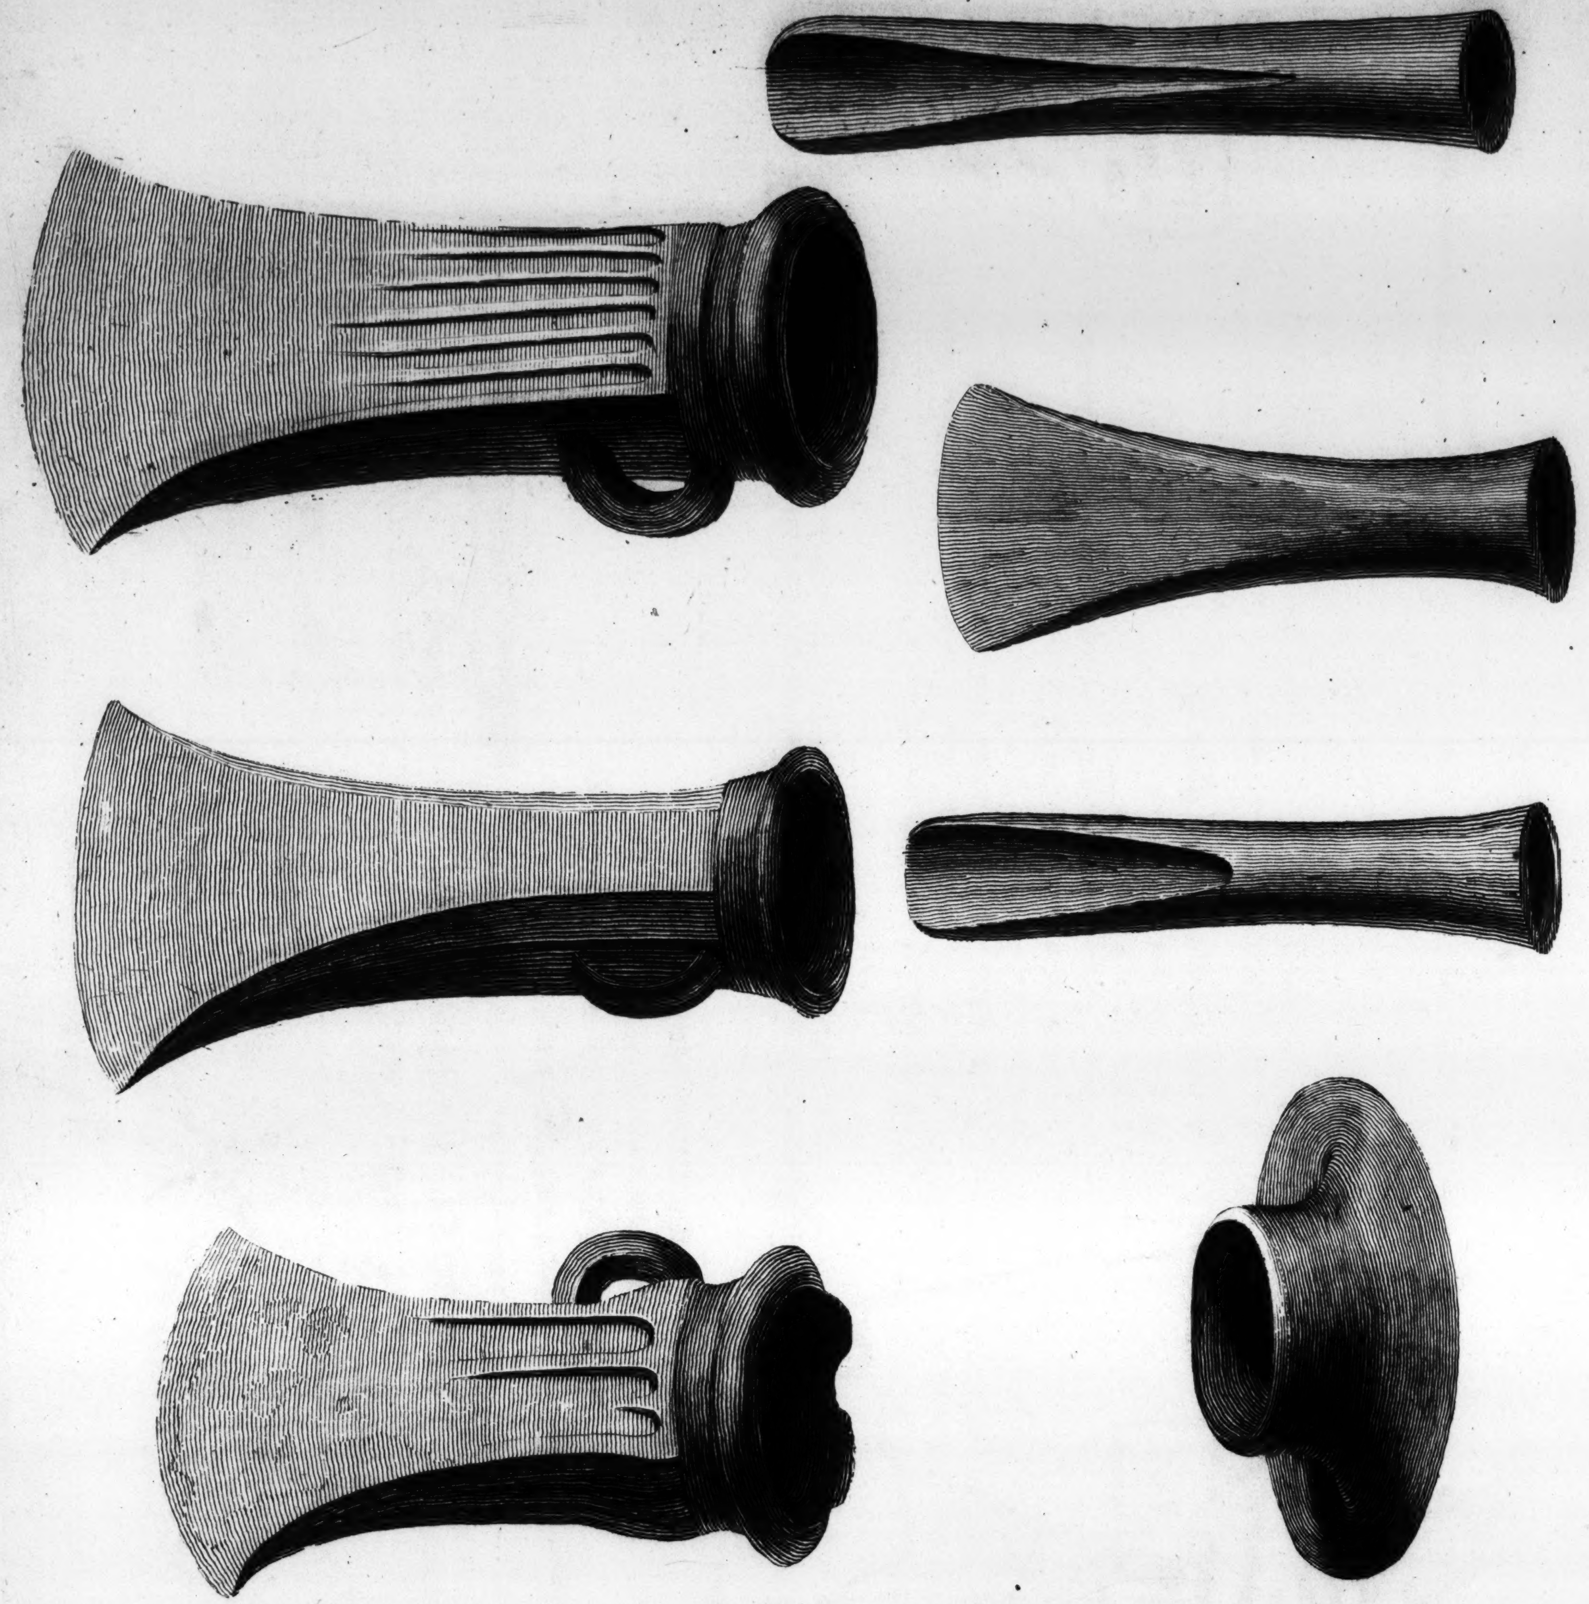
to Great Bowden.
St. Mary's Church Yard

Vol. III. Pl. CLI. p. 1125.



Basire sc.

CELTS found at Husbands Bosworths.

The authorities for the above aſſertions are thus furniſhed by Mr. Strype:

"28 May, anno 1552, I John Beaumont do moſt humbly ſurrender and give into the hands of our ſovereign lord the King's Majeſty, my office of maſter of the rolls; moſt humbly beſeeching his highneſs to be merciful unto me, and all my miſdemeanors and contempts; and in eſpecial, for the debt which I do owe unto his grace, to have ſome days upon good ſecurities. And I am agreed to deliver my patent to be cancelled, unto the lord chancellor of England, or to any other who ſhall pleaſe his highneſs to appoint to receive the ſame. JOHN BEAUMONT."

"For ſatisfaction of the King's Majeſty's debt charged upon me in his grace's court of wards and liveries, for ready money and ſpecialties, amounting to the ſum of £20,871. 18*s.* 8*d.* I am pleaſed and contented, and by this preſent bill do acknowledge myſelf to be fully contented and agreed, that the King's Majeſty ſhall have all my manors, lands, and tenements, whatſoever they be, aſſured to him and his heirs; and alſo all my goods and chattels, moveable and unmoveable, whatſoever they be, and in whoſe cuſtody ſoever they remain; as ſhall be deviſed by the King's learned counſel, with the iſſues and profits of the ſame. Provided always, that if in caſe there be any juſt cauſe of allowance of any part of the aforeſaid debt, that then I ſhall be thereof allowed. In witneſs whereof, I have ſubſcribed this bill with my hand, and thereunto ſet to my ſeal the 28th day of May, anno 6° regis Edw. VI.

"JOHN BEAUMONT."

"The duke of Northumberland, earls of Huntingdon and Pembroke, and ſecretary Cecill, to the privy council; concerning lands of Paget and Beaumont forfeited. After our hearty commendations unto your good lordſhips: Your proceedings with the lord Paget and Mr. Beaumont, ſignified by your letters, ſeemeth to us for our part very good and ſubſtantial. And upon the conſideration of the lands and goods ſurrendered to the king by Beaumont's ſubmiſſion, we the reſt, apart from the earl of Huntingdon, moſt heartily require your lordſhips to have in remembrance a reaſonable ſuit made by the ſaid earl, to have the cuſtody of Gracedieu, the parſonage of Donington, the manors of Thringſton and Swanington, parcel of the ſaid Beaumont's poſſeſſions, with all his goods and chattels in and upon the ſaid houſe and lands, to the King's Majeſty's uſe, until his pleaſure ſhall be further therein determined. Which ſuit we pray your lordſhips, as opportunity ſerveth, may be furthered, though he be abſent himſelf. We have thought meet to pray your good lordſhips to have in remembrance, that when any order ſhall be taken for the delivery of any lands of the lord Paget in ſatiſfaction of any part of his fine, our very good lords the earl of Huntingdon and the Lord Chamberlain may not be forgotten; the one to have the cuſtody of the houſe at Drayton, and the other the houſe at London; whereof your good lordſhips well know their lack. From maſter Cecill's houſe, at Burleigh beſides Stamford, the 19 of June, 1552.

"Your aſſured loving friends,
"NORTHUMBERLAND. F. HUNTINGDON.
"PEMBROKE. W. CECYLL."

Among other property poſſeſſed by Mr. Beaumont was, all the ſept, ſite, circuit, and precincts, of the College of the New Work of Leiceſter, commonly called The Newark College, in the Town of Leiceſter; of the yearly value of £21. 10*s.* 4*d.*; which, jointly with William Gyes, he had purchaſed of king Edward VI. in 1547[1].

King Edward VI. by letters patent, dated June 7, 1553, in conſideration of the good and faithful ſervices of Francis earl of Huntingdon, granted to him, inter alia, the manor of Thringſton, with all its rights, &c. late parcel of the poſſeſſions of John Beaumont, eſq. deceaſed; to be held by the ſaid earl in fee farm under the king, as of his manor of Greenwich, in free and common ſocage, at an annual rent of £158. 5*s.* 8*d.*

March 2, 1575-6, Henry earl of Huntingdon, for the conſideration of £20, and at an annual fee farm rent of 17*s.* 4*d.* conveyed to John Shepherd a meſſuage at Thringſton, with the appurtenances, then or late in the tenure of Elizabeth Robinſon and John Shepherd[2]. Several ſimilar conveyances of other meſſuages at Thringſton were made about the ſame time by the earl of Huntingdon.

March 30, 1606, it was found that ſir Henry Beaumont, knt. at his death, was ſeiſed of certain lands and tenements in Thringſton[3].

The following letter was addreſſed, Nov. 29, 1609, "from the learned young Gentleman J. B. of Gracedieu, in the County of Leiceſter, Eſq." to E. B. Author of "The Elements of Armories, &c. printed by George Eld, 1610," 4to; a very curious and now very ſcarce publication[4]:

"Syr, I have here, with many thanks, returned to you your profound diſcourſe of the Elements of Armories, which I have read over with great profit and delight; for I confeſs that till now I never ſaw any thing in this kind worthy the entertainment of a ſtudious mind, wherein you have moſt commendably ſhewed your ſkill, finding out rare and unknowne beauties in an art whoſe higheſt perfection the meaneſt wits, if the cold blazon and repeat pedigrees, darſt heretofore (but ſhall not now) challenge. Our ſight (which of all ſenſes we hold the deareſt) you have made more precious unto us, by teaching us the excellent proportions of our viſible objects. In performance whereof as you have followed none, ſo have you left it at a raſh and deſperate adventure for any to follow you; for he that only conſiders your choice copy of matter without forcing, will find it an hard taſk to equal your invention, not to ſpeak of your judicial method, wherein you have made your workmanſhip excell your ſubject, though it bee moſt worthy of all ingenuous induſtry. Believe me, ſir, in a word, I cannot but highly admire your attempt ſo well performed; and among many others will be an earneſt furtherer of that benefit which this dull age of ours (in this our country, careleſſe of all but gainful arts) claimeth at your hands. In which hope I reſt

Your moſt loving friend,
29 November, 1609. JOHN BEAUMONT."

Robert Pepper, gent. died Sept. 23, 1612, ſeiſed of three virgates of land at Thringſton[5].

In March 1617, ſir Thomas Beaumont of Cole Orton obtained from king James I. a conſiderable grant of free warren, extending over his ſeveral eſtates at Whitwick, Swanington, and other places, in the counties of Leiceſter and Derby[6].

In 1640, the manor of Thringſton was the property of Henry earl of Huntingdon[7].

By an act paſſed in 1724, "to enable certain truſtees therein named to make a conveyance of lands in Thringſton, in the county of Leiceſter, in purſuance of articles of agreement entered into for that purpoſe," it appears that Samuel Litherland, of Thringſton, by his laſt will, dated in 1695, had deviſed to Elizabeth his wiſe all his lands, tenements, &c. in that lordſhip, for the term of her life, with ſeveral remainders; which being ſubject to certain mortgages, were veſted by that act in Seth Samford and William Dawſon, in truſt, to convey the ſame to Leonard Piddock, of Aſhby-de-la-Zouch, gent. (who had advanced £300 by way of mortgage), on payment of £2700, to be applied to the ſeveral purpoſes to which the lands were liable.

Seventeen freeholders polled from Thringſton in 1722; and 19 in 1775.

---

[1] See before, vol. I. p. 337.

[2] From a copy of the original conveyance, communicated by Henry Cropper, eſq. of Loughborough.

[3] Eſch. 4 Jac. I.

[4] Prefixed to the ſame work are alſo recommendatory letters from "William Segar, Garter;" "William Camden, Clarenceux;" "Thomas Bedingfield;" and two Sonnets by "Hugh Holland."

[5] Cole's Eſcheats, vol. IV. (Harl. MSS. 759) p. 344.

[6] 3 Pars Original. 15 Jac. I. Rot. 19.

[7] MS Burton.

In 1776, the workhouſe at Thringſton was capable of receiving 30 perſons.

By the Return made to Parliament in 1801, Thringſton contained 146 houſes; inhabited by 203 families; 438 males, 462 females; in all 901; of whom 28 were chiefly employed in agriculture, and 120 in trade, manufactures, &c.

Joſeph Boultbee, eſq. is the preſent lord of the manor of Thringſton.

Henry Cropper, eſq. of Loughborough has ſeveral dwelling-houſes, cloſes, and lands, in Thringſton, of the annual value of £180. 12*s*.; and at Whitwick, to the amount of £18. 3*s*. 6*d*.

⁂ At the moment of concluding this page, I have to regret the loſs of another of my very kind aſſiſtants in the progreſs of this extenſive undertaking; Mr. John Stockdale, proctor, and nearly 40 years deputy regiſter of the Archdeaconry Court of Leiceſter; who died April 7, 1804; whoſe inflexible integrity, correct judgement, liberal ſentiments, exact punctuality, and peculiar ſuavity of manners, rendered him an ornament of ſociety through life, and his death a public loſs. It was his greateſt pleaſure to do good to others; and to the poor in particular he was a ſteady and liberal friend.

LIST OF THE PLATES IN THE HUNDRED OF WEST GOSCOTE.

75. Map of Weſt Goſcote Hundred, p. 561
76. Seals, and Arms, at Aſhby de la Zouch, 562
77. Chapel and Monument of William lord 573
78. Haſtings, in St. George's church, Windſor, 574
79. Portrait of Edward firſt lord Loughborough, 579
80. ——— Mr. Haſtings of the Woodlands, 592
81. Two Views and Ground Plan of Aſhby Caſtle, 610
82. Aſhby Church; the Caſtle, Chapel, &c. 616
83. Monument of Francis Earl of Huntingdon, 618
84. Portraits of Bp. Hall, Arthur Hilderſham, &c. 623
85. Blackfordby Chapel, and Royal Signatures, 634
86. Belton Church, and Roeſia de Verdon's Tomb, 647
87. Two Views of Gracedieu, Seals, Arms, &c. 651
*87. Portraits of Two Francis Beaumonts *662
88. Portraits of Edward IV. and Queen Elizabeth, 662
89. Lady Jane Grey, and View of Bradgate Ruins, 673
90. Views of Bradgate Houſe, and Bradgate Ruins, 680
91. Two other Views of Bradgate; Monument, &c. 681
92. Bredon, Staunton Harold, and Worthington, 688
93. Monuments of the Shirleys in Bredon Church, 689
94. Seal of Robert de Ferrariis earl of Derby 694
95. Portrait of Sir Robert Shirley, Bart. 715
96. Letter from King Charles II. to Lady Shirley, 715
97. Earl Ferrers's Houſe at Staunton Harold, 717
98. Diſtant View of Staunton Harold and the Park, 717
99. Seals of the Families of Staunton and Shirley, *720
100. Portrait of the Perſian Sir Robert Shirley, 720
101. Cole Orton Church, Beaumont's Hoſpital, &c. 740
102. Diſeworth Church, and Portrait of Lilly, 753
103. Diſhley Church, and Mr. Bakewell's Sheep, 763
104. Views in Donington Park, old Houſe, &c. 778
104*. Two other Views of Donington Park Hall, 778
105. Two Views of Donington Park Hall, as 778
106. lately rebuilt by the Earl of Moira,
107. Cavendiſh, Zouch, and Loughborough Bridges, 779
108. Donington Caſtle, Church, and Hoſpital, 781
109. Antient Monuments in Donington Church, 782
110. 785
111. Monks of Garendon, the Abbey Seal, &c. 786
112. The Garden View of Garendon Hall, 802
113. Old Front of Garendon Hall; antient Seals, &c. 802
114. The Triumphal Arch in Garendon Park, 803
115. Temple of Venus in Garendon Park, 804
*116. Hathern Church, Monumental Figures, &c. 843
116. Portrait of Dr. Pulteney, 848
117. Kegworth Church, Iſley Walton Chapel, &c. 855
118. Langley Hall; Nun of Langley, Arms, &c. 860
119. Lockington Hall, Hemington Church, &c. 875
120. Lockington Hall, as lately improved, 875
120*. Lockington and Hemington Churches, &c. *876
121. Loughborough Church, Rectory, &c. 897
122. Loughborough Church and old Monuments, 901
123*. Loughborough, and Mr. Whatton's Houſe, 911
123. Portraits of Cleiveland and Webſter, 918
124. Oſgathorpe Church and Hoſpital, &c. 920
125. Packington Church, Snibſton Chapel, &c. 925
126. Ravenſton Church and Hoſpital, &c. 935
127. Knight Templar and Knight Hoſpitaller 943
128. Dedication of the Temple Church, 944
129. Rothley Temple, the Church, Templar, &c. 958
130. Antient Monuments in Rothley Church, 961
131. Caldwell, Grimſton, Keame, and Wartnaby, 967
132. Two Views of Gaddeſby Church, 972
133. Seile Hall, Church, antient Seals, &c. 993
133*. Seal of William de Greſley, *1011
134. Shepeſhed Church, Monuments, &c. 1022
135. Stretton Hall and Church, Snareſton, &c. 1025
136. Swepſton Church, Monuments, &c. 1038
137. Monument of the Oneby Family, 1039
138. Swithland Church, Monuments, Hall, &c. 1050
139. Little John's Stone near Leiceſter, 1054
140. Thurcaſton Church, Anſtey Chapel, &c. 1058
141. Portrait of Biſhop Latimer, 1070
142. View of Ulveſcroft Priory, with Seals, &c. 1094
143. Two other Views of Ulveſcroft Priory, 1094
144. Wanlip Hall, 1096
145. Portrait of a Bull fed at Wanlip, 1096
146. Wanlip Church and Monuments, 1097
147. Wanlip Hall and Rothley Temple, 1100
148. Whatton Houſe, 1105
149. Whatton Church, Portrait of Mr. Shaw, &c. 1106
150. Whitwick Church, Talbot's Tomb, &c. 1118
150*. Staunton Harold and Edmondthorpe, 1126
151. Celts found at Huſbands Boſworth, 1127
152. Plan of Market Harborough, 1127
153. Views of Carlton and Noſeley, 1127
154. ——— Gumley and its Groves, 1127
155. ——— Leeſthorpe and Scraptoft, 1128
156. ——— Stoughton and Wiſtow, 1129
157. ——— Beaumanor and Quorndon, 1131
158. ——— Quenby and Lodington, 1135
159. ——— Preſtwould and Skeffington, 1136
160. Prince Rupert, &c. and Leiceſter Abbey, 45
161. Views of Aſhby and Leiceſter Caſtles, 65
162. ——— Belvoir Caſtle, &c. 66
163. ——— Stapleford and Melton Mowbray, 69

ADDITIONS AND CORRECTIONS IN GARTRE HUNDRED.

P. 463. In the body of Stapleford church (near Briſtol), in the county of Glouceſter, on a grave-ſtone:

"William Turvile,
of Huſbands Boſworth, in the county of Leiceſter, eſq.
died June 12, 1777, in the 58th year of his age."

P. 464. The ſeveral Celts engraved in Plate CLI. were found, Dec. 23, 1801, by Matthew Grocock and James Allam, of Huſbands Boſworth, about ſix feet below the ſurface, in a piece of land belonging to Francis Forteſcue Turvile, eſq. called Gravel-pit cloſe.

P. 477. The charge of maintaining the poor at Harborough was reduced from £170 to £100 a year, in conſequence of a work-houſe being erected[1] about 1722.

In 1776, the expences were	£315	5s.	5d.
In 1783, money raiſed by aſſeſſment	478	12	11
1784, ditto – – – –	370	11	9
1785, ditto – – – –	351	13	3

P. 484. On an upright ſtone in St. Mary's church-yard, incloſed with iron palliſadoes:

"The remains of Thomas and Elizabeth, children of the rev. Richard Farrer and Jane his wife, are here depoſited;
who died, Thomas, July 18, 1789, aged 10 years;
Elizabeth, Nov. 7, 1788, in the 11th year of her age.
Read, ye that run, the awful truth
With which I charge my page:
A worm is in the bud of youth,
And at the root of age. COWPER."

P. 500. "In Northamptonſhire the breeding of black horſes is a conſiderable branch of buſineſs. They keep all mares, and ſell the colts at two years old at Harborough fair; £10 or £12 a common price. They are now ſo curious in their breed, that many farmers have their mares covered at two guineas each[2]."

P. 508. The Hiſtory of Market Harborough will receive no ſmall illuſtration from the annexed Plan, taken in 1776 by Mr. Samuel Turner, and improved by my friend Mr. Rowland Rouſe. See Plate CLII.

P. 543. A View of Carleton is given in Plate CLIII.

P. 589. To the benevolent poſſeſſors of GUMLEY HALL I am under ſo many obligations for repeated proofs of friendſhip, that I have much pleaſure in preſenting to my readers three different views of that hoſpitable manſion and its delightful groves (Plate CLIV.); and ſhall take this opportunity of introducing a few lines, addreſſed to the worthy owner in 1780, "on the Beauties of his Plantation."

"On Pegaſus mounted, I boldly dar'd try,
With haſte to Apollo's dominions to fly;
But what my ſurprize when no Muſes I found,
Nor yet Phœbus ſelf on his much-belov'd mound!
Double-headed Parnaſſus appear'd to repine,
And Helicon wept at the loſs of the Nine:
But my wonder ſoon ceas'd; for it afterwards prov'd,
They had to the gardens of Gumley remov'd:
There I found them amidſt rural beauties retir'd,
And CRADOCK[3], by way of reward, was inſpir'd."

P. 620. Among the MSS. of the Rev. William Cole of Milton[4], are the following affectionate remembrances of an eccentric but very worthy Divine:

"Mr. Heyrick died on Wedneſday morning, May 13, 1767, of a dropſy; there being none of his brothers or ſiſters with him. Mr. Robinſon was with him on Tueſday morning, when he was ſenſible; but in the afternoon, when he went again, he was not ſo; at which time he ſealed up his bureau and papers. Mr. Ord was executor; and Mr. Robinſon kindly ordered his funeral, where ſix of the principal farmers of his pariſh ſupported his pall, and Mr. Robinſon's ſteward or bailiff went as chief mourner. He left £20 to the Society of propagating the Goſpel. He alſo gave ſome ſmall bequeſt to the poor of his pariſh. Mr. Allen deſired to be at the expence of a ſtone for him; and alſo deſired Mr. Robinſon, by a letter they ſhewed me, to buy a piece of furniture or plate belonging to him, in order that the Cranſley family might have it after his death, to remember them both by. Mr. Heyrick had been a moſt perſonable man in his younger time; and was well acquainted with the late lord Montford, ſir Robert Smyth, Mr. Soame of Thurlow, at all which houſes he was always welcome, and where I uſed frequently to meet him, about 30 years ago, before he ſettled at Lodington on his father's death[5]. He was an excellent player at whiſt, and played for larger ſums than is uſual in his way of life; was acquainted with the beſt of the country, and with ſuch only would he be acquainted. He was one of the Whitehall preachers, and had ſome place by lord Halifax's procurement. Party matters then ran high in Northamptonſhire; and though Mr. Heyrick, out of compliment to his lordſhip, voted with the Whigs, yet in his mind he was a determined Tory.

His brother Toby Heyrick, fellow of Trinity alſo, vicar of Over, Cambridgeſhire, and afterward ſeated ſomewhere near Richmond in Yorkſhire, endeavoured to imitate and mimick his brother's drollery and humour; but was a very bad copy of ſo excellent an original; though, had we not known the elder brother, he might have paſſed as a wit and a humouriſt, and rather excellent in his way."

In a letter addreſſed to Mr. Cole, May 26, the rev. John Allen, rector of Torporley in Cheſhire, ſays, "I am very weak both in my loins and ankles; but my mind is more affected than either with the loſs of poor Heyrick. An intimacy of near 50 years had ſubſiſted between us; ſo that his death is really like a ſtroke of the dead palſey on one ſide. I thank you for your charitable opinion of him, and hope you won't want ſolicitation to pray for his ſoul; for, though perhaps he was better fitted for this world than any other ſtate, yet God will draw a ſcore upon his faults, which were owing to blood, rather than corruption of heart. I aſſure you, I am at preſent diſconſolate, and ſing, Oh, how are the mighty fallen!"

In anſwer, June 3, Mr. Cole tells Mr. Allen, "My Catholicity is at beſt but heretical; for a good Catholic muſt not even hope for the good future ſtate of thoſe out of the pale. Mine extends much further; for I can both hope and be aſſured of God's mercies to ſuch as our departed brother, whoſe heart was no otherwiſe depraved, than by its being enveloped in warmer blood than ſome of his neighbours. On the other ſide you will ſee an epitaph compoſed by Mr. Robinſon and your ſervant at table, to be put on the ſtone you deſign for your friend; and as you are ſo kind to give it, we thought it proper to ſend it you for your approbation. On ſecond thoughts, I altered it to the longer epitaph; as I did not think the verſe complete, and the ſenſe perfect, without the word that, which I could not contrive to bring in; and Mr. Robinſon ſeems very deſirous that the laſt verſe ſhould be preſerved: ſo I have ſent both, that you may chooſe which you like beſt; or elſe compoſe ſomething elſe of your own, and ſend it to Cranſley.

"In memory of
the Rev. Mr. Nathaniel Heyrick, B.D. ſenior fellow of Trinity College in Cambridge, and many years rector of this pariſh.
He was a polite ſcholar,
an excellent preacher,
and a moſt facetious companion.
His ſtile of wit and humour was ſo truly original,
and ſo peculiarly his own,
that the following obſervation was never more properly applied:
None but himſelf can be his parallel.
He died May 13, 1767, aged 70 years."

Or, "This marble, as his friends, ſhall ever tell, Nought but himſelf can be his parallel."
Or, "His friends, and not this ſtone, can only tell,
None but himſelf can be his parallel."
Or, worſe ſtill, aliâ manu,
"What his friends knew, that let this marble tell,
None but himſelf could be his parallel."

---

[1] Sir Frederick Eden on the State of the Poor, 1797, vol. I. p. 273.

[2] Young's Eaſtern Tour, 1770, vol. I. p. 57.

[3] For an ample Pedigree of the various branches of the Cradock family, ſee before, under Swebſton, p. 1041.

[4] Vol. XXXV. p. 166. b.

[5] His father was rector there before him; and, by a mortification in one of his arms, was forced to ſubmit to have it cut off.

In a ſubſequent letter to Mr. Cole, Mr. Allen ſays, "My dear Friend, Torporley, July 22, 1767. Death has been ſo ravenous this ſummer, that I begin to be apprehenſive both for myſelf and the ſmall group of acquaintance that are ſtill exiſting. I can't think but he muſt have knocked at all our doors; but, providentially for us, we happened to be from home. It has made me very ſerious, and very thoughtful about my own grave, as well as one of my friends; for which I have ſent pretty near your inſcription, leaving out only what I thought too funny to be engraved on a tomb-ſtone. Exempli gratiâ:

'Here lyeth the body of
the Rev. Mr. Nathaniel Heyrick, A.M. ſenior fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge,
and 25 years rector of this pariſh.
He was a polite ſcholar,
an excellent preacher,
much the gentleman,
and a moſt entertaining companion.
The loſs of this piece of feſtivity (for, like Swift, who claimed a conſanguinity with him,
he was fluens facetiis)
was regretted by all that had the pleaſure of his acquaintance;
but perhaps more ſenſibly ſo by him who, in gratitude for an intimacy of very near 50 years continuance, being Fellow of the ſame Houſe, lays down this ſtone to be a memorial of it.
He died May 13, 1767, aged 69:
And may both of them find mercy
from the Lord at that day, is the humble prayer of John Allen.'

"I revere your charity for Heyrick. If Holy Church had a little of it, one would not ſcruple to be reconciled to her; and ſure the want of it but ill correſponds with her title of being Catholic.—I ſent Jack Robinſon the epitaph, and inſtructions for the ſtone."

Of this very old and intimate acquaintance, Mr. Cole has alſo annexed the following memoir:

"John Allen, B.D. and one of the ſenior fellows and burſar of Trinity college, Cambridge, was born at Uttoxeter in Staffordſhire, in which county alſo he has a ſinecure. His firſt preferment from the college was the vicarage of Colne in Huntingdonſhire, which he quitted for that of Shudy-Camps in Cambridgeſhire, where, in a ſmall thatched houſe, in which you could hardly ſwing a cat, but by him moſt neatly fitted up and elegantly furniſhed, he has frequently entertained the beſt company of the county, who never were better pleaſed than to enjoy his chearful and honeſt converſation, both at their own and his houſe. In 1744, he was the ſenior proctor of the Univerſity; and on the death of Mr. Bereſford, the patron Mr. Arderne, his old Univerſity acquaintance, who had not ſeen one another of years, voluntarily offered him the preſentation in the moſt handſome manner; and Mr. Allen, to requite in ſome manner the generoſity of his friend, has already laid out in buildings and repairs the whole profits of the living to this time (1755), and no doubt will do more on proper occaſions. He divides his time equally between Cambridge and Torporley; at the firſt he ſpends his winters, and his ſummers at Torporley. As fellow of a college he muſt neceſſarily be a bachelor, and is now about 55 years of age, and is an hearty and well-looking man; and, above all, is much eſteemed by all the neighbouring gentry and clergy, whom (according to his natural taſte and diſpoſition) he elegantly and hoſpitably entertains as they call upon him. He is an exceeding good Hiſtorian, and an excellent Antiquary and Herald; and as ſuch has made collections towards an hiſtory of his native county of Stafford, and tricked out the arms in the church windows of various churches in that county and elſewhere; which collections he has given to Dr. Wilkes of Wolverhampton, who is preparing an hiſtory of that county for the preſs. His father lived at Bromſhall, where he had an eſtate, near Uttoxeter."

Mr. Cole afterwards adds, "Poor Mr. Allen, my worthy friend, died eaſily, and rather ſuddenly, Saturday January 17, 1778, the ſame day that Mr. Pepys of Impington died at Bath. This was told to me this morning, Jan. 26, by Mr. Samuel Knight, who had been at Cambridge the evening before with Mr. Whiſſon of Trinity, who had received a letter from Mr. Pepper Arden with advice of it. In the Cambridge Chronicle, it is ſaid that he died on Sunday, at Cheſter, after a ſhort illneſs, aged 78 years. Crew Arden, M. A. of Trinity college, ſon of the patron, ſucceeded him, in March 1778. As I long knew my worthy friend's religious principles, I was no way ſurprized when Mr. Lort ſent me the following inſcription on Mr. Allen's tomb in St. John's churchyard, Cheſter:

'Deus propitius eſto mihi Joanni Allen, pecatori, rectori de Torporley,
et ſocio maximè ſeniori
Trin. Coll. Cantab.
nato apud Uttoxeter,
Jan. 14, 1699;
ſepulto Jan. 23, 1778.
Quod quiſque veſtrûm
mihi piè optaverit, illi feliciter eveniat
vivò et mortuo.
Amen.'

"I like the turn of thought extremely, and envy him that he firſt caught it: my own is not to be compared to it, though in the ſame ſtyle, and compoſed many years ago; but I know not how to ſhorten it:

"Memento Homo quia pulvis es, et in pulverem reverteris.
Miſerere mei Deus ſecundum multitudinem miſericordiarum tuarum.
O Chriſte, Soter, & Judex, mihi Gulielmo Cole, peccatorum maximo, miſericors et propitius eſto [1]."

P. 641. The advowſon of Kibworth was ſold by Avarella daughter of the Rev. Richard Vincent, and wife of Edward Croxall, eſq. of Shuſtock, Warwick [2].

P. 643. The following brief pedigree is from a Viſitation of Kent, Harl. MSS. 1106, p. 3.

Arms: Quarterly, 1. and 4. Or, three piles; iſſuant out of the chief Azure, a canton Ermine. 2. and 3. Ermine, on a chief Azure, a ſun Or.

Johannes Bryan de Kibworth, in com. Leic. = Elionara ſoror Antonii Watſon epiſcopi Ciceſtrenſis.

Johannes de Wrotham in com. Cantii. =	Magdalena filia Joh'is Wats militis, ac aldermanni Lond'.	Thomas Bryan de Haſting duxit Aliciam filiam Joh'is Brett de Haſting.	Alicia filia unica nupta Roberto Raie de Kilworth p'dict.

P. 743. "Sir Arthur Haſlerigg his ſpeech in Parliament, where he cleareth himſelf of the Articles of High Treaſon exhibited againſt himſelf, the lord Kimbolton, Mr. John Pymm, Mr. John Hampden, Mr. Stroud, and Mr. Holles, by his Majeſtie, on Thurſday 4 Jan. 1642," was publiſhed in 4to, 1642.

P. 745. Another view of Noſeley Hall is given in Plate CLIII.; and one of Leeſthorpe in Plate CLV.

P. 779. "A new Conſtellation; diſcovered in a Sermon printed at the Viſitation held at Lent the 29th of April, 1674. By Joſhua Bonhome, Rector of Saddington, in the county of Leiceſter, Chaplain in ordinary to his Majeſty," was publiſhed in 1675, 4to; dedicated "to the Right. Hon. Henry Coventry, Eſq. of his Majeſty's moſt Honourable Privy Council, and Principal Secretary of State."

P. 784. A view of Scraptoft is given in Plate CLV.

P. 793. In the middle of the cloiſter, and nearly oppoſite to the door of the chapter-houſe in the abbey church of St. Alban's, was depoſited the body of Bartholomew Wyndover, formerly rector of Shangton, co. Leiceſter, a great benefactor to the repairs and improvement of the cloiſter. Over him was a flat-ſtone, ſetting forth his merits, in this epitaph:

"Bartholomæus in hoc de Wyndover monimento
Clauditur; hoc clauſtrum decoravit qui pavimento.
Cum reddetur ei ſupremæ vita diei,
Fac ut, ſumme Deus! convivat Bartholomæus [3]."

---

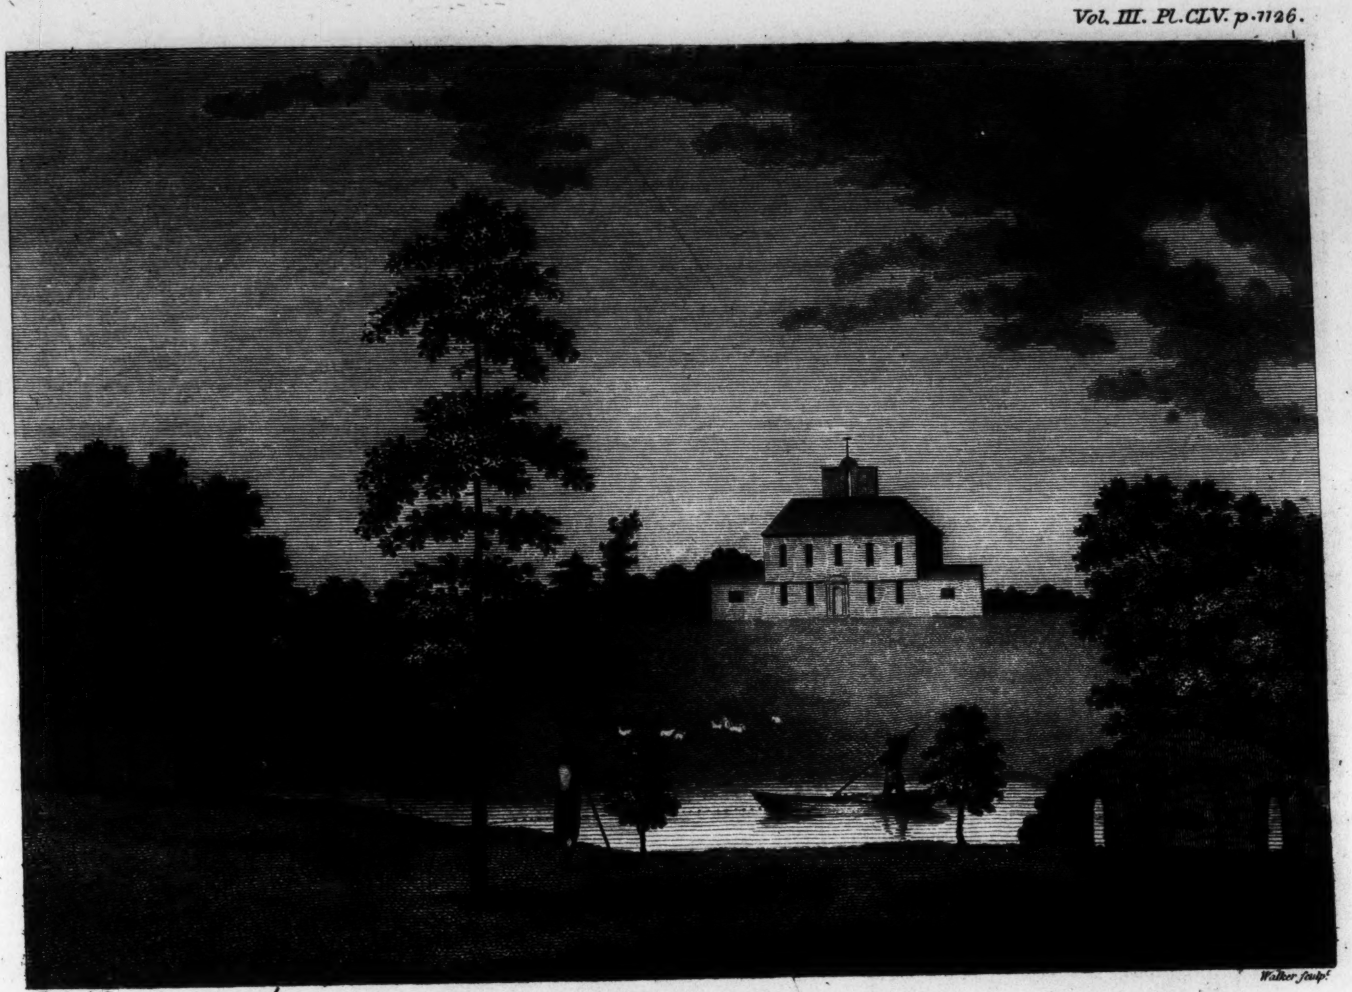
[1] Cole's MS Collections, vol. VII. p. 179. b.

[2] Shaw's Staffordſhire, vol. II. p. 107.

[3] Newcome's Hiſtory of St. Alban's, p. 313, ex actubus Johannis Whethamſted, by John de Amerſham.

Pedigree

Vol. III. Pl. CLV. p. 1126.

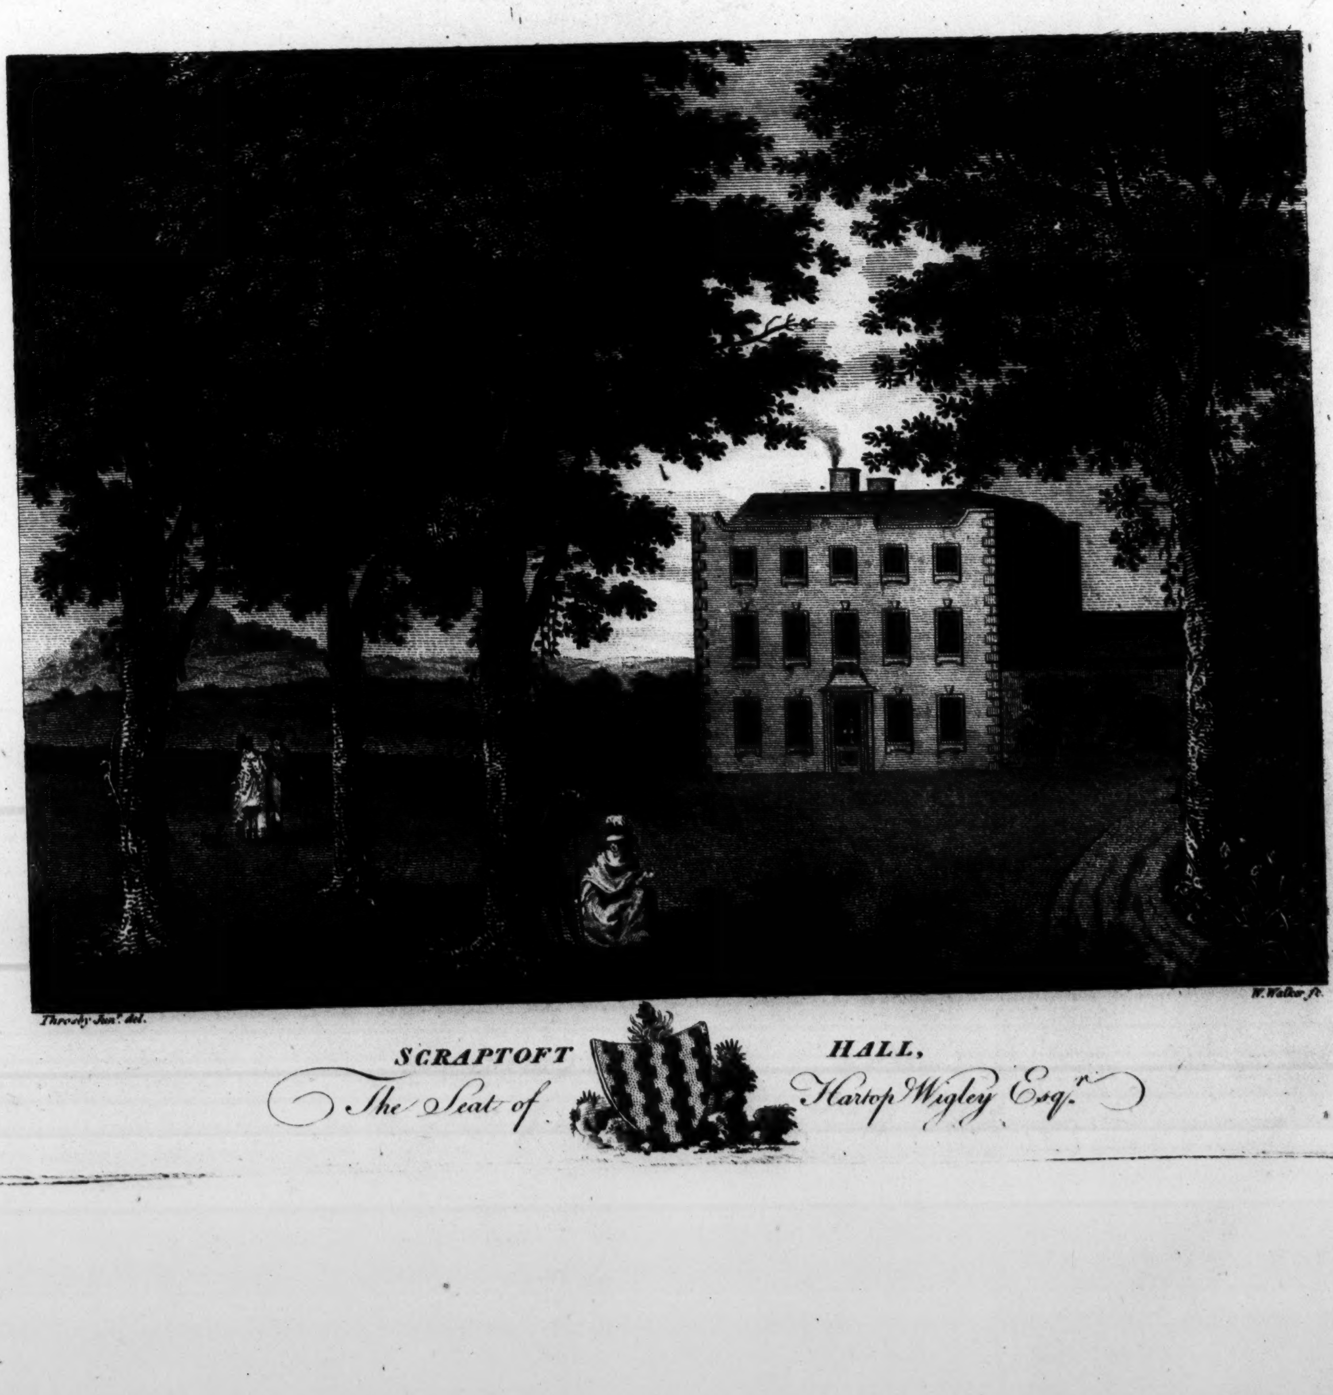


Throsby pinx^t

Walker sculp^t

LEESTHORP HALL.

The Seat of John Suffield Brown Esqr



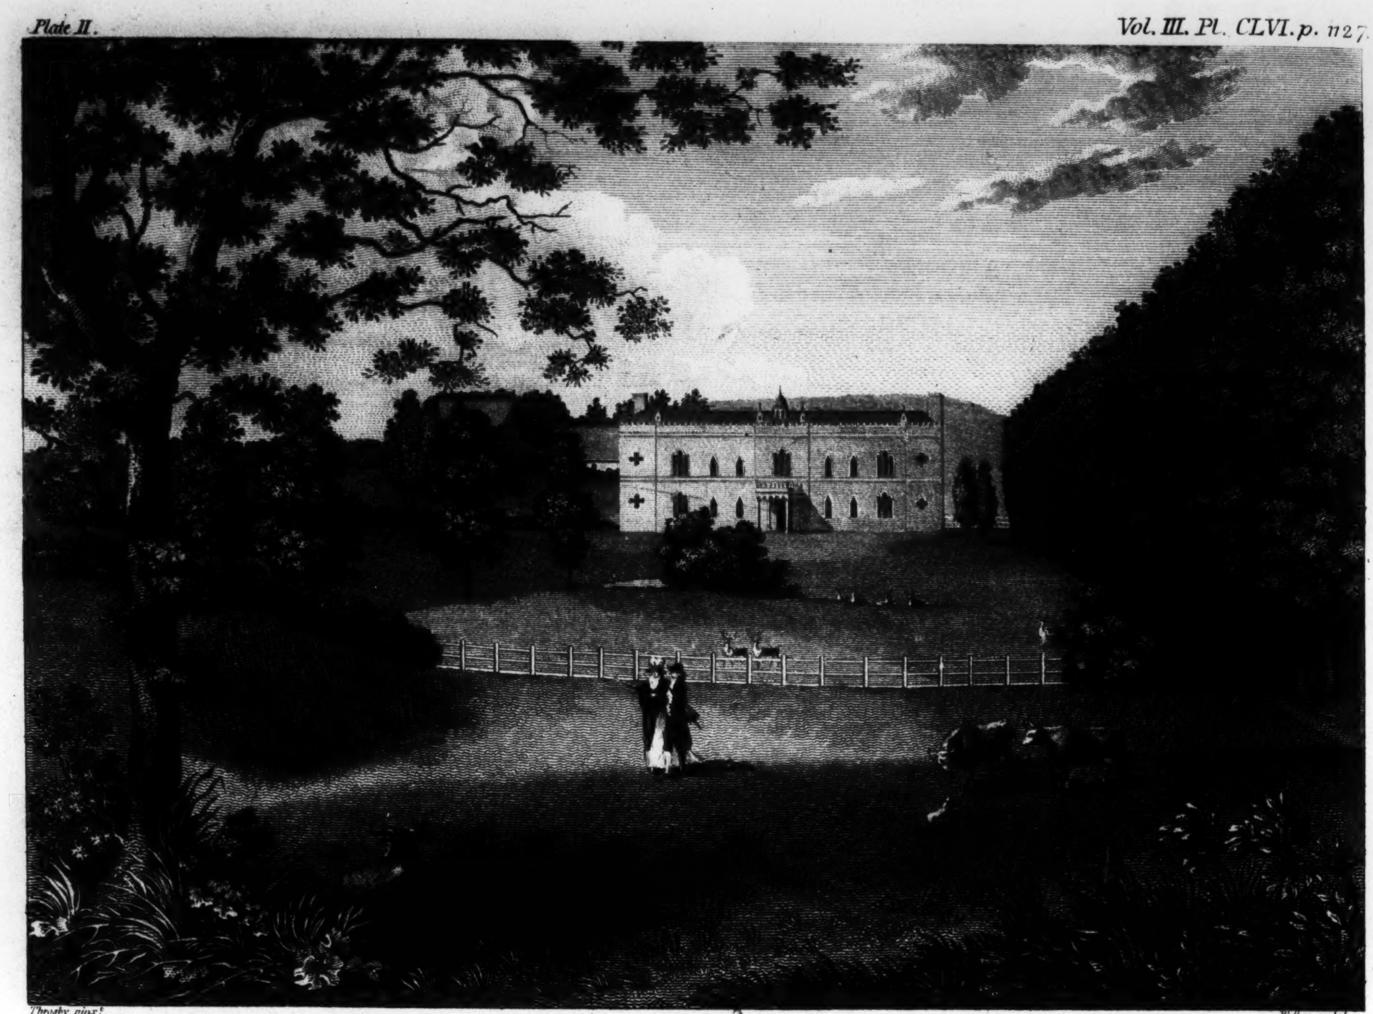
Throsby Junr. del.

W. Walker sc.

SCRAPTOFT HALL,

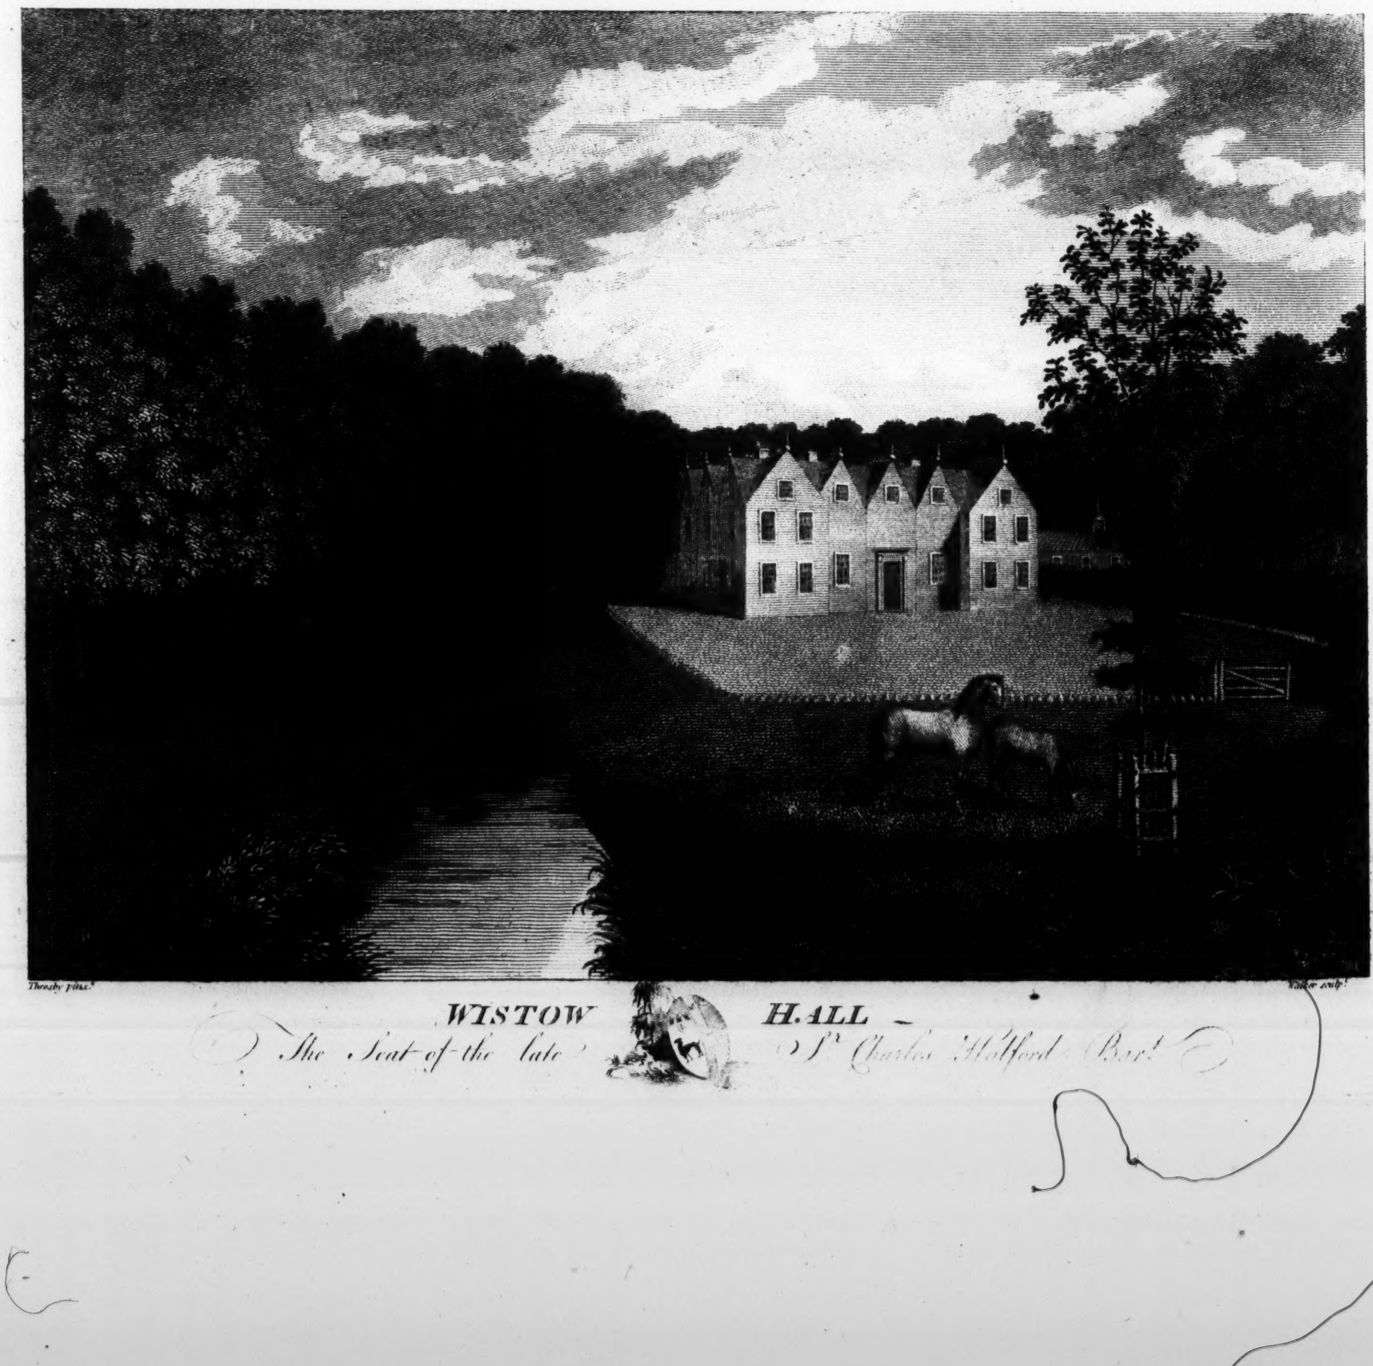
The Seat of Hartop Wigley Esqr

Plate II. Vol. III. Pt. CLVI. p. 1127.



Throsby pinx.t Walker sculp.t

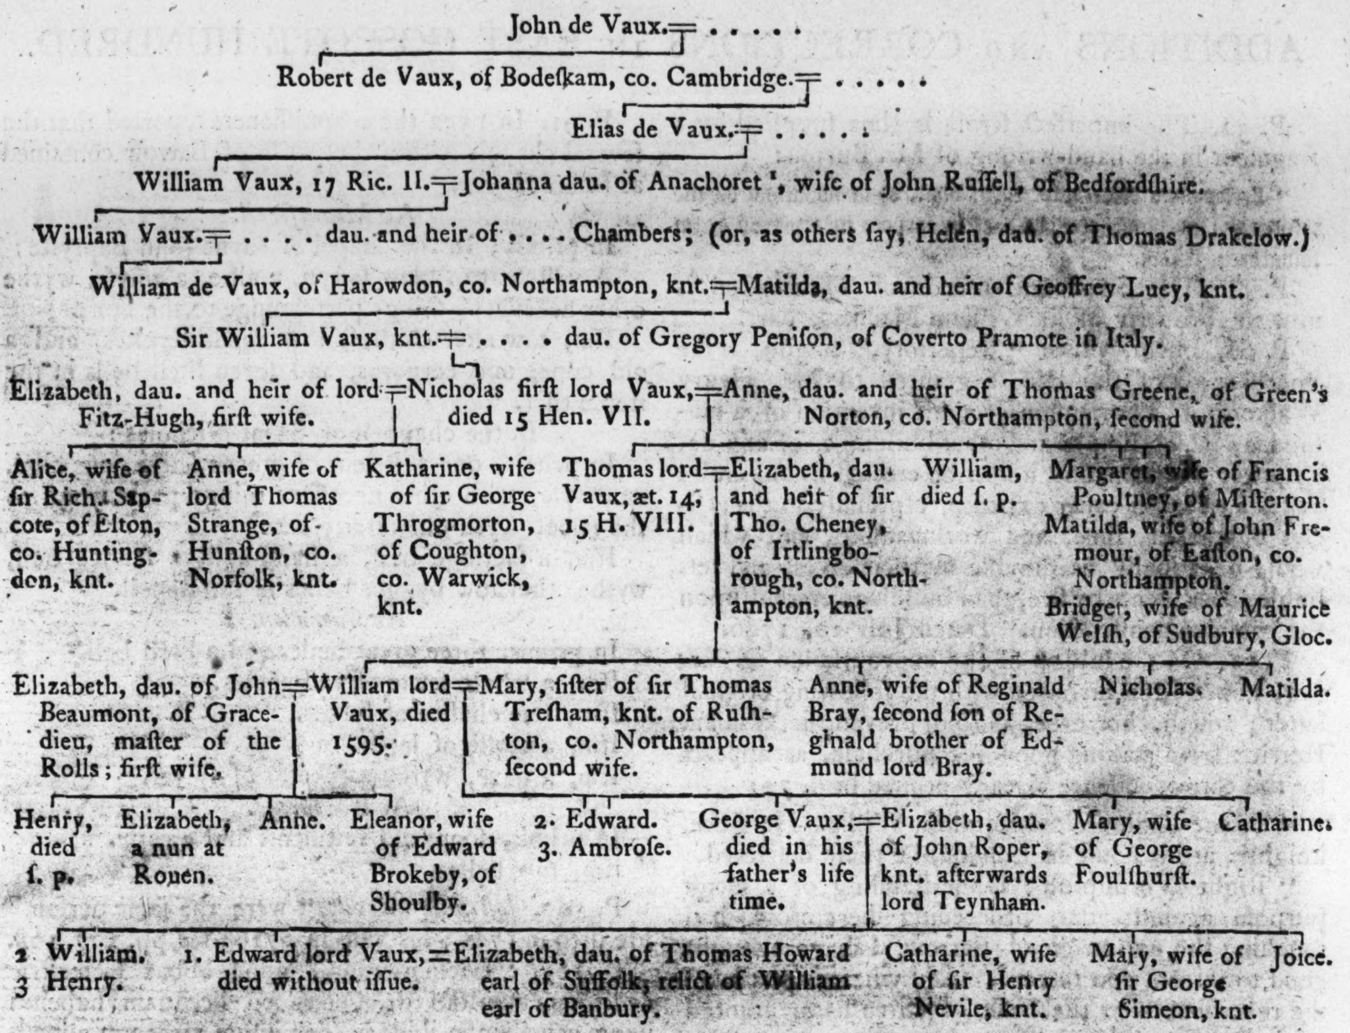
STOUGHTON HALL the Seat of Peers Anthony James Keck Esq.r



Throsby pinx.t Walker sculp.t

WISTOW HALL
The Seat of the late S.r Charles Halford Bar.t

Pedigree of VAUX, of SHANKTON. (From the Chetwynd MS.)



John de Vaux. = ...

Robert de Vaux, of Bodeſkam, co. Cambridge. = ...

Elias de Vaux. = ...

William Vaux, 17 Ric. II. = Johanna dau. of Anachoret [1], wife of John Ruſſell, of Bedfordſhire.

William Vaux. = ... dau. and heir of . . . . Chambers; (or, as others ſay, Helen, dau. of Thomas Drakelow.)

William de Vaux, of Harowdon, co. Northampton, knt. = Matilda, dau. and heir of Geoffrey Lucy, knt.

Sir William Vaux, knt. = ... dau. of Gregory Peniſon, of Coverto Pramote in Italy.

Elizabeth, dau. and heir of lord Fitz-Hugh, firſt wife. = Nicholas firſt lord Vaux, died 15 Hen. VII. = Anne, dau. and heir of Thomas Greene, of Green's Norton, co. Northampton, ſecond wife.

Alice, wife of ſir Rich. Sapcote, of Elton, co. Huntingdon, knt.

Anne, wife of lord Thomas Strange, of Hunſton, co. Norfolk, knt.

Katharine, wife of ſir George Throgmorton, of Coughton, co. Warwick, knt.

Thomas lord Vaux, æt. 14, 15 H. VIII. = Elizabeth, dau. and heir of ſir Tho. Cheney, of Irtlingborough, co. Northampton, knt.

William, died ſ. p.

Margaret, wife of Francis Poultney, of Miſterton.

Matilda, wife of John Fremour, of Eaſton, co. Northampton.

Bridget, wife of Maurice Welſh, of Sudbury, Gloc.

Elizabeth, dau. of John Beaumont, of Gracedieu, maſter of the Rolls; firſt wife. = William lord Vaux, died 1595. = Mary, ſiſter of ſir Thomas Treſham, knt. of Ruſhton, co. Northampton, ſecond wife.

Anne, wife of Reginald Bray, ſecond ſon of Reginald brother of Edmund lord Bray.

Nicholas.

Matilda.

Henry, died ſ. p.

Elizabeth, a nun at Rouen.

Anne.

Eleanor, wife of Edward Brokeby, of Shoulby.

2. Edward.
3. Ambroſe.

George Vaux, died in his father's life time. = Elizabeth, dau. of John Roper, knt. afterwards lord Teynham.

Mary, wife of George Foulſhurſt.

Catharine.

2 William.
3 Henry.

1. Edward lord Vaux, died without iſſue. = Elizabeth, dau. of Thomas Howard earl of Suffolk, relict of William earl of Banbury.

Catharine, wife of ſir Henry Nevile, knt.

Mary, wife of ſir George Simeon, knt.

Joice.

P. 817. In 1801, was advertiſed for ſale, the perpetual advowſon of the rectory or vicarage of Stockerſton (to which belong all manner of tithes ariſing within the pariſh, the parſonage-houſe, and about 37 acres and a half of valuable glebe-land); and the entire townſhip or hamlet of Stockerſton (the glebe part excepted), lying within a ring-fence, and compriſing, in a great variety of parcels, the manſion-houſe, then in the occupation of Robert Walker, eſq. who was alſo the occupier of a conſiderable quantity of the other land, which in the whole amounts to 935 acres, 2 roods, 20 perches. The land was deſcribed to be all rich meadow and grazing, and the houſes in good repair. In the woods there were growing 1237 large and valuable oak timber trees, ſuitable for his Majeſty's dock-yards, and 660 ſmaller oak-trees. There were alſo 164 timber and other trees of aſh and elm growing in the hedge-rows. The underwood is cut annually in certain proportions, which come round every 18 years; and conſiſts of very fine aſh, elm, and other poles.

P. 852. A view of Stoughton Hall is given in Plate CLVI.

P. 860. The eſtimation in which ſir George Beaumont was held by his contemporaries will appear by the following Elegy written at the time; and prefaced by a ſtatement, that "he was deſcended from an antient family, originally ſprung from the Kings of France and Jeruſalem. He ſucceeded his brother ſir Thomas, in title and eſtate, in the year 1690. In the year 1710, her late Majeſty Queen Anne appointed him one of the Commiſſioners for executing the office of Lord Privy Seal, and afterwards one of the Lords of the Admiralty; in which place he continued till the death of that excellent Princeſs. He repreſented the town of Leiceſter conſtantly in every Parliament ſince the death of King William. He was a true churchman, an impartial magiſtrate, a moſt affectionate brother, a kind maſter, a compaſſionate landlord, charitable to the poor, indefatigable in ſerving his friends, and courteous to all."

"Death is the common lot impoſ'd on all,
The great and virtuous with the vulgar fall:
Beaumont is dead! O much-lamented name!
Immortal as thy virtues be thy fame:
Mourn, mourn, ye Britons; your ſad loſs deplore:
The juſt and generous Beaumont is no more!

The trueſt Patriot and the beſt of Friends,
Ne'er wrong'd his Country for his private ends;
But did with vigour always them oppoſe,
Tho' ne'er ſo great, who were his country's foes.
Then mourn, ye Britons, &c.

Could we but have ſuch men in time to come,
For Patriots Britain might out-rival Rome:
For, Cato like, he lov'd his Country's cauſe,
Defended all their liberties and laws.
Then mourn, ye Britons, &c.

But it were endleſs his great worth to name,
Since every tongue now loudly ſounds his fame:
Nor am I worthy to attempt his praiſe,
His virtues will more laſting trophies raiſe.
Then mourn, ye Britons, your ſad loſs deplore;
The juſt, the generous Beaumont is no more!"

P. 865. Gerard Noel Edwards, eſq. of Catmuſe Lodge, co. Rutland, had the royal licence to take the arms and ſurname of Noel only, purſuant to the will of his maternal uncle Henry earl of Gainſborough[2].

Ib. On a black marble in Farnham church, Surrey: "Here lyeth the body of William Vernon, gent. who departed this life on the 27th day of February, in the year of our Lord 1692, being the 59th year of his age. He married Elizabeth, the daughter of William Halford, of Welham, in the county of Leiceſter, eſq. by whom he had iſſue two ſons, Walter[3] and Henry, who are both interred near this place."

P. 869. In the Regiſter of St. Benedict Grace, London, is this entry: "Andrew Haulford, gent. of the age of 60 yeares, died in this pariſh the ninth daie of February 1607, and was carried awaie the 17th day of ſame month, according to his will, to Wiſtow in Leiceſterſhire."

P. 872. Another view of Wiſtow Hall is given in Plate CLVI.

P. 877. l. 21—29, relate to Kilwardby in Aſhby de la Zouch. I was here miſled by Mr. Peck.

---

[1] She brought to her huſband the manor of Shankton, with that of Napton in Warwickſhire.

[2] Gazette, May 16, 1798.

[3] The Vernons came from Shropſhire into Surrey about the middle of the 17th century; and George died 1736, and ſir Charles 1762, both great-grandſons of this Walter.

ADDITIONS AND CORRECTIONS IN EAST GOSCOTE HUNDRED.

P. 32. The imperfect ſcroll is thus ſupplied by a fragment in the hand-writing of Mr. Burton:

"Credo quod Redemptor meus vivit, et in noviſſimo die me reſuſcitabit ad vitam eternam; et in corpore meo videbo deum ſalvatorem meum."

P. 59. The South-end manor of Thurmaſton is now the property of ſir William Manners, bart.

P. 66. In vol. VI. of "Repertory," p. 369, is the Specification of the Patent granted to Mr. Henry Walker, of Thurmaſton, for his invention of a method by which houſes and other buildings, of any deſcription or dimenſions, might be erected in one entire maſs, at a much eaſier expence, eſpecially in the articles of timber, lime, and workmanſhip, and which would be equally as durable in themſelves, and leſs liable to accidents by fire, than buildings erected upon the common conſtruction. Dated July 20, 1796.

P. 73. On the ſubject of the impropriation of Barrow, I have been favoured with the following original letter; which, however, did not prevent ſir William Herrick from making good his purchaſe, as appears by the correſpondence already printed in p. 73:

"To the Righte Worſhipfull Sir William Herricke, knighte, at his houſe in London, be theſe delivered.

"Right Worſhipfull; Underſtanding of a ſecret purpoſe againſt your proceeding heretofore had touching the parſonage of Barrow, I have thought good to inform you thereof. And whereas you have the reverſion, after the leaſe of three lives, granted of the parſonage houſe, with three tenements, glebe, and all manner of tythes and other commodities thereunto belonging, as I have ever in my underſtanding apprehended it; yet it is otherwiſe ſenſewred[1] by young Cave my townſman, farmer of the ſame; for, as I do hear, he is come up to London with an intentive mind and purpoſe to wreſt your former proceeding, being fully perſuaded that you only have the reverſion of the parſonage-houſe with the appurtenances, and no intereſt of the glebe-lands, or any other tythes belonging unto the ſame; and hath furniſhed himſelf with money to compound, and to work all meanes to deprive you thereof. I remember one Braham and his father did inform in the Chequer, to croſs my lord George earl of Huntingdon divers concealments of certain particulars of this parſonage; but what they mean I know not. But you ſhall find in the Pipe office both the grant-leaſe made by the abbot of Leiceſter, and the leaſe of this concealment which was granted to my lord George, whereupon they were forced to compound with him for all ſave the parſonage-houſe with ſome other ſmall commodities. Go with all expedition in this buſineſs that you think good, and prevent the danger which is intended againſt you, for there is but two lives betwixt you and him. The thing is better than haply you are perſuaded of; at the leaſt I ſee no reaſon you ſhould loſe that thro' a little remiſſneſs of ſome you have put in truſt; whereupon they takeing this advantage; being far more able to ſalve that, then he upon any ſuch default to purchaſe. I have heard this news by the partie, and commend it to your ſecret and good conſideration. Whether ſtanding true, or howſoever, I thought good to diſcharge both my conſcience and dutie, and wholly do leave it to your worſhip's conſideration; and do for this time leave you to the protection of the Moſt High. Not forgetting my humble dutie to your worſhip and my ladie, &c.

Your worſhipp's in all humble dewtie to command, Barrow, this 27th Oct. 1608. ROB. GRIFFITHE."

P. 76. l. 36. r. Thomas and Anne Greaſley.

P. 91. In 1552 the commiſſioners reported that the ſeveral chapels within the pariſh of Barrow contained as follows:

At Mountſorell.

In primis; In the chapel of Saynt John Baptyſte:

A veſtment of blew ſattyn, a albe, a amyſe, wythe other neceſſarye things perteyninge to the ſame.

It̃m, tow alter clothes, tow candillſtyckes, and a old cope, one corporas, and ſeven litell bells in the ſteple ther.

In the chappell of Saynt Nicholas:

In primis, one veſtment of greene ſattyn, one albe, an amyſe, with other neceſſary things partenynge to the ſame, wyth one alter clothe.

It̃m, a ſacringe bell, a hand-bell, a ſaunce bell, wythe other tow bygger belles in the ſtepell.

At Querndon.

In primis, three great belles and a litell bell.

It̃m, a whole ſewte of veſtmentes.

It̃m, one chalice of ſylver.

It̃m, a croſſe of latyn.

It̃m, a paxe, wythe a piketur of ſylver.

At Woodhouſe.

In primis, foore old veſtments and a cope.

It̃m, tow belles.

P. 100. laſt line. Read, "were the ſame perſon." He died in 1726; his wife in 1716; ſee pp. 107, 108.

P. 105. "Memorandum, quòd abbas Leiceſtrie dedit communitati de Querndon licentiam habendi unum capellanum ibidem, per ipſum vicarium eligendum, & abbati Leiceſtrie preſentandum, & per eundem approbandum, &, cùm ei expediens vel vicario fuerit, removendum; & predicta communitas abbati vel vicario ſingulis annis ad feſta Purificationis & Pentecoſtes XLs̃. per equales portiones pro dictâ cantariâ in perpetuum ſolvere teneatur. Et ſi aliquis aliquid aliud quàm in preſenti indenturâ expreſſè conceditur acceptare preſumpſerit in prejudicium abbatis vel vicarii, communitas tunc dictam cantariam perdet donec graciam abbatis valeat obtinere. Capellanus abbati & vicario obedientiam, indempnitatem, & fidelitatem promittet in omnibus, & jurabit quicquid in dictâ capellâ, à quocunque & cuicunque offerri contigerit, ad uſum abbatis & vicarii fidelitèr conſervetur; item dies aſſignetur in quibus communitas debent audire divina in eccleſiâ de Baro, & ibi offerre, ut eſt moris. Hec indentura bis in anno ſingulis annis in capellâ predictâ ſolempnitèr publicetur[2]."

P. 106. Francis Harris, farmer of the tithe corn and hay in Quorndon, ſued Matthew Middleton of Quorndon, for the tithe hay of 30 acres of meadow which he carried away in 1658, 1659, 1660, contrary to the ſtatute of 4 Nov. 2 Edw. VI.[3]

P. 107. col. 2. l. 63. add, "In the Reliquiæ Wottonianæ, 2d ed. p. 504. it is ſaid to have been written on the death of ſir Albert Morton's wife:

"He firſt deceas'd; ſhe for a moment tried
To live without him, lik'd it not, and died."

Sir Henry ſeems to have been indebted to Eraſmus for the thought:

"Non debet uxori ſupereſſe maritus amatæ, Turtur ut exemptæ commoriens ſociæ."
Eraſmi in Brunonem Amerbachium.

P. 110. In compiling the article of Woodhouſe, I was under ſome difficulty to find a correſponding name for that village in the record of Domeſday; but have now no doubt of its being the Udecote[4] of that valuable ſurvey; which is deſcribed as being then held by John under Henry de Ferrieres; and where, in the time of king Edward, two ploughs had been employed.

---

[1] Sic; for cenſured.

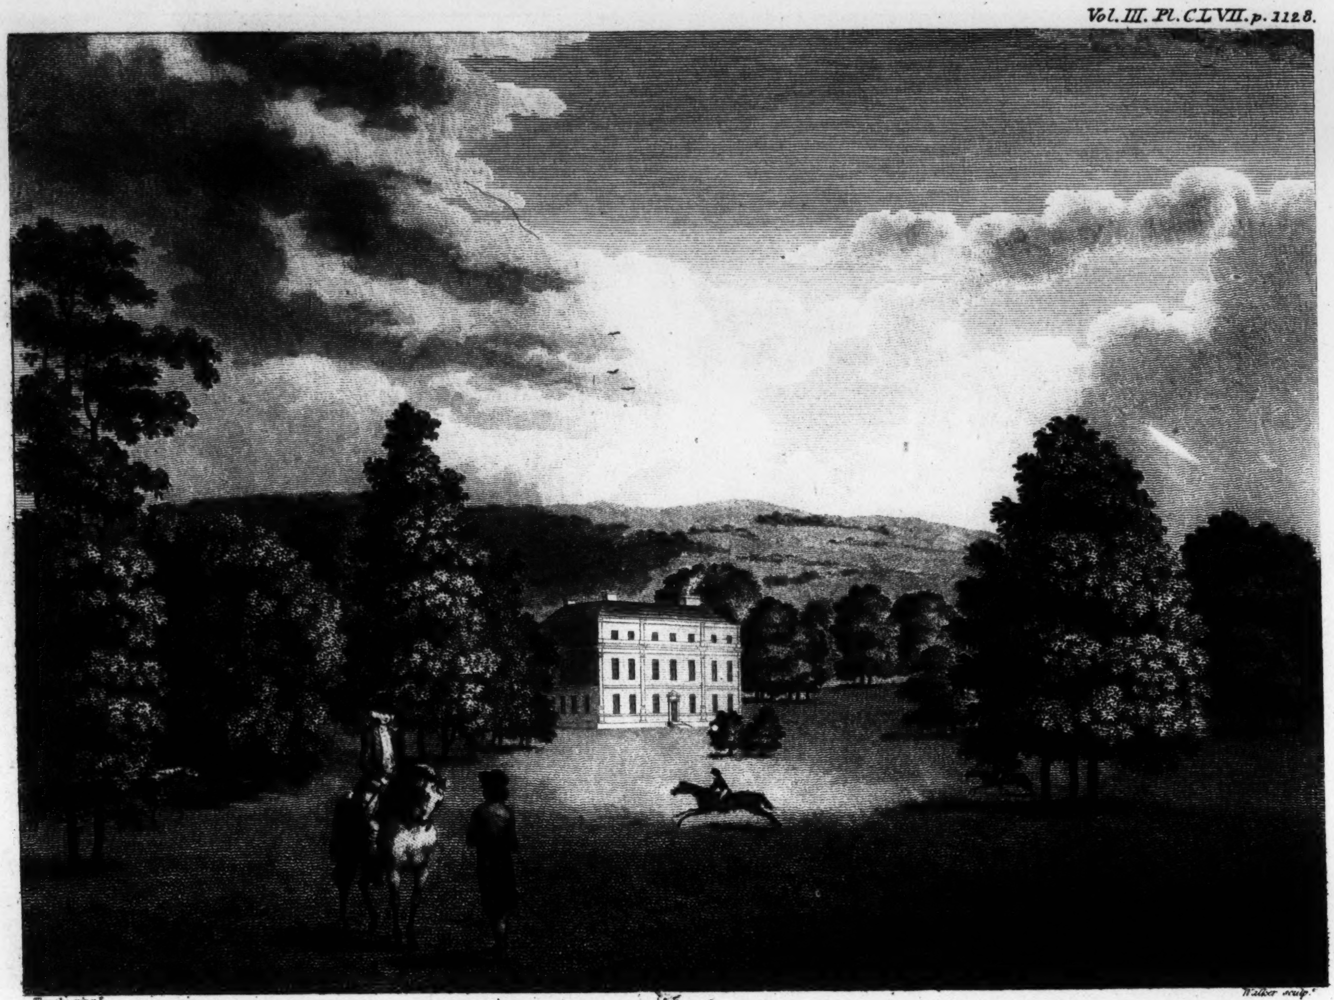
[2] Charyte's Rentale, fol. cxxiii.

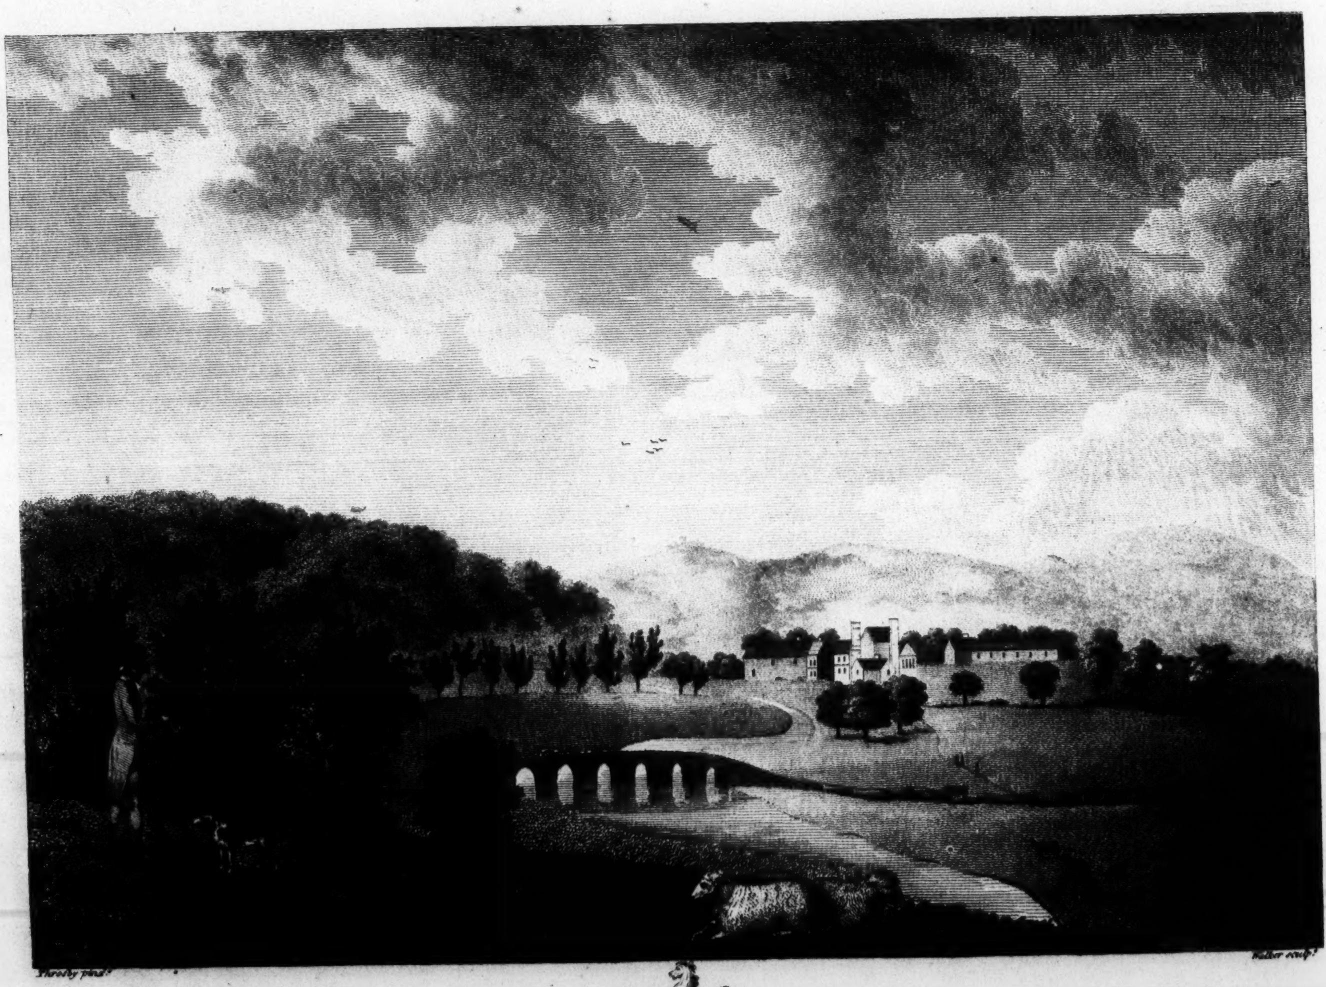
[3] Carte, MS. from ſir Thomas Robinſon's Book of Entries, 1684, p. 201.

[4] In an inquiſition in 1463, after the attainder of John viſcount Beaumont, it is ſtyled Wodecote; ſee p. 110. In Mr. Chadwick's copy of the Greſeley MS. at Mancheſter College (the ſame MS. which is cited in p. 980, note 4, and frequently afterward, as copied by Dr. Pegge) are ſeveral deeds of the De Wodecotes, atteſted by perſons named de Threngeſtone. Thringſton and Oſgathorp adjoin. In p. 40 of Mr. Chadwick's ſaid copy is found, "Rob'tus de Wodecote de Oſgarthorpe, 1326," and "Will'ms de Wodecote de Threngeſton 22° Edw. III."



Throsby pinx.t Walker sculp.t

BEAUMANOR PARK HALL,
The Seat of W.m Herrick Esq.r



Throsby pinx.t Walker sculp.t

QUORNDON HALL,
The Seat of Hugo Meynel Esq.r

ployed. One plough was in the demeſne at the time of the ſurvey; and there was then a wood three furlongs long and three broad. This manor had been valued but at twelve-pence in the time of the Confeſſor; but at the ſurvey was worth ten ſhillings[1].

In the Teſta de Nevill[2], "dimidia carucatæ" is noticed in Wodeſcote and Bothorpe; but this ſeems to refer to a ſmall part of the hamlet of Over Seale, which is ſtill called Wodland.

P. 108. Mr. Robert Stevens, of Loughborough, now aged 89, has good pictures of Thomas Farnham and his ſiſter Mrs. Anne Farnham, the mother-in-law of the ſaid Mr. Stevens.

P. 113. Daniel Chapman reſigned Woodhouſe ſchool at Midſummer 1802; and Edward Birch was appointed in October 1802.

June 4, 1803, the biſhop of Lincoln conſecrated an additional piece of ground adjoining Woodhouſe church yard for an enlargement of the burial ground, the former one being much too ſmall. For this purpoſe, four cottages, with ſmall gardens to each, which paid ſuit to Beaumanor court, and were occupied as dwellings for the pariſh poor, were demoliſhed. On one of the bells of Woodhouſe is "1590;" on the other "1619, God ſave the King."

P. 130. note 5. for "cunning," r. "canine."

P. 143. "Manerium de Beawmanor in parochiâ de Baroo eſt, pertinens ad capellam vel villam de Wodhowſe[3]."

P. 144. col. 2. l. 12—15, relates to Catharine the widow of Charles Brandon duke of Suffolk[4].—"The moſt rare and excellent Hiſtory of the Dutcheſs of Suffolk, and her Huſband Richard Bertie's Calamity," was publiſhed in the reign of queen Elizabeth, and reprinted in a folio ſheet, with wood-cuts, in 1738. The dutcheſs, in the church porch of St. Willebrode, at Weſel in Germany, fell in labour, and was delivered of a ſon called Peregrine, afterward lord Willoughby of Ereſby. An infant daughter, the companion of her flight, was afterward counteſs of Kent.

P. 148. Thomas Bond, eſq. (grandfather to old Mary Herrick) was mayor of Coventry in 1497, and died March 18, 1506. The particulars of his almſhouſes (to which his ſon ſir John Bond was alſo a benefactor) may be ſeen in "An Account of the many and great Loans, Benefactions, and Charities, belonging to the City of Coventry, 1733," 8vo. pp. 25—37[5].

P. 150. By deeds of leaſe and releaſe, dated May 25 and 26, 37 Eliz. 1596, for the conſideration of £1600, ſir George Haſtings of Gopſall conveyed to William Hericke, eſq. of London (for whom the purchaſe had been made by his brother Robert Hericke of Leiceſter, gent.), the paſture called The Viccarie Partie, containing 20 acres, which had been demiſed Feb. 15, 1585-6, to Chriſtopher Freman, at a rent of £10. 13*s*. 8*d*. and the paſture called New Cloſe, containing 20 acres, and alſo the paſture called Moglings, all within the pariſh of Barrow; and all the herbage and pannage of the park of Beaumanor, with all the houſes and buildings in the ſaid park; the water-mills in the pariſh of Barrow; three pieces of meadow in the fields of Quorndon, parcel of the queen's manor of Beaumanor, and part of the poſſeſſions of Henry late duke of Suffolk, attainted (all which had been aſſigned, Feb. 20, 1585-6, to Adrian Stokes, of Beaumanor, eſq. and afterwards held by William Stokes, eſq. as executor to his brother; who conveyed the ſame, April 7, 1590, to ſir George Haſtings); including alſo all the queen's woooods and underwoods growing on the lands of Geffrey Aſſer within the manor of Beaumanor, and the reverſionary intereſt of a leaſe which had been granted, May 14, 1586, to Edward Hawthyn, at a rent of £19. 18*s*. 5*d*. of "all and ſingular the meſſuages, mills, lands, tenements, &c. within the manor of Beaumanor, ſituate in the hamlets of Barrow, Woodthorpe, Quorndon, Woodhouſe, and Mountſorell," which had been demiſed Sept. 10, 1572, to ſir Henry Brooke, alias Cobham, knt. for 21 years, to take place on the expiration of an under leaſe for 21 years, dated March 12, 1563-4, to Adrian Stokes; which intereſt Edward Hamblyn had conveyed, May 15, 1586, to William Stokes; who, June 3, 1587, had conveyed them to ſir George Haſtings[6].—The earl of Eſſex, Thomas Crumpton, Robert Wright, and Gilly Meyrick, appear alſo to have held leaſes from the Crown for 21 years, of certain parts of the manor of Beaumanor; all which were alſo bought in by Mr. Hericke; who obtained from queen Elizabeth, Aug. 18, 1599, a new grant of her highneſs's manors of Beaumanor, with free warren, the Park, Mogling Wood, New Cloſe, Vicary Partie, water-mills, rivers, &c. extending to Quorn, Barrow, Mountſorell, Woodhouſe, and Woodthorpe, with the Royalties in the Foreſt of Charnwood[7].

Additional views of Beaumanor and Quorndon Halls are given in Plate CLVII.

P. 151. In 1607 a controverſy aroſe, between the knights aldermen and knights-commoners of the city of London, about precedence; the latter alledging it was due to the ſeniority of knighthood; but the former not only inſiſted upon its being due to an alderman, though a junior knight, but likewiſe, though not a knight, it was due to an alderman as a governor of the city, who, by the immunities thereof, had a power of calling a wardmote; therefore the knights-commoners in his ward muſt be inferior to him, becauſe they, according to the conſtitutions of the city, are obliged to obey his ſummons as head of the ward. But diſputes continuimg to increaſe, occaſioned by the knights-commoners ladies, who imagined it to be highly derogatory to their honour to give place to the ladies of junior knights, even though of aldermen; this inflamed matters to ſuch a degree, that the lord mayor and aldermen judged it neceſſary, by a petition of the following tenor, humbly to beſeech the king, that the affair in diſpute might be referred to the determination of the lords commiſſioners of the marſhal's office: "That whereas it hath pleaſed your moſt excellent majeſty, of your princely favour, both at your majeſty's coronation and ſithence, to dignify your ſuppliants with the degree of knighthood, as alſo certain commoners yet keeping ſhops, and continuing their trades within the city; and foraſmuch as ſome of thoſe knights-commoners do pretend to a priority before ſome of your ſuppliants later knighted, and ſtand with them in contention for place and ſuperiority in precedency at public meetings, even in their own wards and juriſdictions, contrary to the moſt ſeemly and beautiful order of the ſaid city; your ſuppliants moſt humbly beſeech that your majeſty ſhall be pleaſed to recommend the judicial hearing and determination of this difference unto the right honourable the lords in commiſſion for the office of earl marſhal of England; to the end that, the antient cuſtoms and privileges being rightly underſtood, their lordſhips may take ſuch order therein, as your highneſs be no further troubled therewith, nor the ſettled order of the city's quiet government hereafter prejudiced nor diſturbed."—On the receipt and peruſal of this petition, James, out of his great regard to the peace of the city, was graciouſly pleaſed to refer the ſame by the following order wrote thereunder: "At the court at Newmarket, March 12, 1607. His majeſty, having a gracious reſpect to the lord mayor and aldermen of his highneſs's city of London, is pleaſed to refer the conſideration of this petition unto the lords commiſſioners for the office of earl marſhal of England; to the end that ſuch order may be ſet down in the differences mentioned in this petition touching precedency, as ſhall be convenient for the preſervation of the credit of ſuch as, under his highneſs, have authority in the government of the city."—The ſaid lords commiſſioners, in obedience to the royal precept, ſummoned both parties to attend them with their ſeveral pretenſions and allegations in reſpect to the point in controverſy; but the knights-commoners not attending at any of the times appointed for hearing and determining the matter in diſpute, the lords referees made this decree: "At a Marſhal's court holden at Whitehall, on Wedneſday morning, the 19th of February, 1611. Whereas, upon the humble petition of the mayor, knights and aldermen of the city of London, exhibited to the king's moſt excellent majeſty, complaining, that divers citizens and commoners of the ſaid city, being knighted, did challenge precedency of place before the aldermen, at public meetings within the city; it pleaſed his majeſty, for the upholding of the antient and ſeemly orders of the ſaid city, to refer the conſideration of that difference unto the ſaid lords commiſſioners, to the end ſuch order might be ſet down as might ſtand with the preſervation of the credit and reputation of ſuch as under his highneſs had authority in the government of the ſaid city. And whereas the ſaid lords commiſſioners, having prefixed and appointed two ſeveral days to both parties for the hearing and ending of the ſaid difference, at both which days the ſaid knights-commoners made default; their lordſhips did thereupon appoint the 19th day of November then following, and now laſt paſt, to both the ſaid parties peremptorily, to attend with their counſel at Whitehall, to receive ſuch abſolute and final determination in the cauſe as to juſtice ſhould appertain; and that either of the ſaid parties failing, or making default, ſhould be adjudged to have thereby concluded themſelves for queſtioning the ſaid difference any more thereafter. Foraſmuch as the ſaid knights-commoners did then alſo make default, and alledging that they would no longer ſtand in oppoſition to the premiſes; their lordſhips have thereupon ordered, that the ſaid aldermen ſhall have and take place and ſuperiority in precedency within the city before the ſaid knights-commoners which now are freemen or citizens of the ſaid city, and ſuch other citizens or commoners as hereafter ſhall be made bachelor-knights, until we the ſaid lords commiſſioners, upon full hearing of the cauſe, and the proofs and allegations on both parts, ſhall ſee good cauſe to order and adjudge the contrary."—This tedious, troubleſome, and chargeable conteſt was owing to the haughty deportment of Hickes[1] and Herrick[1] (and their imperious wives[2]) knights-commoners of the city, who at their own expence maintained this chargeable ſuit for divers years againſt the court of aldermen. But at laſt they dropt it in a ſcandalous manner, not daring to abide the ſentence of the lords referees[3].

---

[1] "Johannes tenet de Henrico in Udecote 2 carucatas terræ. Tempore Regis Edwardi erant ibi 2 carucæ. In dominico eſt una. Silva 3 quarentenarum longitudinis, et 3 latitudinis. Valuit 12 denarios; modò 10 ſolidos." Domeſday, fol. 233. b. 1.

[2] Vol. I. p. xlvii.

[3] Charyte's Rentale, fol. xix.

[4] See Dugdale, Baron. Angl. vol. II. p. 108.

[5] See alſo Dugdale's Warwickſhire, vol. I p. 193.

[6] Harl. MSS. 3881. fol. 58. b.

[7] From the original grant.

P. 152. July 2, 1624, a petition was preſented to king James I. by ſir Humphry May, ſir Nicholas Tufton, ſir William Heyreck, ſir Arthur Ingram, knights, and others, his Majeſty's ſervants, for a new leaſe of ſea-coals; on which a reference was granted to ſir Richard Weſton, knt. chancellor of the exchequer, to conſider, and certify to his majeſty; upon whoſe report, a leaſe was granted at the court at Theobalds, Dec. 21; and the attorney general was directed to prepare a book for the royal ſignature[4].

Ibid. Thomas Bennet, eſq. alderman of London, died April 19, 1620, and was interred in the Mercers chapel. He married Dorothy daughter of Richard May, of London, eſq. and had three ſons, Richard, Thomas, and Humfrey, all unmarried; and ſeven daughters; Mary, married to Richard Lewknor, of Weſdon, Suſſex; Dorothy, married to ſir Gamaliel Capell, of Rochewode hall, Eſſex, knt.; 3. Elizabeth; 4. Anne; 5. Margaret; 6. Rebecca; 7. Joan[5].

P. 154. The following article is extracted from the Regiſters of Allhallows church in Bread-ſtreet[6]:

"1645, the 3d of July, was buried my lady Hearicke. She lyeth in the chancel at the upper end, under the great ſtone next to the veſtry."

P. 156. "Richard Herricke born May 25, 1600; and was admitted at Merchant Taylors ſchool, Jan. 31, 1613:—"Roger Heyricke was born in May 1608, and admitted of the ſame Jan. 9, 1614[7]."

Roger Heyrick (a King's ſcholar at Weſtminſter) was elected to Chriſt Church in 1624.

Gawen Hyereck, rector of Marſton in Kent 1583, died in 1614. Q. if not alſo one of the ſix preachers at Canterbury[8]?

P. 159. The following letter from the Warden of Mancheſter, who in the paper from which it is taken is ſtyled "a godly miniſter," was addreſſed to the lady Herrick in London, June 7, 1644:

"My humble dutie remembred, &c. Lankaſhire's ſad houre of tentation is now upon it. Prince Rupert, with 20,000 at leaſt, is in the heart of the county. He marched with his armie within three miles of Mancheſter, and grievouſly plundered, taking generally all men with him, and heatheniſhly raviſhing women; the ſad effects of which appeares in ſome killing of themſelves, in others running out of their wits. On Tueſday, the day before the publike faſt, he ſtormed Bolton, the next garriſon towne to us, eight miles from us, the next towne for religion to Mancheſter in all the countie, unto which many of God's deare ſervants were fled. In an houres ſpace he tooke it, denying quarter to any, whether ſouldiers or men in the houſes, till the ſword, drunke with bloud, was ſheathed. 1500 two daies after buried, 500 taken priſoners; not a man left in the towne, the rich in the towne aſking bread, and none to be had. From thence with his former crueltie he marched forward; at this preſent facing Warrington, aſſaulting Leverpole. Our hearts tremble for both, if God give them up: we are the laſt to be ſwallowed. Our towne is full of ſouldiers, a compleate regiment of Hylanders ſent to us, and Sir John Meldrome to command in chiefe. Our inhabitants are over-burthened with billeting; and the rich will become poore, the poore beggars. God gives us yet opportunity of praying; two publike faſts in the week, and two or three houres every day praying in the church. The ſiege of York keeps off all helpe from us, yet that proſpers; they have made their approach within piſtol ſhot, taken the ſuburbs, raiſed a royall batterie, which commands the town: if our ſinnes hinder not, we hope God will ſuddenly give up that city. They are before the towne with the earl of Mancheſter's forces, 40,000. Lankaſhire now the alone deſolate oppreſſed county, pray for us.

Yours in all duty, R. HERRICK[9]."

P. 174. "From Brodegate to Bellegrave village a four miles by woddy and paſture grounde. This village is about a mile lower on Sore river then Leiceſter is; and I came over a great ſtone bridge or I entered into it. There dwelleth a gentleman by the name of Bellegrave, a man of a 50*li.* of poſſeſſions by the yere. There is alſo another mene gentilman of the Bellegraves in Leiceſterſhire. From Bellegrave to Ingreſby is four miles, partely by corne, paſture, and woddy ground[10]."

P. 175. A capital meſſuage in Belgrave, with other tenements, and with lands, meadows, paſtures, waters, and fiſheries, parcel of the poſſeſſions of Gerendon abbey, at the time of the diſſolution were under leaſe to John Clarke of Belgrave and Joan his wife, by indenture ſealed with the conventual ſeal, in 1522, for 20 years, at the rent of £2. 6*s.* 8*d.*[11] Theſe were granted in 1541, to Thomas earl of Rutland in fee[12].

The nunnery of Langley had alſo certain lands here[13].

---

[1] Sir Baptiſt Hickes (afterwards created viſcount Campden) and ſir William Herrick had both been elected aldermen; and each of them had paid the uſual fine for being excuſed from ſerving the office. See pp. 150, 151.

[2] Lady Hickes and lady Herrick were ſiſters, daughters of Richard May, eſq. of Mayfield, Suſſex.

[3] New and Compleat Survey of London, by a Citizen and Native of London [Jacob Ilive], 1742, vol. I. p. 422—424.

[4] Harl. MSS. 1327, p. 8. b.

[5] Funeral Certificates in the College of Arms, I. 22. p. 30; entered by Dorothy his wife; and his ſons Richard and Thomas.

[6] At this church, ſir Arthur Heſilrige was married, June 26, 1634, to his ſecond wife Dorothy Grevill, ſiſter to Robert lord Brooke. Pariſh Regiſter.

[7] Extracted from the Probation book of the ſchool.

[8] Haſted's Kent, vol. II. p. 64; and Thorpe's Regiſtrum Roffenſe, p. 989.

[9] "A particular Relation of the moſt remarkable Occurrences from the united Forces in the North, &c. June 10, 1644."

[10] Leland's Itinerary, vol. I. p. 20.

[11] Miniſters or Bailiffs Accompts, 31 Henry VIII. Augmentation office.

[12] The grant is in the Augmentation office.

[13] Miniſters Accompts, ut ſupra.

The advowſon of the parſonage of Belgrave was granted by the King, 1 Edward VI. to Richard Sampſon, Biſhop of Coventry and Lichfield[1].

P. 178. Prior de Ware habet portionem in eccleſiâ de Belgrave, taxatam ad x marcas. Inde decima VI*s.* VIII*d.*[2]

P. 187. In 1552, the commiſſioners reported that the church of Burſtall contained,

In primis, a challice.

It̃m, an old cope of red velvet, and a veſtment wythe that y^t^ belongethe thereunto.

It̃m, thre belles and a saunctes bell.

P. 188. Sir John Gifford, bart. died in 1736; when the title became extinct[3].

P. 200. In Auguſt 1621, the marquis of Buckingham entertained the King at Burley. See p. 213.

P. 204. "In 1627, the King ſet forth men and ſhips to the iſle of Rhé in France under the conduct of Buckingham. We loſt our beſt men in that ſcurvy deſign, who were no better than butchered by the French, through the indiſcretion of ſome that had principal command therein. Give me leave to relate what I had from the mouth of an eminent colonel, employed in that ſucceſsleſs expedition, and one of the council of war, and a ſworn enemy to the duke. Buckingham, I well know, was extremely blamed about the loſs of our men, the day of their retreat into the ſhips. The matter was thus carried. The night before the retreat, the duke called a council of war, and there ſhewed them the neceſſity of their retreat the next day, and that, himſelf in martial diſcipline being wholly unexperienced, he left the managing of the next day's action to the ordering of the council of war, offering the ſervice of his own perſon unto any hazard whatever as far as any private ſoldier. The council committed the management of their retreat, by a free conſent, unto old ſir William Courtney, a heavy, dull, covetous, old man, who, having been 20 or 30 years a private captain in Holland, was, by ſir John Borrows's means, made colonel in that expedition. And Burrows being now dead, and Courtney the oldeſt colonel, it was referred unto him how with ſafety to bring off our men. But he, either through want of judgment or forgetfulneſs, having not ſufficiently provided for ſecurity of our rear, our men were moſt unfortunately cut to pieces: and had not ſir Pierce Croſby with 8000 Iriſh made good the retreat, all our men had been loſt. Courtney himſelf fell into a ſalt-pan in the defeat, and was ſaved by means of his man's Anthony's crying, "O, ſave my captain!" But the poor fellow loſt his own life, and ſaved his maſter's. A bullet by chance, during their ſtay in that iſland, was ſhot at the ſaid Courtney; and he having a piece of gold of twenty-one ſhillings price in his fob, the bullet light there, but the gold and ſituation was preſerved. Courtney, at his return, ſhewed me the gold, and told me the ſtory. The King, hearing of our ſlip at the Iſle of Rhé, and landing of the duke, inſtead of being angry at the loſs of ſo many gallant men, or calling him to account, ſent to comfort the duke, deſiring that he ſhould not be troubled at the loſs, for the chance of war was a game[4]."

P. 207. "An aged gentleman, one Parker as I remember, having formerly belonged unto the duke, or of great acquaintance with the duke's father, and now retired, had a dæmon appeared ſeveral times unto him, in the ſhape or image of ſir George Villiers, the duke's father. This dæmon walked many times in Parker's bedchamber, without any action of terror, noiſe, hurt, or ſpeech; but at laſt one night broke out into theſe words: 'Mr. Parker, I know you loved me formerly, and my ſon George at this time very well: I would have you go from me, you know me very well to be his father, to ſir George Villiers of Leiceſterſhire, and from me acquaint him with theſe and theſe particulars, &c. and that he above all refrain the company of ſuch and ſuch (whom he then nominated), or elſe he will come to deſtruction, and that ſuddenly:' Parker did partly, though a very diſcreet man, imagine he himſelf was in a dream all this time; and being unwilling to proceed upon no better ground, he forbore addreſſing himſelf to the duke; for he conceived, if he ſhould acquaint the duke with the words of his father, and the manner of his appearance unto him (ſuch apparitions being not uſual), that he ſhould be laughed at, and thought to dote, being he was aged. Some few nights paſſed without further trouble to the old man. But, not very many nights after, old ſir George Villiers appeared again, walked quick and furiouſly in the room, ſeemed angry with Mr. Parker, and at laſt ſaid, 'Mr. Parker, I thought you had been my friend ſo much, and loved my ſon George ſo well, that you would have acquainted him with what I deſired; but yet I know that you have not done it. By all the friendſhip that ever was between you and me, and the great reſpect you bear my ſon, I deſire you to deliver what I formerly commanded you unto my ſon.' The old man, ſeeing himſelf thus ſolicited in this manner, promiſed the dæmon he would; but firſt argued it thus: 'That the duke was not eaſy to be ſpoke withal; and that he would account him a vain man to come with ſuch a meſſage from the dead; nor did he conceive the duke would give any credit unto him.' Whereunto the dæmon thus anſwered, 'If he will not believe you have this diſcourſe from me, tell him of ſuch a ſecret,' and named it, 'which he knows none in the world ever knew but myſelf and he.' Mr. Parker being now well ſatisfied that he was not aſleep, or that the apparition was a vain deluſion, took a fit opportunity therefore, and ſeriouſly acquainted the duke with his father's words, and the manner of his apparition. The duke heartily laughed at the relation, which put old Parker to a ſtand; but at laſt he aſſumed courage, and told the duke that he acquainted his father's ghoſt with what he now found to be true, in ſcorn and deriſion; 'but, my lord,' ſaith he, 'your father bid me acquaint you by this token, and he ſaid it was ſuch as none in the world but your two ſelves did yet know.' Hereat the duke was amazed, and much aſtoniſhed; but took no notice or warning hereof, keeping the ſame company ſtill, adviſing with ſuch counſellors, and performing ſuch actions, as his father had countermanded. Shortly after, old ſir George Villiers, in a very quiet but ſorrowful poſture, appears again unto Mr. Parker; and ſaid, 'Mr. Parker, I know you delivered my words unto George my ſon. I thank you for ſo doing. But he ſlighted them; and now I only requeſt this more at your hands, that once again you repair unto my ſon, and tell him, if he will not amend, and follow the example I have given him, this knife, or dagger,' and with that he pulled a knife or dagger from under his gown, 'ſhall end him; and do you, Mr. Parker, ſet your houſe in order, for you ſhall die at the ſame time.' Mr. Parker once more engaged, though very unwillingly, to acquaint the duke with this laſt meſſage, and ſo did; but the duke deſired him to trouble him no further with ſuch meſſages and dreams, telling him, he perceived he was now an old man, and doted. And, within a month after, meeting Mr. Parker on Lambeth-bridge: 'Now, Mr. Parker, what ſay you of your dream?' Who only returned, 'Sir, I wiſh it may never have ſucceſs,' &c. But, within ſix weeks after, he was ſtabbed with a knife, according to his father's admonition beforehand; and Mr. Parker died ſoon after he had ſeen the dream or viſion performed[5]."

P. 213. "My Lord of Buckingham's welcome to the King at Burley (written by Sir John Beaumont):

"Sir, you have ever ſhin'd upon me bright,
But now you ſtrike and dazzle me with light:
You, England's radiant Sun, vouchſafe to grace
My houſe, a ſphere too little and too baſe.
My Burley, as a cabinet, contains
The gem of Europe, which, from golden veins
Of glorious Princes, to this height is grown,
And joins their precious virtues all in one:
When I your praiſe would to the world profeſs,
My thoughts with zeal and earneſt fervour preſs

---

[1] Grants in the Augmentation office.
[2] Nero D. X fol. 166.
[3] Gent. Mag. vol. LXX. p. 538.
[4] Lilly, Remarks on Monarchy, 1651.
[5] Lilly's Life, ed. 1774, pp. 202—206.

Which ſhould be firſt, and their officious ſtrife
Reſtrains my hand from painting you to life:
I write, and having written I deſtroy,
Becauſe my lines have bounds, but not my joy."

P. 217. "Nottingham, April 6, 1668. This town having pitched upon Nathan Wrighte of Leiceſter, eſq. (a ſober gentleman, and of good abilities in his profeſſion) for their deputy recorder, and having obtained his grace the duke of Newcaſtle's concurrence and approbation, he is accordingly ſettled therein[1]."

P. 218. Mr. Recorder Wrighte died June 4, 1765, on a viſit to his relation the earl of Stamford at Envill; where he is thus remembered on a ſmall neat marble monument: "Near this place lie the remains of William Wrighte, eſq. late recorder of Leiceſter, youngeſt ſon of ſir Nathan Wrighte, knight, lord keeper of the great ſeal of England.. He died June the 4th, 1765, aged 71."

The Recorder had one ſon, Nathan, who was born Aug. 25, 1735; and died an infant, March 15, 1735-6[2].

P. 220.—Roger Columbell, eſq. of Darley in the Dale, co. Derby. = Eleanor, da. and heireſs of Henry Sacheverell, of Ratcliff upon Soare, co. Nottingham, eſq.

John Columbell, eſq. of Darley in the Dale, ob. Feb. 1659. = Catherine Hickman, ſiſter of lord Windſor.

John Columbell, eſq. died an infant, in Italy.
Elizabeth, died an infant.
William Marbury, of Marbury, c. Cheſter, eſq. = Catherine Columbell, ſiſter and heireſs of John Columbell, died ſ. p. She and her huſband, Mr. Marbury, ſold the principal part of her paternal eſtate, and amongſt the reſt the eſtate at Lockington.

P. 228. June 22, 1554, the advowſon of Coſſington, with a meſſuage and one yard land there, were conveyed to Thomas Babington, eſq. by Thomas Reeve and George Cotton, "pro quadam competenti pecunie ſumma;" and peaceable poſſeſſion was given, Sept. 30, in the preſence of William Sqyer of Quorndon, Kadwaliter app Richardes of Beaumanor, gent. Thomas Wallys of Coſſington, and many others.

Ibid. In October 1653, a complaint occurs, from Matthew Babington, eſq. of Rothley, to the lords commiſſioners for the cuſtody of the great ſeal, concerning a yard land and other hereditaments in Coſſington, which many years before had been put into the poſſeſſion of Hugh Booth, formerly rector of Coſſington, in lieu of the ſmall tithes of ſix yard lands, and land called Doctor's Orchard, or Doctor's Holme; deſiring that commiſſioners might examine on oath William Staveley, clerk, the incumbent, touching the ſituation of the land, &c.; Mr. Babington not being able to produce a deed in which there was a terrier of the yard land, &c.

P. 237. Mr. Middleton died March 26, 1765[3].

William Wilkinſon, B. A. was preſented to the rectory of Croxton in 1801.

P. 243. Among the vicars, after Peale, add,

Thomas Neuton, 16 . . . Gregory Hanſon, 16 . . .

Mr. Greatorex reſigned, for Abkettleby, in 1761.

P. 249. Extracts from records in the Rolls chapel:

Andrew Nowell, cuſtody of Francis Parley. Pat. Eliz. June 16. p. 5.

Andrew Nowell, cuſtody of Anne Fowler. Pat. 4 Eliz. Nov. 9. p. 2.

Andrew Noel, one of the eſcheators of Lincolnſhire at the Inquiſitiones poſt mortem of William lord Burghley, at Stamford, 28 April, 1599[4].

Licence to William Digby to alienate the manor of Creſſy, Lincolnſhire, to Andrew Noell, eſq. and others. Pat. 24 Eliz. p. 12, May 2.

Andrew Noell, licence to alienate the manor of Ryſſegate, Lincolnſhire, to Edward Heron, eſq. Pat. 27 Eliz. p. 8, June 2.

Henry Noell, eſq. leaſe of Hotham, co. York, for 50 years. Pat. 32 Eliz. p. 8. Feb. 19.

Gregory Cromwell and his wife to alienate to Andrew Noell the manor of Langham, Rutland. Pat. 42 Eliz. p. 17. Sept. 2.

Sir Anthony Cope, licence to alienate to Andrew Nowell, eſq. the manor of Brooke, co. Rutland. Pat. 2 Edw. VI. p. 3. Nov. 28.

Andrew Nowell, eſq. cuſtody of Oneby[5] and marriage of John Kyddall. Pat. 5 Edw. VI. p. 3. Apr. 24.

Andrew Nowell, eſq. licence to alienate the manor of Dalby upon the Wold to lady Anne Tyrrell and others. Pat. 5 Edw. VI. p. 3. April 15[6].

Andrew Newell leaſe of fiſhing in le Purfount, co. Lincoln, for 21 years. Pat. 2 and 3 Philip and Mary, p. 4. Sept. 16.

Andrew Newell, cuſtody of lady Anne Fowler. Pat. 5 and 6 Philip and Mary, p. 4. Nov. 11.—Cuſtody of body and marriage of John Fowler. Pat. 35 Hen. VIII. p. 4. Feb. 22. Alſo the ſame has cuſtody of the ſame, Pat. 34 Hen. VIII. p. 3. June 27; and of Edward Cateſbye, 29 Hen. VIII. p. 1. Feb. 12.

Andrew Noell inſtituted to Gooding, in the county of Lincoln. Pat. 27 Hen. VIII. p. 1. Nov. 27; and feodary of caſtles, &c. in the county of Leiceſter. 26 Hen. VIII. p. 1. June 22.

Andrew Noell, eſq. Inquiſ. poſt mortem; Eſch. 5 Eliz. p. 2. N° 33. Linc. 44. Rutl. & 29. Leic.

P. 255. "Duncombe, the rich alderman, is dead to-day; and, I hear, has left the duke of Argyll, who married his niece, £200,000." Swift, Journal to Stella, April 11, 1711.—This niece of ſir Charles Duncombe was Mary, daughter of Thomas Brown, eſq. She died in 1716, ſ. p.—Of the Duncombes a further account will be given under Orton on the Hill.

P. 262. The inſcription round the ſeal, Pl. XXXIX. fig. 7. ſhould be read, ARBOR S'C'A, ARBOR DIGNA.

P. 264. Hoby is ſuppoſed to be derived from haut, high, and the Latin by, place or ſituation. It is 10 miles diſtant from Leiceſter, 6 from Melton; and is bounded by Thruſſington, Shouldby, Rakedale, Friſby, Rotherby, and Brookſby, divided from the three laſt by the river Wreke.

P. 273, note 1, read, Sir George Haſtings, brother to the earl of Huntingdon[7].

P. 278. Henry Haſtings was living in 1692, ſ. p.

Richard Haſtings of Lutterworth, exciſeman (ſon of Henry Haſtings of Humberſton) was twice married. He died at Welford, Nov. 7, 1715, aged 63. His firſt wife was Sarah Sleath, widow of Joſeph Bolard; by whom he had only one ſon, Henry, that ſurvived him, born May 15, 170..

Sarah, wife of Richard Haſtings, died of the ſmall-pox in December 1707, and was buried in the church-yard at Lutterworth, on the South ſide of the church, Eaſtward of the porch.

P. 280. In the whole pariſh of Hungerton, in 1770, were, 4000 acres; 16 farms; 200 acres of wood; 50 labourers; 60 cows; 650 fatting beaſts; 3000 ſheep; £2600 rent; £140 rates[8].

P. 283. In 1648, the ſum of £50 a-year was ordered to be paid, from the profits of Hungerton rectory, ſequeſtered from ſir Robert Banaſter, towards the maintenance of the miniſter of Wanlip[9].

P. 288. l. 55. r. "Brown*e*."

Ibid. l. 56. for "Bagrave Hall," r. "Rotherby."

Ibid. In confirmation of what is here ſaid on the Mowbrays, add the following epitaph at Hungerton:

"Here reſt the remains of William Mowbray, yeoman,
who died Oct. 5, 1798, aged 78 years.
To whoſe memory this ſtone has been erected by the Rev. Andrew and Anna Burnaby, of Baggrave Hall,
in teſtimony of their high opinion of his integrity, and of his diligent and faithful ſervices
during a ſeries of more than fifty years.
Elizabeth, relict of the above William Mowbray, died June 28, 1799, aged 83 years."

---

[1] Publick Occurrences truly ſtated, April 10, 1688.

[2] See his epitaph at St. Mary's, Leiceſter, vol. I. p. 315.

[3] See his epitaph at Hathern, p. 845.

[4] Peck's Deſiderata Curioſa, vol. I. p. 183.

[5] Probably of John Oneby, who was an infant in 1551; was married in 1580; and died in 1595. See p. 1039.

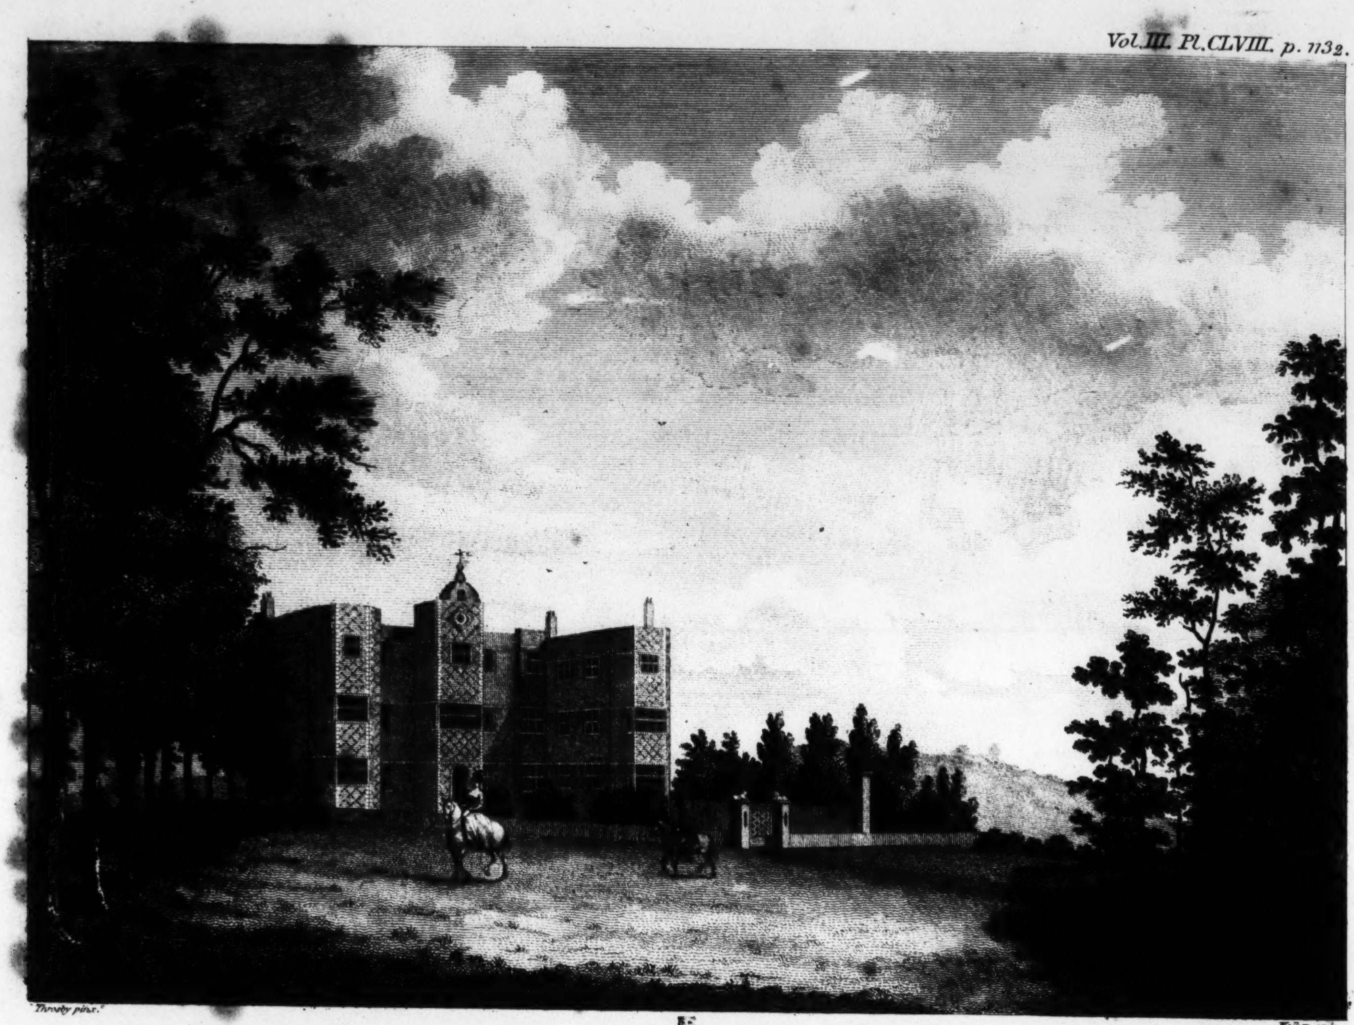
[6] See an epitaph on Richard Teryll, who died 14 Jan. 1556. Gent. Mag. vol. LI. p. 616, by John Teryll, jun.

[7] See Peck's Deſiderata Curioſa, book XIV.

[8] Young's Farmer's Tour, 1771, vol. I. p. 90.

[9] See before, p. 1097.

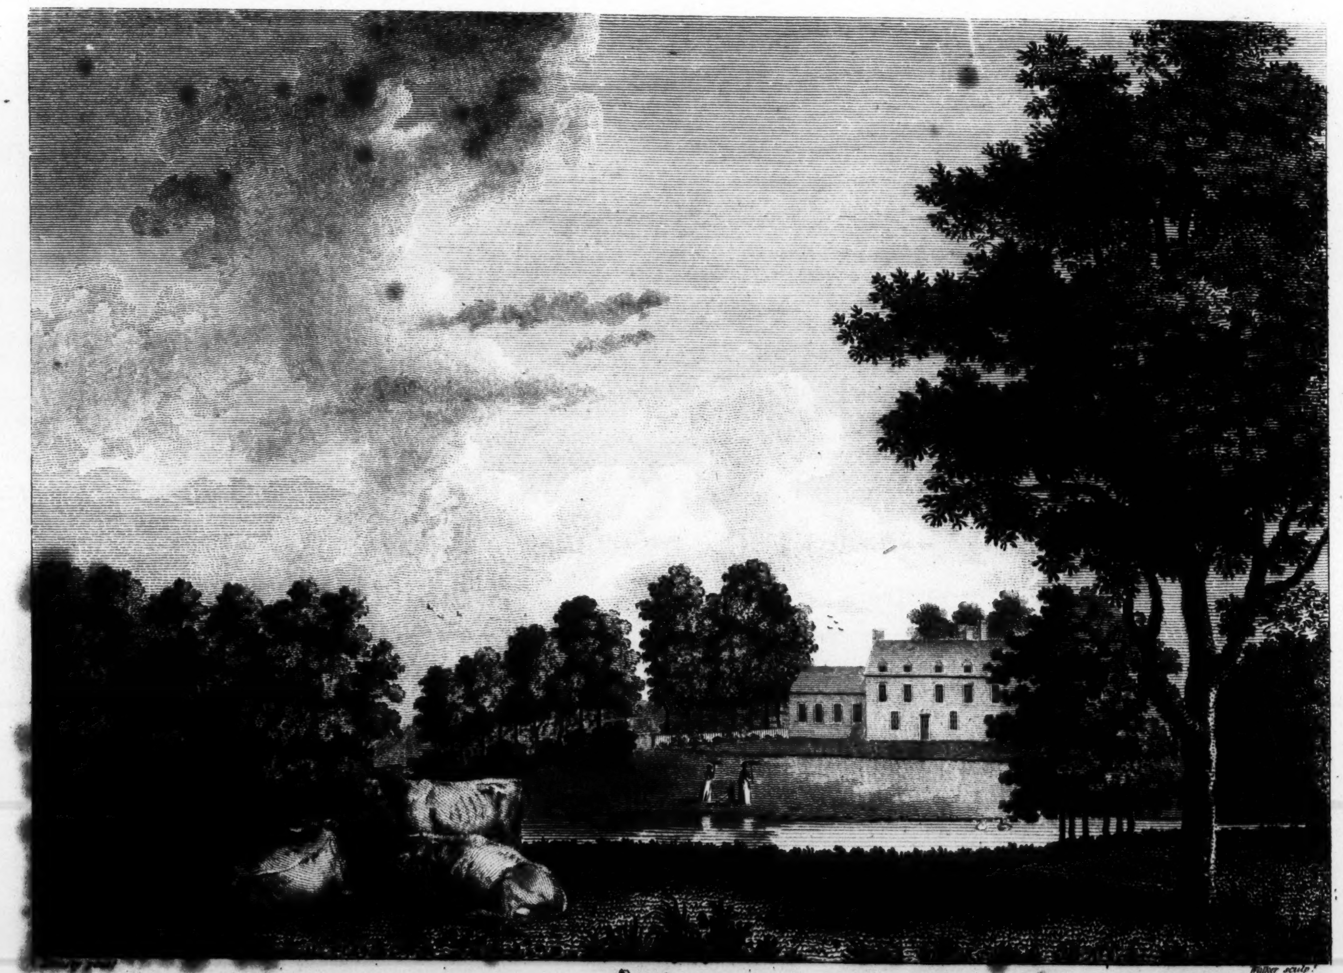
Vol. III. Pl. CLVIII. p. 1132.



Throsby pinx. Walker sculp.

QUENBY HALL,

The Seat of the late Shukbrugh Ashby Esq.rs



[illegible] Walker sculp.

LODINGTON HALL,

The Seat of Campbell Morris Esq.r

P. 290. Add, from St. Michael's church, Coventry: "Here reſteth in peace the body of Liſle Cave, late of Horſpool in the county of Leiceſter, eſq. the fifth ſonne of Francis Cave, of Bagrave in the ſame county, doctor of the lawes, and borne at Stanford in the county of Northampton; which Liſle Cave firſt married Mary, the daughter of Roger Sampſon, of Carſey[1] in the county of Suff. eſq. who died at Horſepoole, leaving him iſſue 4 daughters; and after he married Judeth, the daughter of William Porter, of Eſtcourt in the county of Warwick, eſq. by whom he had iſſue 2 ſonnes and 4 daughters. He dyed the 10th of Feb. 1622-3, æt. . ."

P. 291. Hugo de Grentemaiſnell had three houſes in Leiceſter, which belonged to Ingwardby[2].

P. 293. The following petition was preſented, July 26, 1644, by the lord Maynard, "to the right honourable the Lords aſſembled in Parliament.

"The petition of William lord Maynard; ſhewing, that the petitioner, about three years ſince, intermarried with the lady Dorothy his now wife, being the daughter of ſir Robert Baneſter, knight; upon whom he had formerly ſettled the inheritance of ſeveral manors and lands in the counties of Northampton and Leiceſter, being of the yearly value of £2000 at leaſt; concerning which marriage a treaty was begun in the life-time of the petitioner's father, and was continued after his death by the petitioner's mother and guardian with the ſaid ſir Robert Baniſter; and in all the time of the treaty, and until the marriage took effect, the ſaid ſir Robert declared, by himſelf and by his wife and others, that he would give £10,000 with his ſaid daughter; and gave directions to his wife the lady Baniſter, that he ſhould go on and proceed to effect the marriage between the petitioner and his now wife, which was accordingly effected, the petitioner and his guardian and friends not doubting ſir Robert's performance; but, he failing, ſuits were commenced at law and in the court of wards (the petitioner being then his Majeſty's ward), to inforce the ſaid ſir Robert Baniſter to pay the ſaid portion of £10,000: whereupon ſir Robert Baniſter and the petitioner by his guardian referred the ſaid differences to ſir Edward Tirrell, Thomas Tirrell, and others, arbitrators, all named by the ſaid ſir Robert Baniſter, who took upon them the charge thereof, and did make their award in writing; and thereby did award, that the ſaid ſir Robert Baniſter ſhould pay unto the petitioner £10,000, at three days in the ſaid award limited, and now all paſt; and, by the ſaid award, the petitioner was to make a jointure of the yearly value of £1000, which was done accordingly, as by the conveyances thereof ready to be ſhewn to your lordſhips may appear; which award was publiſhed, and the ſaid ſir Robert Baniſter had notice of it, and paid £1500 to the King, in part of the fine of the petitioner's marriage, compounded for in the Court of Wards; but fails in payment of the reſt, £8500, which he now denies to pay at all, and inſiſts upon a releaſe made by the petitioner in his minority, and upon the having of the ſaid award delivered unto him by the arbitrators, and the petitioner having no part or copy thereof; which releaſe and award the ſaid ſir Robert Baniſter procured by a ſubtle proteſtation, which he made unto the petitioner, his guardian, and friends, viz. that he the ſaid ſir Robert Baniſter would not be inforced to pay the ſaid money; but, if the ſaid releaſe ſhould be given him, and the ſaid award to be delivered unto him, he would freely pay the ſame and more, or to that effect; to which the petitioner's ſaid guardian and friends giving credit, and deſiring to avoid ſuits, and procure the petitioner in his minority to deliver the ſaid releaſe, and the arbitrators to deliver the ſaid award unto the ſaid ſir Robert Baniſter; which being done, the ſaid ſir Robert now utterly denieth to pay the remainder of the ſaid portion, being £8500, and, as it ſeems, intends, by the means aforeſaid, and ſuch like means, to delude the petitioner, and to detain the remainder of the ſaid portion, notwithſtanding all his promiſes, agreements, and proteſtations aforeſaid, and notwithſtanding the ſaid award and the performance thereof on the petitioner's part: For remedy in the premiſes, the petitioner is a ſuitor to your lordſhips, to take the matters aforeſaid into your lordſhips conſideration, and, upon hearing thereof, to take ſuch courſe for the petitioner's relief therein, as to your lordſhips ſhall ſeem meet; and, to that end, the petitioner deſires your lordſhips to ſend your lordſhips warrant, to command the ſaid ſir Robert Baniſter to appear before your lordſhips at a day to be prefixed by your lordſhips for the hearing of this petition, and the matters therein; and the rather, for that the ſaid ſir Robert Baniſter hath revoked the eſtate of the ſaid lands, which were as aforeſaid ſettled upon the petitioner's wife, whereby the petitioner is altogether defeated and deluded, unleſs your lordſhips relieve him; the petitioner having no remedy at law in the premiſes, the matters being ſo ſubtily carried on by ſir Robert Baniſter[3]."

P. 294. George Aſhby, of Quenby, eſq. was fined £450, in 1645, for being in Leiceſter when the King's army held it. For the ſame offence, Edward Blunt, parſon of Walton, was fined £140; William Leader, of Wimiſwould, gent. £200; William Inge, of Belgrave, £550; John Wayland, parſon of Skeffington, £20; Thomas Bren, of Tugby, £10; and Richard How, of Woodhouſe, butcher, £5.

Captain Cave, of Brokeſby, was alſo fined £100; but, he dying, the fine was remitted June 10, 1646.

P. 297. An additional view of Quenby is given in Plate CLVIII.—Over the hall-door is "1630, 6 Car. I."

P. 329. John prior of St. John Baptiſt de Landa ſued John Barber, George Parker, and Robert Pen, yeomen, of Belton in Rutland, for breaking his park at Lodington, Nov. 20, 1522, and ſtealing four does, ten ſheep, &c.[4]

P. 331. Rev. William Holgate (uſher of the grammar ſchool at Uppingham), preſented by Campbell Morris, eſq. to the vicarage of Lodington, Oct. 1800. A view of Lodington Hall is given in Plate CLVIII.

P. 339. will be illuſtrated by the following PEDIGREE of LAWRANCE.

William Laurance had a grant of St. Ive's, co. Huntingdon, 19 March, 1529.=Frances, daughter of . . . . Hunſtou.

1. Henry.=Elizabeth, da. of . . . . Hagar, of Bourn. 2. William. Frances, m. Thos. Pritchard. Jane, m. . . . . Beville.

Elizabeth. John.=Elizabeth, daughter of Ralph Waller, of Clerkenwell.

Mary, died unmarried. Henry.= . . . .

Sarah.=Iſaac Wollaſton, eſq. of Loſeby. Henry, died unmarried. Sir Edward Laurance, bart.

Sir Iſaac Woollaſton, bart.=Sarah, daughter and heir of . . . . Rowlands.

Taylor White[5], eſq. of Walling-wells park, co. Notts, born Nov. 5, 1743.=Sarah, d. Oct. 29, 1802. Iſaac, b. 1751; d. 1756, ſ. p. Anne, d. 1803.=Sir Tho. Fowke, knt. di. in December 1786.

Fred.-Auguſtus. Henry. Anne, 1798.=John Dick Burnaby, eſq.

1. Thomas-Woollaſton White, of Tuxford and Walling-wells, co. Notts and York; born Jan. 20, 1767; mar. Dec. 1800; created a baronet Nov. 30, 1800; with remainder to his two brothers.=Elizabeth Blagg, of Tuxford.
Lydia, mar. to lieut-col. Ja. Worſley, born Jan. 18, 1768.
Sarah, born June 4, 1769.
Elizabeth, m. Ri. Worſley, poſt-captain in the navy, bo. Aug. 21, 1770; ma. 1801.
2. Taylor, lieut.-col. in the army, b. Aug. 21, 1771.
3. Charles-Lawrance, bo. Sept. 19, 1782.
Frances, born Mar. 13, 1777.

Thomas Woollaſton White, born Oct. 3, 1801.

---

[1] Kinſey, a little Weſt of Hadleigh.

[2] "Tres domus pertinentes ad Inuuareſbie." Domeſday, fol. 230. a 1.

[3] Lords Journals, vol. VI. p. 646.

[4] R. Aſhton's Placita rediviva, 1661, p. 502.

[5] Second ſon of Taylor White, bencher of Lincoln's inn, judge of Cheſter, &c. &c. who died March 27, 1772.

P. 340. Fuller, in his Worthies, introduces the ſtory of Thomas Burdet and the white buck; and adds, "Whatſoever was the cauſe of ſuch ſeverity againſt him, Burdet patiently and chearfully took his death, affirming he had a bird in his breaſt (his own innocency) that ſung comfort unto him."

P. 345. March 8, 1705-6, the following return was made to the circular queries of biſhop Kennett: "The tithes of the living of Loſeby cum Cold Newton are appropriated to John Wollaſton, eſq. The lordſhip of Loſeby pays no manner of tithes to the vicar. The yearly value of the living is £23 or thereabouts, ariſing out of the lordſhip of Cold Newton in the ſaid pariſh; the vicarage-cloſe and chantry-yard in Loſeby being £3 a-year to complete the ſaid ſum of £23. The advowſon belongs to John Wollaſton, eſq.

JOHN SMITH, vicar of Tilton, and curate of Loſeby."

P. 352. "Nov. 22, 1769, the right honourable lady Caroline Burdett, buried at Caulk[1]."—By ſir Henry Harpur this lady had three ſons and two daughters; the eldeſt, John, died young; Henry, the ſecond, who ſucceeded his father, &c.; the third, Charles, a major in the army, died ſuddenly, July 9, 1770, in a fit, unmarried, at about 23 years of age. One of the daughters married a Mr. Stewart, by whom ſhe had iſſue; the other daughter was alſo married.

P. 355. An additional view of Preſtwould Hall is given in Plate CLIX.

P. 358. In anſwer to the circular queries of biſhop Kennett, it was ſtated, in 1705, "that Preſtwould hath the town of Cotes (which formerly had a chapel), and Burton on the Wolds (which very lately had a chapel). The tithes of the three towns are wholly impropriated; Clifton Packe of Preſtwould, eſq. being the ſole impropriator of the ſaid three towns; allowing to the miniſter thereof only £20 a-year. Nor is there any augmentation belonging to the ſaid church of Preſtwould. C. LEWIS, miniſter."

P. 363. Nicholas Maſon[2], by Anne his wife, had one ſon, William-Skalcroſſe Maſon[3], and four daughters; 1. Hannah, married William Henton[4], who had a decent property, which he ran through, and died many years ſince, leaving a family and widow; 2. Ann, married Mr. Fuller, an apothecary at Loughborough, by whom ſhe had two daughters. She afterwards married Mr. Thomas Greaſley, of Mountſorell, by whom ſhe had a daughter Sophia, buried in Mountſorell church (ſee p. 92.) 3. Elizabeth, married another Thomas Greaſley[5], a couſin of the above, and had one daughter, Lucretia, who married Mr. King[6].—Elizabeth Greaſley (the mother) was married, ſecondly, to a Mr. Lee. 4. Lucretia, married Mr. Thomas Noon, a ſhopkeeper and hoſier at Mountſorell[7].

P. 368. About two years ago, a large quantity of Roman copper coins were found in a field belonging to Mr. John Shuttlewood of Walton, ſituate about one mile from Cotes Hall and two miles from Walton; which are now in the poſſeſſion of Mr. Adams, junior, bookſeller at Loughborough; which muſt in general have been in high preſervation when depoſited in the earth, as they do not appear to have been much injured by currency; and even now, in their preſent ſtate of decompoſition, almoſt all of them are legible, and many of them are very fine; but they are in general common and obvious. One of them, however, of Severus Cæſar, with the title of Auguſtus, appears ſeaſonably in aid, to ſupport the tottering credit of Goltzius, from whoſe time no mention has been made of it, except by Harduin, likewiſe under ſuſpicion, to this day.

MAXIMINUS, GAL. VAL.

6 GENIO POPVLI ROM.

DIOCLETIAN.

31 with the type and inſcription, GENIO P. ROM.

3 with SACR. MONET. AVGG. ET CAESS. NN.

1 with IOVI CONSERV. AVGG.

SEVERVS.

3 GENIO P. R.

1 VIRTVS AVGG. ET CAESS. NN.

MAXIMIANUS.

59 GENIO POP. ROM.

6 PROVIDA DEORVM QVIES AVGG.

4 SAC. MONET. VRB. AVGG. ET CAESS. NOSTR.

4 with types all different.

CONSTANTIUS.

20 with the inſcription GENIO POP. ROMANI, and the uſual type.

5 MEMORIA FEL.

7 MONETA SAC. &C.

CONSTANTINUS.

38 GENIO POP. ROMANI.

17 SOLI INVICTO COMITI.

5 MARTI CONSERVATORI.

4 PRINCIPI IVVENTVTIS.

P. 370. At Ormeſby, co. Lincoln, is this epitaph:

"Orate pro animabus Willielmi
Skipwith, militis, et Agnetis uxoris ejus, qui quidem Willielmus, obiit anno Domini 1485[8]."

At Bekeſby, on a flat ſtone, on a plate of braſs:

"Here lieth Elizabeth Skipwith, wife of William Skipwith, ſon and heir of ſir John Skipwith, of Ormeſby, daughter to ſir William Tyrwhitt, of Kettleby."

P. 392. The Rev. Thomas Orbin, rector of Reſby and Brookſby, died March 6, 1804.

P. 371. In 1552, the commiſſioners reported that the chapel at Cotes contained,

In primis, a challice of ſylver.
It̃m, tow belles and a ſmale belle.
It̃m, a hand-belle.
It̃m, tow candellſtyckes.
It̃m, a cope of white fuſtyon.
It̃m, a veſtment of the ſame.
It̃m, three alter clothes and a corporas.
It̃m, tow towelles.
It̃m, a ſurples.

P. 397. Sir Wm. Hartopp of Rotherby was knighted by king Charles II. at Whitehall June 19, 1660.

Ibid. In the church of Holy Croſs, Weſtgate, Canterbury, is the following inſcription, on a flat ſtone, near the communion rails:

"Here lies buried the body of John Seaman, ſon of the late Dutton Seaman Eſquire,
and Elizabeth his wife,
of Guildhall, London.
He died the 8th day of June 1789, aged 48 years."

P. 399. Richard de Suthflet was rector of Rotherby in 1273.

P. 410. Of Dr. Gilbert Segrave, Fuller ſays, "he was bred in Oxford, where he attained to great learning, as the books written by him do declare. The firſt preferment I find conferred on him was the provoſt's place of St. Sepulcher's in York; and the occaſion how he obtained it is remakable. The Pope had formerly beſtowed it on his near kinſman, which argueth the good value thereof, ſeeing neither eagles, nor eagles birds, do feed on flies. This kinſman of the Pope's lying on his death-bed, was troubled in conſcience[9] (which ſpeaketh loudeſt when men begin to be ſpeechleſs, and all ſores pain moſt when near night) that he had undertaken ſuch a cure of ſouls upon him, who never was in England, nor underſtood Engliſh; and therefore requeſted the Pope his kinſman, that after his death the place might be beſtowed on ſome learned Engliſhman, that ſo his own abſence and negligence might in ſome ſort be repaired by the reſidence and diligence of his ſucceſſor; and this Segrave, to his great credit, was found the fitteſt perſon

---

[1] Regiſter of that pariſh.

[2] To this Mr. Nicholas Maſon (who died in 1733, and his widow in 1737), Samuel Shalcroſſe, eſq. of Burton (who died in 1729, and his wife in 1713), bequeathed his property.

[3] His wife Mrs. Judith Maſon was buried at Preſtwould April 15, 1772; and Mr. Maſon, Oct. 1, 1788. See p. 364.

[4] He was gamekeeper to Mr. Packe of Preſtwould; was bit by a mad dog; and died raving mad in a ſhort time after.

[5] See his epitaph under Barrow, p. 76.

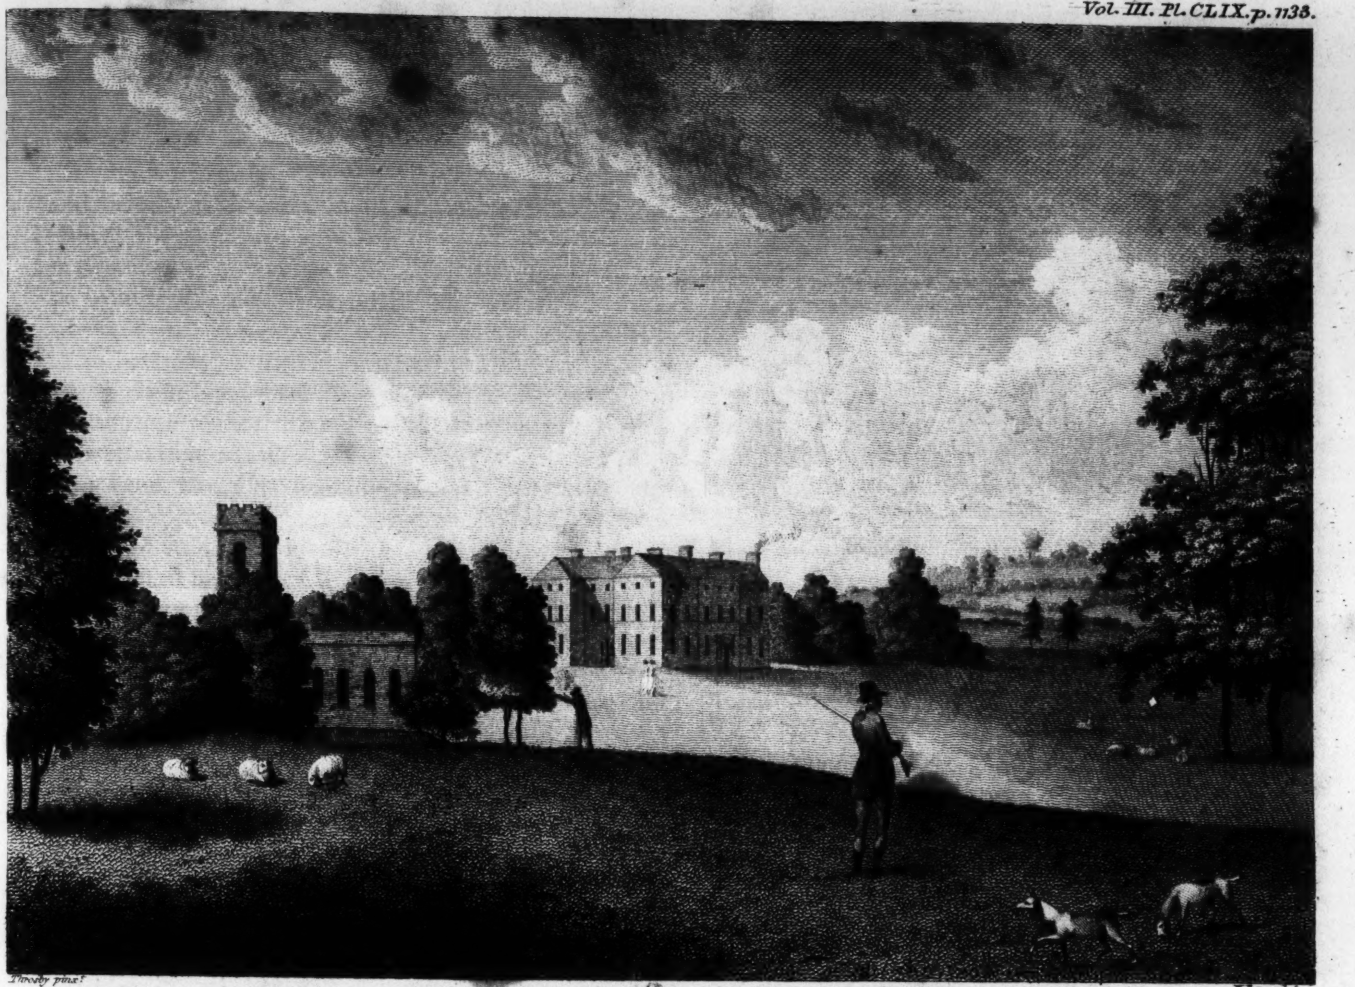
[6] On Mrs. King's tomb-ſtone, ſhe is called "the only daughter of Thomas and Anne Greaſley;" but this is a miſtake. She was the daughter of Thomas and Elizabeth, who are buried in an adjoining grave. The ſtone was placed at Barrow by one who was particularly intimate with the daughter, but never was acquainted with her parents.

[7] Mr. and Mrs. Noon are buried in Sileby church-yard.

[8] Harl. MSS. 4774.

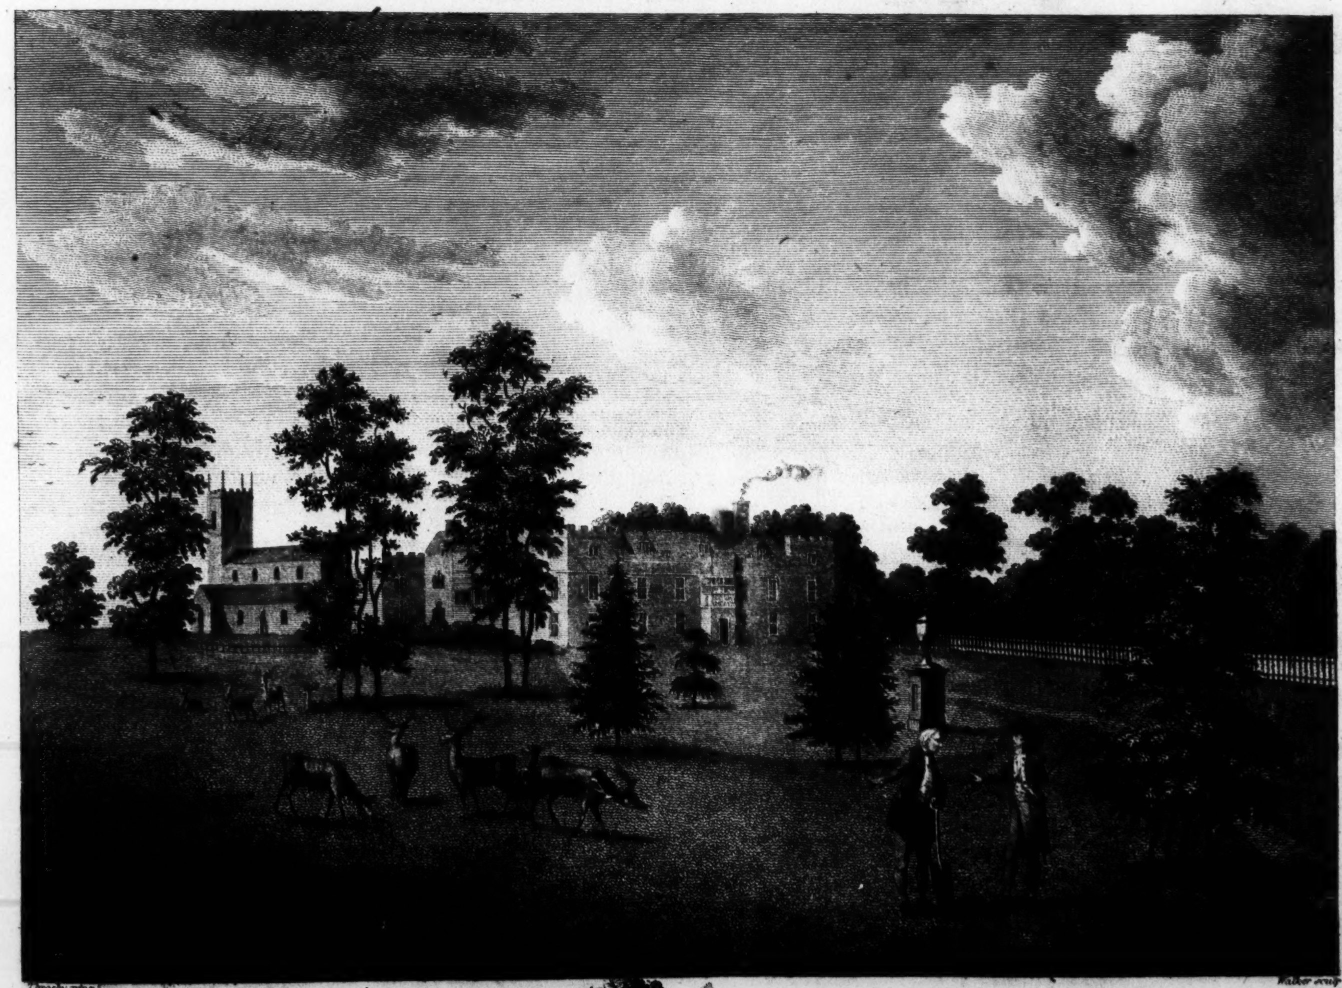
[9] Biſhop Godwin, in vitâ.

Vol. III. Pl. CLIX. p. 1138.



Throsby pinx. Walker sculp.

PRESTWOULD HALL,
The Seat of Charles James Packe Esq.r



Throsby pinx. Walker sculp.

SKEFFINGTON HALL
The Seat of Sir William Charles Farrell Skeffington Bar.t

for that performance. He was afterwards preferred biſhop of London, ſitting in that ſee not full four years."

P. 413. Mr. William Hubbard, pariſh-clerk of Segrave, occurs as a writer in the Gentleman's Diary for 1767, p. 32.

P. 414. In January 1802, died at Wortley, Yorkſhire, the Rev. Thomas Thwaites, rector of Segrave, and formerly fellow of Queen's college, Cambridge; B. A. 1750; M. A. 1754; B. D. 1763.

P. 419. Some verſes by Robert Burton are in "Bodley's Funebria," p. 43.—Mr. Warton intimates (and there can be little doubt of the truth of his conjecture) that Milton borrowed many of the images in his two very exquiſite poems of L'Allegro and Il Penſeroſo from "Burton's Anatomy of Melancholy," a book publiſhed in 1624, and at ſundry times ſince, abounding in learning, curious information, and pleaſantry. Mr. Warton ſays, that Milton appears to have been an attentive reader thereof; and to this aſſertion ſir John Hawkins adds, of his own knowledge, "that it was a book that Dr. Johnſon frequently reſorted to, as many others have done, for amuſement after the fatigue of ſtudy."

P. 460. The title of article 3, was, "Pax in Terrâ, ſeu Tractatus de Pace Eccleſiaſticâ, oſtendens quales & quibus hæc rationibus olim in Eccleſiâ propagata, quales quibus rationibus nunc propagatur. Autore Thomâ Hayne, olim Oxonienſ. è Coll. Lincoln, 1639," 12mo.

Ibid. In anſwer to the queries of biſhop Kennett in 1705, it was ſtated, that the tithes of Thruſſington were then impropriated, and given to Coningſby Hoſpital in the city of Hereford. The vicarage was worth £24 or £25 a-year. The advowſon is in the hands of the lord Coningſby, lord Clanbrazin of the kingdom of Ireland. There is a free-ſchool in the town, endowed with £8 a-year by will of Mr. Haynes, formerly maſter of the ſchool in Leiceſter Hoſpital.

P. 461. Elizabeth, daughter of Robert Barnard, eſq. of Sileby, was buried at St. Giles's, Cripplegate, March 16, 1657-8 [1].

P. 478. The following entries reſpecting the family of Nicolls of Tilton are from a Latin Bible, in the poſſeſſion of the Rev. Mr. Holmes, of Normanton:

"Maria, 7 die Jan. 1584. Teſtes bap. Will. Lane, Mary Seymer, A. Purefey.

Franciſcus, 4 fil. 1585. Teſtes, Fowlke Wodſull, Thomas Burneby, Suſan Saunders. FRAUNCIS NICOLLS.

Maria fil' mea nata fuit 1 die Julii, inter horam nonam & horam decimam ante mediam noctis, A. D. 1608, ſecundum computationem Eccl' Angl', & a. r. regis Jacobi ſexti. Teſtes Chriſtiani ſue baptiſmi Geo. Giffarde, Maria Nicolls, Ann Purefey.

Anna, 7 die Maii, 1609. Teſtes Chriſtiani ſui baptiſmi Hugh Chirchevall, Ann Purefoy, Ellen Pell.

Auguſtinus, 22 die Apr. 1610. Teſtes, Auguſtinus Nicolls miles, & Thomas Heſilrige miles, & Anna Hunte.

Franciſca, 18 Martii, 1611. Teſtes, ... Eliz. Fauſter, Wynyfryd Gifforde. Ob. 5 die Julii, 1613.

Eliz. 10 Martii, 1612. Teſtes, Tho. Berrow arm. Maria Nicoll, Eliz. Oſberne.

Thomas, 23 Martii, 1613. Teſtes, Ann Purefey, Thomas Alicocke, Thomas Heſilrigge.

Ludovicus, 12 Feb. baptizatus fuit & obiit eadem nocte, 1614.

Jana, 31 Dec. 1616. Teſtes, Edwardus Heſilrege arm. Jana Hawforde, & Joane Burrow.

Gulielmus, 13 Feb. 1617. Teſtes, Gul. Dixon, Edw. Bagſhaw arm. & Fryſwythe Joyce Smythe.

Franciſcus, 1 Feb. 1618. Teſtes, Franciſus Nicolls arm. Henricus Smyth arm. Millicente Whallye.

Thomas, junior filius meus, natus fuit 12 Martii, 1619. Teſtes, Joh. Cave arm. Gul. Halforde ſen. & Franciſca dame Heſilrige. W. NICOLLS.

P. 478. note 2. The eſtate purchaſed was at Whetſtone, in this county; and the rents are paid by the Corporation of Leiceſter to the vicar of St. Martin's.

P. 481. The ſeal and ſignature of ſir Edward North are given in Plate CL. fig. 21. Arms: . . . . on a feſs, a lion rampant guardant . . . . .; and in chief two fleur de lis . . . . . Creſt, a wolf's head couped.

P. 487. PEDIGREE of LAW, of KEYTHORPE.

Arms: Ermine, a bend betwixt two cocks Gules. Creſt: an unicorn's head proper.—Motto, Nec obſcura, nec ima.

William Law, of Lauriſton, co. Edinburgh, died at Paris in 1688.=Jean Campbell, died after 1694.

Agnes, born Feb. 1, 1666; m. 1685, John Hamilton, W. S. Edin.
James, born Dec. 19, 1667; ob. juv.
Jean, born Sept. 12, 1699; m. April 28, 1688, John Hay, eſq.

John Law, of Lauriſton, born Ap. 21, 1671, appointed comptroller general of the finances of France Jan. 5, 1720; died at Venice Mar. 21, 1729, aged 58.=Lady Catharine Knollis, 3d d. of Nich. 3d e. of Banbury, widow of . . . . Senor; died about 1747, aged 76.

William, bo. Sept. 14, 1672; died an infant.

Andrew, goldſmith in Edinburgh, b. Nov. 22, 1673; m. Jan. 27, 1695.=Bethia, d. of J. Melvill, of Murdocairny, in Fife.

William Law, of Lauriſton, bo. Oct. 24, 1675, director general of the India Company of France; died 1752, aged 77, bu. in the chapel of the Scots college at Paris.=Rebecca, da. of . . . Dives.
Janet, bo. Sept. 9, 1677; died unmarried.
Robert, born Oct. 6, 1678; di. unmarried.
Lilias, b. Oct. 19, 1680; ma. 1ſt, 1698, James Clerk; 2, ... Martin.
Hugh, born Jan. 10, 1682; died unmarried.

John Law, of Lauriſton, cornet of the regiment of Naſſau Frieſland; died at Maeſtricht 1734, aged about 30, unmarried.

Mary-Catherine Law, married July 4, 1734; died at London Oct. 14, 1790, aged about 80, ſ. p.=William viſcount Wallingford (ſon of Charles fourth earl of Banbury) M. P. for Banbury, major of the firſt troop of horſe guards; died July 6, 1740, ſ. p.

Alexander, born Feb. 22, 1697; died an infant.
Two daughters.

Two daughters, died unmarried.

John Law, of Lauriſton, bo. at Paris Oct. 15, 1719, governor of Pondichery, marechal de camp, &c.; married 1755; died at Paris about 1797.=Jean Carvalho, a native of Chandernagor, daughter of a Portugueſe gentleman ſettled at Calcutta.

A daughter, ma. 1ſt, to M. de la Cour; 2dly, Comte de Bermondet; iſſue.
A daughter, married to M. de Boiſſeroles, counſellor of finances at Montpelier; iſſue.

John-Francis Law, of Lauriſton, born 1724, commander in chief of the French Eaſt India company's troops at Pondichery; died at the Iſle of France in 1767, aged 43.=. . . Carvalho, of Madras.

James-Francis Law, born at Pondichery 1758; married . . . . . . and has one ſon, born 1791.
A daughter, married M. de Bruno; iſſue.
A daughter, m. C. Smith, governor of Madras; iſſue.
A da. m. S. Johnſon, of the council of Madras; iſſue.

Anne, born Dec. 21, 1761; died Dec. 2, 1762.
Jean, born March 8, 1757; marr. 1777, the comte de la Fare Lopez, captain of cavalry, baron of the Holy Roman Empire.

John, born July 31, 1765; died Dec. 19, 1765.

John-William Law, of Lauriſton, bo. at Chandamagor Sept. 8, 1766, an officer of the Aſtrolabe frigate; periſhed with M. de la Perouſe in 1788, aged 22.

James-Alexander Law, of Lauriſton, born at Pondichery Feb. 1, 1768, colonel and aid-de-camp to the firſt conſul of France, bearer of the ratification of the preliminaries of peace betwixt Great Britain and France.=. . . . da. of M. le duc Marechal de Camp.

Charles-Louis, born July 11, 1769.
Joſeph-Charles, bo. Aug. 20, 1770, captain of artillery; died ſ. p.
Francis-John-William, born Aug. 2, 1771.
Louis-George, born Aug. 6, 1773.

Auguſtus Law, of Lauriſton.

---

[1] Regiſter of that pariſh.

P. 423. The following return was made to biſhop Kennett's circular queries in 1705: "The tithes of Sileby are appropriated to ſir Nathan Wrighte. The church is endowed with wool and lamb, and other ſmall vicarial dues. The yearly value of the vicarage is £20. The advowſon and donation of the vicarage belong to ſir Nathan Wrighte."

P. 424. PEDIGREE of GILBERT, of SILEBY, 1619.

Hugh Gilbert, of Sileby.=. . .

William Gilbert,=Elizabeth, daughter of William Coke, of Sileby. of Truſley, co. Derby.

1. Thomas. 2. Gilbert. | 3. William Gilbert, of Thruſſington.=Mary, da. of T. Hood, of Bardon Park. | Sarah, marr. G. Wellocke, of Friſby.

1. Thomas, aged 3 years, 1619. | 1. Frances, aged 19. | 2. Mary, aged 6.

P. 435. Jan. 30, 1598, a licence was granted to William Skeffington, his wife and family, of Fiſherwicke, within the pariſh of St. Michael, in the city of Lichfield, to frequent the pariſh church of Elford in the dioceſe of Coventry and Lichfield, to hear divine ſervice, and to partake in the ſacrament[1].

P. 440. An additional view of Skeffington Hall is given in Plate CLIX.

P. 492. Two ploughlands in Twyford, which in king Edward's time had been valued at five ſhillings and four pence, were worth twenty ſhillings at the general ſurvey, when they were held by Robert de Buci under Hugo de Grentemaiſnell. The land was equal to one plough. This was there in the demeſne, with three bordars and five acres of meadow[2].

P. 500. Among the unpubliſhed Talbot papers[3] is one from the earl of Shafteſbury to lord Burghley, dated Nov. 7, 1557, deſiring that neither Godfrey Foljambe nor Ralph Sacheverell may be appointed ſheriff of Derbyſhire.

P. 501. Two ploughlands in Wimundeſwald, which in the time of king Edward had employed three ploughs, were held, at the general ſurvey, by Roger de Buſli, as tenant to king William. Six villans, with two foreigners, had then three ploughs. There were thirty acres of meadow; and the land was worth twenty ſhillings[4].—One ploughland alſo in Wimundeſwale, which in the time of king Edward had been held by Roulf and Edwin, was, at the general ſurvey, the property of Durand Malet. It lay waſte, though there were four acres of meadow[5].—Robert de Lorz [or Jors] held at the ſame time of the king two ploughlands in Wimundeſwale; where one villan, with one bordar, had half a plough. Theſe two lands [Hotone and Wimundeſwale] were worth ſeven ſhillings[6].

P. 504. Having been lately favoured with the peruſal of a very large folio volume of Conſtables Accompts for the pariſh of Wimeſwould, from 1602 to 1668 incluſive, a few of the articles ſhall be extracted.

1602. Geven by John Shyttlewood, conſtable of Wymſwold, to a ſoldier on Twelf-day,	£.	s.	d.
which came forth out of Scotland —	0	0	2
Jan. 10. Payd for my charges when we went a ſeſſinge the ſubſedie —	0	0	2
Spent when the crowner were here about the quene's buſyneſs —	0	1	3
18. Spent when I went to Syſſon with 4 men to the muſter, for our charges	0	3	6
Paid for the ſoldier's ſupper where he were taken that night —	0	0	10
Spent on the next day, being the 19th, for our charges when we went to Hungerton	0	0	10
Spent when we came to Hungerton, for our ſupper, and for our breakfaſt the next day, and for my horſe charges	0	1	8
21. Paid for the ſoldier's ſupper, which were allowde him when he went forward	0	1	0
Spent at Syſſon as I came back again from Hungerton, in bread and ale for me and my ſoldier, and in hay for my horſe	0	0	3
Geven to the ſoldier at his going forward, which were allowed by aſſent of the townſmen, for to buy him apparall, hoſe, and ſhoes, and ſuch like —	0	10	0
Spent at that time for ale at Loughborough	0	0	1
Paid for carrying aſhes to Leiceſter to the ſaultpetre work — —	0	6	8
Spent in going about the aſhes —	0	0	1
Spent at that time for ale at Loughborough	0	0	1
Given to a woman with a licence from the Bedlam houſe in Byſshopgate in London	0	0	3
Feb. 12. Spent when I had taken Mary Blunt with a warrant, for her ſupper, and her being at hazards for fire, and to them that watched her for ale they drank	0	1	8
Spent the next day when we went to the juſtice (ſpent at Quorndon, for we met the juſtice there) — —	0	0	2
Spent the ſame day, in delivering her to the jaile — —	0	0	11
Paid for our dinners, being four	0	1	4
Paid to a double fifteen — —	8	0	0
1604. Paid to the payment of the ſeaventh fifteene — — —	4	2	0
Paid to the proviſyon —	1	14	0
Paid to the proviſyon of poultrye	0	6	8
Spent when I paid the payment of the eighth and laſt ſubſidye at Melton, and my charges myſelf and horſe — —	0	0	9
Given to a poor woman which lay in the church porch, to go forth of the town, becauſe ſhe had a child which was born in the town, to take it with her —	0	0	6
1606. Gave to a Scotchman and a woman, two children, and a prentice, having had loſſes by fire, and travelled to London	0	0	4
Paid for allowing the leaden weights	0	0	4
Given for becauſe the braſen weights lacked one ounce and a half they were not allowed, but the ſaid weights were forfeited; and ſo, to have them again, I paid	0	0	4
1608. April 17, a levy was made, by Thomas Franks conſtable, for a fifteenth, after the rate of 1¼*d.* for a beaſt, and 6*d.* a ſcore of ſheep; on which Mr. Ballard paid for 280 ſheep and 23 beaſt — —	0	9	10
Total of the levy — —	5	19	4
Another levy, June 5, for a ſupply of ſoldiers; every 20 acres of land 4*d.*; cottagers 1*d.*; a beaſt 6*d.*; on which Mr. Ballard paid for 220 acres —	0	3	8
Auguſt 5, a levy for the conſtable, after the rate of 1*d.* a beaſt.
Jan. 19. Given to a woman that came forth of Bedlam with a paſſport —	0	0	2
Feb. 1. Spent when we were before the clerk of the market of the Dutchy at Burſtall — — — —	0	2	2
Given to a big-belly woman, to go forth of the town — — — —	0	0	2
May 18. Paid for mending the ſtocks	0	0	2
1623. Jan. 10. Paid for hoſpital and maimed ſoldiers — — —	0	4	10
Paid to Rawlin for dreſſing the armour	0	4	0
Given to Storer of Thruſſington for the Articles — — — —	0	1	0
Paid for a pair of ſtocks —	0	5	4
Laid out at Loughborough for match and powder — — — —	1	8	0

---

[1] Reg. Whitgift, fol. 102. a.

[2] "Robertus [de Buci] tenet de Hugone [de Grentemaiſnil] 2 carucatas terræ in Taiworde. Terra eſt 1 carucæ. Hæc ibi eſt in dominico, cum 3 bordariis, & 5 acris prati. Valuit 5 ſolidos & 4 denarios; modò 20 ſolidos." Domeſday, fol. 232. b. 1.

[3] Vol. F. p. 225.

[4] "Rogerus tenet de R[ege] 2 carucatas terræ in Wimundeſwald. Tempore Regis Edwardi erant ibi 3 carucæ. Has habent ibi 6 villani, cum 2 francigenis. Ibi 30 acræ prati. Valet 10 ſolidos." Domeſday, fol. 234. b. 1. 2.

[5] "Durandus Malet tenet 1 carucatam terræ in Wimundeſwale. Vaſta eſt. Ibi ſunt 5 acræ prati. Roulf & Eduinus tenerunt." Ibid. fol. 236. a. 1.

[6] "Robertus de Lorz tenet [de Rege] 2 carucatas terre in Wimundeſwale. Nunc ibi 1 villanus, cum 1 bordario, habet dimidiam carucæ. Ibi 5 acræ prati. Hæ duæ terræ [Holetone et Wimundeſwale] valent 7 ſolidos." Ibid. fol. 236. b. 2.

For

	£.	ſ.	d.
For a pound of gunpowder	0	1	4
Given to the Egyptians	0	0	6
For a horſe taken poſt to Derby	0	1	10
Paid William Blunt, for his carriage to remove the king's houſehold	1	10	0
1627. Paid for powder and match at the firſt training at Leiceſter	0	2	0
Paid for the ſoldiers' colours	0	4	6
Paid for the trained ſoldiers charges	0	6	0
Towards repairing Branſeford bridge	0	0	6
A pound of gunpowder and two yards of match, the ſecond training	0	1	10
Paid for incle, to make ſtrings for the ſoldiers' reſts	0	0	1
Paid to ſix lame cripples	0	0	4
Paid to four ſoldiers who brought a paſs from the Prince of Orringe	0	0	8
1629. Paid for catching of moles	1	15	8
Feb. 17, 1630-1. Paid to Mr. Kirke, for proviſion for his Majeſty's houſehold	0	16	8
Paid to Mr. Kirke at the ſame time for the acquittance	0	0	4
Paid to two ſeafaring men that were taken by the Dunkirkers	0	0	4
April 18. Paid Mr. Kirke for proviſion, poultry, coal, and quartering	2	10	0
Paid for making a trench and a dam to turn the water againſt the New Cloſe	0	3	4
Paid for mending the way beyond the New Cloſe in three ſeveral places	0	2	0
Paid for mending the gutter on the ſide the New Cloſe	0	4	0
Paid for mending the way at Green-hill, and making a dam	0	4	8
Paid to a poor man who had been at London to be cured of the king's evil	0	0	2
Eight quarter of lime, to mend the pinfold	0	16	0
Fetching the ſame from Barrow, and for ſecond fetching	0	7	6
1634. Paid for two capons, one pullet, and a ſtrike of barley, for the king's majeſty's proviſion in his progreſs	0	6	4
Proviſion for his majeſty's houſehold in his progreſs, being his majeſty's pay for corn, capons, chickens, &c.	0	11	6
Spent, June 24, when I carried them to Leiceſter	0	1	0
A dozen of chickens for his majeſty's proviſion	0	4	8
3 ſtrike and 5 gallons of oats, and 3 truſs of hay and 3 truſs of ſtraw, for his majeſty's horſes, &c.	0	11	4
Paid to the poſtmaſter at Loughborough, for freeing and diſcharging this town for poſt-horſes for this year till Chriſtmas next	0	16	6
Paid for a cart and carriage for the king's majeſty's proviſion from Belvoir to Newark	1	10	0
For a cart and carriage from Nottingham to Leiceſter for the like	0	12	0
For half a cart and carriage from Leiceſter to Hoanby for the like	0	10	0
1635. Paid for amerciaments, for the butts not being in good repair, for want of a crownett	0	12	6
1637. Feb. 20. Given to a great-bellied woman that came from Hoton	0	0	6
Paid for a cart, and a midwife, and two women, to go with her to Wylloughby	0	1	4
Paid for a warrant when innholders ſhould be bound from killing of pheaſants and partridges	0	0	4
1640. Spent when we went to buy wood to make the ſtock well	0	2	0
Paid earneſt-money for the wood	0	9	6
Paid Mr. Morley for the wood	9	10	0
Paid carpenters for breaking the wood	1	4	0
For killing 34 dozen of ſparrows	0	2	10
To four men for watching the town on the wake-day	0	2	0
1642. Paid to the head conſtable, for the relief of the viſited people at Harborow	0	6	2
Paid for the relief of Dadlinton	0	1	8
Paid for the relief of Whetſtone for ſix months	0	15	4
Spent when I went to Loughborough before Mr. Haſtings, to ſee if they could agree with him about the king's carridge	0	1	0
Spent when I hired William Blunt and Robert Leake to carry the king's goods from Nottingham	0	0	8
Paid to Robert Leake for carrying the king's goods	1	0	0
Paid to William Blunt for the like	0	10	0
Geven to Richard Herbert, of Chriſt Church in the Iſle of Man, which had great loſs by fire, by reaſon of the pirats ſhowring wild-fire into their towne, which had a certificate, and many earls, lords, and knights hands at it	0	7	0
Given to James Dallecocke of Oukeham, relater for the king, to ſee there be neither Rogues, Seminaries, nor Jeſuits, inhabiting in our town, and that our buts and highways be in good repair	0	1	0
1650. Given to a miniſter's wife and two other poor women that had a letter of requeſt, their loſſes amounting to the value of £2550	0	0	6
1655. Paid William Henſon, for killing the moles	1	0	0
1657. Paid to Edward Belton, "for ritteinge and keepeinge theeſe a Countes"	0	10	0
1660. Paid to four men that watched the fooliſh man one night, and for ale and bread and candles	0	1	11
1661. Given to two men to go with a hue and cry in the night-time	0	0	4
1664. Paid to the head collector for the Exchequer	0	0	1
—— Spent when the neighbours met at alehouſe about raiſing the ſoldiers' money	0	0	8
1665. Paid for mending the pinfold and the church bridge	0	0	6
—— Paid when I went to Gadſby with the old ſoldiers, Baptiſts, and Quakers	0	6	0
1666. Paid for telling the ſheep	0	0	8
—— Spent when the neighbours and I went to Loughborough, to carry the money that was gathered for the fire	0	0	6
1668. Paid for laying three ſtones at the bridge-end	0	0	8
—— Paid for ſcowering the brook at channel-end, and for mending the bridge	0	2	0

P. 506. Abraham Jobſon, M. A. of Trinity college, Cambridge, reſigned Wymeſwould in 1802, on being preſented by the biſhop of Ely to Wiſbech St. Mary's, with St. Mary's annexed, in the Iſle of Ely.

P. 509. Mr. George Sacheverell, by his laſt will, gave twelve of his beſt pictures to his wife[1].

Mrs. Dorothy Chadwick died Nov. 30, 1784, æt. 84[2].

The following inſcriptions for the family of Sacheverell are from Dr. Pegge's MS Collections for Derbyſhire:

Within an iron rail againſt the North wall of Morley church:

"Here lyeth the bodye of Kateryn Babington, late wife of Thomas Babington, and daughter to ſir Henrye Sacheverell, nyght, the whyche ſaid Kateryn died the XXVI day of Auguſt, in the year of our Lord God MCCCCCXVII."

In the South wall, in braſs:

"Hic jacet Johannes Sacheverell, armig', fil' & heres Radulphi Sacheverell, armig', domini de Snetterton & Hopwell, & Joanna ux' ejus, filia & unica heres Henrici Statham, armigeri, d'ni de Morley, qui quidem Johannes obiit in bello Ricardi Tertii, juxta Boſworth, anno D'ni M°CCCCLXXXV°, quorum a'i'ab's p'pitiet' Deus. Amen."

---

[1] Gent. Mag. vol. LX, p. 878.

[2] Gent. Mag. vol. LIV, p. 957; and Shaw's Staffordſhire, vol. I, p. 184.

In the North arch of the chancel, in a wall within the rails:

"Hic jacent corpora Henrici Sacheverell, de Morley, in comitatu Derb'e, milit', & Iſabellæ uxoris ejus, qui quidem Henric' obiit XXI° die Julii, a° D'ni MCCCCCLVIII."

In the South-eaſt corner of the choir, in an angle of the wall:

"Here lyeth the body of Jonathan Sacheverell, ſecond ſon to Henry Sacheverell of Morley,
eſq. and Jane his wife, daughter to ſir Humphrey
Bradburne, of Bradburne, kt. which Jonathan married Elizabeth, daughter to Mr. Ralph Owen, gent.
had iſſue by her two ſons, John and Nathaniel, who both died in their infancy. He was pious, charitable, and a true lover of his friend, and the laſt of the eldeſt line of the Sacheverells of Morley in Darbyſhire, who died a true Proteſtant, in the faith of Jeſus Chriſt, the VIII of November, 1662, the 79 year of his age."

Upon the ground, near Jonathan Sacheverell's tomb, are three grave-ſtones.

The firſt, by the South wall, with this inſcription:

"Here lieth the body of Jonathan Sacheverell, whoſe monument is here erected."

And by it the ſecond, with this inſcription:

"Here lieth the body of Elizabeth, wife of Jonathan Sacheverell, whoſe monument is here erected. She died the 7th day of May, 1682, in the 71ſt year of her age."

By theſe, towards the altar ſide of the aile:

"Here lieth the body of Victorian Sacheverell, third ſon to Henry Sacheverell, of Morley, eſq. and Jane his wife, daughter to ſir Humphrey Bradbourne, kt. He died in Worceſterſhire, and was buried here the 18th day of November, 1635."

In the North ſide of the communion table, a monument, with this inſcription:

"D. O. M. P. S.
Hic jacent corpora non item ſpes Jacinthi Sacheverel, de Morley, in com' Derb', armig', & Elizabethæ ejus tam in morte quam in vitâ ſociæ; quam quidem Elizabetham, Richardi Harpur, de Littleover, in eodem
com', militis, filiam ille uxorem ſibi ducens ſimul & fœlicitatem amoris mutui tam pignora quam fructus ex eâ ſuſcepit filios tres, Henricum, Radulphum, & Richardum, filiam unicam, Dorothæam. Ipſe dierum, divitiarum, ac famæ ſator (annos numerans LXXIX) fatis cedens huc receſſit XXII Januar', MDCLVI. Illa vero poſtea vitæ impatiens una & viduitatis ſecundum morte conjugium expetiit ſimul obtinuitque Martii XII prox' ſequ.

Ille,
Papam humaniter, Chriſtum religioſè colens,
Fidem Romanam orthodoxam charitatem tenens,
In ſacrificio crucis non in ſigno ſpem ponens,
De Deo quidem nihil, de pauperibus optimè merens,
Monumento ipſe nullo prorſus omnino egens,
Suo tumulo monumentum ſatis amplum ſeſe hic
deponi curavit.

Tu autem legens hic, Viator, abi;
Charitatem ejus alias ſonantem audi;
Mirare, imitare, & memento mori.
S. T. T. L.[1]"

Under an arch between the altar and North aile of Henry Sacheverell, over the portraiture of a man and woman, is the following quartered coat:

1. Upon a ſaltire five water-budgets.
2. A lion rampant crowned.
3. Three lozenges in pale.
4. A lion rampant,
5. A bird ſtanding palewiſe, collared with a collar of crownetts.
6. Three hares playing on the bagpipes.

On the North aile to the North wall, for Mrs. Babington; on the ſide of the tomb theſe quartered coats:

1. Babington.
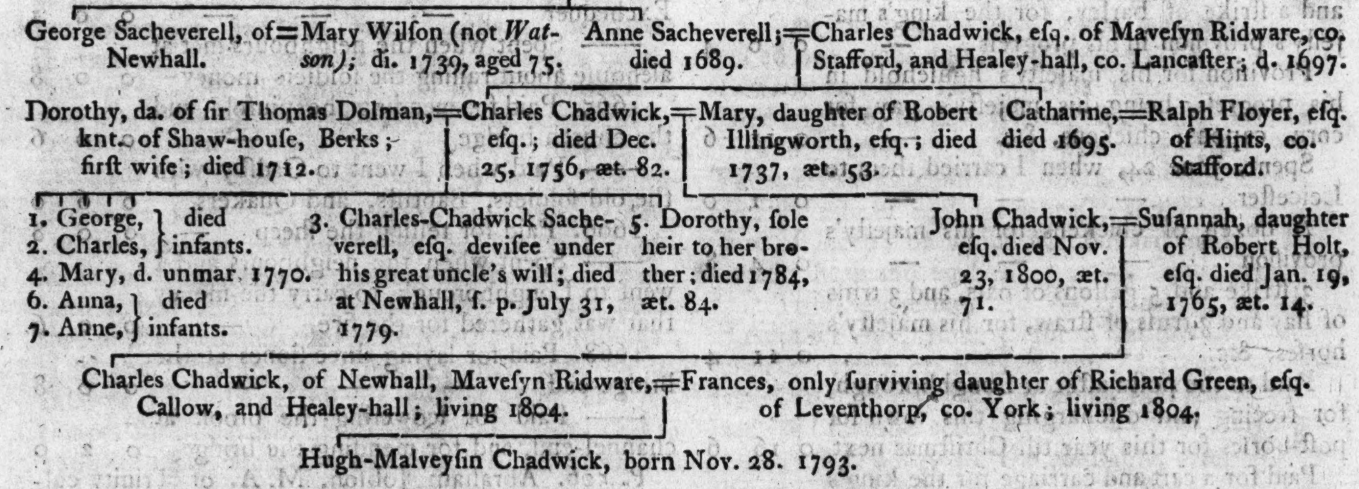
2. Two water-budgets in chief, a water-budget upon a feſs, and a water-budget in the umbrel or baſe.
3. Two chevrons.
4. Upon a ſaltire five water-budgets.
5. A lion rampant crowned.
6. Upon a bend . . . . , eſcutcheons a chief.
7. A chevron and a chief Ermine.
8. Azure (or Vert), three pallets Gules.
9. A croſs.
10. Three hares playing on the bagpipes.
11. Upon a ſaltire five water-budgets.

P. 509. PEDIGREE of SACHEVERELL, of NEWHALL, enlarged.

vide
p 509



Valence Sacheverell, of Newhall, co. Warwick.═Anne, da. of ſir George Devereux, knt. of Mildenhall, co. Warwick.

George Sacheverell, of Newhall.═Mary Wilſon (not Watſon); di. 1739, aged 75.

Anne Sacheverell;═Charles Chadwick, eſq. of Maveſyn Ridware, co. Stafford, and Healey-hall, co. Lancaſter; d. 1697.

Dorothy, da. of ſir Thomas Dolman, knt. of Shaw-houſe, Berks; firſt wife; died 1712.═Charles Chadwick, eſq.; died Dec. 25, 1756, æt. 82.═Mary, daughter of Robert Illingworth, eſq.; died 1737, æt. 53.

Catharine, died 1695.═Ralph Floyer, eſq. of Hints, co. Stafford.

1. George, } died
2. Charles, } infants.
4. Mary, d. unmar. 1770.
6. Anna, } died
7. Anne, } infants.

3. Charles-Chadwick Sacheverell, eſq. deviſee under his great uncle's will; died at Newhall, ſ. p. July 31, 1779.

5. Dorothy, ſole heir to her brother; died 1784, æt. 84.

John Chadwick, eſq. died Nov. 23, 1800, æt. 71.═Suſannah, daughter of Robert Holt, eſq. died Jan. 19, 1765, æt. 14.

Charles Chadwick, of Newhall, Maveſyn Ridware, Callow, and Healey-hall; living 1804.═Frances, only ſurviving daughter of Richard Green, eſq. of Leventhorp, co. York; living 1804.

Hugh-Malveyſin Chadwick, born Nov. 28. 1793.

P. 512. Dr. Butler was married, July 9, 1703, to Mrs. Mary Tate, ſiſter by the mother's ſide to Dr. Sacheverell, a lady of about £500 a year fortune.—A commendatory poem by Dr. Sacheverell, addreſſed to Dr. John Blow and Mr. Henry Purcell, is prefixed to Playford's "Harmonia Sacra."

In the chancel of St. Andrew's church, Holborn, is this brief inſcription:

"Infra jacet Henricus Sacheverell, S. T. P.
HujuſceEccleſiæRector;obiit5^{to}dieJunii,An.Dñi1724."

P. 514. Rowland Wilſon (who is elſewhere called Robert) fined for the office of alderman in 1638. His ſecond ſon (who is called both Rowland and Richard) ſettled at North Wheatley, Notts; and had a ſon Richard, and a daughter Catherine.

Ibid. Robert Wilſon, of Knighthorpe, died Nov. 21, 1660, æt. 35. His ſon William married Rebecca Weſtbroke, of Barrow upon Soar.

P. 527. Aug. 19, 1788, lord viſcount Howe was advanced to the dignity of an earl; and at the ſame time his Majeſty, mindful of his lordſhip's paternal affection for his daughters, granted him a barony (Howe of Langar) to deſcend to his eldeſt daughter (in conſequence of her father's earldom become lady Curzon) and her heirs male; and, in default of ſuch heirs, to his ſecond daughter in the ſame way; in default there too, to his youngeſt as the others.

P. 549. The many curious Roman monuments collected by Camden and ſir Robert Cotton[2], in their travels about the Northern counties, were fixed in an octagon ſummer-houſe at the end of ſir Robert's garden at Connington, the ruins of which are yet ſtanding; but the roof falling to decay, expoſed the inſcriptions to continual damage, and many were ſtolen or deſtroyed.

---

[1] i. e. Sit terra tibi levis.

[2] A boat or two loaded with theſe precious reliques is ſaid to have been loſt at ſea; but Camden had tranſcribed them, with thoſe miſſing at Connington. This magnificent manſion preſents nothing now but a few wrecks of a portico and a neat garden gate in the ſtyle of that age; nor can be ſeen without affecting the beholder, in conſidering that this elegant pile, once the delight of its learned maſter, ſhould thus be ſuffered to moulder into oblivion, and be transferred from his poſterity, eſpecially when no pecuniary conſideration would warrant ſuch an alienation; the value of the eſtates of the family, when they were ſold, being ſaid to be upwards of 200,000*l.*

ADDITIONS AND CORRECTIONS IN WEST GOSCOTE HUNDRED.

P. *662. l. penult. "Richard Beaumont of Whitley, eſq. died in 1704;" his wife Catharine in "1729."

P. 667. Two letters of Henry Grey marquis of Dorſet have been given in a former part of this volume[1]; and the Cotton MSS. preſerve one of an earlier date[2]:

"Maſtur Secretary, in my moſt hartie man' I have me recom̃ended to yowe. And where a certeyn matter betwene my ladye priores of Nuneton and the tenants of my lorde of Seint John's yn Coton yn the counte of Warrewyke dothe depende yn the Chaunc̃ie before my Lord Chaunceller and yowe, for a com̃une that they clayme to have yn a certeyne grounde there, which the ſaid priores hath ſowed this yere; ſoo hit ys, ſir, that the forſaid tenants of late, firſte upon Lammaſſe daie, and ſyns that tyme, yn grette nombre aſſembled, have come to the ſaid grounde, and broken uppe the gates, caſte downe the dyches and quyckeſette hegges, and diſtroied moche parte of the corne, to her no lyttle loſſe and hynderaunce. And for as moche as I am ſtuarde of the ſaid poor howſſe of Nuneton, I have called of my councell to me, and other wurſhipfull of the countrey, at my late beyng their, of whome I have ꝑfite knolege that they have doon to the ſaid prioreſſe and poore howſſe expreſſe wronge, as more playnly maye appere to you by ſuch bills as the ſaid inhabitaunts have put uppe of their behalfe before my Lorde Chaunceller and yowe, the copies wherof your s̃nt, the brynger hereof, can deliv'r yowe, when hit ſhalle pleiſe you to calle for them; deſiryng you of your goodneſſe, conſideryng the matter hangeth yett unexamyned and not determyned, to ꝓvide ſome remydie or ſtaie hereyn, ether by your l'res to the juſtices of the peiaſſe yn the ſaid counte, or by injuncc̃on to the ſaid tenants, or as you ſhall otherwiſe thynke expedient and mete, till the matter be adjudged and det̃myned; and yn ſoe doyng I thynke you ſhalle doe a moche charitable dede, not oonly for the acquyeting of the poore howſſe, but for other y'to belongyng. And thus Jh̄u have you yn his bleſſed kepyng. From Aſteleye, the laſte daye of Auguſte. Your lovyng and aſſueryd frynd, HENRY DORSETT."

P. 672. Among the MSS. in the Harleian Library is a Manual of Devotions, ſuppoſed to have been made for Edward Seymour duke of Somerſet, lord protector under Edward the Sixth, upon his firſt commitment to the Tower of London. In the lower margin are the following notes by the lord Guilford Duddeley and the lady Jane[3]:

"Your lovyng and obedyent ſon wiſchethe vnto your grace long lyfe in this world, with as muche joy and comforte as euer I wyſhte to my ſelfe, and in the world to come joy everlaſtyng. Your moſt humble ſon tel his dethe, G. DUDDELEY."

"Foraſmutche as you have deſired ſo ſimple a woman to wrighte in ſo worthye a booke, good mayſter Lieaſtenaunte; therefore I ſhall as a frende deſyre you, and as a Chriſtian require you, to call uppon God to encline youre harte to his lawes, to quicken you in his waye, and not to take the worde of trewethe vtterly oute of your mouthe; lyue ſtyll to dye, that by deathe you may purchaſe eternall life; and remembre howe the ende of Mathuſael, whoe, as we reade in the Scriptures, was the longeſte liuer that was of a manne, died at the laſte; for, as the Precher ſayethe, there is a tyme to be borne, and a tyme to dye, and the daye of deathe is better than the daye of oure birthe. Youres as the Lord knowethe as a frende, JANE DUDDELEY[4]."

"The Lorde comforte youre grace, and that in the worde whearein all creatures only are to be comforted. And thoughe it hathe pleaſed God to take awaye ij of youre children; yet thinke not, I moſt humblye beſeche youre grace, that you have loſt them; but truſte that we, by leaſinge this mortall life, have wan̄e an ĩmortal life; and I, for my parte, as I have honoured youre grace in thys life, wyll praye for you in another life.

Your gracys humble daughter, JANE DUDDELEY[5]."

P. 673. A portrait of lady Jane Grey is given in Plate LXXXIX. faithfully copied by Baſire from Vertue's print. I am alſo informed by Mr. Adam Wolley, that there is in the cuſtody of Benjamin Harrington, eſq. of Breaſton near Derby, a remarkable fine portrait of that diſtinguiſhed lady, which was formerly the property of the hon. Auchitell Grey of Riſley, from whom it devolved to his daughter; who left it, along with her other pictures and effects, to John White, eſq. uncle of the preſent poſſeſſor. Mr. Harrington ſays, that a few years ago the earl of Stamford offered him a conſiderable ſum of money for this picture, but that he declined parting with it.

P. 674. In Cardinal Pole's Archiepiſcopal Viſitation of the dioceſe of Lincoln, 1556, is this entry: "Domina Anna Graia, uxor Henrici Graiæ militis, neglectis cenſuris eccleſiaſticis, ſtetit per integram jam annum excommunicata. Unde ad dominos regem & reginam pro brevi de excommunicatâ capiendâ ſcribendum decrevimus[6]."

P. 683. John Grey of Pirgo had a fourth daughter, Elizabeth; married firſt to Anthony Denny, eſq.; and, ſecondly, to ſir Edward Grevylle, knt.[7]

Ibid. l. ult. After a very particular enquiry, I cannot find that Thomas earl of Stamford had a ſon by the ſecond marriage: but Diana, who died young, was daughter of the ſecond lady; and, as it has been aſcertained that ſhe was carried out of Bradgate houſe an infant, at the time when the beautiful old manſion was on fire, might probably have been the child born in 1696.

P. 684. Since this page was printed, lord Grey has had a daughter, Maria, born Dec. 17, 1800; and a ſon, George-Harry, born April 5, 1802.

Ibid. The hon. Booth Grey, brother to the preſent earl of Stamford, died March 19, 1802. He ſerved in three ſucceſſive parliaments for the borough of Leiceſter; and, on every important occaſion, evinced an independency of ſpirit, that did honour to his birth. Attached to no ſet of men but from conviction, he was neither the ſlave of the Miniſter, nor the tool of Oppoſition. He retired from Parliament in 1784, with the character of an honeſt, independent, and upright ſenator. On the death of this much lamented gentleman, Mr. Urban was favoured with the following elegant lines by a reſpectable correſpondent:

"Yes, Grey is dead!—Where'er diffus'd the lay,
Catch the ſoft breeze that mourn'd his ſhorten'd day:
True worth ſhall weep upon his hallow'd bier,
And faithful friendſhip conſecrate the tear!"

P. 689. Among the vicars of Bredon, read thus:

Robert Steimū, 1312.
Thomas de Fennewyke, 12 cal. Oct. 1331.
Francis Gibbes, 1656.

Ibid. Gaſcoigne, in his MS remarks on Mr. Burton's Hiſtory, has this note: "See my Maſter's[8] Derby Book in 4to; inter alia, Bredon, fol. 91. b. 92. 93. This comes very ſhort of my Maſter's Viſitation. Much may be altered, or much defaced, before this man came."

P. 691. Edward Pate, of Bredon, died in Oct. 1655.

P. 702. b. r. "Tobias Ruſted."

P. 709. a. l. 75. for "who," r. "and."

Ibid. Thorpe Acre contains 240 acres.

---

[1] See them, with the autographs, under Beaumanor, p. 144.

[2] Veſpaſian F. 13, fol. 102. b.

[3] No. 2342. fol. 59. b.

[4] Ibid. fol. 174. b.

[5] Ibid. fol. 78. See the autographs in Plate LXXXIX. p. 673.

[6] Strype's Eccleſiaſtical Memorials, vol. III. Appendix, p. 164.

[7] See his epitaph at Waltham Holy Croſs, Hiſtory of Eſſex, vol. IV. p. 173.

[8] Who in other places is called Henry Lilly.

Ibid. b. l. 15. r. "ſometymes my huſband."

Ibid. note, l. 1. r. "dated at St. Peter's at Rome, anno pont' d'ni Martini Pape V. 6°, ſealed with the ſeal of Jordan biſhop," &c.

P. 734. Sir Thomas Richardſon, knt. was born at Mulbarton in the county of Norfolk, his father being miniſter thereof. He was bred in the ſtudy of our municipal law, and became the king's ſerjeant therein. Afterwards, Nov. 28, 1626, he was ſworn chief juſtice of the Common Pleas, that place having been void ten months before. But now, coming to our own times, it is ſafeſt for me to break off. Virgil, I remember, put a period to his Eclogue with Et Hylax in limine latrat.

——will verſify no more,
For do but hark, Hylax doth bark,
At th' entrance of the door.

Seeing many will be ready to carp, it is ſafeſt for me to be ſilent, whilſt his braſs monument in the South ſide of Weſtminſter Abbey thus entertaineth the reader:

Deo Om.
Thomæ Richardſon Iceni, Equitis Aurati,
Humanum Depoſitum.
Ille
Juris Municip. omnes gradus exantlavit.
Conventûs tertii ordinis ann. Jacobi Regis 21 & 22
Prolocutor extitit;
Fori civilis (Communium Placitorum vocant)
Supremum Magiſtratum quinquennium geſſit;
Ad ſummum tandem primarii per Angliam judicis Tribunal
A Rege Carolo evectus: expiravit
Anno ætatis LXVI, Salutis MDCXXXIIII.
Tho. Richardſon, fil. unicus, Eques Aur.
Baro Scotiæ deſignatus,
Patri incomparabili poſuit.

This Judge married for his ſecond lady Elizabeth Beaumont, the ſiſter (as I take it) of Mary counteſs of Buckingham, and the relict of [ſir John] Aſhburnham, knt.; ſhe was by king Charles created baroneſs of Craumont in Scotland; and (though iſſueleſs by the Judge) the honour deſcended to his grandchild [1].

P. 742. Mr. Thoreſby, in his "Hiſtory of Leeds," p. 49, mentions a marcaſite very curiouſly variegated, which had been found in a coal-mine at Cole Orton, and was preſented to him by Dr. Woodward.

P. 752. In Lilly's Merlin, 1660, the portrait is an indifferent copy of Marſhal's; in 1669, it is a different face, with a large patch; in 1681, nearly the ſame.—"Seneſco; cum venia datur, plura poſſem.—We do here preſent the world with our aſtrological obſervations compoſed by us (and written by our conſtant amanuenſis Mr. Henry Coley) for the year 1681; being now, at the writing thereof, in the 77th year of our age currant, &c. Dated at Horſham, in Waltham pariſh, Surrey, Sept. 18, 1680."—The Merlin for 1684 is ſaid to be "according to the method of Mr. William Lilly" (and has his portrait). The Preface is ſigned, "Henry Coley, from my houſe in Baldwin's Gardens, over againſt the Old Hole in the Wall, Oct. 8, 1683."

P. 757. At the diſſolution of monaſteries, a leaſe of Diſhley Grange was granted to ſir William Gorfyn [2].

P. 775. The following verſes, by Mr. Woty, were written at Donington Park, in the life-time of the late earl of Huntingdon:

"'Tis not a lip or eye we beauty call,
But the joint force and full reſult of all."
Thus ſung Dan Pope; and ſurely due regard
Muſt e'er accompany ſo ſweet a Bard.
What he hath ſaid, and none hath yet deny'd,
To thee, O Donington! may be apply'd.
But, could the Poet from the tomb ariſe,
And on this rural Eden caſt his eyes;
Could he for once behold this ſylvan ſcene,
Each walk umbrageous, and each view ſerene,
O'er every lawn, through every valley range,
His mind the Poet certainly would change,
And own that Beauty, free from all controul,
Reign'd here in parts, diveſted from the whole.
Then Donington, in his immortal lays,
As firſt in merit, would be firſt in praiſe:
Her broader ſhades his poliſh'd verſe would grace,
And Windſor mourn to hold a ſecond place.
But mine I fear the taſk would be too hard,
Though ſmoothly labour'd by ſo ſmooth a Bard;
For, when the picture he had vainly thought
Throughout the whole, with rare perfection wrought,
Nature and Huntingdon, amidſt theſe views,
Would ſhew ſome latent charm, and triumph o'er the Muſe."

P. 779. Cavendiſh Bridge is built where formerly was Wilen Ferry. A Survey of the River from Wilen to Leiceſter was publiſhed ſeveral years ago.

P. 804. Of the 20 children of Edward Liſle, eſq. Anne was the 12th; Charles the 13th; Suſan the 14th; Sophia the 15th; Sarah the 16th.—The 19th, Frances, died in December 1802.—Thomas March, huſband of Jane, the 10th, was a Turkey merchant.

Ibid. Mr. Dawſon has a ſon Edward, born March 14, 1802 (ſee p. 1106).

Ibid. Sophia Phillips was married at Diſhley, Dec. 15, 1802, to the hon. Henry Ryder, third ſon of lord Harrowby, and rector of Loughborough.

P. 805. b. l. 49. r. "abbas Turſtinus;" l. 52. "Caldrai;" l. 56. "Galfridi;" l. 57. "Ricardi."

P. 806. b. l. 4. r. "Hanc igitur."

P. 809. a. l. 48. r. "dedit eis in eſcambium;" l. 64. "terrâ quam;" l. 65. "de predictis XII."

P. 815. b. l. 23. r. "volumus;" l. 26. "Yvonis."

Ibid. l. 27. r. "per ſingulos annos."

P. 838. In the Valor of Pope Nicholas, about 1291, the temporalities of Garendon are thus rated:

					£.	s.	d.
In Cortelnyſtock & Rempiſton				—	42	8	4
In decanatu	Goſcote	£.17	19s.	0d.	118	9	5
	Frameland	28	3	4
	Akele	53	4	4
	Sparkenhou	11	6	4
	Gudlakſton	7	16	5
In Norwico	—	—	—	—	1	3	4

Taxatio bonorum abbatis de Gerendon in dec' Lincoln'.

Abbas de Gerendone habet apud Hethcote unam carucatam terre & dimidiam, & valet per annum — —	1	10	0
Et habet ibidem proficuum ſtauri per annum	4	15	0
Summa — — —	6	5	0

P. 855. a. read, The hexagon font, which ſtands on a bracket richly moulded, is engraved in fig. 6.

P. 878. b. l. 30. r. On a ſtone under the above plate; and l. 57. 58. r. the 1° day of March, anno Domin*i* 1642.

P. 880. l. 12. r. Agnes wife, &c.; and note 16. r. 4 Hen. IV.

P. 881. b. l. 35. for 1629, r. 1619.

P. 888. In 1735, the following Ode on Loughborough, inſcribed to Ambroſe Philips, Eſq. of Garendon, at that time Knight of the Shire for the County of Leiceſterſhire, was tranſmitted to Mr. Urban:

Pre-eminent in every breaſt,
By Nature's ruling power impreſt,
Some favourite paſſion ſways;
Hence, Philips, ſpring the warrior's fires,
Hence thee the patriot zeal inſpires
An early fame to raiſe.

Let me, recluſe in ſylvan ſhades,
Live favour'd of th' Aonian maids;
If they inſpire my flame,
Nor Sulmo, by her Ovid prais'd,
Nor Virgil's Mantua, ſhall be rais'd
Above my Loughborough's fame.

Dear native town, though far remov'd
From thee and relatives belov'd,
Yet Fancy's magic power
Paints all thy pleaſing ſcenes ſo true,
Thy ſhades, thy hills, thy meads I view,
And gently-winding Soar.

Oh, bear me, while th' Icarian ſtar
With ſultry vapours taints the air,
To its cool ſilver ſtreams;

---

[1] Fuller, Worthies, Norfolk, p. 252.

[2] See p. 797.

There, under bending oſiers laid,
Let Phœbus and the Muſes aid
My ſoft poetic dreams.

How dull the City views appear,
Where clouds of ſmoke pollute the air,
And dim the azure ſkies:
Her gilded ſpires, her numerous piles,
Though ſtretch'd through ſeven extended miles,
Are ſcarce perceiv'd to riſe!

The concourſe of promiſcuous throngs,
The clamour of diſcording tongues,
The ear with torture wound;
The rattling coaches' conſtant din
Roars like a deluge ruſhing in,
Or thunder's hoarſer ſound.

How welcome, in exchange for theſe,
The Zephyrs whiſpering through the trees,
The bird's melodious trills;
The low of kine, the bleat of flocks,
The echoes from repeating rocks,
And ſound of bubbling rills!

Such are the ſcenes which Loughborough grace,
Such Garendon, delightful place!
Haunts pleaſing to the Muſe:
Here, would the Fates my wiſh befriend,
With a well-choſen book or friend,
To paſs my hours I'd chooſe.

The myſtic round of ſtate affairs,
The peaceful ſchemes, the rumour'd wars,
Urban, thy page ſhould tell:
And oft', tranſmitted by thy hand,
Advices from the Muſes' land
Should reach my rural cell.

Happy! would Urban, Philovere,
And Aſtrophil, to Phœbus dear,
The wonted converſe crown:
So Flaccus' raptures to compleat
Mæcenas, Varus, Virgil meet
Near old Brunduſium's town. J. Duick[1].

P. 848. Since the article on Dr. Pulteney was printed, I have been favoured by his worthy relict with a good engraving of his portrait; ſee Plate CXVI.

P. 867. Ralf de Hoton granted a yearly rent to the nuns of Langley, on placing his daughter Margaret in that religious houſe[2].

P. 890. l. 41. r. William and Francis Harley.

P. 907. l. 23. for Robert r. Richard Wilſon; his wife's name was Mary; and l. 32. r. Judith Webſter.

P. 909. l. 11. r. This lady (by the mother's ſide ſiſter to Dr. Sacheverell) was married July 9, 1723.

P. 912. note 5. r. Garter king at arms.

P. 920. l. penult. and p. 921. note, l. 11. r. "ſolebat eſſe capell*a*."

P. 921. Mr. Haſtings died April 2, 1804, æt. 76.

Ibid. Mr. Ellis's grandfather lived on Needwood Foreſt. His father was ſteward to the Huntingdon family; and Theophilus earl of Huntingdon and the hon. John Spencer were his godfathers. His firſt curacy was at St. Edmund's Bury, Suffolk.

P. 926. l. 1. for Rectors, r. Vicars.

Ibid. Dr. Hutchinſon, vicar of Packington 1706, was inſtituted to the rectory of Lillingſton Dayrell, Bucks, July 12, 1712, which he reſigned in 1715[3]. He was alſo prebendary of Longdon in Lichfield; and rector of Chedle in Staffordſhire.

Ibid. In the new church at Derby (which was lately rebuilt, except the elegant and beautiful Gothic tower erected about queen Mary's time) on the South wall near the Weſt door is a ſmall mural monument of black and white marble, erected to the memory of its chief founder; who at his death left a piece of plate, which he deſired might be ſold, and the money applied to the ornament of the church, which his executors thought could not more properly be laid out than in a monument for him who had taken ſo much pains in getting contributions towards the building of it. It is thus inſcribed:

"In memory of the Rev. Michael Hutchinſon, Doctor of Divinity, late Miniſter of this church, who from a pious zeal and unwearied application obtained ſubſcriptions, and afterwards collected and paid three thouſand two hundred and forty pounds and upwards for the re-building of this church.
He died the 10th day of January,
in the year of our Lord God MDCCXXX."

P. 930. John Wilkins, eſq. (who died in 1726) poſſeſſed in the liberty of Snibſton 264 acres, 2 roods, 12 perches, then leaſed at an annual rent of £109; out of which a rate tithe was payable to the vicar of Packington.

P. 932. April 11, 1682, a leaſe was granted by the maſter and poor brethren of Wigston's Hoſpital to John Jaques, of a meſſuage in Raunſton, and of a half yard land, then in the tenure of Elizabeth Jaques, his mother, for the lives of himſelf and Elizabeth and Anne his daughters, at a rent of 30*s*.

P. 988. In 1638, a ſuit was commenced, between the inhabitants of Rothley and thoſe of the South part of the town of Mountſorell, on a point which the following caſe will in ſome degree explain.

"The pariſh of Rothley, conſiſteth of the town of Rothley and of the South part of the town of Mountſorell, and of divers other townſhips and villages.

The townſmen and landholders of Rothley and Mountſorell aforeſaid have only been accuſtomed to repair the pariſh church and ornaments thereof at their own charge, or for the greater part thereof, for theſe 30 or 40 or more years.

The church levies concerning the ſaid towns of Rothley and Mountſorell within the ſaid pariſh have for two parts thereof uſually been collected and anſwered by the churchwardens of the town of Rothley, and have for the other third part or reſidue thereof uſually been collected and anſwered to the ſaid churchwardens of the town of Rothley by the churchwardens for the town of Mountſorell of the pariſh aforeſaid, according to notice given by the churchwardens of Rothley town to the churchwardens of Mountſorell town aforeſaid.

The levy for the ſaid third part in 1638 was at the rate of 6*d*. a horſe, 6*d*. a beaſt, and 2*s*. a ſcore of ſheep.

Of late, viz. within four or five years laſt paſt, the churchwardens and townſmen of Mountſorell of the pariſh aforeſaid have refuſed to contribute their accuſtomed third part in manner accuſtomed.

Q. Whether the churchwardens of the town of Mountſorell of the pariſh of Rothley be not compellable to receive notice and collect the third part of the ſaid levies, and to anſwer the ſame to the churchwardens of the town of Rothley, for the repairs of the ſaid church and ornaments, according to the ſaid antient cuſtoms, or how otherwiſe?"

This diſpute continued unſettled till the following order was made:

"At Epiphany quarter ſeſſions of the peace, 1654.

"Leiceſter. Upon the motion of Mr. Major, of counſel with the inhabitants of Rothley in this county, ſhewing that the inhabitants of the South end of Mountſorell, within the pariſh of Rothley aforeſaid, have refuſed to pay the money aſſeſſed upon them for the repairs of the pariſh church of Rothley aforeſaid, clerk's wages, and other church duties, according to antient cuſtom, in contempt of an order of this Court, made at Trinity ſeſſions laſt in that behalf: And it now appearing to this Court, upon the oath of Thomas Clifford, that he (about 40 years ſince living in Rothley aforeſaid, and being then churchwarden of the pariſh church there) received of the churchwardens of the South end of Mountſorell aforeſaid a third part of the churchwardens' aſſeſſments, aſſeſſed and taxed for the repairs of the church, clerk's wages, and other church duties thereto incident; and that the ſame was then reputed to be the antient and accuſtomed rate: And it appearing further to this Court, that the churchwardens of the South end of Mountſorell aforeſaid are in arrear to the churchwardens of Rothley aforeſaid £3. 9*s*. 3*d*. for five years, ended at Eaſter laſt, aſſeſſed upon them according to the aforeſaid cuſtom, and this preſent year's tax ſo made in this behalf: It is therefore ordered, that churchwardens for the ſaid five years of the South end of Mountſorell aforeſaid pay unto the preſent churchwardens of Rothley aforeſaid, within ſix weeks after notice hereof, the aforeſaid £3. 9*s*. 3*d*. ſo aſſeſſed as aforeſaid, and alſo this preſent year's tax, and all future taxes in this behalf to be made, according to the aforeſaid cuſtom; unleſs the inhabitants of the South end of Mountſorell aforeſaid, at the next ſeſſions of the peace to be held for this county, ſhew good cauſe to the contrary (when both ſides are to be more fully heard): And if the ſaid old churchwardens or preſent churchwardens of the South end of Mountſorell aforeſaid, or any of them, ſhall refuſe to perform this order, the next juſtice of the peace is hereby deſired to bind them by recognizance, to appear at the next ſeſſions of the peace to be held for this county, to anſwer ſuch their contempt; and, in their default, to ſend them to the gaol. By the Court."

---

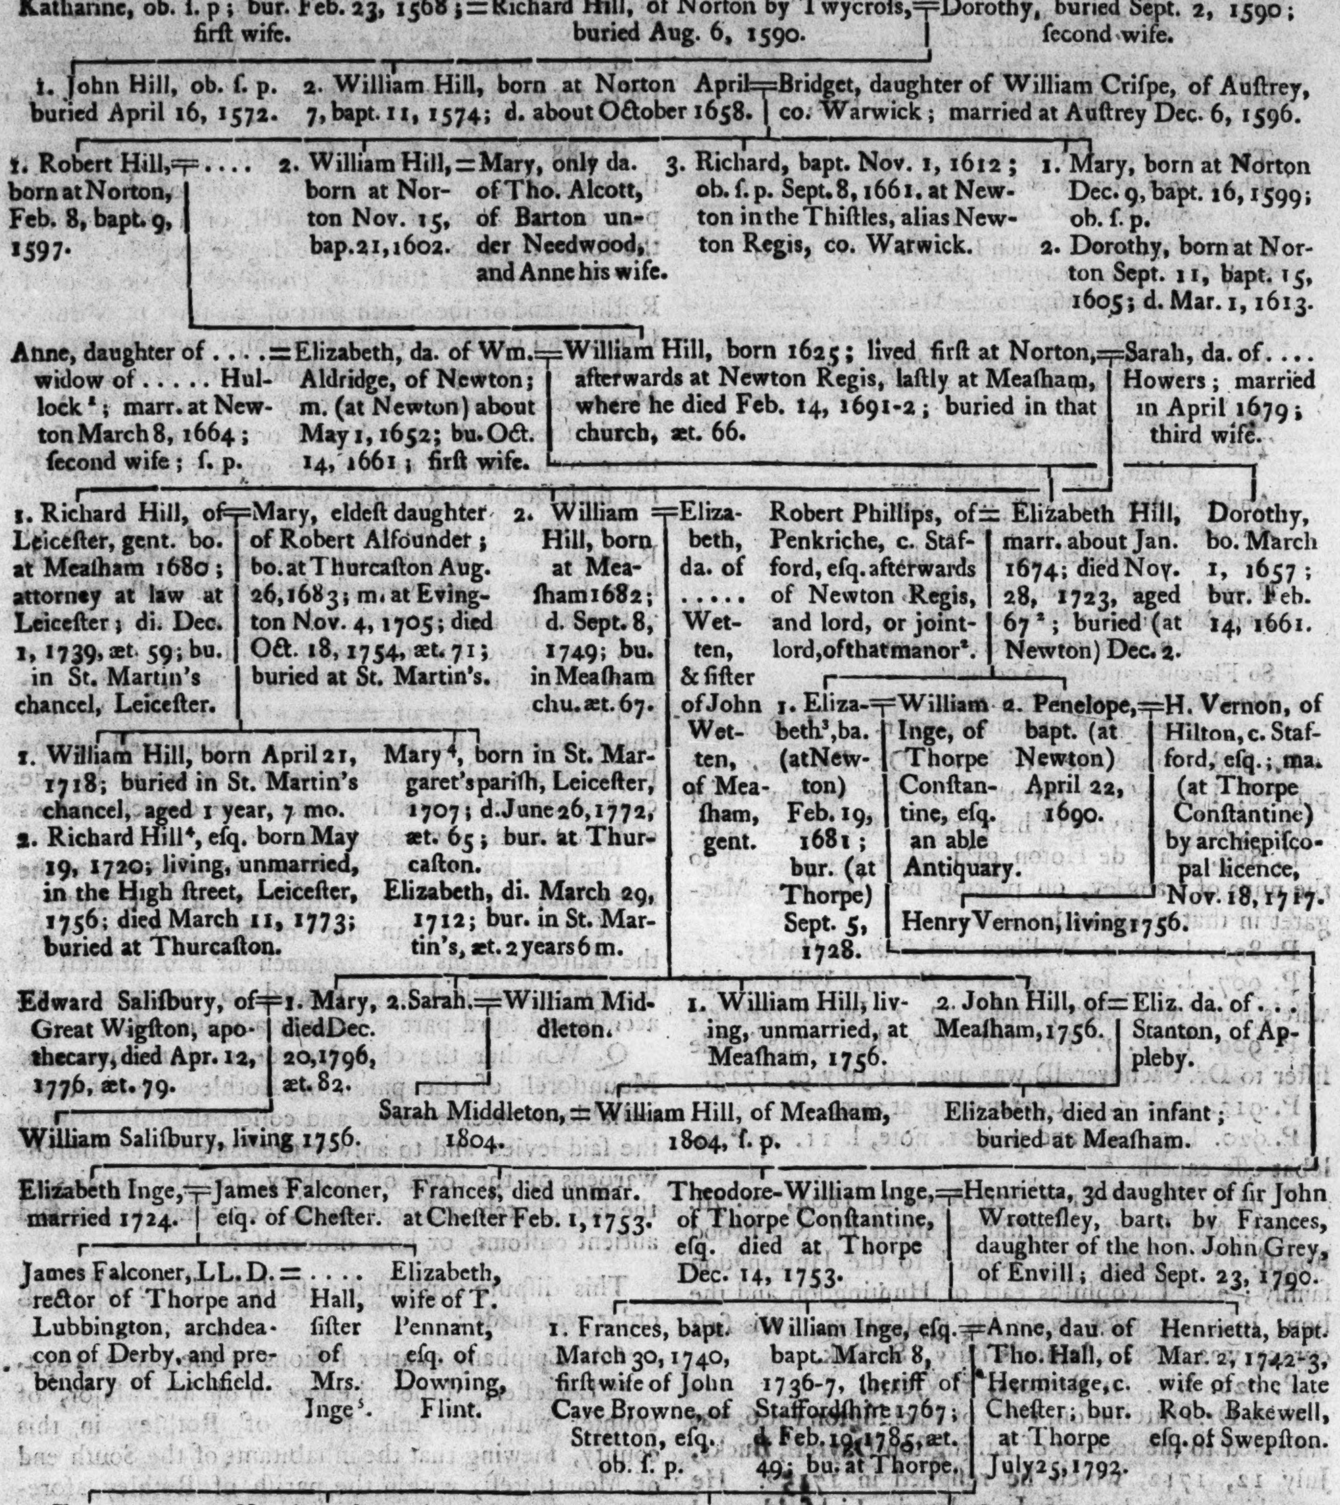
[1] Gent. Mag. vol. V. p. 494.

[2] Madox, Formulare Anglicanum,

[3] See Willis's Buckingham, p. 222.

(Examined by Ralph Dison, Clerk of the Peace.)

P. *1012. PEDIGREE of HILL, of NORTON by TWYCROSS, MEASHAM, and LEICESTER; continued.



Katharine, ob. ſ. p; bur. Feb. 23, 1568; first wife. = Richard Hill, of Norton by Twycroſs, buried Aug. 6, 1590. = Dorothy, buried Sept. 2, 1590; ſecond wife.

1. John Hill, ob. ſ. p. buried April 16, 1572.

2. William Hill, born at Norton April 7, bapt. 11, 1574; d. about October 1658. = Bridget, daughter of William Criſpe, of Auſtrey, co. Warwick; married at Auſtrey Dec. 6, 1596.

1. Robert Hill, born at Norton, Feb. 8, bapt. 9, 1597. = ...

2. William Hill, born at Norton Nov. 15, bap. 21, 1602. = Mary, only da. of Tho. Alcott, of Barton under Needwood, and Anne his wife.

3. Richard, bapt. Nov. 1, 1612; ob. ſ. p. Sept. 8, 1661. at Newton in the Thiſtles, alias Newton Regis, co. Warwick.

1. Mary, born at Norton Dec. 9, bapt. 16, 1599; ob. ſ. p.

2. Dorothy, born at Norton Sept. 11, bapt. 15, 1605; d. Mar. 1, 1613.

Anne, daughter of .... widow of ..... Hullock[1]; marr. at Newton March 8, 1664; ſecond wife; ſ. p. = Elizabeth, da. of Wm. Aldridge, of Newton; m. (at Newton) about May 1, 1652; bu. Oct. 14, 1661; first wife. = William Hill, born 1625; lived firſt at Norton, afterwards at Newton Regis, laſtly at Meaſham, where he died Feb. 14, 1691-2; buried in that church, æt. 66. = Sarah, da. of .... Howers; married in April 1679; third wife.

1. Richard Hill, of Leiceſter, gent. bo. at Meaſham 1680; attorney at law at Leiceſter; di. Dec. 1, 1739, æt. 59; bu. in St. Martin's chancel, Leiceſter. = Mary, eldeſt daughter of Robert Alſounder; bo. at Thurcaſton Aug. 26, 1683; m. at Evington Nov. 4, 1705; died Oct. 18, 1754, æt. 71; buried at St. Martin's.

2. William Hill, born at Meaſham 1682; d. Sept. 8, 1749; bu. in Meaſham chu. æt. 67. = Elizabeth, da. of ..... Wetten, & ſiſter of John Wetten, of Meaſham, gent.

Robert Phillips, of Penkriche, c. Stafford, eſq. afterwards of Newton Regis, and lord, or joint-lord, of that manor[2]. = Elizabeth Hill, marr. about Jan. 1674; died Nov. 28, 1723, aged 67[2]; buried (at Newton) Dec. 2.

Dorothy, bo. March 1, 1657; bur. Feb. 14, 1661.

1. William Hill, born April 21, 1718; buried in St. Martin's chancel, aged 1 year, 7 mo.

2. Richard Hill[4], eſq. born May 19, 1720; living, unmarried, in the High ſtreet, Leiceſter, 1756; died March 11, 1773; buried at Thurcaſton.

Mary[4], born in St. Margaret's pariſh, Leiceſter, 1707; d. June 26, 1772, æt. 65; bur. at Thurcaſton.

Elizabeth, di. March 29, 1712; bur. in St. Martin's, æt. 2 years 6 m.

1. Elizabeth[3], ba. (at Newton) Feb. 19, 1681; bur. (at Thorpe) Sept. 5, 1728. = William Inge, of Thorpe Conſtantine, eſq. an able Antiquary.

2. Penelope, bapt. (at Newton) April 22, 1690. = H. Vernon, of Hilton, c. Stafford, eſq.; ma. (at Thorpe Conſtantine) by archiepiſcopal licence, Nov. 18, 1717.

Henry Vernon, living 1756.

Edward Saliſbury, of Great Wigſton, apothecary, died Apr. 12, 1776, æt. 79. = 1. Mary, died Dec. 20, 1796, æt. 82.

2. Sarah. = William Middleton.

1. William Hill, living, unmarried, at Meaſham, 1756.

2. John Hill, of Meaſham, 1756. = Eliz. da. of ... Stanton, of Appleby.

William Saliſbury, living 1756.

Sarah Middleton, 1804. = William Hill, of Meaſham, 1804, ſ. p.

Elizabeth, died an infant; buried at Meaſham.

Elizabeth Inge, married 1724. = James Falconer, eſq. of Cheſter.

Frances, died unmar. at Cheſter Feb. 1, 1753.

Theodore-William Inge, of Thorpe Conſtantine, eſq. died at Thorpe Dec. 14, 1753. = Henrietta, 3d daughter of ſir John Wrotteſley, bart. by Frances, daughter of the hon. John Grey, of Envill; died Sept. 23, 1790.

James Falconer, LL.D. rector of Thorpe and Lubbington, archdeacon of Derby, and prebendary of Lichfield. = ... Hall, ſiſter of Mrs. Inge[5].

Elizabeth, wife of T. Pennant, eſq. of Downing, Flint.

1. Frances, bapt. March 30, 1740, firſt wife of John Cave Browne, of Stretton, eſq. ob. ſ. p.

William Inge, eſq. bapt. March 8, 1736-7, ſheriff of Staffordſhire 1767; d. Feb. 19, 1785, æt. 49; bu. at Thorpe. = Anne, dau. of Tho. Hall, of Hermitage, c. Cheſter; bur. at Thorpe July 25, 1792.

Henrietta, bapt. Mar. 2, 1742-3, wife of the late Rob. Bakewell, eſq. of Swepſton.

1. Frances, bo. Feb. 29, bu. July 3, 1768.

2. Henrietta, bapt. Aug. 6, 1770; mar. to the Rev. Spencer Madan, treaſurer and canon reſidentiary of Lichfield, rector of Ibſtock, &c. &c.

3. Anne, bapt. July 24, 1771; bu. Feb. 1, 1790.

4. William Philips Inge, of Thorpe Conſtantine, eſq. bapt. Sept. 25, 1773; married Jan. 12, 1798. = Lady Eliz. Stewart, daughter of the earl of Galloway.

P. 1020. In 1646, the ſum of £50 a-year was ordered to be paid, out of the rectory of Shepeſhed, ſequeſtered from the lord Beaumont, towards the maintenance of the miniſter of Wanlip[5].

P. 1082. In anſwer to circular queries of the biſhop, it was ſtated in 1709, "That there is a village in the pariſh of Thurcaſton, called Anſty, which has a chapel of eaſe, with a churchwarden, and all pariſh officers; and in the liberties of Anſty there is a parcel of open field land, called Hogate wood, which pays the great tithes to my lord Stamford, but the ſmall tithes to the rectory of Thurcaſton. Thurcaſton church is endowed with all the tithes, except ſome ſmall parcels of land, and all the paſture ground in Cropſden; which pays no tithe, but to a very ſmall extent. The advowſon belongs to the maſter, fellows, and ſcholars, of Emanuel College in Cambridge; and was given to them by ſecretary Walſingham in queen Elizabeth's reign[6]."

P. 1149. Anne Cradock (daughter of William and Sarah) was born in July 1739; and baptized, at St. Giles's in the Fields, Auguſt 9, that year.

[1] So ſpells Newton regiſter; but the vellum roll "Ullock," and probably rightly, as Mr. R. Hill, for whom the work was done, might have it in his writings. George Ullocke, gent. is in Willeſley papers, of Blackfordby March 12, 1646; of Meaſham Jan. 3, 1648; and in Charnells-ſchedule Nov. 20, 1657.

[2] On the chancel floor at Newton Regis, co. Warwick, is this epitaph: "Elizabeth Phillips, wife of Robert Phillips, eſq. lord of this manor, and daughter of William Hill, of this town, gent. died Nov. 28, 1723, aged 67." Robert Phillips's epitaph is printed in Dugdale's Warwickſhire, vol II. p. 1126.

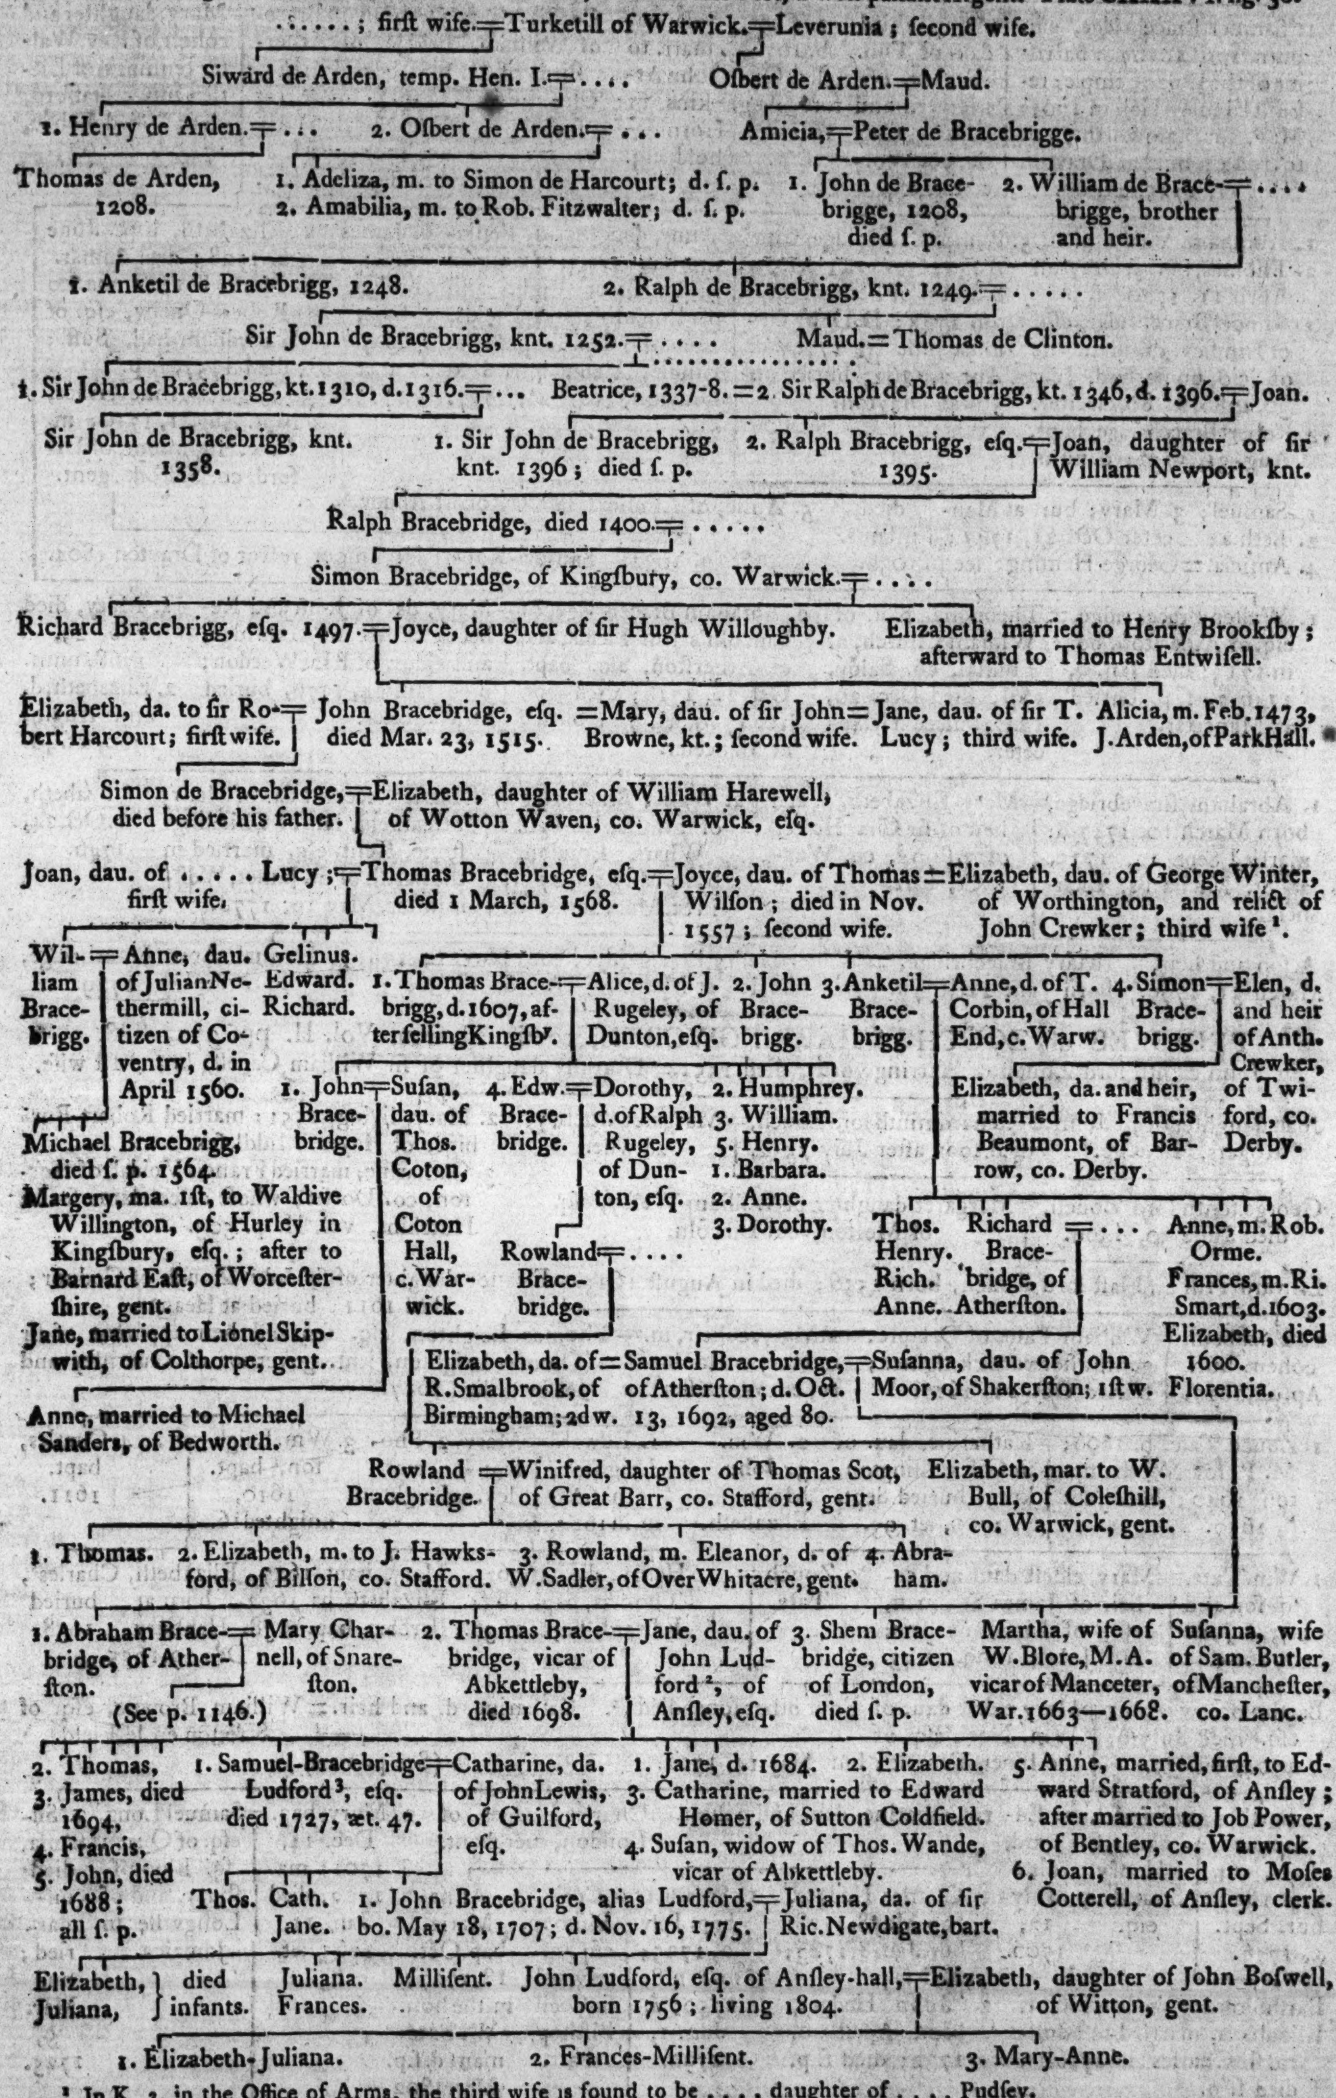
[3] By this lady Mr. Inge got eſtates at Newton and at Birmingham; the latter of which is now become very conſiderable.

[4] See their epitaphs under Thurcaſton, p. 1060. [5] See before, p. 1098. [6] Lambeth MSS.

PEDIGREE of BRACEBRIDGE, of KINGSBURY, ATHERSTON, and LINDLEY.

From VINCENT's Viſitation of WARWICKSHIRE, 1619; Sir WILLIAM DUGDALE's Hiſtory of that County; a Pedigree in the Office of Arms (6 D. XIV.); Pariſh REGISTERS, and EPITAPHS.

Arms: Vairè, Argent and Sable, a feſs Gules. Creſt, on a mount Vert, a wolf paſſant Argent. Plate CXXXVI. fig. 50.



. . . . . ; firſt wife.=Turketill of Warwick.=Leverunia; ſecond wife.

Siward de Arden, temp. Hen. I.= . . . .
Oſbert de Arden.=Maud.

1. Henry de Arden.= . . .
2. Oſbert de Arden.= . . .
Amicia,=Peter de Bracebrigge.

Thomas de Arden, 1208.
1. Adeliza, m. to Simon de Harcourt; d. ſ. p.
2. Amabilia, m. to Rob. Fitzwalter; d. ſ. p.
1. John de Bracebrigge, 1208, died ſ. p.
2. William de Bracebrigge, brother and heir.= . . . .

1. Anketil de Bracebrigg, 1248.
2. Ralph de Bracebrigg, knt. 1249.= . . . . .

Sir John de Bracebrigg, knt. 1252.= . . . .
Maud.=Thomas de Clinton.

1. Sir John de Bracebrigg, kt. 1310, d. 1316.= . . .
Beatrice, 1337-8.=2 Sir Ralph de Bracebrigg, kt. 1346, d. 1396.=Joan.

Sir John de Bracebrigg, knt. 1358.
1. Sir John de Bracebrigg, knt. 1396; died ſ. p.
2. Ralph Bracebrigg, eſq. 1395.=Joan, daughter of ſir William Newport, knt.

Ralph Bracebridge, died 1400.= . . . . .

Simon Bracebridge, of Kingſbury, co. Warwick.= . . . .

Richard Bracebrigg, eſq. 1497.=Joyce, daughter of ſir Hugh Willoughby.
Elizabeth, married to Henry Brookſby; afterward to Thomas Entwiſell.

Elizabeth, da. to ſir Robert Harcourt; firſt wife.=John Bracebridge, eſq. died Mar. 23, 1515.=Mary, dau. of ſir John Browne, kt.; ſecond wife.=Jane, dau. of ſir T. Lucy; third wife.
Alicia, m. Feb. 1473, J. Arden, of Park Hall.

Simon de Bracebridge, died before his father.=Elizabeth, daughter of William Harewell, of Wotton Waven, co. Warwick, eſq.

Joan, dau. of . . . . Lucy; firſt wife.=Thomas Bracebridge, eſq. died 1 March, 1568.=Joyce, dau. of Thomas Wilſon; died in Nov. 1557; ſecond wife.=Elizabeth, dau. of George Winter, of Worthington, and relict of John Crewker; third wife[1].

William Bracebrigg.=Anne, dau. of Julian Nethermill, citizen of Coventry, d. in April 1560.
Gelinus.
Edward.
Richard.
1. Thomas Bracebrigg, d. 1607, after ſelling Kingſb^y.=Alice, d. of J. Rugeley, of Dunton, eſq.
2. John Bracebrigg.
3. Anketil Bracebrigg.=Anne, d. of T. Corbin, of Hall End, c. Warw.
4. Simon Bracebrigg.=Elen, d. and heir of Anth. Crewker, of Twiford, co. Derby.

Michael Bracebrigg, died ſ. p. 1564.
Margery, ma. 1ſt, to Waldive Willington, of Hurley in Kingſbury, eſq.; after to Barnard Eaſt, of Worceſterſhire, gent.
Jane, married to Lionel Skipwith, of Colthorpe, gent.
1. John Bracebridge.=Suſan, dau. of Thos. Coton, of Coton Hall, c. Warwick.
4. Edw. Bracebridge.=Dorothy, d. of Ralph Rugeley, of Dunton, eſq.
2. Humphrey.
3. William.
5. Henry.
1. Barbara.
2. Anne.
3. Dorothy.
Elizabeth, da. and heir, married to Francis Beaumont, of Barrow, co. Derby.

Anne, married to Michael Sanders, of Bedworth.
Rowland Bracebridge.= . . . .
Thos.
Henry.
Rich.
Anne.
Richard Bracebridge, of Atherſton.= . . .
Anne, m. Rob. Orme.
Frances, m. Ri. Smart, d. 1603.
Elizabeth, died 1600.
Florentia.

Elizabeth, da. of R. Smalbrook, of Birmingham; 2d w.=Samuel Bracebridge, of Atherſton; d. Oct. 13, 1692, aged 80.=Suſanna, dau. of John Moor, of Shakerſton; 1ſt w.

Rowland Bracebridge.=Winifred, daughter of Thomas Scot, of Great Barr, co. Stafford, gent.
Elizabeth, mar. to W. Bull, of Coleſhill, co. Warwick, gent.

1. Thomas.
2. Elizabeth, m. to J. Hawksford, of Billſon, co. Stafford.
3. Rowland, m. Eleanor, d. of W. Sadler, of Over Whitacre, gent.
4. Abraham.

1. Abraham Bracebridge, of Atherſton.=Mary Charnell, of Snareſton. (See p. 1146.)
2. Thomas Bracebridge, vicar of Abkettleby, died 1698.=Jane, dau. of John Ludford[2], of Anſley, eſq.
3. Shem Bracebridge, citizen of London, died ſ. p.
Martha, wife of W. Blore, M.A. vicar of Manceter, War. 1663—1668.
Suſanna, wife of Sam. Butler, of Mancheſter, co. Lanc.

2. Thomas,
3. James, died 1694,
4. Francis,
5. John, died 1688;
all ſ. p.
1. Samuel-Bracebridge Ludford[3], eſq. died 1727, æt. 47.=Catharine, da. of John Lewis, of Guilford, eſq.
1. Jane, d. 1684.
2. Elizabeth.
3. Catharine, married to Edward Homer, of Sutton Coldfield.
4. Suſan, widow of Thos. Wande, vicar of Abkettleby.
5. Anne, married, firſt, to Edward Stratford, of Anſley; after married to Job Power, of Bentley, co. Warwick.
6. Joan, married to Moſes Cotterell, of Anſley, clerk.

Thos.
Cath.
Jane.
1. John Bracebridge, alias Ludford, bo. May 18, 1707; d. Nov. 16, 1775.=Juliana, da. of ſir Ric. Newdigate, bart.

Elizabeth, Juliana, } died infants.
Juliana.
Frances.
Milliſent.
John Ludford, eſq. of Anſley-hall, born 1756; living 1804.=Elizabeth, daughter of John Boſwell, of Witton, gent.

1. Elizabeth-Juliana.
2. Frances-Milliſent.
3. Mary-Anne.

[1] In K. 3. in the Office of Arms, the third wife is found to be . . . . daughter of . . . . Pudſey.

[2] Second ſon of George Ludford, of Witherley, eſq. who married Catharine, daughter of James Preſcot, of Warwick, gent. by whom he had iſſue five ſons and three daughters, Jane, John, James, Michael, Thomas, Catharine, George, and Merial. Jane married the Rev. Thomas Bracebridge, all the reſt dying young or unmarried. James, the longeſt ſurvivor, a gentleman of great ingenuity, good learning, and ſingular piety, died Dec. 29, 1699, in the 44th year of his age; and, by his laſt will and teſtament, conſtituted his nephew Thomas, youngeſt ſon of Mr. Bracebridge aforeſaid, heir of all his lands, on condition that he aſſumed the name of Ludford. But Thomas dying without iſſue, the property deſcended, by his uncle's will, on the ſame condition, to Samuel the eldeſt ſon.

[3] In the chancel of Anſley church, on a ſquare pedeſtal of ſtatuary marble, adorned with an urn of black veined marble:

"M. S.
Samuelis Bracebridge Ludford, arm.
nat. an. Salut. 1680; denat. 1727.
Qui patrimonio in ephebis orbatus, et Thomæ fratri juniori poſthabitus,
illius morte,
Jacobo avunculo paululum ſuperſtitis,
res avitas obtinuit.
Fuit ille incorruptâ fide et amicitiâ,
Paterfamilias indulgens;
erga omnes humanitate ſummâ;
fidus reipublicæ civis;
Quod autem officiorum fons eſt,
et inſtar omnium,
verâ in Deum pietate, in Chriſtum fide, ejuſque cupiens vitâ referre diſciplinam, Eccleſiam Anglicanam
primævæ proximam
præcipuè coluit.
Johannes B. Ludford fil. nat. max.
optimo patri
L. M. M. P. 1761."

PEDIGREE of BRACEBRIDGE, of ATHERSTON and LINDLEY; continued from p. 1145.

1. Abraham Bracebridge, of Atherſton, died Oct. 18, 1694, æt. 52; bur. at Manceter. = Mary, daughter of Thomas Charnell, of Snareſton, eſq. born 1659; died Sept. 30, 1700.

1. Samuel Bracebridge, eſq. born April 4, 1673; barriſter of the Inner Temple; rebuilt Lindley Hall in 1701; M. P. for Tamworth 1710 to 1722; bur. at Drayton Nov. 11, 1735, æt. 63. = Anne, third dau. of Tho. Savage, of Malvern and Elmley Caſtle, co. Worceſter, eſq.

2. Thos. b. 1674, d. at Oxford, Aug. 16, 1695, ſ. p.

Suſanna, marr. to John Atkins, of Horninghold, eſq.

Cecilia, da. of William Bird, of Cleybrook, firſt wife. = 3. Abraham Bracebridge, of Atherſton, born June 1, 1676-7; marr. (at Church Eyton) Ap. 13, 1710, to M. J. died Sept. 2, 1743. = Mary, daughter and coheir of Rev. Walter Jennings, of Little Onn, c. Stafford, clerk [1], died Feb. 6, 1745-6, æt 63; 2d wife.

1. Abraham, died ſ. p.
2. Thomas, bur. at Drayton April 11, 1720; ſ. p.
3. Samuel Bracebridge, eſq. of Lindley, di. in the Iſle of Scio, unmarried, July 30, 1786, æt. 80, circiter.
4. Robert Bracebridge, bapt. Aug. 31, 1731; d. unm.

5. Philip Bracebridge, bapt. Aug. 16, 1714; M. A. & rector of Fenny Drayton 1742; D.D. by diploma June 19, 1749; d. Apr. 2, 1762; buried on 5th at Drayton. = Anne, daughter of Benjamin Baxter, eſq. of Coſham in the Iſle of Wight, and of Lincoln's Inn Fields, London; died ſuddenly at Lindley Hall; buried at Drayton, Nov. 20, 1777.

+ Bagster

6. James Bracebridge, bapt. May 24, 1716.

1. Elizabeth, bapt. June 6, 1708; died unmar.
2. Mary, b. 1700, ma. to Robert Oneby, eſq. of Lowdham-hall, Suff.; died 1757, ſ. p.[2]
3. Margaret-Anne-Grace, bapt. Aug. 1, 1710; m. Edw. Highmoor, of Ufford, co. Suffolk, gent.

1. Samuel;
2. Bethia;
3. Mary; bur. at Manceter Oct. 21, 1747; } died infants.
4. Amicia. = George Heming, ſee p. 1032.

5. Anne, of Lindley Hall. = Robert Abney.

See p. 1032.

Samuel-Robert Highmoor, rector of Drayton 1804.

1. Walter Bracebridge, eſq. of Atherſton, bo. in 1713; died Jan. 3, 1746-7, ſ. p. buried at Manceter. = Theodoſia, dau. of William Church, of Tunſtal, co. Salop, eſq.; died Dec. 20, 1742; buried at Manceter.

2. Abraham Bracebridge, of Lincoln's Inn Fields, and of Atherſton, eſq. bapt. Oct. 20, 1716; died Sept. 10, 1789, æt. 72; buried at Manceter. = Mary, da. of John and Rebecca Stiles, of Uxbridge, and widow of Ric. Weedon; died Jan. 24, 1776, buried at Manceter.

1. Mary, died Feb. 29, 1768, unm.
2. Elizabeth, d. unm. Aug. 9, 1760, æt. 48.

1. Abraham Bracebridge, born March 10, 1747-8; married Sept. 12, 1775, at St. Michael's, Lichfield. = Mary-Elizabeth, d. and heir of ſir Cha. Holte, of Aſton[3], co. Warwick, bart.

2. Walter Bracebridge, of St. Ben'et Paul's Wharf, London, born May 21, 1751, in St. Mary Somerſet. = Harriet, ſecond da. of Henry Streatfield, late of Chiddingſtone, Kent, eſq. married in the pariſh of St. James, Weſtminſter, May 19, 1778.

Elizabeth, b. Oct. 24, 1746.

A ſon and heir, March 31, 1799.

Mary Bracebridge, born June 22, 1776. = Walter-Henry Bracebridge, born Nov. 14, 1781; married at Manceter Dec. 8, 1803.

Hannah-Anne Bracebridge, born Sept. 2, 1779.

PEDIGREE of ZOUCH of HARRINGWORTH, continued from Vol. II. pp. 372, 888.

John eighth lord Zouch of Harringworth, died 1551. = Dorothy daughter of ſir William Capell, knt.; 1ſt wife.

Joan daughter of ſir John Rogers, 1ſt wife. = Richard ninth lord Zouch, died ſoon after July 1552. = Margaret Cheney, 2d wife.

2. Mary, living, 1551; married Robert Burbige, of Hayes, Middleſex.
3. Catharine, married Francis Vuidal, of Horton, co. Dorſet; whoſe deſcendants ſee in Hutchins, vol. II. p. 503.

George tenth lord Zouch, died June 30, 1569. = Margaret daughter of William Welby, eſq. of Molton, co. Lincoln.

Edward 11th and laſt lord Zouch, born 1556; died in Auguſt 1625. = Eleanor daughter of ſir John Zouch of Codnor; died 1611; buried at Heanor.

1. Elizabeth, coheir, bur. Ap. 24, 1617. = William Tate, of Delapré, gent. afterwards knighted; buried Oct. 11, 1617.

2. Mary, coheir, m. in 1603 at Hanbury, co. Worceſter[4]. = Thomas Leighton, eſq. ſon and heir apparent of ſir Thomas Leighton, knt. governor of Guernſey and Jerſey; died 1617.

1. Zouch Tate, b. 1606; M. P. for Northampton 1640; bur. Jan. 8, 1650. = Katharine, dau. of ſir Giles Allington, knt.; buried Sept. 7, 1700, æt. 93.

2. Wm.
3. John.
Mary.
Elizabeth.

1. Edward Leighton, born 1608; m. in 1624. = Mary Stanley.

2. Thomas Leighton.

3. Wm. Leighton, bapt. 1610, knighted 16.. = ...

4. Charles, bapt. 1611.

1. Wm. Tate, eſq. ſon and heir, d. June 20, 1695. = Mary, eldeſt dau. and coheir of James Stedman, eſq. of Lincoln's Inn; died July 4, 1699, æt. 53.

2. Zouch Tate. = ...

Henry, died 1636.
Thomas, bapt. 1631.
Edward, bapt. 1636.

Mary, bapt. 1627.
Elizabeth, ba. 1632.
Barbara, bap. 1638.

Elizabeth, born at Hanbury, Dec. 19, 1655.

Charles[5], buried 1658.

Bartholomew Tate, eſq. died July 6, 1704, æt. 37. = Mary eldeſt dau. of Wm. Noel, eſq. of the Inner Temple; bur. May 14, 1721.

Four other ſons, died yͤ.

Catharine, d. and heir. = William Browne, eſq. of Stretton en le Field. (See p. 1029.)

1. Bartholomew Tate, eſq. bapt. 1699; bur. Sept. 5, 1776. = Arundel, dau. of Henry Stratford, eſq.

2. Edward, died July 12, 1700.

1. Catharine, dau. and coheir. = Charles Hedges, of London, merchant.

2. Mary, bap. Dec. 14, 1701; ma. 1723; died Jan. 11, 1765, æt. 65. = Samuel Long, eſq. of Queen ſq. Bloomſbury, and of Longville in Jamaica.

3. Suſanna, died unmarried; bur Mar. 9, 1725.

Bartholomew, died an infant.
Elizabeth, married to admiral ſir Charles Hardy, bart. died ſ. p.

1. Charles Hedges, bap. May 8, 1728; bur. Jan. 8, 1783; died ſ. p.
2. John Hedges, bapt. April 26, 1732; died ſ. p.

1. Suſanna, bap. July 2, 1725; m. Jan. 8, 1750; d. Jan. 1, 1792. = Cecil Biſhopp, eſq. afterward ſir Cecil Biſhopp, bart.

2. Anna-Maria, bap. Oct. 18, 1727; m. the hon. W. Bateman; d. ſ. p. Mar. 1802.

Sir Cecil Biſhopp, bart. born Dec. 29, 1752; living 1804, and claimant of the dormant title of baron Zouch of Harringworth.

1. Robert Long, eſq. ma. May 1, 1764; buried at Twickenham in May 1779. = Lucy, da. of George-Anne Cook, eſq.

2. Edward Long, eſq. of Wimpole-ſtreet; living 1804. = ...

Several children.

1. Jane-Katharine, born Jan. 21, 1766; married Oct. 15, 1790, to John Oliver, eſq. of Gray's Inn.

2. Mary-Annabella, bapt. July 2, 1768; married Feb. 19, 1792; died March 4, 1803. = Samuel Scudamore Heming, eſq.

3. Lucy-Anne, born Aug. 12, 1770; married May 24, 1790, to Thomas Bayley Howell, eſq.

Samuel-George Heming, born Nov. 28, 1792.

---

[1] By Sarah, daughter and coheir of Walter Skrymſher, eſq. of Orſlow, in the ſame pariſh, Church-Eyton, with Little Onn. See Mr. Jennings's other daughter and coheir, under Seale, p. *988.

[2] See p. 1148.

[3] The Holte family ſeat: but ſir Charles never poſſeſſed it, his brother ſir Liſter's relict outliving him. Sir Charles, about the time of his daughter's marriage, reſided in Mr. Dyott's houſe at Freford, in St. Michael's pariſh Lichfield, vulgarly Green-hill.

[4] This Mary, after the death of Leighton, married to William Conuard, of Hanbury, who died in 1629, and ſhe died in 1652; both buried at Hanbury.

[5] See in Gent Mag. LXIX. 1013. a very probable argument againſt the exiſtence of any poſterity of the Leightons in 1741.

GENEALOGY of ONEBY, or ONDEBY, of STOKE DRY, SADINGTON, OADBY, NEWTON BURGULAND, HINCKLEY, and BARWELL.

From a Pedigree entered in the Viſitation of LONDON, 1634, by JOHN ONEBY and HUMPHREY ONEBY, now remaining in the College of Arms (C. 24 fol. 593. b.); compared with another, which was entered at the Viſitation of LEICESTERSHIRE, 1681, at the requeſt of dame MERCIE ONEBY, relict of ſir JOHN ONEBY; and of JOHN ONEBY, an attorney, lord of the manor of Barwell (K. 2. p. 84.)

⁂ Auguſt 7, 1680, a confirmation was granted, by Henry St. George, Clarenceux, to dame Mercy Oneby, relict of ſir John Oneby, knight, ſon and heir of John Oneby, eſq. eldeſt ſon of John Oneby, alias Ondeby, of Oneby, eſq. of the paternal arms and creſt that had been conſtantly borne by that family; viz. Or, a chevron Vert, between three towers Gules; creſt, a boar's head, couped, party per pale, Argent and Gules. See Plate CXXXVI. fig. 51. The like arms were, by the ſame inſtrument, confirmed to John Oneby, eſq. of Barwell, ſon and heir of Thomas Oneby, eſq. of Shepey, third ſon of John Oneby, of Oneby, eſq.

Thomas Ondeby was ſheriff of Rutland in 1156. = ...

. . . .

John Ondeby [1], of Stoke Dry and of Sadington, 1345. = ...

Thomas Ondeby, of Sadington, 1393. = ...

1. Thomas Ondeby [2], 1393, of Stoke Dry; M. P. for Rutland, 1403; ſheriff of that county 1413. = ...

2. John Ondeby, of Sadington, 1404 [3]. = ...

. . . . . = John Ondeby, ſheriff of Rutland 1423. = ...

Emma, 1414. = Henry Schawe.

Thomas Oneby, eſq. ſheriff of the counties of Leiceſter and Warwick 1484. = ...

Richard Ondeby [4], of Ondeby, eſq. 1523. = ...

John Ondeby, of Ondeby, eſq.; admitted of Gray's-inn 1521; ſettled at Hinckley. = ...

1. John Oneby, alias Ondeby, married at Coſby, Dec. 11, 1580; ſettled, firſt, at Hinckley, afterwards at Newton Burguland; buried at Hinckley Feb. 17, 1595. = Elizabeth Bent, buried at Coſby, Nov. 24, 1599.

2. Richard [5], baptized at Hinckley Sept. 25, 1563.

3. Thomas, buried at Hinckley April 11, 1585.

Viſit. Lond. Harl. Soc. Pub. XVII 139

1. JOHN ONEBY, eſq. baptized at Swebſton March 12, 1585; admitted of Gray's-inn 1608, five years only after king James had commanded that none but gentlemen ſhould be admitted of that Society; ſteward of the court of records at Leiceſter 1624; an ancient at Gray's-inn 1627; died at Hinckley Feb. 6, 1661-2, æt. 77. = Emmet, dau. of Humphrey Byard, of Long Clauſton; buried at Hinckley Oct. 6, 1674.

2. Humphry Oneby, baptized at Swebſton Oct. 13, 1588; a merchant in London 1634; died in Barbary. = Mary, dau. of R. Hall, of London, merch.

1. John, bapt. May 5, 1633.

2. Thomas Oneby, bapt. Dec. 31, 1634; a merchant in Aldermanbury 1682 [6].

3. Thomas Oneby, marr. Unica Vincent.

See their deſcendants, p. 1148.

1. Rooſe, bapt. at Coſby Oct. 25, 1581. = John Cowper.

2. Mary, bap. at Swebſton Oct. 13, 1583.

Suſannah, living 1661. = ... Palmer.

Mabell Aſhby, 1ſt w.; marr. at Hinckley Sept. 2, 1658; bur. at Hungerton. = John Oneby, eſq. of Hinckley; admitted of Gray's-inn 1651; barriſter there 1666, being at that time a gentleman of the privy chamber; knighted Auguſt 14, 1672; will dated Aug. 5, 1675; an ancient of Gray's-inn April 17, 1676; bur. on the 19th of the ſame month in the South chancel of St. Margaret's church, Weſtminſter; will proved May 8. = Mercie, da. of . . . Dudſon, of Glouceſterſh. 2d wife; buried at Hinckley [7] Aug. 3, 1698.

1. ELIZABETH, coheireſs to her brother; baptized at Hinckley Oct. 12, 1623; married Nov. 12, 1640. = Benj. King, of Kirby Muxloe.

See their deſcendants under Kirby Muxloe in Sparkenhoe Hundred.

2. DOROTHY, coheireſs. = Ezekiel Wrighte, rector of Thurcaſton.

See their deſcendants under Brookſby, p. 219.

3. EMMET, coheireſs; bap. at Hinckley Mar. 26, 1631. = Rich. Maſon, of Leiceſter.

See their deſcendants, p. 1148.

4. MARY, coheireſs; married Thomas Staveley, M.D. eſq. of Leiceſter.

See their deſcendants under Langton, vol. II. pp. 677. 693.

---

[1] April 14, 1345, the manor of Mowſley was granted by Roger Brabazon to John Ondeby of Stoke Dry; and, June 3, 1377, a releaſe was made by Alice Stephenſon to Robert Ondeby and others, for their lives, of all her lands in Sadington.

[2] An indenture 1393, between ſir William Twining and Thomas Ondeby, mentions a mortgage of certain lands in Sadington and Fleckney, made by John Brabazon to Thomas Ondeby the father; dated Vendredi en la feſte de St. Jake, 17 Ric. II.

[3] Grant of John Ondeby, of Sadington, to Henry Schawe and Emma Ondeby his daughter, of lands in Sadington, die Dominicâ ante feſtum Sancti Johannis Baptiſte, 1404. See the ſeal, Plate CXXXVI. fig. 42.

Of this family the two following Divines are noticed in Newcourt's Repertorium, vol. I. pp. 153. 237 404:

Richard de Ondeby, rector of St. Alban, Wood-ſtreet, died in 1393.

Walter Ondeby, rector of St. Margaret Moſes, Friday-ſtreet, in London, Nov. 21, 1481, collated to Harleſton prebend, in St. Paul's cathedral, July 1, 1485; died in 1498.

John Ondebye, clerk, by his will, dated March 4, 1413, and preſerved in the Archiepiſcopal Regiſtry at Lambeth, Reg. Arundell, pars prima, f. 202, ordered his body to be buried in the chancel of the pariſh church of Flamſtede, Herts; where the following epitaph ſtill preſerves his memory:

"Hic jacet Johannes Ondeby, rector iſtius eccleſiæ, et de Barughby, Lincoln' dioceſ', et canonicus in eccleſ' collegiatâ Beatæ Mariæ in Warr', et camerarius ex parte comitis Warr' in ſcaccario Domini Regis;
qui ob' VII Maii, MCCCCXIII;
cujus animæ propitietur Deus."

A label from his mouth, with theſe words:

"Miſerere, miſerator; quia verè ſum peccator; Unde precor, licet reus, miſerere Deus."

[4] "Sciant preſentes & futuri, quod ego Ricardus Ondeby, de Ondeby, in com' Leic', armiger, dedi, conceſſi, & hâc preſenti cartâ meâ confirmavi, Thome Waldram, generoſo, unum meſſuagium cum ſuis pertinentiis, ac omnia terras & tenementa, &c. in Ondeby; dat' 19° die Auguſti, anno regni Henrici Octavi regis Anglie & Francie & domini Hibernie, quinto decimo."

[5] Jeſica Oneby, widow, buried at Hinckley, March 28, 1603, was the wife either of this Richard or of his brother Thomas.

[6] In 1679, he was choſen churchwarden of St. Mary, Aldermanbury; but paid £8 to be excuſed ſerving that office.

[7] As were two of her ſiſters, Elizabeth Gerard 1706, and Frances Dudſon 1719.

Thomas Oneby, third ſon of the ſecond John Oneby of Hinckley (p. 1147); baptized at Swebſton July 18, 1593; married Oct. 30, 1627; buried at Shepey Oct. 28, 1632. = Unica, 4th daughter of Richard Vincent, of Shepey.

Elizabeth, daughter of Francis Fiſh, of Gumley; firſt wife; buried at Barwell Auguſt 8, 1660. = John Oneby, baptized at Shepey June 8, 1629; admitted of Gray's-inn 1655; an attorney, firſt at Wykin, then at Barwell; lord of the manor of Barwell 1681; elected [1] bailiff of Leiceſter March 13, 1687-8; died blind, in Dean-ſtreet, Fetter lane, in May 1721, æt. 91. = Ellen, daughter of Robert Davies [2], of Ruthyn, co. Denbigh, and coheir to Peter her brother; ſecond wife; buried at Barwell Oct. 22, 1682.

Elizabeth, married to Joſiah Townſend, of Froleſworth; died without ſurviving iſſue.

1. John Oneby, born 1652; bapt. at Shepey 1664; living in Jamaica 1682. = Kerenhappuch, dau. of Henry Turvile, eſq. of Aſton Flamvile.

2. Thomas, born 1654; mar. 1682.

1. Elizabeth, born 1657; died young.
2. Elizabeth, born 1659, ma. to Richard Saliſbury, of Newton Burguland; died Sept. 1, 1682.

Judith [3], d. of ſir Anthony Cheſter, bart. died Sept. 29, 1706; 1ſt wife. = Robert Oneby [4], born at Signett, near Ruthin, Sept. 7, 1665; admitted of the Inner Temple 1684; a barriſter 1692; married ſecondly at Biſhopſgate; died at Barwell Feb. 1, 1720-21 [5]. = Suſannah, dau. of Thomas Webb [6], d. in July 1743; 2d wife.

Grace, born 1677; died unmarried.

John, born 1678; afterwards known by the name of "Major Oneby [8];" d. in Newgate July 3, 1727.

1. Elizabeth;
2. Robert, bapt. Apr. 23, 1694;
3. John; bapt. Aug. 14, 1695;
4. Mary; bapt. May 26, 1696;
6. Henry; bapt. May 26, 1696;

all died infants.

5. Anthony Oneby, lord of the manor of Barwell; bur. there Sept. 6, 1727. = Jane Major.

Robert Oneby [7], eſq. his mother's only child, bo. in Southampton-buildings, London, April 9, bap. the 13th, 1710; marr. April 15, 1743, being then of Barwell, co. Leiceſter; afterwards of Lowdham hall, Suffolk, high ſheriff of that county 1750; died June 16, 1753, ſ. p.; and deviſed his eſtate to his RIGHT HEIRS, deſcendants of the four heireſſes in p. 1039. = Mary, dau. of Samuel Bracebridge, eſq. of Lindley hall; di. July 1757.

Robert, born Feb. 24, 1725-6; bur. June 10, 1726.

1. Jane, born 1724; died 1767.
2. Suſannah, born 1727; married in 1749 to William Frith, of Watford, Herts; and afterward to —— Ailway, apothecary of the ſame place; living there, a widow, 1804.

---

[1] By virtue of the new charter, 4 Jac. II.; but, on the revocation of that charter, John Major, eſq. was reſtored. By his will, dated in 1717, he gives to his ſon Robert his gold ring, with the family coat of arms on it, and made him executor; but Robert dying before his father, his antient and truly faithful ſervant, Mrs. Elizabeth Gardner, adminiſtered.

[2] Robert Davies married Dorothy, daughter and ſole heir of Thomas Thelwall, fifth ſon of John Thelwall, of Ruthavon Park, alias Llhanrhydd, co. Denbigh.—"Jane, daughter and coheir to Robert Davies, of Ruthyn, gent. late wife to Robert Capper, ſheriff of Cheſter anno 1649, died on the 18th day of December, 1656, leaving iſſue three ſons and four daughters, of whom three died young." From a tablet produced by Mr. Capper on the Viſitation at Hinckley Sept. 4, 1682.

[3] Mrs. Judith Oneby, wife of Robert Oneby, of Barwell, co. Leiceſter, eſq. counſellor at law, died Sept. 29, 1706; buried at . . . . day of October following. Her ſiſter Elizabeth was wife of Charles-Nicholas Eyre, eſq. Theſe two ſiſters were daughters of ſir Anthony Cheſter, of Chicheley, com. Bucks, bart. Harl. MSS. 3625.

[4] "Robert Onebye, the ſon of John Onebye, of Barwell, in the county of Leiceſter, gent. and Ellen his wife, was borne at Signett, in the pariſh of Llanvair, neere Ruthin, in the co. of Denbigh, on Wedneſday the ſeaventh day of September, anno Domini 1665. And I pray God to bleſs him, and to make him his true, faithful, and obedient ſervant unto his life's end." From the Family Bible.

[5] His laſt will and codicil, the laſt part of which is dated Dec. 28, 1720, mentions his father as then living, and very old.

[6] The will of this Thomas Webb, eſq. who died July 18, 1709, was proved July 23, by his brother Henry Webb and William Chapman. He had only a life-intereſt in a moiety of ſir Henry Wood's eſtate during the life of the duke of Southampton (who died in 1730); and this he gave to his two unmarried daughters Bethia and Grace; and "to my eldeſt daughter Suſan, who very lately went from me, and is married without my knowledge or conſent, one guinea in gold."

[7] "Robert Oneby, the ſon of Robert Onebye, of Barwell, in the county of Leiceſter, eſq. and Suſan his wife, was borne in Southampton buildings, in the pariſh of St. Andrew Holborn, in the county of Middleſex, on Sunday, the 9th day of April, being Eaſter-day, anno Domini 1710, at a quarter and two minutes paſt twelve of the clock at noon. And I pray to God to bleſs him, and to make him his true, faithful, and obedient ſervant unto his life's end." From the Family Bible.

[8] The hiſtory of this eccentric character will be given hereafter, under Barwell.

Pedigree of MASON, of LEICESTER.

EMMET, third daughter of JOHN ONEBY, eſq. of Hinckley, baptized March 26, 1631; died Feb. 28, 1706-7. = Richard Maſon, of Leiceſter, M. D.; died March 26, 1668. He had ſeveral brothers and ſiſters.

1. John, bo. Nov. 5; 1652; died unmarried.

2. Richard, a mercer in Leiceſter, bo. Dec. 12, 1653; died Feb. 23, 1690. = Anne Jarman; afterward mar. Mr. John Burdett, proctor at Leiceſter; whom ſhe ſurvived, and died 1733.

3. George, a mercer on Ludgate-hill, baptized May 19, 1665; dead in 1722. = . .

4. Wm. b. 1666; d. Nov. 1677.

Emmet, born July 4, 1656. = . . . Ewin.

Anne, born Oct. 8, 1658. = Rev. Hen. Courtis.

Eliz. born Aug. 20, 1660; d. unmarried 1694.

Dorothy, born Sept. 9, 1663. = Geo. Savile.

Anne. born 1680.

Wm. Pick, mar. May 19, 1699, buried Jan. 21, 1705. = Dorothy Maſon, b. 1682, m. at Belgrave 1707; d. at Leiceſter about 1734. = William Cradock, related to the earl of Huntingdon; died July 4, 1710, (See p. 1149.)

Catharine, d. in May 1771. = James Gough, ſtock-broker, died at Camberwell about 1755.

John, died without iſſue.

1. Joan, ma. 1ſt, to . . . . Wyndham; 2dly, to . . . Wray.
2. Mary, married to Thomas Neal.
3. Elizabeth, m. to William Worrall.

An only daughter. = Rev. . . . . Hooper, of Leiceſterſhire.

Iſaac, a plumber in Watling-ſtreet.

Diana, m. to Iſaac Fawcett, verger of St. Paul's.

1. George Savile, eſq. of Staple-inn.
2. Charles.
3. Richard.

William Cradock, apprenticed at Leiceſter 1722; d. in London, 1782, æt. 70. = Sarah Gent, d. 1795, æt. 84.

1. Jarman,
2. Richard,
3. William,

all died without iſſue.

4. Anne, bapt. Sept. 1, 1704; di. Dec. 30, 1776, æt. 73; bur. at Hampſtead. = Nathaniel Morris, died 1744; buried at Melton Mowbray.

Anne, daughter and heireſs; born 1738; died 1776. = John Nichols. living 1804. (See p. 1149.)

Two ſons, died infants.

William Morris, baptized at Melton Mowbray, Feb. 17, 1740; living 1804. = Anne Green, born Nov. 2, 1746, married July 27, 1775; living 1804.

Anne, bapt. Feb. 21, 1733; married at Hampſtead, 1777; living 1804. = William Maſon, of Garthorpe; died April 14, 1779, æt. 50.

1. Charles, born Aug. 1, 1776; died Sept. 2, 1776.
2. Anne, bo. Mar. 26, 1777; died April 9, 1778.
3. Charles, born May 30, died July 23, 1779.
4. Elizabeth, born Sept. 21, 1780; died Jan. 19, 1781.
5. William-Henry, bo. Sept. 19, 1781; died Auguſt 16, 1782.
6. Eliza, born Oct. 5, 1782, chriſtened at St. Bartholomew the Great, London; died May 24, 1795, and buried at Wantiſden.
7. Emma, born June 17, 1785; bapt. at St. Bartholomew's; living 1804.
8. Nathanael, b. Sept. 11, 1789, at Wantiſden; died Sept. 12, 1799, æt. 10.

PEDI-

PEDIGREE of CRADOCK, of LEICESTER.

Edmund Cradock, mayor of Leiceſter in 1645, and again in 1657. = ...

1. Joſeph Cradock, mayor of Leiceſter in 1687. = Jane, dau. of Henry Haſtings, of Humberſton, eſq.
2. Edmund Cradock, mayor of Leiceſter in 1702; died Aug. 26, 1716, aged 76. = Mary, died Feb. 20, 1725; aged 68.
3. Hannah. = Walter Haſtings, of Rempſton, c. Notts, ſon of Henry Haſtings, of Humberſton, eſq. born May 1, 1644; living 1682.

Iſſue of Walter Haſtings: Henry Haſtings, living at Caſtle Donington 1753; then unmarried. 1. Jane. 2. Anne.

Iſſue of Joſeph Cradock:

1. Joſeph Cradock, made free of Leiceſter in 1691; rector of Markfield 1699; M.A. of Clare Hall, Cambridge, 1700; di. 1749. = Katharine Norrice.
2. Wm. Cradock, of London, grocer[1]; married at Belgrave 1707; died at Peterborough July 4, 1710. = Dorothy, dau. of Richard Maſon, of Leiceſter; bo. 1682, died about 1734.
3. Edmund, made free of Leiceſter in 1712.

Jane, died March 31, 1671.

Iſſue of Edmund Cradock and Mary:

1. Edmund Cradock, made free of Leiceſter in 1702; reſided at Knighton; and was an acting magiſtrate for the county; died about 1751. = Elizabeth, dau. of Alderman Edmund Johnſon, of Leiceſter; died July 15, 1731.
2. Samuel Cradock, made free of Leic. in 1703; was of Walſal, co. Stafford. = .. Mary, d. of ald. J. Annice; firſt wife; di. in Oct. 1749, æt. 46; bu. at St. Martin's Leic. the 28th.
3. Joſeph Cradock, of Leiceſter and Gumley, eſq. bo. Nov. 17, 1689; died Apr. 20, 1759. bu. at St. Martin's. = Anne, only dau. of Richard Ludlam, M. B. died 1774, aged 56; buried at Wilford, co. Notts.
4. . . . died ſ. p. = Joſeph Peckleton, of Twyford, co. Leic.
5. Jane. = Zacharias Duckett, of Leiceſter, attorney at law.
6. Sarah. = Joſeph Bunney, of Leiceſter.

Iſſue of Zacharias Duckett: Jane; and other iſſue, all of whom died ſ. p. Jane ſurviving.

Iſſue of Joſeph Bunney: Joſeph Bunney, of the Newark, Leiceſter, eſq. = Mary Cradock, his couſin, the dau. of Edmund. [A]

Iſſue of Joſeph Cradock, rector of Markfield:

1. Norrice Cradock, made free of Leiceſter 1721; ſteward of the court of record of the Borough of Leiceſter; d. about 1765. = Mary Palmer; died Jan. 24, 1732, aged 42.
2. John, made free of Leiceſter in 1734; died ſ. p.

Iſſue of Wm. Cradock: William Cradock, b. at Uxbridge in 1710; made free of Leiceſter in 1734; d. Dec. 22, 1782, æt. 70. = Sarah Gent, of Wellingborough; died Aug. 3, 1795, æt. 84.

Iſſue of Edmund Cradock of Knighton:

1. Joſeph Cradock, eſq. born Feb. 6, 1710; made free of Leiceſter 1734; died unmarried at Bath, Feb. 4, 1778.
2. Edmund; died Feb. 21, 1716.
3. Samuel, a twin with Mary; died Oct. 31, 1746, aged 22.
1. Elizabeth, born July 1, 1705; died unmarried in April 1767; buried at Aſton Flamvile.
2. Anna-Maria, died in October 1741, aged 25.
2. Mary, a twin with Samuel, dau. and at length ſole heir to her brother; m. Sept. 1, 1745; di. at Bath, April 27, 1802, aged 78. [A] = Joſeph Bunney, of the Newark, co. Leic. eſq. b. Jan. 26, 1715; di. Feb. 26, 1782; buried at Aſton Flamvile.

Iſſue of Samuel Cradock of Walſal:

1. Samuel Cradock of Walſal, made free of Leiceſter in 1734; marr. Elizabeth Walker, only dau. of William Walker, eſq. of Roughton, co. Salop; by whom he had 4 children[2].
2. John Cradock, an apprentice to his uncle Joſeph Cradock; he died unmarried in 1746.
3. Mary, married John Hawe, eſq. of Walſal, co. Stafford.
4. Edmund Cradock, of Walſal, gent. married Elizabeth Scott, dau. of John Scott, of Nether-houſe, Great Barr, Staffordſhire, eſq.; living at Coleſhill, Warwickſhire, 1803.
5. Margaret, married Paul-Henry Robinſon, eſq. of London, by whom ſhe had ſeveral children; one of which (Frances) is now living, wife to W. Timſon, eſq. of MoorPark, Surrey.
6. Elizabeth, married . . . . Legg, eſq. of London.

Several other children, who died unmarried.

Iſſue of Joſeph Cradock of Leiceſter and Gumley:

1. Mary, bo. 1725; died Jan. 10, 1731.
2. Joſeph, died July 27, 1727.
3. Joſeph, died Dec. 5, 1729.
4. Edmund, died April 18, 1732.
6. Edmund, died about 1750.

} all infants.

5. Joſeph Cradock, eſq. of Gumley; M. A. of Emanuel college, Cambridge, 1765; living 1804. = Anna-Franceſca Stratford, third dau. of Francis Stratford, eſq. of Merevale hall, co. Warwick, nearly related to the late earl of Aldborough; living 1804.

Iſſue of Norrice Cradock: Norrice Cradock, eſq. barriſter at law; and one of the purveyors and granitors of the royal ſtables 1761; d. Mar. 24, 1779, æt. 54; bur. at Markfield. = Elizabeth, d. of Thos. Jarvis, of Markfield.

Iſſue of Norrice Cradock, barriſter: Elizabeth, only child, died March 24, 1780, æt. 6.

Iſſue of William Cradock: Anne, dau. and heir, born 1738; m. June 22, 1766; died Feb. 13, 1776; 1ſt wife. = John Nichols, born Feb. 2, 1744-5; living 1804. = Martha Green, ma. June 11, 1778; d. Feb. 29, 1788; 2d wife.

Iſſue of John Nichols by Anne:

1. Anne, born 1768; married to the Rev. John Pridden, M.A. F.S.A. living 1804.
2. Sarah Nichols, born 1771; living 1804.
3. William-Bowyer Nichols, born 1775; died 1776.

Iſſue of John Nichols by Martha:

1. John-Bowyer Nichols, born 1779.
2. Thos.-Cleiveland, born 1781; d. 1782.
3 Martha-Sadelbia, b 1782.
4. Mary, born 1784.
5. Iſabella, born 1785.
6. Charles-Howard, born and died in 1786.
7. Anne-Suſanna, b 1788

Iſſue of Joſeph Bunney and Mary Cradock:

1. Sarah, and
2. Mary, both died young.
3. Sir Edmund Cradock-Hartopp, of Freby, co. Leiceſter, and of Fouroaks Hall, co. Warwick, bart.[3] only ſurviving ſon of J. Bunney, born April 21, 1749, in the pariſh of St. Martin in the town of Leiceſter; took the ſurname and arms of Hartopp, by act of parliament, in Michaelmas 1777, purſuant to the laſt will and teſtament of ſir John Hartopp, bart. and aſſumed the ſurname and arms of Cradock, in obſervance of the will of his maternal uncle Joſeph Cradock abovenamed; created a baronet April 30, 1796. = Anne, only child and heireſs of Joſ. Hurlock, eſq. governor of Fort Marlborough, in Bencoolen, and heir of her maternal grandfather ſir John Hartopp, of Buckminſter and Freby, co. Leiceſter, bart.
4. Elizabeth, born July 29, 1750; died unmarried Nov. 26, 1771; buried at Aſton Flamvile.
5. Mary-Anne, born Jan. 4, 1756. = William Bankes, of Winſtanley Hall, in the county palatine of Lancaſter, eſq. died ſ. p. Feb. 13, 1800.
6. Joſeph,
7. Joſeph-William,
8. Sarah,

} all died infants.

Iſſue of Sir Edmund Cradock-Hartopp:

1. Edmund-Joſeph Hartopp, eldeſt ſon, born at Florence, and died young; buried at Aſton Flamvile.
2. George-Harry William[4], born at Merevale hall, co. Warwick, Auguſt 1785, and bapt. there.
3. Edmund, bo. at Merevale hall 1787.
4. William, died young; bur. at Aſton Flamvile.
5. William-Edmund, born at Fouroaks hall, co. Warwick, Dec. 11, 1794.
1. Anna-Maria.
2. Caroline, died 1798.
3. Emilia.
4. Frances.
5. Eliza-Bankes.
6. Louiſa-Ann.
7. Matilda.

---

[1] Ill health obliging him to quit buſineſs, he obtained a ſupervisor's place in the Exciſe at Peterborough; but, it being neceſſary to paſs through ſome intermediate ſtep, he was ſtationed firſt at Uxbridge, and reſided at Hillingdon (an adjoining village) only ſix weeks after the birth of his only ſon; after which he went to Peterborough, where he died in about a fortnight. The widow went to Leiceſter to her mother, the widow Burdett; and they both lived together for about 20 years.

[2] Of whom only one is now living, Elizabeth, who married William Unwin, eſq. of Mansfield, Nottinghamſhire; by whom ſhe has four daughters, now living, 1803.

[3] See the genealogy of the baronet branch of the Hartopps, as exemplified and authenticated by ſir Iſaac Heard, at the Heralds office. And ſee Edmonſtone's "Commonalty of England," for the ſeveral branches of the family of Cradock.

[4] This George-Harry-William Hartopp hath aſſumed, and intends to bear from henceforward, the name of Fleetwood before his ſurname of Hartopp, as a memorial of his lineal deſcent from Charles Fleetwood, lord deputy of Ireland under the protectorate of Oliver Cromwell, whoſe eſtates of Armingland hall, co. Norfolk, and of Wiſſet le Roos, co. Suffolk, are devolved upon lady Hartopp his mother.

Pedigree of CRADOCK, of Swanzy. (From a MS. in the poſſeſſion of Gilbert Burton, Eſq. 1774.)

Cradock ap Ivon bare to his arms, Azure, three boars' heads caboſhed, between nine croſs croſslets Argent; the boar's head, ſword, and gauntlet, in creſt[1]. Motto, HE KYMERO; [On, Countrymen.] Note, that when the ſaid Cradock had killed a monſtrous wild boar, in the foreſt of Clyne in Gower, this coat of armour was given him to bear; ſince which time that family have aſſumed it. This is collected from antient Antiquaries labours.

P. H. Gamadge, 1648.

Eynon ap Collwyn, lord of Sanghenyth, co. Glamorgan. = Neſt, dau. to Juſtin ap Gargan, lord of Glamorgan.

Richard ap Eynon. = ...

Ivon. = ...

Cradock. = ...

1. Evance Cradock, of Swanzy, = ...

Robert Cradock; of whom many gentlemen of that name derive their genealogies.

Hopkin Cradock; of whom the Cradocks of Chirito in Gower and elſewhere deſcend.

Robert, = ...

Sir Matthew Cradock[2], of Swanzy, knt. = Lady Catharine Gordon[3], daughter of George ſecond earl of Huntley; and widow of Perkin Warbeck, the pretended prince of Wales.

Margaret, dau. and heir. = Sir Richard Herbert, of Ewyas, natural ſon to William Herbert the firſt earl of Pembroke[4] of the name, who was ſlain at the battle of Banbury, July 26, 1469.

Sir George Herbert, of Swanzy, knight; of whom the Herberts and others deſcend.

William Herbert, created earl of Pembroke in 1551; of whom the earls of Pembroke, the counteſs Powis, and others, deſcend.

Pedigree of CRADOCK[5], of East Farndon, co. Northampton; and of Leicester.

Arms: On a bend Azure, three garbs Or, a mullet for difference. Creſt, on a wreath, a boar's head couped Sable, muzzled Or. (Plate CXXXVI. fig. 52.)

Nicholas Cradock, temp. Hen. VII. = ...

1. Thomas Cradock. = Margaret Aſherne.

2. Richard Cradock, of Codeſbroke, co. Northampton. = ...

3. Robert Cradock, of Maydwell. = ...

1. Richard Cradock, of Kelmarſh. = ...

2. Robert Cradock, of Eaſt Farndon, died in 1610. = ...

3. Edward Cradock, of Donington, ſ. p.

1. William. 2. Robert.

Edward, ſ. p.

1. Edward. 2. Joſhua. 3. Robert.

1. William Cradock, of Eaſt Farndon, born 1591; died 1663. = ...

2. John Cradock[6], of Kelmarſh[7]. = ...

1. Bartholomew Cradock, gent. died Feb. 9, 1656, æt. 39; buried at Eaſt Farndon[5]. = Anne, dau. of William Stanley, alderman of Leiceſter, died Jan. 27, 1656, æt. 28[5].

2. Robert Cradock, of Eaſt Farndon. = Mary, dau. of Geo. Walker, of Eaſt Farndon.

1. William Cradock, died unmarried February 24, 1661-2; buried on the 29th in the great chancel of St. Martin at Leiceſter.

Tho. Palmer, of the Newark, Leic. who was born in 1643. = 2. Mary, died May 7, 1676; buried at Wanlip.

Randolph Middlemore, of Staunton by Dale, co. Derby; firſt huſband. = 3. Anne, inherited the manor of Eaſt Farndon, 1663. = Edward Griffith, ſecond huſband.

John Cradock, of London, merchant taylor, 1633. = Elizabeth, dau. of W. Pulman, of Limehouſe, Middleſex.

John Griffith, lord of the manor of Eaſt Farndon 1720.

Mary, born 1629.
Anne.

Elizabeth, married June 13, 1663, to John Lee.

Pedigree of CRADOCK, of Richmond in Yorkſhire.

John Cradock, of New college, Oxford, LL.D. (a grand compounder) 1617; prebendary of Durham, and archdeacon of Northumberland 1619; rector of Gainford, and vicar of Woodhorn; died in 1627[8]. = . . .

Sir Joſeph Cradock, LL. D. commiſſary of Richmond; elected M. P. for that borough 1661; but the election declared void Jan. 17, 1661-2, he being in holy orders[9]. = . . .

Thomas Cradock[10], eſq. M. P. for Richmond 1678; died 1679, ſ. p. leaving two nephews (ſons of his ſiſters) his heirs.

---

[1] Of this creſt, ſee "The Boy and Mantle," in Dr. Percy's Ancient Poems, vol. III. p. 21.—The arms and creſt are engraved in Vol. II. Plate C. p. 589.

[2] Arms: Azure, three boars heads between nine croſs croſslets Argent. His deſcendants, men of Gower in Glamorganſhire.

[3] After the death of Perkin Warbeck, his widow, the lady Catharine Gordon, daughter to the earl of Huntly, from her exquiſite beauty, and upon account of her huſband called The white roſe of Scotland, was married to ſir Matthew Cradock, and is buried with him in Herbert's aile in Swanſea church in Wales, where their tomb is ſtill to be ſeen, with this inſcription:

"Here lies ſir Mathie Cradok, knight, ſome time deputie unto the right honorable Charles erle of Worcet, in the countie of Glamorgan, K. Attor, G. K. Chauncelor of the ſame, ſteward of Gower and Hilvei, and mi lady Katerin his wife."

Walpole's Hiſtoric Doubts, p. ult.

[4] At Wolveton, co. Dorſet, the arms of Cradock are quartered with thoſe of Herbert earl of Pembroke, Horton, and Cantelupe. Hutchins, vol. II. p. 157.

[5] See their epitaphs in Bridges, Northamptonſhire, vol. II. p. 32.

[6] See his iſſue in vol. II. p. 466. as entered in 1619 by his grandſon Joſeph Cradock, of Huſbands Boſworth.

[7] A Joſeph Cradock was rector of Kelmarſh in 1714.

[8] Hutchinſon's Durham, vol. II. p. 88.

[9] Journals of the Houſe of Commons, vol. VIII. pp. 341. 346.

[10] See his epitaph in Le Neve's Monumenta Anglicana, vol. III. p. 112.

No. IV. CIVIL WAR IN LEICESTERSHIRE.

A PETITION from divers glaziers[1] of Leiceſter was preſented to the Houſe of Commons, Feb. 17, 1628-9, and referred to the Committee of Grievances[2]; but the contents of it do not appear.

On a petition of the freeholders and inhabitants of the county of Leiceſter, Nov. 7, 1640, Mr. Richard Halford was ordered to be ſent for, as a delinquent, by the ſerjeant at arms.—Dec. 2, he was committed to the Tower during the pleaſure of the Houſe; and was afterwards to make an humble ſubmiſſion, ſuch as the Houſe ſhould approve, upon his knees, at the Bar; and the like in the county of Leiceſter at the next general aſſizes[3]; and, on his ſubmiſſion, Dec. 10, was diſcharged. A more particular detail of the proceedings on this occaſion, with the perſonal hiſtory of Mr. Halford, who was for his loyalty created a baronet in 1641, may be ſeen in a former volume[4].

The particular grievances of Leiceſterſhire concerning military charges was referred to a Committee of the Houſe of Commons, Dec. 3, 1640[5].

The Ordinance of Parliament for putting the militia into a poſture of defence, which was ordered to be prepared ſo early as Nov. 15, 1641, was the firſt public prelude to the deplorable war which followed. The militia, indeed, was the principal ground of difference between his Majeſty and the Parliament; the King claiming it as an inſeparable right of the Crown, and the two Houſes urging the management of it for preſent ſatisfaction and ſafety. After various ineffectual conferences between the two Houſes of Parliament, the names of the perſons to be intruſted with the conſtitutional defence of the kingdom were ſent from the Commons to the Lords, Feb. 12, 1641-2; in which the militia for Leiceſterſhire was purpoſed to be placed under the care of Henry earl of Stamford[6]; who had then recently been appointed by the Parliament to be lord lieutenant of the county of Leiceſter[7]; and, by an ordinance of both Houſes, March 5, had that office confirmed to him[8]. Theſe and ſeveral other ſimilar appointments were diſallowed by the King; and from that period the rupture became viſible.

The following ordinance of both Houſes of Parliament for ordering the Militia of the Kingdom of England and Dominion of Wales was framed in February; and declared to be a law, whether the King ſhould give his aſſent or not, in March following:

"Whereas there hath been of late a moſt dangerous and deſperate deſign upon the Houſe of Commons, which we have juſt cauſe to believe to be an effect of the bloody counſels of Papiſts and other ill-affected perſons, who have already raiſed a rebellion in the kingdom of Ireland; and, by reaſon of many diſcoveries, we cannot but fear they will proceed not only to ſtir up the like rebellions and inſurrections in this kingdom of England, but alſo to back them with forces from abroad: It is ordained by the Lords and Commons, now in Parliament aſſembled, that Henry earl of Stamford ſhall have power to aſſemble and call together all and ſingular his Majeſty's faithful ſubjects within the county of Leiceſter, as well within liberties as without, that are meet and fit for the wars, and them to train, exerciſe, and put in readineſs, and them after their abilities and faculties well and ſufficiently, from time to time, to cauſe to be arrayed and weaponed, and to take the muſter of them in places moſt fit for that purpoſe; and ſhall have power within the ſaid county to nominate and appoint ſuch perſons of quality as to him ſhall ſeem meet to be his deputy-lieutenants, to be approved of by both Houſes of Parliament. And that any one or more of the ſaid deputies, ſo aſſigned and approved of, ſhall, in the abſence or by the command of the ſaid earl of Stamford, have power and authority to do and execute, within the county of Leiceſter, all ſuch power and authority before in this preſent ordinance contained; and ſo ſhall have power to make colonels and captains, and other officers, and to remove out of their places, and to make others from time to time, as he ſhall think fit for that purpoſe; and the ſaid earl, his deputies, colonels, captains, and other officers, ſhall have farther power and authority to lead, conduct, and employ, the perſons aforeſaid, arrayed and weaponed, as well within the county of Leiceſter, as within any other part of this realm of England, or dominion of Wales, for the ſuppreſſion of all rebellions, inſurrections, and invaſions that may happen, according as they from time to time ſhall receive directions by his Majeſty's authority, ſignified unto them by the Lords and Commons aſſembled in Parliament. And it is farther ordained, that ſuch perſons as ſhall not obey in the premiſſes ſhall anſwer their neglect and contempt to the Lords and Commons in a parliamentary way, and not otherwiſe, nor elſewhere; and that every the powers granted as aforeſaid ſhall continue until it ſhall be otherwiſe ordered or declared by both Houſes of Parliament, and no longer.

John Brown, Cler. Parl."[9]

Divers gentlemen of Leiceſterſhire, attending at the door of the Houſe of Commons, Feb. 15, 1641-2, were called in; and, preſenting a petition to that Houſe, in the names of the Knights, Gentlemen, and Freeholders of the county; and the copy of another they intended to preſent to the Lords; they were told by the Speaker, "This Houſe finds in your petition a great deal of love and reſpect unto them, and of care to the publick; and that you have ſeconded it, with coming ſo long a journey, to expreſs it in perſon; for all which they give you hearty thanks: and do give a full approbation of your petition to the Lords[10]."

The petitions[11] were in theſe words:

1. "To the Honourable the Houſe of Commons, now aſſembled in Parliament.

"The humble petition of the inhabitants of the county of Leiceſter ſheweth,

"That the reaſon why your petitioners have not hitherto attended this Honourable Houſe, was not backwardneſs to ſerve you, or want of affection, but the remoteneſs of their dwellings; for, had we heard of your dangers, and not of your ſafeties, this we do boldly affirm, that the laſt drop of our bloods had been freely and ſpeedily hazarded in the defence of your perſons, and maintenance of your privileges. We need not entreat you to eaſe our great preſſures, which, in our ſouls, bodies, and eſtates, we have long groaned under; for, we are moſt ſenſible of your cares, wiſdoms, unwearied labours, and faithful endeavours to do what our hearts can deſire. We reſt confident of your ſtrong reſolutions for the relief of our miſerable and diſtreſſed brethren of Ireland. Your Remonſtrance gives us ſatisfaction in what you declare, and for the reformation which you intend, according to the Word of God. And we aſſure ourſelves, you will not ſuffer idolatry in the kingdoms of England or Ireland. Therefore your petitioners moſt humbly pray, that the counſellors and actors of that moſt horrid, high, and wicked attempt againſt his Majeſty, the Parliament, and the very foundation of our Government, and alſo tending to the deſtruction and utter ruin of ſome of your Members, may be made public examples to all poſterity; ſo that future times may never dare to contrive that which inſtruments in this age of ours have endeavoured. We conceive ourſelves exceedingly concerned in this; and the greateſt hazard of our own lives could not more forcibly affect us, which makes us reſtleſly to deſire the bottom of this bloody deſign may be ſounded. We cannot expreſs the thanks we (above many other counties) owe unto this Honourable Houſe. Our eſtates, our lives, all are yours. The moſt faithful Preſerver of men preſerve and proſper you and your honourable proceedings. And your petitioners ſhall daily pray, &c."

---

[1] Sic Orig. Qu. Graziers? The grievances complained of (as appears by the Journals of the Lords, vol. III. pp. 872. 875. 878.) was "the diſafforeſtation of Leiceſter Foreſt."

[2] Journals of the Commons, vol. I. p. 930.

[3] Ibid. vol. II. pp. 21. 43.

[4] Vol. II. p. 870.

[5] Journals of the Commons, vol. II. p. 44.

[6] Journals of the Lords, vol. IV. p. 578.

[7] Ibid. p. 425.

[8] Ibid. p. 625.

[9] For farther particulars of this Declaration, ſee Heath's Chronicle, p. 31.

[10] Journals of the Commons, vol. II. p. 453.

[11] They were printed at the time in a ſeparate quarto pamphlet.

2. "To the Right Honourable the Houſe of Peers in Parliament aſſembled.

"The humble petition of the inhabitants of the county of Leiceſter ſheweth,

"That, as the preſſing grievances, and deadly diſtempers in the Church and State, ripened almoſt to the ruin of both, were, by the happy aſſembling of this Parliament, abated, and a joyful expectation of their total aboliſhment raiſed in all well-affected ſubjects; and, as the dangerous influences of wicked counſels and worſe deſigns, ſince appearing in that moſt horrid and bloody rebellion of Ireland, in the various delays and obſtructions caſt in, to hinder all Parliamentary proceedings, the deſperate attempts againſt the peace of the King, Parliament, and Kingdom, eſpecially in that violent unexampled breach of Parliament privilege lately made, had erewhile damped our hopes, renewed our fears, and thrown us into a ſea of dangers and diſtractions; ſo now again the happy concurrence of this Honourable Houſe with the Houſe of Commons, already ſeen in ſundry particulars, hath revived our hopes, and filled our hearts with joy, and brought us, though far diſtant in place, here to make a perſonal tender of our grateful hearts, obliged ſervice, and utmoſt expreſſions of all humble thankfulneſs, for this your noble and ready compliance. We will ſerve you with our lives as freely as they were given us, and with our eſtates to the utmoſt values. Your ſafety ſhall be our happineſs, your oppoſers our enemies, your dangers and harms as death unto us. Our humble and earneſt petition therefore is, that you would proceed to increaſe thoſe our joys, and ſtrengthen theſe our engagements and reſolutions, by a conſtant concurrence of this Honourable Houſe with the Houſe of Commons, in all their noble deſigns and endeavours for the public good; that delinquents may be brought to ſpeedy and condign puniſhment; the counſellors, contrivers, and actors of that late ſurpaſſing breach of Parliament privilege may be manifeſted, their aims and intentions diſcovered, and their perſons rewarded according to their deep demerits; and that future dangers from our reſtleſs enemies may be prevented, by a timely relief of bleeding Ireland, and a ſpeedy perfection of this kingdom's poſture of defence. Then we doubt not but the end will crown our prayers, to the glory of God, the peace of the Church, the happy union of the King and Kingdom, with your eternal honours, never to be blotted out by time or malice. And, as in duty bound, we ſhall ever pray, &c."

This latter petition being read in the Houſe of Peers, the gentlemen were commanded to withdraw; and, the Houſe having reſolved on a proper anſwer, they were called in again; and the Speaker gave them thanks, in the name of the Houſe, for their great care and affections to the publick and to the Kingdom of Ireland, and alſo for their reſpect to the Houſe; and that their petition would be taken into ſpeedy conſideration[1].

Many meſſages, anſwers, and papers, paſſed betwixt the King and the Parliament. Thoſe of the King were leſs ſtrained, yet more elegant, than the Parliament's. The great ingredients and moſt ſubſtantial part of their addreſſes were jealouſies and fears; with which the King was conſtantly baited, for want of more ſolid arguments, and which no reaſon could rectify or diſpel, being irrefutable, becauſe inexiſtible; it being like fighting with a ſhadow, which cannot be driven away. They proteſted all along, that, if his majeſty ſhould perſiſt in the denial of the Militia, the dangers were ſuch as would endure no longer delay; but that they ſhould be forced to diſpoſe of it by authority of Parliament, and muſt reſolve ſo to do, as it was by them propounded; deſiring that, for the ſafety of his perſon and people, in much jealouſy and fear, he would be pleaſed to reſide in or near London, and to continue the Prince at St. James's, or any other houſes near London, to prevent the jealouſies and fears of the people; affirming, that, by the laws of the realm, the power of the Militia, of raiſing, ordering, and diſpoſing thereof in any place, cannot be granted to any Corporation, by charter or otherwiſe, without conſent of Parliament; and that thoſe parts of the Kingdom that have put themſelves in a poſture of defence, have done it by direction and declaration of Parliament.

The King, much troubled with thoſe unreaſonable papers, replied, "that he was ſo much amazed at this meſſage, that he knew not what to anſwer. You ſpeak of jealouſies and fears," ſaid he: "lay your hands on your hearts, and aſk yourſelves whether I may not in earneſt be diſturbed with jealouſies and fears; and, if ſo, I aſſure you, this meſſage hath nothing leſſened them. For the Militia, I thought as much before. My laſt anſwer, being agreeable to what in juſtice or reaſon you can aſk, or I in honour grant, I ſhall not alter in any point. I wiſh my reſidence near you might be ſafe and honourable, that I had no cauſe to abſent myſelf from Whitehall. Aſk yourſelves whether I have or not? I ſhall take that care of my ſon, which ſhall juſtify me to God as a father, and to my dominions as a King. I aſſure you, on my honour, I have no thoughts but of peace and juſtice to my people, which I ſhall by all means poſſible ſeek to preſerve, relying upon the goodneſs of God for the preſervation of myſelf and my rights."

This quickened in the Parliament a reſolution, that the Kingdom be put preſently into a poſture of defence, and a public dclaration thereupon to be made. They talked of advertiſements and extraordinary preparations by land and ſea. In order to this, the beacons were made up, and new ſea-marks ſet up.

The declaration aforeſaid was carried to Royſton, whither the King was removed from Theobalds, by the earls of Pembroke and Holland, who delivered him the ſubſtance of it: to which he returned in a moſt polite declaration alſo, and verbally told the Lords, "that, for the Militia, he would not truſt his wife and children with it for an hour; that it was never aſked of any King: That to their fears and jealouſies he would take time to ſatiſfy all the world, hoping that God would in his good time diſcover the bottoms and ſecrets of all plots and treaſons, and ſet him upright with his people: That he had little encouragement to replies of this nature, when he is told of how little value his words are with them, though accompanied with love and juſtice: That his honour ought not to be wounded under the common ſtyle and imputation of evil counſellors: That he had formerly declared his faithful affection to the Proteſtant profeſſion, his whole life anſwerable in practice; which ſhould rather be acknowledged by them, than any deſign of his framed and declared to alter it in this kingdom; calling God to be witneſs, and wiſhing that the judgement of Heaven may be manifeſted on thoſe that have or had any ſuch deſign[2]."

March 15. It was declared by the Parliament, that the kingdom had been of late, and ſtill was, in ſo evident and imminent danger, both from enemies abroad, and a Popiſh and diſcontented party at home, that there was an urgent and inevitable neceſſity of putting his Majeſty's ſubjects into a poſture of defence for the ſafeguard both of his Majeſty and his people[3]; March 17, ſir Martin Liſter was added to the deputy-lieutenants for Leiceſterſhire[4]; and early in April directions were given by the Parliament to the ſeveral lords lieutenants to act under the proviſions of the Ordinance[5]; which produced from the King, on the 27th of May, a proclamation, forbidding the raiſing of any levies whatever, without the expreſs command of his Majeſty, or of thoſe acting under his immediate authority.

---

[1] Journals of the Lords, vol. IV. p. 590.

[2] Heath's Chronicle, p. 33.

[3] Journals of the Commons, vol. II. p. 479.

[4] Ibid. p. 483.

[5] Ibid. pp. 508. 516.

June 4, the lord Ruthin, the lord Grey, and ſir Arthur Heſilrige, were enjoined to go down into Leiceſterſhire, to ſee the Militia put in execution in that county, in conformity to the Ordinance [1].

The earl of Stamford alſo, as lord lieutenant, granted warrants to the deputy lieutenants, and the deputy lieutenants to the ſheriffs, and to the under-ſheriff in the abſence of the high-ſheriff, to command the trained bands to meet at Leiceſter.

Horrible news from Leiceſter! Being the copy of a letter ſent from thence, the 6th of June, to Mr. William Jones, inhabitant in Covent Garden. Wherein is declared how the earl of Stamford, being ſent thither by the Parliament, to ſee the Militia ordered, coming to the Angel at Leiceſter, met with another Nobleman, ſent thither by his Majeſty for the ſame purpoſe.—Likewiſe, a true relation of a combat fought between the earl of Stamford and the ſaid Nobleman the 4th of June, 1642.—Alſo the reſolution of the Gentry and Commonalty of Leiceſterſhire, preſented to the ſaid earl of Stamford by the mayor and alderman of the ſaid city.——London: Printed for J. Horton, 1642.

“Brother; It is not unknown unto you and all men, what great care and labour the Houſes of Parliament have beſtowed in ordering of the Militia, and putting the kingdom into a poſture of defence. Likewiſe 'tis not unknown, what plots of ſtratagems the malignant party have uſed to prevent their religious deſigns, leaving no way unattempted that might either conduce to the furtherance of their own deſigns, or hindering the perfecting of the other, ſuch hath been their practices in all ages, but at this time eſpecially at Court, where with their flattering and diſſembling words they work more miſchief betwixt King and Parliament, than ever their lives can make amends for.

“A true example I will give you of the ſame, which happened lately at Leiceſter. Upon the 4th of this preſent month, the earl of Stamford arrived at Leiceſter, being ſent thither by the high Court of Parliament to diſ-horſe and order the Militia; but, coming to the Angel, where he intended to inn, there met him a Lord, ſent from the King's Majeſty with commiſſion under the broad ſeal for the ſame buſineſs; which Nobleman, ſeeing the Earl, demanded the occaſion of his coming thither; withall told him, he heard he came to ſeduce the King's liege-people; withall charging him, in his Majeſty's name, to depart. As for the Militia, he had authority from his Majeſty to order it; and he conceived that they were bound rather to obey him, according to his Majeſty's command, than the Parliament. Many other ſharp and uncivil words he gave the ſaid Earl; which ſo incenſed him, he drew his ſword, and wiſhed him to depart, or he would make that place too hot for him. The Lord and his ſervants drew; ſo did the other; betwixt whom there grew a deſperate combat; but, it being market-day, the multitude of people, ruſhing in, took the earl of Stamford's part, and made the other leave the town with ſhame; the people hiſſing, and calling him ‘Popiſh Lord,’ and many other opprobrious terms; in which time the mayor and aldermen were aſſembled, and came to the Angel, where, after a large expreſſion of ſorrow for that ſad accident, they preſented to him a paper, wherein was written their reſolution, the contents whereof were to this purpoſe: 1. They reſolved, in all lawful obedience, to fulfil his Majeſty's juſt commands. 2. They reſolved to maintain, as far as in them lay, the true Proteſtant profeſſion, and, according to his Majeſty's command, to execute the laws againſt Recuſants. 3. They reſolved, in all obedience, to ſubmit themſelves to the High Court of Parliament, knowing it to be moſt expedient both for his Majeſty's ſafety, and the kingdom's future ſecurity; withal manifeſting ſuch hearty obedience and earneſt zeal to the ſaid Earl, both concerning the Militia, that the ſaid Earl hardly knew how to give them ſo great thanks as he conceived was due for ſuch large expreſſion of their love. Nevertheleſs, he with a deal of courteſy thanked them, and animated them on to a hearty performance of what they had promiſed; and withal told them that he would make known to the High Court of Parliament, from whom they ſhould receive a grateful acknowledgement as a juſt reward for all their ſervice; at which the people gave a general ſhout, crying, ‘A Stamford! a Stamford!’ with ſuch joy, that the good Earl was forced to withdraw, tears of joy ſtanding in his eyes to ſee his Country's love and obedience. This is all that at this time happened: only there is great expectation, that on the general training-day our numbers will be full; the manner of which meeting in my next letter I will give you notice of; till which time I reſt your loving brother, ADAM JONES.

From Leiceſter, June 6, 1642.”

On this ſubject, the following regular entries appear amongſt the parliamentary records:

1. “Thomas Clare, conſtable of Ibſtock, by virtue of a warrant, having warned the trained and private ſoldiers to go to Leiceſter on Wedneſday the 8th of June; Mr. John Leveton, parſon of the town, ſent for him to his houſe, on Wedneſday the 7th of June, in the evening; aſked him whether he had warned the ſoldiers to go to Leiceſter, and likewiſe had ſent for all the ſoldiers; and, before them, aſked him the ſame queſtion, whether he had warned them to appear at Leiceſter? The conſtable told him he had: The parſon aſked by what authority; who anſwered, Upon a warrant from the high conſtable. The parſon deſired to ſee the warrant, and aſked him whether they uſed to warn men to appear without a warrant. The conſtable told him, he had ſeen the head-conſtable's warrant, and heard it read twice, to that intent. The parſon then produced a proclamation, and read it to the conſtable and ſoldiers twice. The conſtable told him, he could not undo what he had done; ſo the parſon took witneſs, that the conſtable would not diſcharge the ſoldiers from their appearance before Humphrey Corpſon, Thomas Woodcock, Thomas Brookes.

THOMAS CLARE, his × mark.”

2. “Theſe are to certify your Lordſhip of the abuſive ſpeeches of captain Wolſeley unto me, one of his majeſty's trained bands, under the command of the ſaid captain Wolſeley, as followeth:

“Imprimis, he aſked me whether I would appear at Leiceſter or not. I anſwered, That I would appear. He replied, By what authority? I anſwered, By the notice I had to appear by the petty conſtable of Belton, by virtue of a warrant that came from the head-conſtable. He aſked me, At what place? I anſwered, At The Horſeleas. He aſked, What I would do there? I anſwered, I could not tell as yet. He replied to me, That, if I would abſent myſelf and arms, he would ſtand betwixt me and all dangers; and bade the company bear witneſs. Moreover he ſaid, The Parliament go about to ſettle the antient laws of the kingdom; but it is but to fulfil their aſpiring humours. The vicar of Belton replied, Taceto quem loquitur. After theſe paſſages he began to threaten me, That he would know me another time. I anſwered, That, if that was all, I did deſire him not to threaten me. He anſwered, He did not threaten me; but I was an impudent and ſaucy fellow. I anſwered, If that were all he had to ſay to me, I bid him good night. Per me, WILLIAM BROWNE, of Belton.”

3. “William Gilbert, of Whitwick, in the county of Leiceſter, ſaith, That George Moore, conſtable of the ſaid town of Whitwick, told him, That captain Wolſeley came to the ſaid conſtable, on Monday the 6th of June; and told him, That he need not go to Leiceſter on Wedneſday, for he would pawn his land, life, and eſtate, to ſave him harmleſs. This, ſaith the conſtable, captain Wolſeley told me before John Bonnett. The mark of W. M GILBERT.”

4. “Robert Creſwell, conſtable of Raunſton, ſaith, That, having given warning to the trained and private men in the town to come to Leiceſter, to ſhew their arms, on Wedneſday the 8th of June, before the earl of Stamford, by virtue of a warrant from the head-conſtable; captain Wolſeley, on Monday night, being the 6th of June, came to the ſaid conſtable's houſe, about nine of the clock; and, he being in bed, the captain called to him at the window, and aſked whether he had given warning to go in; who told him, he had the day before. Then the captain charged him, that he ſhould not call them to go in; ſaying, If he did, he would make him an example to other men. And the ſaid conſtable farther ſaith, That, when he called upon the ſoldiers to proceed to go in, two of the ſoldiers told him, That captain Wolſeley had charged them, that they ſhould not go in.

---

[1] Journals of the Commons, vol. II. p. 604.

ROBERT CRESWELL."

5. "John Milſs, of Donnington on the Heath, being a trained ſoldier, ſaith, That, on Tueſday the 7th of June, Ancient Dudley called him unto him, and aſked him whether he intended to go to Leiceſter the next day. He told him, he did. Ancient Dudley aſked him to what end he would go. Milles anſwered, to ſerve the king. Dudley told him, the King had not commanded him; and thereupon produced a proclamation, which he deſired one Edward Hall to read; and then wiſhed him not to go to Leiceſter, for, if he did, he ſaid, his eſtate was loſt, and his life hazarded. This was ſpoken in the preſence of John Weſton, gentleman, Edward Hall, and Thomas Heicock. JOHN MILLES."

6. "Henry Whitaker, gentleman, conſtable of Donnington on the Heath and Huckleſcote, ſaith, That, on Tueſday the 7th of June, enſign Dudley came to him, and read part of a printed paper, and afterwards told him he would adviſe him not to go to Leiceſter of Wedneſday (the conſtable having a trained ſoldier by him), at his peril. This was ſpoken and read in the preſence of Thomas Wight and John Goodman. HENRY WHITAKER."

"Reſolved, upon the queſtion, That captain Wolſeley, enſign Dudley, and John Loveton, parſon of Ibſtock, be forthwith ſent for, as delinquents, for oppoſing and giving obſtruction to the execution of the Ordinance of the Militia, in the county of Leiceſter[1]."

On the 12th of June, the King's Commiſſion of Array for Leiceſterſhire (the firſt county which his Majeſty thought proper thus to diſtinguiſh) was iſſued; empowering the earls of Huntingdon and Devonſhire, ſir Richard Halford[2], Henry Haſtings[3], eſq. and other gentlemen of the county, to arm themſelves, and raiſe forces, for the defence of the King and Country againſt their enemies and rebels. The commiſſion was accompanied by the following letter:

"CHARLES R. Right truſty and right well-beloved couſins, and right truſty and well-beloved, we greet you well: Whereas it hath been declared by the Votes of both Houſes of Parliament, the 15th of March laſt, that the kingdom hath of late, and ſtill is, in ſo evident and imminent danger, both from enemies abroad, and a Popiſh diſcontented party at home, that there is an urgent and inevitable neceſſity of putting our ſubjects into a poſture of defence, for the ſafeguard both of our perſon and people: and that ſince divers inhabitants of divers counties have addreſſed their petitions to that purpoſe; and whereas a ſmall number of both Houſes (after it had been rejected by the Lords in a full Houſe, and without our Royal Aſſent, or the opinion of the Judges concerning the legality thereof) have attempted, by way of ordinance, to put in execution the power of the militia of the kingdom, and to diſpoſſeſs many of our antient Nobility of the command and truſt repoſed in them by us; and have nominated divers others, who have no intereſt in, nor live near to ſome of the counties to which they are nominated for the Lieutenancy, whereby they cannot be properly ſerviceable to the counties wherewith they are entruſted, nor our people receive that content and ſecurity which we deſire they ſhould: to ſubmit to the execution of which power by the way of ordinance, without it were reduced into a law by act of parliament eſtabliſhed by our royal aſſent, were to introduce and expoſe our ſubjects to a mere arbitrary government; which, by God's grace, we ſhall never permit: We therefore, conſidering, that by the laws of the realm it belongeth ſolely to us to order and govern the militia of the kingdom, have thereupon, by our proclamation of the 27th of May laſt, prohibited all manner of perſons whatſoever, upon their allegiance, to muſter, levy, or ſummon, upon any warrant, order, or ordinance, from one or both houſes of parliament, whereunto we have not or ſhall not give our expreſs conſent, any of the trained bands, or other officers, without expreſs warrant under our hands, or warrant from our ſheriff of the county, grounded upon a particular writ to that purpoſe under our great ſeal. And conſidering, that in antient time the militia of the kingdom was ever diſpoſed of by commiſſions of array; and that, by a particular ſtatute upon record in the Tower, made in the fifth year of Henry the Fourth, by full conſent of the Prelates, Earls, Barons, and Commons, and at their ſuit, and by the advice and opinion of the Judges then had, ſuch commiſſions were mitigated in reſpect of ſome clauſes perilous to the commiſſions, and approved of for the time to come; and that by the ſubſequent records it appeareth, that all our royal predeceſſors have continually exerciſed that power by ſuch commiſſions, till of late time they have been diſcontinued by the grants of particular commiſſions of Lieutenancy; little differing in ſubſtance from the ſaid commiſſions of array, againſt which it ſeems the Houſes have taken ſome exception. And though we are no way ſatisfied of the illegality of them, our counſel being never heard in the defence thereof; yet, being willing to avoid all exceptions at preſent, we have thought fit to refer it to that antient legal way of diſpoſing the power of the militia by ſuch commiſſions of array, for defence of us, our kingdom, and our country; authorizing you, or any three or more of you, to array and train our people, and to apportion and aſſeſs ſuch perſons as have eſtates, and are not able to bear arms, to find arms for other men, in a reaſonable and moderate proportion; and to conduct them ſo arrayed, as well to the coaſts as other places, for the oppoſition and deſtruction of our enemies in caſe of danger, as to your diſcretions, or any three or more of you, ſhall ſeem meet; whereof you Henry earl of Huntingdon, and, in your abſence, William earl of Devon, or Henry Haſtings, eſq. to be one: And being both confident in a great meaſure of the loyal affections of our people, and very tender to bring any unneceſſary burthen or charge on them, by augmenting the number of the trained bands; we do for the preſent only require that you forthwith cauſe to be muſtered and trained all the antient trained bands and freehold bands of the county, carefully ſeeing that they be ſupplied with able and ſufficient perſons, and completely armed; unleſs you find that there be juſt cauſe, and that it ſhall be with the good-liking of the inhabitants, for their own better ſecurity, to make any increaſe of their numbers; and over ſuch bands to appoint and ſet ſuch colonels, captains, and officers, as you ſhall think moſt fit for the diſcharge of that ſervice, being ſuch perſons as have conſiderable intereſt in the county, and not ſtrangers. And in caſe of any oppoſition, you are to raiſe the power of the county to ſuppreſs it, and to commit all ſuch perſons as ſhall be found rebellious herein into the cuſtody of our ſheriff; whoſe care and aſſiſtance we eſpecially require; and that he ſhall, from time to time, iſſue forth ſuch warrants for the aſſembling of our people, at ſuch times and places as by you ſhall be agreed on, according to the truſt repoſed in him by our ſaid commiſſion. And we have authorized you our commiſſioners, or any three of you, after ſuch array made, from time to time, to train and take muſters of our ſaid bands; and to provide beacons, and other neceſſaries, for the better exerciſing of our people, and diſcovery of ſudden invaſions and commotions. Of all which your proceedings herein, we expect a ſpeedy and plenary account, according to the truſt repoſed in you, and authority given you by our commiſſion on that behalf. Given at our court at York, the 12th day of June, in the 18th year of our reign, 1642 [1]."

---

[1] Journals of the Lords, vol. V. p. 132.

[2] Of whom ſee before, p. 17.

[3] Afterwards created lord Loughborough; of whom ſee ſome account in vol. III. under Aſhby de la Zouch.

The Commiſſion of Array was in theſe words:

" Carolus, Dei gratiâ, Angliæ, Scotiæ, Franciæ, & Hiberniæ rex, fidei defenſor, &c. Chariſſimis conſanguineis noſtris Henrico comiti Huntington, & Willielmo comiti Devoniæ, necnon dilectis & fidelibus noſtris Henrico Haſtings, armigero, filio dicti comiti Huntington, Henrico Berkley, Georgio Villiers, Thomæ Burton, baronettis; Henrico Skipwith, Joanni Skeffington, & Richardo Halford, militibus & baronettis; Wolſtano Dixey, Richardo Roberts, Joanni Bale, Thomæ Hartopp, Eraſmo de la Fountain, & Willielmo Jones, militibus; Henrico Haſtings de Humberſtone, Georgio Aſhby & Joanni Pate, armigeris; ac vicecomiti noſtro comitatûs noſtri Leiceſtriæ pro tempore exiſtenti; ſalutem. Sciatis quòd nos malitiæ inimicorum noſtrorum, ſi regnum noſtrum Angliæ invadere preſumpſerint (quod abſit!) gratiâ nobis favente divinâ, reſiſtere, ac pro ſalvatione & defenſione noſtri ac regni prædicti & legiorum noſtrorum ejuſdem diſponere & ordinare volentes, ut tenemur, aſſignavimus vos, vel aliquos tres vel plures veſtrûm, ad arraiandos & triandos omnes & ſingulos homines ad arma, ac homines armatos & ſagittarios in comitatu prædicto commorantes, infra libertates & extra, ad armari faciendos omnes illos qui de corpore ſunt potentes & habiles ad armandum, qui de ſuo proprio habent unde ſeipſos armare poſſunt, videlt, quilibet eorum juxta ſtatum & facultates ſuas, & ad aſſidendum & apportionandum juxta adviſamentum & diſcretiones veſtras, aut aliquorum trium vel plurium veſtrûm; ac etiam ad diſtringendos omnes illos qui in terris & bonis ſunt potentes, & pro debilitate corporum ad laborandum impotentes, ad inveniendam, juxta quantitatem terrarum & bonorum ſuorum, & prout rationabilitèr portare poterunt (ſalvo ſtatu ſuo), armaturam hominibus ad arma & hominibus armatis, ac arcus & ſagittas; ita quòd illi qui morabuntur, ſeu morari poterunt, ad domum ſuam propriam in patriâ ſuâ ſuper defenſione ejuſdem regni contra inimicos noſtros, ſi periculum eveniat, non capiant vadia nec expenſas pro morâ ſuâ apud domos ſuas prædictas. Et ad dictos homines ad arma, ac homines armatos & ſagittarios, ſic arraiatos & munitos, continuè in arraiatione, ut in millenis, centenis, & vicenis, & aliàs prout conveniens fuerit & neceſſe, teneri & poni faciendos. Aſſignavimus autem vos, aut aliquos tres vel plures veſtrûm, quorum te præfatum Henricum comitem Huntington, &, in abſentiâ tuâ, te præfatum Willielmum comitem Devoniæ, vel te præfatum Henricum Haſtings, filium prædicti comitis Huntington, unum eſſe volumus, ad dictos homines ad arma, ac homines armatos & ſagittarios, ſic araiatos & munitos, tam ad coſteram maris quàm alia loca, ubi ac quoties neceſſe fuerit, ad dictos inimicos noſtros expellendos, debellandos, deſtruendos, de tempore in tempus cùm aliquod periculum immineat, mandandos & injungendos. Aſſignavimus etiam vos, aut aliquos tres vel plures veſtrûm, ad monſtrum ſive monſtrationem eorundem hominum ad arma, ac hominum armatorum & ſagittariorum de tempore in tempus quoties indiguerit diligentèr faciendum & ſupervidendum; ac etiam ad proclamandum, ordinandum, & diligentèr examinandum, quòd omnes & ſinguli hujuſmodi homines ad arma, ac homines armati & ſagittarii in monſtris hujuſmodi armaturæ ſuis propriis & non alienis armentur ſub pœnâ amiſſionis eorundem, exceptis duntaxat illis qui ad expenſas aliorum armari debent, ut prædictum eſt; & ad omnes & ſingulos quos in hâc parte invenieritis contrarios ſeu rebelles areſtandos & capiendos, & eos in priſonis noſtris committendos, in eiſdem moraturos quouſque ſecundùm legem indè deliberati fuerint; & ideò vobis diſtrictiùs quo poſſumus, ſuper fide & ligeantiâ quibus nobis tenemini, injungimus & mandamus, quòd ſtatim, viſis præſentibus, vos ipſos meliùs & ſecuriùs quô poteritis arraiari & parari, & coram vobis ad certos dies & loca quos videritis magis competentes & expedientes, & pro populo noſtro minùs damnoſos, omnes homines in patriâ commorantes, perarraitio & munitio meliùs fieri & compleri poterunt venire, & vocari faciatis, & eos arraiari, armari, & muniri, & eos ſic arraiatos & munitos in arraiatione hujuſmodi teneri faciatis; & inſuper ſigna vocata Beakins poni faciatis in locis conſuetis, per quæ gentes patriæ de adventu inimicorum noſtrorum poterunt congruis temporibus præmuniri; et eoſdem homines ſic arraiatos & munitos, cùm periculum imminueret, in defenſionem regni ac patriæ prædictorum de tempore in tempus, tam ad coſteram maris quàm alia loca ubi magis neceſſe fuerit, duci faciatis, vel aliqui tres aut plures veſtrûm, quorum te præfatum Henricum comitem Huntingdon, &, in abſentiâ tuâ, te præfatum Willielmum comitem Devoniæ, vel te præfatum Henricum Haſtings, filium prædicti comitis Huntington, unum eſſe volumus, duci faciant ut prædictum eſt; ita quod pro defectu defenſionis, arraiationis, ſive ductionis dictorum hominum, vel per negligentiam veſtram, damna patriæ prædictæ per inimicos noſtros modo non eveniat ullo modo pro poſſe veſtro. Damus autem univerſis & ſingulis comitibus, baronibus, militibus, majoribus, ballivis, conſtabulariis, miniſtris, & aliis fidelibus & ligeis noſtris comitatûs prædicti (tam infra libertates quàm extra) tenore præſentium, firmitèr in mandatis, quòd vobis & cuilibet veſtrûm in omnibus & ſingulis præmiſſis faciendis & explendis intendentes ſint, conſulantes, & auxiliantes. Et tibi præfato vicecomiti, quòd ad certos dies & loca quos ad hoc vos vel aliqui tres vel plures veſtrûm, ut prædictum eſt, ordinaveritis venire faciatis coram vobis vel hujuſmodi tribus vel pluribus veſtrûm (ut prædictum eſt) omnes illos in comitatu predicto, per quos arraiatio, aſſeſſio, & ordinatio meliùs poterint fieri & compleri, & illos quos pro rebellione ſuâ capi & arreſtari contigerit in priſonâ noſtrâ cuſtodiri, ſicut prædictum eſt. In cujus rei teſtimonium, has præſentes literas noſtras fieri fecimus patentes. Teſte meipſo, undecimo die Junii, anno regni noſtri decimo-octavo. Per ipſum regem. Willis [2]."

In conſequence of this commiſſion, the following notice and precept were iſſued:

" Mr. Sheriff, We whoſe names are hereunder written, commiſſioners of array, by virtue of his majeſty's commiſſion, have appointed Wedneſday the 22d day of this inſtant month of June, to muſter all the trained bands of foot, and alſo all the freeholders bands; and therefore, by virtue of the ſaid commiſſion, we command you to make your warrants to the chief conſtables of every hundred; commanding them, and every of them, to make their warrants to the particular conſtables within their ſeveral diviſions; and that they warn both clergy and laity, and alſo the freeholders bands, with their complete arms, clean dreſſed, and fit for ſervice, to appear before us, at The Row Dikes, in or near the Borough of Leiceſter, the ſaid 22d day of June, by eight of the clock in the morning. So we reſt, your loving friends,

H. Hastings,
Ric. Halford,
J. Bale,
Jo. Pate."

From Leiceſter, the 16th of
June, 1642.

" Archdale Palmer, eſq. high-ſheriff of the county of Leiceſter, to the chief conſtables of the hundred of Framland, and to every of them, greeting. By virtue of a command to me directed from his Majeſty's commiſſioners of array, and by virtue of the ſaid commiſſion to them and me directed; theſe are, in his Majeſty's name, to will and command you, that preſently (upon ſight hereof) you make your particular warrants to the ſeveral petty conſtables within your ſeveral diviſions, thereby commanding them to warn and ſummon all of the trained bands and freeholders bands, within their ſeveral conſtabularies, as well of the clergy as laity, to be and perſonally appear, with their arms, clean-dreſſed, fit for ſervice, before his Majeſty's commiſſioners of array, at Row Dikes, in or near the Borough of Leiceſter, on Wedneſday the 22d of this inſtant June, by eight of the clock in the morning; and in caſe any of the trained bands, or freehold bands, be dead, or gone from the town, that the petty conſtables do bring in able and ſufficient men, to ſerve in their rooms, and fit for ſervice; and that you, and every of you, and alſo the petty conſtables, be likewiſe then and there preſent. Hereof fail you not, as you will anſwer the contrary at your perils. Given under my hand and ſeal of office, the 16th of June, anno Domini 1642[1]."

---

[1] Huſbands's Remonſtrances, &c. p. 345.

[2] Ibid. p. 346.

June 17, a letter from the earl of Stamford was read; ſhewing, "That the county of Leiceſter have executed the militia with a great readineſs, and many volunteers came in; but a commiſſion of array is granted to the earls of Huntingdon and Devon, and Mr. Henry Haſtings, to oppoſe the militia; and the ſaid commiſſion is to be put into execution on Thurſday next: Therefore the earl of Stamford deſired the advice of the parliament, what he ſhall do if the ſaid commiſſion be put into execution." Whereupon it was reſolved, to have a ſelect committee of both Houſes, to conſider how to prevent the executing of commiſſions of array, and in particular that commiſſion which the earl of Stamford hath informed[2].

"For the much-honoured Wm. Lenthall, eſquire, ſpeaker of the Commons Houſe.

"Sir, The trained ſoldiers being ſummoned to appear at Leiceſter, and to bring with them their arms; Mr. Henry Haſtings, ſon to the earl of Huntingdon, came to Leiceſter the day before our meeting, and had divers proclamations of the militia; and ſome he ſent to the head conſtables, writing on the back ſide that they ſhould publiſh them in the towns, ſubſcribing his own name. Our lord-lieutenant ſent one of them to the lord Grey. The next day, Mr. Thomas Rudiard, the mayor of Leiceſter, being at the town-hall in conſultation with his brethren, Mr. Haſtings went near to the hall, and ſent for the mayor; and told him, that the King, with his own hands, gave him a proclamation, commanding him to deliver it to the mayor, and that he ſhould proclaim it; and further, that his Majeſty had heard ill of the town of Leiceſter, and expected an exact account of that day's work. After that diſcourſe, the mayor refuſed (although before he had promiſed all obedience to the Ordinance) to ſend for the trained men of the town; and the trained ſoldiers coming out of the country with their arms, being on their way to the town, were met by ſtrangers, affirming that we had declared that they needed not to appear, and telling them, that, if they went with their arms, it would coſt them their lands, if not their lives, which did ſtrangely amuſe the people; nevertheleſs there was a good appearance of men; but moſt of their arms, by reaſon of thoſe reports, were left by the way. We, finding an abſolute neceſſity of our ſtay in the county, ſent warrants to train the five companies in their ſeveral diviſions. Three have appeared in a very full and complete number; ſcarce a trained man of the laity miſſing, but from the towns of ſir Richard Halford, ſir John Bale, and Mr. John Pate, three of our former deputy-lieutenants, and againſt whom complaints of a high nature depend in the Houſe of Commons; and about one hundred eighty volunteers came in, well armed, and all expreſſed great affection and forwardneſs for King and Parliament. To-morrow we go on to the fourth diviſion, and doubt not of a good appearance, although we approach near to Mr. Haſtings's quarters. We had not troubled your great and preſſing affairs with this long narration at this time, but left it to our return, had not Mr. Haſtings this day, accompanied with ſir Richard Halford, ſir John Bale, Mr. Pate, and Gregory, under-ſheriff, that oppoſed the publiſhing the laſt declaration in anſwer to the proclamation, gone to the town-hall, and, in the preſence of Mr. Mayor and ſome of his brethren, delivered a tranſlation in Engliſh of a commiſſion, to be read by the town-clerk; which he reading, the under-ſheriff held the original; and where defects were, he read the Latin, and turned it into Engliſh. A copy of the commiſſion, and the warrants that are ſent forth thereupon, we have ſent. That commiſſion being read, Mr. Haſtings delivered a letter, which was alſo read; a copy whereof, as it comes to our hands, is here incloſed. Then Mr. Haſtings declared his Majeſty's affections to the town, eſpecially to the mayor; giving him public thanks for his good ſervice, ſhewing his diſlike of our lord-lieutenant's proceedings concerning the magazine; and concluding with a deſire that Mr. Mayor would ſet a ſtrong guard upon the magazine, for it was the defence of the town, as well as for the county. Mr. Mayor conſented, and appointed a guard both for day and night. We perceive this commiſſion and theſe actions do very much diſtract both the town and country; and of what dangerous conſequence ſuch beginnings may be, not only to this county, but to the whole kingdom, we humbly leave it to the wiſdom of the Houſe; and ourſelves to be commanded as your faithful friends and ready ſervants, H. RUTHIN, ARTH. HESILRIGG."

Both Houſes of Parliament ſent for the original record, and compared this commiſſion therewith; and the 18th of June, the lord admiral reported from a Committee of the Lords appointed to conſider of commiſſions of array, "That they had examined this commiſſion of array for Leiceſter, with the record of Henry IV; and the Leiceſter commiſſion was not agreeable to the record." Whereupon the Committee voted, "That the commiſſion of array for Leiceſter was againſt law, and the liberty and property of the ſubject." Which vote the Houſe confirmed, and voted the ſame verbatim[3].

It was alſo reſolved by both Houſes, that Henry Haſtings, eſq. ſon to the earl of Huntingdon, ſhould be ſent for, as a delinquent, for diſturbing the execution of the Ordinance of the Militia for the county of Leiceſter[4];" and that all thoſe that were actors in putting the commiſſion of array in execution ſhould be eſteemed as diſturbers of the peace of the kingdom, and betrayers of the liberties of the ſame[5]." Sir Richard Halford and Mr. Haſtings, with their under-ſheriff[6], were accordingly ſent for as delinquents by a ſerjeant at arms of both Houſes[7].

June 20, a Committee was appointed, "to draw an impeachment againſt Mr. Haſtings, and thoſe other gentlemen[8] of the county of Leiceſter, for high miſdemeanors, according to the information given concerning their carriage about the putting in execution the commiſſion of array; and likewiſe to conſider of the buſineſs concerning the high-ſheriff[9]."

"A true relation of the tranſaction of the commands of both Houſes of Parliament in the execution of the Militia in the county of Leiceſter. By the right honourable Henry earl of Stamford, lord lieutenant of the ſaid county; the honourable the lord Ruthin, ſir Arthur Heſilrige, knight, deputy-lieutenants; and others ſubſervient to the ſame commands. Performed in the town and county of Leiceſter aforeſaid, before and upon Wedneſday the 22d of June, 1642.—Ordered by the Lords and Commons in Parliament aſſembled, that this execution of the Militia for Leiceſterſhire, with theſe votes, be forthwith publiſhed in print. JOHN BROWN, Cler. Parl.——London: Printed for George Lindſay, and for all thoſe who truly love and honour the King and Parliament, and deſire their amity and unity.

"On Saturday the 4th of June, the earl of Stamford came to Leiceſter; where his lordſhip iſſued out his warrants to all the head-conſtables to ſummon all the trained bands, and deſired all the private men within their ſeveral diviſions to appear before him or his deputies at the town of Leiceſter on Wedneſday following. Afterwards, the very ſame Saturday, came a meſſenger, with a writ to the high ſheriff to ſend forth his Majeſty's proclamations to the contrary. Notwithſtanding the warrants being ſent out by the head-conſtables, the country came in, both trained ſoldiers, private men, and volunteers, far beyond expectation, who generally declared themſelves for the King and Parliament. But the ſaid earl thought fit again, the week following, to appoint the five companies of the trained bands to appear ſeverally in ſuch convenient places as might be moſt for their eaſe, and leaſt chargeable; and thereupon they came. The firſt, on Tueſday June 4, to Broughton Aſtley; where appeared above 100 volunteers, and the trained and private men, all ſave only out of one diviſion, the head-conſtable thereof, being perſuaded by the parſon of the town where he lives, refuſing to ſend out his warrants; and yet, out of that diviſion, the trained ſoldiers and private men in many towns came in without warning. The ſecond, on Wedneſday, at Kibworth; where there was a very good appearance, except ſome of the clergy, with above 100 volunteers. The third, on Thurſday, at Melton Mowbray; where they made a general appearance. The fourth, upon Friday, at Queneborow; where the appearance was very good, conſidering how many great Papiſts and ill-affected people live thereabouts. The laſt, on Monday, at the Copt Oak. There was a general appearance of the trained and private men, with 200 volunteers at the leaſt; and in every one of theſe places very many of the countrymen came to the ſaid earl, and deſired him to help them to arms for their own defence and the public ſafety. And, after his return home from that day's muſter, he was advertized that ſir Richard Halford, ſir John Bale, knts. and John Pate, eſq. had prevailed with Mr. Mayor of Leiceſter to ſet a guard upon the remainder of the magazine left at that place; and that one of that worthy gentleman's ſervants ſhould watch the ſame, together with divers deſperate fellows of that town. The earl repaired thither, accompanied with the lord Ruthin, ſir Arthur Heſilrige, Mr. Thomas Bramour, and divers other gentlemen of good worth in that county; and commanded the Mayor to remove away the remainder of the powder, match, and bullets, and put it into a place of more ſtrength and ſafety. But on Wedneſday the 15th of June, as the ſaid earl returned from Kibworth, he heard at Leiceſter, that Mr. Henry Haſtings was immediately before come thither from York with a commiſſion of array. So the ſaid earl, having firſt given advertiſement thereof to the Parliament, removed very early the next morning a great part of the magazine from the town of Leiceſter, for more ſecurity, to his own houſe. That day, being Thurſday, maſter Haſtings cauſed the under-ſheriff (in the abſence of the high-ſheriff) to ſend forth warrants, in the high-ſheriff's name, that the whole county, as well trained ſoldiers, private men, and the clergy, ſhould come to Leiceſter, according to his commiſſion, there to be muſtered on the Wedneſday following. In the interim, the ſaid earl, having notice given him from divers perſons of many menacing words caſt forth againſt him, tending to the hazard of his life and deſtruction of his houſe; on Monday the ſaid earl ſet a guard about his houſe of 150 of his neighbours, tenants, and ſervants, who, hearing the report, came and offered themſelves to do him ſervice; whom he maintained at his own charge. On Tueſday, early in the morning, a meſſenger from the high Court of Parliament did attach the under-ſheriff for ſending forth warrants by virtue of the Commiſſion of Array; and with a ſufficient guard carried him away to the Parliament. In the afternoon maſter Haſtings, being newly returned from York, came to Loughborough; and, hearing that the under-ſheriff was gone, ſent out again other warrants himſelf, to ſummon all the towns near his abode to come to him at Loughborough betimes the next morning; and, being the maſter of certain coal-mines, he cauſed all his horſes belonging to the engines to be in readineſs; and there raiſed about 100 colliers out of Derbyſhire, whom he had armed with pikes, muſkets, and calivers; and, few or none of the trained bands coming in to him, he aſſembled his friends (many of them Papiſts, and ſuch others as were ill-affected towards the proceedings of Parliament) at Loughborough on Wedneſday morning; where, and at Aſhby de la Zouch, he bought up all the powder and old troopers' ſaddles that on the ſudden could be. When all were come in together, he made proclamations, that whoſoever wanted arms ſhould be furniſhed from Garendon abbey and other Popiſh places, as is credibly reported; and ſo they marched with drums and colours towards Leiceſter, 8 miles diſtant, himſelf ſtill marching before them when they came near a town. Within three miles of the town of Leiceſter, he cauſed powder, match, and bullets, to be delivered to every muſketeer, and commanded, by a ſerjeant, that every man ſhould charge with powder and bullet; which was done immediately, and match lighted; and ſo himſelf marched in the head of them into the town of Leiceſter, and commanded they ſhould not diſcharge till the word of command was given. The earl of Stamford, having intelligence of his march by ſcouts which he ſent abroad, might have laid his ambuſcado, and by the advantage of the way have cut them all off; for, the ſaid earl was furniſhed with about 150 muſketeers and ſhot, and 20 good horſe well mounted with carbines and piſtols; beſides, the neighbouring towns came running in, offering their lives and fortunes at his diſpoſal, and, in effect, the whole county ready and willing to have been raiſed at his command. The provocations were great from Mr. Haſtings and his troops, conſiſting of horſe as well as pike-men and muſketeers, who gave out by the way (to the terror of the people that came affrighted and gave intelligence to the ſaid earl), that they would fetch away the magazine from him, fire his houſe, have his heart's blood, and never leave him till they had made him turn up the white of his eyes. Yet the ſaid earl choſe rather to ſtand upon his guard at home, than to ſally out and levy a war, well weighing with himſelf the miſery that might have enſued, not to this county alone, but to the whole kingdom. When Mr. Haſtings and his company were come into the field, but not in the place where by the warrant he had appointed the country to meet (very few of the trained bands obeying that ſummons); having made a ſpeech, and therein pretended his affection to his country, that he had not a Papiſt in his company, and that his deſire was to avoid the effuſion of blood, he began to read his commiſſion of array. Thereupon the high-ſheriff cauſed the votes of both Houſes of Parliament to be read, wherein his commiſſion was voted illegal. So a meſſenger from both Houſes of Parliament did preſently attach him as a delinquent, as alſo ſome others of the commiſſioners that were preſent with him, by virtue of a warrant from the high Court of Parliament. Then, notwithſtanding his aforeſaid oration, divers of his company, both horſe and foot, did cock their match, and draw out their piſtols, and preſented them towards the high ſheriff. Maſter Haſtings and the reſt, being much daunted at the unexpected courage and ſpirit both of the high ſheriff and the meſſenger, ſaid, after they had executed his Majeſty's commiſſion, they would appear at Parliament. But the horſe, preſſing upon them (conſiſting chiefly of the four delinquents, their captains, officers, and ſervants, with others, Papiſts and unknown perſons), reſcued them, and ſhot at the meſſenger; and two butchers of Leiceſter throwing Mr. Haſtings on horſeback, he drew out his piſtols, and marched directly, with the reſt of his company, to his inn, and ſhut up the gates. The earl of Stamford, hearing of the reſcue, ſent ſome of his ſervants to Leiceſter, to give command to every man that had any ſoldiers in his houſe to ſeize their arms, when they were aſleep. In the mean while, maſter Haſtings and the reſt, hearing what men the ſaid earl had in readineſs, and apprehending that Mr. Sheriff might require his aid, did all thereupon very fairly run away that night at 11 o'clock. So it happened, that all or moſt of their arms were ſeized upon according to the ſtratagem propoſed, and are now remaining at the diſpoſal of the ſaid earl of Stamford; the which ſhall be employed as both Houſes of Parliament pleaſe to command. It is to be remembered, that Mr. Haſtings had his man at Leiceſter, ready upon the coming down of the earl of Stamford, to carry him word; and that he immediately poſted away to York, and brought back with him proclamations, which he diſperſed about the country; writing himſelf upon the back ſide, in the nature of a warrant, that it was to be conveyed from town to town, and publiſhed in every place: That, the day before the country was to come in, he came himſelf to Leiceſter; and maſter Mayor and the Aldermen being met in the town-hall, to adviſe about the appearance of the trained ſoldiers in the town (which maſter Mayor promiſed on Saturday before ſhould come in, if the earl of Stamford would grant him a warrant, which was granted) maſter Haſtings came to the hall, and ſent for maſter Mayor from his brethren; and ſo changed his reſolution, that he utterly refuſed to iſſue out any warrants; for which maſter Haſtings ſince hath procured a letter of thanks from the King to the Mayor. Notwithſtanding the backwardneſs of the Mayor, about 100 men, many of the Mayor's brethren, and of the company of the Borough, with others well-affected to the King, Parliament, and Kingdom, and the ſafety of them, came as volunteers, well armed; and many others offered in a ſhort time to provide themſelves with arms, to be ready at the next ſummons of the earl of Stamford to be trained and exerciſed."

---

[1] Journals of the Lords, vol. V. p. 145.

[2] Ibid. p. 142.

[3] Journals of the Lords, vol. V. p. 150; of the Commons, vol. II. p. 632.

[4] Journals of the Lords, vol. V. pp. 145. 150.

[5] Journals of the Commons, vol. II. p. 632.

[6] The under-ſheriff was Mr. Gregory.

[7] Journals of the Commons, vol. II. p. 631.

[8] Ibid. p. 632.

[9] Ibid. p. 645.

A narration of the ſervice performed by John Chambers and James Stanforth, by command of both Houſes of Parliament, touching the Militia.

"On Saturday the 18th of this inſtant June, 1642, they received, at the riſing of the Houſe of Commons, their warrants againſt the ſeveral delinquents therein named; viz. Henry Haſtings, eſq. ſon to the right honourable the earl of Huntingdon; Henry Haſtings, of Humberſton, eſq.; ſir Richard Halford, knt.; maſter Pate; ſir John Bale, knt.; and maſter Gregory, the under-ſheriff of the county of Leiceſter. On Monday the 20th of the ſaid month, they came, by 11 o'clock in the morning to Broadgate, in the ſaid county, to the houſe of the right honourable the earl of Stamford; where they were informed that his lordſhip, together with the lord Ruthin and ſir Arthur Heſilrige, were training ſoldiers at a place called Copt Oak, three miles diſtant from the lord Stamford's houſe, where the ſaid Chambers and Stanforth waited till the evening, when they returned from the muſter, and preſently took horſe, as the lords, ſir Arthur Heſilrige, and others, preſently did, and waited on them to the town of Leiceſter; where they attended the ſaid lords and ſir Arthur Heſilrige, who received information that ſir Richard Halford had prevailed with Thomas Ruddier, the mayor there, to ſet a guard on the remainder of the magazine; and they, having ſent for the ſaid mayor and juſtices of the ſaid town of Leiceſter, removed the ſame from the South gate into a ſtrong tower called Newark Gate near the town, by the approbation of the ſaid mayor and juſtices, who were then preſent that evening; and the next day they waited for farther command from their lordſhips and ſir Arthur Heſilrige; who being at Leiceſter, where they heard that maſter Henry Haſtings, ſir Richard Halford, and others, intended to come in a warlike manner againſt the day following, being Wedneſday, the 23d of the ſaid month of June, after the lords and ſir Arthur Heſilrige had fixed the votes of both Houſes on the inn-gates, where they the ſaid maſter Haſtings and the other delinquents were to lie, and had done what was poſſible in the buſineſs for the time preſent; about 9 o'clock in the morning, they departed to the lord Stamford's, leaving the ſaid Chambers and Stanforth, together with one Thomas Horton, one of the ſaid ſir Arthur's ſervants, at Leiceſter, to wait on the ſaid high-ſheriff Archdale Palmer, eſq. to manage the buſineſs, as the ſheriff and they were required. On the Wedneſday aforeſaid, about 8 o'clock in the morning, the high-ſheriff came to Leiceſter, attended only by men armed with ſwords and javelins to keep the King's peace there; that, being in an inn called The Heron in Leiceſter, the ſaid Chambers ſaw a barrel brought in by a porter, which he deemed to be gunpowder; which doubts to ſatisfy, the porter was examined; whereupon he confeſſed the barrel was filled with gunpowder, and that it was ſent thither by maſter Andrew Halford; which powder the high ſheriff then ſeized upon by power of an order of the honourable Houſe of Parliament, dated the 11th day of June aforeſaid. That about 10 o'clock the ſaid day, one maſter Walter Haſtings, mounted on a bay ſtone-horſe, with a great ſaddle and petronels, in a warlike manner rid into the yard of the ſaid inn, and with him the lord Lovelace and one maſter Killegrew (as they were informed); who traverſing up and down the ſaid yard on horſeback, the ſaid Walter Haſtings ſwore that he would eat up the lord Stamford; to which one of the ſaid gentlemen replied, 'Leave one bit for me,' or to the ſame effect; and then the ſaid Haſtings made a ſhort diſtracted ſpeech to the people, ſaying, 'What, my friends and countrymen, ye ſtand for the King and the Haſtings, who have ever been true to the Crown?' The people anſwered, 'We are all for the King and the Parliament.' Then the ſaid Haſtings required the ſaid ſheriff to read his majeſty's proclamation, which (with an oath) he the ſaid Haſtings ſwore the ſheriff had received. Whereunto the ſheriff modeſtly replied, it was not true; which done, he the ſaid Haſtings departed, and the reſt of his company, in an outrageous and uncivil manner, ſwearing and curſing as they rode out of the ſaid inn. About 2 o'clock the ſame day, they the ſaid high ſheriff, Chambers, and Stanforth, had intelligence that the ſaid delinquents, or moſt of them, with all their troops and foot-ſoldiers, to the number of about 300, were met in a common or green, called the Horſe-fair, near the ſaid town, whither they repaired, attended on by the ſaid ſheriff, men on foot, and found the ſaid parties there, met ſome of them on great horſes, with petronels, and the reſt armed with ſwords, muſkets, calivers, pikes, and halberts. Maſter Henry Haſtings alighted, and told the ſheriff and the reſt, 'he was come thither to execute his Majeſty's commiſſion of array, to himſelf and others then granted for that county;' and then tendered to the ſaid ſheriff two bundles, the one of proclamations, the other of books, with an impoſition on the ſheriff to read and publiſh the ſame, maſter Haſtings ſwearing he was 'the King's body and ſoul;' and the ſaid ſheriff, being often and very uncivilly preſſed by the ſaid maſter Haſtings to read and publiſh the ſaid proclamations, made this anſwer: 'I cannot perform his Majeſty's ſingle commands, till I have acquainted the Parliament therewith, nor do any thing contrary to their votes: I am for the King and for the Parliament; and, if I periſh, I periſh.' Whereupon the ſaid Chambers produced the laſt votes of both Houſes concerning the illegality of the commiſſions of array; and read the ſame plainly and openly, endeavouring thereby to let the people hear them ſo read; and likewiſe read the laſt declaration of both Houſes concerning the Militia, concluding with theſe words: 'God ſave the King and Parliament!' which words the people plauſibly reiterated (except the ſaid Henry Haſtings, who, as before, again ſaid he was 'the King's body and ſoul,'); and then and there the ſaid Chambers drew forth the warrants of both Houſes, and, entreating the people's ſilence, read them openly, and called the delinquents, maſter Henry Haſtings, ſir Richard Halford, ſir John Bale, and maſter John Pate, they being then and there preſent and within hearing (as the ſaid Chambers was informed), requiring them, at their utmoſt perils, to yield their obedience to the power of the ſaid warrants; and the ſaid Chambers required the ſheriff to keep the King's peace, and to be aiding and aſſiſting unto him the ſaid Chambers in the due execution of the ſaid warrants. To prevent and utterly hinder the due execution whereof, the ſaid maſter Haſtings began to read the King's commiſſion; which being in Latin, and he not being ready therein, did there endeavour to comment upon the meaning thereof in Engliſh; which being altogether then unable to do, one maſter Edward Palmer, the town-clerk of Leiceſter, took the ſaid commiſſion out of his hand, ſaying it ought to be read; who read it in Latin; to which moſt of the people gave ear, but anſwered nothing. That done, the ſaid Chambers laid a ſtrict command on the ſaid ſheriff to have a ſpecial care of the ſaid delinquents, and required them likewiſe to obey; which words the ſaid ſir Richard Halford hearing (being very near to the ſaid Chambers), anſwered thus: 'When this his Majeſty's great buſineſs is over, then I will come to you, maſter Sheriff, and give ſuch ſecurity for my attendance on the Parliament as ſhall be fitting.' Maſter Haſtings alſo willed the ſaid Chambers to repair to the Angel in Leiceſter, where all the delinquents (as he ſaid) intended to lodge that night, where he ſhould have civil deportment from them; which he much doubted, ſeeing their carriage before in the field to be ſo outrageous. Immediately after that, maſter Haſtings pretended he would divide the troopers and ſoldiers into four parts, and call them by their names; but, having ſevered them for his own advantage, to gain his horſe, he was (by two rude butchers, one by name Henry Cotes, as the ſaid Chambers was informed) lifted up into his great ſaddle, and a petronel ready cocked given into his hands by one of the ſaid butchers. Then the cavaliers and the reſt of the ſoldiers, joining with the rude multitude, and about 24 parſons in canonical coats, well horſed, rode all towards the town, with loud exclamations, 'A KING! a KING!' and others, 'For a KING! a KING!' in a ſtrange and unheard-of manner; captain Worſley giving the word of command to the ſoldiers, 'Make ready! make ready!' which as they were providing to do, a ſudden and extraordinary abundance of rain falling, the ſoldiers were hindered from firing. Then the ſaid maſter Walter Haſtings endeavoured to ride over the ſaid Chambers; who, to prevent that, got up a high bank, whereon a rude fellow ſtanding, ſtruck him with a club on the breaſt, and with the violence thereof the ſaid Chambers fell backward into a ditch; but, as ſoon as his ſtrength ſerved him to recover himſelf, he made all the haſte he poſſibly could towards the town, to eſcape murdering. Then they followed maſter Sheriff, Chambers and Stanforth crying out, 'At the cap! at the cap!' which was at that time on Chambers's head; and one of the perſons endeavoured to ride over the ſaid ſheriff, another of them would have ridden over the ſaid Stanforth, and maſter Walter Haſtings gave fire at Chambers with one of the petronels, but the ſame did not diſcharge; ſo they got to the ſaid inn with much hazard, who afterwards were enforced, for their own ſafety, to ſtand upon their guard; and, being very much tired, were unable that night to do any farther ſervice, except the writing of a letter, which Chambers did, and recommended the ſame to the lord Stamford and the reſt, to ſatisfy what was done, and to have farther direction what was after fitting to be done therein; which directions, about one o'clock in the morning, were, that the ſaid Chambers and Stanforth ſhould, by the aſſiſtance of the ſaid ſheriff and the mayor and juſtices of Leiceſter, uſe their beſt power and endeavour to ſurprize the ſaid delinquents: but they, too ſenſible of their ill carriage and miſdemeanour, privately in the evening had got away, leaving the ſoldiers behind them. About 2 o'clock the ſaid morning, the ſaid Chambers and Stanforth, with the aſſiſtance of the juſtices and other townſmen, with about 40 perſons more, made ſeveral ſearches in inns and other drinking-houſes, where they found many ſoldiers laid in bed, ſome on the bed, but moſt of them diſtempered with drink; and then ſeized on their arms, and cauſed them to be carried to the ſheriff in the ſaid inn; viz. one great ſaddle, three petronels, and about 100 pikes, one lance, above 60 muſkets and calivres, about 20 ſwords, and 4 long pieces about 7 feet in length; all which the ſaid Chambers and Stanforth and others of the ſheriff's men ſearching, found charged, ſome with bullets, ſome with half-bullets, and others with gooſe-ſhot very deeply and dangerouſly; which ammunition being left in the ſheriff's cuſtody, part of them were delivered to ſome of the trained band, and the reſt preſented by the ſaid Chambers to the lord Stamford. Then, the ſaid Chambers being farther informed that maſter Henry Haſtings had procured about 100 colliers out of Derbyſhire, to attend him to Leiceſter upon the like ſearch, the ſaid Chambers, with Stanforth, being accompanied with the ſaid juſtices and townſmen, found two of them, who confeſſed they were poor Derbyſhire colliers, neither trained men, nor men that had at any time before that borne arms for any other, and that they and their fellows were ordered to come to Leiceſter in aid of his Majeſty and their maſter the ſaid maſter Haſtings; which ſaid colliers never appeared before the ſheriff to demand or receive their arms, but got privately away. The mayor in the whole progreſs of this buſineſs ſeemed backward to do any thing for the Parliament, and as forward to farther maſter Haſings in the buſineſs aforeſaid. The effect of which proceedings the ſaid Chambers and Stanforth thought fit humbly to preſent to the conſtruction and grave conſideration of this Honourable Aſſembly; ready always to proſtrate themſelves and ſervice at your farther commands. JOHN CHAMBERS, JAMES STANFORTH."

June 25, the following warrant was iſſued:

"Charles R. Truſty and well-beloved, We greet you well. Your letter of the 22d of this month, and your relation ſince, gives us ſo good ſatisfaction, as we not only approve of your loyal and faithful endeavours to preſerve our regal and lawful authorities in all thoſe particulars; but give you and the reſt of our commiſſioners of array, and the gentlemen and others of that our county who aſſiſted you, our royal thanks for what you have therein done, in oppoſition to the diſloyal and diſobedient practices of the earl of Stamford and his adherents; which ſaid earl, if he hath (as your letter imports) by force, and under pretence of authority by the pretended ordinance of the two Houſes of Parliament, ſurprized and carried away all or part of the magazine of munition belonging to that our county, and keeps the ſame with forces, hath actually levied war againſt us, and ſo we cannot account him and his adherents other than traitors; in which caſe, any private man knowing of it, and much more all juſtices of peace and other officers, are obliged to apprehend them. Wherefore our will and command is, that, with ſuch power as you can raiſe, you apprehend the ſaid earl and his adherents in any part of that county, and ſend them hither in ſafe cuſtody. And we farther require you to ſeize, and put in ſafety, for the uſe of our ſaid county, all ſuch part of the ſaid magazine of munition as you ſhall find to have been ſurprized and carried away by the ſaid earl; and likewiſe to ſeize, and take into your cuſtody, ſuch muſkets and other arms as the ſaid earl or his adherents have brought down with them, for arming ſuch as ſhould adhere to him, until farther order ſhall be taken; and, in performance of theſe our commands, we require all our ſheriffs, juſtices of peace, mayors, bailiffs, conſtables, and other officers and ſubjects, to be aiding and aſſiſting; for which this ſhall be ſufficient warrant. Given at our court at York, the 25th day of June, 1642.

To our truſty and well-beloved Henry Haſtings,
eſq. high ſheriff of our county of Leiceſter [1]."

June 25. The deputy-ſheriff of Leiceſterſhire was brought to the Houſe, as a delinquent, for proclaiming the commiſſion of array.

June 27. Sir Arthur Heſilrige reported the proceedings upon the commiſſion of array by Mr. Haſtings and others at Leiceſter; viz. that Mr. Haſtings read the commiſſion at the Croſs at Loughborough; that he told them, arms were at the town's end, and he would ſpend his life among them; that there were about 60 colliers, or ſuch like perſons, that Mr. Haſtings had procured to come out of Derbyſhire thither, and armed them with muſkets, who were commanded to charge, and light their matches; which they did, ſome with one bullet, and ſome with two. And one witneſs ſaith, that Mr. Haſtings ſaid he would have the earl of Stamford's life before he left * * *.—Haſtings cauſed the drums to be beaten, and colours diſplayed; and marched, to the great terror of the people.

The ſeveral informations of William Sheffield, William Whatton, Robert Blaſtock ſervant to Mr. Peſtell vicar of Packington in the county of Derby, of Richard Knight of Mountſorel, of Richard Raven miniſter of Quorndon, of Mr. Edward Coleman, of Jo. Brown of Wanlip, and of Mary Coltman, were all read; which do make good and atteſt the report made by ſir Arthur Heſilrige.

Ordered, that the Committee appointed to advance the ſubſcription of the ſeveral counties do forthwith retire, to conſider farther of that buſineſs.

---

[1] Journals of the Lords, vol. V. p. 232.

Reſolved, that the Houſe doth approve of Mr. Archdale Palmer to be one of the deputy-lieutenants of the county [1].

July 1, "The Houſe was informed, that a poſt came laſt night from the earl of Stamford's houſe in Leiceſterſhire, which brings word, that Mr. Haſtings is returned into Leiceſterſhire, and is proclaimed ſheriff; and that there are come with him captain Lunſford and captain Digby, and other ſoldiers: that they have brought match, powder, and other ammunition, and four field-pieces [2]."

July 4, "A letter from Mr. Saliſbury, ſervant to the earl of Stamford, dated from Broadgate, July 2, concerning Mr. Haſtings, as high-ſheriff, ſending forth his warrants to the high-conſtables of ſeveral hundreds, and intending to ſeize the magazine at Broadgate, the earl of Stamford's houſe, if he could not have it by fair means; his warrant, of the 28th of June, directed to Mr. Gery of Bilſton, one of the head-conſtables of Sparkenhoe hundred; and likewiſe one letter, of the 3d of July, from Leiceſter, ſubſcribed by William Ward, David Deakins, Richard Ludlam, and William Franke, expreſſing the manner of Mr. Haſtings coming with forces to Leiceſter, and demanding the magazine; and proclaiming William Reymer, of whom the magazine was demanded, and others, traitors, for not yielding up the magazine, were all this day read. Reſolved, upon the queſtion, That officers be ſent down into the county of Leiceſter, to aſſiſt the lord-lieutenant and the deputy-lieutenants, in putting the Ordinance of the Militia in execution, for preſerving the peace of the county, for ſuppreſſing inſurrections, and ſafe keeping the magazine there.—Ordered, That the mayor of Leiceſter [3] and Dr. Lake ſhall be ſummoned, and come in ſafe cuſtody, to attend this Houſe [4]."

July 6, "Mr. Serjeant Wilde reports the buſineſs concerning Leiceſterſhire, to this effect: Mr. Haſtings draws out of ſeveral counties divers perſons of deſperate condition; arms them, and comes to Loughborough with colours flying; and there makes proclamation, that all ſuch as have any affection to this ſervice, they ſhould have arms at the town's end. Divers were then armed; and they marched in a warlike manner ſeven or eight miles, with colours flying, drums beating, and muſquets laden with bullet; and pretended to come to ſeize and take the magazine from the earl of Stamford, lord-lieutenant of the county of Leiceſter, by the Ordinance of the Militia; who had taken part of it into his own cuſtody, it being delivered unto him by the ſheriff, upon an order of both Houſes. He left part of it at Leiceſter; and the other part, for the better ſafety of it, he carried to his own houſe; and ſome of the company gave out, that they would have the blood of the earl of Stamford. Mr. Haſtings was complained of here for ſome great miſdemeanors; and thereupon meſſengers, by order of both Houſes, were ſent down to apprehend him and ſome other; and to bring them up to anſwer the miſdemeanors complained of. The meſſenger found him in this poſture of war, in the head of his forces, in a place called The Horſe-leas, near Leiceſter. Mr. Haſtings, ſpying him, ſaid, 'I know you have an order for others, as well as for me.' The meſſenger did acknowledge it, and read his warrant; and actually arreſted him. The warrants for the apprehending of others of his company were likewiſe read; and the ſheriff coming thither to aſſiſt the meſſengers of this Houſe, in executing their warrants, and to preſerve the peace of the county; ſome of his company cocked their piſtols and carabines againſt the ſheriff and the meſſengers; and, by forces levied, reſcued themſelves from the authority of both Houſes. Ordered, That it be referred to the committee for Leiceſter, to conſider of ſome way for the indemnity of thoſe perſons that preſerve the magazine at Leiceſter; and that the Leiceſterſhire buſineſs be taken into conſideration the firſt buſineſs this afternoon."—Poſt meridiem. Mr. Serjeant Wilde reports the impeachment againſt Mr. Haſtings; which was read; and, upon the queſtion, aſſented unto; and ordered to be ingroſſed, and carried up to the Lords.—Ordered, That the powder, arms, and ammunition, in the county of Leiceſter, put into certain places of that county, by the direction of the lord-lieutenant of that county, ſhall be kept there ſtill, till farther orders be given to the contrary [5]."

July 8, "The impeachment of Henry Haſtings, eſquire, ſecond ſon of the earl of Huntingdon, ſir Richard Halford, knight and baronet, ſir John Bale, knight, and John Pate, eſquire, by the Commons aſſembled in Parliament, for high crimes and miſdemeanors by them committed.

"Whereas, by order and command of the Lords and Commons in Parliament, for the ſafety and defence of the county of Leiceſter, the magazine of the ſaid county was delivered into the hands of Henry earl of Stamford, who, in June 1642, removed a great part thereof to his dwelling-houſe called Broadgate, in the ſaid county, for the more ſafety and ſecurity thereof: And whereas, in the ſaid month of June, ſeveral warrants iſſued out, by order of both Houſes of Parliament, the one directed to the gentleman-uſher of the houſe of peers, his deputy or deputies, the other to the ſerjeant at arms attending on this Houſe, his deputy or deputies, for the apprehending of the ſaid Henry Haſtings, ſir Richard Halford, ſir John Bale, and John Pate, for high crimes and miſdemeanors by them committed againſt the ſaid Houſes of Parliament, to anſwer the ſame before the ſaid Houſes: He the ſaid Henry Haſtings, ſir Richard Halford, ſir John Bale, and John Pate, well knowing the premiſſes; and the ſaid ſir Richard Halford, ſir John Bale, and John Pate, being then and yet juſtices of the peace of the ſaid county; in or about the 22d day of the ſaid month of June, wickedly and maliciouſly, without warrant of law, did raiſe and draw out of the ſeveral counties of Derby, Lincoln, and Leiceſter, forces of horſe and foot, to the number of 300 perſons, or thereabouts, ſome of them being colliers, and other mean and deſperate perſons, and divers of them Papiſts, and them unlawfully aſſembled at Loughborough, in the ſaid county of Leiceſter; where the ſaid Henry Haſtings, the day aforeſaid, made proclamation, That, if any perſons affected to that ſervice wanted arms, and would repair to the town's end, they ſhould be furniſhed therewith; and they, the ſaid Henry Haſtings, ſir Richard Halford, ſir John Bale, and John Pate, together with the ſaid other perſons ſo aſſembled, being armed with ſwords and pikes, and with piſtols, muſkets, and calivers, ready charged with powder and bullets, and other habiliments of war, marched along in a warlike manner, with drums beating and colours flying, and their matches lighted, to the great terror and affrightment of his Majeſty's ſubjects, divers miles within the ſaid county of Leiceſter, to the town of Leiceſter, and ſo through the ſaid town, with great noiſe and ſhouting, to a certain place near to the ſaid town, called Horſe Fair Leas, to the intent to keep themſelves from being arreſted by the ſaid officers of both Houſes of Parliament, and, in caſe they ſhould be ſo arreſted, then to reſcue themſelves by force, and to the intent likewiſe to take away the ſaid magazine by force and arms, and to kill and deſtroy the ſaid earl of Stamford; he the ſaid Henry Haſtings, and ſome other of his ſaid complices, giving out that they would fetch away the ſaid magazine with a vengeance, and that they would have the ſaid earl's life before they left, and would fire his houſe, and have his heart's blood out, with divers other ſuch like deſperate ſpeeches: And the ſaid Henry Haſtings, ſir Richard Halford, ſir John Bale, and John Pate, with the reſt of their ſaid confederates, being ſo aſſembled at the ſaid Horſe Fair Leas, John Chambers and James Stanforth, being authorized thereunto by deputations under the hands of the officers aforeſaid, together with Archdale Palmer, eſq. then high-ſheriff of the ſaid county of Leiceſter, and divers other perſons in their aid and aſſiſtance, repaired to the ſaid place, to execute the ſaid warrants from both houſes of parliament; and the ſaid Henry Haſtings, well knowing thereof, did then tell the ſaid Chambers, That he knew he had warrants from the Parliament as well for others as for himſelf; whereupon the ſaid Chambers produced the ſaid warrants, and read the ſame openly, in the hearing of the ſaid Henry Haſtings, ſir Richard Halford, ſir John Bale, and John Pate, to yield obedience to the ſaid warrants; which they refuſed to do; but, inſtead thereof, they and other their ſaid adherents did violently aſſault the ſaid high-ſheriff, Chambers, and Stanforth, and rode upon them with their horſes; and one of the ſaid confederates, named Mr. Walter Haſtings, with his piſtol charged, gave fire upon the ſaid Chambers; and ſome others of them drew out their piſtols, and preſented their muſkets, upon the ſaid high-ſheriff and Chambers, uſing other force and violence upon them, to the great danger of their lives; and ſo the ſaid Henry Haſtings, ſir Richard Halford, ſir John Bale, and John Pate, by force and arms, and in a warlike manner, at the time and place aforeſaid, reſcued themſelves from the ſaid officers and high-ſheriff, in contempt of juſtice, and to the high affront and ſcorn of the Parliament, and afterwards marched back again in warlike manner into the ſaid town of Leiceſter. All which doings of the ſaid Henry Haſtings, ſir Richard Halford, ſir John Bale, and John Pate, were and are contrary to the laws of this realm, the rights and privileges of Parliament, tending to ſedition, and to the danger of effuſion of much blood. Wherefore the ſaid Commons do, in the name of themſelves and of all the Commons of England, impeach the ſaid Henry Haſtings, ſir Richard Halford, ſir John Bale, and John Pate, of the ſaid ſeveral high crimes and miſdemeanors. And the ſaid Commons, by proteſtation, ſaving to themſelves now, and at all times hereafter, the liberty of exhibiting of any other accuſation or impeachment againſt the ſaid Henry Haſtings, ſir Richard Halford, ſir John Bale, and John Pate, or any of them, and of replying to the anſwers which they, or any of them, ſhall make, or of offering any proofs of the premiſſes, or any of them, or of any other accuſation or impeachment againſt them, or any of them, as the caſe, according to the courſe of juſtice, ſhall require; do pray, that he the ſaid Henry Haſtings, ſir Richard Halford, ſir John Bale, and John Pate, and every of them, may be forthwith put to anſwer the premiſſes, in preſence of the Commons; and that ſuch proceedings, examinations, trials, and judgements, may be upon them, and every of them, had and uſed, as ſhall be agreeable to law and juſtice [1]."

---

[1] Journals of the Commons, vol. II. p. 641.

[2] Ibid. p. 645.

[3] Thomas Rudiard, the then mayor, was kept in confinement ſome months.

[4] Journals of the Commons, vol. II. p. 649.

[5] Ibid. pp. 655, 656.

On the ſame day, "The earl of Stamford acquainted the Houſe with a letter, and ſome informations, from Leiceſter, complaining of the averſeneſs of the mayor of Leiceſter, and his negligence in preſerving the peace there; and of the proclaiming the earl of Stamford and others traitors [2]."

It was alſo reſolved by both Houſes, "That officers be ſent down into the county of Leiceſter, to aſſiſt the lieutenant and the deputy-lieutenants in putting the Ordinance of the Militia in execution, for preſerving the peace of the county, for ſuppreſſing inſurrections, and ſafe-keeping the magazine thereof; and that thoſe officers ſhall be paid at the public charge [3]."

July 9, It was ordered by both Houſes, that £500. ſhould be impreſſed, on account, to the lord Ruthin and ſir Arthur Heſilrige, out of the ſubſcription-monies, to be employed for the pay of the officers to be ſent down into Leiceſterſhire by order of both Houſes [4]."

July 11, "Inſtructions for the lord Ruthin and ſir Arthur Heſilrige, Committees of the Houſe of Commons aſſembled in Parliament, appointed to go into Leiceſterſhire.

"Firſt, you ſhall, in the name of us the Lords and Commons, declare and publiſh to the high-ſheriff of Leiceſter, the knights, gentlemen, and other his Majeſty's ſubjects in that county, that Henry earl of Stamford was by us commanded to take care of and ſecure the magazine of that county; and what hath been therein done, by him and his adherents, hath been neceſſary, in purſuance of our order, as is by us avowed and approved of, as warranted by the authority of both Houſes of Parliament. 2. You ſhall aſſiſt the lord-lieutenant, Henry earl of Stamford, with your beſt counſel and advice, and by all other means, ſafely to diſpoſe or keep the magazine, for the peace and ſecurity of the county, in ſuch manner as to you ſhall ſeem moſt requiſite. 3. You ſhall take care that no forces be raiſed, to diſturb the peace of the ſaid county; and in caſe any be raiſed, you ſhall, in the name of both Houſes of Parliament, command them to diſperſe themſelves; and if they refuſe ſo to do, you are hereby authorized to draw together the trained bands, and others, for to defend and preſerve the peace of the county; and, if neceſſity require it, you may repel force with force, for the preſervation of the peace of the kingdom. 4. If you ſhall find any diſaffected perſons raiſing any parties or factions againſt the Parliament, or ſpreading any ſcandals or aſperſions upon their proceedings, like to diſturb the peace of the county; you ſhall cauſe all ſuch perſons, upon good proof of their miſdemeanors, to be arreſted, and ſent up to anſwer ſuch their offences, as to law and juſtice ſhall require. 5. You ſhall take care that ſuch reſolutions and orders of both Houſes as have been, or ſhall be, ſent down, be put in execution; and ſhall require the ſheriff, deputy-lieutenants, and juſtices of peace, and all other his Majeſty's ſubjects, to be aiding and aſſiſting unto you for that purpoſe. 6. You ſhall endeavour to clear the proceedings of Parliament from all imputations and aſperſions; and you ſhall give all due and fit encouragement to ſuch as you find ready and ſerviceable to the King and Parliament; letting them underſtand, that, wherein they are obedient to the command of Parliament, both Houſes will protect them. 7. You ſhall inform his Majeſty's ſubjects, that they are neither to follow the high-ſheriff, nor to obſerve his commands, concerning the extent of the commiſſion of array, nor other caſe but where the law gives him his power. 8. You are likewiſe to put in execution the Ordinance concerning the Militia. 9. You ſhall obſerve and execute all ſuch further directions and inſtructions as you ſhall from time to time receive from both Houſes of Parliament [5]."

July 15, A committee of eight peers was appointed, "to conſider what commiſſioners were fit to overſee the taking down the glaſs windows in every pariſh [6].

July 18, The following affidavit appears on the Journals: "I Richard Capman left the orders of impeachment, bearing date the 9th of July, 1642; one for ſir John Bale, which I left with one of his ſervants on Tueſday the 12th of July; and the order for ſir Richard Halford, on the ſame day, with two of his ſervants, being informed neither of theſe knights were at home. Upon Wedneſday I left the order of impeachment at Mr. Pate's houſe for him, being likewiſe informed that he was not at home; but I was informed that he was by others of his ſervants; and, after my departing the houſe, the order was by one of his ſervants thrown after me in the yard. I left the order to Mr. Haſtings with himſelf; who did receive it, and told me the King his Maſter had commanded him to yield no obedience to it, or words to that effect, but to wait upon his place; giving threatening ſpeeches to the meſſenger who did formerly attach him, that it ſhould be the worſt ſervice that ever he was upon, or words to that effect. I left the order with him on Thurſday the 14th of July. By me, RICHARD CAPMAN [7]."

July 19, the following circular warrant was iſſued, to prevent the embodying the militia:

"To Mr. Thomas Boyer, one of the head-conſtables of Sparkenhoe Hundred.

"Leiceſter, ſſ. Whereas his Majeſty's pleaſure hath been lately declared, by books and proclamations publiſhed by his command, that it was his will, that none of his loyal and good ſubjects, of the trained, private, or freehold bands, or ſuch who are provided of arms either for horſe or foot, ſhould appear or aſſemble together, upon any warrant or command from ſuch who take upon them to exerciſe the power of the militia, without his Majeſty's conſent, and contrary to his declarations; Now, foraſmuch as I am credibly informed, that there either are, or will be, warrants iſſued, to require the aſſembling and gathering together of the aforeſaid trained and private bands within your hundred, and ſuch who will voluntarily come in with their arms, which can be to no other end than to diſturb the peace and quiet of this county, and in oppoſition to his Majeſty's gracious intention of preſerving his people in peace and ſecurity: Now, for the preventing of any combuſtion, by the aſſiſting of ſuch who are diſaffected to his Majeſty, and endeavour the diſturbance of the preſent peace, theſe are to will and require you, and in his Majeſty's name to charge and command you, that you uſe your beſt endeavours and utmoſt power, within your diviſion, that no perſons whatſoever appear in arms, or otherwiſe, in obedience to any pretended power, entreaty, or requeſt, not allowed of by his moſt excellent Majeſty; and that you give the like command to all and every the petty conſtables within your diviſion, that they uſe their beſt endeavours, within their ſeveral conſtabularies, by giving notice to the ſeveral inhabitants, that they obſerve this his Majeſty's will and pleaſure, as they tender the good and peace of this kingdom and county, and his Majeſty's diſpleaſure and juſt puniſhment for a contempt of ſo high a nature; and hereof fail you not, as you will anſwer the contrary at your peril. Given under my hand and ſeal of office, at Aſhby de la Zouch, this 19th day of July, 1642. H. HASTINGS, Vicecomes [1]."

---

[1] Journals of the Lords, vol. V. p. 191.
[2] Ibid. p. 192.
[3] Ibid. p. 193.
[4] Ibid. pp. 195. 208.
[5] Ibid. p. 202.
[6] Ibid. p. 212.
[7] Ibid. p. 218.

July 20, "Whereas ſeveral commiſſions of array have lately iſſued out, under the great ſeal of England, into the ſeveral counties of Leiceſter, Worceſter, and other counties of this realm, tending to the great danger of his Majeſty, and the diſturbance of the peace of this kingdom: For the preventing thereof, and of the execution and iſſuing out of any ſuch commiſſions for the time to come; it is ordered, by the Lords and Commons aſſembled in Parliament, that the judges and juſtices of aſſize of the ſeveral counties of England and Wales be required, in their ſeveral circuits, at the aſſizes and great ſeſſions to be next held for each county within this realm and the dominion of Wales reſpectively, in open court, and in their ſeveral charges to be delivered to the grand juries at the ſaid aſſizes and great ſeſſions, openly to declare and publiſh, that the ſaid Lords and Commons aſſembled in Parliament have, upon mature deliberation, reſolved, upon the queſtion, that the ſaid commiſſions of array are againſt law, and againſt the liberty and property of the ſubject; and that all thoſe that are actors in putting the ſame in execution ſhall be eſteemed diſturbers of the peace of the kingdom, and betrayers of the liberty of the ſubject [2]."—On the ſame day, "The Lords and Commons in Parliament, taking notice of the great worth and quality of dame Elizabeth Grey, mother to the right honourable the earl of Stamford, and of the great extremity the cruelty of the barbarous rebels in Ireland hath brought a perſon of her condition unto, having deſpoiled her of a fair and large eſtate in that kingdom; in conſideration of her ſufferings, do order, that the treaſurers at London, appointed to receive the monies that come in upon the act of loan and contribution for Ireland, do forthwith pay unto the ſaid lady Grey, or her aſſigns, the ſum of £200. out of the monies that are or ſhall come in upon the ſaid act of loan and contribution; and this order, together with an acquittance under the hand of the lady Grey, or her aſſignees, ſhall be a ſufficient diſcharge to the ſaid treaſurers for ſo much money as they ſhall hereupon pay in manner as aforeſaid [3]."

The King, having haſtened from Beverley to Nottingham on the 21ſt of July, came next day to Leiceſter; where he addreſſed the following ſpeech to the gentlemen, freeholders, and inhabitants of that county:

"Gentlemen; Since I have found my preſence ſo very acceptable amongſt my good ſubjects in theſe Northern parts, and that the errors and miſtakes amongſt them have wholly proceeded from miſinformation, and are removed with more ſatisfaction and eaſe to them than they were received; I hold it a piece of my duty to take the utmoſt pains I can, fully to inform and undeceive my people; and rather to prevent crimes than to puniſh them. In this errand I am come to you, amongſt whom there hath not been the leaſt miſunderſtanding, to ſhew you, that I do not ſuſpect any malice in the place or in the people, though perſons of as ill diſpoſitions have been buſy in it, and amongſt you, as in any county in England, and ſuch who have taken as great pains to do miſchief, and to bring confuſion, as good men ſhould for peace and happineſs: though 'tis as true, that very many worthier perſons amongſt you have appeared of contrary affections, which I ſhall always acknowledge. I am come to you in a time too when nothing could invite me to ſuch a journey, but my affection to and good eſteem of you; having ſent ſuch propoſitions for peace and accommodation to my two Houſes of Parliament, that I hope to have no other uſe of your affections but in your prayers; being ſure they will ſubmit to them with alacrity, if the unexcuſeable enemies to the peace of the Kingdom be not ſtrong enough to prevail: and then you will find yourſelves ſo much concerned (for I have required nothing that with more juſtice can be denied me, if it be duly weighed, than my crown or my life may be taken from me) that I ſhall not need to aſk your aſſiſtance. I know you will bring horſe, men, money, and hearts worthy ſuch a cauſe. Your Religion, your Liberties, your Laws (which I will defend with my life, I mean the good known laws of the land, not ordinances without my conſent, which, till within theſe twelve months, was never heard of from the foundation of this kingdom) will be the quarrel: And in ſuch a cauſe, the taking away my towns, ſhips, arms, and money from me, ſhall not diſhearten me: The concurrence and affection of my people, with God's bleſſing, will ſupply and recover all [4]."

The "Iter Carolinum [5]" ſtates, that the King was at Leiceſter from July 22, to the 25th [6].

It appears alſo, by the accompts of Mr. Robert Heyrick, churchwarden of St. Martin's in Leiceſter, that his Majeſty attended divine ſervice there on Sunday the 24th: "Item, given to Mr. White, the counteſs [7] of Devon's gent. for ſetting up the King's throne in our church, 5*s.*—Item, paid to Norman, for flowers and herbs to ſtrew the church at the King's coming, 1*s.* 8*d.*—Item, paid to Knowles, for ſix burdens of ruſhes for the church at the King's coming, 2*s.*"

In this year there is alſo a charge of 29*l.* 15*s.* paid to his Majeſty's officers, at his firſt coming to town, as fees; and a purſe of £50. was preſented by the Corporation to Prince Charles [8]; but it does not appear on what occaſion.

Whilſt the King was at Leiceſter, he ſent for the mayor and ſheriffs of Coventry to attend him there; who were taking horſe on the Sunday morning; but, being diſcovered by ſome that favoured the Parliament, were compelled to ſtay at home [9].

The Declaration and Reſolution of the County of Leiceſter, delivered in Anſwer to his Majeſty's Speech made to the whole County, &c. 1642.

When his Majeſty came into Leiceſterſhire, he was pleaſed to deliver himſelf, his intentions, and deſires, to the underſtanding of that county; the particular grounds of whoſe ſpeech was, "that as he was their lawful Sovereign, ſo he might find them loyal and faithful acknowledgements of that royalty, which he made no queſtion they were fully reſolved was due to him; and that they would deliver up to him the town of Leiceſter, and the arms, which he did conceive did belong to him, and which was for a long while againſt their loyalty detained from him, and was diſpoſed of contrary to his intentions and their obedience; and alſo that, for the ſafeguard of his perſon, the trained bands might attend him, while he ſhould remain in thoſe parts." His Majeſty having then delivered himſelf, after ſome deliberation, anſwer was returned to his Majeſty in the name of the whole County; "That they hoped his Majeſty did not ſo miſconſtrue their true and loyal hearts, as that they ſhould make any queſtion of his undoubted ſupremacy, whom they always held, and will for ever maintain, to be their lawful Sovereign; and that they would, againſt all oppoſers whatſoever, maintain his honours and dignities, ſo far forth as his Majeſty ſhall love the honour of God, and the liberty of the ſubject. And yet, whereas now, according to the antient cuſtom of Parliaments, they and the reſt of the counties within his Majeſty's dominions had entruſted ſome ſelect members with their eſtates and liberties, to be directed and certified according to their judgement, and according to law and equity; and whereas there hath been bred ſome unhappy differences betwixt his Majeſty and his Parliament, occaſioned by the malignants threatening to bring this kingdom into deſtruction: We are very confident, that well-affected people will not proſecute any thing, but what ſhall be for the glory of God, the advancement of the true Proteſtant Religion, the honour of his Majeſty, the enlargement and advancement of his crown and dignities, and the liberty of the ſubject."

---

[1] Journals of the Lords, vol. V. p. 232.

[2] Ibid. p. 224.

[3] Ibid. p. 225.

[4] Huſbands's Remonſtrances, p. 477; where this ſpeech is ſtated to have been made on the 20th of July.

[5] Gutch's Collectanea, vol. II. p. 428.

[6] His Majeſty was again at Leiceſter Town in the month of Auguſt; ſee p. 31.

[7] The Counteſs lived at Leiceſter Abbey, which had been in a great meaſure re-built; and probably there was no perſon in or about Leiceſter, at that time, ſo proper to fix the throne for the reception of the Royal Gueſt in the church as the Counteſs's Gentleman. Againſt theſe articles there is no month or day of the month entered in the pariſh-book.

[8] Corporation Records.

[9] Harl. MSS. 6386.

His Majeſty, having received this meſſage, ſeemed, and was, very much diſcontented and moved, and, as it is reported, hath raiſed ſome forces againſt Leiceſter Town; and is reſolved to obtain that by force of arms, which he could not perſuade nor contrive from them[1].

A Petition from the Town and County of Leiceſter unto the King's moſt excellent Majeſty. Alſo another Petition from the Grand Inqueſt of the ſame County unto his Majeſty, for the removing of the Magazine; with his Majeſty's Anſwer thereunto. Likewiſe certain Propoſitions to his Majeſty by Captain Grey and the Earl of Stamford's Soldiers, touching the Magazine. Alſo a Declaration from the Knights, Eſquires, Gentlemen, Grand Jurymen, and Freeholders, in the county of Leiceſter. Ordered to be printed, by ſpecial command.

"To the King's moſt excellent Majeſty.

The humble petition of the inhabitants of the town and county of Leiceſter; July 22.

"Acknowledging your Majeſty's princely proteſtations for defence of the Proteſtant Religion, the laws of the land (which your Highneſs makes the juſteſt meaſure and rule of your royal prerogative), the liberty and obedience of your ſubjects, as alſo for the peace of the Kingdom; diſavowing not only intentions of war, as opening an iſſue to drown your Majeſty and poſterity; but alſo taking care that no poſture ſhould affright the ſubjects: Yet we cannot but in all humility expreſs our deep ſorrows for your Majeſty's long eſtrangement from, and oppoſition to, your higheſt and ſafeſt Council of Parliament; on the ſucceſs whereof the ſafety, honour, and glory, of your Majeſty, and happineſs of your ſubjects, do depend. Well we can never expect, while we ſee delinquents protected againſt the juſtice of Parliament, promoted to honour and offices of high truſt and power, ſuch as Mr. Henry Haſtings, who, after he had appeared in a hoſtile manner, to the great terror of your Majeſty's peaceable ſubjects, and was reſcued from the miniſter of Parliament, did notwithſtanding (to the great affrightment of all, and miſcarrying of divers women) come with a troop of horſe and foot at midnight to Leiceſter, demanding the magazine, and proclaiming the earl of Stamford and divers others by name, with all their adherents, traitors; and, after all this, is protected (as we conceive), and made high-ſheriff, and an approved gentleman caſt out, for no other cauſe, appearing to us, than the diſcharging of his duty to your Majeſty and the Parliament. We are deeply affected with theſe proceedings, as preſaging the ruin of all at once. Therefore we humbly pray, that your Majeſty's commiſſion of array, declared to be ſo exactly againſt law (which your Majeſty makes the rule of our allegiance and obedience), may be recalled; that juſtice may impartially proceed againſt all delinquents, without which a Parliament cannot ſubſiſt; that you would caſhier all ſuch deſperate perſons as would engage the kingdom in a bloody civil war, and abandon all the counſellors of diviſion; that the honour and innocence of our worthy Knight[2] and the other five Members[3] impeached may be vindicated; that you would join yourſelf to your Parliament, as the only way to ſave ourſelves and bleeding Ireland; and that our Magazine and Militia may remain in the hands of the honourable Earl of Stamford, who is entruſted by the Parliament. We ſtand reſolved ever to maintain the true Reformed Proteſtant Religion, your Majeſty's perſon and authority, the laws, and free courſe of juſtice, together with the high and honourable Court of Parliament, as the bottom wherein all is embarked. We are enemies to all that divide betwixt your Majeſty and your Parliament, or that have or ſhall affront, or caſt baſe aſperſions on, that faithful Aſſembly; and, according to our juſt and free proteſtation, we will venture our eſtates and lives therein. And ſhall ever pray, &c."

"To the King's moſt excellent Majeſty.

The humble petition of the Great Inqueſt for the County of Leiceſter; July 23.

"We do in all humbleneſs acknowledge, that, during your Majeſty's reign hitherto, we have enjoyed that which is the greateſt bleſſing that can befal a nation, a ſtable and uninterrupted peace: your declaration expreſſes your princely deſires of your ſubjects' peace and welfare. Seeing therefore the preſages of blood and ruin do impend and hang over our heads; we are forced to ſeek a preſervative by our addreſſes unto your Highneſs. If it may ſtand therefore with your princely wiſdom, as we judge it ſtands with the peace and ſafety of this County; our humble deſire is, that there may be a ſafe diſtribution of this magazine to the ſeveral Hundreds in this county, to be diſperſed therein according to due proportions; that, ſince it ſtands with the peace and ſafety of this County, it may never be re-aſſumed but by a legal power, that the keepers thereof may have their liberty and protection from dangers, for diſcharging their truſt. Thus ſhall you diſſolve theſe clouds of calamities that threaten us, and elevate us to higher hopes of peace. And we ſhall ever pray, &c."

"Propoſitions to his Majeſty, from captain Grey and the reſt of the ſoldiers entruſted from the earl of Stamford, touching the Magazine.

"I. That there may be a ſafe diſtribution of this Magazine to the ſeveral Hundreds in the county, to be diſperſed therein according to due proportion; and this to be done immediately from the Magazine.

"II. That it may never be re-aſſumed again but by a legal power.

"III. That the keepers of it may have their liberty and protection from dangers for diſcharging their truſt."

"Given at the Court at Leiceſter, July 24.

"His Majeſty hath graciouſly conſidered this petition, and commanded me to return this anſwer: 'That, as the petitioners have enjoyed hitherto the bleſſing of peace under his Majeſty's government; ſo he hath never expreſſed a greater love of it, and a care to preſerve it, than by his late bearing ſo many indignities to avoid all diſturbance of it; the which he hopes will have that effect with his good ſubjects, that they will henceforward have as great a regard to his honour, as he hath to their peace; of which if all others were equally tender, no preſage of blood and ruin would hang over their heads. For your magazine, his Majeſty hath never looked upon this under any other conſideration, than to preſerve it for the county whoſe it is. And therefore, upon complaint heretofore made to him, that ſome perſons had preſumed in warlike manner to levy it without any lawful authority, his Majeſty, out of his good affection to this county, gave direction, to prevent future miſchief, that the ſame ſhould be reſtored to the diſpoſition of thoſe to whom it belongs; and therefore well approves, that it be diſpoſed in ſuch manner and ſuch place as ſhall ſeem beſt and fitteſt to the County; in which his Majeſty will not intermeddle. For the freeing and protecting the keepers of the Magazine, or their ſeconds, his Majeſty knows not the meaning of the petitioners. If they have had a lawful truſt committed, and done nothing in diſcharge and execution thereof but what is warrantable, they need no other protection but that of the law; but if, in the violent and forcible removing the Magazine, and in the circumſtances of keeping, they have done any thing unjuſtifiable, his Majeſty believes no truſt boldly undertaken can excuſe them; and therefore expects that this be immediately delivered by the keepers to the diſpoſal of the County, without condition. FALKLAND.

---

[1] Pamphlets in the Britiſh Muſeum, 4to, 64. 19.

[2] Sir Arthur Heſilrige.

[3] Lord Kimbolton, Mr. Hollis, Mr. Pym, Mr. Hampden, and Mr. Strode.

“ CHARLES Rex. Our will and pleaſure is, that all our officers and loving ſubjects do ſuffer the bearers hereof to paſs quietly to their own houſes. Given at our court at Leiceſter, the 24th of July, 1642.

“ Whereas the Grand Jury, at the General Aſſizes held in the county of Leiceſter, did prefer a petition unto his Majeſty, for the diſtribution of the County's Magazine to be divided into every hundred, and therein diſperſed into every town, according to the charge levied upon them for the providing thereof: And whereas it was alſo farther in the ſaid petition deſired, that the ſaid Magazine might not be reaſſumed: Therefore the Baronets, Knights, Eſquires, Gentlemen, Grand Jury-men, and Freeholders, &c. do hereby declare, that whoſoever ſhall go about to re-aſſume, or gather into one body again, the ſaid Magazine, or any part thereof, by any authority whatſoever, ſhall be adjudged, eſteemed, reputed, and taken to be an enemy to, and diſturber of, the public peace of this county. And, becauſe no man may plead ignorance in this behalf, it is agreed, by all ſorts, ranks, and degrees, of perſons above-named, that this declaration be now openly read and publiſhed, with an audible voice, in the face of the county, at the general aſſizes held for the county aforeſaid. Dated the 25th of July, 1642.

“ The copy of that the Grand Jury gave the Commanders of the Magazine.

“ We, the Gentlemen of the Grand Jury for the county of Leiceſter, have received the Magazine thereof from the Eaſt-gate in the Newark; and do undertake, ſo near as we may, that it ſhall be diſtributed to the ſeveral Hundreds, and therein diſperſed to every town ſo near as we can equally; and that it ſhall never be re-aſſumed to our powers. In witneſs whereof, we have ſubſcribed our names the 25th day of July, anno Domini 1642. Atteſted by the Grand Jury[1].”

“ Information came out of Leiceſterſhire to the Parliament, that many of the well-affected in that county, having vigilantly taken care to make the lord of Stamford's houſe their magazine, and had conveyed their arms, powder, and ammunition thither, did moſt valiantly and courageouſly oppoſe and withſtand Mr. Haſtings, the new-made high-ſheriff, and a moſt notorious malignant; and how he was glad to retreat from thence, and fly to York for more aid, which afterward occaſioned much miſchief and moleſtation among them in that county of Leiceſter, he being a moſt deſperate malignant[2].”

The earl of Stamford was proclaimed a traitor, for having removed the county magazine to his houſe, and ſet guards about it; but the Parliament vindicated him, July 22, by the following Declaration:

“ Whereas Henry earl of Stamford was, by ordinance of both Houſes of Parliament, appointed lord lieutenant of the county of Leiceſter, and, by the order of both the ſaid Houſes, the magazine of the ſaid county was delivered into his hands, to be removed or diſpoſed of as he ſhould think fit, for the ſafety and defence of his Majeſty and the Country; in obedience whereunto, the ſaid earl did take the ſaid magazine, and did place a great part thereof at his houſe at Bradgate, under ſafeguard, and the reſidue thereof at a place in the Newark, near the town of Leiceſter; for the doing whereof the ſaid earl, and alſo William Sherman, William Stanley, John Norris, and William Rayner, upon pretence of being aſſiſtants to the ſaid earl, and all other his adherents, were, without all colour of law, and againſt the rights and liberties of the ſubject, proclaimed traitors; which, as concerning the ſaid earl being a member of the Houſe of Peers, is a high breach of privilege of Parliament: Be it therefore declared, by the ſaid Lords and Commons, that the ſaid earl, William Sherman, William Stanley, John Norris, William Rayner, nor any other of the parties which were aſſiſting to the ſaid earl in the premiſſes, have done any therein but according to their duties, and in obedience to the commands of both Houſes of Parliament; and that therefore the ſaid earl, and every of them, ſhall and ought to be protected by the power and authority of both Houſes of Parliament. And the ſaid Lords and Commons do hereby forbid all ſheriffs, mayors, bailiffs, conſtables, and other his Majeſty's officers and ſubjects whatſoever, any way to arreſt, impeach, moleſt, or trouble, the ſaid earl, William Sherman, William Stanley, John Norris, William Rayner, or any of them, or any other of the ſaid perſons ſo aſſiſting to the ſaid earl, either in their perſons, goods, or eſtates, for or by reaſon of the premiſſes, without the authority and conſent of both Houſes of Parliament[3].”

Aug. 13. The Commons reſolved, “ That Henry Haſtings, eſq. ſhall be accuſed of high treaſon, for actual levying of war againſt the King and kingdom[4].”

On Friday the 18th of Auguſt the King was again at Leiceſter, in his road from Nottingham to Stonely Abbey[5]; and again on Monday the 22d, on his return to Nottingham; when, having left his forces before Coventry, he rode, with ſome lords and others in camp, to Leiceſter; where he dined that day at the Abbey-houſe, the Counteſs of Devonſhire's; and, after dinner, rode to Nottingham, and ſet up his ſtandard that afternoon[6].

“ Upon Friday the 26th day of Auguſt, the ſame morning that the earls of Dorſet, Southampton, ſir John Colepeper, and ſir John Uvedall, ſet out from the King with a meſſage to the high Court of Parliament, preluding ſome willingneſs in his Majeſty to have perſons choſen of both ſides to treat about a peace between his Majeſty and the Parliament; Prince Rupert (who hath made enough of the Parliament's help to re-poſſeſs him in his kingdom and eſtates in the Palatinate), together with Maſter Haſtings and many Cavaliers, went to my Lord Grey the Earl of Stamford's houſe, from whence they took all his arms, and took away and ſpoiled all his goods, and alſo the cloaths of his chaplain, who was fain to fly for his life: And ſome chief ones aſked, ‘ Where are the brats, the young children?’ ſwearing, ‘ God damn them! they would kill them, that there might be no more of the breed of them.’ But God ſtirred up ſome friends to ſuccour them. They have alſo diſarmed many of the inhabitants thereabouts, and taken away many of their goods; but no doubt their account is at hand. Amen, Lord! [7]”

Auguſt 30, an order was made for the appearance of Henry Haſtings, eſq. at a day certain, or to ſtand attainted; and that the ſheriff[8] of the preceding year ſhould continue in office for the then preſent year[9].

The two following letters were copied by Mr. Throſby from the originals:

“ To his freind the Maior of Leiceſter this delivery at Leiceſter.

“ Mr. Maior; His Ma'tie, being confident of your fidelitie to doe him all poſible ſervice, willed mee this day to ſend for you to my quarters, and there to deliver to you his pleaſure: but I, perſeaving you are diſſuaded from coming (by whom or what pretenſes I know not) have heer ſent you his Ma'ties demand. His Ma'tie, being now ſomewhat neceſſirated by the vaſt expence he hath beene this long time inforced to, for the ſafeguard of his Royall perſon, againſt the rebellious inſurrection of the true Mallignant Party, (whoe are now too well known, and their irreligious intentions too plainly diſcovered by all his loving and obedient ſubjects), doth erneſtly deſire and require you and his good ſubjects of the citty of Leiceſter forthwith to furniſh him with two thouſand pounds ſterling, which hee with much care will take order to ſee repaied in convenient time; and that his Ma'ties gratious promiſe I hope will ſeeme much better ſecurity than the public faith: which is the uſuall aſſurance that the party which call themſelves the Parliament doe give: And you muſt truſt them on it, if you aſſiſt not his Ma'tie hereby to defend you againſt them. You muſt not goe leſſe than your former expreſſions have ſpoken you; which induced mee not to doubt of receiving the demanded ſume to-morrow by ten of the clocke in the forenoon, that I may be

---

[1] Pamphlets in the Britiſh Muſeum, 4to, 64. 20.

[2] Vicars, p. 104.

[3] Journals of the Lords, vol. V. p. 232.

[4] Journals of the Commons, vol. II. p. 718.

[5] Iter Carolinum.

[6] “ A true Relation of his Majeſty's ſetting up his Standard, 1642.” 4to.

[7] Remarkable Paſſages, &c. a folio half-ſheet, 1642, in the Britiſh Muſeum.

[8] Archdale Palmer, eſq. was ſheriff in 1641 and 1642.

[9] Journals of the Commons, vol. II. p. 745.

Your freind, Rupert.

Quineboro, this 6th day of Sep. 1642.

"Poſtſcript. If any diſaffected perſous with you ſhall refuſe themſelves, or perſuade you to neglect the comand, I ſhall to-morrow appeare before your town in ſuch a poſture, with horſe, foote, and cannon, as ſhall make you knowe 'tis more ſafe to obey than reſiſt his Ma'ties demand."

This letter frightned the mayor and burgeſſes of Leiceſter into a compliance with a portion of the Prince's requeſt, as appears by the following receipts:

"Septem er 7, 1642. Receyved by me Prince Rupert, Prince Palatine of the Rhine, & Generall of all his Majeſtye's Cavallerye in this preſent expedition, the full ſume of ffive hundred pounds, for his Ma'ties uſe, of the Mayor, Bayliffes, & Burgeſſes of the Borough of Leiceſter; to be repayed againe by his Majeſtye. I ſay receyved ffive hundred pounds. Rupert."

The next day came the following from the King:

"To our truſty and welbeloved ye Mayor and Aldermen of our Town of Leiceſter.

"Charles R. Truſty & welbeloved, wee greete you well. Wee have ſeene a warrant under o'r nephew Rupert's hand, dated ye 6th of this month, requiring from you and other ye inhabitants of our Towne of Leiceſter ye loane of £2000; which as we do utterly diſavow & diſlike, as being written w'out our privity or conſent: ſo we doe hereby abſolutely free & diſcharge you & that our Towne from yelding any obedience to the ſame; and by our owne letters to our ſaid Nephew wee have written to him to revoke y^e ſame, as being an act very diſpleaſing to us. Wee indeede gave him directions to diſarm ſuch perſons there as appeared to be diſaffected to our perſon & government, or ye peace of this our kingdome; & ſhould have taken it well from any of our ſub'ts that would voluntarily aſſiſt us wth ye loane of armes or money; but it is ſoe farr from our hart or intentions by menaces to compel any to it, as wee abhor ye thought of it; & of this truth our accions ſhall bear us teſtimony. Given att our court att Nottingham, 8 Sep'bris, 1642."

Indorſed, "Mayor and Aldermen of Leiceſter."

Nov. 17, a letter having been read in the Houſe, from the mayor of Leiceſter, wherein his Majeſty hath commanded him to pay the moneys that have been raiſed in that town upon the Roll of Subſidies to Mr. Haſtings; and, if he ſhall refuſe the payment thereof, that then to be apprehended, and brought to his Majeſty, and be puniſhed for his contempt; Mr. Armſton of Burbach, one of the high collectors of the moneys upon the bill of £400,000. in the county of Leiceſter, was ordered to pay the ſaid moneys, according to the act, at Yieldhall, London: And that he do not pay it over to Mr. Haſtings, notwithſtanding any warrant or directions requiring him thereunto: And he ſhall be protected herein by the authority of Parliament [1].

Dec. 13, the two Houſes of Parliament appointed the noble and pious earl of Stamford [2] to be lord general of all South Wales, and the four next adjacent counties, viz. Glouceſter, Worceſter, Hereford, and Cheſhire; and gave him power to raiſe forces in all the ſaid counties, and to appoint officers and commanders over them, to train and exerciſe them, and to fight with, kill, and ſlay, all that come againſt them. And upon the confidence and truſt which the Parliament had in the fidelity of the noble lord Grey, ſon and heir of the ſaid earl of Stamford, they appointed him alſo lord general of the five Northern counties, Leiceſter, Nottingham, Derby, Rutland, and Lincoln; giving him the like power as his father, to raiſe the forces of the ſaid counties, and to preſerve their peace againſt any force coming againſt them, and eſpecially to ſuppreſs the lord Stanhope, who was then ſaid to be very buſy in thoſe counties in raiſing forces for the king and diſturbing the peace of thoſe parts with the commiſſion of array [3].

Dec 15. The following declaration was iſſued:

"Whereas his Majeſty, by the inſtigation and advice of divers about his royal perſon, hath raiſed forces againſt the Parliament, for the moſt part conſiſting of Papiſts, notorious delinquents, and other malignant perſons, and that hereby the well-affected of the kingdom are ruinated in their eſtates, and divers outrages committed upon their perſons: The Lords and Commons in Parliament do therefore declare, That it is very requiſite that the counties of Leiceſter, Derby, Notts, Rutland, Northampton, Buckingham, Bedford, and Huntingdon, ſhould enter into an aſſociation, for the mutual defence and ſafety of each other; and that Thomas lord Grey, ſir Edward Hartopp, knt. John St. John, William Roberts, Peter Temple, William Jervaſe, Richard Brent, Thomas Heſilrige, William Danvers, John Goodman, Simon Ridley, William Bainbridge, Thomas Brudenell, Thomas Babington, Thomas Merry, Thomas Beaumont, Arthur Stanley, Thomas Cotton, William Hewett, eſqrs. Richard Ludlam, mayor of the town of Leiceſter, and William Stanley, alderman of the ſaid town [with a proportionable number of the other counties], ſhall be a Committee, to meet at ſuch times and places as they ſhall think fit, for raiſing men, horſes, arms, and ammunition, upon the propoſitions formerly agreed on by both Houſes of Parliament, or by any other way that they ſhall judge convenient, for the ſuppreſſing of the preſent rebellion, ſtirred up by malignant perſons, who deſire to ſubvert the happineſs of his kingdom; and ſhall have power to order all things neceſſary thereunto, and, upon all occaſions, to join with any other forces raiſed by the ſame authority; and that the lord Grey, ſon to the earl of Stamford, having commiſſion from the earl of Eſſex lord general, ſhall command in chief, as major-general of the forces to be raiſed, and have power to lead and carry the ſaid forces to ſuch places as he ſhall think fit, and to ſubdue, fight with, kill, ſlay, and impriſon, all ſuch perſons as ſhall levy war without the conſent of both Houſes of Parliament; and that what money, horſes, arms, or ammunition, ſhall be contributed by any perſon towards this ſervice, ſhall be ſecured to be re-paid, with intereſt after eight pounds per centum, by the public faith of both Houſes of Parliament; upon the ſhewing of an acquittance, or certificate, under the hands of any four of the ſaid committee, for the receipt of the ſaid monies, or appraiſement of the ſaid horſes, arms, or ammunition; and the ſaid monies ſo brought in ſhall be iſſued forth, in every of the ſaid counties, by the appointment of any four of the committee of the county where it ſhall be contributed [4]."

Jan. 16, 1642-3, an ordinance was paſſed, for aſſeſſing all men of ability, within the counties of Northampton, Leiceſter, Derby, Rutland, Nottingham, Huntingdon, Bedford, and Buckingham, that have not contributed upon the propoſitions of both Houſes of

---

[1] Journals of the Commons, vol. II. p 856.

[2] His appointment was by a commiſſion from the earl of Eſſex, then lord general. Journals of the Commons, vol. II. p. 886.

[3] Vicars, p. 225.

[4] Journals of the Lords, vol. V. p. 493.

Parliament; and they to be rated and aſſeſſed in like ſort as was the £400,000, by an act of the then preſent Parliament[1].

"To the Speaker of the Houſe of Peers:

"My lord; I received a letter from your lordſhip concerning my lord Campden, wherein the honourable Houſe of Peers were pleaſed to command me to forbear the aſſeſſment of my lord Campden. Therefore I do conceive it my duty to give them an account of my whole proceedings. Firſt, my lord Campden ſent a gentleman to me, who offered me fifty pounds for a protection for him and his ſons; but withal deſired that I would not eſteem it as a bribe: the which I ſo much ſcorned, that I ſent his lordſhip word back again, that it was not a bribe that I expected from his lordſhip; but that he would pleaſe to ſubſcribe a ſum anſwerable to his honour and eſtate. He returned me again fifty pounds by the ſame gentleman; and (at that time) [he and] both his ſons were preparing arms and ammunition (which I can very well prove), and have ſince found them to be uſed againſt the King and Parliament, at Mr. Henry Noel's, his ſecond ſon's, houſe, which I have lately taken, and brought the gentleman away: And I returned him again my former anſwer, with this addition, 'That, if his lordſhip would not ſubſcribe, then I muſt take ſuch courſe as the Parliament ſhould direct, by aſſeſſment, or otherwiſe.' Then his lordſhip ſent me another meſſage, to deſire me that I would forbear till he had acquainted the Parliament; but I found the coals kindle ſo faſt in that country, that, had I not ſuddenly quenched them, the whole country would have been on a flame. The malignants flocked ſo faſt, that, had I not entered Rutlandſhire at that very nick of time, I am confident, in one week the whole county would have been drawn into a body againſt the Parliament. My lord, I had almoſt forgotten to acquaint your lordſhip, that I firſt went to my lord Campden's houſe, where, as I was credibly informed, there were both arms and ammunition; but his lordſhip was fled, and all his arms conveyed away. Now, having given your lordſhip a full account concerning my lord Campden, I deſire to have directions from the honourable Houſe for my farther proceedings in this particular of my lord Campden; and there ſhall be nobody readier to ſerve your lordſhip, than your lordſhip's humble ſervant, Nothampton, 28 Feb. 1642-3. Tho. Grey[2]."

March 3, Richard Ludlam mayor of Leiceſter, William Stanley alderman, and Evers Armyn, were appointed a committee, for raiſing money within the town of Leiceſter, for the weekly maintenance of the army[3].

April 1. In an ordinance for ſequeſtering notorious delinquents' eſtates, Henry lord Grey of Ruthin, Thomas lord Grey of Groby, ſir Arthur Heſilrige, baronet, ſir Edward Hartopp, and ſir Thomas Hartopp, knights, William Hewet, John Bainbridge, Peter Temple, George Aſhby, William Roberts, Richard Bent, Arthur Staveley, William Danvers, John Goodman, eſquires, were appointed ſequeſtrators of delinquents for the county of Leiceſter; and for the town of Leiceſter, Richard Ludlam (the then mayor) and William Stanley alderman[4].

Henry lord Grey of Ruthin, Thomas lord Grey, ſir Arthur Heſilrige, baronet, ſir Wolſtan Dixie, ſir Thomas Hartopp, ſir Martin Liſter, ſir Roger Smith, knights, George Aſhby, Thomas Babington, Thomas Brudenell, Simon Rudgley, Peter Temple, John Bainbridge, and Thomas Heſilrige, eſquires, and William Sherman, gentlemen, were appointed commiſſioners for puniſhing ſcandalous miniſters.

April 15, the Committee for the Safety of the Kingdom were ordered, by the Houſe of Commons, "to furniſh my lord Grey at Leiceſter with ſix pieces of ordnance, 1000 muſkets, their equipage and furniture, and likewiſe with ammunition, and to ſend them away with all ſpeed[5]."

July 3. Alderman Robert Billers was added to the Committee of Sequeſtrators for the town and county[6].

July 20, Upon information to the Houſe of Lords, "that the Lord Grey hath given order, that the houſe of the Counteſs of Devon at Leiceſter ſhall be pulled down, if ſhe do not pay to the garriſon £150. a week, which is put into it:" The Houſe ordered, that the Committee at Leiceſter ſhall take care, that no violence or plundering ſhall be offered to the ſaid houſe of the Counteſs of Devon; but that the ſaid houſe and goods (notwithſtanding any ſuch order) be preſerved from ſpoil and ruin: And the Speaker was directed to write a letter to the Lord General, to acquaint him with their Lordſhips' order; and to ſend to the Lord Grey, to preſerve the houſe from violence or plundering[7].

July 22, Permiſſion was granted to the Counteſs Dowager of Devonſhire, to go into Kent, Surrey, and Leiceſterſhire[8].

In this month, the Royaliſts ſuſtained a ſevere loſs in an engagement near Stamford[9].

Aug. 3. In an ordinance for raiſing money for the maintenance of the army, the county of Leiceſter was rated at the weekly ſum of 147*l.* 10*s.*; and the Committee for that purpoſe conſiſted of Henry Lord Grey of Ruthin, Thomas Lord Grey of Groby; Sir Arthur Heſilrige, baronet; Sir Edward Hartopp, and Sir Thomas Hartopp, Sir Martin Liſter, knights; William Hewett, John Bainbridge, Peter Temple, George Aſhby, Richard Bent, Arthur Stanley, William Danvers, Thomas Heſilrige, John Goodwyn, Thomas Cotton, Francis Hacker, eſquires; Richard Ludlam, now mayor of Leiceſter; William Stanley and William Villers, aldermen there[10].

Sept. 9, William Bainbridge, eſq. Francis Smalley, junior, gent. and Richard Ludlam, mayor of Leiceſter, were added to the Committee of Sequeſtrators[11].

Oct. 30. The Earl of Stamford ſtated to the Houſe of Lords, that he had been employed as general of the Weſtern forces for the ſpace of 11 months, colonel of one foot-regiment, captain of one horſe-troop, and had not from that time received any moneys for the ſaid entertainments; and had from time to time recruited his regiment and troop with men, horſe, and arms, keeping both regiment and troop, ever ſince November laſt, upon his credit and charges, ſaving five weeks' pay in Devonſhire for his troop only; notwithſtanding their infinite hard duties and dangerous ſervice continually, ever ſince Auguſt laſt, being put upon all the out-ſervice: And, having had his houſe plundered, all his horſes and cattle driven away, his tenants ſo plundered that they are made incapable of paying any rents; he humbly entreated, that ſome care might be taken for the ſatisfying his arrears; and that ſome malignant's houſe that was ready furniſhed might be allotted unto him for his family[12].—His Lordſhip's caſe was recommended to the Houſe of Commons[13].

Nov. 27, another deſperate encounter was ſuſtained by the Royaliſts from Belvoir caſtle, who ſurprized and defeated a ſtrong party of the Parliamentarians at Melton Mowbray[14].

Dec. 7. Letters from the Lord Grey were read; informing the Houſe of ſome defeat given to his forces in Leiceſterſhire; and deſiring 400 arms and 500 pounds in moneys: Whereupon it was ordered, that it be eſpecially recommended to the Committee for the ſafety, to furniſh my lord Grey with the arms and moneys deſired; and to take care of the ſafety of Leiceſterſhire[15].

Dec. 16, Captain William Danvers lent the Parliament £1000. for the purchaſe of ammunition for the lord Grey, for the preſent defence of the county[16]; and at the end of the month, ſome conſiderable advantages were gained, by the Lord Grey and colonel Temple, over colonel Lucas's forces at Belvoir[17].

---

[1] Huſbands's Remonſtrances, p. 690.

[2] Journals of the Lords, vol. V. p. 631.

[3] Ibid. p. 633.

[4] Huſbands's Ordinances, &c. p. 18.

[5] Journals of the Commons, vol. III. p. 47.

[6] Journals of the Lords, vol. VI. p. 140.

[7] Ib. p. 142.

[8] Ib. p. 144.

[9] See before, under Belvoir, vol. II. p. 51.

[10] Journals of the Lords, vol. VI. p. 167.

[11] Ib. p. 203.

[12] Ib. p. 284.

[13] Ib. p. 346.

[14] See before, under Belvoir, vol. II. p. 51.

[15] Journals of the Commons, vol. III. p. 333.

[16] Journals of the Lords, vol. VI. p. 341.

[17] See vol. II. p. 52.

In December 1643, the lord Loughborough was appointed commander in chief of all the forces in Leiceſterſhire and Derbyſhire[1].

In the accompts of William Ward, as mayor of Leiceſter, in this year, an article occurs of 5s. 1*d*. paid for wine and ſugar given to the receiver of the King, Queen, and Prince's revenues[2].”

Jan. 19, 1643-4, Peter Temple[3], eſq. was appointed high ſheriff of Leiceſterſhire[4]; and on the 20th, “it was recommended to the lord general, to compoſe the differences between my lord Grey and the mayor of Leiceſter and captain Ludlam[5]; and that his Excellency be deſired ſo to compoſe thoſe differences, that, as no affront may be given to the lord Grey, ſo that the Committees of that county may not be diſcouraged[6].”

In February, ſir John Gell routed a party of the king's horſe under colonel Haſtings, took 120 horſes, many priſoners, and their arms[7].

“A part of the earl of Mancheſter's foot and horſe out of Lincolnſhire are joined with the lord Grey's at Melton Mowbray, deſigned, as ſome ſay, to beſiege Newark; but I believe rather to ſecure Nottingham, in caſe the earl of Newcaſtle ſhould remove thither, which is very probable he may attempt, if the Scot take Newcaſtle. But for the ſtorming of Newark, we may loſe a whole army, and not take it by ſtorming. Sir John Gell begins to enlarge his quarters about Derby; Haſtings is put to his trumps, and plays the after-game very ill: though he hath made the country poor by robbing and pillaging them, yet is he not one croſs the richer; he hoped to have gone away with a lump of wealth, but his greedy ſoldiers will ſhare with him, who can ſpend it as faſt as he can get it: he was in an ill caſe when he came to Aſhby only with three men, and glad he could eſcape ſo too. The enemy is removed from Wilne-ferry, ſo that there is paſſage again for the country there; and the market mends at Derby, only they fear the earl of Newcaſtle's retreat that way[8].”

“From Melton Mowbray they write, that the forces there, under the command of ſir John Gell, have joined with the earl of Mancheſter's forces, and have not only driven the cavaliers out of the parts adjacent, but intend ſuddenly to make an aſſault upon Newark upon Trent, they being in all about 5000 foot and 2000 horſe. The truth of the firſt part of this relation is the rather to be credited, for that the carriers of Melton Mowbray came the laſt week to London, which for divers months before were hindered by the cavaliers[9].”

“The lord Grey of Groby being to remove from Leiceſter to relieve Melton, and to order ſome other buſineſs there; it ſeems the enemy had notice thereof, and lay in the way with four or five troops of horſe; but the lord Grey was got to Melton before they came. The enemy being diſcovered, the lord Grey iſſued out upon them, and faced them. They, not knowing that the lord Grey was there, nor that our forces had ſo good a ſtrength, did not move firſt; till our men fired ſo faſt upon them, that the rear of them fled, and left two cornets of horſe behind, which could not eſcape; and thoſe the lord Grey took, and carried priſoners to Leiceſter. Unfortunately, we loſt a troop of horſe, which were ſurprized near Burley houſe, and carried away priſoners by the cavaliers; but our forces have taken another troop of theirs near Somerby in Lincolnſhire, which were carried priſoners to Leiceſter, and will ſerve to exchange for ours[10].”

“Our ſcribe has gotten ſome relations out of Leiceſterſhire to this effect; that captain Ludlam, an alderman of the town of Leiceſter, in returning home again from Burley houſe, whither he had been ſent priſoner for an affront done to the lord Grey; and that ſince his return he hath humbled himſelf to his lordſhip, which may prove a good example to others, to reſtrain them from the like offences, and teach them better manners. That one of their captains loſt 8 of his men, and 14 of his horſes, which were taken in their quarters by the Worton cavaliers; only their trumpeter, being a courageous, made a clear eſcape in the face of the enemy, and got ſafe home to Leiceſter, with the loſs of his trumpet. That ſome of the countrymen brought a cavalier priſoner into the town of Leiceſter, Feb. 26; who, having been there awhile, got away in his keeper's view, by ſwimming over two rivers, and ſo eſcaped to the enemy's garriſon again[11].”—Some other ſkirmiſhes about this period have been already noticed under Belvoir[12].

Leiceſter, March 7. General Haſtings hath had a great loſs of his men in Leiceſterſhire, as it appeareth by letters out of thoſe parts, dated March 5, in theſe words: “Yeſterday at night, Haſtings's men were abroad at a town in our county called Hinckley, and had brought in thither 26 honeſt countrymen, from ſeveral towns, intending to carry them to Aſhby de la Zouch; and they had taken alſo about fourſcore kine, oxen, and horſe, from the country people; they likewiſe took a miniſter named Mr. Warner, whom they much abuſed, and threatened to hang him. All their priſoners they put into Hinckley church, and, in a jeering manner, aſked them, ‘Where are the Round-heads your brethren at Leiceſter? why come they not to redeem you?’ But the intelligence of theſe things coming to our town of Leiceſter, all our horſe being gone to Newark, we were feign, every private townſman to ſpare his own horſe, and ſo ſent away 120 of our foot ſoldiers, and ſome 30 troopers that lie at Bagworth-houſe, to keep it from the enemy, under the command of colonel Grey, whom the lord Grey hath made governor of Leiceſter. Theſe our forces, being upon their march to Hinckley, took the enemies ſcouts, and, without much reſiſtance, entered the town, killed one of the enemies captains, named Mainwaring, and four or five more of their ſoldiers, and wounded nine of them very ſore; took two of their lieutenants, one quarter-maſter, one enſign, 45 priſoners, and 100 horſe; releaſed all the countrymen, reſcued the cattle, and reſtored them to the right owners; and came home with victory and booty the next day, being Shrove Tueſday. None of our men were ſlain there; only four of them were wounded, whereof one was caſually hurt by colonel Grey, becauſe he forgot our word, which was, “God proſper us!” the enemy's word being, “For the King!” Our men went on very courageouſly; and if they had not been too greedy of prey, they had near taken them all; the enemies forces were to the number of 300, and ours about 150. This morning we heard from Newark upon Trent; the beſiegers whereof ſent us word, that they had taken the out-works, and one drake. We expect every hour to hear from them[13].”

“Certain intelligence came, by letters out of Leiceſterſhire, to London, that colonel Haſtings (that noble, or rather notable, thief) having intelligence, that, according to the direction of the Parliament, the National Covenant was taking throughout that county; and to that purpoſe, that there were ſummons of all the clergymen, churchwardens, and other officers, to come in to Leiceſter, to take the Covenant, whither accordingly they came, for two or three days together, with much freeneſs and cheerfulneſs; whereof, I ſay, Haſtings having notice, he with four troops, from Bever-Worton houſe, courſed about the country as far as Dunton and Lutterworth, and took near upon an hundred of the clergymen and others, and carried them priſoners to a town called Hinckley, intending to have carried them to Aſhby de la Zouch, &c. uſing them very coarſely, and threatening to hang all them that ſhould take the Parliament's Covenant; nor were they content with this, but, roving up and down the country, they took away about 80 kine, oxen, and horſe, from the poor country-people, and one maſter Warner, a godly miniſter, whom they much abuſed, threatening to hang him. But, the intelligence of theſe things coming to Leiceſter, and they (moſt juſtly) very ill reſenting theſe outrages and cruelties, loſt no time; but, though all their horſe were gone to Newark, yet they reſolved, every private man, to ſpare his own horſe, and ſo ſent away preſently an hundred and twenty of the foot-ſoldiers, and ſome thirty troopers, that lay at Bagworth-houſe, to keep it from the enemy, under the command of colonel Grey, whom the lord Grey had made governor of Leiceſter. Theſe their forces, being upon their march toward Hinckley, ſo well ordered the matter, that, about eight of the clock that night, they fell moſt valiantly on them in their quarters undiſcovered, took the enemy's ſcouts, and, without much reſiſtance, took the outworks and a piece of ordnance, and there performed their work alſo with ſo good ſucceſs, that they preſently entered the town, killed one of the enemy's captains named Manwaring, and four or five of their ſoldiers, wounded nine or ten of them very ſorely, preſently routed them all, took two of their lieutenants, one quarter-maſter, one enſign, forty-five priſoners, and one hundred and forty horſe, with their arms, releaſed all their countrymen, reſcued all the cattle, and reſtored them to the right owners; and ſo returned home ſafe, with this victory and booty, the next day, being Shrove Tueſday (as they then called it). None of Leiceſter men were ſlain in this defeat; only four wounded, whereof one was caſually hurt by colonel Grey, becauſe he forgot their word in the fight, which was, "God proſper us!" the enemy's word being, "For the King!" But that which makes this exploit the more remarkable was, that the enemy was between four and five hundred ſtrong, as we were credibly informed, and ours not above two hundred at the moſt. Our men went on moſt courageouſly in all the ſervice; and, had we not been too greedy of the prey, we had near taken them all; and therefore deſire to aſcribe all the honour to God alone[1]."

---

[1] Life of the Duke of Newcaſtle, p. 39.

[2] This was an officer appointed by the Parliament under an ordinance, paſſed Sept. 21, 1643, for ſequeſtering thoſe revenues.

[3] Peter Temple, linen-draper in Friday-ſtreet, London, burgeſs for Leiceſter 1641, ſigned the warrant for the King's death. His arms were, Argent, on two bars Sable, ſix mullets Or. Preſtwich, Reſpublica, p. 155.

[4] Journals of the Lords, vol. VI. p. 384.

[5] Richard Ludlam, mayor of Leiceſter in 1642-3, was an active officer on the part of the Parliament.

[6] Journals of the Commons, vol. III. p. 372.

[7] Whitlock, p. 78.

[8] Mercurius Britannicus, Feb. 6, 1643-4.

[9] Mercurius Anglicus, Feb. 7, 1643-4.

[10] Mercurius Veridicus, Feb. 13.

[11] Military Scribe, publiſhing his true warlike Preparation to the People, March 5, 1643-4.

[12] See vol. II. p. 52.

[13] Military Scribe, March 22.

A letter to the lord Grey of Groby; wherein is declared a great victory, obtained by the Parliament's forces near Hinckley; where they have ſlain captain Manwaring, 12 common ſoldiers;—taken priſoners, lieutenant Grey, brother to the lord Grey's cornet; lieutenant Rawlings; quarter-maſter Deekins; colonel Nevel's trumpeter, with a ſilver trumpet; 44 common ſoldiers;—ſurprized, many armes; 150 horſe; 80 heads of cattle; divers packs of ammunition;—whereof they have received two miniſters, and 30 countrymen, which the enemy had taken priſoners.

"Right Honourable; Upon Sunday night, about eleven o'clock, I received advertiſement from captain Bodle, that the enemy paſſed Niel-fen with three hundred and fifty horſe, and advanced towards Lutterworth, with a purpoſe to ſweep the whole country upon Monday. I drew forth major Bingley, captain Hacker's, and captain Bodle's troops, to go and fight with them, hearing they were at Sutton; but, miſſing them there, I marched to Hinckley, hearing they would quarter there that night. I came to Hinckley about ſeven o'clock, where I found all paſſage into the town blocked up. About half a mile from the town, I took one of their ſcouts, who affirmed them to be three hundred horſe and fifty dragoons, and that they had been in their quarters two hours. I entered the town at the end towards Barwell, firſt cauſing my dragoons to light by the mills, where I left their horſes with a ſmall guard, and cauſed my dragoons to advance, with the forlorn-hope of thirty horſe, commanded by captain Fitzgarret, to force the paſſage; which, after ſome reſiſtance, was effected. Myſelf, with the ſmall body that I had, one hundred and twenty, charged up to the Croſs, where I found the enemy in a body, and, after one quarter of an hour's fight, we beat them out of the town. Being in the field, they rallied again, and were advancing to charge us; whereupon I drew up my dragoons, and cauſed them to advance with my horſe into the field, where, after ſome ſhots made, the enemy gave way. Then I charged them again with my horſe; which they ſtood not to receive, but wheeled off, and fled. I purſued them above half a mile; but, being in the night, and in a dirty country, I thought it not ſafe to purſue them any farther, knowing they were as many more as I had. There were ſlain of the enemy, one captain Manwaring, of common ſoldiers about twelve; but I am confident there were many wounded, for I hear that there were ſome went into the houſes, and died by the way. I have priſoners, lieutenant Grey (your lordſhip's brother); lieutenant Rawlings; quarter-maſter Deekins; one trumpeter, with his ſilver trumpet; four and forty common ſoldiers; a great many arms, which I gave moſt unto captain Bodle, for his troop and dragoons. We took above one hundred and fifty horſes, eighty head of cattle, and divers packs with ſome ammunition. I releaſed two miniſters, priſoners, and thirty countrymen taken from Coſby and Leir; the horſe and cattle, being moſt taken from our friends, were moſt reſtored, ſome little ſatisfaction being made to the ſoldiers. This was done with 120 horſe, and 50 muſqueteers of my couſin Grey's company: his lieutenant is a very brave man, whom your lordſhip muſt needs think of. The enemy, by my couſin Grey's confeſſion, were 300; being three troops that came out of Newark, two of Lichfield, one of the lord of Loughborough's, one from Tiſſington, and one from Wiverton, beſides dragoons; the trumpet ſaith ſixty; my couſin acknowledgeth twenty. The glory I wholly aſcribe unto God of this action: I acknowledge it was His hand, and not ours, that defeated the enemy; for, certainly, had they ſtood it, when they were got into a body in the field, we ſhould have had the worſt of it. My lord, I hope, by my next, to ſend your lordſhip good news from Newark. In the mean time, I am, Right Honourable, your moſt faithful ſervant, Leiceſter, March 6, 1643-4. HENRY GREY[2]."

Two letters were read; one from lieutenant-colonel Henry Grey, of March 6, relating "a great victory granted to ſome forces of the garriſon of Leiceſter, againſt far greater forces of the enemy, at Hinckley;" and likewiſe relating, "that divers miniſters of that county refuſed taking the covenant, whom they have as yet reſtrained at Leiceſter till farther orders." The miniſters were ordered to be brought to London in ſafe cuſtody, and their eſtates to be ſequeſtered[3]."

"Sir John Gell enlarges his quarters Southwards, and the lord Grey's forces Northwards, ſo that the coaſts begin to be clear in thoſe parts; Haſtings's ruffians annoy them not as they were wont. I could never hear that they appeared ſince the lord Grey cudgelled them near Melton Mowbray[4]."

March 23. "News came of a ſkirmiſhing, March 20, between the Parliament's forces and the King's, at Cotes Bridge, near Loughborough[5].

"Sir Charles Lucas and the lord of Loughborough having united their forces together, ſir John Meldrum commanded ſir Edward Hartopp to encounter with them with a party of horſe from the ſiege of Newark, fearing that the enemy ſhould fall upon the garriſon of Leiceſter, which were then but in a weak condition. They came to Loughborough, and were aſſiſted with the lord Grey's regiment; where diſcharging a great piece upon the enemy, which did great execution amongſt them, they forced them to retreat, and by that means gained the bridge, which was half a mile in length. The enemy, after this, drew into a great meadow, and divided into five bodies, and without any blow only faced our men till night, at which time they retreated; and ſir Edward Hartopp having intelligence that prince Rupert was not far off, accompanied with 2000 horſe and as many foot, ſir Edward retreated towards Newark, and the lord Grey towards Leiceſter, which now continueth in a good condition. We are ſince informed, that prince Rupert, ſtrengthened with the additional ſupplies of the lord Loughborough's and ſir Charles Lucas's forces, hath advanced before Newark, and raiſed the ſiege. There was ſome encounter betwixt the Parliament forces and his, wherein the earl of Mancheſter's foot ſhewed not that courage and reſolution as was expected: there were taken ſome pieces of ordnance and divers arms; the firſt charge from prince Rupert was very violent. The enemy was much ſtronger than was reported; and it hath pleaſed God, for our humiliation, to give them there the better of us; yet ought we not to be diſcouraged. Victory flies on uncertain wings; and on that ſide to which it ſtooped not to-day, it may pleaſe God it may alight on the morrow [1]."

---

[1] Vicars, Part III. p. 169.

[2] Printed Pamphlets in the Britiſh Muſeum.

[3] Journals of the Commons, vol. III. pp. 423, 424.

[4] Mercurius Veridicus, March 12.

[5] Journals of the Commons, vol. III. p. 435.

April 4, the Houſe took into conſideration "the managing of the forces ſent from Newark and Leiceſter againſt the enemy gathered about Loughborough."—April 11. "Whereas John Meredith, doctor in Divinity, was, for divers miſdemeanors, &c. ſequeſtered from the church of Stanford Rivers, in Eſſex, by judgement of the Houſe of Peers, May 6, 1643; notwithſtanding, ſince he is preferred to be governor of the Hoſpital of Leiceſter: It is ordered, that he be forthwith ſequeſtered from being governor of the ſaid Hoſpital; and that Job Grey, clerk, ſhall ſupply the government of the ſaid Hoſpital; and ſhall have for his pains all houſes, lodgings, rents, revenues, and benefits whatſoever, belonging thereunto, until farther order be taken by this Houſe [2]."

"April 16. Let the bearer hereof, Mr. Thomas Stanford, with his horſe, quietly paſs your ſeveral watches, ſcouts, and guards; and the ſight hereof ſhall be to you a ſufficient warrant.

Leiceſter, HENRY GREY, governor [3]."

In April, ſir John Gell routed two troops of colonel Goring's horſe, and diſperſed the reſt.

May 9. "The humble petition of the Committee for the county of Leiceſter, here preſent, concerning their ſufferings under the ſoldiery there, was this day read.—Ordered, that a letter be directed to the Committee at Leiceſter, to raiſe another fortnight's pay unto the lord Grey's regiment, to complete that regiment a month's pay, and to enable that regiment to march according to the lord General's direction.—Ordered, that an ordinance be prepared, and brought in, for raiſing of forces for the preſervation and ſettling the county of Leiceſter; and ſir Arthur Heſilrige is to bring it into the Houſe; and alſo the letter to the Committee [4]."

A letter from Mr. Grey, governor of Leiceſter, dated May 11, confirms "that the Newcaſtle forces [5] are marching towards Leiceſter; and fear a ſiege [6]."

May 23, "Ordered, That a ſervant of colonel Bond's ſhall have Mr. Speaker's warrant to go to Oxon, about the exchange of himſelf for Mr. Hacker and Mr. Staveley [7], priſoners to the king at Belvoir Caſtle [8]."

On the 24th of May were publiſhed at Oxford, "Three Letters, dated May 18; the firſt, from an Officer in his Majeſty's Army to a Gentleman in Glouceſterſhire, upon occaſion of certain Queries ſcattered about that country. The ſecond, A Letter from a grave Gentleman, once a Member of the Houſe of Commons, to his Friend (remaining a Member of the ſame Houſe) in London, concerning his Reaſon why he left the Houſe, and concerning the late Treaty. The Third, a Letter to a Gentleman of Leiceſterſhire; ſhewing, out of the public Writings which paſſed betwixt his Majeſty and both Houſes of Parliament, that all the Overtures which have been made for Peace and Accommodation have proceeded from his Majeſty only; and that the late Unſucceſsfulneſs of the Treaty is not to be imputed to his Majeſty, but to them alone."

May 25. "Ordered, that the letter this day read, from captain Grey, from Leiceſter, be referred to the Committee of both Kingdoms, to conſider of the differences between the Committee and the ſoldiers; and to take ſome ſuch courſe as may ſettle the peace, and provide for the ſafety, of that county [9]."

May 27. "An ordinance for putting the county of Leiceſter into a poſture of defence, by ſettling a Committee of the Militia there; and for raiſing and maintaining of forces for the defence of the ſaid county; was this day read the firſt and ſecond time [10]."

Letters came from the lord Grey at Leiceſter, dated July 1, ſignifying that he marched thence on the Lord's day before, with 200 foot and 50 horſe, to Stamford; and, hearing of a ſcattered force of the enemy that were quartered about Belvoir and Aſhby de la Zouch, he wheeled about, and encountered a party of them: he killed five or ſix, took 40 horſe, and many gentlemen of quality, one lieutenant, two cornets, and ſome others [11].

A letter from lord Grey [12] was read, dated July 1; informing them of a defeat given by him to colonel Haſtings [13]. Ordered, that the letter of the lord Grey be referred to the members of this Houſe that are of the aſſociated counties, to conſider of the ſame; and what proviſions are fit to be made for the enabling him to keep the field, for the defence of Leiceſterſhire, and the reſt of the aſſociation [14]."

July 9. It was this day certified by letters from Derby, that the truly valiant colonel ſir John Gell hath made very good uſe of the remainder of the 1000 that ſhould have gone to the earl of Denbigh, which appears by this enſuing letter:

"Derby, July 6. Sir, ſince our forces were ſent from Derby to the earl of Denbigh, we had intelligence brought to Derby, that Haſtings made what preparations he could, to ſtrengthen himſelf and his garriſons, and to prepare a party to ſcout abroad and plunder, and ſo continue his baſe cruelties againſt the poor people in theſe parts, robbing and ſpoiling the country. But our worthy champion ſir John Gell, having ſome notice hereof, to prevent the miſchief that might hereby accrue to the county, ſent out toward Tutbury, ſir Andrew Kingſton's garriſon under Haſtings, and our horſe marched thither, and faced them: but they kept cloſe; they had an alarm in the town; but iſſued not forth: our men marched up cloſe to their very works, and made ſome ſhot againſt the enemy; and, without any loſs at all on our part; took 58 horſes out of their quarters, and brought them away to Derby. We hope this will be ſo great a diſcouragement to the enemy, that they will not dare to range too far for their plunder. We are in very good condition in Derby, and fear not the enemy. God of his mercy continue his goodneſs to us [1]."

---

[1] Mercurius Veridicus, March 26, 1644.

[2] Journals of the Commons, vol. III. pp. 447. 456.

[3] From the original paſs.

[4] Journals of the Commons, vol. III. p. 486.

[5] Goring, with 4000 horſe, marching through Leiceſterſhire, was ſkirmiſhed with by the lord Grey. Whitlock, p. 84.

[6] Journals of the Commons, vol. III. p. 491.

[7] Arthur Staveley, eſq. ſon of Thomas Staveley, eſq. of Weſt Langton.

[8] Journals of the Commons, vol. III. p. 505.

[9] Ibid. p. 506.

[10] Ibid. p. 507.

[11] Diary of Parliamentary Proceedings, July 4.

[12] The banner of Thomas lord Grey of Groby was, Per pale Azure and Gules, over which, in feſs, the ſun in its glory; in it a left eye Sable; on the ſun an unicorn Ermine, armed Or; fringed with Argent and Gules.—Another of his banners was, Per pale Azure and Gules; over which, as in pale, a theatre, like that repreſenting the Houſe of Commons on one of the ſeals of the Commonwealth, the ground of gold tile, the oblong ſquare; a theatre ſtone, in which nine men ſeated, properly appareled and hatted, four on each ſide, and one at the upper end; in the near end a ſquare table, before which a man with a purple robe, as if addreſſing his audience, his arms diſplayed, and back to the partition; without all this, in circle or orle, eight hands couped at their wriſts, as lozenge parted, and graſping each a ſword, all in different directions, their hilts Or, blades proper; the whole within a circlet or garland of laurel; and in chief, above all, a label or ſcroll, with theſe words, PER BELLUM AD PACEM.—The earl of Stamford's banner was, Azure, in three lines, the two firſt in Roman capitals, the laſt in Italian letters, all of gold, viz. FOR RELIGION—KING AND COUNTREY—A MA PUISSANCE; fringed Argent and Azure. Preſtwich's Reſpublica, pp. 27. 28. 35.

[13] The banners of Henry lord Haſtings of Loughborough was, Gules; from the feſs, and in pale, nearly extending to the top of the chief, an arch, maſoned proper, repreſenting a burning oven or fiery furnace proper; in feſs, or a little under it, on a ſcroll, its ends raiſed, and then bending inwards, points downwards and turned, Argent, ſhaded Vert, lined Or; in Roman letters Sable, QVASI IGNIS CONFLATORIS; fringed Argent and Purple. Ibid. p. 71.

[14] Journals of the Lords, vol. III. p. 552.

July 10. "Whereas the county of Leiceſter is in very great danger, by the frequent incurſions of the enemy's forces and garriſons in and near it; by reaſon whereof, neither the perſons nor the goods of the inhabitants, and well-affected to the Parliament, are ſecure in any part of the county: For prevention of farther danger and miſchief, and the better ſecuring of that county; by reducing and putting the ſame into a better condition and poſture of defence, the Lords and Commons in Parliament aſſembled, taking the premiſſes into their ſerious conſideration, have thought fit to order and ordain; and be it ordered, ordained, and eſtabliſhed, as followeth; that Thomas lord Grey of Groby; Theophilus Grey, eſq.; ſir Arthur Heſilrige, ſir Martin Liſter, and ſir Edward Hartopp junior, knights; Thomas Babington the elder, William Bainbridge, Peter Temple, Arthur Staveley, Henry Smith of Withcote, Thomas Heſilrige, Francis Hacker, John Goodman, and William Hewett, eſquires; William Stanley, Richard Ludlam, and Edmund Cradock, all of them inhabitants of the ſaid county of Leiceſter; ſhall be, and are hereby appointed to be, a Committee for the Militia of the ſaid county: And that the ſaid Committee, or any five or more of them, ſhall have power, from time to time, upon any emergent occaſion, as to them ſhall ſeem fit, to raiſe and continue ſuch forces of horſe and foot, out of the reſpective towns, townſhips, liberties, and places, in the ſaid county, as ſhall appear to be needful for the neceſſary defence of the town and county, and alſo for the ſuppreſſing and deſtroying of the enemy: And farther, the ſaid Committee, or any five of them, ſhall have power to nominate and appoint commanders, colonels, captains, and officers, over the ſaid forces: And, farther, to enable them to raiſe, maintain, and pay ſuch forces, the ſaid Committee, or any five of them, are hereby authorized to aſſeſs, tax, or nominate aſſeſſors to take, tax, or levy, upon the reſpective towns, townſhips, liberties, perſons, or places, within the ſaid county, in an equal way, according to their faculties and abilities, or according to the moſt uſual proportions of rates in the laſt weekly aſſeſſments, there weekly to be collected, or otherwiſe, ſuch ſum or ſums of money as they ſhall judge fit and requiſite for the ſaid forces, not exceeding the ſum of 600 pounds by the week; and to nominate collectors, and one or more treaſurer or treaſurers, which collectors are by them to be appointed to levy the ſaid ſums, together with the neceſſary charges which ſhall be expended in the collecting thereof, by way of diſtreſs and ſale of the perſons ſo aſſeſſed, in caſe he or they refuſe to pay the ſame within three days after demand given, or left in writing at the uſual dwelling of him or them: And the ſaid collectors may call to their aſſiſtance the conſtables and headboroughs, or any of the companies of volunteers, or other officers, in the ſaid county; and to pay them reaſonable allowance, not exceeding 12 pence in the pound, out of the offenders' eſtates; who are hereby required to be aiding and aſſiſting to the ſaid collectors in the premiſſes, as they will anſwer the contrary thereof. And be it ordained, that every perſon ſhall be rated for the eſtate he hath in the ſeveral places in the ſaid county; and, if land be let or ſet near the value thereof, ſuch perſon, or perſons, to whom the rent thereof belongeth, to be ſolely chargeable therewith; but, if the ſame be let under value, then the ſum taxed to be apportioned betwixt the party and him who receives the rent, as the taxers ſhall think fit: And, if they, or any of them, ſhall do injury in making the ſaid aſſeſſments, the ſame to be rectified by the ſaid Committee, or any five of them, according to their diſcretions: And, if any aſſeſſors, collectors, or conſtables, ſhall refuſe the ſaid ſervice, or prove negligent or faulty therein, the ſaid Committee, or any five of them, ſhall have power to commit ſuch aſſeſſors, collectors, or conſtables, to priſon for one month, or to ſet a fine upon him or them, as they ſhall think fit, not exceeding the ſum of ten pounds for every offence; the ſaid fine to be levied by diſtreſs and ſale of the offenders' goods. And it is ordained, that the treaſurers appointed by the ſaid Committee ſhall keep a regiſter-book of the ſums received and paid out by them, ſo that they may give a juſt and perfect account thereof unto the ſaid Committee, when they ſhall be by them required. And, for the better encouragement of the ſaid collectors and treaſurers, it is ordained, that two pence in the pound ſhall be allowed unto the ſaid collectors, for every ſum of money collected and paid by them to the ſaid treaſurer or treaſurers; and one penny in the pound for the ſaid treaſurer and treaſurers, for every ſum of money received and diſburſed by them, according to this ordinance. And it is alſo ordained, that whatſoever ſums of money are, or ſhall be, ſet or impoſed, by virtue of this ordinance, upon any landlords, for or in reſpect of any lands or hereditaments held of them, the ſame ſums of money ſhall be paid by their ſeveral reſpective tenants; and they ſhall deduct and defalk the ſame out of the next rents payable by them to their landlords; and, for ſo doing, the ſaid tenants, their heirs, executors, adminiſtrators, or aſſigns, from any grant, covenant, condition, or writing, or other matter whatſoever, made to the contrary, ſhall, by virtue of this ordinance, be fully diſcharged. And be it ordered and ordained, by the authority aforeſaid, that the ſaid forces raiſed ſhall not be drawn forth, or kept, or continued forth, upon any ſervice, without the knowledge and conſent of the ſaid Committee, or the major part of them, or without particular directions of Parliament. And be it laſtly ordained, that the ſaid Committee, treaſurers, collectors, aſſeſſors, and every of them, and every other perſon that ſhall be aiding and aſſiſting to them, or any of them, in doing any thing by virtue of this ordinance, ſhall be defended, and ſaved harmleſs therein, by authority of both Houſes of Parliament [2]."

"For his Majeſty's eſpecial affairs.

"To the right honourable the Lord Loughborough, at Aſhby de la Zouch. Haſte! haſte! haſte! Edward Digby.

"My noble Lord; Bath, July 16, 1644.

"The King hath commanded me to return unto your Lordſhip this anſwer to the propoſition made by young Mr. Gorges from your Lordſhip, concerning the drawing of all the forces which your Lordſhip can make to the aſſiſtance of Prince Rupert. His Majeſty doth very well approve of it; and deſires that your Lordſhip would loſe no time in contributing to that great work of the Prince's aſſiſtance all the ſtrength you can make with ſafety to your neceſſary garriſons. As for the forces which you deſire ſhould be drawn out of the Southern garriſons, his Majeſty doth not conceive what garriſons you mean; and ſo can return no anſwer to that part of your propoſition; but, if you mean either Worceſter, Banbury, or Oxford, I am ſure, none of them have any men to ſpare. News from theſe parts I can ſend you none, but that our army is here at Bath, making all the haſte it can towards Eſſex, upon whom we are likely to have a good advantage, if we can take him between Prince Maurice's army and ours, before Waller get near us; Prince Maurice being ten thouſand ſtrong. My Lord, I reſt your faithful ſervant, GEORGE DIGBY [3]."

In July, the lord Grey of Groby and ſir John Gell, joining together to reduce a garriſon of the King's at Wilney-ferry, who did many outrages to the country, and much infeſted them, they uſed this ſtratagem to get the fort. They took about 60 cart-loads of hay and other combuſtible matter, and carried them, with their forces, up to the very fort, under the ſhelter of which their men were ſecure from any hurt from the enemy; and, putting fire to the combuſtible matter, with the advantage of the wind, did ſo annoy the enemy, that they were driven out of the works, and their trenches filled with hay and other ſtuff. Captain Robinſon, the governor, offered to ſurrender upon terms, to march away with bag and baggage; but, that being denied, he prepared for a reſolute defence; but, when the Parliament forces began the ſtorm, Robinſon's men threw down their arms, and craved quarter; which was given them, and but one man killed. There were taken three captains, divers inferior officers, two drakes, and 70 common ſoldiers. After this, they took-in Winkfield manor, and Shelford manor. The Parliament ordered a letter of thanks[1].

---

[1] Perfect Occurrences of Parliament, July 9.

[2] Journals of the Commons, vol. III. p. 557.

[3] Carte's MSS. in the Bodleian Library, N° 240, marked EEEE.

" Sir, Derby, July 18.

" Our forces having had ſo good ſucceſs at Wilne-ferry, are very earneſt for action, and long to have further dealing with the enemy, who have hitherto done theſe parts ſo much hurt: for it is well known that the lord Haſtings hath hitherto protected his honour by plunder; yet now we hope to make a ſtop in ſhort time of thoſe courſes, or to remove him to ſome remote place; for the valiant colonel Gell hath brave reſolutions to follow the buſineſs; and major Sanders, with the horſe and foot and dragoons that are out, are reſolved to purſue Haſtings from place to place, till he hath either beaten them, or they him: and they are now upon a freſh deſign; but whether for Wingfield manor or Aſhby de la Zouch, is uncertain[2]."

" July 29. It was this day reported that Wingfield manor was taken by the forces of my lord Grey of Groby and ſir John Gell, and that from thence they are advanced with a reſolution to beſiege the lord of Loughborough in his houſe at Aſhby de la Zouch[3]."

" Wingfield manor is ſtill beſieged by ſir John Gell; and it is hoped it will ſpeedily be ours, either by ſtorming or compoſition. Our forces have lately taken King's mills upon the river of Trent, not far from Wilney-ferry. The Lord of Loughborough, in diſtracted fear and ſpeed, flies up and down the country, but dares not come near us; and the forces of Warwick and Northamptonſhire being now in the field, he every hour expects to have a ſiege laid to Aſhby de la Zouch, which, if Wingfield were once taken, he might well be ſure of. It is to be wondered (being in the heart of that inland country) what ſhift he makes for powder and ammunition; the garriſons that have furniſhed him ſo long with ſupplies being moſt of them ſurrendered or blocked up[4]."

" Sir, Derby, Aug. 7.

" There is now a very ſtrong ſiege before Wingfield manor; ſir John Gell is there himſelf, and about 2000 horſe and foot forces from Derby and Nottingham; and they have trenched, and the pioneers are ſtill at work; and we hope that it will now ſhortly be ſurrendered, for they are out of hope to be relieved either by Haſtings or Rupert, or any other to come to raiſe the ſiege. We have three troops of horſe; and the inhabitants left at Derby with lieutenant-colonel Gell, to keep the garriſon at Derby, where, God be thanked, we are in very good condition; and the malignants here dare not ſhew themſelves in any malignancy: moſt of them do acknowledge they have been miſled, and that they are now convinced. We hear from Leiceſter that there hath been ſome difference there between lieutenant-colonel Grey and captain Ludlam, who gave either of them a ſeveral watchword to the centinel, and had like to have cauſed ſome combuſtions. But, God be thanked, it did not; and the next day, or within a day or two after, Haſtings's horſe faced Leiceſter, and gave them an alarm; but ſtayed not, nor did they or we ſince hear more of them[5]."

Aug. 10. By letters from Leiceſter this day, it is certified that the grand rob-carrier, general Haſtings, joining with ſome other forces from Belvoir on Monday laſt, came to Belgrave, a ſmall town within a mile of Leiceſter, his deſign being (according to his old cuſtom, plundering) to ſurprize certain carriers that lay there that night, going from Derby, and accordingly took divers of their horſes, and drove them away to Aſhby, but dared not ſtay to plunder their packs; for the Leiceſter garriſon, having intelligence thereof, with what forces they had in the town, which were not many, their horſe being before drawn out by the lord Grey, marched out againſt them, and, about the bridge between Leiceſter and Belgrave, ſkirmiſhed with the enemy: captain Adinſon, a valiant Scotchman, charged them gallantly, his men playing their parts ſtoutly, though much over-powered by the enemy. Captain Rowland Hacker, a man whom the enemy ſet no ſmall eſteem of, and in truth the only active man for them in thoſe parts, was in that encounter dangerouſly wounded, without hopes of life; but by that time the other captains, captain Grey and captain Tapper, came to charge, the enemy retreated, and made haſte away; but the Leiceſter men, wanting horſe to purſue them, could not complete their victory, as otherwiſe they had done[6]."

" Derby, Aug. 15. Sir, Our carriers are come ſafe to Derby with the powder which was ſent from London to us, God be praiſed; but the enemy had notice of it; and Haſtings, hearing of ſome carriages which went from Leiceſter (which he ſuppoſed to be that ammunition), he ſent out a party of horſe from Aſhby de la Zouch; which horſe marched all night; and the next morning they met an honeſt poor man near Belgrave, and aſked him from whence he came; he anſwered " from Leiceſter;" and then aſked him, " where the ammunition was that was brought from London? and who he was for?" to which queſtions he anſwered as well as he could: but, the bloody villains! one of them diſcharged a piſtol againſt him; and others cut and hacked him ſo, that the poor man died there moſt miſerably: and when they came to the carriages, they robbed and pillaged all that was worth carrying away in them: but intelligence being brought to the committee of Leiceſter, they ſent a party of horſe, which met with them whilſt they were eating the plumbs and ſpice they had robbed the poor men of; they fell upon them, and, with little loſs, reſcued the plunder again from them, and returned it to the carriers. The earl of Mancheſter is himſelf at Lincoln: ſome of his forces have taken Bolſover; and are come from thence to Wingfield manor, where our forces had ſome few days before made an aſſault, and we loſt ſome men; but hope ſuddenly to have it ſurrendered; and then I think they will join to beſiege Newark. This is all for the preſent[7]."

Auguſt 16. Mr. Crew preſented from the Committee of both kingdoms, certain informations given in by the Lord Grey to the Committee of both kingdoms, concerning certain paſſages betwixt him and the Committee for the Militia of the county of Leiceſter: the which were read; and, upon the queſtion, ordered to be referred to a Committee, to conſider of the informations, examinations, and letters; and to hear the witneſſes, and to ſtate the matter upon the whole; and to conſider what is fit to be done to the beſt advantage of the publick; and to preſent their opinion to the Houſe[8].

" Friday, Aug. 23. By letters this day to the earl of Rutland, it was certainly informed, that the manor of Wingfield was ſurrendered to the worthy patriot of his country, ſir John Gell; in which houſe were about 300 men and 14 pieces of ordnance, being very ſtrongly fortified, and therefore will be of no ſmall concernment unto us; for many garriſons the enemy had in thoſe parts are now reduced only unto two; viz. De la Zouch and Newark. There came alſo ſome letters from Leiceſter to the Houſe, informing the condition and valiant reſolution of the garriſon there, and confirming the taking of Wingfield's manor; which (as we are informed) was ſurrendered on conditions to this effect:

" 1. That all the ordnance, ammunition, and furniture of war in the houſe (except what is mentioned in the enſuing article) be delivered up, with the fort itſelf, to ſir John Gell, for the ſervice of the Parliament.

---

[1] Whitlock, p. 91.
[2] Diary of Parliamentary Proceedings, July 24.
[3] Ibid. July 29.
[4] London Poſt, Aug. 6.
[5] Diary of Parliamentary Proceedings, Aug. 9.
[6] Ibid. Aug. 10.
[7] Diary of Parliamentary Proceedings, Aug. 20.
[8] Journals of the Commons, vol. III. p. 592.

"2. That the governor, officers, and ſoldiers ſhould march away to the next garriſon (or their own homes), with their horſes and ſwords, drums beating, and colours flying, without being plundered and pillaged of any thing belonging to them; and ſhould have convenient accommodation for carrying of ſuch neceſſaries as were uſeful in their march [1]."

Sept. 4. A petition of the inhabitants of Leiceſter, repreſenting the inconveniences that happened to the country upon the differences that had ariſen between the Lord Grey's officers and the Committee, was referred to a Committee, to ſee what was fit to be done for the compoſing of the differences [2].

"Sept. 21. By letters this day from Leiceſter we have certain intelligence of an excellent exploit performed by a party of Leiceſter horſe againſt rob-carrier general Haſtings's forces, which is thus certified; viz. that a party of horſe, about 80 in number, going from Leiceſter on Tueſday laſt, as convoy to certain carriers to Nottingham, the paſſage, by reaſon of the enemy's garriſons thereabout, being ſo full of danger, that no carrier dare adventure to paſs without a convoy, General Haſtings (as it appears) having gained intelligence of this prize, ſends a party of about 120 horſe and foot againſt them; but they, coming too ſhort of the carriers, which were by this time ſecured at Nottingham, and the convoy about to return to Leiceſter, Haſtings's forces placed their ambuſcades and lined the hedges on both ſides a lane where the Leiceſter forces were to paſs by, near a town called Caſtock, within five miles on this ſide Nottingham; and accordingly gave the ſaid convoy an unexpected ſalute in their return; but they very gallantly forced their paſſage through the lane; which done, they wheeled about again upon the enemy, beat them from the hedges, miſerably routed and diſperſed their whole party, killed eight on the place, whereof one is ſaid to be ſerjeant-major Walley, wounded others, took above threeſcore of them priſoners, the reſt that eſcaped leaving all their arms for haſte behind them, and ninety good horſe; in which action Leiceſter forces loſt not one man; only lieutenant Stevens, who deſerves much honour for his gallant undertakings in this ſervice, was ſhot in the back, but not mortally: after which exploit thus gallantly performed by a party of 80 horſe againſt 120 at the leaſt, the convoy returned ſafe to Leiceſter the ſame night with all their priſoners and prize, and were entertained with much joy and triumph [3]."

"By letters from Leiceſterſhire we underſtand that a party of Haſtings' horſe, coming to Loughborough on the laſt Lord's day, according to their prophanation of that day, rode into the church in ſermon-time, and would have taken away the preacher out of the pulpit; but the women of the town, expreſſing more valour than their huſbands dared to do at that time, reſcued him from them, and diſappointed their purpoſe. On the Lord's day before, another party of them came to Rodeley, a town near Mountſorel, and in the ſame manner entered the church, and took away three men, and carried them to Aſhby [4]."

About the ſame time colonel Charles Fleetwood took two troops of the King's horſe near Belvoir Caſtle [5].

Oct. 18. The weekly ſum of £31. 5*s.* was ordered to be raiſed in Leiceſterſhire, for the preſent relief of the Britiſh army in Ireland, by Thomas lord Grey of Groby, ſir Arthur Heſilrige, bart. ſir Edward Hartop, ſir Thomas Hartop, ſir Martin Liſter, knights; William Hewit, John Bainbridge, Peter Temple, George Aſhby, Thomas Cotton, William Roberts, Francis Hacker, Richard Bent, Arthur Staveley, William Danvers, and John Goodman, eſqrs. [6]; and, for the town of Leiceſter, by the Mayor for the time being, Richard Ludham, William Stanley, aldermen; and Daniel Moreſine [7].

"Oct. 30. Sir, We preſume to give you an account of an attempt made by our aſſociated forces here, of Derby, Nottingham, and ours here at Leiceſter, joining with the Lincolnſhire forces, by a command from the Committee of both kingdoms. Sir, haſte prevents relation at large; but our forces, by a guidance more than man's, appeared upon the rear, where the Northern and Newarkers joined with Belvoir and Norton, all in one body, faced colonel Roſſiter's, Fleetwood's, and the reſt. Sir, Derby, Nottingham, and we, appearing ſuddenly, with a great ſhout, fell upon them; and the ſucceſs the incloſed will declare. We are, Sir,

Pe. Temple, Arth. Staveley,
Tho. Haſelrige, Wm. Stanley."
Ed. Cradock,

Oct. 31. A petition from the Committee at Leiceſter, of October 29; and a letter incloſed, from captain Hacker, to the ſame Committee, relating the taking of 600 horſe and 400 foot, on the 29th of October, in the Vale of Belvoir [8].

Oct. 31. A letter was read in the Houſe, from captain Hacker, captain of a horſe troop, and one of the committee at Leiceſter, a gallant, ſpirited gentleman, who was preſent (and did gallant ſervice with his troop, conſiſting of above 120 brave horſe) at the defeat given to the Newark forces in Lincolnſhire. He now writes to the Houſe further concerning that buſineſs, that the number of horſe taken were between 7 and 800; that ſir John Girlington was drowned, and divers others of quality with him, beſides common ſoldiers, in their confuſed flight over a mill-dam at the bottom of Belvoir Hill; that 40 commanders and officers, and near 400 common ſoldiers, were taken priſoners; and that which crowneth the ſucceſs, that all this was done without the loſs of one man ſlain on our ſide. Of what uſe this defeat is like to be, beſides the diſappointment of the enemy's deſign to relieve Crowland, and to break into the aſſociation, which he mainly intended, will appear by this: that our forces have now blocked up Belvoir caſtle, and in great hopes to take the ſame; have alſo put a garriſon into Grantham, where they fortify apace, there being no enemy to diſturb them; that the ſiege of Crowland is proſecuted with much terror to the enemy; and if part of the Scottiſh forces and the lord Fairfax draw up timely towards Newark, as is expected, I doubt not but you will hear of more ſieges in thoſe parts ere long be. It would now be aſked, what's become of general Haſtings and his crew of rob-carriers in Leiceſterſhire, that no further mention is of late made of them? but the anſwer is ſoon made, that thoſe few men he had, except the ſtanding garriſon at Aſhby, were all loſt in this laſt defeat in Lincolnſhire; and, for his part, he plays leaſt in ſight. One while he is ſaid to be at Aſhby, then at Tutbury, then gone to keep Prince Rupert company at Briſtol, where he expects to be made governor; then gone to the king, then at Oxford; and it may be you will hear further than all this of him ere long be; his garriſon at Aſhby, it appears, is but weak; a party from Leiceſter the laſt week went and faced them to the town ſide, drove away many of their beaſts and cattle, and not a man came out againſt them, but to requite their courteſy. Two or three days after, 10 or 12 horſe from that garriſon came to Kilby, within five miles of Leiceſter, in the night time, and carried away two or three of the lord Grey's commanders, that careleſly ſtaid ſome days together at a gentleman's houſe to make merry [9]."

Nov. 6, a petition from Leiceſterſhire deſired that the lord Grey might be ſent down to them, being their commander in chief [10].

"A Speech delivered in the Commons Houſe of Parliament, by that judicious and worthy Gentleman, Thomas Beaumont, Eſquire, at the preſenting of the Petition of the Knights, Gentlemen, and Freeholders of the County of Leiceſter, on Wedneſday the 6th of November, 1644. Alſo a true Copy of the Petition itſelf, ſubſcribed with above 2000 Hands.

---

[1] Perfect Diurnal, Aug. 23. [2] Journals of the Commons, vol. III. p. 618. [3] Perfect Diurnal, Sept. 23.
[4] Ibid. Oct. 7. [5] See vol. II. p. 52. [6] Huſbands's Ordinances, p. 572. [7] Ibid. p. 573.
[8] Journals of the Commons, vol. III. p. 682.
[9] Alſop's Weekly Account, Nov. 6; Parliament Scout, Nov. 7; Mercurius Civicus, Nov. 7; True Informer, Nov. 9; Perfect Diurnal, Nov. 11.
[10] Journals of the Commons, vol. VI. p. 688; Whitlock, p. 105.

"Sir, The deep expreſſions the whole kingdom hath received of grace and clemency from this honourable Houſe, hath encouraged us in our great ſufferings to make our retreat hither, our country being almoſt environed with deſtroying enemies, and ourſelves continually expoſed to loſs and danger; theſe our miſeries (as we humbly apprehend) taking birth eſpecially from two cauſes. One is, our want of a chief commander; for, whilſt the enemy is ſpoiling our country, the officers of our forces, being under no particular authority, are ſo long in diſputing who ſhall go out for our defence, that, before they appear, the enemy hath done the miſchief, and is retired. The other is, our country's diſacquaintance with moſt of thoſe which ſit in the Committee; which in ſome averts, in many leſſens, a free and lively adhering to them. For the common people, of which our ſtrength moſt conſiſts, do only truſt and expect an active care from ſuch whoſe reſidence with them hath begot affection, and eſtates amongſt them give them an apprehenſion that they are involved in the ſame danger with them. Our preſent Committee receive nothing but what they forcibly extort from the country, wherein they make an unprofitable purchaſe: for, though they get ſome money, they loſe many hearts; whereas, if men that have eſtates, and are well known in their country, were joined with them, the people would generally come in, and offer up all they have for the advancement of the public good: for we have men, horſes, and money left, good materials to repair our decayed country, if this honourable Parliament (the great architectors of the Commonwealth) will pleaſe to depute us good under-builders to prevent a ruin. In theſe clouds of trouble that darken our whole nation, this Parliament is our only ſun, that diffuſeth light to the ſeveral Committees of every county; and they, like ſtars, ſhould impart their borrowed ſhine to us; but, if they be unknown ſtars, they do not direct, but diſtract, the pilot in his paſſage. In theſe our miſeries as we have many ſharers, ſo (if it had been thought neceſſary) there had been many more preſenters of them to you; but we, in the name of all, do humbly invocate a gracious and ſpeedy redreſs, the unhappy diſtance of our country prohibiting our frequent addreſſes to this honoured place; where, having briefly unboſomed our grievances, we humbly leave them to the wiſdom and conſideration of this honourable Parliament."

"To the honourable Houſe of Commons aſſembled in Parliament.

"The humble Petition of the Gentlemen, Freeholders, and beſt-affected of Leiceſterſhire,

"Sheweth, That whereas, by the gracious care and wiſdom of this honourable Houſe, in appointing gentlemen of judgement and eſtates of this county to ſit in a Committee for regulating and equal diſpoſing of all affairs in it; and by ſending unto us the right honourable the lord Grey of Groby (who firſt reſcued us out of the hands of malignants, and the town of Leiceſter, then ready to be ſeized on by them, a garriſon, and gave encouragement and life to the actions of all the well-affected) with chief command of all the military forces of this county; the officers of the army, being under the power of one, were kept from emulation and diſſention, and the hearts of the county ſo inclined, that they were quickly able to reſiſt, and almoſt to ſuppreſs the enemy: but we are now (by eaving the beſt men of the county out of the Committee in a late Ordinance for the Militia) fallen under the government of ſuch, whoſe defects of number, acquaintance amongſt us, and intereſts in the county, cannot afford us any probable hopes of preſervation, nor the Commonwealth any conſiderable aſſiſtance; and, in the unhappy abſence of the lord Grey, moſt of our horſes and arms were ſold, our ſoldiers diſperſed, and their headleſs officers in continual differences for pre-eminence; whilſt the enemy's are ſo much ſtrengthened and increaſed, that the well-affected are daily expoſed to the loſs of liberty, their goods to plunder, and their rents ſequeſtered and ſeized on by the adverſe party, that till of late had never the boldneſs or power to attempt it. In this ſad condition we have (under God) no refuge but to this honourable Houſe, the effects and influence of whoſe great prudence and care the Commonwealth in general, and our county in particular, have ſo largely and frequently taſted. We do again, therefore, ſupplicate this honourable and great Council, in eaſe of our great ſufferings, to ſend again ſpeedily to us the lord Grey, inveſted with power over the forces of this county, that, under his command, the now diſheveled ſoldiers being unanimouſly collected, we may be again able to give limits to the now unbounded enemy; and to command thoſe gentlemen that are appointed to ſit in the Committee, and do not appear, to repair to the county, and to ſerve in it; and to add ſuch gentlemen of known integrity and intereſt in the country, as may ſo generally draw the affections of this county, that we may the ſooner be wholly freed both of theſe great miſeries and their authors. And we ſhall always have cauſe to pray for the continuance of happy ſucceſs to this juſt and honourable Parliament [1]."

"Leſter, Nov. 14. Sir, our forces are gone with Derby horſe towards Aſhby; but the enemy are very ſtrong, and their works good; they have vaults under the ground, through which they can go from one fort to another at their pleaſure; proviſions they have good ſtore; hung-beef plenty round about their kitchen within, and have lately been killing and ſalting of more. There are as debaſed wicked wretches there as if they had been raked out of hell, as we are informed by ſome that have come from thence: they have invented a new kind of compliment for a kind of proteſtation; and if they affirm or deny a thing, it is uſual to do it with this ſaying, "The devil ſuck my ſoul through a tobacco-pipe," if ſuch a thing be ſo, or not ſo, in their ordinary ſpeech. And this is no wonder, for they have three malignant prieſts there, ſuch as will drink and roar, and domineer and ſwear, as well as ever a Cabb of them all; and end and begin one health after another; and ſwear and domineer, ſo as it would make one's heart to ache to hear the country people to relate what they heard of them. The Cabb will cozen and cheat one another moſt wonderfully; ſteal one another's horſes, and ride out and ſell them; and ſometimes come again, ſometimes run away, as if they were even at their wit's end. The earl of Huntingdon is in the garriſon; but the lord of Loughborough, his brother, is not there; there are alſo many Iriſh there, who have lately made a new fort, a very ſtrong work, and it is called the Iriſh fort; who have been bold upon ſome claſhing between them and thoſe that profeſs themſelves to be Proteſtants in Aſhby garriſon. The Iriſh rebels have told them to their faces, that they fight for the old true Catholic Religion, which is better than ours, and puts them into a better condition than they that are hereticks; and ſwear that, if ever they be ſtraitened by a ſiege, that they will burn the town to the ground. But our forces are gone to try what they can do; and I hope in a ſhort time to give you a further account of their actions [2]."

Nov. 16, captain Skevington was appointed on the Committee of ſequeſtration for Kent [3].

"We are advertized that the Derby forces, conſiſting of four troops of horſe, have united themſelves to the Leiceſter forces; and that, being ingroſſed into one body, they are now advanced to beſiege Aſhby de la Zouch, which is one of the ſtrongeſt and moſt conſiderable holds that the enemy hath in thoſe places; and, the better to effect their enterprize, they are now fortifying a great houſe not far from it, a very defenſible place of itſelf, which commands one of the chiefeſt paſſages thereunto. In the mean time, we have received intelligence from Derby, that ſir John Gell is not idle; but is ſo careful for the ſecuring of that county, that he endeavours to garriſon his ſoldiers within half a mile or a mile of the enemy. By this means he will keep the country inviolate from the oppreſſion and outrages of the enemy, who will not be able to adventure abroad for plunder, but they will be enforced to return again with loſs and with repentance. By this means alſo, the enemy being denied all manner of relief, the country will be the better encouraged and enabled to ſupply its own garriſons [1]."

---

[1] Quarto Pamphlets, in the Britiſh Muſeum, 1644.

[3] Journals of the Commons, vol. III. p. 689.

[2] Perfect Diurnal, Saturday, Nov. 16.

"Nov. 28. This day there came letters from Derby, which certify that the Derby, Nottingham, and Leiceſter forces are fortifying at Cole Orton, within two miles of Aſhby de la Zouch, and that their works go forward apace. And it is further certified, that a party from Cole Orton marched to Aſhby de la Zouch, which cauſed the enemy to retreat, and lie cloſe in the caſtle, ſo that our forces marched into Aſhby; and hearing where Haſtings had left his ſtore of proviſions (whom, it is reported, is himſelf gone to the King, but for certain he is not in Aſhby; but his brother the earl of Huntingdon is there) but had left ſome proviſions at a houſe in the town; which our forces hearing of, went into Aſhby; and the enemy being retreated into the caſtle, our forces took carriages, and brought it out into their own quarters at Cole Orton, and ſent a ſummons to the caſtle, to require it to be ſurrendered to them for the ſervice of the King and Parliament; but, being denied, go forward with their works at Cole Orton. So that, however, though they do not beſiege the caſtle, yet they will keep them in, and ſo ſecure the country from being plundered by them, and procure free trade and free paſſage in thoſe parts, which will be a great comfort to them [2]."

Sir Gilbert Gerard reports from the Committee of both kingdoms, That whereas this Houſe formerly referred unto that Committee the conſideration of a petition from the county of Leiceſter; that Committee, in regard of their other great affairs, can have no time for the examining thereof: It is therefore ordered, that the ſaid petition be referred to the examination and conſideration of the Committee formerly appointed for Leiceſterſhire, where Mr. Knightly has the chair [3].

"Nov. 28. The blocking up of Aſhby de la Zouch by the Leiceſter and Derby forces goes on very well; and the lord Beaumont's houſe at Cole Orton ſtrongly fortified. There are hopes, if care be taken to prevent the enemy's ſending of relief, a good account will be given of that garriſon in a ſhort time [4]."

On the 28th, a new commiſſion of the peace was iſſued for this county: "Carolus, &c. predilectis & fidelibus conſiliariis noſtris, Edwardo domino Littleton, domino cuſtodi magni ſigilli noſtri Anglie; Franciſco domino Cottington, domino theſaurario noſtro Anglie; ac chariſſimis conſanguineis & conſiliariis noſtris, Jacobo duci Richmondie & Lenox, ſeneſcallo hoſpitii noſtri; Thome comiti Arundel & Surrie, comiti mareſcallo Anglie; chariſſimo conſanguineo noſtro Ferdinando comiti Huntingdonie; ac etiam chariſſimo conſanguineo & conſiliario noſtro Thome vicecomiti Savile, theſaurario hoſpitii noſtri; necnon chariſſimis conſanguineis noſtris, Johanni vicecomiti Purbeck, Sapcot vicecomiti Beaumont, ac predilecto & fideli conſiliario noſtro Georgio domino Digby uni primariorum ſecretariorum noſtrorum; ac etiam predilecto & fideli noſtro Henrico domino Loughborough; predilectiſque & fidelibus conſiliariis noſtris, Edwardo Nicholas, militi, alteri primariorum ſecretariorum noſtrorum; Johanni Cote, militi; necnon dilectis & fidelibus noſtris, Edmundo Reeve, militi, uni juſticiariorum noſtrorum de banco; Henrico Skipwith, Johanni Skeffington, Ricardo Halford, militibus & baronettis; Johanni Pate, baronetto; Johanni Lambe, militi, prechariſſime conſortis noſtre regine cancellario; Thome Merry militi, Wolſtano Dixey militi, Ricardo Roberts militi, Johanni Bale militi, Thome Hartopp militi, Eraſmo de la Fontaine militi, Euſebio Pelſant militi, Henrico Haſtings de Humberſton militi; Martino Lyſter, Georgio Aſhbe, Theophilo Cave, Willielmo Roberts, Nathanaeli Lucy, Thome Rowe, Thome Calcott de Calthorpe, Edwardo Farnham, Joſepho Bent, & Ricardo Turpyn, armigeris; ſalutem. Sciatis, quòd aſſignavimus vos, conjunctìm & diviſìm, & quemlibet veſtrûm, juſticiarios noſtros ad pacem in comitatu Leiceſtrie conſervandam, &c. Aſſignavimus etiam vos, & quoſlibet duos vel plures veſtrûm, (quorum aliquem veſtrûm, dominum cuſtodem, dominum theſaurarium, ducem Richmondie & Lenox, comitem Mareſcallum, comitem Huntingdonie, vicecomitem Savile, vicecomitem Purbeck, vicecomitem Beaumont, dominum Digby, dominum Loughborough, Edwardum Nicholas, Johannem Skeffington, Ricardum Halford, Johannem Pate, Johannem Lambe, Thomam Merry, Wolſtanum Dixey, Ricardum Roberts, Johannem Bale, Thomam Hartopp, Euſebium Pelſant, Henricum Haſtings de Humberſton, Martin Lyſter, Georgium Aſhbe, & Nathanaelem Lacy, unum eſſe volumus), juſticiarios noſtros, ad inquirendum per ſacramentum proborum & legalium hominum de comitatu predicto, &c. de omnibus & omnimodis feloniis, veneficiis, &c. Aſſignavimus denique te prefatum Ferdinandum comitem cuſtodem rotulorum pacis noſtre in dicto comitatu noſtro, &c. Teſte meipſo, apud Oxoniam, 28° die Decembris, anno regni noſtri 19°."[5]

Dec. 31. The Leiceſter forces at Cole Orton got in very well, and have lately performed a good piece of ſervice againſt the enemy at Aſhby de la Zouch; where entering the town, they beat the enemy into the tower, Haſtings's ſtrong hold, took divers papers and many arms [6].

Prince Rupert is advancing with another party towards Newark, where no doubt but he will be welcomed by the Parliament's forces; for, as we are certainly informed, we have thereabouts already threeſcore troops of horſe, collected out of the garriſons of Derby, Leiceſter, Lincoln, and Nottingham, beſides ſome others ſent by my lord Fairfax to their aſſiſtance [7].

Jan. 18, 1644-5, £250. a month was ordered to be aſſeſſed on the county of Leiceſter [8].

In this month, in an excurſion to Oakham, 12 troopers belonging to Burley houſe, and two ſequeſſtrators, were carried priſoners to Belvoir Caſtle, then under the command of colonel Lucas [9].

Feb. 4, "Colonel Haſtings, for the King, ſent out warrants for carriages to fetch hay to Aſhby. The Parliament's forces ſent out their warrants to bring the hay to Cole Orton; but Haſtings was too quick, and had compelled the country to load the hay, and with a ſtrong guard was bringing it to his garriſon. Captain Temple, the high-ſheriff of the county, having notice thereof, with his troop got between them and Aſhby in the van; and, three troops of Derby following in the rear, after a little engagement, Haſtings's men fled, and were routed and purſued, 40 of them taken priſoners, 60 horſe arms, and all their hay [10]."

"We gave you before ſome intelligence in general, that ſome of the Lord of Loughborough's troops were ſoundly beaten by our forces; we will now give it you in particular; which is, that a party of General Haſtings's horſe, conſiſting of about 44, were encountered by our men. The ſervice was attended with as much ſucceſs as ſpeed; for, preſently on the firſt charge, we did take them all priſoners, with their horſe and arms, and carried them priſoners to Derby. To make this atchievement more remarkable, it was performed not far from Aſhby de la Zouch. Maſter Cleiveland [11] of Cambridge, the contriver of that bold and licentiate pamphlet, called, 'The Character of the Perfect Diurnal,' is brought up to London, to anſwer for his libeling: you will ſhortly read a Character upon the Characterer [12]."

Feb. 15, by an ordinance for maintaining an army under the command of ſir Thomas Temple, the monthly ſum of £250. was to be collected in Leiceſterſhire [13]; and the following Committee was appointed for putting the ordinance into execution: Thomas lord Grey, Theophilus Grey, ſir Edward Hartopp ſenior, ſir Arthur Heſilrige, ſir George Villiers, baronets; ſir Martin Liſter, ſir Thomas Hartopp, ſir Roger Smith; William Quarles, John St. John, Thomas Babington, Peter Temple[1], Arthur Staveley, Henry Smith, Thomas Heſilrige, William Hewett, William Nowell, Francis Hacker, Thomas Beaumont, William Danvers, Thomas Cotton, John Stafford, Thomas Pochin, William Sherman, and Thomas Goddard, eſquires; John Goodman, John Swinfield, and Francis Smalley, gentlemen; William Stanley, Richard Ludlam, and Edmund Cradock, aldermen[2].

---

[1] London Poſt, Nov. 26.
[2] Perfect Occurrences of Parliament, Nov. 22—29.
[3] Journals of the Commons, vol. III. p. 701.
[4] Perfect Occurrences of Parliament, Nov. 25—Dec. 2.
[5] Harl. MSS. 3881. p. 66.
[6] Perfect Diurnal, Dec. 31.
[7] London Poſt, Dec. 31.
[8] Journals of the Commons, vol. IV. p. 24.
[9] See a liſt of the officers then in that garriſon, vol. II. p. 52.
[10] Whitlock, p. 124.
[11] The famous poet; of whom a portrait, with ſome memoirs, will be found hereafter under Hinckley.
[12] London Poſt, Feb. 4, 1644-5.
[13] Journals of the Lords, vol. VII. p. 204.

By another ordinance, Feb. 20, the monthly ſum of 273*l.* 15*s.* 6*d.* was to be raiſed in this county, by nearly the ſame Committee, for the Scots' army[3].

Feb. 25, "Between Harborough and Leiceſter, a ſkirmiſh happened betwixt a party of the King's forces, commanded by ſir Marmaduke Langdale, an eminent commander for his Majeſty in the North, and a party of the Parliament's forces. The latter loſt about 100 men killed, and 250 taken priſoners; beſides a conſiderable number of horſes. The victors lay in Leiceſter that night, and there received orders to collect a ſufficient force, and proceed to the relief of Newark, then beſieged by the Parliament's forces; but, on their paſſage thither, they were attacked by a party of the enemy, commanded by colonel Roſſiter, near Melton Mowbray, where they had a ſharp encounter, and loſs on both ſides. Of Langdale's party were ſlain colonel Tuke, major Kertlington, captain Markham, and about 100 others; of Roſſiter's about 50, but no officer. He loſt one colour, and took two. Langdale got proviſions into Newark, and was recruited to 3000, and Roſſiter followed him with 2000[4]."

Two different relations of this encounter, ſomewhat more circumſtantial than the above, have been already given under Belvoir[5]; to which we now ſubjoin the following narrative from an officer who was in the king's ſervice, and was himſelf in this engagement.

"Between Harborough and Leiceſter, we met with a party of 800 dragoons of the Parliament forces. They found themſelves too few to attack; and therefore, to avoid us, had got into a ſmall wood; but, perceiving themſelves diſcovered, came boldly out, and placed themſelves at the entrance of a lane, lining both ſides of the hedges with their ſhot. We immediately attacked, and beat them from the hedges into the wood, and out of it, and forced them at laſt to a downright run-away, on foot, among the incloſures, where we could not follow them, killed about 100, and took 250 priſoners, with all their horſes, and came that night to Leiceſter."

[Afterwards follows an order to relieve Newark.]

"Accordingly we received the ammunition and proviſion, and away we went for Newark. About Melton Mowbray, colonel Roſſiter ſet upon us with above 3000 men; we were about 2500 horſe, and 800 dragoons. We had ſome foot, but they were ſtill at Harborough, and were ordered to come after us. Roſſiter, like a brave officer as he was, charged us with great fury, and rather out-did us in number, while we defended ourſelves with all the eagerneſs we could, and withal gave him to underſtand we were not ſo ſoon to be beaten as he expected. While the fight continued doubtful, eſpecially on our ſide, our people, who had charge of the carriages and proviſions, began to incloſe our flanks with them, as if we had been marching, which, though it was done without orders, had two very good effects, and which did us extraordinary ſervice. Firſt, it ſecured us from being charged in the flank, which Roſſiter had twice attempted; and, ſecondly, it ſecured our carriages from being plundered, which had ſpoiled our expedition. Being thus incloſed, we fought with great ſecurity; and though Roſſiter made three deſperate charges upon us, he could never break us: our men received him with ſo much courage, and kept their order ſo well, that the enemy, finding it impoſſible to force us, gave over, and left us to purſue our orders. We did not offer to chace them, but contented enough to have repulſed and beaten them off, and, our buſineſs being to relieve Newark, we proceeded. If we are to reckon by the enemy's uſual method, we got the victory, and had the pillage of their dead; but otherwiſe, neither ſide had any great cauſe to boaſt. We loſt about 150 men, and near as many hurt: they left 170 on the ſpot, and carried off ſome. How many they had wounded we could not tell. We got 70 or 80 horſe, which helped to remount ſome of our men that had loſt theirs in the fight. We had, however, this diſadvantage, that we were to march on immediately after this ſervice; the enemy only to retire to their quarters, which was but hard-by. This was an injury to our wounded men, whom we were after obliged to leave at Belvoir Caſtle, and from thence we advanced to Newark[6]."

About the ſame time, a party of Royaliſts from Aſhby attacked Cole Orton, intending to have ſurprized and plundered the town; but, in the attempt, loſt 70 or 80 of their horſe[7].

March 17, the following names were added to the Committee for Leiceſterſhire: Sir Edward Hartopp, knt. Mr. Thomas Beaumont, Mr. William Quarles, Mr. Thomas Goddard, Mr. Thomas Cotton, Mr. William Sherman, Mr. William Danvers[8].

March 18. Captain Farmer gave teſtimony againſt Muckle John the King's jeſter (who hath been ſome time in London), that he ſaw him in arms with the Queen's ſoldiers in a ſkirmiſh with ſome of Leiceſter forces; and that, after the ſkirmiſh, he came after one of Captain Farmer's men, and ſtruck him on the head, and ſlew him[9].

March 20. Letters from Derby certify a plot intended by Haſtings againſt Leiceſter, in which he wrought with ſome of the town to have it to be betrayed to him; but (thanks to God!) the plot is diſcovered, and divers of the complotters are in cuſtody, and like to ſuffer[10].

Copy of a letter ſent to Lord Grey.

"My Lord; Being arrived at this place, which, by reaſon of your public and private intereſt in it, lays claim to your utmoſt endeavours for the preſervation of it; I ſhall make bold to preſent your Lordſhip with the weak condition it is in, moſt obvious to the unobſerving eye. By all men's account, there are not above 200 ſoldiers in the town, and thoſe as peremptory againſt diſcipline, as their governors are ignorant of it. I am moſt confident, nay, durſt hazard my life and fortune upon it, that 500 reſolute well-managed ſoldiers at any time might one day make themſelves maſters of this town, which if loſt will take away all commerce from all the North-weſt of England; and I can aſſure you, 'tis God's

---

[1] Of Peter Temple (noticed in p. 33) Heath ſays, "he was formerly a linen-draper's apprentice in Friday-ſtreet; but, his elder brother dying, forſook his trade, and was poſſeſſed of £400. a year in Leiceſterſhire; was a Recruit-choſen burgeſs for that county town, as colleague to ſir Arthur Heſilrige; made a captain of horſe, and a great committee man; but of very weak parts, and eaſy to be led where the hopes and promiſes of profit guided him: yet got nothing (though a conſtant Ramper) being fooled by Oliver into the ſnare, as he hath often confeſſed it." Heath's Chronicle, p. 200; among thoſe of the King's judges who were in the priſon in the Tower of London, or elſewhere, under ſentence of death.

[2] Journals of the Lords, vol. VII. p. 207.

[3] Ibid. p. 224.—The names omitted were, ſir George Villiers, bart. Thomas Beaumont, William Danvers, Thomas Cotton, John Stafford, Thomas Pochin, William Sherman, and Thomas Goddard, eſqrs.

[4] Whitlock, p. 130.

[5] See vol. II. p. 29. See alſo Heath's Chronicle, p. 72; and Mercurius Ruſticus, Feb. 25, 1644-5.

[6] From "The Hiſtory of the Civil Wars in Germany from 1630 to 1635: alſo Genuine Memoirs of the Wars of England in the unhappy Reign of King Charles the Firſt. Written by a Shropſhire Gentleman, who perſonally ſerved under the King of Sweden in Germany; and on the Royal Side during the unhappy Conteſts in England. Newark, printed by James Tomlinſon, for the Publiſher, in 1782," pp. 307—310.

[7] See vol. II. p. 53.

[8] Journals of the Lords, vol. VII. p. 276.

[9] Preſent Occurrences, 12th week, 1645.

[10] Preſent Paſſages of each day's Proceedings in Parliament, p. 171.

Providence alone in keeping it from the enemy's knowledge, and ſuppreſſing their courage, that is this town's defence; but, when we neglect to ſerve God in his Providence, by the adhibition of ſecond means, 'tis juſt with God to leave us to our own ſtrength, which is nothing but weakneſs. The grand matters, moſt ſenſible of danger, and careful of their own ſecurity, have all of them houſes in a place of this town called the Newark, where they are fortifying themſelves as ſtrong as may be; which will prove, as I fear, of moſt dangerous conſequence; for, I perceive the townſmen much diſcontented, conceiving themſelves deſtined by the Committee for the enemy's mercy. I aſſure you, my Lord, I eſpy diſcontent diſperſing itſelf very faſt abroad in this town; and, if your Lordſhip's care prevent not, I expect very ſhortly to hear ill news from this place. Pardon my boldneſs, excuſe my haſte, and accept of my profeſſion of being, my Lord, your Lordſhip's moſt humble ſervant, Leiceſter, April 12, 1645. G. Booth."

"A copy of a letter from the Committee of Leiceſter to the Committee of both kingdoms.

Leiceſter, May 1, 1645.

"Right Honourable; We received your Lordſhips' letter, of the 25th of April laſt, about our fortifications; wherein we ſhall ſubmit to your Lordſhips' direction. We never had the leaſt thought to deſert the town, or any part of it; but have fortified, and ſtill proceed to fortify, all our out-works, and have of late much amended them; and never had farther thoughts in fortifying the Newark, than for a reſerve in time of abſolute neceſſity, and a more ſafety for our magazine, it being a place very eaſily made a very ſtrong place. Our greateſt want is of ordnance and arms; and therefore we humbly deſire your Lordſhips they may be ſpeedily ſent to us by this bearer, Commiſſary Blunt; and that he may have your Lordſhips' warrants to charge carts, waggons, and horſes, for bringing the ſame hither, giving reaſonable pay for it. We take leave, and are, my Lords,

Your Lordſhips' moſt humble ſervants,
Thomas Hesilrige. Edmund Cradock.
John Brown. Valentine Goodman.
Francis Smalley. John Swinfen."
William Stanley.

May 21. Ordered, that Mr. Francis Blithe, ſolicitor of Sequeſtrations in this county, employ 16 men as agents under him for gathering propoſition and ſequeſtration moneys, &c.; and they are to receive 13*s*. 4*d*. weekly each for pay [1].

"On Saturday, May 24, his Majeſty was at Loughborough in the county of Leiceſter, and ſome of his forces at Aſhby de la Zouch.—On Wedneſday laſt, the 28th, the King ſummoned Leiceſter; and this day were ſeveral reports. Some ſay that he intended to ſtorm it; and others affirmed that his Majeſty was on his march towards Newark, and that ſome diſcontented perſons in Yorkſhire are in a neutral conjunction [2]."

"May 30, his Majeſty's army ſat down before Leiceſter; and the morrow-morning early took it by ſtorm, and in it the whole Committee, ſir Robert Pye, and many hundred priſoners, many horſes, much powder, arms, and ordnance, and great ſtore of wealth. The ſame day the rebels quitted their ſeveral garriſons of Bagworth, Cole Orton, Kirkby Beler, and Burley [3]."

"On Sunday, May 25, the King dined at Tutbury, lord Loughborough's; on the 27th he was at Aſhby de la Zouch, the earl of Huntingdon's; on the 28th, at Cotes, ſir Harry Skipwith's; and on the 29th remarched to Aylſtone [4] near Leiceſter, which we faced with ſoldiers. The R. defaced with fire. Saturday, the laſt, to Leiceſter, which was taken by his Majeſty at two; many ſoldiers rewarded with plunder; the ſlain equal on both ſides. The counteſs of Devonſhire's we demoliſhed with fire [5]."

"The King's forces, having made their batteries, ſtormed Leiceſter; thoſe within made ſtout reſiſtance; but ſome of them betrayed one of the gates; the women of the town laboured in making up the breaches, and in great danger. The King's forces, having entered the town, had a hot encounter in the market-place; and many of them were ſlain by ſhot out of the windows; that they gave no quarter, but hanged ſome of the committee, and cut others to pieces. Some letters ſay that the kennels ran down with blood; that colonel Grey the governor, and captain Hacker, were wounded and taken priſoners, and very many of the garriſon put to the ſword, and the town miſerably plundered. The King entered the town on Sunday, June 1; and ſent part of his forces into Derbyſhire [6]."

Humphrey Brown, of Whiſſundine, in the county of Rutland, on the trial of the King, ſwore, "That at ſuch time as the town of Leiceſter was taken by the forces of Charles the Firſt, being in or about June 1645, Newark fort, in Leiceſter, was ſurrendered to the King, upon condition, that neither cloaths nor money ſhould be taken from any of the garriſon, which had ſurrendered; nor any violence ſhould be offered to them; and that, as ſoon as the fort was upon ſuch conſideration ſo ſurrendered, the King's ſoldiers, contrary to the articles, fell upon the ſoldiers of the fort; did ſtrip and wound many of them: whereupon one of the King's officers rebuking ſome of thoſe ſoldiers, this deponent did hear the King ſay, 'I do not care if they cut them more, for they are mine enemies;' or words to ſuch effect. And that the King was on horſe-back, in bright armour, in the ſaid town of Leiceſter [7]."

"After prince Rupert had ſummoned Leiceſter, wherein he offered quarter to the town, the committee of that county, then reſident there, aſſembled all the commanders, and read the ſummons unto them; by whom it was reſolved to give anſwer next morning. The trumpet was no ſooner returned, but a drum was preſently diſpatched for a full anſwer within an hour; which while they debated beyond their ſtint, the king's guns played from the battery, and all ſoldiers were commanded to their reſpective poſts; the great and ſmall ſhot never intermitting that day and night; when next morning they ſtormed at ſix or ſeven places. At Newark-breach they entered firſt, where colonel St. George was ſlain with a great ſhot, in a bravery and gallantry of courage, venturing upon the mouth of the cannon. The works being ſeized, there yet remained a work of greater bloodſhed, the Market-place, where the defendants had drawn up their artillery, and for three hours ſpace maintained the fight at the croſs therein. They were at laſt over-powered; the committee-men, with ſir Robert Pye, colonel Hacker, and colonel Grey, taken priſoners, and put into cuſtody; only ſir Robert had ſome more reſpect ſhewed him. The town was plundered, and ſome of the inhabitants for the preſent ſecured; the ſpoil part of it carried away to the King's adjacent garriſons of Newark, Aſhby de la Zouch, and Belvoir. All men upon this ſucceſs looked upon the King's army as far the more puiſſant. Great fears and diſtruſts were ariſen in the Parliament itſelf, not much different from deſpair; ſeveral members being over-heard to ſay, in their paſſage to the Houſe out of Weſtminſter-hall, that there was no hopes but in the King's mercy, and that the ſpeedieſt recourſe thereto would be the ſafeſt expedient for them [8]."

---

[1] Carte's MS. from two MSS. concerning the Proceedings of the Leiceſterſhire Committee of Sequeſtrators and others in 1645 and 1646, one of them in the poſſeſſion of Mr. Edmond Hood.

[2] Mercurius Veridicus, May 31.

[3] Mercurius Ruſticus.

[4] Dr. Stukeley ſays that Charles I, when beſieging Leiceſter, lay at the vicarage-houſe at Aylſtone, and during the ſtorm of the town, when his men took and pillaged it, he ſtood, as they report, upon the banks of the Rawdykes. Itin. Cur. vol. I. p. 104. I remember, a few years ago, an old midwife, dame Sporton, of the pariſh of All Saints, told me, that a Mr. Bent, of the Caſtle-mill in St. Mary's pariſh here, was a chief gunner when Charles I. beſieged Leiceſter, and levelled a canon at the royal tent, and ſtruck off the king's hat; and a tradition in my mother's family informs me, that king Charles, during the ſtorm, frequently repeated, "Dear and loving ſubjects, cry Quarters; dear and loving ſubjects, obey!" W. B.

[5] Iter Carolinum, Gutch, vol. II. p. 441. Burnt timber is viſible at this day in the front walls.

[6] Whitlock, p. 143.

[7] Nalſon's True Copy of the Journal of the High Court of Juſtice, &c. p. 92.

[8] Heath's Chronicle, p. 78.

"Whilſt his Majeſty's army was buſied at Leiceſter, ſir Thomas Fairfax (the rebels' new general) lay ſome 15 days blocking up of Oxford, though fruitleſsly; for, by ſeveral ſallies thence, he loſt many of his men, ſome killed, others taken priſoners, and not a ſmall number running away, ſo that he raiſed his ſiege thence the beginning of June; and on the 4th, aſſaulted Borſtall-houſe, commanded by ſir William Campian for his Majeſty; but was beaten off with the loſs of 300 of his men, the brave garriſon loſing but one man, and four hurt [1]."

A MS. by Mr. R. Simmonds [2], who is ſuppoſed to have been a quarter-maſter in the King's army, preſerves the following curious memoranda, under the title of > "The marchings and movings and actions of the Royal army, his Majeſty being perſonally preſent, from his coming out of his winter-quarters at Oxford, to the end of Auguſt following.

Thurſday, April 24, 1645, Cromwell's horſe and dragoons ruined ſome of our horſe, then quartered about Iſlip, of the lord of Northampton's command; 31 buried at Iſlip; 18 men buried in [Hampton Poyle], over againſt Kidlington; and this day they demanded the delivery up of Blechindon, a houſe belonging to ſir Thomas Coghill, wherein colonel Windebanke had 200 foot, ſans works and proviſion only for two or three days. This afternoon one of Oxford troops kept the bridge of Goſſard; at night came ſome commanded foot out of Oxford; whither alſo colonel Palmer's regiment of horſe.

About two or three of the clock on Friday morning the colonel valiantly gave up the houſe and all his arms, &c. beſides 50 horſe that came in thither for ſhelter, and this without a ſhot. Friday in the after noon he was condemned by a council of war to die; and thoſe that were his counſellors and adviſers, viz. lieutenant-colonel Hutchinſon, major Earnley, Mr. Eedes, were diſabled from ever bearing arms more.

Saturday morning, Wallingford troop came to Oxford, to relieve the lord of Northampton, &c. Some horſe and foot came from Farringdon, from colonel Liſle's garriſon; and all the horſe in Oxford were to be drawn out (and many horſes were this day plundered upon that pretence). When we had drawn out and marched, news came that the enemy was gone. We returned to our ſeveral quarters. At ſeven of the clock the Queen's troop of life guard was beat up, and 60 horſes taken; but ſix men.

On Sunday the 26th, the enemy purſued Liſle's men, and took and killed near 200 of them. This afternoon alſo many foot and horſe were drawn out of Oxford.

Saturday, May 3, colonel Windebanke was ſhot to death, after he was reprieved from Wedneſday before. This Saturday Cromwell's forces removed from before Farringdon; elſe, if they had ſtayed, Prince Rupert and general Goring had fallen upon them. They were twice repulſed by Farringdon men, with great loſs to them.

May 4, Prince Rupert and Prince Maurice came to Oxford. General Goring came on Monday.

May 7, his Majeſty left Oxford, attended with Prince Rupert, Prince Maurice, the earl of Lindſey, the duke of Richmond, and the earl of Northampton. His troop and the Queen's lay that night at Woodſtock.

Thurſday, May 8. This morning at one of the clock an alarm waked us; and at day-break the King marched with his four pieces of cannon, eight boats in carriages, &c. viz. all manner of ammunition, his troop of life-guards and foot regiment, the earl of Northampton's regiment of horſe, ſir Thomas Daliſon's regiment of horſe, and part of the regiment of life-guards, in the van; ammunition, &c. next; then his Majeſty and the earl of Northampton in the rear. Near Stow on the Would we joined with Prince Rupert's army of horſe and foot, 18 miles. The King quartered at Stow on the Would. This morning general Goring took 40 of Cromwell's horſe priſoners and two colonels near Burton; which news ſaluted us in Woodſtock Park. News that ſir Thomas Fairfax was marched with all his body to relieve Taunton.

Friday, May 9, his Majeſty marched to Eveſham, where he joined with the lord Aſtley's foot, conſiſting of 3300. In the Prince's place was Prince Rupert's regiment of foot, conſiſting of 500; and 10 of theſe colonels.

This day general Goring marched into the Weſt with 3000 horſe, 300 foot taken out of our garriſon of Campden, and the houſe (which was ſo fair) burnt.

The King's troops quartered at Child's Wickham in Glouceſterſhire, three miles from Eveſham.

Langdale's horſe, which we met at Stow,	2500
Life guards, — —	800
This day we marched in foot:
King's life guards, — —	200
Colonel Liſle's foot — —	500
Bard's regiment, — —	300
Prince Rupert's, which we met at Stow,	1000
Lord Aſtley's, — —	3300
Total	5300

Saturday, May 10, the King quartered at Inckburrough Magna, co. Wigorn. nine miles from Worceſter. This night an outhouſe where ſir Henry Bard quartered was burnt, and 15 horſes of his.

Sunday, May 11, the King marched to the rendezvous of the whole army of foot, &c. His Majeſty, with his own regiments of foot and horſe guards only, marched to Salte Wiche, co. Wigorn. The head quarters of the King this night were at Bromſgrove.

His Majeſty ſtayed at Droitwich till Wedneſday. In this time his highneſs Prince Rupert ſat down before Hawkeſley houſe; one Mr. Middlemore owns it. Lord Aſtley's Tertia of foot made the approaches (which were left for us with a great deal of advantage); viz. banks, and a lane of trees.

Captain Backſter, lieutenant of horſe, was killed here, and ſome foot ſoldiers and pioneers.

On Wedneſday, about two of the clock in the afternoon, the King left Wiche, and went with his guards to the leaguer before Hawkeſley: and, juſt as his Majeſty appeared in view, it was delivered unto the mercy of the King and the officers, that they might be free from the inſolence of the common ſoldiers. In this houſe was a month's proviſion and ammunition; but the ſoldiers would not fight when they perceived it was the King's army.

. Gouge, ſon to Dr. Gouge, was the captain of foot and governor; and Whichcott commanded the horſe; 60 foot and above 40 horſe.

After lord Aſteley had the pillage of the houſe, and the ſoldiers priſoners, the houſe was ſet on fire.

This night the King lay at Coſton hall, two miles off; and theſe colonels and governors were with his Majeſty: colonel Scudamore, governor of Hereford; colonel Leveſon, governor of Dudley caſtle, co. Stafford; colonel Michael Woodhouſe, governor of Ludlow.

Earl of Shrewſbury's houſe, called Grafton, is within a mile of Bromſgrove, co. Wigorn. The troops of the life-guard quartered this night at . . . . .

Thurſday, at four in the morning, the King's army met near this houſe; the works ſlighting. We marched from four in the morning till ſix, ſans reſt.

This night the King lay at Hombley hall, co. Stafford, where now the lord Ward lives, who is ſon to Mr. William Ward, ſometime goldſmith of London, which ſon married lady Dudley; an old houſe, moated.

Friday, May 16, the rendezvous was near the King's quarters; began after four of the clock in the morning there. One ſoldier was hanged for mutiny. The King lay at Biſbury, a private ſweet village, where ſquire Gravenor (as they call him) lived; which name hath continued here 120 years. Before him lived Biſbury of Biſbury.

The Prince's head quarters were at Wolverhampton, a garriſon town; one fine church in it.

Saturday, May 17, his Majeſty marched by Tong, co. Salop; a fair church, the windows many broken, and yet divers antient coats of arms remain. A fair old caſtle near this church, called Tong caſtle, belonging to Pierpoint theſe 18 years. It was the antient ſeat of Stanley, who came to it by marrying Vernon of the Peak at Haddon. Thence through Newport. His Majeſty lay at Mr. Pigott's at Chetwyn, one mile beyond Newport. In the parlour window of this pretty houſe are painted many coats of arms.

---

[1] Mercurius Ruſticus.

[2] Harl. MSS. 911.

The two troops lay at Egymonde. Mr. Corbett is lord of this manor; worth £300. per annum.

At Longford, the pariſh adjoining and near Newport, the earl of Shrewſbury has a large brick houſe and ſeat ſpoiled and abuſed; a garriſon of the rebels 1644; delivered up to Prince Rupert.

Colonel Bagot, the governor of Lichfield, joined with the King's army, 300 foot and 200 horſe.

Tueſday, May 20, his Majeſty, with his army, removed from Chetwyn through Drayton, co. Salop; and lay a mile farther Eaſt of Lichfield at Norton, at a houſe ſome time the habitation of Groſvenor, now Cotton's. This Groſvenor built it in the reign of queen Mary. In a chamber window are ſome fine paintings.

The King lay at Church's houſe in Drayton pariſh.

Wedneſday, the army reſted; for ſir Marmaduke Langdale, the major-general, was ſent the night before with a party of horſe and foot, to ſurprize Wemme, which then had but 150 men in it; but, coming too late, failed.

Thurſday, May 22, we marched from Drayton to Stone, co. Stafford. His Majeſty lay at Mr. Crompton's houſe, a ſweet place, in a fine park; the maſter a rebel.

Friday, May 28, the army reſted.

Saturday, May 24, we marched this day through a park belonging to lord Cromwell; then by a houſe of ſir Harvey Bagot's in the Moorlands in Staffordſhire; a woody incloſed country all the way, except the moors on the top of the hills; a black earth, where they dig and cut a heathy turf; to Uttoxeter, a rebellious place. His Majeſty lay at ſir Thomas Milward's houſe at Eaton, co. Derby. The earl of Lichfield, &c. quartered at Marſton, near Cubley.

This day a foot ſoldier was tied (ſecundum uſum Hiſpaniarum), with his ſhoulders and breaſt naked, to a tree; and every carter of the train and carriages was to have a laſh; for raviſhing two women.

Whitſunday, May 25, the army marched to Burton upon Trent, the head-quarters. His Majeſty lay at Tutbury caſtle, under the command of lord Loughborough; ſir Andrew Kniveton governor.

We lay at Rolleſton in Staffordſhire. The Rolleſtons lived here (till of late) time out of mind; Rolleſton had £400. per annum. Sir Edward Moſeley bought it of Rolleſton.

Monday, May 26, the army reſted. Some of Derby's horſe gave colonel Cary's quarters an alarm.

Tueſday, May 27, his Majeſty marched to Aſhby de la Zouch, the head-garriſon of the lord Loughborough; the earl of Lichfield to Packington. In this march this day we marched near Shelford, co. Nottingham, a fair ſeat of the earl of Cheſterfield.

Wedneſday, May 28. His Majeſty marched with his army into Cole Orton, a garriſon of the enemy's; then by the abbey of Gracedieu, where ſir Thomas Beaumont lives. There remains an entire court of cloiſters, hall, &c.

His Majeſty lay this night at ſir Henry Skipwith's houſe, called Cotes, in the pariſh of Preſtwould.

The head-quarters were at Loughborough.

Ajourdhui avec T. T. News this day that Eveſham was loſt. Sir Richard Waller and colonel Villers, governor of Newark, came from thence with 1200 horſe.

Thurſday, May 29, his Majeſty marched and pitched down before Leiceſter city, a garriſon[1] of the rebels, commanded by Theophilus Grey, third brother to the earl of Kent.

Friday, May 30, his highneſs Prince Rupert ſent a trumpet (after he had ſhot two great pieces at the town), to ſummon it for his Majeſty, offering the burgers and corporation pardon, &c. They detained his trumpet till about one of the clock in the afternoon. In this interim the Prince raiſed a battery for ſix great pieces upon a hill, where ſome time of old had been ſuch another[2]. About 2 of the clock one of the Leiceſter trumpets was ſent, to deſire time to conſider of it till the morrow-morning; and that he would not raiſe any works during this parley. His Highneſs told the trumpeter, if he came again with ſuch another errand, he would lay him by the heels. About half an hour after he comes again with a note directed thus: 'To the Commander in Chief; deſiring time to conſider till the morrow-morning.' The Prince commits the trumpet to his marſhal. Still the firſt trumpet they keep. Then the Prince, about 3 of the clock, ſent them an anſwer in louder terms; ſix great pieces from the fort on the South ſide of the town, playing on a ſtone wall[3], vulnyed, and made ere 6 of the clock a breach of great ſpace, muſkets and cannon continually putting us in mind of ſomething done.

After the breach was made in the wall by the cannon, by 6 o'clock, they in the town had gotten up a handſome retrenchment with three flankers (a great Spaniſh piece) within 4 or 5 yards of the wall. All the evening was a general preparation to aſſault the town; and a little after 12 of the clock in the night this violent ſtorm began, and continued till after one.

Col. George Liſle's Tertia fell on upon the breach, and were beat off; and the King ſent his foot regiment of life-guards to aſſiſt, but they got fully in before.

Col. Bard's Tertia fell on with ſcaling-ladders; ſome near a flanker, and others ſcaled the horn-work before the drawbridge on the Eaſt ſide.

Sir Barnard Aſtley's Tertia fell on the North ſide, which is the river ſide, and a draw next the Abbey.

Col. John Ruſſel, with the Prince's regiment, the blue coats, and alſo the Prince's fire-locks, aſſaulted. They ſet up the Prince's black colours on the great battery, where the earl of Northampton's horſe about one of the clock were let in at the ports, and they ſcowered the line and town; in the mean time the foot got in, and fell to plunder, ſo that ere day fully opened ſcarcely a cottage was unplundered.

There were many Scots in this town, and no quarter was given to any in the heat. More dead bodies lay juſt within the line far than without or in the Graff. I told 30 and more at the breach, as many within as without. Every ſtreet had ſome. I believe 200 on both ſides were not killed. We loſt colonel St. George; Major Bunnington (gentleman penſioner, major of Prince Rupert's firelocks) ſhot in the eye juſt as he was at the top of the ladder; 28 or 30 officers.

His Majeſty quartered this Friday night at Leiceſter abbey, the counteſs of Devon's houſe.

The army of horſe faced in bodies all night in ſeveral places. About day-break about 10 of the enemy got out, and eſcaped by the river ſide, and were followed.

The town of Leiceſter was chiefly governed by a Committee; viz. Mr. Hewett of Dunton, Mr. Heſilrige, Ludlam[4] a chandler there, Mr. Payne of Medbourne, Newton of Houghton, a receiver, ſometime high conſtable, Read of Thirlby, Mr. Lewyn, and Stanley, a mercer there by the Weſt gate.

Sir Thomas Pye of Farringdon came two or three days before into the town, and was a great means of reſiſting the Prince.

The king's army of horſe was in this order before Leiceſter.

The King's life-guard, conſiſting of two troops, the King's and Queen's.

His Highneſs Prince Rupert's life-guard of horſe, the horſe commanded by ſir Robert Crane.

His Highneſs Prince Maurice's life-guard; the horſe, conſiſting of about 100 gentlemen and reformadoes, commanded by the lord Molineux.

Prince Rupert's regiment of horſe, conſiſting of 400; eight troops; commanded by ſir Thomas Dalyſon.

Lieut. col. Will. Legge, now governor of Oxford.

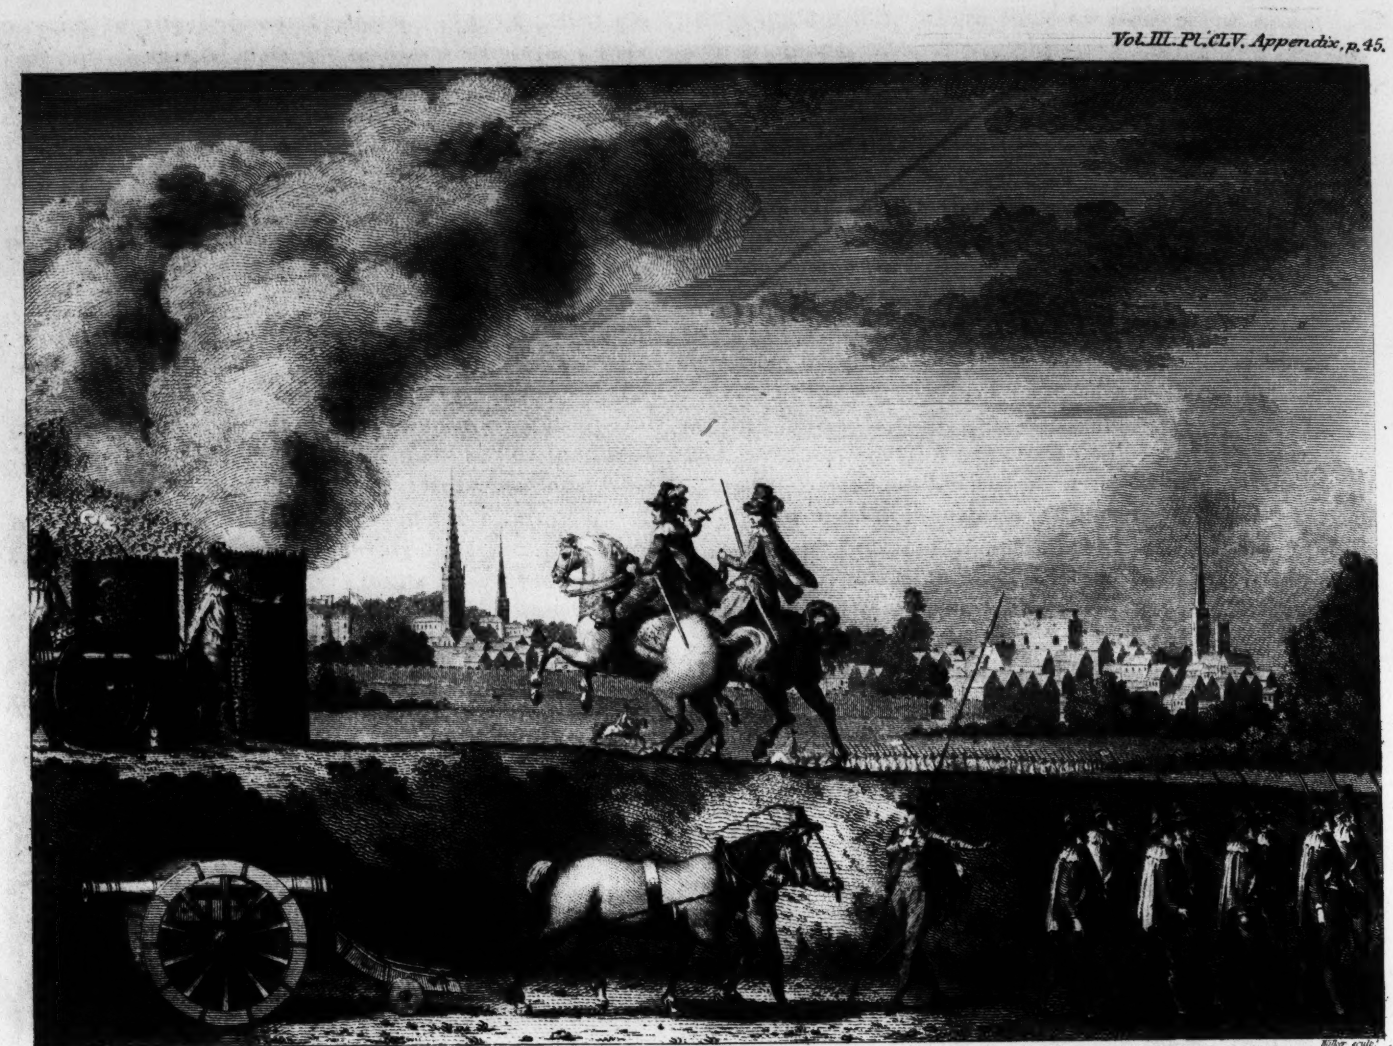
[1] Mr. Simmonds ſtates this garriſon to be 600 men, the ſame as at Aſhby de la Zouch; yet we are to ſuppoſe that before the ſiege conſiderable ſuccours were thrown into the town, excluſive of the inhabitants who zealouſly aſſiſted in its defence.

[2] Rawdikes.

[3] The ſtone wall is that leading to the Swans Mill.

[4] Richard Ludlam, mayor of Leiceſter in 1643, and again 1645.

Vol.III. Pl.CLV. Appendix, p.45.



Throsby pinxt

Walker sculpt

PRINCE RUPERT summoning the Garrison of LEICESTER to surrender to the Army of CHARLES the first. May 30th 1645.

LEICESTER and its ABBEY.

Lord Loughborough's regiment of blue coats; three troops; 100.

Col. Horatio Cary's regiment, not 200; independent.

The body of horſe was divided into four brigades, two Southern, and two Northern horſe.

James earl of Northampton, conſiſting of theſe four regiments:

Queen's regiment, commanded by ſir John Campfield, 150.

Prince Maurice's regiment, commanded by lieutenant colonel Guy Moulſworth, 150.

Earl of Northampton's own regiment, 250.

Sir William Vaughan's regiment (it was ſir Thomas Lucas's regiment in Ireland) conſiſting of ſeven troops, 400 in all.

Colonel Thomas Howard's brigade, conſiſting of theſe ſeven regiments.

Colonel Samuel Sandys of Worceſterſhire, governor of Worceſter; conſiſting of 150.

Colonel Thomas Howard, 80.

Colonel Leveſon, governor of Dudley Caſtle, 150.

Colonel Bagot, governor of Lichfield, 200.

Sir Robert Byron, 100.

Sir Henry Bard, governor of Campden-houſe, 100; commanded by Barker.

Colonel Worthe's (were col. Marrowe's firſt) 100.

Total of this brigade 880.

Major general ſir Marmaduke Langdale's brigade, divided into three diviſions.

Sir William Blackſtone's brigade, and ſo is the Northern horſe, divided into two brigades.

Total 1500.

Sir Richard Wylles's horſe from Newark, 1200.

Summa totalis of the whole army of horſe:

King and Queen's troops — —	130
Prince Rupert's — —	140
Prince Maurice's — —	120
Prince Rupert's regiment of horſe, —	400
Lord Loughborough's — —	100
Colonel Cary's — — —	200
Earl of Northampton's brigade —	850
Colonel Howard's brigade — —	880
Sir Marmaduke Langdale's and ſir William Blackſtone's brigades, — —	1500
Sir Richard Wellys's — —	1200
	5520

The names and places of dwellings of the chief families in Leiceſterſhire.

[1] K. E. of Huntingdon; lives at Aſhby.

K. Sir Henry Haſtings, of Braunſton, near Leiceſter.

R. Lord Beaumont, of Cole Overton.

Sir Henry Haſtings, bart. of Humberſton; lives private.

K. Henry Haſtings, baron of Loughborough.

R. Sir Henry Beaumont, of Stoughton.

K. Sir Thomas Beaumont, of Gracedieu.

K. Sir John Skevington, of Skevington.

Sir Richard Hawford, of Wiſtow; at London.

K. Sir John Bale, of Carleton; with the lord Loughborough.

R. Sir Arthur Heſilrige, of Noſeley; knight of the ſhire.

R. Henry Grey, earl of Stamford; of Bradgate, 3 miles from Leiceſter.

K. Mr. Henry Nevill, of Holt, near Hallaton; two ſons with lord Loughbrough.

K. Sir John Pate; near Melton.

K. Sir Hen. Skipwith, of Cotes.

R. Sir Wm. Herrick; ſhe R.

R. Mr. George Purefoy, of Fenny Drayton.

R. Mr. Cotton, of Laughton; great with the earl of Stamford.

R. Mr. William Bent, of Enderby.

R. Thomas lord Grey of Groby.

R. Mr. Sharpe, of Rolleſton, near Hallaton; cœlebs.

R. Mr. Archdale Palmer, of Wanlip; high ſheriff the firſt year the Parliament began; whom the lord Loughborough ſucceeded.

K. Sir George Villiers, of Brokeſby.

Sir Richard Roberts, of Thorp Langton.

"Garriſons in the county of Leiceſter.

Leiceſter, the county of Rebel governors.

R. Leiceſter. Theophilus Grey, third brother to the earl of Kent, writes governor; 600 men.

K. Aſhby de la Zouch. Henry Haſtings, baron of Loughborough, governor; the ancient ſeat of Haſtings earl of Huntingdon; 600 men.

R. Cole Overton, a houſe of the lord Beaumont's, one mile from Aſhby; Temple governor; 50 men.

R. Bagworth houſe, or a lodge in a park; the lady Manners' houſe; 5 miles from Aſhby; 50 men.

R. Kirby Belhous, a houſe belonging to ſir Eraſmus de la Fonteyne. The men ran away at the news of ſir Marmaduke Langdale; but came in again: 50 men.

To all theſe garriſons above-mentioned the yearly contribution amounted to fourſcore and ſeventeen thouſand pounds within this county of Leiceſter only. Of late Belvoir caſtle has 100 allotted to it out of this ſhire. And the whole number of men were not above 1500 in all theſe garriſons.

At the taking of Leiceſter by his Majeſty, theſe garriſons were ſlighted by themſelves:

Burley houſe, the only garriſon of Rutland.

Cole Orton. The King commanded lord Loughborough to burn it; but they got into it again.

Bagworth houſe.

Barton houſe (near Tutbury) in Derbyſhire."

"Leiceſter beſieged and plundered, on Saturday May 31. The mace and ſeals taken away by the ſoldiers[2]."

"The ſiege of Leiceſter had for its object the annoyance of ſome of the moſt forward and formidable enemies of kingly government. Men, who had brooded over the real and imaginary grievances of the ſtate, till their minds grew intoxicated with the wild reveries of reformation, liberty, and equalization; thoſe, too often, flattering dreams of perfection and proſperity. The people of this little province, early in the reign, ſhewed a ſpirit of reſtleſſneſs; even thoſe who profeſſed themſelves to be the teachers of the peaceable doctrines of Jeſus, haſtened with their appeals to the door of the Houſe of Commons, urging the members, by their heated zeal, eventually, to war and deſolation. The King, on the other hand, unwilling to loſe even a ſhadow of that prerogative which he had received from his royal anceſtors, marched with an army of determined friends towards Leiceſter, to cruſh the power which had ariſen in that place, and was become extremely injurious to his views and intereſt. There ſat the grand Committees of the Midland diſtrict; the moſt formidable then in the kingdom in aid of the ſchemes of Parliament. Its central ſituation commanded the moſt early intelligence of the movements of the little flying armies and ſcouting parties which every where abounded in its vicinity, and from whence Parliament received daily intelligence and advice in the meaſures about to be undertaken. At this time ſome of the leading men of the corporation were men of buſineſs, intrigue, and diſcernment; theſe formed a part of the committees of ſafety and intelligence, and were members of the committee for the confiſcating of the property of the King's friends. Charles, we find, by Simmonds's account, encamped in the plains or meadows near Ailſtone for two or three days preceding the ſiege; and the day before it he marched his army and ſat down before the garriſon of Leiceſter in St. Mary's field. The day was ſpent in preparing for the ſiege, and in parlies and threatenings. The night brought on the thunder and lightning of cannon, and the rattling of cannon-balls on the houſes and in the ſtreets. Towards the morning a breach was made in the out-works, where a number of its brave defenders fell. It is ſaid that, at the breach, many women fought with the moſt reſolute courage, and ſpurned at danger. The garriſon were at length drvien from the fortifications, at and near the old caſtle in the Newark, to St. Martin's church and church-yard, where they made a ſtand; but were ſoon after driven thence, from ſtreet to ſtreet, avenue to avenue, into the market-place, where a ſmall deſperate party made a feeble reſiſtance, and where moſt of them were butchered by the King's ſoldiers, owing, it has been ſaid, to the raſhneſs of the town's people, who fired from their windows upon the King's troops, who in revenge deſtroyed all they met [1]. The houſe where a remnant of the Committee were ſitting they alſo deſtroyed, and every ſoul therein was put to the ſword."

---

[1] R. ſtands for the Rebel army; K. for the King's.

[2] Corporation Records.

There is an oral tradition in Leiceſter, that ſeveral people loſt their lives in St. Martin's church-yard, where part of the garriſon had been driven by the Royaliſts. Some, it is ſaid, gained admittance into the church, and annoyed the King's forces from the battlements and leads. It appears from the following charge in the pariſh-book of that time, that the King's forces broke into the church to drive them thence. "Paid Francis Motley for mendinge the locks of the church-doors broke by the King's army 3*s*."

There is a charge in the Churchwardens accompts that year, for the payment of Wm. Haſtwell, maſon, for "Leyinge downe many graves, which weare taken up at the burienge of ſeveral great officers of the King's army, which was ſlaine at the ſtormeinge of the town." One officer was buried in St. Martin's church, who died of his wounds at the Red Lion Inn [2].

The following particulars are related by an officer, who was active with his Majeſty in the ſiege:

"The King turned Eaſtward, and marched into Leiceſterſhire; and, having treated the country but very indifferently, as having deſerved no better of us, laid ſiege to Leiceſter. This was but a ſhort ſiege; for the King, reſolving to loſe no time, fell on with his great guns, and, having beaten down their works, our foot entered after a vigorous reſiſtance, and took the town by ſtorm. There was ſome blood ſhed here, the town being carried by aſſault, though it was their own faults; for, after the town was taken, the ſoldiers and townſmen obſtinately fought us in the market-place; inſomuch, that the horſe were called to enter the town, and clear the ſtreets. But this was not all; I was commanded to advance with the horſe, being three regiments, and to enter the town; the foot, who were engaged in the ſtreets, crying out, 'horſe! horſe!' Immediately I advanced to the gate, for we were drawn up about muſket-ſhot from the works, to have ſupported our foot in caſe of a ſally. Having ſeized the gate, I placed a guard of horſe there, with orders to let nobody paſs in or out; and, dividing my troops, rode up by two ways towards the market-place; the garriſon, defending themſelves there and in the church-yard with great obſtinacy, killed us a great many men; but, as ſoon as our horſe appeared, they demanded quarter, which our foot refuſed them in the firſt heat, as is frequent in all nations in like caſes, till at laſt they threw down their arms, and yielded at diſcretion; and then I can teſtify to the world, that fair quarter was given them. I am the more particular in this relation, having been an eye-witneſs of the action, and becauſe the King was reproached in all the public libels, with which thoſe times abounded, for having put a great many to death, and hanged the Committee of the Parliament and ſome Scots in cold blood, which was a notorious forgery; and as I am ſure there was no ſuch thing done. I muſt acknowledge I never ſaw any inclination in his Majeſty to cruelty, or to act any thing which was not practiſed by the general laws of war, and by men of honour in all nations. But the matter of fact, in reſpect to the garriſon, was as I have related; and if they had thrown down their arms ſooner, they had had mercy ſooner; but it was not for a conquering army, entering a town by ſtorm, to offer conditions of quarter in the ſtreets. Another circumſtance was, that a great many of the inhabitants, both men and women, were killed, which is moſt true; and the caſe was thus. The inhabitants, to ſhew their over-forward zeal to defend the town, fought in the breach; nay, the very women, to the honour of the Leiceſter ladies (if they like it), officiouſly did their parts; and after the town was taken, and when, if they had been poſſeſſed of any diſcretion with their zeal, they would have kept their houſes and been quiet, they fired upon our men out of their windows, from the tops of houſes, and threw tiles upon their heads; ſeveral of my men being wounded ſo, and 7 or 8 killed. This exaſperated us to the laſt degree; and finding one houſe better manned than ordinary, and many ſhot fired at us out of the windows, I cauſed my men to attack it, and reſolved to make them an example for the reſt; which they did; and, breaking open the doors, they killed all they found there without diſtinction; and I appeal to the world if they were to blame. If the Parliament Committee, or the Scots' deputies were here, they ought to have been quiet, ſince the town was taken: but they began with us, and, I think, brought it upon themſelves. This is the whole caſe, ſo far as came within my knowledge, for which his Majeſty was ſo much abuſed. We took here colonel Grey and captain Hacker, about 300 priſoners, and about 300 more were killed. This was the laſt day of May, 1645 [3]."

The loſs of ſo important a garriſon was ſeverely felt; and, leading to a variety of altercations among the Parliamentarians, produced the following tracts:

> "Narration of the ſiege and taking of the town of Leiceſter, the laſt of May, 1645, by the King's forces; together with other proceedings of the Committee, and anſwers to ſome aſperſions caſt upon that Committee. Printed by G. Miller, dwelling in Black Friers, 1645 [4].

"About the 13th of May laſt, the Committee of Leiceſter, hearing that there was one Henry Purefoy at Belgrave, that had ſpoken ſome words about a deſign upon the town of Leiceſter, and that he was upon his journey to London, ſent out a party of horſe to fetch him in; and, upon examination before the Committee, he confeſſed that he had been a lieutenant in the King's army, and that he came from the King's quarters. The intelligence that he gave us was, that, being at Briſtol, and coming early in the morning into the governor the lord Hawley's chamber, the chamber being matted, and the governor himſelf in bed, and the curtains drawn, he heard the ſaid lord tell O'Neale his bedfellow [5], that he was upon a gallant deſign the laſt night for the taking of Leiceſter, which would be a buſineſs of very great conſequence; and that the gentry and townſmen invited him thither (or words to that effect); which he marvelled at, the moſt of the gentry being either gone to London, or in the King's garriſon. The Committee examined him upon particulars; but he would not give any farther information [6]. Yet, upon this intelligence, the Committee deſired the mayor to call a hall; which accordingly he did; and, there making known the information, every one of the Committee did firſt take a voluntary and ſacred oath to this effect; that they had not held any intelligence with the enemy, nor knew any that had; nor yet paid them any contribution, nor aſſiſted them with horſe, arms, or any ammunition; neither would they hold any correſpondence with them, nor contribute any thing, nor conceal any that did. Which courſe the Committee did propound, not as enabled to tender an oath in the caſe, but to let them know how needful it was to aſſure their faithfulneſs one to another in this time of common danger, and clear themſelves of that imputation laid on them. Which oath, upon the mayor's requeſt, being conceived into writing, was taken both by the 24 and 48 (being the repreſentative body of the Corporation) voluntarily, not one either ſcrupling or refuſing. We then alſo wrote up letters to the Committee of both Kingdoms of the intelligence; wherein (among other requeſts made) one ſuit was, that we might have an order to preſs 1000 men. Another humble requeſt was, to finiſh an aſſociation of divers counties, which both the Committee of Nottingham had long ſolicited by captain White, and we by Mr. Staveley one of our Committee; and alſo for cannon, which we obtained, but they came not before the town was loſt. We alſo directed to lieutenant-general Cromwell of our intelligence and condition; who wrote us word, that he was called off, by command, from proſecuting the King's army to Oxford, but had left a conſiderable body of horſe to wait upon the motions of the enemy, with whom he adviſed us to hold good intelligence in any thing that might concern the publick; which accordingly we did; and wrote to colonel Vermuyden, commander of that party (the King's army then approaching), craving his aſſiſtance. We alſo wrote to all the Committees round about us for aid, whom we never failed, upon any call, to contribute our aſſiſtance unto, viz. Northampton, Coventry, Nottingham, Derby, together with colonel Roſſiter, hoping amongſt them to have procured 500 men at leaſt; and we engaged to pay them, but could not prevail for a man. We alſo began to cut off ſome ſuperfluous works at the Horſe-fair-leys and the Friers, wherein we ſaved the guard of 150 men, and ſet on labourers to amend the other works where they were any way defective, cauſing the townſmen to ſhut up their ſhops, and calling in the country; ſo that, by the continual pains of the townſmen, women and men, they were very well made up in all places. We then debated the ſtrength of the town, and cauſed the mayor to give us in a liſt of all that were able to bear arms, from the age of 16 to 60; whereof the liſt contained about 900 townſmen, beſides thoſe that were liſted under our own captains. We alſo ſent out our commiſſary to bring down the cannon; ſir Arthur Heſilrige having ſent us word, that three pieces were granted, and commanded him to buy us 200 new muſkets; and ſir Arthur Heſilrige ſent us 70 carbines. We then diſperſed our magazine into truſty and ſure hands, in divers parts of the town, where were about 100 barrels of powder at the leaſt, and match proportionable, both which we made ourſelves. Beſides that, we furniſhed all our garriſons and divers towns in the country, to defend themſelves in their churches. In the midſt of theſe proceedings, intelligence comes unto us, that the King's army marched from Stone in Staffordſhire to Aſhby, upon Monday the 26th of May; by which ſudden coming of the King we were prevented of the aſſiſtance of our forces at Cole Orton, which were about 350 horſe and foot; they, being not able to bring off their cannon, could not come to us, the garriſon ſtanding within cannon-ſhot of Aſhby de la Zouch, for they had ſhot from Cole Orton into Aſhby town. The enemy then ſummoned Cole Orton garriſon; and General Haſtings received a peremptory denial to his demand of it; and our horſe, iſſuing out upon the rear of the King's army, took and ſlew 40 of their horſe; when we drew off 100 of our horſe from Kirby garriſon, and left (contrary to our votes) the remaining ſtrength there, which were in number about 160 foot and horſe. Our forces in the town were 240 horſe of our own, beſides officers, about 480 foot, beſides the townſmen, which were about 900 in all, about 400 whereof were liſted men; and we found not upon our entrance but about 400 foot. We had alſo ſent out our warrants into the country, to call them in; who came but ſlowly, being very malignant in moſt parts of it; many came that meant not to fight: there were not of them above 150 that were willing to take up arms. Sir Robert Pye, then being upon his paſſage towards colonel Vermuyden, was, by the ſcattering parties of the King's army forelaid, that he could not paſs. We, hearing of him, entreated his company; and he came unto us, and freely offered himſelf to do ſervice; which the Committee took ſo well, that they gave him 20 pieces. We alſo appointed, that he ſhould be an aſſiſtant to colonel Grey, and lieutenant-colonel Whitbroke, who was a valiant and well-experienced ſoldier, and worthily commended out of the Low Countries by the Parliament's agent, Mr. Strickland, to the earl of Pembroke. Major Innes alſo, with 200 horſe, quartering in the country, we retreated into the town, juſt upon the enemy's approach; to many of whoſe men we delivered carbines and muſkets, they ſo deſiring. Upon Tueſday, the enemy quartered about Loughborough and all the towns about it; we not yet knowing whether they intended for Leiceſter or Newark (for, thoſe towns where they quartered were juſt in the line of their march to either place): but upon Wedneſday they put us out of all doubt, by ſurrounding us with their horſe, and firing three windmills and one watermill. Our horſe went out and ſkirmiſhed with them, took divers priſoners, and killed others; and our cannon on all hands played roundly wherever they could find a mark within diſtance, and did good execution in our ſight; and this continued till night. The night being very light, about 10 or 11 o'clock, we eaſily diſcovered the enemy's forces to draw down, and to begin to plant a battery againſt the Newark wall; we played upon them all night abundantly from our works with our muſketeers, and cannon-ſhot from the South ſentry. In the morning, care was taken for the diſpoſing all our horſe and foot; we divided the line into two parts, it being near three miles about, and made by the right honourable the lord Grey about two years paſt; one part whereof was committed to the care of ſir Robert Pye, which was the Newark on that ſide; and the other ſide, where St. Margaret's church ſtands, and Belgrave-gate, to colonel Grey and lieutenant-colonel Whitbroke. We had alſo another old ſoldier, that had been about 30 years in foreign ſervice, who deſired of us leave to go to London, about a week before we heard any thing of the King's army approaching, upon urgent occaſion of his own, and was upon his return down as far as Northampton, but could not come through. On Thurſday at noon, a ſummons was ſent by Prince Rupert to the ſoldiery, to the townſmen, and to the countrymen; wherein quarter was offered to the whole town, and liberty to major Innes to march away the commanders, and read the ſummons unto them; and one of the Committee ſpoke theſe words: "We are a part of thoſe who have undertaken the Parliament's cauſe, a cauſe ſo high (ſaid he) as I deſire to die in no other;" and this was ſeconded by captain Hacker, captain Babington, and the reſt of the officers; only ſir Robert Pye and major Innes ſeemed to queſtion whether our numbers were ſufficient to make reſiſtance to ſuch an army; but ſoon deſiſted. And, in regard the ſummons was directed to the townſmen and others, we ſent to the mayor; who came; and the letter was read to him; and he was deſired to call a hall, and went preſently about it. In the mean time, it was reſolved, upon debate, to take the next morning to give anſwer, in caſe it could be obtained; and the reaſons were, firſt, that all to whom the ſummons was directed might unanimouſly give their reſolution, the better to unite and engage them. Another reaſon, in regard that the Newark was the place where they purpoſed to enter at, and we had begun a ſubſtantial breaſt-work within it, and it was in a good forwardneſs, but not finiſhed; the women of the town wrought at it, although the cannon bullets and ſome ſplinters of ſtones fell amongſt them, and hurt ſome of them; yet, to their exceeding commendation, they went on, and made it up, to the enemy's admiration. The next thing that fell into conſideration was, to whom to write; whether to the King, being in the ſummons intimated to be preſent; or to Prince Rupert. Some were of opinion that, [1] In the payments this year are ſome things curious, which prove that the Corporation was plundered of all their regalia and valuable moveables; even their charter they were ſtripped of by the conquerors, who it could not be expected would ſhew them much favour, their leading men being exceedingly active partizans againſt the King: the Mayor, Mr. Billers, and ſome of the leading aldermen being upon the committee who ſat in Leiceſter to ſequeſter property, ſend out ſcouting parties for intelligence, and give information to Parliament of the tranſactions of the armies, &c. in theſe parts. "Paid to redeem the town charters, being ſeized when the King's forces tooke the towne." No ſum mentioned.—"Paid for the ſtatute ſeal to a ſoldier 5*s*."—"Paid for two ſeals; the common ſeal braſs, the mayor's ſeal ſilver, £1. 9*s*. 0*d*."—"Paid for the new mace, being ſilver and gilt, £24. 6*s*. 6*d*."—"Paid to ſundry workmen for taking down divers houſes near the South gate £3. 3*s*. 0*d*." Moſt likely they had been much damaged by the ſtorming of that part of Leiceſter.

---

[2] Throſby, pp. 119–123.

[3] Hiſtory of the Civil Wars, &c. (cited in p. 41.) p. 323—325.

[4] King's Pamphlets in the Britiſh Muſeum, ſmall quarto, 213. b.

[5] This was conformable to the groſs manners of the age.

[6] See the examination of this Henry Purefoy, before the Houſe of Commons, p. 52.

Prince Rupert being a foreigner, that had done ſo much miſchief, no notice ſhould be taken of him, but the anſwer directed to the King himſelf. Others ſeemed to refute that, in regard the King had made him General; which opinion prevailed, and accordingly it was directed. Upon the trumpeter's arriving at the King's army, a drum was preſently diſpatched to demand a reſolution of the former ſummons, which muſt be returned within a quarter of an hour; which haſty proceeding with us was occaſioned by ſome ſhortneſs in ſtyle or title given to Prince Rupert, as was pretended: the ſtyle to him was, 'Sir;' and the title, 'To the Commander in chief of his Majeſty's Army.' But now, the mayor and corporation coming, the ſummons was again read in the audience of all; the mayor referred himſelf to the major votes, one of the Committee moving them to ſtand to their own defence. Two only of the townſmen gave in their votes, and both for fighting it out; and, before any other could expreſs themſelves, the King's cannon played from the battery, but ſtruck no terror into us. Then all debates ceaſed, and all were commanded to repair to the works; which was done with much courage and reſolution, the Committee diſpoſing themſelves to ſeveral parts of the town, to ſupply what was wanting in ammunition or otherwiſe, diſtributing money unto the ſoldiers that ſtood at the line, for their better encouragement; and ſome ſat at the town-hall, to attend what might be farther ſaid or done for the advance of the ſervice, if any ſhould make addreſſes to them. And now we plied each other both with cannon and muſket-ſhot, as faſt as we could charge and diſcharge; our cannoneers with one ſhot broke the carriage of one of the battering-pieces, and ſlew the cannoneer; and thus we continued all the day long, and all the night; at which time the enemy prepared to ſtorm us at ſix or ſeven places, and to that purpoſe had cut down many buſhes, and faggoted them, wherewith they meant to fill up our ditches. At the Newark breach was the fierceſt aſſault; the enemy there coming to puſh of pike: four times they attempted, and were as often repulſed, our men taking two of their colours from them, and plucked many of their pikes out of their hands; and captain Hacker and captain Babington, with their horſe, and the cannon from the corner of the wall, made a miſerable ſlaughter of them; amongſt the reſt, colonel St. George, in a bravery, came up to our cannon, and was by it ſhattered into ſmall pieces, and with him many more; for, after the manner of the Turks, the horſe forced on the foot to fight; they beaten on by our muſketeers, great ſlaughter was made of them on the other ſide of the town. Colonel ſir Henry Bard, at Belgrave-gate, endeavouring to ſcale, was beaten down with the butt-end of a muſket, the bruiſe whereof was ſeen by ſome of us; and his major likewiſe ſtricken down by his ſide; 16 of his men were ſlain upon the place, and 60 more mortally wounded out of 250, as himſelf reported; but, ſetting upon it again, on a ſecond attempt, with hand-granadoes thrown in amongſt our men, entered within the works. Bard then broke down the drawbridge, and made way for the horſe to enter; ſo again at Galtrey-gate, the enemy threw-in hand-granadoes abundantly, which terribly burned our men; and, ſeconding them with ſquadrons of muſketeers, our men were killed and beaten off; and there they alſo entered. The horſe being come in, they rode with a full career in a body of about 600 up the ſtreets, clearing them as they went; and ſo to the Newark; and, coming upon the backs of our forces there (they fighting gallantly, and defending the breach), there was no way left, but to ſubmit upon quarter; which they did. About 3 o'clock on Saturday morning was the town entered and taken; the enemy ſlew divers at their firſt entrance; and colonel Grey was ſore wounded, and led off the place; a full confutation of ſome ſlanders laid on him, of whoſe valour we had former experience. They dealt alſo extremely cruelly with the town, plundering all they had, and putting many to great ranſoms when they had taken away all their moneys and goods, and compelling many to march along with them, in caſe they were not able to give them their demand; inſomuch that it is to be feared, unleſs ſome courſe can be taken for their relief, Leiceſter cannot provide victuals for themſelves, much leſs to accommodate a garriſon; and divers in the country are in the ſame eſtate; for, ſome that we know of £40, £50, £80, and £100, a year revenue, are turned into rags, plundered houſe and field, and almoſt all the well-affected thruſt out of the town, whole families, wives and children, without any compaſſion. And, now we have declared the ſad ſtory of the town, we deſire to make ſome recital of our former proceedings. In March, we ſigned an order, under the hands of all the Committee, as well townſmen as others, for the fortifying of the Newark; and began to fortify it very ſtrongly, and reſolved to go through with it with all ſpeed; but colonel Booth, coming to Leiceſter, about the 12th of April laſt, in his paſſage to Cheſhire, wrote a letter to the right honourable the lord Grey at London, moſt earneſtly diſſuading the fortifying of that place; which letter the lord Grey carried to the Committee of both Kingdoms[1]. Whereupon the Committee of both kingdoms wrote a letter to the Committee at Leiceſter[2]. But now it is viſible to all, that what we would have done, the enemy now doeth; and ſir Henry Bard told ſome of us, that he heard that we began to fortify the Newark; which if we had finiſhed, the King's army would never have come to Leiceſter. Many aſperſions are laid on the Committee of Leiceſter, both by the earl of Stamford at the Houſe of Commons' door and other places, and alſo by one Lilly in a printed book, much to our diſparagement: we deſire that any of them may be made good. Lilly chargeth us with taxing that county with more than it is worth; wherein this brief anſwer will clear the truth: 'Our ordinance grants power only for raiſing £600. a week; our warrants iſſued out but for £500, weekly; and of that, one week with another, we believe there is not come in above £300. a week, one whole hundred of the county being almoſt totally cut off from us by the enemy.' Another aſperſion is, 'That we made ourſelves rich with the county's moneys;' but we had aſſigned the county to our garriſons; and all the ſix hundreds were thus diſpoſed of; two to Cole Orton and Bagworth, two to the garriſon of Kirby, and two to Leiceſter; and the moneys were all received by collectors and treaſurers appointed for every garriſon, and not by any of the Committee. We have had four garriſons, wherein we have quartered 420 horſe, and above 600 foot, which were in conſtant pay. We bought all our arms, except thoſe we found in the ſoldiers' hands at our entrance, and all our ammunition alſo, and many horſes: we have never been chargeable to the ſtate for any thing: we have not had our power a twelvemonth: we found the county infeſted with four garriſons, Aſhby, Belvoir, Newark, and Wiverton. Againſt Aſhby we planted a garriſon within cannon-ſhot, and at all times beat the enemy into his works: we had above 100 priſoners of theirs when the town was loſt, and they not one of ours but captain Pratt. Againſt Belvoir and the reſt we planted another at Therby, to preſerve that ſide of the country, and to recover the loſt hundred, which lay towards Newark, Belvoir, and Wiverton; another at Bagworth, to be a horſe-quarter, and to ſcout abroad into the country. We have ſerved the Parliament in the Committee from the firſt ordinance, and we who were not officers never received a penny of money, nor a meal's meat, at the ſtate's charge: ſome of us, however inconſiderable to others, have contributed large ſums on the propoſitions, and have ſpent hundreds of pounds in the Parliament's ſervice; our eſtates are plundered, our perſons impriſoned, and we rewarded with being called raſcals, pedlars, baſe fellows, at the door of the Houſe of Commons; and by maſter Lilly betrayers of the town, and knaves, in print. We know no reaſon: we appeal for juſtice: if traitors or knaves, we beg no favour; and, if we are raſcals and baſe fellows, we are unfit for the Parliament's ſervice. It was the cauſe of God and the kingdom that made us undertake the work at the beginning, and when others of greater eſtates deſerted it; ſome of us ſtrongly importuning ſome of the beſt of our county, who have expreſſed themſelves for the Parliament, to aſſiſt and appear at the very beginning, when the gentry of the Aſſociation were to meet at Owndell, and ſpeak to ſome Parliament men, who were there met, to move the Houſe to order thoſe at London to come down, and appear in the Parliament's cauſe; and, before our laſt ordinance, again, with much importunity, ſolicited ſome of the moſt eminent in town to go down and ſit at the Committee; which if they would do, ſome of us would reſign up and deſiſt, in regard we found a diſlike in ſome againſt us; but could not prevail; and, if ſir Edward Hartopp, bart. ſir Thomas Hartopp, ſir Roger Smith, John St. John, and Thomas Brudenell, eſqrs. that have been in the firſt ordinance, and are in this, were but commanded down to ſit as Committees, they would give more ſatisfaction to the country, and do the Parliament better ſervice, than thoſe that are of leſſer eſtates and eſteem can poſſibly do. The troubles we have found in managing the Parliament cauſe, and the abuſes put upon us for being faithful in the ſervice, have made the burthen inſupportable; all the Committee at one time (before we had the laſt ordinance) went away one after another in diſpleaſure, except one gentleman, and a captain, whoſe employment abroad upon parties put him off from that ſervice, and the mayor of the town, being only for the town, enforced to ſit upon the county's affairs, until an order was obtained to enable him to act for the county, as well as for the town; which the knights of the ſhire ſpeedily ſupplied by an order for that purpoſe; otherwiſe the garriſon had broke up, and the whole country fallen under the power of the enemy; and this was continued for a quarter of a year. And whereas Mr. Lilly ſeems to charge ſchiſm and faction upon the Committee and townſmen; there was no town in England of the bigneſs, where there was leſs faction or diviſion in matters of Religion, nor the worſhip of God more clearly and frequently enjoyed in the power of it, to the great comfort of many of God's people, both miniſters and others, that fled in thither for refuge; and we are confident that the godly miniſters and people both in town and country will give us a good report; and this is ſome ſupport againſt all Lilly's ſlanders and other abuſes, if we gain no other ſatiſfaction; and ſome of us have found more comfort in our impriſonment under the hands of cruel enemies, than in Weſtminſter-hall and the Parliament door, being extremely diſgraced for doing faithful ſervice to the Parliament. We know no fault in this Committee for loſing Leiceſter; nothing omitted in our power to execute. We delivered it not on baſe terms; but fought it out, to the hazard of our lives and loſs of our eſtates. We know no other reaſon, only God pleaſed to humble us, town and country, that the whole kingdom might be exalted; bleſſed for ever be his name! But this advantage we have by it, that falſe-hearted men are now diſcovered. We conclude with this: we deſire all or any of thoſe that have given any evil reports of us, to prove but one particular, or in the mean time to be ſilent. Colonel Grey was by the lord Grey made governor; but we never put the power out of our own hands. There were buried at Leiceſter 709, as hath been collected by the burials there; beſides thoſe that died of hurts ſince. There were not 109 of ours ſlain. There were 7 killed at their poſts; lieutenant-colonel Whitbrook, captain Farmer, a Low Country ſoldier, captain Hurſt, all captains of foot; and colonel Grey at his line mortally wounded in ſeveral places, and led off the place; beſides many other officers and ſoldiers, and one Mr. Brown, an honeſt and painful miniſter, ſlain; together with Mr. Palmer, of the ſame profeſſion, mortally wounded, if not ſlain; but few after their entrance."

---

[1] See this letter, in p. 41.

[2] See an anſwer to this letter, in p. 42.

"An Examination of a printed Pamphlet, intituled, 'A Narration of the Siege of the Town of Leiceſter, the laſt of May, 1645, by the King's Forces;' with a more perfect and exact relation of the taking the ſaid town and garriſon; 1645[1].

"Though the late taking of Leiceſter by the enemy did too ſadly prove, that the complaints heretofore made by ſome honourable perſonages againſt that Committee were no groundleſs accuſations or ſplenitive aſperſions caſt upon them, but the juſt fears of provident men; Yet, becauſe that Committee have ſince in a printed narrative gone about to juſtify their whole proceedings; it may concern the others, not ſo much in vindication of their own honour, as for redeeming the truth, to examine the particulars of that narration. Thoſe gentlemen of quality, who at the beginning of this ſad war had, with the hazard of their lives and fortunes, put the town of Leiceſter into a poſture of defence, could not chuſe afterwards (out of zeal to the publick) but continue their care for the ſuppreſſion of it; though the full managing of that affair was ſince taken out of their hands, and committed to others of mean rank, and ſuch men who had not at firſt joined in the hazard with them, nor appeared until danger ſeemed to be blown over. Nor could they better expreſs that public care which they had to preſerve the country, than by a ſerious obſerving and timely complaining of ſuch faults or errors as that Committee were guilty of. Some of thoſe faults, how well ſoever that Committee have endeavoured to blanch them over, will plainly appear in ſearching out the truth of their own narration; in which it is not our meaning to pick needleſs quarrels againſt all that they ſay; but to inſiſt only on ſuch things as, without too much injury to truth, cannot be let paſs. That diſcourſe concerning maſter Purefoy, which they begin with, it is let paſs as a thing improper to give anſwer to; ſeeing he gave in his teſtimony to that Committee which the Houſe appointed for examining the particulars concerning Leiceſter; but to an higher concern, which preſently follows in their narration; as, namely, where the Committee ſay, that the works were amended where they were any way defective, and that they were well made up in all places. To this is anſwered, that they had left all places of advantage to the enemy undemoliſhed; as, namely, maſter Chapman's houſes near Belgrave-gate; Green's houſes near Humberſton-gate; widow Swan's houſe, and the Grange, near unto South-gate; divers houſes at the Weſt bridge, and many near to St. Sunday's bridge (from which place major Innes, with a party of his own men, alighted from their horſes with carbines in their hands, ſallied out at Sunday's bridge, beat off the King's forces, and fired thoſe houſes, the foot of the town refuſing to go upon the ſervice); all which places, left thus undemoliſhed, were within ſixſcore paces of the works, and moſt of them within piſtol-ſhot. It will be farther proved, that the Committee were unprovided of divers materials neceſſary for the defence of the garriſon, as ſpades, ſhovels, and mattocks, to make up the breaches; the works altogether naked, there being neither cannon nor muſket-baſkets to ſhelter the ſoldiers. Beſides all this, that place in the Newark where the breach was made the Committee would never ſuffer to be fortified, becauſe maſter Wadland, clerk to the Committee, and a powerful man with them, had a parcel of ground lying there, which he was unwilling ſhould be cut up. In the next place, whereas they ſay that the line was near three miles about, and made by the lord Grey; it is anſwered, that the lord Grey could never prevail with the Committee to pull down thoſe houſes beforementioned, much leſs to contract the line to a more narrow circumference; and this unwillingneſs of theirs is moſt apparent, in regard that they ſuffered the ſaid houſes to ſtand, and the King's forces to take poſſeſſion of them, though they had timely intelligence of the King's approach. And, whereas they ſay that the [1] King's Pamphlets, in the Britiſh Muſeum, large quarto, 17.

---

King's coming to Aſhby was ſo ſudden, that they had not time to call away their men from Cole Orton, and bring off their cannon: To that we anſwer; Sir John Gell by letters advertiſed the Committee, three days before the King came to Aſhby, that in all probability the King's deſign was for Leiceſter; ſo that they had time enough to call in their out-garriſon, being (as they ſay) 350 horſe and foot at Cole Orton, and 160 horſe and foot at Kirby, in all 510, beſides thoſe at Bagworth. Whereas they ſay, that, when the town was ſummoned, only ſir Robert Pye and major Innes ſeemed to queſtion whether their number were ſufficient to make reſiſtance againſt ſuch an enemy; they anſwer, that, being ſtrangers, they enquired what their ſtrength was; the Committee having formerly related to them, that they had 1500 fighting men in the town, wherewith no doubt but the town might eaſily be defended; but, upon view at the ſeveral poſts, they found not above 450 ſoldiers, a very inſufficient number to man the circumference of ſo vaſt a line; beſides, ſir Robert Pye deſired the Committee to take order, that there might be teams and draught-horſes for the removing the cannon from place to place, as occaſion ſhould require; but not a horſe or team was to be ſeen in readineſs for that ſervice. And whereas the Committee promiſed ſir Robert Pye, that there ſhould be 300 men upon the main guard conſtantly; there were not ſeen above twenty men. Notwithſtanding all theſe things, ſir Robert Pye and major Innes declared, that they would contribute their beſt endeavours to the maintenance of the town; which they fully performed; and, when ſeveral other officers quitted their poſt, major Innes maintained his; and it is evidently known, that the enemy never entered at his poſt. Whereas the Committee ſay, that they diſpoſed of themſelves to ſeveral parts of the town, to ſupply what was wanting in ammunition and otherwiſe, diſtributing of money to the ſoldiers that ſtood at the line; it is anſwered, we heard the ſoldiers at ſeveral poſts complain, that, in 24 hours, they had no relief in meat, drink, or money; and that the Committee very ſeldom appeared at the works. Whereas they attribute the maintaining of that breach in the Newark to captain Hacker and captain Babington; we ſay that captain Hacker was never, during the ſtorm, nearer to the breach than the Weſt bridge, which was aſſigned for his poſt; and this breach was maintained by major Innes; and, after that all the officers and ſoldiers (properly belonging to the garriſon) had deſerted that place, major Innes with his troops repulſed them five ſeveral times; after which repulſes, the enemy falling on at other places, captain Hacker made his eſcape through that breach, and was taken near Humberſton; the ſame captain Hacker who, when colonel Roſſiter was engaged with ſir Marmaduke Langdale near to Melton Mowbray, failed to join with him, which did extremely prejudice that ſervice; and, being then governor of the garriſon at Kirby, fled to Leiceſter, firſt ſetting fire to the barns and ſtables there, according to the information of an honeſt man who was then at Kirby garriſon when the King's forces came by Melton, who ſaid, that there were no ſcouts ſent over that day from the garriſon of Kirkby Beler; and farther ſaith, that one captain Colliſon, coming from Melton, told captain Hacker that colonel Roſſiter's forces were routed; upon which information, captain Hacker commanded that all his ſoldiers who had the weakeſt horſes ſhould with all ſpeed march away to Leiceſter, and thoſe who had the beſt horſes ſhould go into garriſon, and ſet fire on it. The ſoldiers, obeying his command, ſet fire on a great barn of eleven bays of buildings; the greateſt part of the ſaid barn having been newly made a ſtable to hold 252 horſes, and ſome bays left to lay in hay; all which were burnt, and about 10 or 12 bays more; and then the ſaid captain Hacker marched away, leaving behind him proviſion of victuals, ammunition, and other neceſſaries for the garriſon, in which alſo he left ſix priſoners, who ran away. Some other ſoldiers report, that, by captain Hacker's command, they carried into the hall hay, ſtraw, and fires, to have fired the houſe. Whereas they write that colonel Grey (of whoſe valour they had former experience) was ſore wounded, and led off the place; it will be proved that he ſuffered ſir Barnard Aſtley's whole brigade of foot to ſcale with three ladders, and enter the works, without diſcharging a muſket, and, running from his poſt, was wounded in the back, one of his enemies ſaying that he would give him the mark of a coward; and that formerly he declared to us his ignorance and want of experience to perform the duty of a governor. Where they ſay alſo that captain Hurſt was ſlain, it is like to the reſt in their narration; for, he was not ſo much as wounded. Beſides this, it is moſt certain that the Committee were ſo poſſeſſed with fear, that they told his Majeſty they would have delivered the town at firſt upon the ſummons, had not ſir Robert Pye and major Innes diſſuaded them from it. Sir Henry Skipwith likewiſe and ſir John Pate, two notorious delinquents, and powerful with his Majeſty, declared at Leiceſter, in the preſence of many honeſt men, that the greateſt motive which drew the King to Leiceſter was, the certain intelligence that he had of the weakneſs of that Committee, and their want of experience in military affairs. Concerning the fortifying the Newark, which they ſay was intended by them, but that, upon a letter from colonel Booth to the lord Grey, the Committee of both kingdoms did command the contrary; we will leave it to the judgement of the whole world, how great a diſcouragement that had been both to town and country, and of what ſmall advantage to the publick; ſince it was impoſſible that the Newark could receive the perſons, much leſs the goods and eſtates, of all the well-affected; inaſmuch as that, if it had been fortified (which could not be effected to any purpoſe, unleſs they would reſolve to pull down hundreds of houſes), we conceive that both the perſons and eſtates of the aforeſaid well-affected perſons had been ſubject to as much miſery and plunder as they have ſince undergone. And for colonel Booth, we are ſo well aſſured of his good intentions in that diſſuading letter (as they ſay), that malice itſelf can gather nothing of it, but a cordial deſire to prevent the miſery that was like to befal that place, both for want of able ſoldiers to manage the Militia, and ſtrength enough to man the works: we therefore were not unwilling that farther notice might be taken of his letter, and have cauſed it to be re-printed. Concerning the taxation of the country, we conceive nothing could breed more diſcontentment, than that inequality which the Committee uſed in taxing the ſeveral towns; which taxations (had they been equally laid according to the proportions of ſome towns) had amounted to a far greater ſum than is appointed by the ordinance of Parliament; and it is verily believed, that, had the moneys collected weekly been converted to no other uſe than for the ſervice and maintenance of their garriſon, Leiceſter had been better provided for a ſiege, than (as appears) it now was; and yet notwithſtanding the Committee did, over and above thoſe great taxes, charge the country with all kinds of proviſions for their garriſons, and with horſes to mount their men. Where they affirm, that they receive not any pay; we are credibly informed that very few, or not one of them, but is chargeable with moneys raiſed in the country for the public ſervice; and how they have diſpoſed of it, we muſt leave to the examination of thoſe who are employed for that purpoſe. This we know, that many of them were captains, and received great ſums of money; yet ſeldom or never went out with their troops for defence of the country; whereby there was an unjuſt and unneceſſary charge, which might have been otherwiſe employed upon able ſoldiers; inſtead of which, they caſhiered old officers and able men, advancing in their places raw ſoldiers, to the great prejudice of the buſineſs. And whereas they affirm that they undertook the work when others of greater eſtates deſerted it, and juſtify themſelves in that point through the whole narration; it is well remembered, that captain Temple, late governor of Cole Orton, when the lord Grey began to fortify Leiceſter, upon intelligence given of the enemy's my's advance out of Worceſterſhire towards Aſhby, repaired at midnight to the lord Grey's chamber, earneſtly perſuading him at that inſtant to remove to Rockingham, with his forces, cannon, and carriages; and indeed many times ſince hath he expreſſed that fearful diſpoſition; for, in time of danger, pretending buſineſs, he uſually haſtens to London; witneſs the laſt journey that he made up thither, upon the approach of the King's army into thoſe parts. For the reſt of thoſe that now ſit in the Committee, not above two or three of them did appear, and join in the ſervice with thoſe gentlemen that hazarded their lives and fortunes for the publick at the beginning, and are now out of the ordinance for the Militia; neither did they appear until Leiceſter was nigh fortified, and both town and country in a good poſture of defence. Whereas they ſay, that if ſir Edward Hartopp, ſir Thomas Hartopp, ſir Roger Smith, John St. John, and Thomas Brudenell, eſqrs. were but commanded down to ſit as Committees, they would give more ſatisfaction to the country, and do the Parliament better ſervice, than thoſe that are of leſs eſtates and eſteem poſſibly can do; the Committee well know, that all or moſt of thoſe gentlemen before-mentioned, by reaſon of their age and other infirmities (without prejudice to their health) cannot attend to do ſervice, as otherwiſe they willingly would; and it is evident how earneſtly the country petition for an addition to the Committee, of gentlemen of known integrity and abilities, who ſuffered both in their perſons and eſtates for their affections to the publick; namely, William Quarles, Thomas Beaumont, William Danvers, George Pochin, Thomas Cotton, eſq. and William Sherman, gent. with divers others; ſome of which, during the time of the ſiege, were thought worthy and invited to ſit and adviſe with the Committee; yet the Committee would not give way to an addition; but did, as much as in them lay, render thoſe gentlemen odious to the Parliament. It is true that the lord Grey gave a commiſſion to Theophilus Grey, eſq. then eldeſt captain of his Lordſhip's regiment (the ſuperior officers of the garriſon being drawn out upon ſervice), to command in Leiceſter for ſome few days, when there was no danger of an enemy. Upon theſe conſiderations, how much thoſe gentlemen of the Committee, who have had the power of the Militia in their hands theſe ten months laſt paſt, deſerve to be rewarded for their ſervice, let the world judge. Nor can we fear that this frivolous apology of theirs (which they have printed under the name of 'A Narration,' ſtuffed with apparent and detected falſehoods), ſhould ſo far prevail with wiſe men, as to acquit them of ſuch heinous offences againſt the State, or much leſs have power to tranſmit the blemiſh from themſelves to their juſt accuſers. Such apologies as they employ for faults committed are themſelves ſometimes greater faults than thoſe which they labour to excuſe; ſince it is a greater crime purpoſely to deceive a State by miſunderſtanding, than to treſpaſs againſt it by ignorance or weakneſs. Howſoever, no fear of prejudice can diſcourage men of honour, who are aſhamed of nothing but ignoble actions, to aver and maintain a clear truth againſt any perſon, eſpecially where the ſatisfaction of the State, more than the vindication of their own honours, doth engage them to it. JAMES INNES."

Both Houſes of Parliament were now in the utmoſt conſternation; and conference ſucceeded conference. The earl of Northumberland reported from the Committee of both kingdoms on the 2d of June, "That, upon the report of the taking of Leiceſter, the ſaid Committee do think it fit that ſir Thomas Fairfax with his army before Oxford ſhould riſe and take the field [1]; and, on conſideration of the King's being at Leiceſter, and the danger to the aſſociated counties thereby; the Committee of both kingdoms were to conſider of ſuch diſpoſal of the armies under ſir Thomas Fairfax, as may be moſt advantageous for the publick; and the blocking up of Oxford was left to major-general Browne [2].

The Royal party were as good as ſure that the day was their own; which they made appear, even in London, by all public ſigns and diſcourſes. The King himſelf, deceived alſo with this lightning before his ruin, which he conſtrued for the greateſt ſunſhine of his felicity, was of the ſame opinion; the reſult whereof appeared in a letter written to the Queen, June the 8th, where he uſed this expreſſion; "I may, without being too ſanguine, affirm, that ſince this rebellion my affairs were never in ſo hopeful a way [3]!"

While the King remained at Leiceſter, he ſeemed ſolicitous to render the fortifications as impregnable as poſſible: he augmented ſome parts, and repaired others; but his enemies, being as deſirous to recover as he was to preſerve it, raiſed the ſiege of Oxford, and with Fairfax, at the head of the army, marched towards Leiceſter; and the King, being ignorant of the movement, left Leiceſter on the 4th of June, and marched with his army to the relief of his garriſon at Oxford. Langdale's regiment were in diſcontent near Leiceſter, becauſe they might not advance Northwards; but the King quieted them with a promiſe that they ſhould march thither within 15 days [4].

June 4. The Houſe of Commons being informed, that divers aldermen and other citizens were at the door; they were called in: and alderman Fulke acquainted the Houſe, "That the late news of ſtorming of Leiceſter, and the ſad conſequences of it, had made ſo deep an impreſſion on the hearts of many of the citizens and inhabitants in and about the city of London, that they addreſſed themſelves to the Lord-Mayor to call a Common Council: That, according to their deſires, my Lord-mayor did ſummon a Common Council: that they had choſen a committee, and conſidered of a petition; whereby their ſenſe might be repreſented of it to both Houſes: that they had therefore choſen a committee to deliver this petition; which contains in it as well their ſenſe of this diſaſter, as the cauſes (as they conceive) of it, and their opinions and deſires for the remedies thereof; and how the like miſchiefs may be prevented for the future. And deſire farther, that they may have leave to deliver a like petition to the Lords."—On this it was reſolved, "That the anſwer to the petitioners ſhall be, that the Houſe will take the particulars of the petition into ſerious conſideration; and do return them thanks for their good affections: and, as to their deſire of leave to preſent the like to the Houſe of Peers, this Houſe leaves it to themſelves and to their own diſcretions [5]."

The petition was next day preſented to the Peers; ſtating, "That the inhabitants of this City and parts adjacent are generally moſt deeply ſenſible of thoſe preſſing miſeries, under which they and the whole kingdom now groan; and that imminent ruin which is coming upon both, through the relieving of Cheſter, the inexpreſſible loſs of Leiceſter, the barbarous cruelty exerciſed there, the danger of the reſt of our garriſons and well-affected thereabouts, and the increaſing and prevailing of the enemy by ſea and land, like a mighty torrent. That (among other cauſes which have had a deep influence upon this moſt ſad poſture of our condition) the ſaid inhabitants apprehend, that the not compleating of ſir Thomas Fairfax's army (according to an Ordinance of Parliament in that behalf); the want of ſuch a committee in that army as may give our commanders in chief power and encouragement to improve all preſent advantages, without attending commands and directions from remote councils; the calling back of lieutenant-general Cromwell and major-general Browne, when they were purſuing the enemy; the not advancing of our brethren of Scotland into theſe Southern parts; the great decay of trade, and diſcouragement of merchants, for want of a conſtant convoy; his Majeſty's publiſhing his ſenſe of the proceedings at the late treaty, and the Parliament's not publiſhing their ſenſe thereof; and their reſolutions againſt free trade by ſea to ſuch ports as are or ſhall be in the power of the enemy; have been the chief. That great numbers of thoſe inhabitants have lately expreſſed their earneſt deſires (by petition and otherwiſe to the repreſentative body of this city in Common

---

[1] Journals of the Lords, vol. VII. p. 403.
[2] Ibid. and Journals of the Commons, vol. IV. p. 160.
[3] Heath's Chronicle, p. 48.
[4] Journals of the Lords, vol. VII. p 428.
[5] Journals of the Commons, vol. IV. p. 163.

Council aſſembled), that this their deep ſenſe and apprehenſions might be forthwith made known to both Houſes of Parliament; their humble ſuit, that the remedies may be ſpeedily conſidered of, and effectually executed; and their reſolutions, according to all former expreſſions, that they will not think their lives or any thing they poſſeſs too dear to hazard for their encouragement and preſervation. Thereupon the petitioners (for prevention of further miſeries, inconveniencies, and utter ruin of the Parliament, of this City and kingdom) make it their humble requeſt to this honourable Houſe; that care may be taken for the ſpeedy recruiting of ſir Thomas Fairfax's army, and for his encouragement. That ſuch a committee may be ſent with that army, as may give our commanders in chief (of whoſe faithfulneſs the kingdom have had ſo large teſtimony) power and encouragement to improve all preſent advantages as aforeſaid. That the ſaid army or ſuch part thereof as in your wiſdom ſhall ſeem meet, may be ordered forthwith to march towards our enemies in the field, as well for the regaining of Leiceſter (if it be poſſible) before it be made impregnable by fortifications; as alſo for prevention of the enemy's further ſurprizing of other places of ſtrength, and deſtroying the reſt who have appeared in defence of the Parliament, and for preſervation of the kingdom. That our brethren of Scotland may be more earneſtly preſſed to march Southward. That lieutenant-general Cromwell may preſently have power to raiſe and command the aſſociation, until ſuch other courſe be taken as may tend to the ſafety of thoſe counties, and of the city and kingdom. That the navy may be ſo ordered, as may encourage merchants, and advance trade, by having conſtant convoys. That the proceedings of the late treaty may be forthwith publiſhed by the Parliament, and their reſolution againſt free trade as aforeſaid.

MICHEL[1]."

Another petition, in nearly the ſame words, was preſented to the Houſe of Commons, from divers well-affected citizens of the city of London[2].

June 4. The Houſe was this day acquainted with an information of one Henry Purefoy[3], preſented to the Houſe by the earl of Eſſex; which was read, as follows: "That, about the 30th of April laſt, he being by chance very early in the chamber of the lord Hawley, governor of Briſtol, he heard the ſaid lord ſay to Mr. Bryan O'Neale, his then bed-fellow, 'We were laſt night upon a conſultation about the taking of Leiceſter, which both the town and country have promiſed to deliver up to his Majeſty; this being the moſt conſiderable buſineſs hath a long time befallen us." Whereupon the deponent, being a Leiceſterſhire-man, much grieving for fear of his country's ruin, the next morning, being May-day, ſent away his wife to London, to the earl of Kent his kinſman, deſiring him to take order that ſome preſent means might be uſed to put the ſaid town in a poſture of defence. And he further ſaith, that he himſelf, upon Tueſday the 13th of May, took occaſion, upon the exchange of lieutenant colonel Hudſon, to come to Banbury, and from thence by night to a brother's near Leiceſter; and, ſending preſently for colonel Grey, his kinſman, acquainted him with the extreme danger the town was in; deſiring him not to fail immediately to provide for the defence of the town; aſſuring him, if they took it, it would be by ſtorm, and, as he conceived, about St. Margarett's Church; and after acquainted the Committee there at large with his relation, and gave them [this his] information and advice in writing ſigned, with his voluntary oath. And further he ſaith, that, coming to London, upon 15th May, he hath ſince acquainted Mr. Corbett, my lord of Kent, and ſir Arthur Heſilrige, with this buſineſs; and his advice, according to thoſe poor parts God hath enabled him with." Then the earl of Kent reported to the Houſe his knowledge herein. Ordered, that this information be communicated to the Houſe of Commons, at a conference; and let them know, that this Houſe thinks it fit this buſineſs be examined, in regard it may prevent the loſs of other towns; therefore their Lordſhips recommend the buſineſs to them[4].

"June 7, the counteſs of Devon had a paſs, to tranſport herſelf, with two ſervants, a coach and four horſes, and two ſaddle nags, beyond the ſeas; and the lord Grey of Groby was ordered to have the benefit of two aſſeſſments for the twentieth part diſcovered by him to the Committee at Haberdaſher's hall[5]."

"June 7, letters from Leiceſter informed, that the Committee-men and the Scots there were not killed in cold blood, as was before reported; but that the King's forces killed divers who prayed quarter, and put divers women to the ſword, and other women and children they turned naked into the ſtreets, and many they raviſhed. That they hanged Mr. Reynor and Mr. Sawyer in cold blood; and at Wigſton they murthered Mrs. Barlowes, a miniſter's wife, and her children; that, in the ſtorming of Leiceſter, about 300 were ſlain on both ſides, and not more[6]."

On the 9th of June appeared the following "Perfect Relation of the Taking of Leiceſter; with the ſeveral Marches of the King's Army ſince the taking thereof, Colonel Haſtings being made the Governor; the State of the Town at this preſent; and how they plunder the Country. Alſo how Northampton horſe ſkirmiſhed with the King's, and what loſs on both ſides; with the condition of both Armies, and their rendezvous, fully made known. Publiſhed by authority, 1645.

"Sir; To ſatisfy your requeſt in your letter touching the condition of Leiceſter, I have endeavoured to inform myſelf from the moſt moderate and underſtanding men that were ſufferers in that general loſs, and eye-witneſſes of the whole carriage of that ſad buſineſs, that are ſince fled hither for refuge. On Wedneſday at midnight, May the 29th, a ſtrong party of the King's horſe faced the town, and, by quartering at the adjacent villages, hindered the ſupplies from the country. On Thurſday, their artillery were drawn up near the town; and, by the direction of ſome malignants of the town, who had formerly gone out of it, or were put out, their great guns were planted againſt ſome of the weakeſt places of their works. By Friday night, they made wide breaches, which, by the induſtry of the men and women of the town, were ſome of them made up again with wool-packs and other materials; but, the enemy preſſing hard upon them with their numbers, and that round about the town, they were hard put to it, the enemy being numerous without, and they but few within, and the works very large. The line is near three miles in compaſs; the foot-ſoldiers in pay in the town not exceeding 450, and the townſmen in arms, with ſome of the country that came in to their aſſiſtance, made the ſoldiery about 1000 in all; who, by reaſon of the ſmallneſs of their numbers and the largeneſs of their works, were enforced to do duty Wedneſday, Thurſday, and Friday nights together, the enemy keeping them in conſtant alarms; which did ſo tire out the townſmen, that they were the more unfit for the reſiſting the furious enemy; though, to give them their due, they did as much as could be expected, conſidering the oppoſition; for, the enemy had about 4000 foot, who ſtormed in ſo many places at once, that the defendants, wanting reſerves, were the more eaſily over-maſtered. The ſtorm began about one of the clock on Saturday May 31, and laſted at the walls about two hours, the enemy being all this while ſtrongly reſiſted, and loſt many in the work; they were three times beaten back; but their horſe, who were behind the foot, did force them on again; about 20 ſeveral bodies of foot ſtorming at once, 200 or 300 in a place, and driven on by as many horſe, as often as they were driven to retreat; and, when they did break in, they were by ours driven back again, till, oppreſſed by multitudes, and entering in many places at once, ours were driven to the market-place; where our horſe, that all this while had backed our foot, and kept them to their duty, now were themſelves put to it, and behaved themſelves reſolutely, and held the fight in the town almoſt an hour after, betaking themſelves to places of ſtrength, enforced to aſk quarter for their lives; and ſome of them eſcaped, having gotten the enemies' word, which was, 'God and the Prince!' At their firſt coming in, they ſlaughtered many, until ours had lain down their arms, and yielded themſelves priſoners; and then they fell to their plundering work, and catching of men to be their priſoners, executing their accuſtomed cruelty to men and women, to find out their money and beſt goods. The gentlemen of the Committee, ſir Robert Pye, and major Innes, were carried before the Prince to their inn, who diſpoſed them to ſeveral houſes as priſoners; the two laſt, upon their parole, were ſet at liberty, to procure exchange. The Committee were yet kept priſoners in the town. Many other gentlemen of the country and officers of the garriſon were ſent, with the beſt of the plunder, to their ſeveral garriſons of Newark, Lichfield, and Belvoir; 140 cart-loads of the beſt goods and wares in the ſhops were ſent away by Saturday noon towards Newark with a convoy of horſe. I find ſome of the pamphlets ſpeaking of the horrid cruelty of the inſulting enemy, putting man, woman, and child, to the ſword. I know their tender mercies are cruelties; but (give the Devil his due) there were indeed many ſlain at the firſt entrance, and ſome that made little reſiſtance, and ſome women and children amongſt the multitude, by the rabble of common ſoldiers; but I cannot learn of any ſuch order given to deſtroy all, as is ſaid by ſome. And it is the general opinion of many that have ſince got out of the town, that in the conflict, and ſince, there were not ſlain of the Parliament's party, ſoldiers and others, above 100, and ſome of thoſe in their cold blood, after they had granted quarter of life; picking out ſome active men, and ſetting common ſoldiers to quarrel with them, and ſlay them; but of theſe not many. It is confidently believed that not above 300 are ſlain on both ſides. The town was full of wealth, which the countries had brought in for ſafety. They took there nine pieces of ordnance, great and ſmall, above 1000 muſkets, near 400 horſes and arms, and about 50 barrels of powder, beſides what was ſpent in the ſervice. The greateſt defect was want of men, though the town was not well fortified, nor was there ordnance to reach from one work to another. It were to be wiſhed that garriſons of ſuch concernment to the kingdom might be taken care of, that they might have at leaſt 1000 foot-ſoldiers in pay; which had this place had, with the help of the townſmen, in all probability that might have kept out the enemy, and made them pay for their bold attempt. Colonel Haſtings is made governor there, who now beſtirs himſelf in the fortifying the town; which, if ſoon viſited, may in probability yet be regained.

---

[1] Journals of the Lords, vol. VII. p. 411.

[2] From a Pamphlet in which both petitions were printed at the time by Matthew Simonds, under the authority of "H. Elſing, Cler. Parl. D. Com."

[3] See before, p. 46.

[4] Journals of the Lords, vol. VII. p. 405; and Journals of the Commons, vol. IV. p. 163.

[5] Journals of the Commons, vol. IV. p. 166.

[6] Whitlock, p. 144.

"Upon Tueſday June 3, the King's horſe advanced Southwards, and kept his general rendezvous at Newton, five miles on this ſide Leiceſter; on Wedneſday, he removed to Kibworth, five miles from Harborough; and on Thurſday morning his horſe came to Maidwell, eight miles from Northampton; and in the afternoon they came to Brixworth and other adjacent towns, and ſent out their warrants all over the North-eaſt parts of this country, and taxed every town, ſome at £100, ſome at £200, and ſome leſs, ſome more, upon penalty of being plundered of their goods, and their houſes fired; and by this means they have gathered great ſums of money; and, ſome of the towns having paid the ſum firſt ſet, another company comes, and charges them at a ſecond, and after that a third; and all have been enforced to be paid.

"On Thurſday night, about 8 o'clock, a party of their horſe came within two miles of Northampton. We took that day divers priſoners, who all agreed that the whole body of horſe and foot were drawn up this way, which gave us a timely alarm. On Friday and Saturday they continued their taxing the country towns; and their horſe lay in ſeveral places in great bodies, to collect their tax. We daily take off their men in the towns, and our troopers ſkirmiſhing with them. Sir John Norwich, governor of Rockingham, hath ſent out his troop daily, who have taken many priſoners: he ſent in hither 30 at one time to be kept here. On Saturday June 7, the King, with all his foot and carriages, marched from Harborough to Daventry in Northamptonſhire. This night came in our 400 foot, which had been before Oxford at the league; and this night ſir Thomas Fairfax's army quartered about Olney and Newport Pagnel; to whom this day joined colonel Vermuyden, with his 2000 horſe and 500 dragooners, the two armies being within 16 miles each of other. The King's army drive men and cattle along with them, that the towns may come after them, and redeem them for money.

"The King's head-quarter is this day at Daventry, 8 miles from Northampton; his horſe in the villages adjacent. He has about 14 pieces of ordnance, and about 200 carriages, much of the wealth of Leiceſter; and his men are full of money they plunder from the country. The King drives multitudes of beaſt and ſheep before his army, it is ſuppoſed, to recruit Oxford. This day we took eleven of theirs priſoners, and ſlew five, moſt of them full of money and good clothes. Thoſe that have ſeen both armies ſay they differ not much in numbers; the King's horſe ſeeming more, but not ſo good, nor ſo well armed; and his foot nothing ſo well provided as ours. The Lord give us courage and faithfulneſs, and ſtand by us in the day of battle, and find out and diſcover thoſe that have occaſioned ſo much miſery to the heart of the kingdom! I am confident, the counties of Stafford, Warwick, Leiceſter, and Northampton, have ſuffered more within ſix weeks, than would pay our new army ſix months, and their weekly taxes and other charges for twelve, to the utter undoing of many thouſands, and the impoveriſhing of others, both friends and foes; for, I am ſure, I can have abundant teſtimony from thoſe that at firſt bade them welcome to town, and directed them to the Roundheads' houſes and grounds, where they firſt began their cruelty: but it ended on their pates as well as purſes that thought they ſhould have found them their friends; for, the good party having obſcured themſelves, they, to keep their hands in uſe, exerciſed their cruelty on whom they could meet, and found their cattle would yield as round money as others; and they, to be delivered from their cruelty, would give as round ſums. Thoſe pretended to be their friends; they with horrid execrations curſed, and bade them, if they were friends, bring in their money, ſwearing, at the next progreſs, they would not leave them worth a penny; telling them all they had was the King's, and he had given it to them who would fight for him, they having no other pay. On Sabbath-day, June 8, there came in divers ſoldiers, both horſe and foot, from Leiceſter, that had been priſoners about a week, and were exchanged for ſo many of Eveſham priſoners ſent hither, in all 100 horſe and foot ſoldiers; the like number being to be releaſed here for them; and they inform us there were 300 releaſed on Thurſday laſt, for ſo many from Warwick, Coventry, and Stafford. Here are yet about 100 more, moſt of them lately taken in this country, of the King's party; which will releaſe more, the enemy not knowing what to do with ſo many priſoners. Few of the 800 ſoldiers, horſe and foot, taken priſoners at Leiceſter, would by any means take up arms for the other party, though they were daily ſolicited both by threats and promiſes; only one Smith, a lieutenant, who let them in as ſoon as he could, is ſince made a captain by colonel Haſtings; and he perſuaded about 40 foot-ſoldiers to take up arms with him; but ſome of them have ſince deſerted him, and got to Coventry. All ſpeak the feaſibleneſs of regaining the town, if attempted before the new fortifications be made, which they are about to do; and of their cruelty to the Scots, ſlaying divers of them in cold blood after quarter given to them; but this is ſaid to be by the Iriſh in the King's army, and Engliſh Papiſts their adherents. The King ſtill continues at Daventry, and our army in their quarters. Our horſe have been abroad this day, and ſlain two of the enemy, and brought one priſoner. I hear but of one of our men loſt in all theſe encounters; and he is come home upon exchange. I have been more particular and large than ordinary, becauſe you wrote twice for the ſame thing, and ſeem to be affected with the buſineſs of Leiceſter, which we have all cauſe to be; and I pray God we may never forget to do them the beſt good we can, by our prayers, purſes, and pains. Knowing that nothing hath befallen them that we are not ſubject unto, a ſanctified uſe thereof both to them and us is the earneſt prayer of your loving friend.

Northampton, June 9, 1645[1]."

About the ſame time ſeveral ſimilar accounts were publiſhed; particularly one under the title of "A more exact Relation of the Siege laid to the Town of Leiceſter; how it was maintained, and how loſt, and what Quarters were given by the King's Forces; delivered in to the Honourable Houſe of Commons by Sir Robert Pye, Governor of the ſaid Town, and Major James Innes, June 10, 1645, publiſhed by command[2]."

On the 3d of June, the Committee of both kingdoms was directed to write to ſir Thomas Fairfax, to deſire him forthwith to ſend a trumpeter, to know what priſoners are at Leiceſter, and of what quality; what perſons lie wounded; and to think of exchanges[3].

On the 7th, the humble petition of major James Ennys, on the behalf of himſelf and 200 officers and ſoldiers, was read; and ordered, together with ſir Robert Pye's condition, to be taken into conſideration on Tueſday next; and that the matter of this petition, and any treachery or miſcarriages concerning the loſs of Leiceſter, be referred to the Committee appointed to examine an information from Mr. Purefoy, concerning the garriſon[4].

June 10. One hundred pounds were voted to major Innes, as a gift from the Houſe of Commons[5]. The ſame ſum was alſo given to ſir Robert Pye junior, as a gratuity from the Parliament, and in recompence of his loſſes at Leiceſter[6].

June 13. At a Committee of both kingdoms, a meſſage being received from the lord mayor and court of aldermen of London, deſiring that ſome forces might be employed for the regaining of Leiceſter; they were requeſted to think of ſome way of advancing a month's pay to the Scots army, on the ſecurity of the ordinance of their monthly entertainment, whereof £10,000. was due by the city of London. On the ſame day it was alſo agreed that Mr. Job Grey, a priſoner in Leiceſter, ſhould be exchanged for ſir William Riddell, a priſoner in the Tower; Mr. John Angell, a miniſter, and the confrater of Wigſton hoſpital, for Daniel Ambroſe, doctor in Divinity; and ſir Robert Pye for colonel Tillier[7]. The Houſe of Commons agreed that this exchange ſhould be, according to the deſire of the Lords; and gave directions this day, that a Committee ſhould have power to examine any member of the Houſe upon the information given againſt them. The Lords were deſired to give their aſſent thereunto[8].

The triumph of the Royaliſts (though celebrated in a triumphant epigram[9]) was of very ſhort duration.

Sir Thomas Fairfax and the King's forces were within ſix miles of each other on the 12th of June.

"The enemy is (as we are certified this day) pulling down two parts of Leiceſter, to make the other two parts impregnable, if he can; but I hope the Scottiſh forces and our own army will diſturb them in their deſign, and will ſpoil their project. Colonel Haſtings is made governor of Leiceſter; he ſummoneth all men from 16 to 60 to come and ſerve in Leiceſter; ſome 400 have obeyed his ſummons; but he ſhall, I hope, be forced himſelf to obey ſome other ſummons ſhortly[10]."

"June 14, was that fatal battle at Naſeby down in Northamptonſhire, where his Majeſty's army (till then victorious) was now, by the uncertainty of war, much worſted, his foot, ordnance, and baggage moſt loſt. In this battle, ſir Peter Browne, ſir Thomas Dalriſon, colonel Bawd, major Wilſon, and captain Thorold, on his Majeſty's part, were ſlain. The whole number on both ſides ſlain was conceived not to exceed 400; but more wounded. Above all, the rebels' cruelty was remarkable, in killing upon cold blood at leaſt 100 women, whereof ſome of quality, being commanders wives; and this done under pretence that they were Iriſh women[11]."

A Relation of the Victory obtained by ſir Thomas Fairfax, General of the Parliament's Forces, near Harborough, on Saturday June 14, 1645; being a Letter brought from the Army by the King's ſervants to the Right Worſhipful William Gilles, Alderman and Sheriff of the City of London. Printed by Richard Cotes, 1645.

"That God hath bleſſed our Army with admirable ſucceſs. The buſineſs was thus. The Enemy quartered the Friday night at Harborough. General Fairfax at Gilſborough, within ſix miles of the enemy. On Saturday morning they drew out about ſix of the clock with a party to give us battle; general Fairfax being very glad of the proffer, having long expected it. Whereupon the general drew off from his quarters to Naſeby, two miles on the way to the enemy, and there put themſelves into battalia. The enemy came in very good order to charge us, and had all the points of the wind for them, and their advantage. The general met them half the way. Our right wing of horſe was led on by Cromwell; the left wing by colonel Ireton, juſt then in the field made commiſſary-general by ſir Thomas Fairfax.

"That, about eleven of the clock on Saturday, both armies were engaged. Little uſe was made of ordnance on either ſide, being ſoon brought to an engagement. Our right wing of horſe, being commanded by lieutenant-general Cromwell, carried all the field before him, juſt as they did at Marſton Moor.

"That our left wing, being commanded by Ireton, was a little ſhattered, and gave ground; he carried himſelf well, and is extremely wounded.

"That the enemy once was almoſt maſter of our train; but within half an hour general Fairfax was clearly victor; and charged the enemy, both horſe and foot, through and through, and beat them quite out of the field before them.

"The general hath ſo broken the enemy's foot, that he could not hear or ſee that they brought off an hundred.

"Their horſe, after their firſt rout, rallied again. General Fairfax advanced towards them, and charged them and routed them; and is now upon the chace, knocking them down, and taking them priſoners, for at leaſt five miles in the way to Leiceſter. The meſſenger was an eye-witneſs of it.

"That the enemy hath loſt moſt of all their carriages and ordnance. He ſaw there two great demi-cannon, and divers other great pieces, before he came away. The particulars are not yet known.

"The valour that ſir Thomas Fairfax manifeſted juſt upon the charge, was a great encouragement to the ſoldiers. His ſpirit was ſo raiſed, that it was admired by all men. Major-general Skippon carried him moſt gallantly, and is wounded."

"Cromwell coming in with his victorious right wing, they all charged together upon the King, who, unable to endure any longer, got out of the field towards Leiceſter. Prince Rupert, who now too late returned from his improvident eager purſuit, ſeeing the day loſt, accompanied them in their flight, leaving a compleat victory to the Parliamentarians, who had the chace of them for 14 miles, within two miles of Leiceſter. The ſame night, after the battle of Naſeby, ſir Thomas Fairfax blocked up Leiceſter with his horſe, and next day his foot came up to him[12]."

---

[1] King's Pamphlets, ſmall 4to, 212. 6.
[2] Ibid. 211. 6.
[3] Journals of the Commons, vol. IV. p. 161.
[4] Ibid. p. 167.
[5] Ibid. p. 171.
[6] Whitlock, p. 144.
[7] Journals of the Lords, vol. VII. p. 421.
[8] Journals of the Commons, vol. IV. p. 174.
[9] By Robert Herrick; ſee vol. II p. *632.
[10] The Exchange Intelligence, Friday June 13; King's Pamphlets, ſmall 4to, 212. 32.
[11] Mercurius Ruſticus, 1645.
[12] Whitlock, pp. 145, 146.

The particulars of this fatal battle, with Mr. Symonds's diary of the King's daily proceedings from May 31 to June 14, have been already detailed in a former volume: but the account given of it by Vicars is ſufficiently curious to be ſtated here at large; and the ſubſequent movements of the King ſhall be given in a future page.

"About the 12th of June, our noble general being come with his forces near the King's army, which then were principally in and about Daventry, we had ſome fears, grounded upon the advantage of ground, with ſtrong intrenchments, on his Majeſty's part; as alſo becauſe valiant lieutenant-general Cromwell was not yet come unto us, we not being willing to engage without him: and yet our near approaching giving the enemy opportunity of fighting us (if they pleaſed) to their great advantage, but by God's providence they did not; for what reaſon we knew not, and ſo were delivered of thoſe fears, partly by the royal armies leaving their advantages and marching toward Southam, and partly alſo by the arrival of Cromwell, though but with 700 horſe, the ſame morning. Now we being thus reinforced by the coming of Cromwell and the party he brought, we reſolved to follow the enemy, who left the way to Warwick, which was woodland (for what reaſon likewiſe we knew not), and wheeled to Harborough; whereof we having full knowledge, advanced after them, and that night had our quarters in and about Gilſborough, and immediately after they and we moved to Nazeby, in which field the fight was fought. We ſaw the enemy about ſix of the clock in the morning (for there was champion land enough) advanced toward us in a full body, which I aſſure you was as much joy to ours (who ſought this above all) as it was to hear they had left Daventry, which was not little.

"As touching the ordering of our army for the battle. The general appointed lieutenant-general Cromwell to the right wing of horſe, and colonel Ireton, at that time made commiſſary general of the horſe, to the left wing; himſelf, and valiant and virtuous major-general Skippon, to the infantry and body of the army; and in this poſture we marched to meet our reſolute enemy, who, I confeſs, ſeemed unto us to come on with undaunted courage; as who would not, having a King with them, that was able to honour them at preſent, and to promiſe large revenues afterward to all thoſe that fought valiantly?

"Being come within cannon-ſhot, the ordnance began to play; but that being found, at Marſton Moor and other places, but a loſs of time, we reſolved not to want and loſe day-light, as is too uſual, but to charge with the firſt. Whereupon, about 10 or 11 of the clock, the trumpets began to ſound, the drums to beat, the horſes to neigh and prance about, as ſmelling the battle; and now, thought both ſides, now an afternoon for a whole kingdom, nay, for three whole kingdoms; now, "Cæſar or nothing" was, we may ſuppoſe, the voice of their army: and The Liberties of England may well be ſaid to be the voice of our army; to whom, methinks, their moſt noble general ſir Thomas Fairfax ſaid to his ſoldiers, as in ſuch a caſe religious king Hezekiah ſaid to his army, "Be ſtrong and courageous, my brave commanders and ſoldiers." Be not afraid nor diſmayed for the King's army, nor for all the multitude of his horſe and riders that are come together; for (according to our ſignal-word) there are more with us (we having God our friend) than are with them. With them is but an arm of fleſh, but with us is the Lord our God, to help us and to fight our battles. As ſo indeed he did, as now you ſhall immediately hear. The enemy's word was "Queen Mary." Our word was "God is our ſtrength." And ſo he was indeed, as you ſhall ſee in the ſequel. The enemy had beanſtalks in their hats, we generally nothing.

"And now each wing of both ſides charged one another with great eagerneſs and violence. Our dragoons began the battle, flanking the right wing of the enemy's horſe. As they charged our left wing of horſe, the foot charged not each other till they were within 12 paces one of another; and could not charge above twice, but were at puſh of pike. The enemy's foot gave a little back, and ſo did ſome few of ours; and in the beginning of the fight the day was very doubtful, but then the right wing of our horſe (wherein the general was in perſon) charged in the flank of the blue regiment of the enemy's foot, who indeed ſtood to it to the laſt man, abundance of them being ſlain, and all the reſt ſurrounded, wounded, and taken priſoners: theſe (who were the very hope of their infantry) being loſt, horſe and foot gave back.

"But here alſo the fight continuing with equal might and courage for the ſpace of leſs than half an hour, they had ſomewhat ſhattered our left wing, and made them give back, and were almoſt maſters of our artillery; and here (as we have it from credible relation) a party of the enemies broke through our left wing of horſe, came quite behind our rear to our train, the leader of them being a perſon ſomewhat in habit like our general, in a red montero, as our general had. He came as a friend, and our commander of the guard of the train went with his hat in his hand, and aſked him how the day went, thinking verily he had been our general; the cavalier (who we ſince heard for certain was Rupert) aſked him and the reſt, if they would have quarter; whereupon they cried No; gave fire inſtantly, and moſt bravely beat him off, making him fly for his life, and his companions.

"But, as I touched before. Our right wing had done more upon them; and beſides, our left wing bravely recovered their ſtrength and ground, and within half an hour, or a very little more, we had quite driven them out of the field, and ſo broken all their foot, that we verily believe there went not off a hundred in any one party or body. After this firſt hot ſhock ſo received, they rallied again, and put their horſe into a poſture to charge us; which party, we were aſſured, the King himſelf led up and charged with: but what will he do, when he ſhall go about to charge againſt God and his country's beſt friends? For this body was alſo, as the reſt of them, poſſeſſed with great fear, though the King, in that foreſaid rallying of this body, cried out unto them, "Face about once more, and give one charge more, and recover the day." But here alſo it moſt mercifully pleaſed the Lord, that the freſh forces of valiant and active colonel Roſſiter moſt fortunately came in unto us before the battle was quite ended; who being all, I ſay, freſh men, and unexpectedly falling on, did admirably help to complete the victory, and to purſue the enemy with their freſh horſe, with great ſlaughter, even within the ſight of Leiceſter: ſo they, by God's great mercy, together with our horſe and foot, came on, I ſay, with ſuch impregnable and invincible courage, that we made them all fly again, and we, after the breach of them, killing as faſt as we could all we found in arms; and here happy was he that was beſt mounted to fly faſteſt; for the renowned general ſir Thomas Fairfax, and valiant major-general Skippon, fell ſorely upon them; and magnanimous lieutenant-general Cromwell purſued their horſe, with a full career, about 12 or 13 miles at leaſt, even within two or three miles of Leiceſter; the longeſt purſuit that ever was ſince this unhappy war began.

"Thus, by God's infinite mercy, we had a great and wonderful victory; yea, as great as ever ſince the war began, if not greater. Which victory, as it is in the firſt and prime place to be moſt juſtly attributed to our good God alone, as the chief cauſe, and giver of it unto us; ſo alſo in the next place to his valiant inſtruments, and whom God only made ſo valiant and victorious over their Cavalierian enemies. And of theſe in the firſt place renowned ſir Thomas Fairfax hath merited exceedingly, ſhewing ſuch courage and reſolution as hath rarely been ſeen in any, which truly did ſo animate the ſoldiers by his undaunted example, as is hardly to be expreſſed; for, certainly, had you ſeen him, and how his ſpirit was raiſed, it would have made an impreſſion in you never to be obliterated: God knows it is not here hyperbolized, but a real truth. And as for major-general Skippon, he alſo did as magnanimouſly and valiantly as man could do, and was a great terror to the enemy, receiving a wound in his ſide by a muſket bullet, in this fight; but, bleſſed be God, not mortal, only an indelible badge of honour unto him. Valiant lieutenant-general Cromwell alſo did admirable bravely in this fight, he and his right wing of horſe having expreſſed incomparable gallantry in this fight, even to the amazement of their adverſaries. Yea, and to ſpeak the truth, all our officers and ſoldiers did as bravely and courageouſly as could be. Commiſſary-general Ireton did valiantly alſo behave himſelf in this fight, and was ſorely wounded, but not mortally, and ſo was colonel Butler, both of undaunted courage, and did ſingularly well in this great ſervice. But I would not willingly attribute more to one commander than to another; for, indeed (as I touched before), they did all as gallantly as ever men on earth could do; and ſo did the enemy's foot, which before the battle we leaſt valued; Rupert and Maurice having at leaſt 2000 horſe more than we had, that charged fiercely on us at firſt, but were ſo well received by ours (though, at firſt, our left wing gave back a little), that their hearts were broken at the very firſt, eſpecially by the thickneſs of our reſerves, and their orderly and timely coming on.

"And thus we having taken eight pieces of ordnance in the field, whereof two were demi-cannons, one whole culverin; we alſo poſſeſt all the reſt of their ordnance and their carriages, bag and baggage, abundance of coaches, and rich plunder (whereof more anon, more particularly), carts, and boats, and great ſtore of biſcuits and cheeſe: a ſeaſonable refreſhment for our honeſt ſoldiers, that had marched ſo hard the day and night before, and had not had a bit of bread to a regiment for their refreſhment. Thus the foot and all the train marched that night to Harborough (about four miles from Naſeby), where then the head quarters lay.

"It was credibly conceived, by the teſtimony of thoſe that ſaw it, and purpoſely viewed immediately after the fight, that from the battle to Harborough, there were not ſlain above about 700, together with thoſe ſlain in the field running away; but in the purſuit, between Harborough and Leiceſter, at leaſt 3 or 400 more were ſlain, abundance of them ſorely wounded, and divers perſons of note or quality fell among them; one with a ſtar and a red-croſs on his coat, conceived to have been the duke of Lenox, but it was not he. Four lords came mortally wounded (as was credibly reported to us) to Harborough, but durſt not ſtay there. We took all the foot colours in the field, the King's own colours with the lion and crown, with this motto, Dieu & mon droit; the Queen's colours, and the Prince's colours, and the duke of York's ſtandard. We got the plunder of the King's coach, and his precious cabinet, that famous tell-tale of the King's and Queen's works of darkneſs, &c.

"One great encouragement to our common ſoldiers to fall on the more courageouſly, was the rich plunder the enemy had (their purſes and pockets too being full of money, and the plunder of poor Leiceſterſhire), which God now made a means of their ruin and deſtruction in this fight; for, indeed, our ſoldiers got very great plenty of gold and ſilver out of moſt of their pockets that were ſlain. Prince Rupert alſo, or rather Prince Robber, had brought into the field many Iriſh women, inhuman whores, with ſkeans, or long Iriſh knives, about them, to cut the throats of our wounded men, and of ſuch priſoners as they pleaſed (the wives of the bloody rebels in Ireland, his Majeſty's dearly beloved ſubjects), to whom our ſoldiers would grant no quarter. About 100 of them were ſlain on the ground, and moſt of the reſt of the whores and camp-ſluts that attended that wicked army were marked in their faces or noſes with ſlaſhes and cuts, and ſome cut off; juſt rewards for ſuch wicked ſtrumpets.

"The ſlain on our part in this moſt memorable fight was not in all full 200, and not one above a captain. Sir Jacob Aſhley's coach was taken, with great ſtore of plunder in it; and himſelf was very near taken, for we got the cap off his head; and in ſir Jacob's coach letters of Nicholas the court-liar, wherein was, among others, this expreſſion in one of them, 'That the Parliament had given particular direction to the general, to give the King no quarter, but to kill him if taken:' a moſt abominably falſe and impudent lie, like unto all the reſt of their irreligious practices.

"The army after this marched toward Leiceſter, following the purſuit, not willing to give the enemy any reſt, or liberty to rally; our horſe eſpecially being cloſe in their rear, and colonel Roſſiter (who came ſeaſonably to the engagement, and bravely charged where our noble general was) following apace in the purſuit of the enemy as aforeſaid, where now, for a while, we will leave them.

"And here now I ſhall in its moſt proper place, for the high honour and glory of our wonder-working God, and the admiration and aſtoniſhment of my preſent readers, and their ſucceeding poſterity, give you the moſt exact liſt of the ſlain, priſoners, and prizes taken in this moſt famous and glorious victory, which was as followeth: Slain in the fight and flight about 3000, and between 3 and 400 whores and Iriſh queans; one lord or eminent perſonage ſlain and found dead, with a ſtar and a red-croſs upon his coat; four lords mortally wounded; Prince Rupert bruiſed, and ſir Jacob Aſhley hurt on the head, his head-piece beaten off, and himſelf near taken.

"Priſoners: colonel ſir William Vaughan, colonel ſir William Bridges, colonel ſir —— Bridges, colonel ſir Richard Page, colonel Bard, colonel Bunkley, colonel Theophilus Gilby, colonel Nevill, lieutenant-colonels 7, ſerjeant-majors 12, captains 55, lieutenants 55, enſigns 45, beſides of inferior officers above 200; 2000 horſe with their riders, many ladies and gentlewomen; of the King's officers and ſervants 11 or 12, beſides four of his footmen, and one of Prince Maurice's: in all above 4000 priſoners. Arms, at leaſt 9000, ſix rich coaches, and other coaches beſides; the King's own coach, and therein that cabinet of ſecret letters of the King's and Queen's, ſince this fight printed and publiſhed, to the amazement of the world; Rupert's coach alſo, and both the King's and Rupert's ſumpters, with much wealth and riches; the King's ſtandard, the Queen's ſtandard, Prince Charles his ſtandard, the Duke of York's ſtandard, and Rupert's ſtandard; ſix colours of horſe, and 40 colours of foot, one whereof repreſented a pair of horns, with this motto, Come, Cuckold; which being one of the firſt colours that were taken, the word was on the purſuit returned to the enemy with much mirth and ſcorn among our ſoldiers. Taken alſo 12 pieces of ordnance, 40 barrels of gunpowder, 200 carriages, 12 carriages of boats, with their anchors and cables: in ſum, all their bag and baggage. The King himſelf fled toward, and ſo clean through Leiceſter.

"Thus, in this moſt famous and renowned victory, did the Lord indeed ſhew himſelf; and therefore our moſt pious and prudent Parliamentary Worthies, immediately on their perfect knowledge of it, appointed a day of ſolemn thankſgiving [1]."

On the 15th of June, "Fairfax gave orders for the army and train to march after them the next day, being Sunday, without any more intermiſſion; the purſuit of the victory being of parallel conſequence with the obtaining it. Theſe orders were chearfully obeyed, though the long march of the foot for many days together, and the vehemency of the battle, might have made them reſt. That night they quartered at Great Glen, four miles ſhort of Leiceſter: but the horſe came nearer; which ſo much alarmed the nobility and gentry that had fled thither for ſecurity, that they fled thence in great haſte, leaving the lord Haſtings to defend the place. The King in the mean time, not judging it ſafe to lodge at Leiceſter, departed to Aſhby de la Zouch, where he repoſed himſelf ſome few hours; but ſtayed not there, making all ſpeed he could for Lichfield in the night, and from thence into Wales. The other part of the rout, being the Northern horſe under ſir Marmaduke Langdale, fled incontinently from the battle to Newark; and narrowly eſcaped ſir John Gell, who was advancing with 2000 horſe from Nottingham, to join with the general. The general Fairfax was once unreſolved whether he ſhould preſently march to relieve Taunton, ſorely diſtreſſed by the lord Goring, or undertake Leiceſter. He had received full information of the ſtrength of that army, and what a deſperate forlorn condition Blake the governor was in; yet knowing that now there was no poſſibility of juncture with the King, of which before the fight Goring had aſſured his Majeſty within few days, he reſolved to reduce Leiceſter firſt. On Monday the 16th the whole army came before the town, when the general ſent a ſummons to lord Haſtings, to deliver it to the uſe of the Parliament; who very reſolutely refuſed them: and thereupon command was given for a preſent ſtorm[1]."

---

[1] Vicars, pp. 159—167.

June 16, the meſſengers who had brought the news of Fairfax's victory were rewarded by the Parliament; and a public day of thankſgiving was voted[2].

On the ſame day the following letter, from ſir Thomas Fairfax, was addreſſed "To the right honourable the committee of both kingdoms.

"My lords and gentlemen, I have met with ſome letters (here incloſed) going to the king, which I thought fit to haſten to your lordſhips[3]. The army is upon a march from Great Glynn towards Leiceſter, before which place I intend to draw up the army. The king, ſome ſay, is gone towards Cheſter. The greateſt body of their horſe is about Aſhby-de-la-Zouch; ſome are gone to Newark. I ſhall remain no longer in this place than either your lordſhips or myſelf ſhall diſcern how to improve this good ſucceſs which God has given us to the beſt advantage. I remain your lordſhips' moſt humble ſervant, Great Glynn, June 16. THO. FAIRFAX[4]."

"On the 17th, being Tueſday, great ſtore of ladders were brought againſt the town of Leiceſter, a battery raiſed, and two demi-cannons and a whole culverin taken at Naſeby were placed upon an old work againſt the Newark, being the very ſame guns which the King, not many days before, had uſed againſt the ſame place. Whereupon the lord of Loughborough, ſeeing the reſolution of the enemy, ſent a trumpeter out that day with letters, deſiring a parley concerning the ſurrender of the town; which began that evening, and concluded in an agreement; and on Wedneſday morning, June 18, the garriſon marched out, the governor to Aſhby de la Zouch, the ſoldiers and other officers to Lichfield, with ſtaves only in their hands[5]."

Sir Thomas Fairfax battered the town, and ſtormed it, and the governor ſent for a parley; to which ſir Thomas Fairfax agreed, and ſent colonel Pickering and colonel Rainſborough his commiſſioners into the town, to treat about the ſurrender of it. In the mean time, ſir Thomas Fairfax loſt no time to make proviſion for the ſtorm, and had intelligence that the King was advancing with about 4000 horſe towards them; but the commiſſioners agreed with the lord Loughborough, governor of Leiceſter, for the rendition of the town to ſir Thomas Fairfax upon articles; and there he had 14 pieces of ordnance, 30 colours, 200 arms, 500 horſe, 50 barrels of powder, and all their arms, ammunition, proviſions, bag and baggage[6]. The governor, at the time, was much cenſured for not reſiſting; as it might for a time, at leaſt, have ſtopped the rapid progreſs of a victorious army.

On the 18th, before the news of the ſurrender arrived, an order was made for a collection on the following day, "in all the churches and chapels in the cities of London and Weſtminſter, lines of communication, and bills of mortality, for the uſe of the poor inhabitants of Leiceſter, and for the relief of the ſoldiers that were priſoners, and had been taken there[7]."

On the 19th, "both Houſes of Parliament, and the prime body of the city of London, keeping the day of ſolemn thankſgiving, that very day in the morning before the ſermons began, the moſt welcome news of the happy regaining of the town of Leiceſter, by ever-to be renowned ſir Thomas Fairfax, was brought to London;" and publiſhed under the following title:

"An exact and perfect relation of the manner of taking of Leiceſter; with the treaty and all the particulars concerning the ſame; certified by a letter from an eminent perſon (there) of the Army.

"Honoured Sir; Upon the routing of the King's army, ſir John Gell gathered together all the forces of Derbyſhire, Nottinghamſhire, and the adjacent parts, that he could; and on Monday the 16th of June, 1646, they met with ſome of the King's horſe, and took 200; and another party met with ſome of the Newarkers, and fell upon them, and routed them; took 60 horſes, 42 priſoners, and 80 arms. The Scots, we hear, are at Cheſterfield, and ſir William Brereton at Stafford, marching this way. On the ſaid Monday, June the 16th, ſir Thomas Fairfax lay before Leiceſter, and ſent in a ſummons to the town, to require the governor to ſurrender it to him for the uſe of the Parliament; and putting it to them to conſider how the King was routed; and ſhewing them what uſe they might make of that clemency, with divers other very gallant expreſſions to the ſummons, to advertize them how much better it was for them to ſurrender, than to force him to take it by ſtorming. To this ſummons the enemy ſent a negative anſwer, poſitively this, 'That they would not ſurrender it.' Whereupon ſir Thomas Fairfax called a council of war, to conſult about the ſtorming of it, which was ſoon concluded on; that they ſhould prepare all things in readineſs to round it the next day; which was done with all expedition, not loſing any time. So they fell preſently to raiſing of batteries, and doing all things that were neceſſary for the ſtorming thereof, according as they had appointed; and continued providing every thing that was requiſite for the doing thereof, to be in a readineſs to batter it the next day; and ſent into the country thereabouts for ſuch helps as were neceſſary for work; which went on with great ſpeed both night and day; ſo deſirous we are to have a ſpeedy end of the work, that there may be an end of theſe wars if poſſible. On Tueſday, the 17th of June, we drew down our ordnance, and played with our pieces againſt the town; we ſtormed it, playing with our ordnance very hot on the Newark ſide, which we conceived was their greateſt ſtrength; and in a ſhort time we made a breach in their works; which ſtruck ſuch a terror into the hearts of the enemy, that the governor ſent to us to deſire a parley, and offered to ſurrender on very fair terms, as upon capitulation ſhould be agreed upon. To this requeſt ſir Thomas Fairfax (being willing to ſave the ſpilling of innocent blood as much as may be) aſſented; and promiſed ſpeedily to ſend in commiſſioners for the treaty, and called a council of war; and it was agreed that colonel Pickering and colonel Rainſborough ſhould go into Leiceſter, to treat with the governor about the ſurrendering the ſaid garriſon to ſir Thomas Fairfax; and accordingly a ſafe conduct was deſired for them; which being ſent, they went to capitulate with the governor about the ſurrender thereof. In the mean time, ſir Thomas Fairfax was not idle, nor did he loſe any time, but went on providing and furniſhing himſelf with piters, carts, hay, granadoes, ladders, and all other things neceſſary for ſtorming, reſolved to fall on at their return, in caſe that they ſhould not agree, not knowing how things might fall out; during which time there was both great pains and care taken by all in their places for the going on in the ſaid work. In the mean time we had intelligence that the king was on Monday the 16th of June at Sheffield; that he came from Aſhby de la Zouch thither, with about 2000 horſe or more, the day before, viz. Sunday night; and marched that morning (viz. Monday morning) to a rendezvous near Dudley caſtle; where, with the Lichfield and Dudley horſe, and others that come in to their rendezvous, the King had above 3000 horſe, as is conjectured by the country people which ſaw them. About eleven of the clock on Monday morning they marched from thence to Stourbridge, where he had ſome more horſe come in, ſo that in all it is conceived that he is near 4000; divers of which he hath been fain to recruit with freſh arms from Lichfield, Dudley, and other garriſons thereabouts. The King, it is believed, went for Worceſter, and there joined with what forces Gerhard can relieve him with, and ſome more forces that he looks for out of the Weſt; but colonel Gerhard hath met him with a rout alſo in Shropſhire, where he loſt almoſt 400 men by fighting with the country forces; and the governor of Worceſter was killed, and divers other officers of note were ſlain and taken. All the reſt of that day, viz. Monday the 16th of June, our commiſſioners were in capitulation with the enemy in Leiceſter; and the army went on preparing for a ſtorm, having no anſwer that night; and looking for their return the next morning very early, were reſolved to fall on if they had not agreed with the enemy.

---

[1] Heath's Chronicle, p 80.
[2] Journals of the Lords, vol. VII. p. 439.
[3] Deeſt in Originali.
[4] Journals of the Commons, vol. IV. p. 175.
[5] Heath, p. 80.
[6] Whitlock, p. 146.
[7] Journals of the Commons, vol. IV. p. 176.

On Wedneſday, June 18, about two of the clock, the Commiſſioners returned, with a concluſion of the delivery of it up upon theſe articles following.

"The articles for the ſurrender of the town and garriſon of Leiceſter to ſir Thomas Fairfax, for the uſe and ſervice of the Parliament, agreed on between colonels Pickering and Rainſborough.

"1. That the lord Loughborough ſhall have quarter granted him, and have protection for his perſon, to be ſafely conveyed to the garriſon of Aſhby de la Zouch.

2. That all field officers, colonels, lieutenants-colonels, ſerjeants, majors, and captains, and lieutenants of horſe (but not of foot), ſhall march away with their own particular ſingle horſe and arms, with protection for their own perſons.

3. That all the reſt of the officers ſhall be conveyed ſafely to the garriſon of Lichfield with ſtaves only, and no other weapons in their hand.

4. That all common ſoldiers have quarter only for their lives, and be conveyed to Lichfield without any other weapons, ſave only ſtaves in their hands.

5. That, before ten of the clock of the ſaid morning, June 18, the governor of the town and the lord Loughborough, and all the reſt of the officers and ſoldiers, march out of the garriſon, according to the agreement aforeſaid.

6. That ſir Thomas Fairfax be permitted to enter in at ten of the clock the ſaid Wedneſday morning with his forces, and take poſſeſſion of the garriſon.

7. That all the pieces of cannon, great and ſmall, now in the garriſon of Leiceſter, be left to ſir T. Fairfax.

8. That all the arms and ammunition now in Leiceſter be left to ſir Thomas Fairfax, ſave only what is agreed to for the officers of horſe aforeſaid.

9. That all the proviſions, colours, bag and baggage, be alſo left to ſir Thomas Fairfax.

10. That all the horſe (ſave only thoſe excepted for the officers aforeſaid) that are in the garriſon of Leiceſter be delivered up to ſir Thomas Fairfax, for the ſervice of the Parliament.

11. That all the officers and ſoldiers have quarter for their lives.

12. That all the priſoners of war that are in Leiceſter at the ſame time be releaſed, and ſet free to ſerve the Parliament.

"With theſe articles the commiſſioners returned to ſir Thomas Fairfax; certifying farther, how joyful that poor town of Leiceſter was, at the hearing of the ſaid agreement, and that they ſhould be rid of the Cavaliers. Thus you ſee the Lord doth wonderfully for us, above the reach of man's wiſdom. Truly we cannot but much admire the goodneſs of Almighty God to us, in doing ſo great things for us: we cannot aſcribe it to any but to the hand of God Almighty, who is the Lord of Hoſts. And it is to be admired to ſee the carriage of our general, and indeed all the officers; how lovingly we agree; how full of courage all men are, both officers and ſoldiers, when we are in array; what heavenly expreſſions there is from all; and our general doth carry himſelf in ſo excellent a manner, that it rouſed up the courage of all that ſee him; and the like alſo did major Skippon, who, by reaſon of his wound, could not be here in the taking of Leiceſter: but we hope that he will recover; for in all deſigns, by his wiſdom and valour, his very name is a terror to the enemy [1]."

"June 18, Leiceſter was retaken by the Rebels, upon articles that his Majeſty's ſoldiers within ſhould march away, the officers with horſes and arms, and the common ſoldiers without; which agreement was moſt perfidiouſly broken by the Rebels. The ſame 18th of June, a party from Newark, commanded by captain Wright, routed 200 of the rebels' horſe at Ryby in Lincolnſhire, ſlew their commander in chief, lieutenant-colonel Harrington, with ſome others, and took 50 priſoners, with their horſes and arms [2]."

"A liſt of what was taken in the town and garriſon of Leiceſter: 500 horſe, 2000 arms, 14 pieces of ordnance, 50 barrels of powder, many ſkeins of match, all Loughborough's carriages, and much of his treaſure that he had got in plundering of the town; all their proviſions and ammunition, bag and baggage, 30 colours, with much other purchaſe, too large to inſiſt on the particulars here [3]."

"By two letters this day from the army, dated Leiceſter, June 19, there was a confirmation of the taking of Leiceſter; whereunto I muſt add, beſides what is already ſet down, that before the ſurrender thereof, ſir Thomas Fairfax had begun to ſtorm it, and made ſome breach in the enemy's works with the cannon. Letters alſo from Nottingham aſcertain that the Scots are come thither with a body of 7000 foot, and 4000 horſe; and a debate was in the Houſe upon giving them further orders touching their advance. It is reported, that noble ſir Thomas Fairfax, being deſirous to let no opportunity ſlip in following the victorious ſucceſs God hath given him, hath already ſettled Leiceſter in a poſture of defence for the Parliament, and is advancing thence to find the enemy [4]."

June 20, ſir Thomas Fairfax's army, notwithſtanding their hard ſervice, marched from Leiceſter, and ſate before Aſhby-de-la-Zouch; and on the 24th, ſir Thomas Fairfax proſecuted the King's forces towards Hereford; and left colonel Needham governor of Leiceſter [5].

"The ſeveral marches of the King ſince he was routed, and his numbers, and how purſued by ſir John Gell, and 200 horſe by him taken from the king; brought from the army, and commanded to be forthwith publiſhed," was printed by Thomas Forcet, June 20. But to this Pamphlet it may be ſufficient here to refer; as the ſubſtance of it will be more authentically collected in the following extracts from the very curious diary of captain Richard Symonds [6]:

"Sunday, June 15, his Majeſty, about 10 of the clock in the morning, left Aſhby, and went to Lichfield that night. He lay in the Cloſe that night. The horſe were quartered in villages round about, ſome in the city. Here the King left colonel Bagott's regiment of horſe. The ſtout governor left here, wounded in his right arm.

Monday, his Majeſty marched to Wolverhampton.

Tueſday, to Bewdly. Earl of Lichfield to Nether Arle; Mr. Muckle lives there. Wedneſday, we reſted.

Thurſday, 18 June, to Bromyard, co. Hereford, and to Hereford that night, 26 miles. This march was very bad way, hilly and woody. Very poor churches and thin in this part of Worceſterſhire and Herefordſhire.

King's troops to Brinſop, afterwards to Pembridge.

Colonel Barnabe Scudamore, brother to the lord Scudamore, is governor of Hereford city.

Sir William Vavaſor firſt governor of Hereford.

Mr. Coningſby was governor of Hereford firſt; and when ſir William Waller came againſt it, and ſhot a piece of cannon, and killed one man, rendered upon conditions; 2500 ſoldiers in it.

Waller ſtaid about a month in it, and left it.

Then colonel Myn was governor, and was killed at Red Marley in Glouceſterſhire by Maſſey's men.

Then Prince Rupert put in Colonel Scudamore.

Coningſby of Hampton-court; for every man's houſe is called a court here, K.

Stapleton caſtle (an antient ſeat of the Mortimers earl of the Marches, now ſir Gilbert Cornwall's) was ſtrong; but, becauſe there was no water near, it was pulled down by Ludlow's governor, leſt the enemy ſhould make uſe of it.

---

[1] King's Pamphlets, ſmall 4to. 212, 42.

[2] Mercurius Ruſticus.

[3] Mercurius Veridicus, June 21.

[4] Ibid.

[5] Whitlock, p. 147.

[6] Harl. MSS. 911. 944.

Croft houſe defaced by Ludlow men.

Sir William Littleton's houſe defaced, leſt the enemy ſhould make uſe of it.

Here in Herefordſhire a quarter of mutton 14*d.*; rye 12*d* a buſhel. Rye is the beſt grain grown generally in the county, and oats and peaſe. Little timber in the ſhire.

The day before we came to Hereford, his Majeſty had intelligence that Fairfax had appeared before Leiceſter, and that the lord Loughborough had yielded it upon conditions; to march away, the ſoldiers ſans armes, officers with ſwords.

Two regiments of horſe, viz. Queen's and Cary's; the men marched; but horſes and arms the enemy had.

1500 foot marched out of Leiceſter, with thoſe gentlemen and wounded men that came in, I ſuppoſe.

At Hereford, Wedneſday, June 25, the King knighted ſir Dudley Wyatt, aud ſent him to France.

Monday, June 30, the King's horſe guards removed to Greſmond, co. Monmouth. There are the walls of an old caſtle on the North ſide of the town, moated, but in part dry, upon the quarry of ſtone.

Tueſday, July 1, his Majeſty left Hereford, and marched to Abergavenny, with only theſe horſe: King's troop, Queen's troop, Prince Rupert's troop of life guard, Prince Rupert's regiment of horſe.

The governor of Hereford, with the gentlemen of the ſhire, attended the King to Mr. Pritchard's houſe near Greſmond, where the King dined. There his Majeſty knighted ſir Henry Lingham, of Herefordſhire.

Here, and in other pariſhes in this ſhire, they ſtrew the graves with herbs every Sunday or holiday.

The King's troops quartered this night at Treargaire, Bromgwine, Bettus, and Clethey, co. Monmouth, near Ragland caſtle.

Thurſday, July 3, his Majeſty went to Ragland caſtle, and lay there.

H. W. and R. S. Friday July 4, to Brecknock, where colonel general Herbert Price lives, and is governor; col. Turbevill Morgan is governor under him.

About the 8th of July, the two troops were going to Black Rock; where the king intended to go over, had not Goring's news ſtopt.

About Thurſday, July 10, ſir Thomas Fairfax and lord Goring had a touch about Ilcheſter, co. Somerſet, loſt two great guns, and not 200 men. Goring put his ordnance into Bridgewater, and his carriages and .... hundred foot. Himſelf and the reſt retreated to Tiverton, co. Devon. An army of Scots at this time at Droitwich, co. Worceſter. Parliament ſhips took many of the Swanſey boats; and ſome from Cardiff.

Bridgewater beſieged by Fairfax from about the 11th of July.

About the 16th of July, Prince Rupert beat ſir Robert Pye's quarters at Wells, with ſome horſe of Briſtol.

His Majeſty ſtayed at Ragland till Wedneſday, July 16; and on that day, attended with the duke of Richmond, earls of Lindſey, Lichfield, Kernwagh, commiſſioners Digby and Bellaſis, two troops, went to ſir William Morgan's houſe in the county of Monmouth, and dined; and that night to Cardiff (the caſtle is the ancient poſſeſſion and barony of the earl of Pembroke); to meet the commiſſioner to raiſe men, and ſettle the town.

July 17, came a gentleman to Cardiff, with news to the King, that lord Montroſe had beat the Scots near Edinburgh; killed Bayly, their lieutenant-general, routed the reſt. Montroſe was about 8000 foot, two troops, and the horſe.

Thurſday night, his Majeſty lay at ſir Wm. Morgan's.

Friday, to Ragland.

Tueſday, July 22, his Majeſty went to Creeke, Mr. More's houſe, attended with the duke of Richmond, earls of Lindſey and Lichfield, lords Digby and Aſtley, his ſervants, and other gentlemen, and met Prince Rupert from Briſtol. Their reſolution was, to ſend over the horſe as ſoon as may be, and put all the new-raiſed foot in that principality into garriſons.

His Majeſty returned that night to Ragland; his Highneſs the Prince to Briſtol.

The Scots at this time, about Wedneſday July 23, ſtormed a houſe called Cannon Froome, a garriſon of the King's, in Herefordſhire; colonel Barnard governor. All were put to the ſword.

Thurſday, July 24, came intelligence to Briſtol, that ſir Thomas Fairfax had taken Bridgewater the day before. Propoſitions were ſent into the town, that the inhabitants and townſmen ſhould have quarter. The townſmen ſet it on fire in divers places; in the mean time they ſtormed it, and got it. Moſt of the town was burnt, except ſome houſes near the caſtle.

The King came this day to Black Rock, intending to get over towards Briſtol. The gentlemen of Wales perſuaded earneſtly his ſtay, and immediately raiſed the hoop hoop. The news of Bridgewater's unexpected loſs rather ſtayed.

Colonel Taylor's regiment of foot in Briſtol. Six colours: motto, Pro Deo et Rege.

The rebels are making a garriſon of a houſe three miles from Bath, Bromham Moor.

Sunday, July 27, his Majeſty lay at Ruperrie, a fair eſtate of Mr. Morgan, co. Monmouth. The caſtle of Abergavenny burnt, viz. the habitable part; the garriſon drawn out and quitted. About this time the garriſon of Kilpeck-caſtle houſe ſlighted.

Tueſday, July 29, his Majeſty, attended by the duke of Richmond, earl of Lindſey high chamberlain, earl of Lichfield, lord Kernwagh, and his regiment of guards, went from Ruperrie to Cardiff; there dined; and in the afternoon went to a rendezvous of the countrymen and inhabitants of Glamorganſhire; there he met the gentlemen of the county in a body on horſeback, and the reſt drawn up in a battaile, winged with horſe and a reſerve.

His Majeſty returned that night to Cardiff.

At this rendezvous in the county of Glamorgan, ſome articles or propoſitions were tendered to his Majeſty; which if he would pleaſe to grant, they would march, and continue in a body for the defence of his Majeſty and their country.

Propoſitions were, that the garriſon of Cardiff might be governed by a country gentleman of their own.

Wedneſday, 30 July, this body of the inhabitants of Glamorganſhire had their rendezvous within four miles of Cardiff. They lay in the field this night, and proviſions brought in to them.

Thurſday, This body choſe their officers of their own county. Every hundred choſe their own captains. Their rendezvous was at Kevenon, four miles from Cardiff, the ſame place as the day before. This day the king and they agreed upon their propoſitions.

Friday, the rendezvous was Llaintiſſent.

They firſt called themſelves the peaceable army.

This county never dealt with the militia; never admitted.

Thurſday, July 31, in the caſtle of Cardiff, the King knighted his cornet, ſir John Walpole.

Aug. 4, King's guards marched towards Brecknock.

Tueſday, 5, his Majeſty left Cardiff, and went that night over the mountains to Brecknock.

Wedneſday, to Radnor. By the way dined at ſir—— Williams baronet's fair ſeat in Brecknockſhire.

Thurſday, to Ludlow.

In this march he was accompanied with theſe horſe: general Gerard's, ſir Marmaduke Langdale's, ſir William Vaughan's. Sir Thomas Glemham's foot, that came from Carliſle to Cardiff marched as the King's life guards. His horſe in all 300.

Friday, 8, to Bridgnorth, a pretty town; one church beſide that in the caſtle. Sir Lewis Kirke is governor.

Saturday, reſted. Sunday, to Lichfield, 24 miles.

Monday, reſted. Tueſday, to Tetbury.

Wedneſday, Auguſt 13, to Aſhbourn, co. Derby. In this march a body of 500 of the enemy's horſe fell upon our rear near Barton garriſon by Tetbury, were well received by us; 20 of ours hurt; three or four on both ſides killed; we took 12 priſoners, and loſt ſome, and a captain. General Gerard's rear.

The Scots break up Prince Maurice's troop of reformadoes commanded by lord Molineux at their quarters at Bewdley; took them almoſt all.

When the King came from Lichfield, he drew out thence 100 foot, which march now with him.

Sir Thomas Glenham's foot were made dragoons in Brecknockſhire, and march too with us.

Thurſday, Auguſt 14, his Majeſty marched over the park to Chatſworth, co. Derby, a very fair houſe of ſtone, amongſt the barren hills, belonging to the counteſs of Devon. In the gallery of the houſe is a pedigree of the family of Cavendiſh written on the wall.

Friday, to Welbeck, a garriſon and houſe of the marquis of Newcaſtle, where col. Freteſvil is governor.

King's guards at Warſop, co. Nottingham.

Welbeck was ſurpriſed by Newark horſe, under the command of ſir Richard Willys, about 3 weeks ſince. In a wood near the poſt ſtood his horſe in ambuſh; and, when the trench was beat, let down their bridge for their ſcouts and horſe, under the command of major Jarriot, a Frenchman; and though they pulled up the bridge a foot high, yet they got in and took it. They diſputed every yard; and our men alighted, and with their piſtols ſcaled and got up.

Saturday, Auguſt 17, reſted.

Scots removed their ſiege of Hereford, and are advanced towards Cheſter.

Fairfax is before Sherborne caſtle, where ſir Lewis Dyve is governor.

Sunday, after ſermon at Welbeck, the King went into Yorkſhire, and lay at . . . . .

General Gerard lay at Tickhill, co. York, where the enemy has a caſtle commanded by a high conſtable.

The King's guards to Doncaſter, co. York.

Monday morning, the King came to Doncaſter.

The foot which were at Pontefract caſtle when it was yielded were put into Welbeck houſe under colonel Freteſvill's command; and when his Majeſty marched to Doncaſter, he drew them out; viz. 250; four blue colours and one red.

Monday, Auguſt 19, his Majeſty's army conſiſted of theſe. His life-guard of horſe, commanded by lord Bernard Stuart, earl of Lichfield, conſiſted of the King's troop, Queen's troop, lord Lichfield's troop, ſir Thomas Glemham's horſe, commanded by ſir Henry Stradling; toto, effectually, 300.

General Gerard, lord Brandon, 800; Sir Marmaduke Langdale's brigade, 700; Sir William Vaughan's brigade, with Prince Maurice's regiment, 400. Effectually fighting horſe, toto, 2200.

Foot, Welbeck 250; Lichfield, drawn out when the King came thence, 150. Total, 400.

Some ammunition carried upon horſes; 3 or 4 carts full of pikes, which the King had from Tetbury, which were col. Nevill's of Holt.

Monday and Tueſday, reſted at Doncaſter.

Wedneſday, Auguſt 20, to Retford, the King's quarters, co. Nottingham.

Thurſday 21, The King and Court went to Newark; the King's regiment of horſe-guards to Southwell.

Friday, at Belvoir caſtle, where one Lucas, ſometime horſekeeper to the earl of Roteland, is governor.

Saturday, Auguſt 23, to Stamford, co. Lincoln.

On the hill before ye come into the town ſtands a lofty large croſs, built by Edward III. in memory of Eleanor his queen, whoſe corpſe reſted here, coming from the North. Upon the top of this croſs theſe three ſhields are often carved.

1. Gules, three lions paſſant guardant in pale Or; England.—2. . . . three ſiniſter bends . . . within a border.—3. Quarterly, 1. and 4. Gules, a caſtle triple-towered Or, Caſtile; 2. and 3. Argent, a lion rampant Purpure, Leon.

Sunday 24, to Huntingdon. In this march, before we came to Stilton, we met with a body of horſe lately raiſed out of Suffolk and Eſſex, about 400, commanded by colonel ——, lieutenant-colonel Lehunt, major —— (Scotus), and captain Roe. The major and about 100 were taken that night. They a little diſputed Huntingdon; but we entered, notwithſtanding a large ditch encompaſſed it, lately ſcowered and caſt up, and a breaſt-work and gate in the road. Theſe rebels ran away to Cambridge, all of them back and breaſt, head piece, brace of piſtols; officers more. Every troop conſiſted of 100.

Monday 25, reſted at Huntingdon.

Tueſday, Auguſt 26, to Woborne, co. Bedford: the King lay at the earl of Bedford's houſe there.

Wedneſday 27, to Wing. The King lay in the earl of Carnarvon's houſe, the army in the adjoining cloſe.

Thurſday. This morning one of our ſoldiers was hanged on the tree in Wing town, for ſtealing the communion plate there.

This day we marched by Boſtoll Houſe, co. Bucks, belonging to the lady Denham. Sir William Campion is governor.

A pallizado, or rather a ſtockado, without the graffe; a deep graffe and wide, full of water. A pallizado above the falſe bray, and another ſix or ſeven foot above that, near the top of the curtain. Some of this faſhioned pallizadoes are upon the old waters at Monmouth. The pallizadoes at Woodſtock ſtand upon the top of the curtain as here; and the like at the falſe bray. At Worceſter, Prince Maurice has made without the ditch (that is dry on that ſide that goes to Droitwich) a low breaſt-work, and a ſtockado without that. That top of the breaſt-work is not a foot above the ground on the outſide.

The head quarter of our horſe was at Burceſter.

His Majeſty, this Thurſday, Auguſt 28, went to Oxford; his guards to Iſlip, &c. Friday, reſted.

Saturday 30, to Shipton upon Stour.

Sunday, to Worceſter; guards at Claynche.

Monday, Sept. 1, reſted. Tueſday, reſted.

Wedneſday 3, to Bromyard, co. Hereford. There his Majeſty and the Court lay; the army lay in the field.

Thurſday, the King, with his own regiment, to Hereford. The Scots, hearing of his Majeſty's coming, had removed their ſiege from Hereford on Tueſday before, being the 2d of September, and marched towards Glouceſter. Davy Leſlie is their lieutenant-general of the horſe; —— Crawford was major-general. He was ſlain at a ſally before the town. They were got near the town, and had made two breaches, but were repulſed; two mines; and drained the ditch. 3 or 4000, and 1500 horſe of the Scots.

The King's army reſted this day; were quartered five miles beyond Hereford. This Thurſday came news that the Scots horſe were returned out of the North, and came back near Worceſter. The King knighted the lieutenant-governor of Hereford, ſir Nicholas Throckmorton; and ſir William Layton, the lieutenant-colonel of the King's life guards of foot.

Friday, the King went to Leominſter, co. Hereford, and lay that night at Weobley. His guards returned to their old quarters.

Saturday, the King determined to go to Abergavenny. But 'twas altered; the guards to Letton, his Majeſty to Hereford.

Sunday, to Ragland; guards to Treargaire.

Thurſday, Sept. 11, the King, attended with his guards, went to Abergavenny; returned at night to Ragland. His buſineſs at Abergavenny was, to commit five chief hunderers of the counties of Monmouth and Glamorgan from relieving Hereford, viz. Sir Trevor Williams (but he was bayled); Mr. Morgan of Treargaire; Mr. Herbert of Colbrooke; Mr. Baker; Mr. ———.

During the time of the King's being at Ragland, when he firſt came, he ſent ſir Marmaduke Langdale with his horſe to Cardiff, with lord Aſtley and 100 foor out of Monmouth, ... foot out of Ragland, Chepſtow, &c. to parley with the Glamorganſhire Peace army, who were again riſen. Both armies met eight miles off Cardiff in Glamorganſhire. The Peace army, ſeeing lord Aſtley's reſolved to fight, though not conſiderable in number, agreed to lay down their arms, and provide 1000 men and arms within a month for the King, money, &c.

The next day or two after, the enemy ſent them ammunition and arms by ſea, landed in Pembrokeſhire.

Then theſe rogues, hearing of the loſs of Briſtol, joined with the Pembrokeſhire forces.

Sir Marmaduke Langdale marched toward Brecknock.

Friday, Sept. 12, in the afternoon, his Majeſty, attended with his guards, left Ragland, and marched ſome miles towards Hereford; but returned; the guards to Abergavenny.

Saturday, the King reſted at Ragland. Gerard's horſe, at the time the King was at Ragland, were about Ludlow; 2000 of the enemy's horſe about Lemſter.

Sunday, about noon, his Majeſty left Ragland, and marched to Monmouth; thence that night to Hereford.

Monday, Sept. 15, his Majeſty, in the morning, attended by his guards, marched ſome miles towards Bromyard; but, by reaſon Gerard's horſe had not orders ſoon enough to appear at the rendezvous, &c. his Majeſty returned to Hereford, accompanied by Prince Maurice and general Gerard.

His Majeſty read a copy of a letter from Montroſe, of his thorough victory in Scotland.—Guards to Madley.

Tueſday, Sept. 16, ſir Marmaduke Langdale's horſe came to quarter about Biford, &c.

General Gerard's horſe at . . . . .

Pointz's horſe, above 2000, was come to Leominſter.

This morning we received orders to march; but remanded; ſo reſted.

His Majeſty diſpatched letters of buſineſs to Oxford, and ſent them by ſir Henry Wrothe, whom he now knighted in the Biſhop's palace in Hereford.

Wedneſday, Sept. 17, the whole army met at a rendezvous upon Arthurſtone heath, near Durſton caſtle, co. Hereford; and from thence his Majeſty marched to Ham Lacy, the ſeat of the lord viſcount Scudamore. This day the neareſt enemy (and whoſe buſineſs it was to attend the King's motion), viz. Pointz and Roſſiter's horſe, were about Lemſter.

Guards to Rolſton.

Thurſday, the 18th, the rendezvous was over Wye, at Stoke dye in Herefordſhire; marched thence over the river Arne betwixt Morden and Wellington.

Intelligence this morning at the rendezvous, that the ſaid enemy had marched all night, and were about between us and Worceſter.

This night to Preſtayne, co. Radnor.

Friday 19. This day we marched from Preſtayne; and, except in the firſt three miles, we never ſaw a houſe or church over the mountains. They call it 10 miles—but 20—till we come to Newtown, co. Montgomery.—Saturday, reſted.

Sunday, Sept. 21. over the mountains, leſs barren than the day before, by ſir Arthur Blaney's houſe, to Llan Vutlyſe, a borough town in Montgomeryſhire.

Monday 22, over ſuch mountains to Chirke caſtle, Salop. There the king lay. —— Watts is governor.

The guards to Llangothlyn, a market town, co. Denbigh, three miles from Chirke.

News this day, that colonel William Legg, the governor of Oxford, was committed; that Prince Rupert's commiſſion was declared null, that part of the outworks at Cheſter was betrayed to the enemy by a captain and lieutenant—both apprehended.

The King ſent to Watts, to ſend to lord Byron, to Cheſter, to hold out 24 hours.

Tueſday, his Majeſty marched towards Cheſter, attended with Mountague earl of Lindſey, ... earl of Cork, earl of Lichfield, lord Digby, lord Aſtley, lord Gerard. His force with him were, his own regiment of life-guards, conſiſting of theſe troops:

The King's.

The Queen's, commanded by ſir Edward Brett, the major of the regiment.

Earl of Lichfield's; lieutenant-colonel Gourdon, Scotus, commanded it. They were moſt Scots officers.

Sir Henry Stradling's troop, which came from Carliſle with ſir Thomas Glemham.—Toto, about 200.

Lord general Charles Gerard was alſo then with the King, with his gallant troop of life-guards; 140 men.

Motto of Gerard's cornet, "At all that's round."

Colonel Herbert Price's horſe.

Sir Marmaduke Langdale's brigade.

Sir Thomas Blackſtone's brigade.

Sir William Vaughan's brigade and general Gerard's horſe marched before all night towards Holt caſtle, co. Denbigh, a garriſon of the King's, commanded by ſir Richard Lloyd, where we have a paſs of boats over the river. Their buſineſs was to fall upon, or, &c. thoſe horſe and foot that lay before Cheſter. The King went into Cheſter, and lay at ſir Arthur Gamul's houſe; his guards watched in the ſtreet. The enemy, who were gotten into the outworks which joined the ſuburbs, had made a breach the day before; and had entered had it not been moſt gallantly defended.

Wedneſday, Sept. 24, contrary to expectation, Pointz's horſe were come between Nantwich and Cheſter, to relieve thoſe forces of their party who were afore Cheſter, and to fight the King, as appeared by his letters intercepted by ſir Richard Lloyd to this purpoſe (directed to Jones, who ſometime was ſtudent in Lincoln's Inn, and commanded the horſe that beſieged Cheſter); thanking them for keeping their ground notwithſtanding the King's approach; and tells them a near relation or account of the King's ſtrength, of his tired over-marched horſe, of his number of dragoons, of his reſolution to engage them if poſſible, &c.

This morning ſir Marmaduke Langdale, on Cheſter ſide of the river Dee, and not far from Beeſton caſtle, charged Pointz's horſe, beat in and took ſome cornets; but they beat us again for it. About 12 of the clock, thoſe horſe which came with the King, and 200 foot, were drawn out of Cheſter; 900 priſoners of ours taken, and carried to Nantwich, whereof about 20 gentlemen of the King's own troop.

Beeſton caſtle was beſieged at this time.

Thurſday 25, about 9 and 10 in the morning, the King left Cheſter, and went to Harding caſtle, governed by ſir William Neale, and ſtayed three hours; and went that night to Denbigh caſtle, which is governed by Mr. Saliſbury [1], repaired by him and his kindred at their own coſt; had his commiſſion from the King two years ſince.

Sir Marmaduke Langdale's rendezvous was early this morning within two miles of Holt caſtle.

Friday, Sept. 26, reſted. I ſaw a rainbow within a mile of Denbigh, at five in the morning.

Saturday 27, was a general rendezvous three miles from Denbigh.

News again that Montroſe had routed David Leghly about Kelſo on the borders; that Prince Maurice was coming with 1000 horſe to us, and was at Chirke.

All ours were reanimated, and expected to follow Pointz to the North.

Sunday 28, after ſermon, about noon, came intelligence that the enemy's horſe were over the river; a little afore we heard that they were gone towards Scarborough (ſo ill intelligence has the King!): but they went but into freſh quarters about Nantwich to refreſh. About one o'clock, afternoon, the King marched through Ruthyn, where there is a large caſtle, and fortified, to Chirke caſtle, co. Denbigh: there Prince Maurice met us with his troops, and thoſe of Prince Rupert's horſe that came from Briſtol, Lucas's horſe, &c.—Toto, 6 or 700.

Monday 29, leaving Oſweſtry (a garriſon of the rebels) on the left hand, to Llandiſilio and Llandrenis, co. Montgomery, where the army lay in the field; ſome chief in ſome houſes.

Tueſday, from thence early at day-break marched, leaving Shrewſbury three miles on the left hand, that night late and tediouſly to Bridgenorth; the rereguard got to Wenlock Magna, co. Salop. In this march three or four alarms by Shrewſbury horſe; and five or ſix of them croſſed the way, and killed and took ſome.

---

[1] The following very loyal and ſpirited letter was addreſſed from this noble and valiant governor, Nov. 16, 1643, to his kinſman ſir Thomas Middelton, who had deſired him to ſurrender up Denbigh caſtle to the Parliament:

"Sir, I deſire not to live longer than I approve myſelf true to my King and country, a lover of the true Proteſtant religion; and that I yield cheerful obedience to the King and the Parliament; and if the want of that obedience be your quarrel, or any part of the cauſe of your coming with force into theſe parts, it is an offence taken, but not given. But, to be plain; to betray ſo great a truſt as the keeping of Denbigh caſtle (though upon never ſo fair pretences) may be acceptable to them that deſire it, but in my opinion is in itſelf abominable, and muſt needs render him that ſhould do it odious to God and all good men; and I ſhall never account him my friend that ſhould move me to it. For the diſcharge of that truſt, in the mean time, and for no other cauſe, I have armed myſelf as well as God did enable me; and thoſe arms (with God's leave) I ſhall bear and uſe for the ſervice of my King and country. This is my anſwer to you, and, with God's help, the firm and conſtant reſolution of him that is your kinſman, and would be your true friend as far as truth and loyalty will give leave, WILLIAM SALISBURY."

Wedneſday, October 1, reſted. Intelligence that the Devizes and Berkley caſtles were both taken by Fairfax.

Thurſday 2, the King marched to Lichfield.

Upon the rendezvous going to Lichfield, the King knighted ſir . . . . Horwood, of the county of Salop; no ſoldier, nor in arms.—This day general Gerard's regiment returned from the rendezvous, quia tired, to have refreſhment under Bridgenorth garriſon. Ego etiam.

This day (by reaſon of the long and tedious marches) divers fell off. Some, as ſix, went into Birchall houſe.

Prince Maurice this morning, with his own troop (partly commanded by lord Molineux, and partly by ſir Thomas Sandys) went toward Worceſter.—Sir Thomas Glemham went to be governor of Oxford.

After the battle at Rowton Moor, co. Cheſter, upon the rendezvous near Denbigh, divers complaints came to the King and generals about horſes taken that were again found. Some took away their horſes where they found them. It was thus ordered by the King, according to the opinion of lord Aſtley in this caſe. One of ſir Marmaduke Langdale's ſoldiers was killed; his horſe the enemy took; and anon one of general Gerard's ſoldiers took the horſe away from the enemy. This horſe was challenged at the rendezvous, and it was adjudged to the firſt owner, ſir Marmaduke Langdale's man. The reaſon was given, that unleſs the enemy had had ſo much poſſeſſion of the horſe as to carry him to his quarters, it was nothing of validity to ſay he was taken from the enemy; ſo that, if the enemy had kept the horſe 12 or 24 hours at his own quarters, he had had a property in him; and he that then had taken the horſe might have owned him by this old law of war. This is like a law of goods taken from ſhips caſt away.

Saturday, Oct. 4, the remainder of ſir Charles Lloyd's regiment came from the Devizes, about 60.

Monday, Oct. 13. Prince Rupert at Lichfield, going to the King.

Captain Gatacre, of the county of Salop, killed in Bridgnorth by a gunner; the gunner killed too by him.

One endeavoured to hang himſelf the next day here.

Oct. 15. At this time the King reſted, and had his court at Newark; his army was thus diſpoſed of:

Horſe-guards and ſir Marmaduke Langdale's horſe at Newark; and Newark horſe, now about 300, there too. General Gerard's life-guard at Belvoir; his regiment gone into Wales.

Earl of Northampton's regiment at Wirton, a garriſon of ours, commanded by major Honywood.

Sir William Blakeſton's, Prince Rupert's remainder, Lucas's 50, &c. at Welbeck.—Toto 120.

Queen's regiment at Shelford; taken by the enemy, and all put to the ſword, refuſing quarter.

When the King was at Newark, he made ſir William Vaughan general of the horſe in the counties of Salop, Wigorn, Stafford, Hereford, South Wales, and North Wales.

Friday, Oct. 17, came intelligence to Bridgenorth, the King had left Newark, and gone towards Scotland to Montroſe the Sunday before; that ſir Thomas Fairfax had taken Wincheſter from Ogle.

A provoſt marſhal has power to hang two or three, or all that he takes in actual fault; but no power to make any caſt dice. That is as much or more than a general can do without a council of war, unleſs a proclamation be made a little before.

A parſon may be tried at a council of war; and one was ſo at Bridgenorth.

A Scot was tried at a council of war there; and he put on his hat afore them; and being reprehended for it by the governor, he told him he was equal to all except the governor; and they committed him for it.

Oct. 20, ſeveral colonels whoſe regiments were in Bridgenorth. Foot. Sir Lewis Kirke's, governor. Colonel John Corbett's. Colonel Billingſley's, the trained band. This regiment watches in the town. Colonel ſir Michael Earnleye's, one company of them. Charles Lloyd's came hither from the Devizes, 60. Foot, in all of theſe, about 260.—Horſe. Sir Francis Ottley, the high ſheriff. Sir Edward Acton, 10. Governor's troop, 60. Horſe, not 100.

Wedneſday, Oct. 22, lieutenant-colonel Slaughter marched out of Bridgenorth, about two o'clock in the afternoon. Governor's troop, commanded by captain Singe, 40. Sir H. Ottley's, &c.

That night by 8, to High Arcall; thence marched 30 horſe and 20 dragoons with us about 12 o'clock that night. By 9 next day to the caſtle of Chirke; ſir Thomas Middleton owns it, and formerly lived there; as alſo Denbigh and Ruthyn, in the ſame county.

Colonel Mark Trevor has the command of Ruthyn caſtle; a lieutenant there under him. Prince Rupert put him in. Captain Sword is governor.

Sunday, Oct. 26. At Newark, Prince Rupert, general Gerard, and ſir Richard Willys, came into the preſence when the King had almoſt dined. Prince Rupert came in diſcontentedly with his hands at his ſide, and approaches very near the King; whereat his Majeſty preſently commanded all to be taken away; and, riſing from the table, walked to a corner of the room. They three preſented themſelves before his Majeſty; and firſt Willys ſpake after this manner:

"Willys. When your Majeſty had . . . . and placed[1] . . . .

King. Say no more. This is a time unſeaſonable for you to command here.

Gerard. All that ſir Richard Willys deſires is very reaſonable; for, if gentlemen muſt be put out upon every occaſion and aſperſion, it will diſcourage all from ſerving your Majeſty.

King.

---

[1] The bottom part of two leaves of the MS. is here torn out; and the following note ſubjoined by Mr. Symonds: "Such ſtuff was printed as I have torn out; for, being many times ſince in ſir Richard Willys's company, 'tis all a feigned formed lie; for he ſaid not one word to the King all that while. The lord Gerard ſaid moſt, and that was concerning lord Digby."

Mr. Symonds adds, "This ſir Richard told me, Oct. 28, 1659: "The King coming to Newark as aforeſaid, and at a council of war propoſing what was to be done; ſir Richard propoſed that his Majeſty would put all his garriſoned ſoldiers into a body, and march after Fairfax, then about Taunton. Newark river was fordable, and in it 4000 good foot. There was then, Newark, Aſhby, Tutbury, Lichfield, Belvoir, Wirton, Bridgenorth, Denbigh, and other garriſons. Slight them all, and all inland garriſons; keep your ports at Exeter and Briſtol, &c. and you will have cannon, and a very conſiderable army, to fight Fairfax. Beſides, Goring's army in the Weſt was then good too." The King liked it well. Aſhburuham embraced ſir Richard for the propoſition; and ſo did lord Digby like it. But they delayed; and the cowardly commiſſioners, that lingered for compounding, put queries, "Where ſhall we have winter quarters?" Digby and Aſhburnham were jealous ſir Richard ſhould get too much into the King's favour. 3000*l.* was raiſed by the Ingrams and the Northern gentlemen, to give the King in his neceſſity, and that they might have a governor that would make good compoſitions for them; and this got ſir Richard out of that government. And there did go away with him and his officers 800 ſoldiers; and had it not been for ſir Richard himſelf, when his men heard that he was turned out of the government, they had quitted all the guards, and all left the King's ſervice; for, at the firſt noiſe of it, many of them tore their colours in the market-place, which was not done by his inſtigation or inſinuation, but out of love to him, and ſhewing their diſcontent.

"May it pleaſe your moſt excellent Majeſty, Whereas, in all humility we came to preſent ourſelves this day unto your Majeſty, to make our ſeveral grievances known; we find we have drawn upon us ſome mis-conſtruction by the manner of it, by reaſon your Majeſty thought it appeared as a mutiny. We ſhall therefore, with all humbleneſs and clearneſs, preſent unto your Majeſty, that we the perſons ſubſcribed, who from the beginning of this unhappy war have given teſtimonies to your Majeſty and the world of our fidelity and zeal to your Majeſty's perſon and cauſe, do think ourſelves as unhappy to lie under that cenſure; and, as we know in our conſciences ourſelves innocent and free from it, we do in all humility therefore, leſt we ſhould hazard ourſelves upon a ſecond miſrepreſentation, preſent theſe reaſons of our humbleſt deſire unto your ſacred Majeſty, rather in writing than perſonally, which are theſe:

"That many of us, truſted in high commands in your Majeſty's ſervice, have not only our commiſſions taken away without any reaſon or cauſe expreſſed, whereby our honours are blemiſhed to the world, our fortunes ruined, and we rendered incapable of truſt or command from any Foreign Prince; but many others, as we have cauſe to fear, ſuffer in the ſame manner. Our intentions in our addreſſing ourſelves to your Majeſty, and our ſubmiſſive deſires now are, that your Majeſty will be

gracioufly

King. What does this concern you? You for your part have received as much honour as any man; and I did not think you would have come to me in this manner.

Gerard. The . . . . that have worked out ſir Richard Willys . . . . have partly . . . that I was put

. . . .

Gerard. I am ſure I can prove that Digby was the cauſe that I was owted from my command in Wales.

King. Whoever ſays it, ... but a child, ſo . . . . Digby can . . . . you ſhall . . . . . .

Prince. I wiſh . . . . laſt . . . .

. . . .

King. Why then do you not obey me, but come to expoſtulate with me?

G. Becauſe your Majeſty is ill informed.

King. . . . . . I am but a child. Digby . . . . he liſts. What can . . . . rebel ſay more? . . . . . . to reſtore ſir Richard Willys.

. . . .

King. O, nephew! 'tis of great importance, and requires conſideration.

[Here the Prince ſaid ſomething concerning Briſtol; at which the King ſighed, and ſaid,] O, nephew! [and ſtopped. Then he ſaid,] Say no more.

Prince. Digby is the man that has cauſed theſe diſtractions amongſt us.

King. They are all rogues and raſcals that ſay ſo; and, in effect, traitors, that ſeek to diſhonour my beſt ſubjects."—[Here Gerard bowed himſelf, and went out. The Prince ſhewed no reverence, but went out proudly, with his hand at his ſide. All the train followed them; and the King was left in private with ſir Richard Willys. Then ſir Richard Willys told the King, that a corporal and ten boys were able to do as much ſervice as all his companies in Newark.—In a very few days after, an order was iſſued from the King at Newark; which will be found in the note below[1].]

Oct. 26, ſir William Vaughan came to Chirke; we marched to Llannannis, Mr. Thelwall's houſe.

Oct. 31, came intelligence to Denbigh, to ſir William Vaughan, that the enemy, under the command of Mitton, was advanced to Ruthyn, both horſe and foot.

Saturday, at noon, Nov. 1, we had the alarm; for they were at Whitchurch, below the town. Their approach was handſomely diſputed both by our horſe and foot above an hour in the hedges and lane. Their number of foot being 1500 at leaſt, made ours retreat to the town, which was not long diſputed, by reaſon of their forward advancing. Their horſe were put to a diſorderly retreat and flight, notwithſtanding ſir William Vaughan drew many of them up upon a green near two miles off, but could not be made to ſtand.

A party of Arcall horſe charged the purſuers, and were ſeconded by part of Prince Maurice's life-guard.

The foot were let into the caſtle by the governor. The horſe got to Llanrwſt that night, co. Denbigh, 12 miles diſtant. Next morning diſperſed to quarters. The governor of Denbigh wrote that the enemy was in his ſight, above double our number.

"For ſir William Vaughan.

"Sir, I wiſh you be as free from danger, as I hope we are ſecure and in good condition here. On your foot being perceived under the caſtle wall, I received them in, though I conceived I had no need of them for defence of this place: yet having, I doubt not, proviſions enough, their valour and good ſervice withall meriting my compaſſion, I freely entertained them. I judge the enemy had a force that came the other way over the green, equal in number, or thereabouts, to what you fought with. Mitton and the foot, I am informed, quarter in the town, and moſt of the horſe in the country about. God bleſs us all!

Your friend and ſervant, Wm. Salisbury.

"Denbigh Caſtle, 1 of Nov. 1645, 7 at night.

"What way you may reſolve to take, I leave to your own diſeretion."

Tueſday, Nov. 4, returned a trumpet from Denbigh, ſent by ſir William Vaughan, and told that their rendezvous was at Northop the day before. And this morning, being Tueſday, came our foot to us out of the caſtle to Llanrwſt.

A regiment of Reformades againſt us in this buſineſs came from London, under Mitton's command.

Sir William Vaughan's forces conſiſted of theſe regiments and companies: Prince Maurice's life-guard in part; ſir William Vaughan's own regiment, with Arcall, Bridgenorth, Chirke; colonel Rutter, of Hurter, that commanded the horſe in Monmouth: in all, 300.—Colonel Wordens Shaterley, lieutenant-colonel; colonel Sandys, of Worceſter; colonel Randal Egerton's, major-general to Gerard; and colonel Whitley; both 200; colonel Gradye's regiment, general Gerard's, and colonel Davatrie's, 200; lord Byron's regiment, 100. Horſe, toto 700.—Foot. Pr. Maurice's firelocks, in part, 150; Ludlow foot, 90; Arcall dragoons, 20; Chirke firelocks, 20: in all, 280.

Wedneſday 5, reſted.—Thurſday 6, to St. George's pariſh; the reſt quartered thereabouts.

Friday, Nov. 7, was a general rendezvous on Denbigh green. This night the head quarters was at Llanrayder, Sir Evan Lloyd's houſe.

Saturday, marched to Llanſanfraid, ſame ſide the water, in Merionethſhire.

Sunday, to Llannuthlyn, written Kanvilling in the maps, a town where the King lay about two months before, as he marched from Hereford to Cheſter.

All, both horſe and foot, lay there.

Monday, Nov. 10, to Newtown. In this march a lieutenant of horſe and a trooper fell out, and had a ſingle combat in private about a horſe. Both fought on horſeback; the lieutenant ſhot him in the thigh, and the trooper him in the ſhoulder, diſarmed the lieutenant, and took away his horſe and piſtols.

Here the van of quarter-maſters took captain Vyner and ſeven of his men priſoners. The reſt of his troop were at the ſiege of Cheſter then.

Tueſday to Knighton, a pretty town in Radnor. Here Mr. Crowder, the ſheriff of the county, lives.

Wedneſday, Nov. 12. This party diſperſed; Prince Maurice's guards to Bewdley, Bridgenorth horſe thither. The reſt, with ſir William Vaughan, to Lemſter.

The inhabitants of Brecknockſhire had pulled down the caſtle of Brecknock, and walls of the town. Colonel Herbert Price they petitioned out to the King afore.

---

graciouſly pleaſed that ſuch of us as now labour under the opinion of unworthineſs and incapacity to ſerve your Majeſty may, at a council of war, receive knowledge of the cauſes of your Majeſty's diſpleaſure, and have the juſtice and liberty of our defence againſt what can be objected againſt us, and in particular concerning this Government. And if, upon the ſtricteſt examination, our integrity and loyalty to your Majeſty ſhall appear, that then your Majeſty will be graciouſly pleaſed to grant us either reparation in honour againſt the calumny of our enemies, or liberty to paſs into other parts; which are the humbleſt deſire of

Your Majeſty's moſt obedient loyal ſubjects and ſervants, Rupert.

Maurice.
Charles Gerard.
M. Tucket.
Rich. Willys.
Cha. Compton.
Edw. Villers.
Cha. Wheler.
Simon Fanſhaw.
Tho. Daniel.
Phil. Honywood.
William Willys.
John Fiſher.
William Rolleſton.
William Biſenden.
Somerſet Fox.
Henry Oſburne.
Jo. Scrymſhire.
Rich. Hatton.
Sebaſt. Bunckley.
Jo. James.
Rob. Daliſon.

[1] "Charles Rex. Whereas our nephews Prince Rupert and Maurice, the lord Gerhard, with ſir Richard Willis, and divers other officers of our army and this garriſon, have through cauſeleſs diſcontents quitted their commands, and obtained our paſſes to go beyond the ſeas, in order to which they may poſſibly come unto our garriſon: Our pleaſure therefore is, that you treat them with civility; but withal if they ſhould happen to ſtay any longer time than may be fit for their paſſage, that you let them know that it is our pleaſure they ſhould depart thence, becauſe we would not have your proviſions ſpent by their ſtay. And we do further recommend to your particular care, not to permit them to take away or debauch any officer or ſoldier of that garriſon; which if they ſhould attempt, we command you to apprehend and keep in ſafe cuſtody the particular authors thereof, as perſons that have violated the freedom of their paſs. Herein we doubt not of your ready obedience, and that we ſhould receive from you a good account of the performance of theſe our commands. And for ſo doing, this ſhall be your warrant. Given at our Court at Newark, October 30, 1645. By his Majeſty's command, Edward Walker.

"To our truſty and well-beloved the lord of Loughborough."

Monmouth taken by the country people. The people of the Foreſt of Dean had made turnpikes into the avenues and paſſes in the country, and ſuffered none to enter without their leave. The Parliament ſoldiers cap in hand for a night's quarter. The country people of Merionethſhire at this time alſo beſieged and blocked up the King's caſtle of Aberuſty.

Thurſday, lord Gerard's troops of Reformades, &c. came into Hereford, and quartered a mile from Lemſter.

Prince Rupert and Prince Maurice[1] were at Worceſter.

When ſir William Vaughan marched out of Denbighſhire, the enemy lay in this manner:

Three troops of horſe and three troops of dragoons at Bretton, Welſh ſide, two miles from Cheſter. Colonel Jones lay at Darleſton with a regiment of 400 horſe, and another of 400 firelocks, called Jones's regiment.

They have a bridge over the Dee at Egleſton. More lye at Wrexham. Stafford horſe gone.

They drew out of theſe garriſons to fight us; viz. Wem, Oſweſtree, Red Caſtle, Montgomery, Nottingham, Derby, Stafford, Vine's troop, 50 beſides.

Mitton brought 500 horſe and foot.

Saturday, about two in the morning, came intelligence that Mitton was advancing towards Lemſter. Sir William Vaughan drew out, and marched that night; quartered at Sutton and Morton, co. Hereford.

Sunday, the Firelocks and Gerard's troops went to Worceſter with ſir William Vaughan.

The reſt of the horſe removed to Maunſell, &c.

The country people told us, the Scots, at the ſiege of Hereford, eat the pigs which they cut out of a ſow's belly. In Derby, the Scots drank ſwill the King's health.

This day we removed to Mansfield Parva, &c.

Thurſday, marched to Delwyn.

Tueſday morning, Nov. 23, colonel Gradye's and general Gerard's regiments, lying at Pembridge, at three of the clock in the morning were beat up; one or two killed; moſt loſt their horſes and arms. Stokeſay, Montgomery, and Marton of New Radnor, did it.

Nov. 23, an order was iſſued reſpecting the two Princes and their followers; which ſhall be given below[2].

Monday, Nov. 30, to Tenbury.

Tueſday, thoſe horſe under ſir William Vaughan's command marched to Lemſter.

At Lemſter was a ſtrong guard every night; they watched by regiments every third night by turns.

Wedneſday, Dec. 2, to the Rock, co. Worceſter.

Friday, to Kinver, between Kidderminſter and Bridgenorth.—Saturday 5, to Bridgenorth. There ſir colonel Slaughter's troop and Dixon's ſtayed, and colonel Gradye's. Major-geneneral Whateley's to Hereford. Beeſton caſtle ſurrendered after it had endured a tedious ſiege. This caſtle held out, and had but one day's proviſion left. The captain and his company marched out, with all their baggage, arms, &c. match lighted; bullet in mouth, &c. Their ammunition was ſo ſpent, that the enemy who was by gave the ſoldier many ſhoots of powder to make the conditions good. (This lord Brereton told me.)—Sir William Vaughan, with his troops, to Ludlow; but his men not admitted. Bowman and captain Vaughan to Arcall, which was ſhut up by three or four petty garriſons.

Lord Byron ſent word that Latham houſe, co. Lancaſter, the ſeat of the earl of Derby, was loſt.

Thurſday, Dec. 18, ſir William Vaughan drew out the horſes he had with him afore, and ſome of Dudley and Ludlow. Six or 700 foot, commanded by lieutenant-colonel Smyth, horſe, 5 or 600, marched from Bridgenorth, and had a rendezvous towards.

Friday morning, came intelligence to Bridgenorth, that Hereford was loſt. About a fortnight before, this ſir Nicholas Throckmorton, the lieutenant-governor of Hereford, told ſir Thomas Lunsford that he loſt Monmouth baſely. Sir Thomas told him he lyed. To fight they prepare, but ſtopt by the guards. 'Twas referred to ſix gentlemen, but could not end it. They were both confined. The governor and ſir Henty Lington eſcaped to Ludlow.

December 23, lord Aſtley came to Worceſter, being general of theſe four counties; ſir Charles Lucas with him, lieutenant general of the horſe.

Monday, December 29, colonel Bagot with his party ſhut the lord Loughborough and his party out of the Cloſe of Lichfield.

Tueſday. Lord Loughborough, &c. to Tetbury.

Jan. 12, to Aſhby from Lichfield.

Monday, Jan. 14, thoſe horſe which were the remnant of general Gerard's army, viz. his own life-guard, commanded by his brother ſir Gilbert Gerard, 100; Major-general Egerton's; colonel Whitley's; lieutenant-colonel Bainbrigg; major Paramore 3; with colonel Molſworth's, the remnant of Prince Maurice's regiment of horſe; Toto 300; were beat up by the forces of the garriſons of Stafford, Derby, Painſley Houſe, Alton Caſtle, Caſwell, and Barton; above 100 horſe, and 20 troops left; no officers.

Friday, Jan. 18, lieutenant Moore, who was lieutenant to Gerard's troop, went in to the enemy to Derby with 24 of thoſe Reformades, ... followers moſt.

Saturday, the enemy fell into Tetbury again, and did no hurt; one of them killed.

Saturday, Captain Wright, ſent by the lord Loughborough from Aſhby, ſurpriſe Aſhly houſe, within four miles of Coventry; took the governor.

Hunt the cobler of Coventry, and his brother, and the reſt, about 10; all their horſe were gone out, fired the houſe; 'twas Mr. Chamberlain's houſe; his ſon did it. Four or five days after, another party was ſent from Aſhby, and took three or four cannoneers, a captain, and others, within four miles of Belvoir caſtle.

Jan. .. Lord Loughborough ſent 300 foot, with four colonels, under the command of colonel Stamford, towards the relief of Cheſter, and the expectation of meeting Iriſh forces.

Thurſday, Jan. 29, came ſome gentlemen, and about 30 troops, to Aſhby from Newark, and came through the enemy's quarters that beſieged that place.

Saturday night, ult. January, about 12 of the clock, came a party of horſe and dragoons into the town of Aſhby, plundered the mercers, ſadlers, and cutlers ſhops, and the jews of their horſes, eſpecially thoſe that came from Newark and Tenbury with colonel Egerton. No gentlemen taken, and few or none other, though divers lay there in the town; none killed. They were gone before two of the clock. Six muſkets ſallied on them.

Feb. 3, came intelligence to Aſhby, that Belvoir caſtle was ſurrendered; and that the governor, for his own ſecurity, had articled with the enemy, and ſent four hoſtages to Lichfield. He and his men were conveyed to Lichfield.—Dartmouth taken by ſtorm.

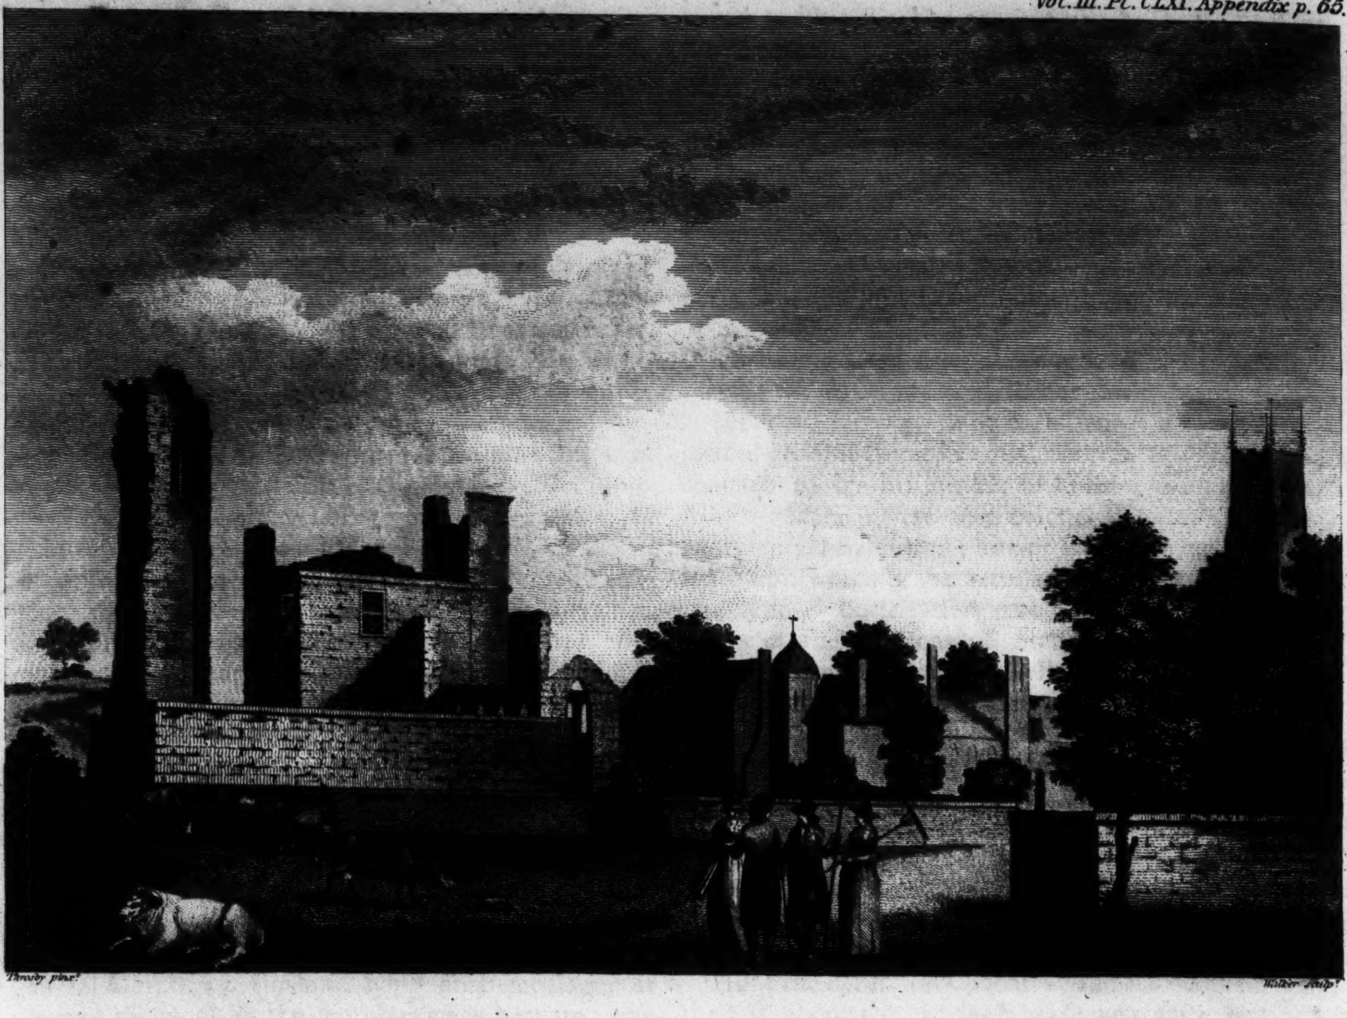
Wedneſday, Feb 11, their foot and horſe returned home to Aſhby. All the party together were about 2000. Broke Ricard in church."

Here the Diary of Mr. Symonds ends; and this article ſhall be cloſed with a few occurrences more immediately relative to Leiceſterſhire, or to the leading men in either army who were natives of that county.

---

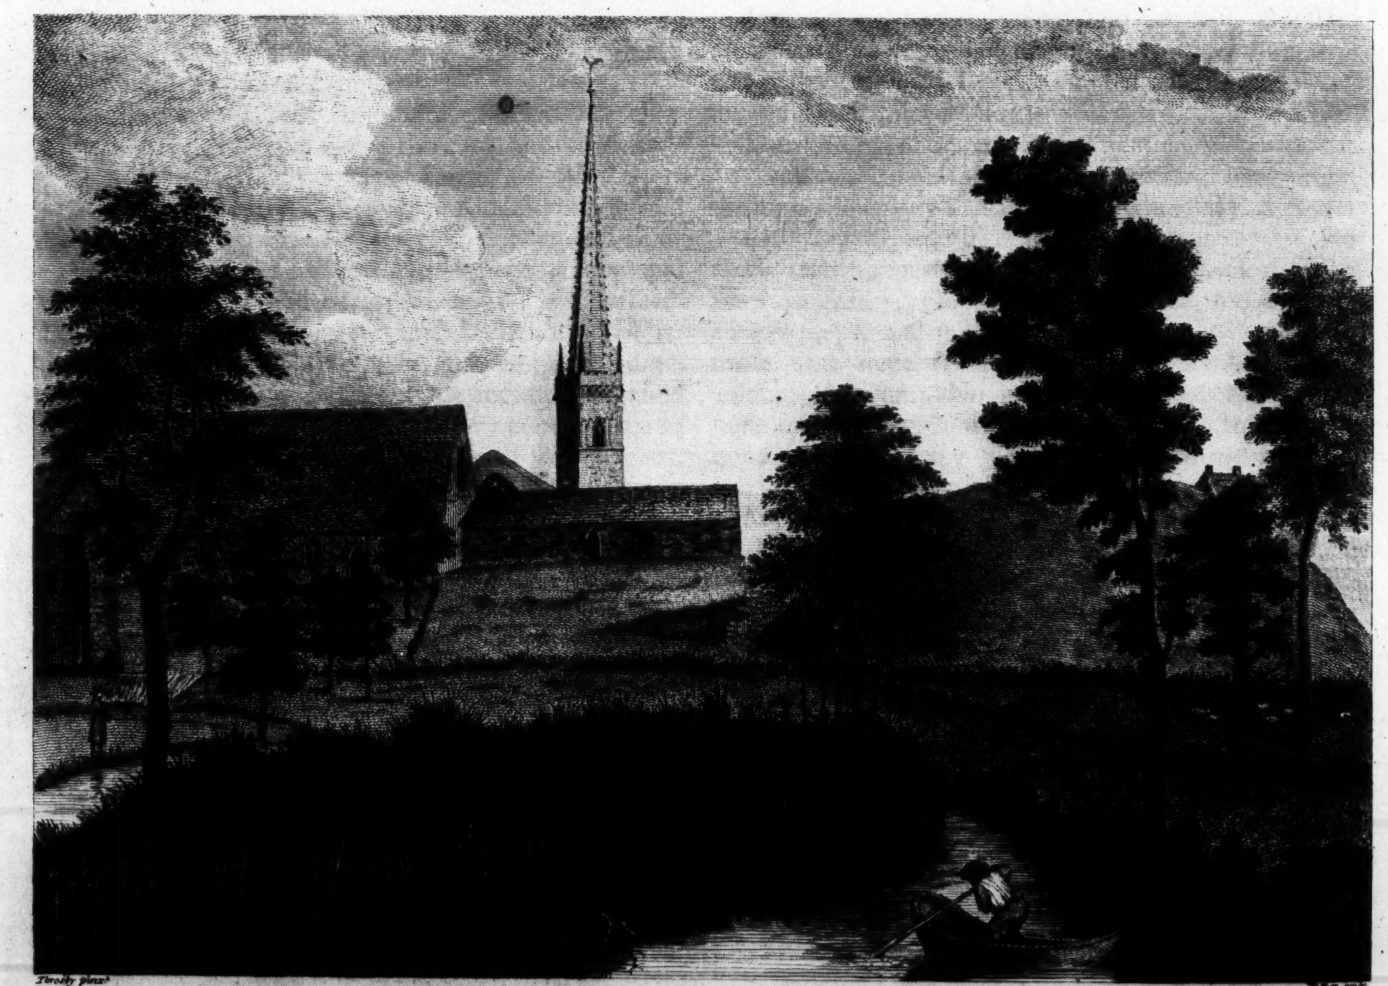
[1] Some account of the diſſentions at Newark, and of the conduct of theſe Princes, has been given under Belvoir, vol. II. p. 55.

[2] "CHARLES R. Truſty and well beloved, we greet you well. By the former letters we expreſſed our care to prevent the inconvenience that might ariſe to the county and our ſervice, if our nephew Prince Rupert and Prince Maurice, with their train and followers, ſhould make any long abode at Worceſter, or other our quarters; which, by your letter to ſir Edward Walker, we perceive, was not without cauſe. As your care herein and of our ſervice is very acceptable unto us, ſo we deſire your continuance thereof. Our nephews ſtay in $\overset{\text{our}}{\text{theſe}}$ quarters hath already been longer than was expected: And becauſe we perceive it is like to be enlarged, in regard the paſſes which have been ſent them from London are ſuch as they thought not fit to accept of; our will and command is, that you declare unto them, that our pleaſure is, that they deliver to you a liſt of all their own ſervants which they intend to take with them, whom we will you to accommodate as well as you may with quarters and other neceſſaries for them during their reſiding with you, which we preſume will not be long: And that for all others who adhere to them, as well thoſe who have paſſes from us as thoſe who have not, our command is, that you ſignify our pleaſure unto them, that they leave our quarters by the firſt of December next, for that we may not bear the inconvenience of the eating out of our quarters by thoſe who have ſo abandoned our ſervice. Herein you are to be very careful to give us a ſpeedy account of your proceeding; for which this ſhall be your warrant.—Given at our Court at Oxford, this 23d of November, by his Majeſty's command, EDW. WALKER."——Superſcribed thus: "To our truſty and well-beloved colonel Samuel Sandys, governor of our city and garriſon of Worceſter."



Throsby pinx.t Walker sculp.t

ASHBY - de - la - ZOUCH CASTLE .



Throsby pinx.t [illegible]

LEICESTER CASTLE ,

From Braunston gate Bridge .

On the 21ſt of May, 1645, it was ordered, "That ſir Arthur Heſilrige be enjoined to keep the peace between the earl of Stamford and him; and not to receive or ſend any challenge: and, that if any challenge ſhall be ſent, that preſently he acquaint Mr. Speaker therewith[1]."

On the 23d, "Mr. Browne reports the buſineſs concerning the aſſault made upon ſir Arthur Heſilrige by Henry earl of Stamford. His own relation, in writing, was read[2]."

June 28. "Mr. Prideaux reported the impeachment againſt the earl of Stamford, and againſt Henry Polton and Matthew Patſall his ſervants; which was twice read; and was in theſe words:

"The impeachment of Henry earl of Stamford, and of Henry Polton and Matthew Patſall, his ſervants, by the Commons of England, aſſembled in Parliament, for breach of their privileges; and for an aſſault upon, and other injuries done unto, a member of their houſe.

"The ſaid Commons ſhew, that the ſaid earl of Stamford, Henry Polton, and Matthew Patſall, upon the 20th day of May 1645, in the common highway, leading from Perpoole-lane to Clerkenwell, in the county of Middleſex, without any injury, offence, or provocation, to them given, and for matters and things done in Parliament, did forcibly and unlawfully make an aſſault upon ſir Arthur Heſlerigg, baronet, a member of the ſaid Houſe of Commons, then riding, in a peaceable manner, from the ſaid Houſe of Commons, unto his own dwelling-houſe in Iſlington, in the ſaid county; and being then well known by them the ſaid earl, Henry Polton, and Matthew Patſall, to be a member of the ſaid Houſe of Commons; and then and there the ſaid earl, Henry Polton, and Matthew Patſall, did ſuddenly and unexpectedly, ſeveral times, thruſt and ſtrike the ſaid ſir Arthur Heſlerigg, with a drawn ſword, and other offenſive inſtruments, againſt the public peace of this kingdom; to the high breach of the privilege of the ſaid Houſe of Commons, and to the great damage of the ſaid ſir Arthur Heſlerigg: For which offences and miſdemeanors, the ſaid Commons pray, that the ſaid earl, Henry Polton, and Matthew Patſall, may be put to their anſwers; and that ſuch proceedings may be had thereupon, as ſhall be agreeable to juſtice[3]."

July 5. "Two of Derby troops of horſe are come to Leiceſter, for the better ſecurity of that town, and to keep the enemy from robbing near unto it. They marched to Aſhby-de-la-Zouch, and took horſe ſufficient to make up another troop from Haſtings out of the meadows. We hope ſir John Gell's and other horſe, which were once in a body, will be ready and fitted for action when the Scots army leave thoſe parts[4]."

July 25, Mr. Francis Blythe had an order to receive 6*d.* in the pound of all ſequeſtration money paid in Leiceſterſhire from 27 April laſt, and ſo for the future[5].

July 28, an ordinance was brought in, for ganting a public benevolence for relief of Leiceſter, by the voluntary contributions of the well-affected; 500 muſquets and furniture were furniſhed from the public ſtores; and £1500 granted them out of the eſtates of delinquents, for providing horſes, ſaddles, and piſtols[6].

"The ſickneſs continueth at Aſhby-de-la-Zouch. It is moſt certain that the garriſon ſoldiers, and the lord Loughborough himſelf, are come out of the houſe, and do quarter in the Park[7]."

Auguſt 25, "From Newark the King marched into Lincolnſhire, where his army committed many outrages. The next day he again lay at Belvoir caſtle; and the next day at Stamford[8]."

"Captain Allen, with 95 dragoons from Burleigh-houſe, fell upon 200 of the Newark and Belvoir horſe, commanded by ſir Robert Daliſon; routed them, killed 5, took ſeveral officers, and 50 priſoners; 80 horſe, and reſcued the countrymen and plunder which they had taken[9]."

Auguſt 30, the Committee at Leiceſter was authorized "to compound with ſuch gentlemen of the county as had aſſiſted or countenanced the King or his party; the money to be employed for the ſervice and maintenance of the garriſon and forces in the town[10]."

Sept. 27. "We will trouble you in diſcourſing but of one more of the King's garriſous at this time, which is Aſhby-de-la-Zouch, which is cloſely beſieged; the town is much viſited with the ſickneſs; and in the garriſon or fort are ſaid to be not above 60 men[11]."

Oct. 28. The following ordinance, which had been brought into Parliament July 28, was finally agreed to.

"Whereas it is very well known what miſeries befell the inhabitants of the town and county of Leiceſter, when the King's army took Leiceſter, by plundering the ſaid inhabitants, not only of their wares in their ſhops, but alſo all their houſhold goods, and their apparel from their backs, both of men, women, and children, not ſparing in that kind infants in their cradles; and by violent courſes and tortures compelled them to diſcover whatſoever they had concealed or hid; and after all that impriſoned their perſons; and thereupon forced them to borrow money to purchaſe their enlargement, to the undoing of the tradeſmen, who are indebted for a great part of their wares, which the enemy took away; and alſo to the ruin of many of the country, and thoſe the beſt affected to the Parliament, that brought their goods into the town for protection: Be it therefore ordained, and it is hereby ordained, by the Lords and Commons aſſembled in Parliament, and by the authority of the ſame, that a general collection be made, in and throughout the city of London, and lines of communication, and all other cities, towns, liberties, and privileged places, within the counties of Middleſex, Kent, Suſſex, Surrey, Hertford, Eſſex, Suffolk, Norfolk, and county and city of Norwich, Bedford, Cambridge, and the Iſle of Ely, Huntingdon, Lincoln, Nottingham, Derby, Stafford, Leiceſter, Warwick, and the county and city of Coventry, Northampton, Buckingham, Rutland, for and towards the relief of ſuch inhabitants of the ſaid town and county of Leiceſter, who are well-affected to the proceedings of Parliament, and ruined by the enemies taking of the ſaid town. And for the more ſpeedy and better effecting of this ordinance, the ſaid Lords and Commons do hereby command, that the ſame be forthwith put in print and publiſhed, and diſperſed into every pariſh, town, hamlet, and place, within the aforeſaid counties, as well within liberties as without; and that the parſons, vicars, and curates, of the ſaid pariſhes, towns, hamlets, and places reſpectively, are hereby required to read this ordinance in their ſeveral churches and chappels upon the next Lord's-day after the ſame ſhall be delivered unto them, when the congregations are aſſembled together, both in the forenoon and afternoon; and to exhort the people to a free and liberal contribution to this ſo neceſſary and charitable a work: and the miniſter and churchwardens of every ſuch pariſh, hamlet, town, and place, and where no miniſter or churchwarden is or are, then two of the moſt ſufficient men of eſtates of ſuch pariſh, town, hamlet, or place, are hereby authorized, after the reading of this ordinance as aforeſaid, to go with all convenient ſpeed from houſe to houſe, to every of the inhabitants of the ſaid pariſhes, towns, hamlets, and places reſpectively, and to collect and gather the free and charitable benevolences of the inhabitants thereof, that ſhall be willing to contribute to this ſo pious and charitable a work; and that every ſuch miniſter, churchwardens, and other perſons, ſhall cauſe to be written in a ſchedule the ſeveral ſum or ſums of money ſo given, and the pariſh and place where the ſame is ſo given; and that the ſaid ſeveral miniſters, churchwardens, and other perſon, ſhall ſubſcribe the ſaid ſchedule with their hands; and that they ſhall, within twenty days next after every ſuch collection reſpectively, bring or ſend the ſaid ſchedule, with the money ſo collected or gathered, and the copy of this ordinance that ſhall be ſent unto them, unto the mayor or chief magiſtrate of the chief city or town that is in the Parliament's power, within any of the ſaid reſpective counties, who are hereby authorized and required to receive the ſame accordingly, and, within twenty days after their reſpective receipt thereof, to ſend the ſame unto William Hobſon, Thomas Eyres, William Kendal, and Thomas Churchman, gentlemen and citizens of London, at the Chequer Chamber in Guildhall, London, and there deliver the ſaid ſchedule, copy, and money, unto them the ſaid William Hobſon, Thomas Eyres, William Kendal, and Thomas Churchman, who are hereby appointed and authorized treaſurers for that purpoſe, and to receive the ſame, and to defray the neceſſary charges of ſending up the ſaid monies. And, laſtly, it is hereby ordained, that the Committee of Leiceſter, or any ſeven of them (except ſuch of them as ſhall expect benefit by this benevolence) ſhall, by virtue of this ordinance, have power to take the accompts of the ſaid treaſurers, and ſhall alſo give them reaſonable allowances for their charges; and what monies ſhall be collected or gathered upon this ordinance, ſhall be divided and paid by the ſaid treaſurers, or any two of them, to and amongſt the aforeſaid perſons, according to the ſaid compenſation for their ſeveral loſſes proportionably; and the certificate of the ſaid committee, or any ſeven of them, what every perſon or perſons' parts cometh unto, according to the ſaid computation, together with ſuch perſon or perſons acquittance for the receipt of his or their part or parts of the ſaid collection, ſhall be a ſufficient diſcharge to the ſaid treaſurers. Provided always, and it is hereby declared, that this ordinance ſhall continue for the ſpace of twelve months, and no longer [1]."

---

[1] See before, p. 677; and Journals of the Commons, vol. IV. p. 150.
[2] Ibid. p. 152.
[3] Ibid, p. 188.
[4] Mercurius Veridicus, July 5.
[5] Carte, MS.
[6] Journals of the Commons, vol. IV. p. 220.
[7] The Parliament's Poſt, Aug. 19, 1645.
[8] See before, vol. II. p. 54; and Whitlock, p. 153.
[9] Whitlock, p. 160.
[10] Journals of the Commons, vol. IV. p. 257.
[11] Mercurius Veridicus, Sept. 27.

"Major-general Poyntz received a letter from ſir John Gell, to certify him that there came to Aſhby-de-la-Zouch about 5 or 600 of the King's forces, which made them Oct. 25, all day and night in readineſs; ſome got out of Newark the 25th at night; colonel Manwaring ſent two troopes after them. The Aſſociation may do well to haſten more foot to keep them cloſer in. Prince Rupert yeſterday ſent a letter and trumpeter to deſire a paſs to Worceſter; but colonel Roſſiter deſired to be pardoned till he had ſent unto the Houſe of Parliament; and accordingly he hath ſent deſiring to know the pleaſure of the Houſe; for the Prince and the reſt of the gentlemen are very deſirous to go beyond ſeas, and will engage themſelves upon their honours never to take up armes againe in this warre: Colonel Roſſiter hath the two Princes' letters, and colonel Willis's letter (which do teſtify ſo many); therefore you may be confident thereof. We have a brave army of horſe at our rendezvous: on Monday we had with us on our ſide twenty-two colours. Haſte cauſeth me to be ſo abrupt. There are two gentlemen more, viz. Lieutenant-colonel Oſtruen and ſir William Valentine, waiting for an anſwer of the letters from the Princes. The lord Bellaſſis is governour of Newarke now, and one Terrell of Warton. Colonel general Poyntz continues ſtill at Southwell; and Welbeck-houſe will be delivered if we well ſlight Wingfield-manor. Melton Mowbray, Oct. 29, 1645 [2]."

Nov. 25, the Treaſurer for the receipt of the ſequeſtration fines and compoſitions was Mr. Thomas Somerſeild. Receiver of the public moneys and taxes, payable to the horſe troops of this garriſon, Mr. William Hubbart; and for the foot, Mr. William Cave.

In this month, Belvoir caſtle was taken by ſtorm, of which the particulars have been already related [3].

Jan. 1, 1645-6. "A party of the King's from Aſhby took the miniſter of Morley and of other towns, and carried them away priſoners; but ſir John Gell reſcued them, and took others of the enemy priſoners [4]."

Jan. 24, Aſhby caſtle was reported to have been taken [5].

Feb. 7. "A party of about 80 horſe and 40 dragoons were ſent out of Leiceſter, under the command of major Meeres, a very valiant and diſcreet gentleman, by night, unto Aſhby-de-la-Zouch, who carried on the deſign exceeding bravely, and marched with ſuch expedition and privacy, that they came to Aſhby about 11 of the clock that night, altogether undiſcovered, which was about 12 miles march; whither being come, they ſuddenly ſurpriſed the centinels, fell-in at the turnpike, broke the chain, and entered the town, took near 100 of the enemy's horſe, being the greateſt part of the horſe of that garriſon, whereof 50 were already ſaddled, and fitted to have gone forth upon ſome deſign of theirs, all of them excellent horſes, and ſome of them worth 20, 30, and 40 pounds a horſe. They took ſtore of arms, and more other pillage, releaſed divers priſoners, and ſome country men, whom the enemy had taken for ranſoms; and thus having plundered the town, in part of requital of the many miſchiefs and plundering of that garriſon to the Parliament's friends, all theſe our friends returned to Leiceſter without the leaſt moleſtation; the enemy (who was in the great houſe or cloſe), either not receiving the alarm, or not daring to come forth at all againſt them. And thus they came ſafely back again to Leiceſter, with all their horſe, prize, and pillage [6]."

Feb. 10. Colonel John Needham, who had been placed as governor of Leiceſter in June by general Fairfax, was appointed in form to that office by both Houſes of Parliament; and Owen Cambridge his major [7].

"There hath been much talk this week of the reducing of Aſhby-de-la-Zouch. Thus much we can now aſſure you for certain, that conditions have been offered for the ſurrender thereof to the Leiceſter forces; which conditions or articles of ſurrender were this day brought up, and preſented to the Parliament, to be approved or diſapproved of by them."

"Articles for the ſurrender of Aſhby-de-la-Zouch were ſent up to the Parliament; and a debate upon them, whether the eſtates of the earl of Huntingdon, colonel Haſtings, and colonel Perkins, ſhould be diſcharged of ſequeſtration; which the Houſe did agree unto [8]."

Feb. 28. Articles of agreement were entered into, between colonel-general Haſtings and colonel Nedham, concerning the "rendition and ſlighting of Aſhby-de-la-Zouch [9]."

"Upon the 4th of this inſtant March, we received the certain intelligence and confirmation of the ſurrender of the ſtrong garriſon of Aſhby-de-la-Zouch to Leiceſter forces. The conditions of the ſurrender were, that Haſtings, alias the lord of Loughborough, together with his brother the earl of Huntingdon and colonel Perkins, ſhould have their eſtates unſequeſtered, protections for their perſons, and paſſes to go beyond ſea; the reſt of the officers to have liberty to compound for their ſequeſtration, and paſſes (if deſired) to go beyond ſea alſo; and the garriſon to be ſlighted: too good conditions indeed, for ſuch a deſperate and wicked Rob-carryer as Haſtings was, but that the kingdom may be glad to be rid of ſuch wretches. The ſurrender was made accordingly on Monday the 2d inſtant. We took therein five pieces of ordnance, about 300 arms, little ammunition, and no great ſtore of other proviſions; a great mercy and mighty preſervation of the peace and tranquillity of all thoſe adjacent parts about it, for which let God have all due praiſe and glory [10]."

About this time was publiſhed,

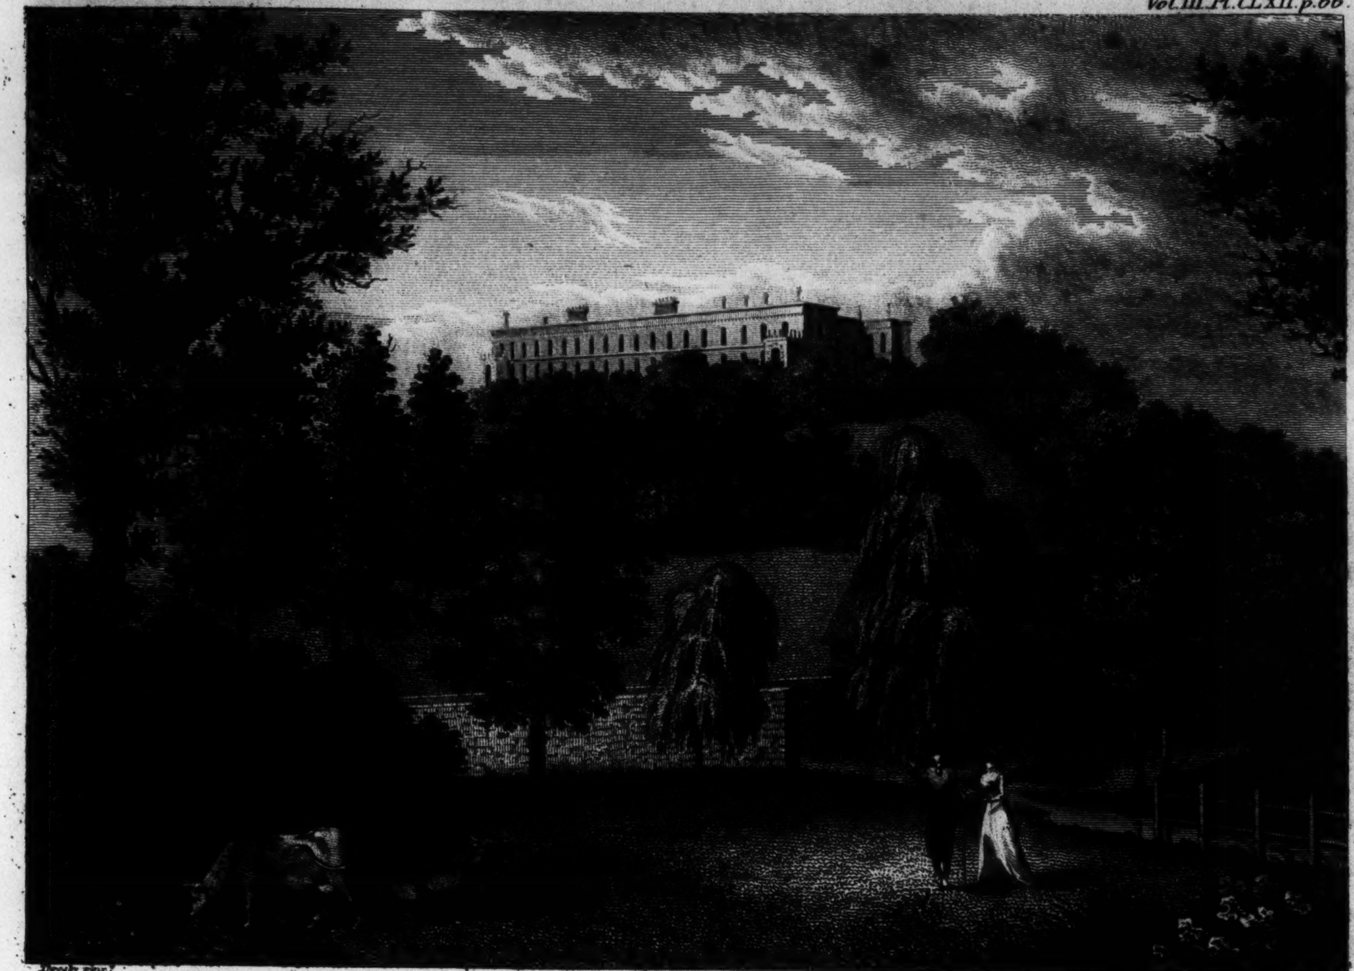
> "A Catalogue of the Parliament's victories ſince the Army (under his Excellency Sir Thomas Fairfax) roſe from before Oxford.

In June 1645, the army of the Parliament under the command of his excellency ſir Thomas Fairfax roſe from the beſieging of Oxford; marched againſt the King's potent and inſulting army then in Northamptonſhire (who were newly fluſht with the taking and ſacking of Leiceſter); and, by God's bleſſing, obtained over them,

---

[1] Huſbands's Orders, &c. p. 449. [2] City Scout, Nov. 4. [3] See vol. II. p. 96. [4] Whitlock, p. 192.
[5] Mercurius Academicus, pp. 59, 68. [6] Vicars, p. 363. Whitlock, p. 197.
[7] Journals of the Commons, vol. IV. p. 454. [8] Whitlock, p. 200. [9] See theſe at large in p. 611. [10] Vicars, p. 378.

Vol.III.Pl.CLXII p.66.

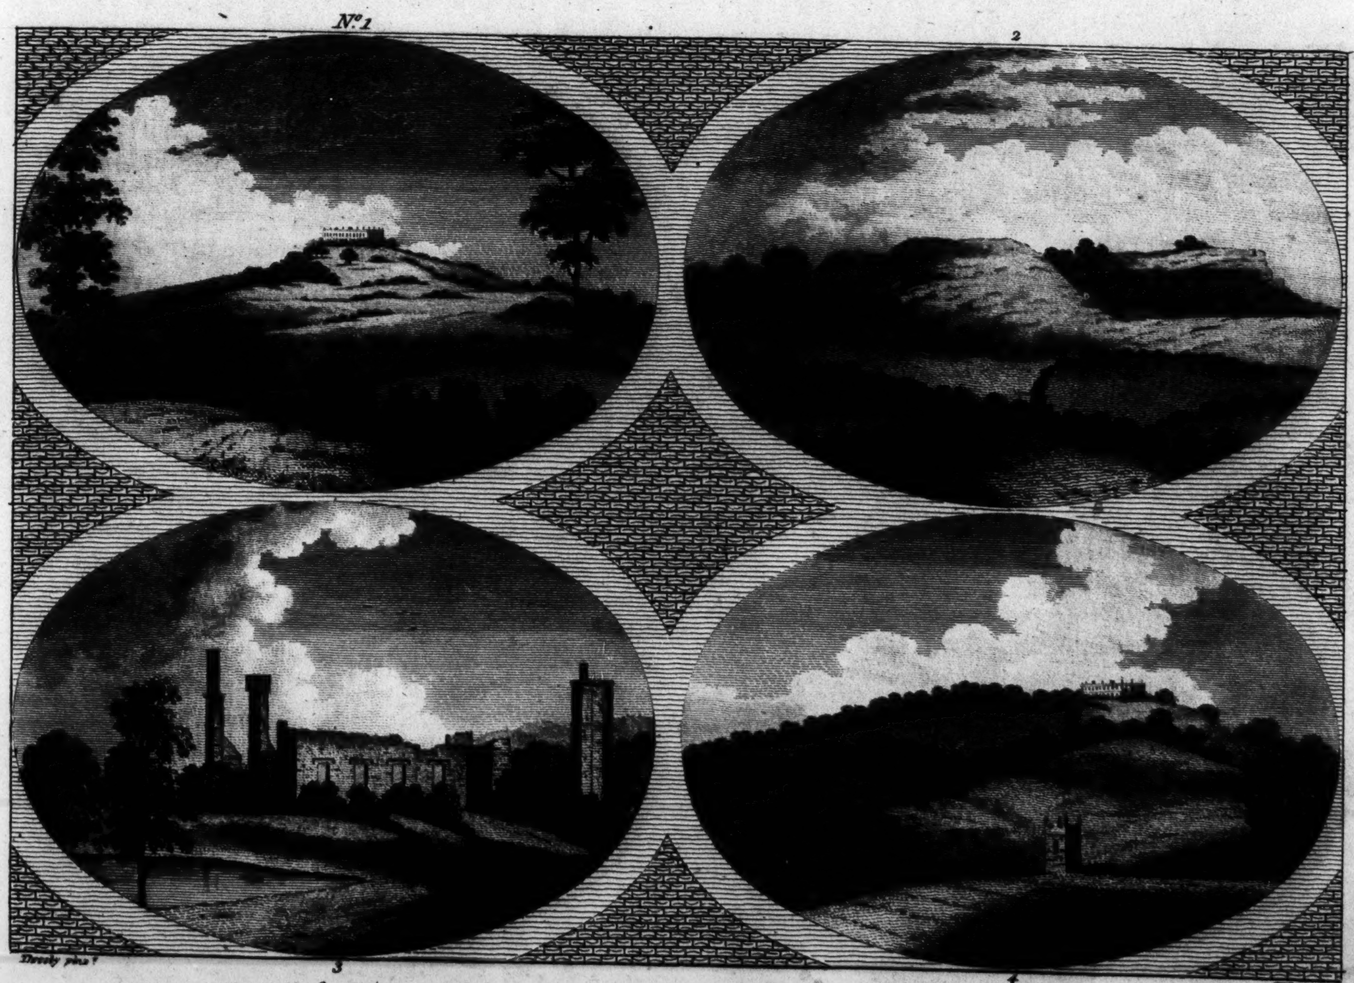


Deeeby pinx.

Walker sculp.

BELVOIR CASTLE

The Seat of His Grace the Duke of Rutland



Deeeby pinx.

Walker sculp.

N.º 1 Belvoir Castle from Barston.
N.º 2 N.W. view of Burrow Hill.

I

N.º 3 Bradgate Ruins..
N.º 4 Belvoir and Knipton.

1. A glorious victory the 14th day of the ſame month, by a great battle fought in Naſeby field; where, after a great fight, we routed all the King's horſe, killed, and took all his foot, with all the ordnance, bag, and baggage. Alſo the King's cabinet of letters, therein promiſing to ſet up Popery; and calling over not only Iriſh, but other foreign forces againſt the Parliament. Preſently after which, God bleſſed the ſaid Parliament with

2. The regaining of that very conſiderable town of Leiceſter, with all the many ordnance and arms, with powder, and many hundred horſe that were in it.

After enumerating many other ſucceſſes, to the number of 69; the Catalogue proceeds thus:

70. "The Parliament's forces in divers parts are yet bleſt with ſucceſſes; as, the gaining of Belvoir Caſtle, a place of great ſtrength;" and, after a few intermediate victories, with,

77. "The obtaining that ſtrong and gallant garriſon of Aſhby-de-la-Zouch, upon compoſition."

An original paſs, granted by ſir John Needham, governor of Leiceſter for the Parliament, to Mr. Richard Symonds, his two ſervants, with their horſes and arms, dated at Leiceſter the 5th day of March, 1645-6, is mentioned in the Harleian Catalogue as a looſe paper; but is not now to be found[1].

"The Lord Loughborough, brother to Ferdinando then earl of Huntingdon, famous for ſeveral loyal ſervices, but moſt maligned by the Parliament for the laſt effort thereof at Colcheſter, gave them alſo the ſlip from Windſor Caſtle [where the colonels Tooke, Hamond, and Francis Heath (newly at liberty upon his parole to find good ſecurity), and other Royaliſts, were impriſoned], and got cleverly away, and in March arrived at Rotterdam in Holland, where on the New Bridge he accidentally met with colonel Maſſey; who claiming knowledge from Lidbury fight, where they unhappily encountered each other, his lordſhip was civilly and nobly pleaſed (upon the colonel's proteſtation of a return and entire obedience to his Majeſty's authority) to paſs with him in company to the Hague[2]."

"When the King was given up by the Scots, he ſlept at Leiceſter, Feb. 12, 1646-7, the night before he arrived at Holmby-houſe[3]."

March 1, Leiceſter was ordered to be diſgarriſoned, and the works to be ſlighted[4].

Articles between ſir John Gell, bart. governor of Darbie, and lieutenant-colonel Peter Kniveton, governor of Tutbury caſtle, touching the delivery of Tutbury caſtle. April 6, 1646.

"That ſir John Gell will recommend and endeavour to take off the fines and ſequeſtrations of lieutenant-colonel Peter Kniveton, governor of his Majeſty's garriſon of Tutbury caſtle, and of ſir Andrew Kniveton, bart. his brother, and of ſir Aſton Cockaine, bart. his brother-in-law, and of ſir John Fitz-herbert, knt. and of major Gilbert Kniveton his brother, and of Mrs. Katharine Pegg his ſiſter, and of Mr. Thomas Pegge, his brother-in-law's eldeſt ſon, and of captain William Milward, and of captain Henry Merrie, and Mr. William Browne, captain Charles Barneſley, captain Alexander Walthal, and Mr. Francis Ward: And that each of them have full power to receive the laſt half-year's rent due by all their tenants, and all other arrears, but what the Parliament hath received; and that the ſequeſtrators and ſolicitors of ſequeſtrations ſhall now from henceforth forbear to collect any monies out of any of their revenues, they doing nothing prejudicial to the Parliament[5]."

July 6, 1647, the petition of colonel Henry Grey, and likewiſe the officers that formerly ſerved under the lord Grey at Leiceſter, was referred to the Committee of that county, for the ſtating of their accompts, and paying their arrears[6].

July 19. The garriſons in Leiceſter were ordered to be diſgarriſoned, and the works made ſithence the troubles diſmantled and ſlighted[7].

Aug. 29, 1648, the command of Aſhby-de-la-Zouch was given to Thomas lord Grey of Groby; and the ſame day the ſum of £2000 was awarded to colonel Thomas Wayte, out of the ſequeſtered eſtates of John Pate, eſq. the lord Bodenham, and Wingfield Bodenham, eſq[8].

September 25. The Leiceſterſhire forces under colonel Hacker and colonel White were ordered £3000 out of the eſtates of delinquents; and had directions to march from Pontefract to aſſiſt in the buſineſs of Cumberland and Weſtmoreland[9].

October 2. A petition of divers gentlemen of the county of Leiceſter was preſented to the Houſe of Commons, "in the name of the well-affected miniſtry, gentry, and other inhabitants of the ſaid county; taking notice of ſome declarations of the Kirk of Scotland and of this kingdom, and of the votes for no further addreſſes." And, being called in, received this anſwer from the Speaker: "The Houſe has commanded me to acquaint you, that they have read your petition; that they are engaged in a treaty with the King; and do aſſure you that, in that treaty, they will provide and take care for the preſervation and ſecurity of the religion, laws, and liberties, of the kingdom: and for the ſecurity and maintenance of all thoſe who have adhered unto them[10]."

Feb. 22, 1648-9. "The humble Repreſentation of the Committee, Gentry, Miniſtry, and other well-affected Perſons, in the County of Leiceſter, in reference to the Agreement of the People tendered to the Kingdom as touching Religion[11]," was preſented to his Excellency Thomas lord Fairfax, and the general council of officers of the army; ſhewing,

"That the many great and glorious bleſſings, which the Lord of Hoſts hath beſtowed upon this ſhattered and almoſt ruinated nation, by the remarkable valour and fidelity of your Excellency, and the army under your command, aſcending from one high degree of ſervice to another, with many clear evidences of your loyalty to the nation; together with the candour of your excellency and councell of warre, as it were inviting all perſons, in your draught of the agreement of the people, to give in their apprehenſions and reaſons of approviug or diſſenting from any thing contained therein: and knowing that it is in the nature of the very beſt of men to be ſubject to frailty and errour (which we ought ſeriouſly to bewail in ourſelves and others), ſometimes by miſtaken zeal carried beyond its proper limits, and often, by an exorbitant charity, giving more latitude to tenderneſs and pitty, than can well ſtand with divine truths; God in his wiſdom having ſet bounds to both, whoſe laws challenge in all things exact obedience (eſpecially in ſo high a point as concerns the ſalvation of ſouls): Theſe conſiderations have moved us, humbly to preſent our thoughts to your Excellency's peruſal and review, about ſome things of greateſt weight, as concerning the glory of God, the preſervation of Religion, and the peace and happineſs of the Reformed Churches. And we moſt humbly deſire, that the things ſo propoſed by us may be taken into your grave examinatton, without prejudice againſt us, as if we were over-biaſſed by the example of others, or any ſiniſter ends of our own[12]."

---

[1] Harl. MSS. 986. 4. [2] Heath's Chronicle, p. 227. [3] Symmonds. [4] Journals of the Commons, vol. V. p. 102.

[5] This agreement did not take place, for the caſtle was not ſurrendered till 19 April, by Peter Kniveton, to ſir William Brereton. Dr. Pegge, MS.

[6] Journals of the Commons, vol. V. p. 235. [7] Ibid. p. 250. [8] Ibid. pp. 689. 692. [9] Ibid. vol. VI. p. 32.

[10] Ibid. p. 41. Quarto Pamphlets, Britiſh Muſeum, p. 389.

[11] This refers to "A Petition from his Excellency Thomas Lord Fairfax, and the General Council of Officers of the Army, to the Honourable the Commons of England in Parliament aſſembled, concerning the Draught of an Agreement of the People for a ſecure and preſent Peace, by them framed and prepared; together with the ſaid Agreement, preſented Saturday, Jan. 20, 1648-9; in which, among other articles, it was propoſed, that the nation ſhould have 400 repreſentatives, of which the town of Leiceſter was to ſend one, and the other towns in that county five.—Both the petitions are preſerved in Sion College.

[12] "This humble repreſentation was preſented to the lord general his Excellency, upon Thurſday, Feb. 22, 1648-9, by divers gentlemen of the committee, and ſome miniſters, in the name of many others well-affected of the county of Leiceſter; and was received with noble candour; his Excellency promiſing to take it into conſideration, to communicate it to his general council of officers, and to endeavour the ſatisfaction of theſe, and all other well-affected in the nation."

March 19, the gentlemen of the county of Leiceſter again petitioned Parliament, and were anſwered thus:

"Gentlemen, you of the county of Leiceſter; the Houſe hath read your petition; and I ſhall, as near as I can, declare their ſenſe. The Houſe doth take notice of the modeſty and diſcretion of the petition, and the petitioners, in the way of delivering it, and the expreſſions in it. The Houſe doth likewiſe take notice of ſome things out of the petition: and that is, concerning your county; whoſe readineſs to the ſervice of the publick the laſt ſummer, wherein you did great and acceptable ſervice to the Commonwealth . . . . . . : And for theſe and your good affections always to the publick, the Houſe hath commanded me to return you hearty thanks; and I do, in their names, return you hearty thanks. For the particulars in the petition, ſome of them are of great weight and conſequence, fit for you to preſent, and for them to take conſideration of: ſome of which, as taking off free quarters and others, are already in a way of ſettlement; and the whole Houſe is zealous to give you and the whole kingdom ſatisfaction therein. For the reſt of the particulars, they doubt not but you will leave it to them, as the urgent and important affairs of the kingdom will admit, to take the ſame into conſideration; and doubt not but to do it ſo, as the kingdom may receive ſatisfaction and ſafety[1]."

In a draught of an agreement of the people for a ſecure and perfect peace, "preſented to the Houſe of Commons Jan. 20, 1649-50, from the lord Fairfax and the army," it was propoſed that the repreſentation for the whole kingdom ſhould be 1000; of which the town of Leiceſter was to ſend one; and the reſt of the county five; the whole of the county of Rutland one; the city of London eight.

April 23, 1650. "The humble Petition of the Mayor, Aldermen, and Chamberlains of the Borough of Leiceſter, Maſters of the Hoſpital of The Holy Trinity in the Newark, near Leiceſter, was read. Ordered, That it be referred to the Committee for removing obſtructions in the ſale of fee-farm rents, to conſider of this petition; and how it is fit the petitioners ſhould be paid, and all others of the like nature, whereby the ſale of the fee-farm rents is hindered; and to preſent an act to the Houſe for the one and the other if they ſee cauſe, for the better expediting the ſale of the ſaid fee-farm rents[2]."

In Auguſt, Sir John Gell, who had been one of the prime champions for the Parliament, and was eſteemed the principal chieftain among the Preſbyterians, was tried at the bar of the High Court of Juſtice, and condemned to loſe his eſtate, and ſuffer perpetual impriſonment[3].

Nov. 24, 1651. Sir Thomas Cave junior, who had been appointed high ſheriff by authority of Parliament, had liberty given him "to live at his father's houſe in Stanford, he executing the office of ſheriff for the county of Leiceſter[4]."

December 19, on a tax of £90,000 a month for ſix months, for the maintenance of the army, the county of Leiceſter paid £1400.

Juſtices of the Peace for the county of Leiceſter, from a MS in the library of the late Thomas Aſtle, eſq. intituled, "The Names of the Juſtices of the Peace for England and Wales, March 1, 1651-2[5]."

William Lenthall, Speaker of Parliament.
Oliver Cromwell, captain-general.
Buſtrode Whitelock, } lords commiſſioners of the great ſeal.
Richard Keble,
John Liſle,
Henry earl of Kent.
Henry earl of Stamford.
Thomas lord Grey de Groby.
Bennett lord Sherard.
Thomas lord Fairfax.
Henry Rolle, chief juſtice of the upper bench.
Oliver St John, chief juſtice of the common bench.
John Wilde, chief baron, of the public exchequer.
Philip Jermyn, one of the juſtices in the upper bench.
John Puleſton and Edward Atkins, two of the juſtices of the common pleas.
Edmund Predeaux, attorney-general.
Sir Arthur Haſlewrigge, baronet.
Sir Thomas Hartop, knight.
Thomas Chapman, ſerjeant at law.
John St. John.
Thomas Beaumont.
Chriſtopher Packe.
Richard Newdigate.
Henry Smyth.
William Quarles.
Peter Temple.
Caſibilian Burton[6].
John Browne.
Thomas Brudnell.
Simon Rugely.
William Hartoppe.
William Banbridge.
Thomas Waite.
Thomas Haſbridge.
James Abney.
William Hewett.
Arthur Stavely.
William Danvers.
Gamaliell Purefoy.
Henry Danvers.
Francis Hacker.
Thomas Pochin.
John Goodman.
John Pratt.
Henry Markham.

June 9, 1657. An act for the ſettling and regulating of the hoſpital called Wigston's Hoſpital, in the borough of Leiceſter, and eſtabliſhing thereof, received the Protector's aſſent. Richard Lee was then maſter; and William Simms, public lecturer of the borough of Leiceſter, confrater.—Major-general Whalley, colonel Henry Markham, ſir Chriſtopher Pack, Henry Smyth, eſquire, Alexander Baker, Samuel Wanley, and Robert Hicklin, were appointed truſtees[7].

On the ſame day, an act was paſſed, "for enabling George Faunt, of Foſton in the county of Leiceſter, eſq. to ſell and convey part of his lands, for payment of ſeveral debts and legacies charged upon his eſtate by ſir William Fawnt, knight, deceaſed; and for the raiſing of portions for his younger children, and making his wife a jointure."

Whitehall, Oct. 13, 1658. "This day an humble addreſs was tendered to his Highneſs, ſubſcribed by ſome thouſands of hands from the county of Leiceſter; and it was preſented by that honourable perſon ſir Thomas Beaumont, knight and baronet, accompanied by divers worthy gentlemen and miniſters of the ſaid county. Which being read, his Highneſs was pleaſed, in return to this addreſs, to declare how great a value he ſet upon the affections of that county, in condoling the loſs of his father, and in congratulating himſelf in the ſucceſſion; and to aſſure them, that nothing ſhould hinder him from endeavouring to anſwer their hopes and expectations of good from his government, in ſuch a manner that the management of it may tend to the benefit of the nation in general, and of the people of God in the nation in particular, &c.

To his Highneſs Richard Lord Protector of the Commonwealth of England, Scotland, and Ireland, &c.

The humble addreſs of your well-affected inhabitants of the county of Leiceſter.

May it pleaſe your Highneſs,

As we have been ſharers with the reſt of thoſe veterans in the memorable deliverances wrought by the hand of God, as ſo many witneſſes to the continued travailes of your deceaſed father (whoſe name is precious in our hearts, and ſhall ſtand recorded to all poſterity here on earth, as we are perſuaded it is enrolled in Heaven); ſo we cannot but with them very much condole the loſs of ſuch a Father of our Country. Yet, ſeeing all earthly powers muſt ſubmit to the all-ruling will and power of Him whoſe kingdom is everlaſting, we judge it our duty to look forward, and therein to eye the providential hand of God in calling forth your Highneſs to ſucceed in the government of theſe nations, wherein (our preſent peace and tranquillity giving us no ſmall occaſion to obſerve how God hath as well blasted the hopes of our enemies, as contradicted the fears of friends), we cannot but rejoice, and admire the goodneſs of our God; not doubting but as your Highneſs is declared the rightful ſucceſſor of your dear Father in the government, ſo you will declare yourſelf (through grace) the true inheritor of his piety and worth, and endeavour the juſt freedom and liberty of theſe nations both as men and Chriſtians, according to the humble petition and advice. So we are confident the Lord God of your Father will be with you as he was with him. And we do hereby aſſure your Highneſs, that we ſhall therein ſtand by your Highneſs with the hazard of our all; and ſhall pray that the ſpirit of wiſdom, councell, and the fear of the Lord, may reſt upon you."

---

[1] Journals of the Commons, vol. VI. p. 168.

[2] Ibid. p. 402.

[3] Heath, p. 270.

[4] Journals of the Commons, vol. VII. p. 41.

[5] This MS. is curious; becauſe it ſhews who were ſuppoſed to be attached to the then government.—Lenthall the Speaker, Cromwell, Bradſhaw, Whitlock, the commiſſioners of the great ſeal, the judges, and moſt of the great officers of ſtate, were in the commiſſion for each county. T. A.

[6] Son to the original Hiſtorian of Leiceſterſhire.

[7] Journals of the Commons, vol. VII. pp. 487. 552.

Sept. 9, 1659. The Houſe being informed, that divers Miniſters of the county of Leiceſter were at the door; they were called in; and being at the bar, Mr. Yaxley[1], after a ſhort preamble, ſpake to this effect: "That the petitioners, all Miniſters of the Goſpel in the county of Leiceſter, faithful ſervants to the Parliament, and embarked in the ſame bottom with yourſelves; ſome of us marched along with your forces, to ſuppreſs the late rebellion of ſir George Booth and others: We well knowing, how much it concerns us, with all the true Godly of the Lord, are deſired by many of our brethren, miniſters of the Goſpel in the county of Leiceſter, to render this their humble repreſentation; which as well on their behalf, as on our own, we do humbly preſent, in their and our own names, and deſire it may be communicated to the Houſe." Which (after the petitioners were withdrawn) was read; and was intituled, "The humble repreſentation of divers well-affected miniſters of the Goſpel in the county of Leiceſter[2], whoſe names are hereunto ſubſcribed."

The petitioners were again called in; and Mr. Speaker gave them this anſwer:

"Gentlemen, the Houſe have read your petition; and, upon due conſideration thereof, they find in it a Goſpel-ſpirit of meekneſs, ſincerity, and holineſs: And they have alſo conſidered the ſeaſonableneſs of it, and that it expreſſeth not only an outward letter, but an inward ſpirit: They likewiſe find your diſlike of the late inſurrection; in ſuppreſſing which, ſome of you have adventured your perſons to hazard; and we and you have cauſe to give the Lord the glory of this deliverance of us and you. The Parliament, who have always owned and encouraged a godly miniſtry, have commanded me to let you know, that they accept of this petition: and have alſo commanded me to give you the thanks of this Houſe: And in their names I do give you hearty thanks[3]."

A letter of general George Monck, dated at Leiceſter, Jan. 23, 1659-60, and directed, "For the honoured Robert Rolles, eſq; to be communicated to the Gentlemen of Devonſhire who ſigned the late letter to the Speaker of the Parliament of the Commonwealth of England," was read in Parliament, Jan. 26, and printed in a ſmall quarto pamphlet, 1660. It contains many ſenſible hints towards ſettling the diſtracted ſtate of the kingdom.

April 22, 1661, the Coronation of King Charles II. was celebrated at Melton Mowbray, in the county of Leiceſter, with particular marks of feſtivity and loyalty[4].

[Views of Melton Mowbray and of Leeſthorp Hall are here given in Plate CLXIII.; and of Edmundthorpe and Stapleford, Plate *CL.]

---

[1] Of whom ſee before, under Kibworth, vol. II. p. 649.

[2] The ſubſtance of this Repreſentation, with the names of the ſubſcribing miniſters, is preſerved in the "Bibliotheca Topographica Britannica," Nº XLIII p. 306, from Dugdale's "Short View of the Troubles in England," p. 471.

[3] Journals of the Commons, vol. VII. p. 776.

[4] See more particulars in vol. II. p. 246.

POSTSCRIPT.

 When the preſent Volume was nearly finiſhed at the preſs, I had an opportunity of purchaſing, at a public auction, the Plates which had been engraved for the late ingenious but unfortunate Mr. Throſby's "Views in the County of Leiceſter." Such of theſe as may tend to embelliſh this and the preceding volumes are preſented to the encouragers of the preſent publication without making any additional charge.—Thoſe belonging to GUTHLAXTON and SPARKENHOE will be incorporated in their proper places.—Of the two views which face this page, one gives me a new opportunity of expreſſing my grateful acknowledgements to the Noble Owner of Staunton Harold, to whom I am under very conſiderable obligations; the other, of paying a tribute of reſpect to the memory of William Pochin, eſq. whoſe friendly patronage I for many years experienced.—The Monument of the ONEBYS in Hinckley Church (Plate CXXXVII. p. 1042) illuſtrates the Pedigree in p. 1147; and will be farther noticed in the Hiſtory of that Family under HINCKLEY and BARWELL.

Part VI. (containing the Hundred of Guthlaxton) is now printing; and will be proceeded with as ſpeedily as the nature of ſo laborious an undertaking will permit.—And Part VII. (the Hundred of Sparkenhoe, which will complete the Work) is ſo far prepared, that all the Plates are ready, except ſuch as may be contributed in the progreſs of the Work; to which Communications are ſolicited, by information either of any recent changes of property, or by any Epitaphs that may have been placed in the ſeveral Churches ſince the year 1790.—Corrections alſo in any of the Volumes already publiſhed will be duly noticed.—The Parochial Hiſtory of the TOWN OF LEICESTER will be reſumed at the end of Part VI.

June 20, 1804.

BRIEF INDEX to WEST GOSCOTE HUNDRED; to be enlarged hereafter.

Abbey Gate, 561
Abney, ſir Thomas, his character, 606
——— of Willeſley and Newton Burguland, pedigree, 632
Alfounder, Robert, 1071
——— of Thurcaſton, pedigree, 1049*
Allen, John, memoirs of, 1127
Alleyne, John, 902, 917, 918
——— Thomas, ib.
Alton Grange, 633
Andreskirk, an obſolete lordſhip, 702
Annis's Bower, 1051
Ansty, 1079, 1144
Appleby's Manor, 991
Ashby-de-la-Zouch, 561—agricultural remarks, 616—free-ſchool, 617—regiſters, 618
——— Castle, its hiſtory, 609
——— Old Park, 614
——— Woulds, Saxon coins found there, 613
Aylmer, John, biſhop of London, tutor to lady Jane Grey, 667, 843 ——— of Knight-thorpe, pedigree, 908
Ayre, of Gaddeſby, 971
Babington, of Dethick, pedigree, 964
——— of Rothley, pedigree, 965
——— of Oxfordſhire, pedigree, 967
——— of Derby, pedigree, 967
——— family, 953—eminent men of that name, 955
——— Matthew, 990
Bainbrigge, Dr. John, memoirs of, 630
——— of Aſhby, pedigree, 632
——— John, his expences as high ſheriff in 1633, 875—his expences in law-ſuits, 876
——— family, *875
——— of Lockington, pedigree, 882
——— of HuggleſcoteGrange, 883
——— of Woodſeat, *883
Bakewell, Mr. Robert, his admirable mode of farming at Diſhley, 758
——— Robert, of Swepſton, memoirs of, 1037, 1039
Bancroft's Epigrams and Epitaphs, *646
Barrat Mills, 614
Barrow, 1130
Barwell of Kegworth, pedigree, 853
Bate, of Aſhby, pedigree, 636
Beaumanor, 1131
Beaumeis family, 561
Beaumont, ſir Francis, *1126
——— ſir George, elegy on, 1129
——— John, of Gracedieu, memoirs of, 656.
——— Francis, memoirs of, 669—his portrait, *662
——— Francis, maſter of Charterhouſe, 735—his portrait, 843
——— of Gracedieu, pedigree, *661
——— of Barrow, pedigree, *663
——— family, of Cole Orton, *734
——— of Cole Orton, pedigree, 743, 744
——— Nicholas, his funeral certificate, *734
——— Sir Henry, petition to be reſtored to the title of viſcount, 735
——— ſir Thomas, created an Iriſh viſcount, 736
——— Thomas, his character, 737
——— Sapcote viſcount Swords, 738
——— Dr. Joſeph, 754—his "Pſyche," 755—his epitaph, ibid.
Bekesby, 1136
Belgrave, 1132
Belton, 637
Bigland, ſerjeant, 1107
Blackfordby, 633
Boothorpe, 996
Bothe-thorpe, 906
Boultbee, Joſeph, his great age, 740
Bowyers' Company, 859
Bracebridge, of Kingſbury, Atherſton, and Lindley, pedigree, 1145, 1146
Bradgate, 661—the old manſion-houſe burnt, 679—beautiful park, 680—chapel, 681
The Brand, *731
Bredon, 685—famous for its lime, 687—priory 693—regiſter of the priory analyſed, 695—rectory, ſurvey of, 719
Bright, Dr. George, account of, 917
Brokeſby, Bartholomew, his Regiſter, 969
Bruce family, 741
Bryan, of Kibworth, pedigree, 1128
Buckingham, marquis of, 1133
Burley Park, 909
Calais, The, 561
Caldwell, 966
Cant, William, account of, 985
Castle Donington, 770—The old caſtle deſcribed, ib. See Donington.
Cavendish Bridge, 779
Celts found at Huſbands Boſworth, 1127
Charnells, of Elmſthorpe, pedigree, *1049
——— of Snareſton, pedigree, *1047
Cheſlyn, of Langley, pedigree, 864
Civil War in Leiceſterſhire, particularly deſcribed, Appendix, 17—69
Cleiveland, John, memoirs of, 913
Clinton, Joan, her will, 709
Coal mines, fires long burning in, 739—at Swanington, deſcribed,
Cokaine, ſir Aſton, his poems, *640
Coke, Francis, account of, 625
——— of Melbourn, pedigree, *784
Cole Orton, *733
——— Hospital, 740
——— Moor, 740
Colvile, Hawiſe de, a famous nun, 861
Columbell pedigree, 1134
Comyn family, 741
Cook, John, of Cropſton, his extraordinary caſe, 1083
Corbett, of Wanlip, pedigree, 1100
Cossington, 1134
Cotton, ſir Robert, 1140
Covel, Dr. John, account of, 859
Cradock, of Swanzy, pedigree, 1150
——— of Leiceſter, pedigree, 1149
——— of Eaſt Farndon, pedigree, 1150
——— of Richmond, pedigree, 1150
Cranwell, Luke, account of, 857, 917
Creplegate Hermitage, 840
Crich, 1046
Cropston, 1083
Culwardby. See Kilwardby.
Danett, of Gaddeſby, pedigree, 968
Danvers, ſir John, his epitaph by himſelf, 1052
Dawſon, of Newbold and Whatton, pedigree, 1106
Derby, of Gaddeſby, pedigree, 968
Digby, of Ravenſton, pedigree, 932
Diseworth, 745
Dishley, 757—Mr. Bakewell's mode of farming deſcribed, 758
Donington Park, 775—fine pictures there, 778—verſes on 1142
——— Hospital, 780
Donisthorpe, 997—a valuable medicin ſpaw there, 998
Dorſet, Thomas Grey marquis of, memoirs of, and laſt will, 664
——— Henry Grey, marquis of, 66
Duddeley, lord Guilford, letter from, 1141
Duick, J. his poem on Loughborough, 1143
Dupont, Dr. John, 1015
——— of Shepeſhed, pedigree, 102
Durandeſthorpe family, 997
Ellis, Edward, account of, 921
Eyton, of Gaddeſby, pedigree, 968
Ferrariis, Robert de, his ſeal, 694
Ferrers, earl of. See Shirley.
Fullwood, of Hemington, pedigree, *860
Gaddesby, 968
Garendon Abbey, 786—the abbey church, 797—Chartularies analyſed, 805—839
——— Park, 802—Temple of Venus and Triumphal Arch, 803
Gell, ſir John, 737
Gee, of Rothley, pedigree, 952
Gery, of Bedfordſhire, pedigree, 1041
——— of Swepſton, pedigree, 1041
Gilbert, of Sileby, pedigree, 1138
Gilby, Anthony, account of, 619, *639
Glen, Andrew, memoirs of, 886
Gracedieu, 651—the priory, 652—inventory of goods there, 653
Gray, Thomas, of Donington, his will, 775
——— of Langley, pedigree, 863
——— Henry lord, his will, 863
Greene, of Kegworth, pedigree, 851
Greſley, of Drakelow and Nether Seale, pedigree of, *1009—the baronet branch of, *1010—the Greſley family, *988
Gretton, George, 1030
Grey, lady Jane, memoirs of, 667—her portrait, 673—letter written in her prayer-book, 1141
——— lady Katherine, 693
——— John lord, of Pirgo, 674
——— Henry lord, of Pirgo, 674
——— Thomas lord, of Groby, 677
——— earl of Stamford and Warrington, pedigree, 682
——— of Enville, pedigree, 684
——— Henry, marquis of Dorſet, letter from, 1141
Griffy dam, *732
Grimston, 977
Gumley Hall, 1127
Hall, Dr. Joſeph, biſhop of Norwich, memoirs and portrait of, 62
——— Nicholas, memoirs of, 913
Harley, of Oſgathorpe, pedigree, 923
Harpur, of Ruſhall, Swarkſton, and Hemington, pedigree, *884
——— of Little-over, pedigree, *885
——— of Calke, Bilſton, &c. pedigree, *885
Haſtings earls of Huntingdon, 778, 886
——— earls of Huntingdon, pedigree of, 607, 608
——— ſir Leonard, his laſt will, 566
——— William lord, his rapid advancement to honours, 568—his melancholy fate, and laſt will, 569
——— Katharine lady, her laſt will, 572
——— Edward lord, his laſt will, 574
——— ſir Thomas, his laſt will, 577
——— Edward lord Loughborough, memoirs of, 577—his laſt will, 578—portrait of, 579

Haſtings

Haſtings, lady Magdalen, poetical epitaph on, 588
——— ſir Francis, his writings, 588
——— Henry, of the Woodlands, memoirs of, 592—portrait, ib.
——— Henry lord, poetical effuſions to his memory, 594
——— Elizabeth lady, 605
——— General Charles, 606
——— Rev. Theophilus-Henry, ſome account of, 647.
Hathern, 842
Hawkins, Iſaac, ſome account of, *990
Heath End, 614
Hemington, Robert, account of, 923
Hericke, Robert, 1131
——— ſir William, 1131—his lady and children, ibid.
——— Thomas, 1036
Heyrick, Nathanael, memoirs of, 1127
——— Toby, 1127
Hickes, ſir Baptiſt, 1131
Hilderſham, Arthur, memoirs of, 626—portrait, ib.—epitaph, 612, 640
Hill, Richard, founder of Thurcaſton ſchool, memoirs of, 1074
—— of Nether Seale, pedigree, 1011*
—— of Twycroſs, Meaſham, and Leiceſter, pedigree, 1144
Hoby, 1134
Holland, Gabriel, his deſcription of the coal mines at Swanington, 1125
Honywood, Dr. Michael, memoirs of, 856
Hoſpitallers, 950
Hudſon, of Wanlip, pedigree, 1102
——— family, epitaphs, *886
Humphrey, ſir Thomas, 1036
——— of Barton Segrave and Swepſton, pedigree, *1050
Hungerton, 1134
Huntingdon, George firſt earl of, memoirs of, 576
——— Francis ſecond earl of, 580—his fine monument, 620
——— Henry third earl of, memoirs of 583—his funeral, 587.
——— George fourth earl of, memoirs of, 589
——— Dorothy counteſs of, her laſt will, 591
——— Henry, fifth earl of, memoirs of, 593—his houſehold-book, 594—portrait 620—maſque given by *637
——— Ferdinand ſixth earl of, memoir of 594 ——— Theophilus ſeventh earl of, 605—epitaph, 621
——— George eighth earl of 605
——— Theophilus ninth earl of 606—epitaph, 521
——— Francis tenth earl of, 606
——— Selina, the venerable counteſs of, 606
Hurd, Dr. Richard, biſhop of Worceſter, memoirs of, 1079
Husbands Bosworth, 1127.
Hutchinſon, Dr. Michael, account of, 1143
Inge family, 1144
Ingwardeby pedigree, 1034
Keame, 979—remarkable regiſter, 980
Kegworth, 149—ſchool, 852
Kendall, Robert, 987
Kent, Elizabeth counteſs of, 773
Kibworth, 1128
Kilwardby, or Culwardby, 561, 641
Kirkland, Dr. Thomas, memoirs of, 632
Knight-thorpe, 906
Kyngſton, Bartholomew, his will, 960
Lacy pedigree, 771
Lamb's Chapel, 841
Lambe, ſir Matthew, *784
Langley Priory, 860—charters, &c.
Law, of Keythorpe, pedigree, 1137
Lawrance pedigree, 1135
Lecha, de, pedigree, 704
Lilly, William, memoirs of, 747, 1142
Liſle, of Crux Eaſton, family, 802

———, 1054
Lockington, 870
Long Whatton, 1103
Loughborough, 884—ſweating ſickneſs there, 885—market, croſs, ſtreets, fairs, &c. 889—freeſchool, 895—gilds and chantries, 897—church, 897
——— Old Parks, 910
Loughborough, William de, 913
Market Harborough, 1127
Marſhall, of Worthington, &c. pedigree, 1122
Martin, Samuel, a muſical genius, 625
Martival, Roger de, 1057
Maſon family, 1136—
——— of Leiceſter, pedigree, 1149
Mawbey family, memoirs of, 934
Maynard, William lord, 1135
Measham, 1032
Melbourne, *783
Merrill Grange 649
Merſhden, John de, 1057
Milborn, Luke, memoirs of, 916
Mountsorell, 1130
Muggleſton, Edw. his ſufferings, 1124
Nedham, of Gaddeſby, pedigree, 976
——— pedigree, 742
Nether Seile, *979—Seile Chartulary epitomiſed, 999—1010
Nethercote, 1042
Newbold Saucey, 702
Newton Burguelon, or Botiler, 1042
Nicolls, of Filton, family, 1137
No Man's Heath, 992
Noel family 1134
North, ſir Edward, his ſeal, 1137
Noseley, 1128
Oats, an Anabaptiſt, 1124
Okethorpe, 1031
Okethorpe pedigree, 1031
Olderſhaw, of Kegworth, pedigree, *859
Oneby, of Stoke-dry, Sadington, Ondby, Newton Burguland, Hinckley, and Barwell, 1147—family monument at Hinckley, 1142, Append. 69
Ormesby, 1136
Osgathorpe, 919 *1095—hoſpital and freeſchool 929
Over Seile, *989
Overton Quartermarsh, *733
——— Saucey, *733
Packington, 924
Palmer, of Oſgathorpe, pedigree, 923
——— of Wanlip, pedigree, 1011
Paske Hall, 971
Perin, of Aſhby, pedigree, 633
Peſtell, Thomas, memoirs of, 927—his verſes to lady Beaumont, 737
——— of Packington, pedigree, 940
——— William, letter to Mr. Gery, 739
Phillipps, ſir Ambroſe, 801
——— of Garendon, pedigree, 804
Pilgrim, particulars of one, 624
Pilkington, pedigree of, 650
Precedency, memorable queſtion concerning, between the ladies of two city knights, and the mayor and aldermen of London, 1131
Prestop Park, 614
Prestwould Hall, 1136
Prior, John, memoirs of, 619, 639*, 926, 1054
Pulteney, Dr. Richard, memoirs of, and portrait, 848
Quenby, 1135
Quorndon, 1140
Raunston, 931—hoſpital 936
Rawdon family, their antiquity, 778—Francis earl of, ib.
Richardſon, ſir Thomas, character of, 1142
Roby pedigree, 782
Roman coins found, 1136
Rothley, 941, 1143—benevolent ſociety formed there, 947
Rothley Temple, deſcribed, 956—curioſities found there, ib.
Rotherby, 1136
Ruſtat, Tobias, his character, 692
Rydeware pedigree, *982

Sacheverell, of Newhall, pedigree, 1140—epitaphs on that family, ibid.
——— Dr. Henry, 1140
Saliſbury, of Raunſton, pedigree, 940
Scott, Agnes, 1051
Scraptoft, 1128
Seals, their antiquity, 1103, 1144
Seaman, Dutton, 1136
Segrave, 1137
Segrave, Dr. Gilbert, 1136
Seile. See Nether Seile and Over Seile.
Shakerston, 1129
Shankton, 1128
Shaw, Samuel, memoirs of, 1110
——— Stebbing, ſome account of, 998
Shepeshed, 1011
Shirley family, their great antiquity, 704—their fine moouments at Bredon, 689—at Braylesford, 709—at Gracedieu, 710, 712—at Oxford, 716—at Staunton Harold, 720—in the collegiate church of the Newark at Leiceſter, 708
——— ſir Robert, called by writ to the title of Lord Ferrers of Chartley, 715—advanced to an earldom, ibid.
——— John, his laſt will, 710
——— ſir Ralph, his laſt will, 710
——— ſir Charles, his ſufferings, 713
——— ſir Robert, his loyalty and ſufferings, 713—his piety in founding a church, 713—his laſt will 714—his portrait, ib.
——— lady Frances, 717
——— ſir Robert, the Perſian traveller, 712—memoirs of, with his portrait, 725
——— of Staunton Harold, pedigree, *715—family ſeals, *720
——— of Wiſtanſton, Suſſex, pedigree, *721
——— ſir Anthony, memoirs of, *722
——— ſir Thomas, 726
——— of Preſton, Suſſex, pedigree, 727
Shuttlewood, John, memoirs of, 934
Slate pits deſcribed, and the proceſs of getting the ſlates 1050
Smart, of Aſhby, pedigree, 636
Smith, William, account of, 924
——— of Gaddeſby, pedigree, 971
Snailston, 1043
Snibston, 930
Sparrow, William, 756
Spitle Sheile, 991
Stacpoole, ſir Richard, 635.
——— George, eſq. heir general to the Zouches of Aſhby, 635
Stamford, Henry firſt earl of, 676
——— Thomas ſecond earl of, 679
Stamford and Warrington, earl of. See Grey.
Starkey pedigree, 728
Staunton Harold 703—fine manſion deſcribed 717—family pictures, 718—park, ib.—chapel, ib.
Staunton pedigree, 703
Stockdale, John, account of, 1126
Story family, *875
Stoughton Hall, 1129
Stretton-en-le-Field, 1024
Stretton pedigrees, 1025, 1028
Sutton, Richard, account of, 728
Swanington, 1122—Quakers there very early perſecuted, 1124
Sweating-ſickneſs deſcribed, 885
Swepston, 1035
Swithland, 1047
Talbot, ſir John, his tomb, 1120—commonly called Giant Talbot, 1122
Talbot, of Swanington, pedigree, 1123
Tate family, 909
Templars, 942—their overthrow, 948—monument of one at Rothley, 962
Temple Church, 944
Thickbrome, of Aſhby, pedigree, 636
Thorpe Acre, 769
Thringston, *1126
Thrussington, 1137, 1138

Vol 3 appen

Thureaston, 1055—freeschool, rules of, 1074
Thurmaston, 1130
Tomlinson, George, memoirs of, 846
Tonge, 727
Toone, pedigree of, 650
Trigge family, 1030
Twyford, 1138
Vaux, of Shankton, pedigree, 1129
Udecote, 1042, 1130
Verdon pedigree, 640
——— Bertram de, 637
——— Roesia de, 638—portrait from her tomb, 647
Vernon, family of, Seile, *985
Ulvescroft, 1085
Walsh, of Wanlip, pedigree, 1100
Walton Isley, 859
Wanlip, 1095
Wartnaby, 984
Wartoft, 785
Webster, Joseph, an ingenious self-taught painter, memoirs of, 917
Weld, dame Mary, her benevolence in bequeathing a fund for purchasing impropriations for the clergy, 985
Welham, 1129
Whatton, 1103
Whatton, of Loughborough, pedigree 912
Whitwick, 1112—castle, ib. 1117
Wilkins, John, of Ravenston, account of his family and hospital, 932, 936
Willesley, 1032
Willet, Andrew, memoirs of, 1070
——— Henry, a loyalist, 1070
——— Thomas, memoirs of, 1070
Wilson, 730
Willson, of Knight-thorpe, pedigree, 907
Winter, pedigree of, 650 ——— family and pedigree, 732
Wodescote, 1042
Woolland, 1042, 1131
Woodcock, of Keame, pedigree, 983
Woodhouse, 1130, 1131
Woodthorpe, 911
Wooley, William, his History of Derbyshire, 907
Worthington, 730 —— extraordinary whirlwind there, *731
Woty, William, account of, 917—verses by, 1134
Wright, Mrs. Margery, epitaph and portrait, 623
Wrighte family, 1134
Wykeham, 966
Wymeswould, 1138—extracts from antient constables' accompts, ib.
Wyrley, William, memoirs of, 909
Yarborough, Dr. account of, 907
Yorke, Samuel, account of, 857
Zouch family, 561
——— lords of Ashby, pedigree, 635

DIRECTIONS TO THE BINDER.

Title and Dedication; 7 D—7 X; 7 Y 1, 2, 3, 4; 7 Z—8 D; 8 E 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6; 8 F—8 T; 8 U 1, 2, 3, 4, 5; 8 X; 8 Y; 8 Z 1, 2, 3, 4; 9 A—9 N; 9 O 1, 2, 3; 9 P 1, 2, 3, 4; 9 Q to 9 Z (marked by mistake 8 Z); 10 A—10 H; 10 I 1, 2, 3; 10 K—10 M; 10 N 1, 2, 3, 4; 10 O; 10 P 1, 2, 3, 4; 10 Q—11 F; No 11 G; 11 H—11 R; 11 S 1, 2, 3, 4, 5; 11 T 1, 2, 3, 4; Pedigree of Rydeware; 11 U—12 A; 12 B 1, 2, 3, 4, 5; 12 C—12 E; 12 F; Pedigree of Browne; 12 G; Pedigree of Abney; 12 H; 12 I; 12 K 1, 2, 3, 4; 12 L—12 X; 12 Y 1, 2, 3; 12 Z—13 F; 13 G 1, 2, 3; 13 H—13 N.—Civil War in Leicestershire, and the Index, G—U.

In the List of Plates, p. 1126; place Plate 82 facing p. 618; 83 facing p. 619; 134 facing p. 1020; 137 facing 1042; *150 to face p. 69 of the Appendix.

MVSEVM
BRITAN
NICVM

END OF THE THIRD VOLUME.

NICHOLS AND SON, PRINTERS, RED LION PASSAGE, FLEET STREET.